

Boyne Area & East Jordan Observer

Wednesday, May 6, 2009

No. 4

It's mushroom fest time

49th Annual National Morel Mushroom Festival kicks off May 14

Steve Zucker

439-9346 -szucker@petoskeynews.com

BOYNE CITY — Morel mushroom festival committee chairwoman Pam Chipman hopes a recent check of the organization's Web site is a harbinger of good things to come.

As the committee gets ready for the 49th annual festival to kick off on May 14, Chipman was recently checking the festival's Web site and discovered that it had received 4,000 visits in one 12-hour period.

Chipman said the festival, one of the biggest of the year, for Boyne City, draws people from all over the state and the country in search of the tasty spring-time treat: The morel mushroom.

She said for many people, the challenge of finding the elusive fungi, which grow wild in Northern Michigan's many wooded areas, can easily become an obsession.

"It's the whole mystique of the morel mushroom. It's a whole different mindset," Chipman said. "They are great eating. It's a very short season and they are such a rare find, people just get crazy about them."

She added, "It's the thrill of the hunt. It's a chance to get outside and enjoy nature. It's all about celebrating spring — especially after our long winters."

The festival offers something for everyone including a free seminar on Friday, that teaches mushrooming basics; a "Taste of Morels"

NEWS-REVIEW/FILE

Joseph Krumholz of the Jordan Inn cooks up some tasty treats at last year's Taste of Morels event. This year's event, which is typically one of the highlights of the festival is scheduled for noon-3 p.m. on Saturday, May 16.

event in which area chefs show off their best morel recipes; nightly entertainment; a craft show and the always-popular amusement rides.

New this year, Chipman said, will be chef John Sheets traveling along on the guided mushroom hunt (cost $10 per person) where he will show people 15-20 other things besides morels that can be collected in the woods for eating.

Chipman, who has been on the committee for the past 14 years said, the committee is already thinking ahead to making next year's 50th anniversary event an extra special festival.

To that end, the committee is asking people to submit their favorite morel mushroom recipes on their Web site (www.morelfest.com) for a cookbook they plan to publish for next year's festival.

Chipman said she's happy to see that the festival has grown in recent years as the committee has brought in bigger name entertainment, especially for the important part the festival plays in the area's economy.

She said she's recently spoken to one restaurant owner who said he expects the festival weekend to be his best of the year.

"This is an off-season in Northern Michigan," Chipman said. "It's easy to throw a festival when all the visitors are here in the summer. It takes the magic morel to bring the people in."

For more on the festival, see the accompanying schedule of events or visit the organization's Web site at www.morelfest.com.

Mushroom festival schedule of events

Steve Zucker

439-9346 -szucker@petoskeynews.com

Morel mushrooms shine in Boyne City's 49th Annual National Morel Mushroom Festival Thursday through Sunday, May 14-17.

The festival kicks off Thursday, May 14, when the Schmidt Amusements Carnival opens at 3 p.m. It opens again at 3 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m. Saturday and noon Sunday.

The Morel Challenge, where morel-themed fruit and vegetable cars race, is at 6 p.m. Thursday at the festival tent; registration is at 5:30 p.m. Kits are available at Boyne Country Books, Ace Hardware and the chamber.

The craft show in Veterans Park will be open 1-6 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday. Friday also features seminars, demonstrations and tastes on wild edibles and morels at 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. respectively, under the tent in the park.

The guided mushroom hunt begins at 4:30 p.m.; cost is $10 and it is open to anyone 4 years and older. Registration must be done in advance; form is available at www.morelfest.com.

The Morelfest Wine and Dine is 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the Beach Haus near Boyne Mountain. For reservations or more information call the chamber at (231) 582-6222.

Friday ends with entertainment by blues musician Larry McCray at 8 p.m. under the tent. Admission is $7 and at the door only.

Saturday's festivities begin with the morel breakfast 7-10 a.m. under the tent.

Registration for the Boyne Valley Lions' National Mushroom Hunt takes places 7:30-9 a.m. Participants will be bused to a location at 9 a.m. for this competitive 90-minute hunt. Cost is $15; prizes and winners will be announced at 3 p.m. in the tent.

The premiere event of the weekend is the Taste of Morel noon-3 p.m. under the tent. Area chefs will be cooking up morel dishes and demonstrations, the admission is $2 into the tent and tickets for tastes are available for purchase.

The sixth annual Mushroom Pole will be on Main Street in front of Pat O'Brien Realty, and those successful morel hunters may bring their finds from 11 a.m.-5 p.m. to the pole for a chance at prizes, announced at 5:30 p.m.

Entertainment for Saturday features Nathan Bates 3-6 p.m. and Twisted Finster at 9 p.m. under the tent. Tickets for the night show are $5 admission; tent opens at 8 p.m.

In addition to the carnival and craft show, the Northern Michigan Cancer Crusaders are hosting the Front Porch Pickers comedy and country music show 1-4 p.m. in the tent.

Also during the weekend, the farmers market is open 8 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday in Old City Park, and the Boyne City Historical Museum is open noon-4 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

For more information on the festival, call the chamber at 582-6222 or visit www.morelfest.com. The Web site has a complete schedule and registration forms.

NEWS-REVIEW/FILE

Amusement rides are always one of the most popular features of the Mushroom Festival, especially among children. This year the rides are scheduled to begin operating at 3 p.m. on Thursday, May 14.

Everything to Build With...

 Premier	 AZEK TRIMBOARDS	 THERMA TRU DOORS
 Andersen	 HITACHI	 CertainTeed Designer Shingles LANDMARK SERIES

F.O. BARDEN & SON, INC.
HOME CENTER
205 S. East St. • Boyne City • 582-9961

Compassionate
Family
Dentistry

Dr. Bert DesJardins, DDS

- Emergency and New Patients Welcome
- All Dental Insurance Plans Welcome
- Accepting Northern Michigan Dental Plans as well

mapleridgedentistry.com

101 Maple Ridge Drive, East Jordan, 231.536.2601

Boating safety classes offered this summer

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office will again offer boating safety classes this summer.

The classes will be held at the following times and locations:

— 9 a.m.-1 p.m., on May 30 at the Charlevoix Yacht Club

— 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on June 27 at the Walloon Lake Country Club

— 4-8 p.m. on July 6 at Boyne City Middle School

— 2-6 p.m. on July 13 at the Jordan Valley District Library

— 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on Aug. 1 at the Walloon Lake Country Club.

The minimum age for those attending is 12 years old. Those attending the class should bring documentation of their date of birth. Because of the short class duration, sheriff's office officials suggest that students eat prior to the class or bring a small snack. No meal time will be set aside during the class.

Students who receive a satisfactory test grade will receive their Michigan Boating Safety Certificate at the conclusion of the class.

Proctored exams for those who have completed an online safety certificate will be offered from 7-8 p.m. on July 6 at the Boyne City Middle School and from 5-6 p.m. on July 13 at the Jordan Valley District Library. Online certificates may be obtained at www.boat-ed.com/mi. Online certificates must be verified by a proctored exam before they will be honored by the state.

Completion of the course is mandatory for:

— Anyone born after Dec. 31, 1978 and at least 14 years old to operate a personal watercraft.

— Anyone between the ages of 12 and 14 to operate a personal watercraft while accompanied by a parent or guardian with a certificate.

— Anyone between the ages of 12 and 16 to operate a boat with a motor of more than six horsepower without adult supervision.

Anyone with questions about the classes should call Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department Marine Division Lt. David Beyer at 547-4461, ext. 320.

COURTESY PHOTO

Students in the East Jordan Elementary School preschool class hold up white pine seedlings they received after they helped plant a tree (shown in background) outside their school on Arbor Day. The tree they planted was donated by Pine Hill Nursery in Kewadin.

PHOTO COURTESY/WHITNEY WOITESHEK

Boyne Falls students (from left) Cody Lambert, Derek Grabowski, Joey Hood, Marlena Kroush, Carlisle Massey, Sydney Plona and Sharmai Wheaton listen to Patrick Klarecki, department chair of printing and imaging technology management in one of Ferris State University's Engineering Technology Computer Labs.

Boyne Falls Public School field trip

By Amber Simon

On Monday, April 20, the Boyne Falls Public School students took a field trip to Ferris State University to tour the campus. Students in ninth- through 12th-grade from new media and art classes went to see what Ferris had to offer in the area of graphic design. Laurie Howell, the high school computer media teacher said, "I am proud to see that all of the things design-wise, that Ferris students are doing, our students can do as well. The Boyne Falls Public School is very fortunate to have all of the technology that is needed available to our students to better themselves in their graphic design skills."

Earth Day Extravaganza

On Friday, April 24, the Boyne Falls High School students did their part in cleaning up the village of Boyne Falls.

The high school's day of cleaning was called "Earth Day Extravaganza," which was originally scheduled for Earth Day on Wednesday, but because of the weather, plans were changed and moved to Friday. The students were split into groups where they went around and painted the street signs and fire hydrants, while other groups raked the local park and the citizens of Boyne Falls' yards, and picked up garbage around the park as well. The high school student council organized the day of cleaning so that the school could give back to the community for everything that the community has supported the school for.

While the high school was out in the community cleaning, the sixth- and seventh-graders were cleaning the grounds around the school, and the eighth-graders participated in MDOT Adopt-A-Highway.

COURTESY PHOTO/WHITNEY WOITESHEK

Boyne Falls High School teacher Ted Beyer (from left) assists students Kaylee Berreth, Kaitlyn Deming and Reggie Fiel as they paint a street sign for the Earth Day Extravaganza.

FREE Breakfast
 Everyday 8am - 4pm
Buy 1 & Get 1 Free
 (of equal or lesser value with purchase of 2 beverages)

SouthWoods FAMILY RESTAURANT

1007 Spring Street • Petoskey • 487-1710
 Expires May 30th • Coupon Valid Monday-Saturday Only

Models WANTED

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY

At Karen Walker Studio, we are updating our displays and are looking for students from the class of 2010 to be photographed for use in ads, brochures and web site. There is no cost or obligation. Just a fun portrait session with the area's only Certified Professional Photographer with a speciality endorsement in high school senior photography. Call Karen now for more information and to reserve your session time.

KAREN WALKER STUDIO
 Photographic Artist • Certified Professional Photographer
 507 Water Street, East Jordan 231-536-3663
www.karenwalkerstudio.com

The doctors are in.

(evenings and Saturdays too!)

Mon-Thurs 8:30am to 7pm
 Friday 8:30am to 5pm
 Saturday 9am to Noon

Boyne Area Medical Center

223 Park Street • Boyne City • 231-582-5314

STEVE ZUCKER/NEWS-REVIEW

Crews from Consumer's Energy have begun electrical system work to upgrade service on the north side of Boyne City. The work which will take place over the next several months will include a new, higher voltage substation, new power lines and transformers and tree trimming work. Consumers officials have said they will notify customers in advance of power outages that will be necessary to perform the work. Pictured here a Consumer's crew member prepares to replace a transformer at the intersection of Spring and Oak streets recently.

Where is Rose City?

By Christine Gwidt

When it comes to road trips, I follow a plan. It has taken years to perfect my method, which consists of three basic elements: comfortable clothing, limiting the day's drive time to an eight hour maximum and milkshakes whenever necessary.

I won't rehash the unfathomable abuse incurred in the pursuit of this enlightenment. But I am happy to report that since implementing my program, I have traveled with relative impunity through mudflat and metropolis without major incident. I can even navigate through Atlanta at 5 p.m. with only a smattering of blind panic. I've adopted the tenet that it's not where you go; it's how you get there.

Recently, I made the trip from Florida back to Northern Michigan. I've taken this drive often in the last few years and it divides neatly into three eight-hour days. Additionally, there is the blessed monotony of I-75. The north/south pipeline accounts for 95-percent of the trip, and eliminates missing-the-exit anxiety. Once I'm in this slipstream, I could find my way home in a coma.

On the morning of the third day - the final leg that would result in my happy homecoming - I awoke in the deficient motel room where I'd stopped for the night. I showered, washed my hair, eschewed make-up and donned a pair of thermal pajama pants. Why not? I thought. I'm not likely to meet Oprah. I'll only be stopping at rest areas and I can find a drive-thru for milk-shakes. So my hair would frizz and the pallor of my naked face might alarm strangers. So what? I could live with it. I wedged my suitcase back into the car, set my tiny dogs like maraschino cherries atop their gigantic puffy beds in the backseat and we were off.

The miles-rolled by and I smiled in anticipation of hearth and home. I fell into a trance somewhere south of Rose City. This was unfortunate, for had I been paying attention, I would have remembered that I'd been meaning to gas up for some time.

I've never run out of gas before and there's not much to it. One minute you're flying along I-75, ruminating about something traumatic that happened in grade school, and then, in a blink, the car stops accelerating. If you're lucky, you will have the presence of mind to use the final fumes to pull off onto the shoulder. If you have never run out of gas before, you may squander these precious seconds in useless incredulity. I recovered in time to steer the car almost completely out of the right lane.

A roadside assistance program would have spared me, but I'd opted to pinch those pennies. I could see an exit a quarter of a mile ahead marked "Rose City." I decided to hike the distance and see what it had to offer.

Exchanging my driving moccasins for the only boots that I had - a pair of buttery suede Uggs - I crawled over the console and stepped out onto what appeared to be glistening gravel, but was actually eight inches of icy water. The Uggs were instantly transformed into sodden lumps and the thermal pajamas wicked moisture up to my knees. I opened the back door and snapped leashes on the dogs, coaxing them to sign on for this adventure. Chamois was game, but Jersey, the 7-pounder, assessed the situation and clung to me like a spider monkey. It was only after we'd covered half of the distance that I realized I was still wearing my pink sunglasses and it was getting dark.

It was slow going along the rutted, rain-soaked shoulder and the low-rise thermal pjs reacted to the drenching by succumbing to gravity. They stretched over my boots until I was walking up the inside of my own pant legs, risking indecent exposure. I slipped Chamois' leash over my wrist to allow a free hand to grip the waistband. A ditch-cum-stream babbled on the right and traffic whizzed by on the left. Jersey gained 40 pounds before we arrived at the exit to find nothing but a tractor graveyard and a small wooden sign that promised, "Camping - 4 miles," with an arrow pointing into a withered cornfield. Where was Rose City?

On the return trek, I struck upon the idea that I should hitchhike. Oncoming traffic cut a wide swath away from my wagging thumb. Motorists swiveled their heads and gaped like Neanderthals witnessing a rocket launch.

The day was already rife with new experiences and now I was going to call 9-1-1.

Be here next week for the exciting conclusion of "Where is Rose City?"

STEVE ZUCKER/NEWS-REVIEW

Pictured at the Boyne Area Senior Center are (from left) John Howard and Linda Todd with Builders Club members Cheyenne Mount, Ashley Sutton and Derek Charbonneau.

Builders Club Learns Social Etiquette at Senior Center

The Builders Club, a middle school service club sponsored by Boyne City Kiwanis, is learning how to carry on polite conversation by visiting the Boyne Area Senior Center every other week for five different visits. The students are to introduce themselves to the seniors and engage them in conversation about their interests, families, pets and others. They play games together for the first part of the visit and then eat lunch using their best manners for the second half. Boyne City Kiwanis club members provide transportation to the Senior Center and chaperone the visits. Local Realtor Marty Moody thought of this activity and volunteered to pay for the students' lunches.

Chad LaCross (left) and Steve Swix from Sunburst Memorials position a memorial bench that they delivered to the Boyne City Veteran's memorial site Thursday. The bench is the first of what memorial organizers hope will be at least six benches that will eventually be placed at the site. Anyone wishing to honor a veteran by having his or her name engraved on one of the benches, may do so for a $150 donation. For more information on the bench program, contact Dean Kleinschrodt at 549-8000. Kleinschrodt said the group already has enough names for a second bench and are working on a third. The same crew also delivered the monument that will serve as a World War II memorial on the site Thursday. The memorial will be dedicated on Memorial Day.

Fashion show to benefit free clinic

BOYNE CITY — A Charlevoix County clothing retailer is organizing a fashion show to benefit the Boyne Area Free Clinic at 7 p.m. on Thursday, May 7, at the First Presbyterian Church in Boyne City.

Mary Faculak, owner of the EJ Shoppe in East Jordan, Mary's of Boyne City and Halfway to the Top in Charlevoix, is organizing the event. Tickets to the event are $10 each and may be purchased at the Boyne Area or East Jordan chambers of commerce or at any of the above listed stores. All proceeds from the sale of the tickets will be donated to the Boyne Area Free Clinic. Desserts and coffee will be served at the event. Faculak will also donate 10 percent of the proceeds from sales in her three stores during the week of the show to the clinic.

One man's and one woman's gift basket will also be raffled off during the upcoming Mushroom Festival in Boyne City. Raffle tickets will be available for purchase in the craft tent at the festival for $1 each or 6 for $5.

STEVE FOLEY/NEWS-REVIEW

East Jordan's Erik Brun begins his approach during the pole vault last week at the Boyne City High School Invitational. Brun won the event at 11 feet, 6 inches and was the lone Red Devil individual winner in the 10-team invitational.

M. CHRIS LEESE/NEWS-REVIEW

Emily Mansfield and Angel Median, both 9, sweep the gazebo in Old City Park as they help out with the annual Buff Up Boyne springtime town cleanup on Saturday, May 2.

Being Grandma

Forty-eight is a strange age.

Teenagers and 20-somethings think it's ancient, your parents think you're a kid, and you yourself know that a quick glance in the mirror suffices to tell you your hair is adequately in place and that there is no spinach in your teeth.

Any longer in front of the mirror, though, and you find yourself face to face with your own mortality.

I notice that occasionally on the run, too, but as long as I'm running, I don't stop to think about it. A 2-year-old made me consider it one day. She is the daughter of a dear friend of my daughter's, and she called me Grandma.

I don't have gray hair. I certainly don't look like her 22-year-old mom, but I don't know how she knew I was "grandma" age (though I am). She's only 2!

So I took stock and I realized that I look like I'm "grandma" age, and that many, if not most, younger grandmas color their hair, and so gray hair is no longer the benchmark of old age. I am not sure what is.

Is it the wrinkles that now embellish my skin, etching frown marks and laugh lines around my eyes and mouth and plowing arches across my forehead? Or is it the skin around the jaw, velvety as a horse's nose, and a little loose, that gives me away? I loved my Grandma Shaw's soft skin that folded like fabric over the curve of her jaw, blending neck and face in a buttery softness that I liked to touch.

In some ways, I look the same as I did when I was 7, except my teeth are a little less jagged and my hair isn't as fair. I saw someone I hadn't seen since elementary school a couple years ago, and he recognized me, in spite of the damage years have done, because I look largely the same (the same, only larger).

But telltale signs give me away to a 2-year-old.

My husband, Neil, said he thinks that's why people's eyesight deteriorates as they age — so we can look at each other through our blurred and aging eyes, and see ourselves wrinkle-free, blemish-free: young. We continue to look beautiful to each other. But love does that too, I say.

A friend of mine told me that her mother had had successful laser surgery on her eyes, and when she saw herself for the first time, she was shocked at how old she'd gotten. She'd never really seen her wrinkles.

It might almost make you wish you couldn't see again.

But maybe not.

There are things about an aging face I like. I like the line my solitary dimple has drawn down the side of my face — evidence of much joy. I like taking on Grandma Shaw's softness. She was soft in a lot of good ways. I could emulate Grandma, and maybe the softness that time brings to my jawline will increasingly reach my heart.

And I don't mind being a grandma, and being called Grandma — what a lovely term of endearment that is! Grand mother. Such a goal to aspire to.

So I don't mind, but it's still a funny thing. I feel young. I feel so inexperienced, in some ways. I feel like there are ways I still need to grow up. I feel like I did when I was 17, only not as certain of everything. While my body gets less flexible, I get more flexible.

I don't mean I don't have hard and fast convictions about things: I do. In a few areas I would stake my life on my convictions.

By the time you've reached "grandma" age, life has taken on a new value. You recognize its frailty, its brevity. When you commit to being willing to die for something, you know the cost more closely. There is less heat and more light around that commitment. You only hope that if your life is asked of you, your courage will prove as strong as your convictions. You hope that you would risk this husk to house a hiding Jewish family, for instance — even in the face of mortal threat.

But more and more, I know that only a precious few things are worth dying for; not all that many are even worth arguing about — and all the mountainous rest is open for discussion.

Jane Booze

Of Lions and Lambs

STEVE ZUCKER/NEWS-REVIEW

Boyne City High School senior Cheyenne Shumaker tries to get out of the way as she is hit by a pitch in the first inning of the Ramblers recent 7-1 loss to Charlevoix.

Veterans appreciation event coming

BOYNE CITY — The Boyne City American Legion Post will host a Veterans Appreciation Day event from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. on Wednesday, May 13, in and around the post building on Lake Street.

The open house event will feature displays of military uniforms, rifles, equipment, pictures, maps and much more. The displays will be explained and demonstrated by Legion members through a hands-on learning experience.

Post sergeant at arms Jerry Evans said the organization expects to have several more military vehicles on display as an added interest this year, as well as representatives from all levels of law enforcement and all branches of the military who will answer any questions.

Evans said about 550 students from area schools have been invited and are expected to attend the event throughout the day.

The general public is also invited to attend the event.

"This is a great opportunity to learn the truth about the freedoms we all enjoy, the fact that freedom isn't free, the price of that freedom and who paid that price for us all," Evans said.

As the students leave the Post, each will receive a flag from a veteran, Evans said.

The American Legion Auxiliary will provide refreshments.

STEVE ZUCKER/NEWS-REVIEW

Boyne City High School hospitality class students Jacob Kovel (left) and Jessica Benner prepare food for guests at the first-ever Boyne Business Expo and Taste of Boyne event Thursday. Organizers estimate that well more than 1,000 people attended the event.

Boyne City American Legion 228 news

At the regular meeting of Ernest Peterson Post 228, on April 2, 2009, the following discussions, reports and actions were presented or acted upon:

— Membership stands at 139 with a 100 percent goal of 144. It was moved, supported and carried that the Post dues remain at $30 for 2010 and that only covers District, State and National per capita.

— The Saturday evening bingo continues to maintain the general fund, pay the bills and promote the local Legion programs.

— The first bench, with 24 veterans names, will be delivered to the new Veterans Memorial Park in May and 16 names have been purchased, at $150 per veteran, for a second bench.

— The "Honor Guard" conducted a chapel service for Thomas James Raddle and conducted "Veteran of the Month" ceremonies for Harold Irving Hamlin Jr. and John Marcus Cassidy. The Petoskey News-Review/Generations published "Veteran of the Month" for Harold Irving Hamlin and the Petoskey News-Review published The Legion News.

— The Chaplain reported on area veterans who are sick, disabled, shut-in or have answered the final call and stated that there are 18 veterans in Grandvue Medical Care Facility and that some would like visitors.

— Veterans Appreciation Day will be May 13 and all area schools are invited to attend.

— The Service Officer referred six contacts to the Charlevoix County Veterans Affairs director in Charlevoix and between 1:30-4 p.m. on April 30 a State Service Officer will be at the post.

— The new Flag Etiquette encourages all veterans to render a hand salute, when in civilian clothes, as they did when in uniform in the service.

— The 19th District meeting and election will be held on May 17 at the Harbor Springs Post.

— Contractor William Bentley discussed needed repairs to the building and stated he would repair the roof and west windows and would donate the labor. Following a recommendation to proceed by the building committee, it was moved, supported and carried to make the repairs.

— The post received a request from a student to attend the "Student Trooper Program" at the State Police Academy in Lansing and the post will be the sponsor.

— The post is accepting items from the public to be sent to our troops overseas, between 3-9 p.m. on Saturdays at the post, and Blue Star Banners and magnetic troop support ribbons, for display on a vehicle, are available to the public.

Additional information on the programs and projects listed above may be acquired 3-9 p.m. on Saturdays at the Legion post.

The next regular meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 7, in the post home and will be preceded by the "Veteran of the Month" ceremonies at 6:15 p.m. to be followed by a potluck supper in their honor.

STEVE ZUCKER/NEWS-REVIEW

Boyne City Mayor Eleanor Stackus (left) presents a plaque to city employee Keith Hausler at the city commission's April 28 meeting in recognition of his 30 years of service to the city. Hausler started with the city on May 21, 1979, as a street laborer. He has held several positions with the city since and now serves as the city's parks and recreation foreman.

Ask a dentist...

Stay committed to your health

- Do your bone density medications impact your teeth?
- Will your diabetes affect your gums?
- Does the health of your gums impact your heart?
- How can my children have fillings without an injection?

Go to mapleridgedentistry.com click on "Ask a Dentist"

Dr McMillian's Mental Health Corner

Multitasking

The technological eruption of gadgets challenges theories related to executive multiple concurrent tasks or better known as "multitasking". Oddly, a cultural superiority is assigned to "multitasking" that might be a mistake. Two theories are "switch costs" an alternating back and forth between two tasks and "interruption" where a person interrupts a task with a lag in between with the goal to return and resume the task. It is posited that divided attention does not allow for a deeper integration of information. Determined by Schwartz and Begley 2002 and supported by researchers at NIH 2000, when the brain encounters more than one object in the visual field there is a neurological competition for processing information: Our brain is the ultimate cognitive competitor selecting, filtering, while suppressing information. As we switch between stimulus or tasks, not simultaneously, we actually suspend a task and gear up for the other task. We really do not save time we lose time. Of course, when I was reading science magazines tucked into my literature folder Ms Miller could not have convinced me the all-knowing 10th grader of this evidence. Today I don't fool myself!

Tammy McMillian, Ph.D.
582-0553

Chellas
SALON and DAY SPA

Main Street
East Jordan
231-536-7764

Specializing in color, modern cuts & styles and reflexology

Also available

- Pedicures
- Manicures
- Acrylic Nails
- Full Body Waxing
- Massage