Brewer's Body Is Found.

Discovered Sunday afternoon Floating Just Above the Bridge.

The body of Lemuel Brewer was discovered Sunday afternoon by Orville Hurlburt floating face downward in the lake just above the big bridge. The authorities were notified of the find and Justice D. F. Clement impelled a coroner's jury consisting of the following named gentlemen:—Frank Martinek, Chas. B. Crowell, Wm. E. Lanway, Robt. Barnett, Nels. Muma and Wm. Johnson. The body was removed from the water and taken to Whittington's undertaking rooms where it was readily identified as that of the missing man by several witnesses. A careful search failed to reveal any marks or signs of foul play. On his person were found his watch and chain, knife and plug of tobacco as well as G. A. R. and Legion receipts, which latter organization his life was insured. Mr. Whittington then prepared the body for burial.

Monday morning the coroner's jury met again and after examining several witnesses returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Several members of the G. A. R. attended the funeral, which was held at Chestonia Tuesday morning.

Brewer disappeared the evening of September 23d. He had been attending the Fair here that day and when last seen, about 11 o'clock that night he was starting for home. Since that time diligent search had been made for him but without success until the discovery of his body as above stated. Considering the fact that he had been in the water for twenty-five days his body was in a remarkably good state of preservation and had evidently but just come to the surface when discovered. How he came to fall in the lake will ever remain a mystery.

A physician was the other day discussing some of the ills from which children suffer, and in the course of the conversation a number of interesting points were brought out. "I am of the opinion," he said, "that a great many of the deformities and weaknesses of children are caused by the dreadful habit that some grown people have of taking small children out to walk and dragging them along at a fast pace.—Ex.

FOOTBALL GAME AT PETOSKEY

Our High School football team added another to their long list of victories Saturday last when they met and defeated the Petoskey High School eleven on the latter's grounds, the score being 11 to 0. The excursion to Petoskey on the Beaver was well patronized, about a hundred going from here to witness the game and the boys cleared a nice sum from the excursion besides paying all their expenses.

The game was a hard fought battle from start to finish, the Petoskey boys being in a great deal better condition than when they played the first game here during the Fair. East Jordan made one touchdown in the first half and a second in the last half, the latter being made by Shapton who got the ball on a double pass play and getting clear of his opponents, did a beautiful sprint the length of the field and downed the ball squarely between the goal posts with but two minutes to play.

The Petoskey team and the citizens of the place treated our boys with every courtesy and took their defeat gracefully. It was a clean game, there being no fouls, slugging or rag chewing. East Jordan can now safely claim the High School football championship of Northern Michigan.

DANGER IN FALL COLDS.

Fall colds are liable to hang on all winter leaving the seeds of pneumonia bronchitis or consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar cures quickly and prevents serious results. It is old and reliable, tried and tested, safe and sure. Contains no opiates and will not constipate.

The attendance at the Michigan College of Mines at Houghton this year breaks all former records of that institution. The number of students is most 20 per cent larger than last year.

FIRE WEDNESDAY FORENOON.

A conflagration was narrowly averted Wednesday forenoon by the early discovery of a fire which had got started in a small room in the Warner block at the rear of Miss A. M. Kneale's millinery parlors. Supt. Plank discovered smoke issuing from the building and at once sounded the alarm from the electric light plant. Prompt assistance soon extinguished the flames before any serious damage was done, but it would have been an entirely different thing had the fire got a few minutes' start. As it was the damage was confined to one room. The fire had evidently started from a pan of ashes and communicated to the boxes, barrels, paper, excelsior and other combustible materials with which the room was filled. Miss Kneale's stock was removed from the building and was more or less damaged. R. F. Steffen, who burst open the door of the room where the fire was, had his hair and eyebrows badly singed.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR THIRD ANNUAL HUNT.

Next week Tuesday and until noon Wednesday will occur the Third Annual Hunt of the East Jordan Game, Fish and Dog Protective Association. These hunts in the past have been very enjoyable affairs and from all indications the one this year will surpass all the rest.

Messrs. E. C. Plank and Lawrence Doerr were chosen as Captains of the opposing sides, but owing to other matters of importance which will interfere with the hunt Mr. Plank has resigned in favor of Dr. H. W. Dicken who hopes to lead his forces to victory. Mr. Plank promises to be on hand, however, for the game supper which is to follow the hunt and which will this year be served in the Loveday Opera House.

A membership fee of $1.00 must be paid by all who participate in this event and this pays also for the supper.

Business men who haven't seen the woods for a year are burnishing up their fowling pieces and talk knowingly of the hiding places of whole flocks of quail and partridge and as near as we can estimate there will be 74 birds apiece for each of the weary nimrods when he sits down at the well laden tables at the Loveday Opera House Wednesday evening.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and olds and prevents pneumonia. Take no substitutes.

"May you take this lesson home with you, dear friends," concluded the preacher at the end of a long and wearisome sermon, "and may its spiritual truth sink deep into your hearts and lives to the end that your soul may experience salvation. We will bow our heads in prayer. Deacon White will lead." There was no response. "Deacon White," this time in a louder voice, "will you lead?" Still no response. Evidently the deacon was slumbering. The preacher made a third appeal and raised his voice to a pitch that succeeded in arousing the drowsy man. "Deacon White, will you lead?" The deacon, in bewilderment, rubbed his eyes and blurted: "Oh, go to thunder; it ain't my lead—I just dealt."

CURED HEMORRHAGES OF THE LUNGS

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hemorrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar and my lungs are now as sound as a bullet. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble."

SOUTH ARM.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are slowly recovering from their recent severe illness.

Mr. Gee has moved into his house on Vance's Addition which he purchased of Mr. Porter.

Mrs. Thompson is finishing her house lathing, plastering and painting and is looking for a purchaser for the same.

The excursionists who went from here the 7th inst. have all returned except Mrs. John Howell and little one who visited Mr. H. who has been employed near Detroit all summer.

The parents and relatives of little Vena Lalonde wish to tender their sincere thanks to their numerous friends who so efficiently assisted them during the last illness and at the funeral of their little one.

"WATCH THE KIDNEYS"

LITTLE FOLKS

Blackberrying.

When I was but a wee shy boy,
My mother's pride, my father's joy,
My hands and mouth had full employ
When blackberries were ripe.
And off my mummy she would squeeze
The thorns from out my arms and knees,
And my good dad, till I got ease,
Would quench his favorite pipe.

And even since I've become a man,
And dressed on quite a different plan,
I've still gone carrying the can
When blackberries grew sweet,
Yes, tramping through the bramble brakes,
I'd court the keenest pains and aches
For two or three fair colleens' sakes,
Whose names I'll not repeat.

Till Norah of the amber hair,
That was my partner here and there,
Around about and everywhere,
As blackberries came in,
When I just tried with too much haste,
The richer, rarer fruit to taste,
That on her lips was going to waste,
She tosses up her chin.

And marches by me night and morn,
Her gray eyes only glancing scorn,
Regardless of the rankling thorn
She's rooted in my heart.
Yet maybe, though I much misdoubt,
Her eyes that flash, her lips that flout,
May yet turn kind and conjure out
That most distressful dart.

Toy Windmill.

To make an amusing toy in the shape of a windmill take two large linen thread spools and cut one of them into halves. Take two sticks of the same length, smooth them with a penknife and whittle the ends to fit upright into the holes of the halves of spool. Silt the other ends of the uprights to support a third stick horizontally. On this piece of wood slip the other spool, which must fit loosely, as it is to turn round and round through the action of the wind. Two holes should be pierced through the spool and fitted with two crossed sticks. Into the ends of the latter fit stout pieces of pasteboard, on each of which a picture of an animal or bird is pasted. Then set the windmill on a chair and lower the window to admit a draft that will strike only the two lower cards. The mill will whirl rapidly and the birds or animals look as if they were flying.—Topeka Herald.

A Home-Made Toy.

Here are simple directions for making a kaleidoscope that will give all the beautiful effects shown by one bought at a store. Any boy or girl of even ordinary ingenuity can make it, and it will be likely to give all the more enjoyment from the fact that it is made at home.

Get a glazier to cut you three strips of glass ten inches long by two inches wide. Tie them together triangularly with stout thread. Then cut a piece of partly transparent paper so that it will fit over one end of this prism, leaving narrow edges to lap over. Paste this on with mucilage or flour paste, and then cut a piece just like it for the other end, except that it must be of paper that is entirely opaque.

In the center of this opaque end cut a round hole a trifle larger than a silver dime. This hole is for the eye. Now cover the sides of the apparatus with paper like that used for the eye piece and the kaleidoscope is finished. Put a few pieces of colored glass, or some beads in, through the hole made for the eye, and turn the thin paper end to opening, keep the prism slowly turning, and you will see all the pretty figures that a bought kaleidoscope shows.

Hanging Pin-Balls.

These little balls for pins are very easily made, and are always useful. Cut from pasteboard twelve round pieces. You can easily make them by using a small teacup or round butter plate, about two inches in diameter. Cover each piece with silks or cambric and then with silk sew two pieces together very nicely overhead around the edge. Attach these balls to six pieces of ribbon of different lengths, the longest perhaps ten inches, the next eight and a half, the next seven, the next five, the next three and a half and the last one two inches. Sew these ribbons together at the ends and cover with a pretty bow of ribbon.

Place pins around the balls closely and regularly.

For these you will need two yards of ribbon one-half inch in width, one paper small pins, one-eighth yard silk. Possibly you can find suitable silk at home.

The Match Telegraph.

Place match A crosswise over match B in such a way that the head of A touches the table, while the other end points up. On the end pointing up the end of a third match is laid, without lifting the head of A from the table. The head of A can only be lifted by pressing on match C. Place a fourth match in a slanting direction on C, on the fourth one a fifth, as shown in the illustration. By pressing the match laid down last with the finger, the pressure will go from match to match and lift the head of A from the table. If you place a small glass on the head of A on one end of the table and let the telegraph go clear across the table you can move the glass or sometimes knock it over by pressing the last match.

Music From a Glass Tube.

It is well known that the song of a small bird can be imitated to perfection with a glass tube by rubbing the outside of the tube, with a small piece of soft cork. By using a glass tube of 3/4-inch diameter and 24 inches length and widening one end of it over an alcohol frame to form the mouthpiece, a musical instrument can be created the sound of which reminds one of the powerful tone of a trombone. For that purpose we roll a sheet of drawing paper around the tube and close one end of it. This double tube is amply sufficient to make a good trombone, the sound of which is very deep. By shoving the paper tube over the glass tube the tone gets higher, and vice-versa. It is not very hard to play on it. Every amateur can become an artist after a little practice.

An Ingrowing House.

There is a wren in Central America whose nest is a marvel of constructive ingenuity. It selects a small tree with horizontal branches growing close together. Across two of the branches it lays sticks and fastens them together with fibre until it has completed a platform about six feet in length by two feet in width.

On the end of the platform nearest the tree trunk it builds a great dome-shaped nest at least twelve inches in height, the sides being formed of interwoven thorns. Then it constructs a crooked, tunnel-like passage-way from the nest to the outer end of the platform, and in this tunnel, at intervals, it builds little thorn fences, leaving just enough room for its body to pass through.

Blowing Cornucopias.

Make two cornucopias of fairly stiff paper, leaving the small ends large enough to pass pieces of twine through. Take two pieces of string, and slip each piece through one cornucopia, stretching them two feet apart as tight as you can across the room, fastening the ends to either wall. The strings should be high enough from the ground to enable you to blow into the cornucopia. The object of the game is for two people to stand at the end of the strings and blow into the large openings of the cornucopias and see which one can get it across the room first.

It takes a person with a good pair of lungs to send it the length of the string in one blow.

Four Squares, One Line.

To draw the four perfect squares shown in the illustration with one continuous line, start at a, go to b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, and so forth, and the trick is done.

Clever Dogs.

We have heard of the dog that bought his own dinner; of the one that paid bills and waited for a receipt; and so you will scarcely be surprised when I tell you that in a suburb of this city there is a black and white dog which doesn't like afternoon walks. If his owner (who has retired from business) attempts to take him out after dinner he turns tail and makes for home. I really think that he must have heard "After dinner, rest awhile."

SHOWING THE WAY.

Most of our readers know all about the aches and pains of a bad back, very few people are free from sick kidneys, as the kidneys are the most over-worked organs of the body and "go wrong" at times no matter how well the general health may be. The trouble is so few understand the indications of kidney trouble. You are nervous, tired out and weary, have stitches, twinges and twitches of backache pains, but lay it to other causes; finally the annoyance and suffering attendant with urinary disorders, retention of the urine, too frequent urination makes you realize the seriousness of it. At any stage you should take a remedy that will not only relieve but cure you. Read the following and profit by the lesson it teaches:

C. J. McMurray, a resident of Freeport, Ill., address 47 Iroquois St., says: "I have greater faith in Doan's Kidney Pills to-day than I had in the fall of 1897, when I first took that remedy and it cured me of an acute pain across the back and imperfect action of the kidneys. Since I made a public statement of these facts and recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to my friends and acquaintances, thoroughly believing as I did both from observation and experience that they would do just as they were represented to do. I am still pleased to re-endorse my statement given to the public shortly after I first began to use the remedy."

A FREE TRIAL of this great Kidney medicine, which cured Mr. McMurray, will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

Spoke From Experience.

A man who tries to uphold all his statements with the prop of personal experience is pretty sure sooner or later to find himself in difficulties. "What kind of posts should you say I'd better have for my piazza?" asked a summer resident of the oracle of Bushville. "Cedar?"

"No," was the instant reply; "not less you want to pay for poor stuff. GI. pine. Pine will last you a hundred years."

"Are you sure?" asked the summer resident, doubtfully. "Sure!" echoed the oracle. "I never state a thing without I can prove it. I've tried 'em both. Tried 'em twice on my south porch, I tell ye!"

THE APOLOGY WAS SINCERE.

But Under No Circumstances Could It Be Called Flattering. A philanthropic lady visited the asylum at Kingston, Canada, not long ago, and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man particularly gained her compassion.

"And how long have you been here, my man?" she inquired. "Twelve years," was the answer. "Do they treat you well?"

"Yes." "Do they feed you well?" "Yes." After addressing a few more questions to him the visitor passed on. She noticed a broad and broadening smile on the face of her attendant, and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than Dr. Clark, the superintendent.

She hurried back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am very sorry, Dr. Clark. I will never be governed by appearances again."

An Embarrassing Situation.

What a situation that must have been at a recent reception in London, where a lady appeared in a gorgeous gown looted from the imperial palace at Peking, and later in the evening found herself face to face with the Chinese ambassador! It may be described as "curdling." The ambassador, for a moment, apparently thought some lady of the royal family of China had suddenly appeared in a London drawing room, for the material of the gown had never been worn by any but Chinese royalty. He couldn't conceal his agitation in meeting an English lady thus arrayed, but she fortunately had the tact to leave the reception, and thus somewhat relieve the embarrassment, but the incident, it is reported, will not soon be forgotten by those who witnessed it. One cannot envy or pity a woman who would wear a looted gown, transformed though it might be by the fashionable dress-maker.

PE-RU-NA NECESSARY TO THE HOME.

A Letter from Congressman White, of North Carolina.

PE-RU-NA IS A HOUSEHOLD SAFEGUARD.

No Family Should Be Without It.

PE-RU-NA is a great family medicine. The women praise it as well as the men; it is just the thing for the many little catarrhal ailments of childhood. The following testimonials from thankful men and women tell in direct, sincere language what their success has been in the use of Peru-na in their families:

Louis J. Scherrinsky, 103 Locust street, Atlantic, Iowa, writes: "I will tell you briefly what Peru-na has done for me. I took a severe cold which gave me a hard cough. All doctors' medicines failed to cure it. I took one bottle of Peru-na and was well."

"Then my two children had bad coughs accompanied by gagging. My wife had stomach trouble for years. She took Peru-na and now she is well. I cannot express my thanks in words, but I recommend your remedy at every opportunity, for I can conscientiously say that there is no medicine like Peru-na. Nearly everyone in this town knew about the sickness of myself and family, and they have seen with astonishment what Peru-na has done for us. Many followed our example, and the result was health. Thanking you heartily, I am,"—L. J. Scherrinsky.

Mrs. Nannie Wallace, Tulare, Cal., President of the Western Baptist Missionary Society, writes: "I consider Peru-na an indispensable article in my medicine chest. It is twenty medicines in one, and has so far cured every sickness that has been in my home for five years. I consider it of special value to weakly women, as it builds up the general health, drives out disease and keeps you in the best of health."—Mrs. Nannie Wallace.

Peru-na protects the family against coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis, catarrh of the stomach, liver and kidneys. It is just as sure to cure a case of catarrh of the bowels as it is a case of catarrh of the head.

HON. GEORGE H. WHITE.

Congressman George Henry White, of Tarboro, N. C., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman in regard to the merits of the great catarrh cure, Peru-na: House of Representatives, Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

The Peru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—"I am more than satisfied with Peru-na, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."

Very respectfully,
George H. White.

Peru-na is an internal, scientific, systemic remedy for catarrh. It is a palliative or temporary remedy; it is thorough in its work, and in cleansing the diseased mucous membranes cures the catarrh.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

The School Commissioners' Column.

ABEL W. CHEW, Commissioner.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction says: Inasmuch as the examinations for eighth grade diplomas have now become firmly established, they should fall into line with the usual plans and practices of final examinations. The following suggestions are submitted:

The county board of school examiners shall look over and mark all papers written by applicants for diplomas. An average standing of 80 per cent. and not less than 70 per cent. in any branch should be required.

The successful applicant shall be granted a diploma signed by the County Commissioner of Schools and countersigned by the teacher of the district where such pupil completed the eighth grade.

Only pupils who have pursued the studies of the eighth grade at least six months shall be permitted to take the examination and no pupil's manuscripts shall be forwarded to the County Commissioner of Schools unless such pupil shall present a certificate from his teacher, stating that such pupil has conformed to the above rule.

But one examination will be held annually—the second Thursday and Friday of May.

The reading for this examination next May will be "The Great Stone Face," Hawthorne.

The Pomona Grange and the Charlevoix County Teachers' Association will meet at Ironton on Friday, Nov. 7th.

State Senator Palmer, of Kalkaska, who accompanied Supt. Fall on a tour of investigation through Indiana and Ohio, where the rural high school is an established fact, will lecture on that subject, also talk on the subject of centralization of the rural schools. Every school officer and teacher should be present at the date named. Programs will be sent out soon.

Reports from Fred. Weston who went to Oregon some months ago in hopes of improving his health are not very encouraging. He is contemplating going to New Mexico as the doctors advise him that the climate is better there for lung troubles.

NEVER ASK ADVICE.

When you have a cough or cold don't ask what is good for it and get some medicine with little or no merit and perhaps dangerous. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar, the greatest throat and lung remedy, it cures coughs and colds quickly.

The pocket pistol and cannon cracker are things of the past in South Carolina according to the law. Neither may be sold, owned or used within the limits of the Palmetto State. It is now no longer a question of having the pistol concealed; the pocket variety cannot be held in the hand or buckled about the person, nor can it be kept in stock by dealers. On the same principle that the big cannon firecrackers are a menace to those who use them, endangering life and limb, they are "policed" out of the State.

A DOZEN TIMES A NIGHT.

Mr. Owen Dunn, of Benton Ferry, W. Va., writes: "I have had kidney and bladder trouble for years, and it became so bad that I was obliged to get up at least a dozen times a night. I never received any permanent benefit from any medicine until I tried Foley's Kidney Cure. After using two bottles I am cured."

"It was a genuine treat." This remark which we overheard at the Opera House Wednesday evening at the close of the play, seems to voice the sentiment of all who were present at the production of "Romeo and Juliet." From the advertising our people had been led to believe that the production would be something above the ordinary and they certainly were not disappointed. Admirably cast, richly costumed and accompanied by splendid scenic effects, it took the audience by storm and in many of the scenes there were repeated curtain calls. East Jordan people were indeed fortunate in being able to see this play.

Historic Old Stony Point

Scene of One of the Most Brilliant Exploits of "Mad" Anthony Wayne—Daring Night Attack Won the Fort from the British.

(Special Correspondence.)

ONE of the most brilliant engagements of the revolutionary war was the capture by Mad Anthony Wayne of Stony Point on the Hudson, the anniversary of which was recently celebrated. The occasion was observed by the dedication of the battlefield as a state park, and was made noteworthy by the attendance of Gov. Odell and many state officials. The park has been created by the patriotic labors of the Society for the Preservation of Scenic and Historic Places and Objects, and is now under care of the society.

Stony Point is a small, rocky promontory on the west bank of the Hudson, at the entrance to the Highlands and opposite Verplanck's Point. At both these places during the revolution the Americans constructed forts. The place was a most important one, commanding the line of a communication between New England and other colonies. It was the key to the Highlands.

Early in the summer of 1779 Sir Henry Clinton, the British commander at New York, sent an expedition up the Hudson to capture the fort. The expedition was successful. Stony Point, all the fortifications of which were not quite completed, was abandoned by the Americans, and Verplanck's Point was taken. Emboldened by his success, Clinton sent out other expeditions. One of these, commanded by Gen. Tryon, and consisting of 2,500 men, was sent to plunder the coast of Long Island Sound. Tryon plundered New Haven, burned Fairfield and Norwalk and committed other outrages at Sag Harbor, on Long Island. In the course of a few days the unsparring wretch burned 250 dwelling houses, five churches and 125 barns and stores. Many of the inhabitants were cruelly murdered and a number of women were subjected to unspeakable indignities.

The outrages greatly inflamed the Americans and stirred them to greater activities. The loss of Stony Point was one keenly felt and it was re-

At the same time another American force attempted the capture of Verplanck's Point, but were unsuccessful.

The Americans did not remain long in possession of Stony Point. A strong British force was soon on its way up the Hudson, and on its approach the Americans evacuated the place, after having dismantled the fortification.

It speaks well for Americans that they treated their prisoners with noble humanity. According to British historian, Stedman, they would have been justified in putting the garrison to sword, but no soldier on the British side fell unless in fair combat. In the capture of the fort the patriots secured a large quantity of war munitions and all the artillery.

solved to recapture the place, now greatly strengthened, at any hazard. The undertaking was a desperate one, as the fort could only be taken by surprise, and in looking around for a leader Washington fixed upon Gen. Anthony Wayne.

The latter readily consented to lead the attacking force and determined to make the attempt at midnight. In order to guard against a betrayal of his movement every dog in the vicinity was put to death. A negro fruit seller was found who knew the fort well and he agreed to pilot the Americans to the spot.

At midnight on July 15, 1779, the storming party, in two divisions, approached the fort. No member of the expedition was permitted to load his musket, lest an accidental discharge should ruin the movement. The bayonet alone was to be depended upon.

The negro accompanied by two soldiers, disguised as farmers, reached the first sentinel, to whom the counter-sign was given. Instantly the sentinel was bound and gagged. A second sentinel underwent the same treatment. A third sentinel, however, gave the alarm and the garrison sprang to arms and opened fire on the Americans. It was too late, however. The latter, advancing in two bodies on two sides of the fort, broke into a run, scaled the parapet and met in the center of the fort. In the fight that followed the Americans lost fifteen killed and eighty-three wounded, but they captured the fort. The British lost sixty-three killed and 540 prisoners.

When the first baby—but we're coming to that.

"Oh, George!" she cried, "baby's cut a tooth!"

He looked up at her in a calm, matter-of-fact way that was quite chilling.

"Nonsense!" he returned. "But he has!" she protested. "I guess I know."

"Nonsense!" he repeated. "You can't cut a tooth with anything short of dentist's tools; you can break it, but you can't cut it, so don't talk about anything so foolish. And, even if he did cut it, he broke it, it's only a first tooth."

He picked up his book again, and for all of one evening she never gave him anything but cold, reproachful glances.

Tall Indiana Soldiers.

A record of the height of Indiana soldiers in the civil war shows that out of 118,254 there was 15,047 5 feet 10 inches high, 8,706 5 feet 11 inches, 6,679 6 feet high, 2,614 6 feet 1 inch, 1,357 6 feet 2 inches, 406 6 feet 3 inches, and 336 over 6 feet 3 inches. Commenting on these statistics Dr. Gould, actuary of the United States Sanitary Commission, writes: "It is evident from our statistics that the Indiana men are the tallest of all natives of the United States, and these latter the tallest of all civilized countries."

The death of John D. Rockefeller's grandson about a year ago may lead to the saving of many young lives. Mr. Rockefeller set aside a fund of $200,000 for the discovery of the germ that causes summer complaint, the disease from which his grandchild died, and it is said that a scientist belonging to Johns Hopkins university has found it. The disease named is believed to be carrying off over 60,000 children annually.

Swell Fire Department.

The fire department at Larchmont, New York's swell suburb, had its annual turn-out a few days ago, most of its millionaire members being present in uniform. And they are not an ornamental lot either. Every one of them almost is an enthusiastic and well-drilled fireman, and a brave show they made on parade, with their white duck trousers, red shirts and red helmets, topped with small lanterns.

THIS IS HARD TO BEAT.

Mr. Duncan of Kentucky Has a Hen That Has Laid a Petrified Egg.

William McKee Duncan of Kenwood has a hen that has reached the stone age. She lays petrified eggs.

It would seem that the stone age, like the second childhood, comes on unexpectedly. In fact, the alarming eccentricity in this particular producer of eggs developed only three days ago. Up to that time her schedule had been one a day and they set the clocks by her. Then, five days ago, for the first time, she was late. The lawyer missed his car and the whole household went wrong.

After noon the 8 o'clock egg arrived. The hen cackled, as though she had really done something to be proud of—something that no other hen had ever done before. So, she had, but they did not discover it until later.

The egg was intended for use for supper. Then the egg was broken, at least the outer shell was knocked off. The inner part did not break. They worked on it with a spoon, a knife, a chisel; some suggested a hatchet and an axe, but still the oval lump held solid. It was petrified.

Mr. Duncan is watching his choice bird solicitously. He expects in the course of the next few days to have the feathered wonder carefully examined, for he is sure that he can prove by any number of scientists that this is the only and original descendant and miniature reproduction of the ancient roc. His Kentucky friends are advising the lawyer to start a quarry. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

HE SHOT THE HAT.

A Custom in Oklahoma That Saves Time in a Sandstorm.

"A whole lot of ideas with which we grow up change when we get into another country," said a New York man who has just come back from a three-months' trip in the Southwest. "Now, one of the things we have heard of all our lives is a fool if a man's hat blows off he is a fool to run after it, for there is always somebody around polite enough to pick it up and hand it to the owner, if he has to walk a block to do it."

"I have seen it done. I have read about it more times than I have had hats."

"But it is not the custom at Reno, Oklahoma. I was sitting on the veranda of the hotel in that town, watching the various articles which one of those sandstorms whirled through the air."

"The hat of a citizen was raised and carried against a place on the other side of the street. A strapping fellow, who had been picking his teeth with a match, whipped out a navy revolver and fired a shot at the hat, nailing it to the fence."

"The owner came up, pulled the hat from its impalement, waved his hand at the man on the veranda and proceeded on his way."

"It saves time running after it," said the man on the veranda, "and it don't hurt the hat."

CRAIG AND THE PRESIDENT.

Points of Similarity Between Two Strenuous Men.

A typical soldier of fortune was "Big Bill" Craig, the secret service man who was killed near Pittsfield while riding in the coach with the President and party, that met with so serious an accident. It is told that Craig was the only secret service man that the President in his innate distaste of dependence of any kind would tolerate about him.

Theodore Roosevelt liked Craig, not alone because he was a physical giant, not because he had served in the Household Guards of England's Queen, nor yet because he was of the famous "Black Watch" in the Sudan and went to the relief of Gordon. All these things were incidents to the fact that Craig was a man after Roosevelt's own heart, bent upon doing, and doing as well and as hard as nature allowed.

An incident of the President's trip may be recalled here. It was during a reception in a Vermont town. In the middle of the reception the lights went out. With the rush of darkness a big form seemed to envelop President Roosevelt and two strong arms thrust back the people in a manner that led to but one conclusion—that no one would come near, except after passing Bill Craig. And no one passed.

Isolated.

Two well-known officials, one of the state and the other of the city, while warm friends, occasionally get into arguments as to the proper pronunciation of words. "The other night the word 'isolate' was used by the city man, who pronounced it with the accent on the 'i' as 'isolate,' where upon the state man immediately 'butted in' with 'Oh, no, not isolate, but isolate.' 'Why, you're houghouse,' rejoined the 'i' man. 'Common sense ought to teach you that you are wrong. Just look at what the word means—ice, that is frozen, which is to be a dead one, that is of no account, I mean out of commission, or put away back, see?' 'No, I'll be hanged if I do, nor anyone else,' shouted the state man. Then a pained look came over the face of the city man, and with gentle pity he said: 'You ought not to feed a pile driver or an ax. I'll spell it for you phonetically. Ice-o-late, ice, do you catch on? Frozen put away, eh?' 'Oh, rats!' yelled Bowen, 'let's have some vichy and milk,' and William acquiesced.

There is a wide difference between the real and the professional working man, and it is always in favor of the former.

Tiger-Hunting Royal Sport

Writer in the Wide World Details Exploits of the Sultan of Johore in His Pursuit of Man-Killing Animals.

HIS HIGHNESS Ibrahim, K. C. M. G., Sultan of the State and Territory of Johore, is ruler of one of the richest states in the Malay peninsula. As is natural, the Sultan has his hobbies. The two principal ones, or at least the two to which he has devoted the most time and attention, are big-game shooting and horse racing. The fact that the Sultan, although but little more than four years has elapsed since he first began big-game shooting, has become an experienced huntsman is proven by the ten tigers, four elephants and many other wild beasts which he has killed within that time.

I met a gentleman when I was last in Johore who is an intimate friend of the Sultan. He told me the following characteristic story concerning him: "I was having tiffin with His Highness one day," he said, "when news was brought to us that a tiger had been seen about a mile out of Johore. The Sultan asked me if I would pardon him while he went and changed, and left me to myself for a little while. Within a couple of hours he reappeared, looking as unconcerned as though he had done no more than go out to have a look at a favorite horse. I was not a little surprised to hear from him that he had been out and shot the tiger! Sure enough, the big striped brute was brought up on the lawn for our inspection not many minutes after. That was, it seemed to me, a most remarkable interruption to our tiffin, but it was looked upon as a most trifling matter by my host."

Tiger Killed by Mrs. George Pauling.

Knowing that the subject of sport is ever dear to the heart of the average man, and that big game hunters the world over are always eager to hear of countries prolific with big game, His Highness kindly granted me an interview on the subject of his own experiences in tiger and elephant shooting.

"I consider tiger-shooting the best sport in the world if done on foot," said the Sultan. "I do all my shooting on foot, whether I am after tiger or elephant. Elephant shooting is good sport, but it is not up to tiger shooting in any particular."

"In July, 1898, I shot my first elephant at a place not more than ten miles out of Johore. A shot from my 12-bore struck him in the forehead, and with a scream of anger he charged down upon us. By the time he reached the spot where he had sighted us, however, we were elsewhere, and had temporarily escaped his fury. A second shot struck the big brute near the eye, and caused him to stand still for a moment. Instantly I let go two charges from my 577 Express, both taking effect near the ear. As these did not seem enough to settle him, I treated him to an explosive bullet from a Lee-Metford sporting rifle, making the fifth charge which he had received. Even that was not sufficient, and five more shots had to be fired before the big brute at last came down."

I asked the Sultan what other big game could be found in Johore, and he named so many varieties of wild beasts that I was inclined to wonder how it fared with the few natives of the interior with such unpleasant neighbors about them.

The sladang is a great wild bull or bison, which is very dangerous to hunt. The huge beast is very fierce, extremely quick, and possesses a most keen power of scenting his enemy. Capt. Syers of Selangor, who was a noted sportsman and perhaps the best known great game shot of the native states, met his death, after twenty-six years of experience in the jungles, while hunting sladang in Pahang, the native state north of Johore. The captain shot at a great sladang, which charged him and, striking him, tossed him against the bough of a tree, catching him on its horns as he came down again. He died while on route to a point where medical attendance could be procured. When the sladang which cost Capt. Syers his life was finally killed, he was found to be marked with no fewer than eighteen bullet wounds. An immense sladang head which adorns the top of the staircase of the Singapore club, gives the casual globe-trotter some idea of the enormous size of the beast.

"Yes," continued his highness, "there is still plenty of big game in Johore, and I am sure big-game hunters will always find a cordial welcome awaiting them there."

"Do the tigers bother the natives much?" I asked.

"Well, they keep pretty well away from the villages except in rare instances," answered the sultan. "Of course, they get a native now and then who has been unlucky enough to run across a tiger in the jungle, and they trouble the people a great deal by continually carrying off cattle and pigs. I allow my subjects to trap tigers and they frequently catch one in that way, but I have forbidden the use of spring guns on account of the danger to the people."

"Where do I shoot a tiger?" The sultan laughed heartily at the question. "Why, anywhere so as to get him. As soon as he is wounded he will either wait for you to come to him or else come at you himself. How near have I been to a tiger? Oh, I should say as close as ten feet. One can never tell how close one may have to get to the beasts."

The sultan, as has been recounted, bagged his first tiger in January, 1898. Before the close of the year he had killed his second, and in March, 1899, he added the skin of a third to his collection of trophies.

"My third tiger," said the sultan, in answer to a question, "I shot not far from the water works at Johore. He was driven in such a way that he emerged from the jungle at a point not thirty yards from the spot where I was waiting for him. I fired and struck him in the back, breaking his spine. Firing again, I hit the brute in the head, the bullet entering the skull and rolling him over on the grass. As he was a full-grown animal and a very large one, another shot was necessary to finally finish him."

His highness killed still another tiger in 1899, and two in 1900. In 1901 he killed two more, which brought the list up to ten. The sultan kindly furnished me with photographs of nine of the dead tigers, and one which was shot by Mrs. George Pauling, an experienced African lion shot, who was a guest of his highness in 1901.—Frederic Coleman in The Wide World.

Deceptions of the Ministry.

The statistical tables of the several denominations fail to record the fact that one reason why the pastoral office is becoming more difficult to fill is that so many ministers are entering other vocations. Ten per cent of the ordained clergymen in one denomination are engaged in work other than the pastorate, while still others are living without any reported active service. Not only are many leaving the ministry for some other branch of service in the kingdom, but it is well known that all branches of business have attracted others.—Contributor Church Economist.

Saw Three Coronations.

Robert Needham Cust, LL. D., a barrister at law and justice of the peace in the county of Middlesex, is one of the few living persons who have witnessed the coronation of three British sovereigns. On September 6, 1831, being then 10 years old, he saw the crowning of William IV and Queen Adelaide. June 28, 1838, he was present when the crown was placed on the head of Victoria. At the coronation of Edward VII and Alexandra he was given a seat where he had a fine view of the gorgeous scene. Mr. Cust is now 81 years of age.

Comrades in Their Youth.

Capt. Meredith of Chicago, who is superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, worked "at the case" in a printing office with Senator Gallagher of New Hampshire when they were both young men in Nashville, Tenn., before the civil war. To this day they are great friends, though for a number of years they lost sight of each other.

The Morning Summons.

When the mist is on the river, and the haze is on the hills,
And the promise of the springtime all the ample heaven fills;
When the shy things in the wood-haunts and the hardy on the plains,
Catch up heart and feel a leaping life through winter sluggish veins;

Then the summons of the morning like a bugle moves the blood,
Then the soul of man grows larger, like a flower from the bud;
For the hope of high Endeavor is a cordial half divine,
And the banner cry of Onward calls the laggards into line.

There is glamour of the moonlight when the stars rain peace below,
But the stir and smell of morning is a better thing to know;
While the night is hushed and holden and transpierced by dreamy song,
Lo, the dawn brings dew and fire and the rapture of the strong!

A group of Spanish officers were standing in front of the mess quarters at Bahia Honda. They had just come in from Havana and on the morrow were to start across the mountains toward Cristobal on special service. It had been a long, hard march, and they were hungry and tired. In spite of all that was behind and of what might be ahead, their one thought was of the meal whose savory odors were issuing from the hastily improvised mess quarters. The sun was not yet down, but the shadows of the date palms lay thick about their feet. They watched them listlessly, waiting for the mess call, and then ready to seek the low thatched building where they were to sleep. From the shadows of the same date palms a group of ragged, emaciated boys watched them keenly. They, too, were mindful of the odors that came from the mess quarters, for they sniffed eagerly, and from time to time they whispered to one another and pointed toward the building or the officers. Presently a boy of nine or ten, with keen, snapping black eyes, stole to a palm tree that was but a few yards from where the officers stood. In the shadow of this he waited until his companions had circled round to the shelter of a clump of bamboos on the other side, and very near to the entrance of the mess quarters. There they paused, as though for a signal.

And it was not long coming. With a sudden wild whoop the boy with the snapping eyes sprang forward into the very midst of the officers, swinging his arms and dancing about as though he were mad. In an instant almost, and before they had recovered from the surprise of the unexpected onslaught he had snatched a sword from one of the scabbards and bounded away. At the same moment a cry of consternation came from the mess quarters.

But the officers did not notice that. They were too amazed, too angry at the audacity of this ragamuffin, who had stopped a few yards away and was now brandishing the sword defiantly in their very faces. With exclamations of anger they sprang forward to a man, and the ragamuffin, instead of trying to escape, dodged this way and that, under the outstretched arms of one, behind another and almost between the legs of a third, all the time taunting them and daring them on. He was like an eel that squirmed out of their hands even after they caught him; or a flea that was anywhere except where they thought it. Five minutes passed in exasperating dodging and doubling before they succeeded in dragging him back, struggling and grinning to the mess quarters. And it was not until afterward that it occurred to them that he had made no real effort to escape.

As the excitement of the chase and capture began to subside they noticed for the first time that their mess cook and his boy assistant were shuffling about wringing their hands.

"What are you doing here, Garcia?" one of the officers demanded impatiently. "Go back and hurry up supper."

But Garcia continued to wring his hands.

"There is none," he wailed. "No meats, no breads, no fruits. Oh, señores! oh, señores! What shall we do? Me and my boy Jose were finishing a beautiful supper—oh, so beautiful!—and a horde of wild creatures rushed in and threw flour into my face and tripped Jose, and when we recovered there were no meats, no breads, no fruits. Oh, señores! oh, señores!"

Two or three of the officers rushed into the mess room. When they returned their faces were blank.

"Garcia's right," they said, "the place is stripped as clean as though visited by locusts."

Then they stopped abruptly, as though making a discovery, and glanced at the captive. "You are responsible for this," one of them declared.

The boy grinned. "Si, señor," he said composedly, "why not?"

"Let this be a lesson."

They stared at him and at each other. Was the boy mad? If so, it was a madness that must be punished. "Shooting is too easy for a thing like that," scowled the one who had lost his sword. "It's a case for hanging."

"No; hanging's too easy," declared another, gloomily. "You don't know how hungry I am. But there goes the pursuit," as they saw soldiers scattering among the palms. "Perhaps the supper will be recaptured."

The boy sniffed. "Five minutes' start," he grinned significantly. "A thousand men couldn't find the boys now. They know hiding places your soldiers never dreamed of."

The officer in command looked at him curiously.

"There is something behind this," he said thoughtfully. "You are old enough to understand the consequences of such an act, and too wise to throw away your life for a little meat and a few loaves of bread."

The boy's eyes began to flash and for the first time his face lost its grinning derision.

"I have risked my life for a little meat and a few loaves of bread," he declared quickly, "and I do understand just what the consequences are. But what is life when my mother is sick and starving, and when my sisters and grandfather and grandmother are all starving. I would risk it, and lose it, too, a hundred times. The boys have food enough now to last them a month," his voice ringing with exultation. "You may kill me if you want to. But you haven't soldiers enough to get the food back. And it wasn't stolen, either. You have destroyed our crops and taken our cattle and fruits, and they would pay for this a thousand times over."

He threw his head back and looked squarely into their eyes. "There is another thing I don't mind telling you," he went on sturdily; "my father's away fighting, and I would be away fighting too, if I were old enough. As it is, we boys look after the family." Here the grinning derision returned to his face. "The horde of wild creatures your cook tells about were just my three brothers and two of my cousins, the oldest only thirteen. They'll look after the family now, and when this food is gone, they'll find some way to get more. Now kill me if you want to. I'm not afraid."

A curious expression had been coming into their eyes. Above all things a soldier respects bravery.

"Come, gentlemen," said the officer in command gruffly, "we must settle this at once. Camp will be broken early, and there will be no time then. The case is a flagrant one, and calls for severe punishment. But I will leave the sentence to you, De Guise," to the officer whose sword had been taken; "as the most aggrieved of us; the first vote belongs to you. What punishment is adequate to the offense?"

The officer scowled. "I would condemn him to perpetual banishment from us," he answered harshly.

"And you, Bourmont," to the officer who had confessed he was hungry.

"De Guise is too mild, too mild," this officer said, scowling also. "I would add that in addition to his sentence the condemned be made to carry away a sack of flour as large as himself—as large as a man can lift."

"And you," "and you," to the other officers.

"I consider the sentence just, and recommend it," said one.

"And I," "and I," said others. "With perhaps a little more added to the burden," finished the last judiciously. "A prisoner of this kind should be crushed."

"Very well, gentlemen," said the officer in command, "you will see that the sentence is carried out to the letter. And you," turning severely to the wondering boy, "let this be a lesson. Never do a thing unless you are ready to do it with your whole heart. If you had shown a white spot, I would have had you shot."

GRADY'S FEAST OF POSSUM.

Rival Ruined His Chance for the Colored Vote by a Mean Trick.

During a heated campaign in Georgia some years ago the late Henry F. Grady was opposed by an editorial associate, Captain Evan Howell. They were warm personal friends, but on the issue at stake were diametrically opposed to each other. Recalling that campaign, Representative Livingston tells a funny story.

The result of the election depended largely upon a certain ward in which there was a very large negro population. Grady bethought himself of a scheme to capture these colored voters, and, securing a vast number of possums, provided a great supper, at which they could eat. It was a master stroke and Howell knew nothing of it until the night, the supper occurred. Then he was at his wits end until an inspiration came to him. He sent for some of his negro supporters, gave them instructions and waited for the result.

An hour later while the colored barbers were having a great feasting time one of Howell's supporters cried "Meow." Another man repeated the cry. A third man was apparently taken sick and the fourth man exclaimed: "Deed boys, I think we are eating cats!" That broke up the supper and Grady never did quite convince the possum eaters that they had been imposed upon.

Brought the Bishop's Boots.

A humorous story is related in connection with the visit of an English bishop to a Virginia family. Everybody was directed to address the reverend bishop as "my lord," and a man servant about the place was especially told off to attend him. The bishop like every other Englishman, set his boots outside his door when he went to bed at night. His temporary body servant was instructed to take them, blacken them and return them before their owner should be ready to put them on in the morning. The boy did as he was told. The bishop was dressing when he knocked on the door in the morning, with his carefully taught response, "It's the boy, my lord, with your boots," on the tip of his tongue. The sound of the bishop's voice confused him.

"Who's there?" the bishop called out.

"The boy forgot his speech utterly."

"Who's there?" the bishop called again.

"It's the Lord, with your boots, my boy," said he.

Doing His Best.

It somehow seems little enough when you say that a fellow is "doing his best."

That means that he toils and he hopes day by day.

That Heaven will attend to the rest. He is jostled aside by the hurrying crowd, Unthought by the lonely, forgot by the proud.

He earns what he gets, and no more is allowed.

To the fellow who's "doing his best."

But whenever a crisis arises, we look to the man who is doing his best.

The prince with his splendor, the sage with his book.

Full oft fall to answer the test. And when there's a home or a country to save.

We turn to the man with the heart and the nerve.

The man whom adversity's touch could not swerve.

The man who kept doing his best.

His Best Investment.

"When I knew old Hunks, years ago," said the returned traveler, "he hadn't a soul above dollars and cents. I find him now the best read man, especially in history and the works of the standard novelists. I ever met. I can't understand the change in him." "The explanation is easy," replied the old citizen. "He lent $1,000 to a man who wanted to start a high-class circulating library. After a year or two the man failed, leaving nothing but the books as his assets. Old Hunks had to take them for the debt, and as nobody wanted to buy a lot of second-hand books, he started in and read all of them to get his money back."

King Edward's Pull.

To the French people of Canada Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the greatest if not the only great person living. Some time ago a "habitant" arriving in the city of Quebec met an old friend and fell to talking politics. In the course of conversation he happened to mention the name of Queen Victoria and the friend informed him that the queen had been dead for a year.

"Dead!" exclaimed the countryman, "and who, then, rules in England?"

"When it was explained to him that the Prince of Wales had succeeded to the throne he shook his head wisely.

"Mon Dieu!" he said, "but he must have a pull with Laurier."

MURDERED AND BEHEADED IN TOUGH NEW YORK SALOON

James B. Craft, a wealthy resident of Glen Cove, was murdered and his body decapitated in a tenderloin resort, known as the Empire Garden Cafe, in West Twenty-ninth street, within a few doors of Broadway, New York. All the evidence goes to show, the police say, that Craft, who had been making the rounds of the tenderloin, displayed a large amount of money in the Empire, and was killed by one of the waiters known as Thomas Tobin for the purpose of robbery. The police also say that knockout drops were first administered and that the victim was then dragged into the basement and killed with a cleaver.

The odor of burning flesh attracted the attention of the occupants of the upper part of the house and led to the discovery by detectives of the nude and headless body of a man in the basement. The charred head was discovered a few minutes later in the furnace, in which a fire had recently been made, with the evident intention of destroying all possibility of identification of the remains.

Later the body was identified by Walter Craft, of Glen Cove, as that of his father. The murdered man was about 51 years old, and was a manufacturer of refrigerating machinery in New York.

Tobin, who is charged with the murder, was arrested hiding in the house. The police also arrested Alexander McAnerney, the bartender; Robert Kelley, a porter in a Chinese restaurant in the building, and several women who were known to be frequenters of the place. The police say that Tobin's real name is Thomas Kelley, and that he is a brother of the porter. They also learned that Craft attempted to get a check for $1,250 cashed before he went to the Empire.

In his story to the corner McAnerney said the man who was killed exhibited a big roll of bills and Tobin suddenly told him he lied and struck him over the head. He dragged him down stairs.

"I followed him to the cellar," McAnerney continued. "I watched Tobin drop his burden and begin to hack at the man's neck. He chopped and chopped, and when the head refused to come off he began to saw it with the cleaver. Suddenly he turned around, and, discovering me, he said he would cut my head off too."

As McAnerney related the story Tobin jumped to his feet and said it was McAnerney who murdered the man and not he.

RECORD CROP OF APPLES.

New Mexican Orchard Yields Its Proprietor an Annual Fortune.

"Out in New Mexico last week I saw, near Roswell, in that territory, the biggest apple orchard I ever laid eyes upon," said Mr. R. P. Zurn of St. Louis. "The orchard is the property of Mr. J. J. Hagerman, the noted miner and railway contractor. It comprises 68,000 trees and occupies a tract of 640 acres. The orchard is maintained by a perfect system of irrigation, and every tree was laden with fruit—as beautiful apples as grow in any part of the United States. Mr. Hagerman told me that he had been offered $1 a tree for the whole crop, but had refused it, and expected it would net him over $100,000. This was not unreasonable, seeing that the previous year he had made as high as $54 from a single tree."—Washington Post.

WELCOME TO GEN. BOOTH.

Salvation Army Soldiers Greet Their Leader with Enthusiasm.

Gen. William Booth, founder of the dinary reception on his arrival at General Booth, Salvation Army.

New York. Elaborate preparations had been made for meeting the great salvationist when his steamer arrived at quarantine. The welcoming hosts were led by the general's daughter, Consul Emma Booth-Tucker, who was in command of twelve large steamboats that sailed out to meet Gen. Booth's ship. More than 1,200 salvationists were on board, and the music of their bands and hymns must have been a refreshing sound to the ears of the veteran leader. After Gen. Booth landed he was escorted to headquarters by a parade, in which all the members of the army in New York joined.

Southern Manufacturing Statistics.

In 1880 the value of farm products in the south exceeded that of manufactured products by more than $200,000,000, while in 1900 the value of the manufactured products exceeded that of the farm products by more than $190,000,000. During the period the number of persons engaged in agriculture increased 36 per cent.

JOKE WAS ON CHOATE.

Compliment to His Abilities Not Entirely Relished.

When Rufus H. Choate was in the heyday of his career as a practitioner, he undertook the defense of two men accused of burglary. The prosecution's chief witness contributed some damaging testimony, and among other things swore that the defendant tried to induce him to join with them in the burglary, offering rare inducements. Choate leaped to his feet, reminded the witness that he was under oath and then menacingly asked:

"Now, tell the jury just how my client tried to persuade you to join in a crime!"

The witness hesitated; and Choate repeated the question. The bench upheld him in saying the witness must answer.

"Well," faltered the witness, perspiration starting from every pore as he encountered the lawyer's angry gaze. "they said no harm could come to us, for there was a lawyer here in Boston named Choate who could get us off even if we were caught with the money in our boots."

HAD TO DRAW THE LINE.

Confidential Clerk Not as Smart as He Thought He Was.

A story is being told of a certain confidential clerk who formed the wicked habit of running out from his business each morning at 11 o'clock to partake of a glass of rum. Not being very proud of this, his daily habit, he asked invariably for a few caraway seeds that he might chew them and under this bushel hide his alcoholic light. For years and years this habit went on, and he apparently escaped detection. On one occasion he found that at his favorite hostelry there were no caraway seeds, so he was compelled to put up with a beautiful spring onion by way of bushel. Presently he returned to his desk and went on with his work, his employer sitting at the desk opposite. Soon the employer noticed something. At first it was faintly perceptible, but presently it became less agreeable. "Look here," he said, "I've stood rum and caraway for twenty-two years, but I draw the line at rum and onions."

The Alaska "Musher" Explained.

The New York Sun recently undertook to throw a flood of light on the slang used by the miners at Thunder Mountain. It says:

" Oftentimes the man making his first trip into Thunder Mountain is called a 'musher,' because he takes all kinds of cereal and mushy foods with him. This word has come down from Alaska."

"Mush" comes from an Indian word used on the Yukon. The fact is that some of the first white people in the Northwest Territory were French-Canadians, who cried to their dogs, "Marchons" (walk, or get on). Drivers who did not understand French corrupted the "Marchons" to "mush on," the "on" being still in general use by dog drivers calling to their teams. From "mush on" comes the verb "to mush" and the noun "musher."—Nome Gold Digger.

Sultan's Wife Only 12.

The new Sultan of Zanzibar is Ali bin Hamour, a youth of 17, who has been educated in England at Harrow. Having completed his course there, he left that country some time ago for Zanzibar and the steamer by which he traveled should have brought him home by this time. It is to be assumed that Ali bin Hamour will have learned at Jibuti of the death of his father and of his succession to the Sultanate. He was traveling home in the company of Gen. Ralke, commander-in-chief of the Zanzibar forces, and of Basil Cave, the British agent and consul in the island. Ali bin Hamour was recently married to his cousin, a princess of the royal house, between 11 and 12 years of age.

Not Frightened.

W. S. Gilbert, the playwright, when lunching at a rural hotel, found himself at the table with a party of three clergymen who had been cycling in the neighborhood. When they learned his identity, they struck up an acquaintance and regarding him as a curiosity, plied him with various questions. Finally, one of the number asked how he, a person of the theater, felt in the company of three men of the church. Gilbert's reply was prompt.

"I feel," said he, "like a lion in a den of Daniels."

Arctic Coal.

The Norwegians are turning their attention to the large and promising coal fields on the southwest coast of Spitzbergen. For several years past their fishermen, while in these coastal waters, have observed the outcrops of coal. Their stories aroused interest at home and the coal fields were examined as a possible source of profit. Several companies have been formed to carry on coal mining in these new fields and there is much confidence in Norway that the new Arctic enterprise will be profitable.

Iron Padlocks as Ornaments.

The cheapest and commonest iron padlocks made in South Staffordshire, England, find a market in India, and constitute the only door fastenings to the huts of the native tribes. A large trade was formerly done in cheap cast padlocks japanned in bright red or blue colors, which it was commonly said were bought for ornament rather than for use. The dusky beauties of the dark continent strung them together and wore them in the form of a necklace.

TOWER SUCCEEDS DR. WHITE.

American Ambassador to Russia Chosen to Go to Berlin.

President Roosevelt has chosen Charlemagne Tower, ambassador to Charlemagne Tower.

Russia, to succeed Dr. Andrew D. White as ambassador to Germany. Notifications of this decision and notice to the effect that Mr. White's letters of recall had been issued by the state department have reached the foreign office.

Dr. White will probably not have his farewell audience of the emperor Nov. 7, his birthday, as had been provisionally arranged, because his majesty will leave Nov. 5 for England. The retiring ambassador, therefore, is not likely to present his letters of recall until about the middle of November.

REAR ADMIRAL MELVILLE ILL.

A PERSIAN PARABLE.

The Side of the World the Psalmist Had Not Seen.

There was a certain man who thought the world was growing worse. He was always harking back to "the good old days" and was sure that the human race was degenerating. Men, he said, were all trying to cheat one another, and the strong were crushing the weak. One day when he was airing his pessimistic views the call came to him:

"I charge you hereafter to look carefully about you, and whenever you see any man do a worthy deed to him and give him praise or write to him about it. Whenever you meet a man whom you regard as worthy to have lived in the 'good old days,' tell him of your esteem and of the pleasure you have had in finding one so exalted, and I desire that you write out an account of these good deeds for me that I may share your joy in knowing of it."

So the man was dismissed. But before many days he returned and prostrated himself before the call. When ordered to explain his presence, he wailed:

"Have pity on thy servant, and release him from the necessity of complimenting men upon their worthy deeds, oh, my master. And, oh, son of Mohammed, I pray thee absolve thy servant from the duty of reporting to thee all the good that is going on in the world."

"And why, oh, slave, dost thou come to me with this prayer?" the call asked.

"Since I have been looking for what is 'good,' the man replied, 'I have had no time to do aught but compliment men for their splendid works. So much that is glorious is all around me that I may not hope to be able to tell thee half of it. My tasks the neglected because I have no time!'"

"Go back to thy work," said the call. "I perceive that thou hast learned."

The Ruin of Restaurants.

A young man who dines quite frequently in a French restaurant, whose reputation is based on the unvarying excellence of the dishes served, sent for the chef the other night to compliment him on a poulet en casserole. "I like you," said the cook, "because you never bring any women in this place. A gentleman who comes in alone for his dinner regards the dishes and pays his whole attention to the food he is eating. But when he is with a woman! Bah! He laughs, he talks, he regards only his companion, his attention is distracted, the cook and his work are forgotten. I do not try for them. The boys who are learning prepare their dinners. It is not popularity that ruins a restaurant, it is the women and music."—New York Post.

The Printer's Devil.

The familiar term "printer's devil," as applied to the boy of all work about a printing office, is said by the Fourth Estate to have originated with Aldus Manutius. He employed a small negro boy, a curiosity in those days in Europe, who became known as the "Little Black Devil." Printing was then a mystery, and a superstition spread that Aldus was invoking the black art and that the negro boy was the embodiment of Satan. To correct this opinion Aldus publicly exhibited the black boy and declared: "Be it known to Venice that I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the holy church and to the doge, have this day made public exposure of the printer's devil. All those who think he is not flesh and blood may come and pinch him."

Willing to Compromise.

A story of the Colombian idea of taxation is told by a traveler who recently visited that South American country. "Some American friends of mine," said the traveler, "were visited by the city officials of Colon. 'Senor,' said the leader of the delegation, 'we have come to collect $12 in gold from you, your share of the cost of collecting the garbage for this year.' 'But, my dear sir,' said the American in surprise, 'you have not collected the garbage once during the whole year.' 'That's true,' said the collector, scratching his head. 'Well, let's make it $6, then.'"

Matthew Arnold's Rudeness.

"Do you take sugar and cream?" a hostess asked Matthew Arnold from behind the breakfast urn. "Neither," he replied. "I only take cream when the coffee is nasty." The feelings of the hostess may be imagined after this statement to have her guest taste the beverage and direct the waitress to bring him sugar and cream.

Quite Consistent.

Miss Mainchautz—I suppose you've heard of my engagement to Mr. Jenks? Miss Ascott—Yes, and I confess I was surprised. You told me once that you wouldn't marry him for a million dollars. Miss Mainchautz—I know, dear, but I discovered later that he had two millions.—Philadelphia Press.

Merely a Question of Judgment.

"What is it that leads a woman who has married unhappily and got a divorce to marry again?" "Curiosity." "Curiosity!" "Certainly! She's curious to learn if her judgment of men has improved."—Chicago Post.

The Worried Housewife.

Mrs. Fred Unrath,

President Country Club, Benton Harbor, Mich.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.
HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERNAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS!

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain
Very truly yours,
