A Successful Fair

GOOD RACES AND FINE EXHIBITS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

East Jordan Wins In The Base Ball Tournament.

The Charlevoix County Agricultural Society's Fair just closed was one of the most successful in the history of the Association. The weather has been good and the crowds large and apparently well satisfied.

The prizes offered for Grange exhibit brought out the largest and best showing of fruits and vegetables ever seen in Northern Michigan and this too in spite of the fact that this past has been a most unfavorable season.

The Floral Hall was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting and crowded to its fullest capacity with exhibits of plants, cut flowers, fancy work, etc., the whole north side of the building being devoted to merchants' displays. Next to the entrance was a handsomely decorated booth containing C. H. Whittington's exhibit of fine furniture, rugs, pillows, etc. arranged to give a most pleasing effect.

Boosinger Bros. occupied the second booth from the entrance, with their general merchandise exhibit. The back ground for the display was finished in a dark shade of the one side and a delicate shade of green on the north and west sides, with a covering or canopy of white. The sides of the booth were covered with beautiful curtains and draperies. A large show case filled with bright striped flannels and trimmings occupied the west side, and a large upright the opposite side, filled with handsome silks, fine wool caps and the bottom space was taken up with beautiful pink and blue silk waists. The centre was occupied with frames on which was displayed a stylish fly-front overcoat, and a rich-plush cape. A line of the well known "Pine-tree Shoes" were also displayed and the names "Patent Colt Welt," "Gloria," "Composite," etc. shows that these names stand for fine art in shoe making. Taking the whole display together it had a decidedly tasteful and harmonious look.

The Bridge Hardware Co. exhibited a line of stoves, cutlery, fire arms and general hardware, also the light running New Home sewing machines.

M. B. Harner, the Petoskey music dealer, occupied the next booth with several organs and pianos of the well known Kimball make. He also exhibited a Pianola, an automatic piano player which attracted considerable attention.

The East Jordan Lumber Co.'s store was represented with a fine display of dry goods, clothing, shoes, ladies' cloaks, dress goods, waists, trimmings, table linens, and lace curtains, all arranged in perfect taste, the sides and top of the booth being covered with bunting and the more delicate articles being shown under glass.

J. H. Lanway's shed was as usual filled with a fine assortment of buggies and farm implements and just to the north A. Churchill had erected another shed and showed a very complete line of buggies, carriages and other vehicles.

The live stock exhibit was not very extensive but the animals shown were fine specimens. The poultry exhibit was unusually large and for quality could not be beat. Geo. Cook the Charlevoix fancier had the most extensive exhibit.

Tuesday's attraction was to have been a base ball game between East Jordan and Bellaire but to Bellaire team not coming the East Jordan and High School teams played an exhibition game won by the former by the score of 9 to 4.

DARWIN F. MEECH
Republican Candidate for County Clerk.

An accident occurred on the track Wednesday morning which resulted in a broken leg and dislocated knee joint for Dick Evert, a driver from Traverse City, who drove into John Fitzgibbons' sulky from behind while going at a 2:20 clip.

Kalkaska had no trouble in winning from Boyne City in a very slow game of base ball. The score was 18 to 5.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons were taken up with the horse races, a good program each day. The track was in excellent condition and fast time was made in the 2:27 class and free-for-all races, but they failed to break the speed record for the track.

Thursday was G. A. R. day, the reunion of the Charlevoix Co. Soldiers and Sailor's Association being held on the grounds. Many of the old Companies were present.

The championship game of baseball was played in the forenoon between East Jordan and Kalkaska. Kalkaska succeeded in getting in one score in the first inning but after that the 9's were rolled up with great regularity. East Jordan fared better getting two in the second, one in the third and one in the sixth, making it 4 to 1. Pitcher Carson for the home team struck out 14 men and kept the hits well scattered. His support also was gilt edged. Catcher Brooks, of Boyne City, umpired the game.

The following gentlemen were chosen as officers of the Association at the annual election held Friday:—

President, D. S. Payton; Secretary, W. A. Pickard; Treasurer, Chas. Hipp; Directors, J. H. Lanway; H. Olney, John Newville and Van R. Newville.

Bellaire Wouldn't Play.

They Have an Accute Attack of "Cold Feet."

In our issue of July 4th in referring to the "Bellaire Stars" we made the following statement: "The Bellaire team are a gentlemanly lot of fellows." We crawfish. We take it all back. Our conscience has troubled us ever since we said it. Subsequent events have shown it to be an unmitigated, atrocious lie. As an aggregation of kickers they are absolutely unequalled. At the time of the I. O. O. F. celebration they absolutely refused to play unless their opponents, the Kalkaska team, were weakened by putting some of their best men on the bench, but in spite of this the Bellaire team was shut out without a score.

Their last performance, however, has shown them up for just what they are, a choice collection of "tin horn sports." After conceding to all sorts of ridiculous demands and wasting much stationery and postage, Secretary Hudson at last secured from them an agreement to participate in the base ball tournament at the Fair and it was arranged that the "Stars" and the East Jordan team should play, the first game of the series Tuesday afternoon. All preparations had been made and the East Jordan boys had been practicing for the past two weeks to get in condition to make the game interesting when to their utter surprise and chagrin at the last moment Manager Flye telephoned that his team would not come. The explanation is obvious. The "Stars" (?) were afraid to meet anything liable to beat them and rather than be defeated decided to forfeit their agreement and what little respect in which they had been held. We are very sorry for the citizens of our sister town who have been hoodoged into thinking that it was a ball team that had received their support the past season.

A NEW JERSEY EDITOR'S TESTIMONIAL.

How Many Are There?

A democratic county convention was called to be held at this place Thursday but for some reason there was not a very large attendance. We understand, however that they did nominate Thos. Colden, of Clarion to be defeated by Robt. W. Paddock for member of the Legislature. In the matter of filling the balance of the ticket the question arose as to whether enough democrats could be found in the county to fill up the list and the county committee was instructed to look it up and if enough could be found to use their own discretion about placing them in nomination.

Foley's Honey and Tar is peculiarly adapted for chronic throat troubles and will positively cure bronchitis, hoarseness and all bronchial diseases. Refuse substitutes.

IF LIFE WERE ALL.

If life were all, what need the living then
In transient griefs that seem to multiply
Each with the disappearance of its mate.
And so to crowd in one long misery
The little pains, in union waxing great.
And racking us beyond all mortal ken?
This tear-wash'd vale—were nothing else to be
There where the twilight robes the close of day.

The Hidden Presence

To say that God is everywhere is not the same as to say that I see God everywhere I go. The first is an intellectual theory, the second is a vital experience. It is conceivable that God might be everywhere and yet the soul not see him wherever it should go; it is conceivable that the soul should see God wherever it should go and yet God not be everywhere. The theological doctrine of the omnipresence of God has grown out of the spiritual experience of companionship with God, but the two are not identical. The one is a deduction of the philosophers, the other is an experience of the devout. It is this last one which the sacred writers lay stress in the Bible. They are not framers of a theory; they are narrators of an experience. We find God everywhere if we take God with us; not otherwise. It is sometimes said that the devout soul does not really see God in nature, he

In filmy mist, and shrouds the after

Not less of tear, and more of cheery

Why fear the issue of eternity?
If life were all—ah! but the shadows

An outer edge of promise and of cheer
To smooth the frown and banish our despair—
And as we use our golden talents here,
We find fruition of our labors there;
Eternal joy is measured as we live.

only imagines him there; he reads him into nature. In the same sense the artist reads into nature beauty, and the poet truth. Nature reflects back to them what they bring to nature. The artistic in nature is discovered only by the artistic in man; the divine in nature is perceived only by the divine in man. The man of vision does not see what does not exist; he does not create, he perceives. But the blind man does not see what does exist; he does not see it because he can not; for as only the spirit of the artist within can see beauty without, so only the spirit of the divine within can see God without. That is what Christ means when he says, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." The muddy pool does not reflect the stars. We discern so much of God in nature and in life as we have of God within us wherewith to discern—no more, no less.

Self-Majesty

When appetite has the keenest edge it must be wielded, like a dangerous weapon with the most absolute mastery. When the nerves quiver with irritable propensity, the will must lay a tranquilizing hand upon their trembling, forbid the lips to open but for quiet words, and compel the heart to live by the placid faith of happier hours. When coward inclination recoils from the austere simplicity of duty, shrinks from the hardness of its strife, grows sensitive to the voices of derision, and obtuse to the whisperings of God, then inclination must be punished as a treacherous and wicked counselor, and all that it forbade be undertaken at any cost. And when the proud, self-justifying thought would refuse to confess and double the past wrong by shutting it up in sullenness instead of opening it up in secret shame; we must instantly, by an act of self-sacrificing will, invoke the Holiest to witness our impotence and humble ourselves within that presence to which our pitiable disguises are of no avail. And if ever a sad, distrustful mind, producing timid and wavering steps, comes over us, and life appears too vain and death too awful a thing, it were false in us to submit to such a delusion, and listen to such monotony of strain; and we must force ourselves upon the wing away—fly to the hills of faith where dwelleth our help—lose ourselves in the forests of our deepest worship, where blessed birds will sing the songs of heaven to our weary hearts.—James Martineau.

Christ and the People

It is frequently said that the church of our time has lost its grip on the working class. The statement is far too sweeping; but whatever truth it contains, is measured by the extent to which the church, ever or anywhere, turns aside from the word or example of her Lord. He was no respecter of persons; His heart overflowed with love for all sorts and conditions of men. Jesus was a social reformer. As a Man of the people He had a heart that was in sympathy with them; and His life and teaching were addressed to the betterment of their conditions here and hereafter. It is now nineteen hundred years since His advent. The ripening of His glorious purpose has been slow but sure. "The things of God grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small." We look back over the centuries and are able to estimate what Christ has done for the people. The heart of Jesus went out to the masses, to the great body of producers, who, by sweat of brain and brawn, are ever enriching the world. Observe how His preaching is enriched with industrial figures; of nets and boats, sowing, fertilizing and reaping, mills and markets and toll-booths, shepherds, housekeepers, architects, vine-dressers and other sorts of handicraftsmen. At the outset of His ministry He gathered about Him a cabinet of twelve men, all of whom were devoted to braincraft or handicraft. There was not among them a single gentleman of leisure. In view of such conditions, it is not surprising to learn that the great multitude of believers in the early church were from among the working class. On the one hand, "not many mighty, not many noble were called"; and on the other, there was little in the new religion to attract the indolent, since one of its fundamental precepts was, "If any man will not work, neither let him eat."—Dr. David J. Burrell.

How to Be Happy

Real life lies in service; that is to say, to be of some use in the world, to make other people happier and better by our presence among them, is the only way of being happy and of improving ourselves, and that not as an occasional thing for a day or for a month, but as the settled habit of our life. I am here in the world to serve and to think of others and not myself. Now although that is the open secret of happiness in the world, it is extraordinarily difficult for us to realize it, and I suppose most young people begin under the impression that instead of happiness lying in service it lies in being served. I would therefore remind you, especially those of you who are placed in circumstances of ease and comfort, that if you make the great object of your life pleasure and amusement, the springs of your being will gradually dry up within you, and long before you have reached middle life you will find that pleasure has ceased to please, and amusement has ceased to amuse; but, on the other hand, if you make the whole object of your life to serve others, to minister, to bless, and to save any one of these human beings around you, you will find that those sacred springs within your own nature bubble up afresh, bubble up in perennial freshness, and while you never sought you will always find pleasure and amusement in the world.—Dr. R. F. Horton.

Explanation of Miracles

There is a "funny man" on the Chicago Tribune who now and then says a thing of force and sense. Looking at the constant foolish quarrel over the miracles of Jesus and seeing how the explanations are often more mystifying than the miracles themselves, he says: "The most reverent way to handle the New Testament miracles is to refrain from any attempt to explain them." Perhaps he is right. For generations past men have tried to explain the miracles of the Christ, but they haven't got beyond making bad blood among themselves. Strange that so many fail to see that Jesus himself is the greatest miracle; one would naturally expect him to do things no other man ever did before him or after him. A stab at the miracles is a stab at the Christ.—Baptist Union.

Faith and Works

Ask me why a true faith must work! Ask why the branch can do other than bear clusters of ruddy grapes. Its difficulty would be to abstain from bearing; the vitality of the root accounts for its life and productivity. Blame the lark, whose rapture vibrates in the sunshine, for pouring from its small throat volumes of sound; blame the child, full of bounding health, for laughing, singing and leaping; blame the musician, whose soul has caught some fragments of the music of eternity, for pouring it forth in song, before you wonder why it is that the true faith which has opened the way from the believer to his Lord produces these greater works.—F. B. Meyer.

Your Father Knoweth

"Your Father knoweth." This is one of the tender words of scripture, the sweet, hushing answer of a love that understands all and can do all. There is such joy in these words: "He knoweth. Your Father knoweth that ye have need of such things." It may be heart-need or life-need or soul-longing, the unattained desire, the unfulfilled wish. To every pang of disappointment, to every powerless reaching forth of hope, no less than to every sigh over mere temporal need, this word comes: "Your Father knoweth." Some men are your friends only so long as they can use you.

DRAW THE LINE AT RUINS.

American Tourist Not Interested in That Line.

American tourists are notoriously irreverent. One of those inevitables paid a visit to Chatsworth, England, the other day, and after exploring the marvels of the Palace of the Peak, he said to a Sheffielder who had been also inside, "This is a nice place; who belongs to it?" "The Duke of Devonshire," "How did he get it?" "It was left to him." "What does he do? Did he ever earn ten cents in his life?" "Oh, yes; he's very clever." "But did he ever do a day's work, like you or me?" The Sheffielder was soon at his wits' end for replies, and by way of changing the subject suggested that the American should visit Fountains Abbey. "Fountains Abbey," replied Old Yank, "what's that?" "It's a very fine ruin," was the answer. "A ruin, is it," said the Yankee; "then I guess I don't see it. Ever since I married her (jerking his thumb toward his wife) I draw the line at ruins, stranger. She's ruin enough for me."

MAY SETTLE IN SUMATRA.

Coer Leaders Said to Have a Liking for the Country. After his visit to Antwerp and possibly a short stop in London, Mr. Reitz, it is understood, will not return to South Africa, but intends going out to Sumatra to settle down. Of late years Sumatra has been making rapid strides ahead, owing to the great success of the tobacco growing industry along the coast opposite Penang, and Deli and Langkat have grown into important places. They are not far, as the crow flies, from the disturbed district of Acheen, where one of the longest wars in history is still going on. The Dutch government having started the suppression of the Acheenese revolt over thirty years ago. Dr. Leyds is also said to have some idea of going to the Dutch East. He is a native of Java, and has many relatives and friends in and around Batavia.—London Chronicle.

Counting Government Money.

J. R. Page, of the New York government assay office, and F. W. Bradock, of the mint bureau in Washington, during the last month have counted more than $20,000,000 in loose change which Uncle Sam has stored in the New Orleans mint. Every coin passed through the hands of one of the other of these expert tellers, and carefully tally was kept. Among the other coins were 15,000,000 standard silver dollars, $5,000,000 in gold coins and subsidiary coinage, and about $6,000,000 worth of silver bullion. These two men went to New Orleans recently and at once began the task of accounting for every dollar in money represented in the accounts of the superintendent of the money manufactory. They have just completed the work.

Courage of High Order.

It is related of Sir Edward Bradford, the chief police commissioner of London, that he once walked arm in arm, so to speak, with a tigress. He was out shooting, and always a fearless sportsman, had come to close quarters with his quarry. He fired, and either the ball failed to take effect or but slightly wounded the animal. She sprang at him, and seized his left arm above the elbow. The pain must have been terrible, but Sir Edward kept cool, and realizing that it would be death to drag his mangled arm away and allow her to spring afresh at him, he deliberately walked a few agonizing paces until his comrade was able to take aim and kill the brute. Thus his courage saved his life, though the amputation of his arm at the shoulder proved necessary.

Quaint Sayings.

Commenting on the dubious anecdotes of Disraeli perpetrated in Sir Edward Blount's "Memoirs," a correspondent of the London Times thus writes on the fallibility of this sort of reminiscence: "Much nonsense was talked about Disraeli in those days; men perhaps began to believe the stories that passed from mouth to mouth and even to think they had themselves been present at scenes which never were. Lady Ashburton used to say that as a child she declared she remembered being present at her mother's wedding; and that, though she was whipped for making the statement, she never ceased to believe it."

Success of American Women.

A much traveled man in speaking of the way in which women walk announced that without doubt the women of Baltimore have the most correct carriage and most graceful walk of any in the world. As Baltimore has long held the palm for the beauty of her women this will be another feather in her cap. This same man, who is a Londoner of exalted social position, was asked recently to what he attributed the social success of American women. He answered the causes were "splendid dressing, self-possession and freedom from shyness and a superlatively good education."

His Pillow of Stone.

Bishop Taylor of the Methodist church, who died on May 18 at Palo Alto, Cal., had for over half a century slept with his head pillowed upon a stone. He generally carried the stone in a satchel and always laid his head upon it at night wherever he was. A Baltimore clergyman says that on one occasion the bishop visited him when the temperature was far below zero, and that the bishop slept in the room with all the windows thrown up and with his head on the stone.

POPULAR SCIENCE

New Uses for Paper

Paper teeth would appear to many people at first sight quite impracticable and useless, yet actual use has proved them to be in every respect equal to those made of porcelain or other similar compositions. Dentists in Germany are now making them as prominent in their work as the latter, and in every case they are said to give satisfaction. Naturally, too, they are very much less expensive than the false teeth used hitherto, while they cannot break so easily, and are not in the least susceptible to conditions of temperature.

Field Hospital Equipment

While we hope that war will soon be a thing of the past, the powers have not yet begun to curtail their purchases of equipment for their armies nor have the inventors ceased to improve on the various appliances used in warfare. The latest invention in this line is the combined ammunition and water carrier and a litter for modern ingenuity has found for paper is to manufacture foot-gear from it. So skilfully can it be prepared for the purpose that in appearance it is almost identical with that of patent leather. It is, however, considerably lighter, and so thin that it apparently reduces the wearer's feet a couple of sizes or more—a fact which will doubtless go a good way towards bringing paper shoes into popular use, for most people have an inward and secret desire to possess small feet. Such shoes are best suited for housewear, more especially through their fragility rendering them hardly durable enough for outdoor wear.

Bricks from Sand and Cement

A new process for making bricks out of sand and cement has been put in operation in Missouri. No ovens or burning processes are necessary, the hardening of the bricks beginning as soon as it is taken from the mould, and in fifteen days it is ready for delivery. During the process of moulding a single brick undergoes a pressure of 65,000 pounds. In thirty days from the time the hardening process begins the brick will stand a pressure of ten tons; in sixty days, a pressure of sixty-five tons! The ordinary pressure required for building purposes is about eight tons. In addition, any desired color may be introduced into the sand and cement mixture. When taken from the mould the soft mixture must be handled with extreme care. The bricks are then placed upon large racks built for that purpose, where they are sprayed with water from an automatic sprinkler every four hours. This is done to assist the action of the cement in setting properly. The hardening process naturally begins at the outward surface of the brick and continues inward.

A Complete Dining Outfit

As commonly constructed the ordinary dinner pails or lunch kits are clumsy affairs, provided with cumbersome trays of tin, which fit together inside the pail, requiring the removal of the entire outfit before the luncheon can be commenced. Furthermore, it is difficult to clean the receptacles properly after the food has come in contact with them. The new pail, instead of providing tin trays for holding the food, is fitted with metal racks for carrying the common oval "side dishes" of china or earthenware, and when the cover and sides of the pail are removed the entire luncheon is brought into view without the necessity of moving a single tray. The construction of the pail is such that the cover and sides lift off in one piece, being secured to the central upright by a pin inserted in the eyelet which projects through a slot in the center of the cover. Beneath the napkin holder is a central chamber arranged to contain a flask of drink, and clips are provided to carry the knife, fork and spoon. The racks for the upper pair of dishes are hinged to the upright frame and tilt back at either side to afford free access to the lower dishes.

Light as a Healing Principle

In view of the growing importance of the application of light as a healing principle in medical science the medical congress which recently convened at Wiesbaden invited Prof. Bie of Copenhagen to read a paper on the subject. The lecturer explained the principle of employing light for healing purposes after excluding its chemical effects. The results attained by this method in case of smallpox, according to the lecturer, are such that the question is raised whether the light treatment shall not be made compulsory. Prof. Bie approved the apparatus invented by Dr. Finson of Copenhagen with which the latter has achieved such remarkable success in cases of lupus, but urges that no one but qualified doctors should be allowed to apply the light treatment, as disturbances are apt to occur which render it necessary to break it off suddenly.

Sun Heats Water for the Bath

The majority of bathers do not want hot water for all their summer baths, and yet it is nearly always necessary to start a fire to take the chill off the water, as few can stand it at the normal temperature. As a matter of economy in performing this service the solar water heater recently designed by Frank Walker of Los Angeles, Cal., should recommend itself to all householders, the cost of installation being the final expense also, whereas, in case of artificial heat the fuel for the fire soon amounts to considerable. The inventor claims that a sufficient amount of heat can be secured from the sun's rays to raise the water to the necessary temperature, by utilizing this invention, which, as will be seen, consists of an ordinary hot water boiler set in a glass-enclosed pocket in the roof of the house. Surrounding the boiler and forming the sides of the pocket are a number of polished metal reflectors, which serve to concentrate the heat rays on the reservoir, and it is not at all unlikely that the interior of the pocket will be sufficiently warm to heat the bathing water all summer without any artificial heat.

Strainer for Tobacco Smoke

Our illustration shows a new design of smoke-straining pipe, which utilizes a very old idea, that of the water bowl attachment. The water pipes, with which we are familiar are entirely too large to be carried in the pocket, but the one here shown has a reservoir sufficiently reduced in size to be carried around by the smoker when at his work or on the street, and as provision is made for confining the water so that it can not escape from the reservoir there is no danger of wetting the clothing with it when the pipe is not in use. As will be seen, the water receptacle can be entirely separated from the pipe stem, for cleansing and recharging at convenient intervals, and as the bulb is made of hard rubber or glass the cleansing process is a short task. When replacing the half-filled bowl if a smoke is desired the tubes connecting with the tobacco bowl and mouthpiece are turned into registration, but if the smoker is placing the pipe in his pocket he turns the water receptacle around the neck is tight in the screw threaded socket, when the tubes are out of alignment and the water is confined securely to prevent leakage. When in use the smoke is drawn first into the water bowl, passing through the liquid, and thence to the mouth. The inventor is Henry L. Austwick of Chicago, Ill.

HOW HE MADE AN ENEMY.

Old Gentleman Tells of Perfidy of a Former Friend.

"Yes," said the old man, "Smith was my bosom friend when we were boys at school, but he became my worst enemy. We sat on the same form, ate together, slept together, and shared each other's joys and sorrows. "When we grew older our parents sent us to the university together, where our friendship, if possible, grew stronger. We took our degrees together, and to preserve the friendship of our boyhood days, went into partnership.

"We were more than brothers and were always together, and it was while attending a social party that we both met and fell in love with the same girl.

"Our rivalry was a friendly one, and for some time none could tell which was the favored one. One night my chum came to me in his old friendly way and said:—

"John, I can see that if I should prove the winner you would suffer deeply, therefore I have decided to turn over my interest in the business to you and leave for some new country."

"Of course, I endeavored to persuade him not to go, but he persisted and carried out his plan. He went to Australia, and in three months I married the girl."

"But how did Smith become your enemy?" inquired one of the listeners. "By not letting me go to Australia instead," snapped the old man; and they all understood.

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"Have you traveled far?" asked Clarence.
"Shipmate, this old hulk is about on her last cruise," said a feeble, husky voice.
"It is Ralston—Gium Ralston!" roared Gid. "Where ye been, Gium? Tell me where ye been!"
"I am sick—starving—dying!" the ex-sailor moaned.
Clarence hurried him to his house, where a warm supper was hastily prepared for him.
"Have you seen Paul Miller or heard from him since you came upon us in the pass?" was one of the first questions propounded by Clarence.
"Yes," he answered. "Last I saw of him he was on an iceberg sailing out 't sea, and his only fellow-passenger was a polar bear."

It will be essential at this point to return to Paul Miller, whom we left on an iceberg floating out to sea. The swelling flood and tossing cakes of ice between the drifting floe and shore made it utterly impossible for him to reach land. The sharp growl of the monster above indicated that a crisis was coming, which would determine the rights of ownership to the mountain of ice.

Through all his misfortunes Paul had managed to retain his presence of mind and his rifle. He executed a skillful flank movement, and, scaling a shelf, was several feet above the bear and not over twenty paces away, prepared for an assault. With nerves as steady as if engaging in the most ordinary sport, he leveled his rifle at the side of the monster's head. When sure of his aim he pulled the trigger. There followed a sharp report and the bear dropped on his haunches, his nose in the air.

Paul cocked his rifle and fired a second shot at the bear's head. It fell on the ice and after a few spasmodic kicks lay still. He sent a third into the back of its head, but it was wholly unnecessary, for the other bullets had done the work.

With his knife he removed the skin from the animal, and, climbing as high as he dared, hung it upon one of those spires of ice, in the hope some sealing schooner or whaling ship might see it and send a boat to his relief. When night came he lay down on the snow and ice, and, notwithstanding his perilous situation, actually slept.

He was awakened soon after dawn by the sound of voices near.

"What say ye now?" one seemed to say to another.

"I say nowt," was the answer. "If he be there find him."

"Sure, man, ye canna say as a bear will peel his own skin from his back."

"Weel, there's a stiffener," returned another voice.

Paul rose and mechanically laid his hand on the rifle at his side. Only a few hours before he was wishing he had not shot the bear, and that it had destroyed him instead of his shooting it, but now that his life might probably be in danger, it grew suddenly very sweet.

He raised his head a trifle higher and listened intently at the voices.

"Push alongside and let a lad go ashore," said another voice.

Then he plainly heard the splashing of paddles in the water. He crept along on hand and knees, holding his rifle in one hand and a cocked revolver in the other.

Then he raised his head just a little and saw a large canoe in which were half a score of dark-skinned Indians. Surprise and curiosity overcame any fear he might entertain of his visitors, and he arose and gazed about on the sea and shore. The glacial filled him with wonder and surprise. The shore was lined with green trees, and afar off he saw a mountain towering so high its peak pierced the light blue clouds.

He saw chimneys to houses from which the pale blue smoke was issuing, mingling with the atmosphere. It was a brisk little village with men, women and children in it, but what brought peace to his troubled mind and relieved all fear was the little white church, with its spire, on the hillside.

"There he is! There he is!" cried a young man in the canoe, pointing at Paul. "Ho, my brother, you ride on a strange boat!"

"Who are you?" asked Paul.

"The Metlakahla," was the answer.

He tried to think where he had heard the name before, but was unable to recollect it. He was asked to come down to their canoe. They tossed a rope to him, which he made fast to one of the great cakes of ice, and slid down to the boat. The tall chief stood up to catch him, and as he dropped into his arms said:

"My brother, you are safe. You have had a very dangerous ride."

"It is not so weel; that boot ye ride upon," put in another Indian, with a strong Scotch accent. The men with the paddles at once propelled the canoe away from the ice floe, and it glided put into the bay, straight for the village of Metlakahla. The island was given by the United States to a scanty tribe of British American Indians whom an old Scotch missionary had converted from utter savagery into a civilized and God-fearing people.

When the canoe touched the shore Paul saw an elderly white man in the through. He was dressed in the garb of civilization, and his long, white hair and beard gave him a patriarchal appearance. His face was grave and kind.

"My son, a kind Providence has wonderfully preserved you. We will go to church to return thanks for your great deliverance, and then we will hear your story."

After songs and prayers Paul was taken to the home of the patriarch, where he fared sumptuously, after which he narrated his strange adventures to the good old missionary.

"So you are another, my son, who has come to dig gold from the earth in the frozen north." Then, taking the arm of the youth, he led him from the house, and, pointing to that great old mountain, which, grim and gray, towered into the skies, and with his eyes wildly dilating, said:

"In mockery, at the grim gateway of Alaska, towers that mountain of gold upon which no white man dares lay his finger."

Paul gazed at him in amazement, and began to wonder if he had not got among a race of madmen.

"How was the gold discovered?" he asked.

"It's not discovered save by the Indians and perhaps one other than yourself. But come in and I will tell you what other white man than yourself knows of the island and the mountain of gold."

When they were seated in the cozy parsonage the old missionary proceeded to tell Paul the story, but they were interrupted by the arrival of some Indians with a prisoner. The story told by Father Duncan we have heard before from the lips of Clum Ralston. No sooner did Father Duncan see the captive than he said:

"It is one of the two sailors who did away with the poor captain."

When Paul saw the prisoner he exclaimed:

"Great Heaven! It is one of the men who captured the old hermit in the cavern!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Laura's Departure.

While the many stirring events were transpiring in Alaska, poor Laura Bush was living a life of doubt, mingled with hope and despair, at Fresno, California. Not a line had she received from Paul since the letter came that he was robbed and wounded.

Was he dead or was he still alive, struggling to regain what he had lost?

It began to be whispered over the town that Laura Bush was losing her reason. Theodore Lackland was shocked and grieved at the thought, for in his selfish way he loved her madly. He would have given worlds to possess this matchless beauty, who had wholly captivated his soul.

At this time a most remarkable event transpired—an event that was more a surprise to Laura than any one else. A bachelor uncle living in Wyoming died and left her twelve thousand dollars—all he possessed.

"This will enable me to procure an outfit and go in search of Paul," said Laura to Mrs. Miller. The widow endeavored her in her arms and begged her to abandon such a mad design.

In vain she wept, prayed and plead with the conviction that she must go. She had her way. Buying her outfit and securing the service of a faithful, trusty man who had worked for her father, she prepared for the journey.

She had made her last trip to San Francisco and returned late one day, a short time before her departure. On reaching Fresno she started from the depot to walk home. It was so late the sun had set, and the shadows of evening began to creep over the landscape. She heard footsteps at her side and Lackland's voice said:

"Miss Bush, I have heard a rumor that you are going to start for Alaska."

"I shall."

He walked on in silence for a moment, while his pale face wore a pensive, sad expression, and his eyes were upon the ground. His determination to conquer made him selfish and scheming. At last he said:

"Laura, you do not understand me. I am a true friend to you; you may not believe it, but I am. That other time my passion was hot. I was wrong, perhaps, in denouncing the man you loved, but surely you will forgive me."

She answered that she was taught she must forgive in order to be forgiven. As a drowning man clutches at a straw, he grasped at something in her words, and was encouraged to add:

"Laura, if you would let me sympathize with you in this loss, I would freely mingle my tears with yours. Oh, if you would only let me be a brother—more than a brother—"

"Silence, Mr. Lackland," she quickly interrupted. "I will hear no more from you. Here I am at home; good-night."

She darted into the house, quickly closing the door after her and leaving him standing out in the cold, dark street. For a moment he stood gazing upon the door which had closed upon the being he loved, and then turned slowly about, his thin, white lips compressed, and his fingers closed firmly as if he had the lockjaw.

As he boarded the midnight train for San Francisco he murmured, half audibly:

"Something desperate must be done. I shall now play my last trump card."

Meanwhile Laura was completing arrangements for an early departure. Ben Holton, her father's faithful domestic, was the only person she engaged to go with her. A party was forming at Seattle, and thither she went with all her supplies. Mrs. Miller accompanied her that far.

Here they found another brave woman—Kate Willis—ready to brave the dangers of the Klondyke. She was forty years of age, large, strong, and had determined to go to Juneau or Dawson City to start a laundry.

The vessel pulled off, and Mrs. Miller stood on the dock waving her handkerchief at the brave girl until distance mingled her form with the others, and then burst into tears.

Theodore Lackland was a deep schemer, and when he separated from Laura Kean he had by no means abandoned hope of winning her.

While on his way to San Francisco he was continually saying:

"So she is going herself to search for her lover! Is Paul dead—really dead? May it not be only a mistake after all? He is missing, that is sure, but the young fellow has more lives than a cat. I wish to Heaven I knew that he was—"

He started, and, shuddering, began to think how degenerated he had grown.

Then he leaned back in his seat and closed his eyes, while the great train, like a flying vulcan, rushed on in the darkness until the city of Oakland was reached. He went aboard the ferry, and was transferred to San Francisco, and, leaping into a carriage, was driven to a certain hotel, where he secured a room.

It was nearly daylight by this time, but notwithstanding he had slept none during the night, he summoned a messenger, wrote a note, and, sealing it, dispatched the messenger.

Two hours had passed, and the sun was shining through the window, when there came a light tap at his door, and he opened it.

Before him stood a smooth-shaved man with hair that was once sandy, but so bleached with gray it was a roan. His nose and eyes were prominent, and his face narrow, cheeks red and steel-gray eyes twinkled with something deep and devilish. The newcomer was a peculiarly nervous man who had a strange habit of craning his neck and bowing his head like an eccentric burlesque comedian.

After assuring himself he was not being watched, he closed the door softly and in a voice that was softness itself asked:

"You sent for me," and craned his neck like a choked rooster trying to swallow a morsel too large for its throat.

"Yes, Capt. Fairweather, I want to talk with you. When does another ship sail for Juneau?"

The captain, who was well up in marine intelligence, said:

"There is the 'President' sails from Seattle in three weeks, and the 'Occident' leaves here a few days sooner."

"Will they both arrive about the same time?"

"Yes, the 'Occident' a little ahead of the 'President,' as she is the fastest boat."

"That is just as I want it. Now, captain, you secured me for me before to do some work in the Klondyke."

Again the captain craned his neck, choked and bowed, then cautiously glanced about the room to see if he was observed before answering:

"They got in trouble there."

"How do you know?"

"Morris wrote that Belcher was shot and in the hands of the miners, who might lynch him, and Capt. Fairweather placed his hands about his neck, as if the very thought gave him pain."

"Has he given away anything?" asked Lackland, with some little uneasiness.

"No. He will die before he does that."

"Very well, Fairweather, have you heard of the fate of this young fellow who is causing so much trouble?"

"No."

"The girl says he lives."

"Bah!"

"Well, the impression is so strong that she has determined to set out for Alaska to find him, and sails in the 'President' for Seattle."

"It will be a fool's journey, I know full well; he can't be alive."

"Well, I have made up my mind to go to Alaska myself."

UNIQUE ACTION OF THE TIDE

Reversible Waterfall at St. John, New Brunswick, Canada.

We have reversible waterfalls, reversible windmills, and all sorts of reversibles nowadays, but St. John, in New Brunswick, Canada, has the only reversible waterfall in the world.

In the morning there is a fall downstream of 15 feet, but in the afternoon the water runs upstream and falls over the other way. This phenomenon is caused by the strength of the wonderful tides of the Bay of Fundy, which meet and overcome the water from a river 450 miles long, which empties into the harbor of St. John through a narrow gorge less than 500 feet wide. There is a suspension bridge over the gorge where this daily marvel occurs, and hundreds of people go to see it.

At half-tide the water is smooth over the dam and vessels go up and down in safety. The tides of the bay of Fundy are the heaviest in the world. If you are ever in New Brunswick and it's time for the tide to come in you want to make for the bluffs if you are not fond of the water.

Vessels come into St. John harbor and when the tide goes out the water runs clear out from under them and they settle down upon the gravel bottom of the slips. Wagons are then driven alongside and cargo is transferred direct. It is an odd spectacle to see schooners sitting up high and dry, with no water near them, looking as though the only way for them to get to sea would be to fly. Some writer has remarked that water makes an astonishing difference in the appearance of a river, and it certainly does make a big change in the look of the St. John water, front.

She was Persuaded to Try St. Jacobs Oil, and All-Pain Disappeared Immediately.

It is undoubtedly a fact beyond dispute that the strongest advertising medium the proprietors have is that of people who recommend others to use St. Jacobs Oil. People who have themselves experienced a happy result which invariably follows the use of this great remedy, show their gratitude by recommending it to those whom they know are similarly affected. This is the case of Margaret Lee, of 71 Brightfield road, Lee Green, Wis.

"Having suffered from muscular rheumatism for years, and not receiving any benefit from various remedies, I used St. Jacobs Oil; pain and soreness removed at once; no return of rheumatism." St. Jacobs Oil is sold in 25 cts. and 50 cts. sizes by all druggists.

CURE FOR ASTHMA.

Sufferers from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchitis will be interested to learn that Dr. R. Schiffmann's "Asthma Cure" instantly relieves the most violent attack, insures comfortable sleep and has effected cures in thousands of cases that had previously tried every other remedy in vain. No waiting for results. Its action is immediate, direct and certain. So firm is his confidence that the doctor requests this paper to announce that he has sent to druggists of this town, as well as to all other druggists in this country, sample packages of his remedy which will be given free to sufferers of above complaints, who apply promptly, thus offering an opportunity to such as have not yet tried the remedy to make a personal test which will convince the most skeptical. Persons failing for any reason to receive a sample package from their druggist will receive one free by mail by sending name and address (enclosing 2 cent stamp for postage) to Dr. R. Schiffmann, Box 814, St. Paul, Minn.

RAPID GROWTH OF MOSCOW.

Russian City Will Soon Rank With the Largest in Europe.

The population of Moscow shows a remarkably rapid increase. Within the comparatively short period of 30 years the number of inhabitants has just about doubled. At the time of the French invasion in 1812 the urban Muscovites numbered about 300,000, although the official returns were 252,000. In 1871 the official census gave the population as 602,000, in 1882 it was 768,000, and according to the reckoning now completed the historic capital contains 1,473,500 inhabitants, thus taking the tenth place among the most populous cities of the world.

Moscow covers an area of 101 square kilometers, or only two kilometers less than that of St. Petersburg. Area is not, however, by any means a general criterion, in questions of population, as appears from the fact that whereas London, with the largest population of any city in the world, covers 303 square kilometers, New York, with a population numbering more than a million less than that of the British metropolis, has a total area of 795 square kilometers. The population of Moscow is less dense than those of St. Petersburg, Glasgow, London, Berlin and Paris.

MIXED RELIGION AND WORK.

Philadelphia Negro Sings Hymns While He Wallops Mule.

A coal-black negro perched on a cart who alternately walloped a bay mule with a snake whip and sang snatches of hymns in a high key caused a stir and much merriment on Germantown avenue, at Wayne Junction, yesterday afternoon, says the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph. The negro saw no incongruity in his double performance, and the mule, judging from the way he laid back his ears and essayed to kick the bottom out of the cart, saw no humor in the situation. But the onlookers, who were at first shocked at the sacrilegious aspect of the negro's conduct, finally succumbed to the ludicrousness of the affair.

The School Commissioners' Column.

ABEL W. CHEW, Commissioner.

Presumably there is no man or woman who does not lie more or less and he who says he does not, is suspected of being a past master in the art.

Whatever may be true of adults, there is no question but that all children tell untruths, and the fables about Washington while he was called "Georgie" are such stupid lies that the liars who teach them should be indictable.

The earliest untruths are those of disposition or imagination.

The characteristics of the human mind are such that it is practically impossible for any one to give an account of anything just as he saw or heard it, and with children it is absolutely impossible. The mind fills in all vacant tracts. No one attends so closely to anything he sees or hears that he knows it all. The most that one gets is a series of views or statements that impress him. When he comes to report upon it or testify regarding it, he fills in the connecting links.

Children hear and see less than adults and the less they see and hear the better story they make.

We should never give a child to understand that what he supplements is false, but teach him that it is his part of the story and not the fact itself.

No court ever accuses a man of perjury on the ground that his testimony is not the exact truth.

The treatment of lies of the imagination is to insist that the child pick out the facts and leave them standing alone, without any attempt at a story. Two men testify in court, and give a delightful story of the "whole situation, but on cross examination is torn all to pieces and made to appear that he is a liar.

The other tells what he knew and only what he knew, and no questions are asked on cross examination.

One made a story, the other made no story.—A Study.

FEET SWOLLEN TO AN IMMENSE SIZE.

"I had kidney trouble so bad," says J. J. Cox, of Valley View, Ky., "that I could not work, my feet were swollen to an immense size and I was confined to my bed and physicians were unable to give me any relief. My doctor finally prescribed Foley's Kidney cure which made a well man of me."

One Thing and Another.

According to Professor Georson grain can be matured almost anywhere in Alaska. He has also grown flax at Sitka. It was more than three feet high, matured seed and produced a fiber of excellent quality.

Experiments with macaroni wheats lead to the belief that a considerable section of this country can grow these wheats better perhaps and cheaper than anywhere in the world. The Dakotas have thus far given the best results with the spring varieties of macaroni wheat, and the establishment at no distant time of macaroni factories in St. Paul and Minneapolis is predicted.

The winter wheat yield, 76,505,443 bushels, is the greatest winter wheat crop ever grown in Kansas and probably the greatest ever recorded for any state. It exceeds the previous year's crop by 33,779,972 bushels and by $19,607,127 in value.

In the isle of Jersey whole potatoes for seed are sprouted in trays eye end up.

The Chinese are not entirely clothed in cotton. The ordinary annual crop of silk in China is estimated at about 21,000,000 pounds, of which over 60 per cent is consumed in the country where it is produced.

The Republican State judicial convention was held in Grand Rapids Thursday. Judge William L. Carpenter, of Detroit, was nominated for justice of the supreme court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Charles D. Long. The convention also passed a resolution endorsing the candidacy of Gen. Russell A. Alger for United States Senator after a warm contest.

Manager Loveday is keeping up the reputation of his Opera House for fine attractions. "In Louisiana" pleased a large audience Thursday evening and he has many other good things in store for us this season. "In Louisiana" is a strong play full of dramatic situations and as played by The Labadies, gives great satisfaction wherever it is shown. The scenic effects carried by the company are fine, especially the head-on collision between two passenger trains in the center of the stage shown in the second act, which was strikingly realistic.

When once liberated within your system, it produces a most wonderful effect. It's worth one's last dollar to feel the pleasure of life that comes by taking Rocky Mountain Tea.

A very pleasant surprise occurred at the Methodist parsonage Wednesday evening. Just as the parson and his wife were preparing to retire a rap was heard at the door and in walked Rev. Matthews and wife. Having commenced they continued to come until the house was comfortably filled. A very pleasant evening was passed. After refreshments were passed and the company had dispersed Mrs. Sprague discovered a paper carefully laid over something in the center of the dining room table. On removing the paper, to the complete surprise of both pastor and wife, there set a beautiful china cracker dish, a sugar bowl and creamer, with a note giving assurance of the appreciation of their pastor and wife.

FRENCH MILITARY MEN OPPOSED TO REFORMS.

The dispute now raging in France over the government proposal to reduce the term of compulsory service in barracks to two years is one, as we believe, of extreme significance. France being at once the most military of nations and the one most susceptible to new ideas, her example is almost sure, sooner or later, to persuade Europe; and it seems almost certain that she intends this example should be set.

substituting the Swiss system of trained militia for that of regular armies gains ground yearly among the peasantry, and they believe that it will be directly promoted by the abolition of exemptions, which will render the entire cultivated class, who now, to the number of 37,000, serve only for one year, bitterly hostile to barrack life.

SEA ENGULFS ACRES OF ENGLAND'S COAST.

The encroaching sea is steadily eating away the coast of England, says the Strand Magazine. It is stated that the annual loss of area by coast erosion in England alone is probably not less than 2,000 acres.

Bexhill and Wirral, and their remains have been found at numerous points along the coast. Southwest from Land's End, toward the Scilly Islands, a peninsula of about 227 square miles has been carried away, and below the sand beach is a deposit of black mold containing indications of trees and deer.

Parts of the lost lands were low lying, protected by dikes or levees, which were eventually breached; other parts were washed away by the floods and storms; but in many cases the sea is eating its way into tall cliffs, demolishing numerous towns and villages.

At Wirral is Leaowes Castle, now on the edge of the cliff, but fifty years ago it was half a mile from the sea. Many historical towns, such as Ravensburg (mentioned in Shakespeare), where Henry IV. landed in 1399, and Edward IV. in 1471, having now entirely disappeared.

The line of anchorage for ships off Selsey, in Sussex, is still called "the Park," having been a royal deer park in the reign of Henry VIII., while the treacherous shoals known as the Goodwin sands formed in early days the estate of Earl Goodwin.

At Reculver the cliffs were gradually eroded until a church, originally two miles inland, was partly wrecked; this church, however, had two spires, forming a striking landmark for sailors, and a trinity board (in charge of the lighthouse work) therefore had a sea wall built to prevent the destruction of the towers.

SURF RIDING IS THE SPORT OF HONOLULU.

The best sport in Honolulu is surf riding. It beats tobogganing. It is yachting, canoeing, bathing, tobogganing and iceboating combined.

big wave breaks over or rolls under the canoe and on to its glorious finish and you have no part in it.

We invited some army officers to the fun recently, hired a couple of muscular natives and their handsome thirty-foot canoe, put on our bathing suits and paddled out into the breakers. The canoe is a dugout, made of the valuable koawood.

But if you catch it right—and the natives generally do—you all paddle for dear life at the captain's command, force the canoe to its top speed just as the breaker is forming and then come in with the great wall of water just back of you, everybody yelling, the spray flying, the waters roaring and rushing.

It has an outrigger, a fair-sized log fastened parallel to the canoe by means of two curved braces of beams. Ours was at least forty years old, had been used by royalty, and was worth $300.

You live at the rate of a mile a minute. You seem to be going even twice as fast as you are. Usually there are two or three other canoes out and you have all the excitement of a race. But even without other canoes it is a race—a race with the breaker.

We worked out against the stiff breakers for about half a mile and then turned and rested a bit, waiting the critical time to catch a big one and come in with its rush. That is the science of surf-riding, to catch the breaker at the turn. If you are too quick you find your canoe thrown aside or capsized or running in with a swell wave instead of the one you were after. If you are too late the

ENGLISH PRINCES MUST JOIN ARMY OR NAVY.

The princes of the English blood royal have never been allowed to saunter through life as mere do-nothings. Custom and monarchical dignity, of course, severely limit the number of things to which the heir apparent and his younger brothers may apply themselves.

Those "reasons of state" are not likely to be held less imperative in the future, and one may with some confidence surmise that for members of the English royal family the days of active service are over.

"For instance, a cow admires a horse and will stand and watch one for a long time. She is sort of timid about him, but she admires him just the same. She has a contempt for a mule, and seems to be amused by his antics. Hogs she tolerates, that's all. And sheep she hates. She will not eat grass where sheep have been. She hates dogs, too, but will tolerate the shepherd dog, because she knows she simply has to, and that the shepherd dog will not bite her."

Before the words were all uttered the congregation was pouring out of the church, each family being anxious to make sure that its home was not on fire. It need hardly be said that the fire existed only in the pastor's imagination.

ALONE

She had not any word to say—
There was no one who stood by her;
For one misstep in life's young day,
When love had seemed so good to her,
She walked from all the world apart,
And kept her grief locked in her heart—
A comrade drear seemed Memory;
So all alone walked she.

But sang the blackbird in the brake,
It seemed his song was made for her;
And all along the calm blue lake
The lilies pure were laid for her.
The honey-suckle in the dew
Around her door its fragrance threw,
The ewe lamb by her side would lead,
And white doves there would feed.

I dream the Christ of Galilee
Who on the dread cross died for her,
When near to death her steps shall be,
The gate will open wide for her,
That angel hands will draw her in,
And lock without the old-time sin,
And on her brow again will press,
Her lost youth's happiness.

The Awakening of Princess Valerie.

BY CURRAN RICHARD GREENLEY.
(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Pretty Princess Valerie, they had called her, back in the little kingdom of Arstadt, when Duke Fritz had wooed and won her in the guise of the Count of Nelheim, and with the wily old Prime Minister had plotted against a girl's willfulness to give her the sweetest of love marriages. Well! That was years ago. Since then, only yesterday, a weary truth had come to Princess Valerie—that men may love; but men will tire, and the newest face has ever a charm.

It was a bitter smile that curved the proud red lips, as she watched Duke Fritz stroll under the lindens, murmuring pretty speeches into the dainty ear of the Countess Isobel. Countess Isobel of Hohenhausen, the veriest flirt ever sent to overturn the peace of the little court of Auerstadt.

Valerie rested her hot cheek in her hand and gazed down at the sleeping boy, heir to the duchy, child of her love, all that was left of that love, Valerie told herself, as the countess's gay laugh rang up beneath the window.

She had been so happy, only last night, when that little vixen, Katherine de Grafenried, had spoken lightly in her hearing of Countess Isobel's latest conquest. Katherine had seemed properly dismayed when the duchess's angry face appeared between the portiers and bade her say out her meaning. She had wept and sobbed with a pretty reluctance, and then had come the story of the moonlight walks, of the rides in the forest and the little notes that went to and fro, and Valerie listened with death in her heart and a proud smile on her lips.

"Is that all?" she had asked. Then, at her bidding, the girl crept away, the malice half hid in her sleepy green eyes. Katherine hated the duchess, as her small soul hated all things gracious and lovely.

Poor, proud Valerie. All that night she lay in her great state bed with wide staring eyes "facing the future," she called it, with all a girl's high tragedy, with all a loving woman's pain. At breakfast, the duke came in to join her, with a song on his lips, and a rose in his buttonhole; but Valerie thought she knew whose fingers had plucked that rose, and she would have none of him, and the duke went away with a scowl on his handsome face and found the Countess Isobel upon the terrace, where a little later Valerie saw them talking together. She could imagine what they were saying, and her jealous heart throbbed nigh to bursting.

"Fool! fool!" she told herself. "Is not this the portion of royal women, the cross that goes with the crown?" but she had loved him so.

A dry sob arose in her throat and a blackness was before her eyes, all the day, as she moved through the stately rooms. Duke Fritz had carefully kept away from her. He was puzzled, hurt and a little resentful.

"Highness, the prince is ill and should have the Herr doctor immediately." Yet he glanced wistfully toward her face or twice; but that inscrutable, cold smile lay on the lovely lips, repelling all approach, and unfortunately, Valerie never caught that look, only suffered and wound the scourge closer to her bare bosom.

When her women came to robe her for the evening she thrust aside the gay tissues, the shimmering satins, and bade them put on a trailing black gown of some misty material, cloudlike, sombre, from which the white marble of throat and bosom gleamed like frost.

Duke Fritz stood at her side until the tedious ceremony was ended; then he made his way to the Countess Isobel, and Valerie, glancing up, met the eyes of Katherine de Grafenried filled with mocking laughter. The ebb and flow of the music, the glide of the feet over the polished floor, the murmur of voices, with their set speeches, came to her as through a mist. She had some wild thought of leaving it all and rushing out into the white night, of going to Rudolph, her brother, the king of Arstadt. She would claim his protection. Then a thought gripped her heartstrings—her child. She could not leave him, and the people of Auerstadt would never suffer their little prince to be raised in another land. No, she must stay and bear her martyrdom. Rudolph would be the first to bid her return, and Princess Valerie could have risen then and there, and beat her hands against the wall in sheer despair. Across the room, she could see the duke's fair head bent low above Countess Isobel; it was maddening.

"Valerie!"

A little page came hurrying down the long room and bowed before her, his face white and anxious. "Highness, the little prince is ill, and should have the Herr doctor immediately."

Valerie sprang to her feet, and an instant hush fell over the audience chamber, as she swept past the little knots of courtiers and laughing women, a princess, but yet a woman, who has heard the cry of her child in need of her.

A group of frightened attendants made way for her, as she fell on her knees beside the low, white bed. The rosy limbs, that she had kissed so short a time before, were rigid, and a blue shadow grew around the tightly drawn lips, as the child lay locked in one convulsion after another. To the end of her life she never knew whence came the strength that enabled her, when the doctor called for assistance, to brush aside the panic-stricken nurses, and herself force the clenched mouth open, while he poured the medicine down. What matter that the little white teeth ground upon her delicate fingers until the blood trickled down, the child had ceased to struggle, and the warm pink came back to the little face, and the tense limbs relaxed. With a burst of tears, she gathered the sleeping baby to her breast, and the old doctor's eyes were misty, as he laid a kindly hand upon the rebellious curls that had somehow slipped their fastening and tumbled in headlong beauty to her waist.

The minutes slipped by, as Valerie knelt with the child's cheek pressed against her own, then someone entered and closed the door, very gently. Valerie never stirred, scarcely conscious of anything but the fact that the child was given back to her arms—a thankfulness that almost blotted out the other great sorrow for a time. Duke Fritz knelt down beside his wife, and drew the dark head to his breast. For a moment she yielded to the sense of rest and peace, then pride awoke, and she drew haughtily away from him. "Why come to me? Where is the Countess Isobel? Is she indisposed that you should turn to me and the child?"

The duke sprang to his feet, his fair face flushing like a girl's. "Valerie!" There was a world of reproach in the mere word, and Valerie winced, half-guilty. A long silence fell between husband and wife. Afar off in the distance, the midnight bell proclaimed the passing of another day, and the quiet lay over the city like a pall; only, here, in the palace were flashing lights, and anxious faces lingering in the corridors to know how fared the little prince. A long time, the blue eyes of the duke held the brown ones of Princess Valerie with that proud reproach; then, woman-like, she fell, sobbing upon his breast, knowing, without a word, that the wrong was right; and the duke asked no questions, but presently, stroking her curls, told her how the Countess Isobel, who had laughed down love and marriage, was at last caught in the web of her own devising, and that the matter was a difficult one, as the man in question was a mere officer in the guards, the bare mention of whom as a husband for their imperious beauty had set the whole Hohenhausen clan by the ears. In desperate case, the lovers had appealed to no less a person than the hereditary duke, and, though hereditary dukes are mighty in their small worlds, there are some things in which it is not safe to meddle, hence, all the walks and talks, in which the young officer had formed an anxious third, and which the little De Grafenried had forgotten to mention when relating the story to the princess.

"Why didn't they come to me?" demanded Valerie. There is nothing so provoking to the average woman than to find out that an interesting love affair, with all of its proper complications, has been going forward under her very nose and she not aware of it.

The duke pulled his long, fair mustache helplessly. "The truth is, the countess tried, to tell you, but after you had left the terrace the little De Grafenried came back and told her that you did not approve of her choice; in fact, desired that the subject should not be alluded to in your presence, and, naturally, she could not expect any sympathy from you."

"Oh!" said Valerie. Ten minutes later, in the presence of the court that was still assembled in the audience chamber, Princess Valerie summoned Fraulein De Grafenried and bade her return at the earliest possible moment to her father's Schloss.

Thus, the awakening of Princess Valerie.

BE BRAVE.

The world is wide, remember this,
Nor shrink from fate's deep furrowed frown.

Woo fortune with your brightest smiles,
Don't let the world know when you're down.

It spoils your chance for future deeds,
To frame your face with dull care's crown.

Brace up, and higher hold your head,
Don't let the world know when you're down.

The world will bow in servile zest
To one who sways it with a frown;
Toss up your head, and flash your eye—
Don't let the world know when you're down.

If scandal's lip should seek to stain
The name you hold as honor's crown,
By your own life refute the lie,
Don't let the world know when you're down.

If bare your purse, your heart most sad,
Your life near crushed by sorrow's crown,
Then mask them well with song and jest,
Don't let the world know when you're down.

Miss Janet Priest of Minneapolis has proved to the satisfaction of a coterie of self-satisfied players in her vicinity that in her case where there's a will there's a way, and, incidentally, that she is not what is called in the sporting section either a "piker" or a "bluffer."

She was sarcastically asked if she could do better. Miss Priest is nervy and replied by studying one of the roles in question and appearing in one of the performances. She scored an immediate "hit" and has been asked to continue in the profession. But this she has refused to do and has returned to her former labors.

Courtroom Repartee.
An expert does not always relish being tackled by an oversharp lawyer. Yet in such verbal duels the former frequently scores. A mining expert was giving evidence in connection with an important mining case, and he was being exposed to a galling fire of cross-examination. The questions related to the form that the ore was found in, generally described as "kidney lumps."

"Now," said the sharp lawyer, "how large are these lumps? You say they are oblong—are they as long as my head?"

"Yes," was the ready reply, "as long, but not nearly so thick."

The court roared, and a beautiful smile shone upon the face of the expert.

Gossip From Tien-tsin.
A traveler in Tien-tsin, mentioning the razing of the walls of the ancient city, relates that the work was done chiefly by former boxers, hired for the purpose. Even the children on the streets made life unpleasant for these turncoats by taunting them with a two-line doggerel running as follows:—
From our cakes you ate up all;
Now you've come to spoil our wall.
The reference in the first line is to the large flat cakes of unleavened flour, mixed with brown sugar, upon which the boxers' feet were fed by the patrons of the movement in Tien-tsin. To many of them boxerism was merely a means of earning a living.

EXAMPLE OF GERMAN THRIFT.

Stones on the Roadway Made of Value to Property.

Germans find that it pays to encourage peasants to free their fields of stones; the property rises in value—taxing value. The stones thrown into heaps by the roadside are purchased by the district road repairing commission. Poor men, who otherwise would have to be supported by the almshouses, are hired to break the stones, and then are trained to the work of repairing the roadbed. The money to pay the men is made by auctioning off to the highest bidder the crop from fruit trees that were planted on both sides of the highway when it was built, and which are nourished well by the manure that falls along the road and is pushed at intervals by a road tender upon their roots. The purchaser of the crop sees to it that his fruit is not stolen. The road commissioners have no bother about that. And, although the sale is by auction, it brings considerable. Every burgher knows how much because the sales of highway fruit crops are published in the local newspapers.

TO GET RID OF MOSQUITOES.

Amusing Circular Issued by New York Board of Health.

The New York board of health has issued a circular in which all cases of malaria are laid to the bite of mosquitoes. "Before going to bed," this circular says, "one should kill all the mosquitoes resting on the bedroom walls, in the closets or under articles of furniture." But how? The nights are now short. Possibly an athletic man might run down a mosquito and tie the critter till its tongue hangs out and its legs wobble. Then a single well directed blow on the point of the mosquito's jaw would settle its hash. But some of us are not athletes. "The insects already in the room are apt to give the most trouble," the circular says naively. True! Too true! In fact, the mosquitoes which are in the bald-headed man's flat, three flights up, never trouble us in the least.

German Soldiers' Life.

The German soldier is trained to maneuver in all weather and at all seasons. Extreme cold is, of course, a great obstacle to the mobilization of troops. Billeting is not always possible and the alternative of sleeping in tents with the snow lying deep on the ground and the thermometer below zero seems at first sight impracticable. Nevertheless, it has been found that, with due precautions, the men suffer no ill effects from the exposure. The tents used for this purpose are very small, as these are found to be warmer than the larger ones. Indeed, the temperature inside the canvass is generally 12 degrees higher than outside to begin with, and, of course rises when the tent is occupied. Hot coffee is served to the men at intervals of two hours throughout the night.

Cost of Discarded War Material.

Some idea of the vast quantities of discarded war material thrown upon the general market by the successive changes in armament adopted by the various great powers may be gathered from the list of arms now offered for sale from this cause by the Italian government. The list includes 600,000 rifles adopted so recently as 1887, with 48,000,000 cartridges, 1,200 nine-pounders and 500 seven-pounder guns, with 200,000 shells, and 170 seven-pounder mountain guns, with 17,000 shells.

Do Things Better in Corea.

A curious custom prevails in Corea, if a man meets his wife in the street he ignores her presence and passes her as if she were a stranger. In this country a man would sometimes like to, but can't escape her eye.

Shoes of Ancient Times.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth English dudes wore shoes three feet in length, the toe pointed and fastened up to the garter with golden chains, to which little bells were attached.

PETOSKEY WAS EASY.

NO MATCH FOR EAST JORDAN AT FOOTBALL.

The admirers of foot ball were well pleased with the way the East Jordan High School showed up their ability on the gridiron in the game between them and the Petoskey High School on Friday morning, Sept. 26. The way in which the boys hit the line for long gains shows that, what little practice they have had, has been very effective and Dr. Dicken is to be congratulated on the work of his team.

The following is the schedule of the game in detail:

In the first half Petoskey kicked to East Jordan and the ball was downed on East Jordan 35 yard line. The following are the series of plays in their successive order, Full Back through Right Guard making big gains for three straight plays, then Right Half through Right Guard, followed by another Full Back play through Right Guard and again the Right half hit the same place, then they fumbled the ball entirely by Left Half around the Right End for about 20 yards gain. This was followed by a quick line up and three successive hits through Right Guard by Full Back and Right Half followed by another Right End run. Then they changed entirely putting the Right Half around the Left End twice for big gains and then punting him through the Right Guard. This was followed by three successive line backs by the Full Back through the Right Guard ending in a touch down but Misenar failed to kick it over. The boys lined up again and Petoskey kicked an elegant one back to Misenar and again they reached about the 35 yard line. They started off with the Left Half around Right End which resulted in no gain, and again they pounded the line with the Full Back followed by putting the Right Half around the Left End for an enormous gain. This was followed by the Full Back managing to get through the Right Guard again for a small gain. Then the Right Tackle jumped back and dashed through Left Tackle with such rapidity that an elegant gain was the result. This brought on an end run by the Left Half with big gain. This was followed by a Left End run and another Right End run then the Full Back hit the line for a big gain. Here the Left Half and Right Half both made good end runs and five straight line backs resulted in the second touch down, and Misenar kicked a pretty goal.

As time was nearly up the boys lined up in a hurry but on the first three downs failed to make their gains and the ball went over.

Petoskey started off with a Left End run with a big gain then a Right End run with another big gain but here East Jordan got the ball on downs and only had time for two line ups before time was called, and the first half ended with the score 11 to 0 in East Jordan's favor.

In the second half East Jordan kicked to Petoskey and the ball was downed on their 30-yd. line. They opened up with a left end run which was not very successful and they commenced pounding the line for very nice gains but finally East Jordan got onto them and held them for downs and the ball went over.

East Jordan opened with a right end run, Hurbert making about 12 yards. This was followed by a left end run of about 15 yards and another right end run for about 20 yards and then two line backs by Misenar resulted in a touch-down and an elegant goal was kicked.

Then Petoskey kicked to East Jordan and they lined up for the first down and started with a right end run followed by a left end run and a full back line back. This was followed by alternate end runs by Hurbert and Maddock filled in by some very successful line backs by Misenar which ended in another touch-down. A trial for goal failed and the boys lined up again for another kick off and Petoskey kicked the ball along the ground hitting the center and bounding back toward their line. But by swift punning and managing to fall on the ball in good shape the East Jordan boys obtained it. East Jordan played several fast plays but were finally held and the ball went over but Petoskey only had time for two plays when time was called and the game was ended with the score 22 to 0 in favor of the East Jordan High School. The following is the line up of two teams:

PETOSKEY EAST JORDAN
Worden, C Bennett, C.
Ecarle, RG Lorraine,
Slocum LG Murray,
McIntyre RT Bennett, B.
Pallthorp LT Bennett, L.
Murphy RT Warne,
Nihart LE Porter,
Smith RH Maddock,
Hamill, LH Hurbert,
Harwood, FB Misenar,
Harriman, QB Clink.

No praise is to be spared on any of the boys as they all play exceptionally well.

The second half Shapton took Warne's place on Right End. Not on account of defective playing but because it was the agreement between the boys.

The Petoskey boys seemed to take it all in good spirits and intend to put in a better game when the East Jordan boys go up there.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely. I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever. I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it on a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,
