We Celebrated.

Had a Good Crowd and Good Sports.

Mr. Jupiter Pluvius took a hand in the Fourth of July celebration here early in the morning and had things his own way till after dinner when Old Sol dug a hole through the clouds and after that things went as planned. A crowd of several thousands were here and in spite of rain and mud, seemed to thoroughly enjoy the day with our townspeople.

The civic parade, scheduled for ten o'clock a. m., had to be dispensed with and the East Jordan Military Band took refuge on the Lakeside veranda where they rendered several selections. A small-sized parade, consisting of our Firemen, a nicely decorated float of the Argo Mills, and the Calhumpians, made their appearance, but soon took to cover. And in spite of John Kenny's cheerful assurance that we'd have a "Ball game right after the rain" it looked dubious.

After dinner, Marshal of the Day L. C. Madison announced the ball game between Harbor Springs and our boys. The game resulted in a score of 8 to 1 in favor of East Jordan, and while it was too much a one-sided game to be exciting, the absence of anything but a pleasant rivalry among the boys, made it interesting. Joe Maddock made a good umpire.

The "Coal Heaver's Revenge," a one-act farce, was given on a staging across from the Bank "Dare Devil Grant" gave several stunts on a bicycle, winding up by riding down a 70-ft. ladder placed on a building on State-st. The ladder was not a "trick" ladder where the rounds are only six inches apart, but a common paint ladder. In this act Grant jeopardized his life, the handle bars breaking just as he neared the ground. Grant received several bruises but luckily escaped with no broken bones.

The contests were close and resulted as follows: Walking greased pole, George Jepson, Jr. Tub race, Ben Weikel first, Wm. Ivory, second. Sack race, Harry Simmons first, Guy Pearl second. Boy's running race, Lawrence Munroe first, Guy Pearl second, Lee Gilbert third. Lawrence Munroe caught the greased pig. In the tug of war Maddock and Gotham coached the sides and Gotham's end won out—a box of Pride of Charlevoix cigars going to the winners.

In the evening the East Jordan Military Band "did themselves proud" in their Band Drill and Concert. The boys are showing wonderful progress in both concert work and drilling. After the concert, the Elk Rapids Dramatic Club presented "Little Buckshot" at Loveday Opera House, to a good-sized audience.

Numerous dances took up the attention of those devoted to that pastime.

The Petoskey Cornet Band did not materialize as agreed upon. They made a square deal over the telephone with the managers of our celebration and whatever their excuse may be, they had no right to forfeit their deal here. It was too late for a contract and their word should have been sufficient.

Reunion Next Month.

A committee of old soldiers of the Grand Traverse district meet in our village today and decide upon the date and other matters pertaining to the Encampment which is to be held here either the last week in August or the first in September. The district comprises ten counties, and East Jordan will, without doubt, have the pleasure of entertaining some 300 or 400 of the "Boys in Blue."

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

All persons liable for taxes in the Village of East Jordan, are hereby notified that the tax roll of said village for the year 1903, is in my hands for collection, and that the time for payment of the same at one per cent. collection fee has been limited to Aug. 2, 1904. The roll can be seen and payment made at the State Bank of East Jordan.

Dated June 15, 1904.

The State Convention.

The Republican State Convention at Detroit last week nominated Fred M. Warner, for governor by acclamation. The rest of the ticket is given on page four.

The convention adopted the following platform after defeating the minority report of William Alden Smith, of the committee on resolutions:

"As representatives of the Republican party of Michigan, in convention assembled this 30th day of June, 1904, we take special pride, at this time, in recalling the worthy deeds of our party's half-century of existence, and in the further fact that the great organization first formed 'under the oaks at Jackson,' July 6, 1854, has been victorious in Michigan in every national contest from John C. Fremont to William McKinley, and we will add one more bright page to Michigan's history of the Republican party through as memorable a victory in the campaign before us as ever we have done in the past, for our fearless leader and typical Republican, Theodore Roosevelt.

"We gladly indorse the action of the national Republican convention at Chicago, accepting its declaration of party faith and party purpose as expressive of the principles to which we have given cordial support in the past, and pledge unwavering loyalty for the future. In the candidates of that convention, Roosevelt and Fairbanks, we recognize men who are not only worthy to represent our party as its honored leaders, but men who, in all the great duties before them, will be equal to national demands and fully prepared for even the greatest emergencies which the onward movements of a great nation may invoke and create.

"We are pleased again to commend our senators and Republican representatives in congress from this state for their united and zealous advancement of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and again desire to approvingly refer to our present state officers and state administration for the conservative and judicious conduct of state affairs which has been maintained, and particularly for the determined efforts, which have been made and are being made to secure that measure of equal taxation, which includes within its requirements the most powerful corporation, as well as the humblest individuals.

"We believe that the selection of candidates for public office should be protected from improper control and taint of corruption, and should be so conducted as the judgment and will of the people in their respective counties and election districts may demand and direct. To that end, we reaffirm the action of the Republican state convention at Grand Rapids, May 19, 1904, in favor of primary reform, where changes from the existing caucus and convention system are desired.

"We further believe it wise and desirable that all caucuses and primaries relating to the selection of delegates to state conventions should be held upon the same day. And recommend to the incoming legislature, the adoption of such a law, with proper details for its satisfactory enforcement."

them on a gown which should have long lines is a puzzle to many a dress-maker. The skirt should first be most carefully fitted and made, and then the flounces should be put on in such a way (if the wearer of the gown be tall) as to make them encircle the skirt at the same distance from one another. If the wearer be short and stout and wishes to be thought tall and slender, then the flounces must be arranged so as to be higher, either in front or at the back—whichever is more becoming. The flounces may be of the same material as the gown, edged with lace and trimmed with rows of tucks and lace insertions, or they may be made entirely of lace.

Told in Her Boudoir

Tucks of all widths are noted on new dresses. Coarse laces trim the canvas fabrics to perfection. Elaboration is the keynote of the season in dressdom. Nets printed in cloudy Dresden effects are very attractive. Shoulder trimmings droop in pseudo grandmama style. Daisies and buttercups are reappearing as millinery blossoms. A panel front makes round and round trimmings possible for the stout woman. The newest skirt tuckings turn toward the front and taper to a point at the knee. Colors will be more of a feature in women's handkerchiefs than they have been in many seasons. The red hat is the correct thing to wear with a black and white striped or checked gown.

Nice For Toilet

Hand-embroidered towels are the latest vogue in towels for actual use where something specially nice is desired. The embroidery is done on plain, fine huckaback or other fine towel fabric taking the place of damask or other decoration. A deep hemstitched hem is the usual finish and one end only is embroidered. Decorative towels, for decorative purposes only, come with deep-knotted fringes elaborate borders of drawn work, medallions of old Venetian or other decorative laces. And Italian macramé towels have deep fringes very elaborately and artistically knotted.

Informal Talks

To keep paraffin lamps from smelling as they sometimes will do even when perfectly clean, put a tablespoonful of salt into the oil. To clean sponges add a tablespoonful of strong ammonia to a pint of water.

A SMART DINNER WAIST

Waists made of soft silks and satins are exceedingly fashionable for dinner and afternoon wear and are most effective combined with lace and net. This very attractive one is made of pearl gray messaline satin with warm water and into this squeeze the sponge. Let it lie a few minutes, then rinse it in clear water.

Silk ribbons may be washed in suds made of lukewarm water and good soap, but they must not be wrung or they will be badly creased. Wash in a second lot of suds and rinse in clear cold water. Then lay on a table or board and with rather a stiff nail-brush brush sideways till all the creases are removed. Leave till thoroughly dry.

Asparagus Omelet

Boil about twenty-five heads of asparagus and cut the green ends when tender into short pieces. Mix with them four well-beaten eggs, adding a little pepper and salt. Melt an ounce of butter (or perhaps rather more) in an omelet-pan, pour in the mixture, stir till it thickens over the fire, fold it nicely over. Clarified butter may be served with it, into which a few drops of vinegar have been poured.

One of the New Coats

Jackets made with perfectly flat finish at the neck are the latest and smartest shown and will be much worn this season through in all light weight cloths. This one allows a choice between mandolin and plain sleeves and includes seams at both front and back that extend to the shoulders, so giving a tapering effect to the figure. The model is made of tan-colored cloth with trimming of mohair braid and is closed by means of buttons and loops, but the finish can be one of many things and the closing can be made invisibly by means of a fly whenever preferred. To make the jacket for a girl of 14 years of age will be required 3 1/2 yards of material 27-2 yards 44 or 1 1/2 yards 52 inches wide.

Old whalebone which has become bent and useless should be soaked in hot water and then laid on a table to dry. In this way it is straightened out and may have a new stage of usefulness before it.

Thinning of Peaches

The thinning of peaches is as yet practiced by but few peach growers, yet among the ones that do thin are the most successful peach growers in the United States. Among these we might mention Rolland Morrill of Michigan and J. H. Hale of Georgia. Both have made fortunes out of peach growing, and national reputations as well. Mr. Morrill says that the work pays enormously, and Mr. Hale declares that he could not succeed without this. One big grower in West Virginia says that he would no more think of growing peaches without thinning them than he would think of getting along without cultivating the ground under the trees. Thinning the fruit gives the peaches better size, better flavor and more color. The flavor is improved in part by the large amount of food each peach receives and probably to some extent by the increased amount of sunlight falling on each peach; for where peaches are clustered together naturally there are parts of them that are not able to receive the amount of sunshine desired by the grower. The skillful thinners make the heaviest thinning on the shaded part of the tree. This leaves the greater part on the sunny side of the tree and of course a greater proportion of the peaches are thus in the full glare of the sun.

The men that do the thinning soon become very expert and leave no inferior or imperfect fruit on the tree. The peaches are simply picked off and allowed to fall to the ground, and this makes the work easy. The limbs are not all treated alike. The stocky, thick limbs are able to bear and ripen a greater number of peaches than the long slender limbs.

The severest thinning is naturally made near the base of the tree and on the inside where the fruit would be shaded by the foliage. The desire is not only to reduce the amount of fruit the tree carries, but also to so distribute it on the tree that it will be in the best position to get air and light. The old rule that peaches were to be uniformly thinned to say, a handbreadth apart, has apparently been abandoned as being a crude method that did not give the best results at harvest time. The time to thin will depend of course on the locality, the earliness of the season and the variety of peach being grown. In the North it is not best to begin to thin before the annual drop begins. This drop occurs every year, partly from unknown reasons. If the peaches are thinned before this time it may be that the number left on the trees after that event will be less than the tree should mature. Also the thinning should not be done later than the hardening of the pit. One reason for the thinning is to relieve the tree of the necessity of supplying material for the pits. When we compare the density of the flesh of the peach with the hardness of the pit we will see that really a very large part of the substance in the fruit crop is in the pits. The fruit should be thinned before it reaches the size of a hickory nut, and this is generally after the drop, which in many states occurs in June.

It should be remembered that every day the surplus fruit remains on the tree plant food is being wasted. Distance cuts some figure still in the work of thinning. Then men that want to raise peaches only for drying, thin to say, four inches apart. The men that want a good market peach, thin to six inches where distances are held to at all; while the men that want some very fine fruit for exhibition purposes, thin to ten inches apart.

Improving Swine

The improvement of swine must come as it comes in all other breeds of animals, both by selecting and feeding. Feeding is probably first, as no matter how well an animal may be selected if he is not fed properly the things that have been gained by selecting will be lost. What is the use of a man trying to breed up a strong-boned animal if, after having selected one that shows the proper conformation, he goes on feeding him nothing but corn from piggood to maturity? It is evident that this kind of feeding would be a permanent check on further development along the line desired. And if this selection should be continued for generations and the feed remain bad, little or nothing could be gained. In the past much of the work of improvement has been along these lines and has therefore been uphill work. Some of our farmers have tried to select their breeding swine year after year with the hopes of getting an improvement in stamina, but have continued to feed materials that went to destroy stamina, and they have found it to be difficult to improve their animals in the least.

The first requisite therefore is to begin a right system of feeding, one that will develop a strong bone and firm and abundant muscles. This can be done by limiting the amount of corn that is fed and increasing the amount of foods rich in protein. By such a course not only will the muscular systems of the animals be improved but the breeding qualities will also be improved, and the number of pigs in each litter will be increased. The opposite course of feeding leads to degeneracy and impairment of breeding qualities.

Then comes the selection each year or each breeding season. With the proper method of feeding selection becomes a very effective method of improving the animals. Within a few weeks after farrowing the pigs will begin to show characteristics that should be propagated. A few will be thriftier than the others. A few will grow more rapidly than their fellows and they will show better formation of body viewed from the pork maker's standpoint. These are the ones that should be chosen for the future breeders, and should early be put in a lot by themselves and fed with the idea of making breeders of them. At the time the others begin to receive corn in quantities sufficient to make them lay on fat, these should be receiving only a little corn, just enough to balance the protein feeds they are receiving. It is obvious that no pig should be selected for breeding that has been in anyway stunted in development. The pig that was not able to take care of itself in the general scramble for its mother's milk has not enough stamina in it to make a good breeder and it is not desirable to transmit that lack of stamina to an offspring.

The Quick-growing Steer

In modern times it is an accepted tenet of live stock husbandry that the most money is made in the young and growing animal. The farmer that has a good pasture and some young calves of good conformation to put upon it is the one that is the most likely to make money out of his live stock feeding operations. The old steer turns grass, hay and grain into manure, but beyond a certain stage of growth he turns very little of it into flesh. The growing animal is the one that turns his feed most readily into flesh. The writer has known men that went into the feeding of live stock with a sort of hazy idea that it was very easy to get rich in this business, irrespective of the kind of stock involved in the feeding. The result was bankruptcy. This will be the result every time. More and more it is coming to be felt that the general farmer is to be the one that is to do most of the raising of beefs. The day is apparently passing when great quantities of beef can be made from free range. The day is just as certain to pass when animals can be bred in one part of the country and fed to maturity in another part. We are likely to tread in the footprints of the older countries of the world, where this work has simmered down to the farmer that follows mixed farming. This is largely because he can get the benefit of the growth of the young steer. The quick growing steer is the one that we must work to obtain. With the great ranges the scrub must go. With every curtailment of the size of the ranges there has come a widely felt necessity to improve the stock on the ranges. When ranges occupied nearly all of the land west of the Mississippi river it did not make much difference how long a steer took to attain his growth and maturity. His feed and care cost almost nothing anyway. But with the curtailment of the ranging privilege more work had to be done in a short time and on a less area. This led to the rangers bringing in improved animals to sire their herds, with the single aim of getting an animal that would mature in the least time possible and make the most out of the grass he got. What we call extensive farming is favorable to the non-descript, but intensive farming, which is always on the gain, demands animals of the intensive character. The quick growing steer is therefore the chief factor in the problem of the production of cheap meat.

The common farmer should have nothing to do with any other kind of an animal. He cannot afford to breed his cows to scrub bulls when he intends to put these calves on pasture and later finish them for the beef market. The quick growing steer is the steer of improved breed, as has been demonstrated over and over again. In the light of the experience of the past twenty-five years it is surprising that any man should still ignore the question of breed, which is the question of the quick growing steer.

Quaker Beauty Crab

The Virginia Station has been experimenting with this variety of crab apple, and in a report says of it: This variety does not appear to be widely disseminated; it is recommended by Thomas for planting in the West. One of the trees has made weak growth, but the other is moderately vigorous; forms a roundish head; limbs are stocky and of scraggy growth. The largest tree measures 21 inches in circumference at base, and 19 inches at head. Apparently free from disease. First bloom in 1892; bore 1-3 bushel handsome fruit the same season. Bore a heavy crop of fruit in 1895, but since that time the crops have been very light. Fruit large, color straw yellow ground washed with delicate rose on exposed cheek, not showy. Flesh creamy white, firm, crisp, but not as rich as that of Transcendent. This variety has not been productive enough to warrant us in recommending it for general planting.

Heredity is a power in the building up or tearing down of the quality of a flock. There are birds that inherit good qualities and there are others that inherit bad qualities.

A Soothing Drink. Inflammation of the throat and tonsils is a common complaint at this season of the year. A soothing drink for persons so affected is made by boiling a teaspoonful of isinglas in half a pint of milk with half a dozen bruised almonds and, sweetened to taste.

This drink has a marvelous effect in reducing the inflammation. It is widely used in England, but is not commonly known in this country.

Fashionable Neck Garnitures

No one of the many accessories of the season is more attractive or adaptable than the fancy collars, which take such a variety of forms. The group illustrated includes several sorts, all of which are smart and any of which can be reproduced in a variety of materials. As shown, however, the collar in the upper left-hand corner is made of all-over lace edged with banding. The round collar below is made of net with heavy silk applique and is finished with a silk ruche. The collar to the right is of quite a different sort, including long stole ends, which are eminently effective, and is shown in inserted tucking with a muslin frill as a finish. The fourth and last collar is made with deep points, each of which is filled by a medallion of embroidery, the foundation material being embroidered batiste, fine and sheer. To make any collar for a woman of medium size will be required 1 1/2 yards of material 18 or 21 inches wide, for a girl of 14 years of age, 1 1/4 yards 18 or 21 inches wide.

Calling Gowns and Negligees

An unusually chic calling gown of dark green taffeta showed the 1330 mode in its quaintest form; with puffings and insertions, long shoulder effect and full sleeves, to say nothing of the full skirt and small waist, the ensemble was all one could desire. A toque of the green showed tiny wing and knots of ribbon velvet of a paler shade for contrast; the green parasol was a most fitting accompaniment to this particular costume.

Any number of dainty matinees and negligees must be considered in the trousseau, from the lounging robe for boudoir use to the peignoir of regal lines becoming the hostess of the drawing room, so beautiful and artistic are they in design. Richly hand-embroidered crepes, in delicate shades make up handsomely, while accordion silks with profuse lace insertions possess a particular attraction for the majority of women, their clinging fullness, with flowing sleeves, being really very fascinating and decidedly becoming.

The Milliner's Blue Rose

One of the astonishing millinery fancies of the year is the blue rose. Such a flower never sprouted on the earth's surface, but built in slivered velvet, crimped silk or even cleverly tinted muslin, it is bewitching on the summer hat of lace or maline.

The girl who likes to wear blue and is weary of ragged robins and forget-me-nots greets the blue rose with enthusiasm and uses it in profusion.

Another blue blossom which has made its appearance is the hyacinth, but it must be used with discretion. An imported hat in a peculiar shade, bordering on navy blue, is trimmed with these hyacinths and ribbon which matches the bloom.

In a certain light, the entire confection shades to blue; turn it toward the sun and it shows violet tints.

To Clean Jewels

Every little while all brooches, rings and such things that are in constant use should be brushed with a toothbrush that has been dipped in eau de cologne. If the setting is open it must be done from the back, and care must be taken not to loosen the stones. Then lay the things in a box of jewelers' sawdust, which has been slightly heated beforehand, and leave for an hour, says the Ohio State Journal. Gold chains may be washed in warm soapsuds, drying them on a soft towel by pulling back and forward. They may also be dried in sawdust and the particles blown or dusted out afterward. Be sure and get them dry, as they will be apt to become worn between the links if any dampness remains.

A Problem in Flounces

Flounces and ruffles are becoming more and more fashionable all the time, and just how to arrange for lace and applique dyed to match, yoke and cuffs of cream point d'esprit held by fancy stitches and frills of net top lace, the yoke being transparent. The platts in both fronts and back extend for full length and the waist can be made to blouse all round or at the beneath the first plait at the left side of the front and at the left shoulder seam. To make the waist for a woman of medium size will be required 4 3/4 yards of material 21, 4 yards 27 or 2 1/2 yards 44 inches wide, with 1 yard 18 inches wide for yoke and cuffs.

BESSIE'S FISHING

One morning when spring was in her teens,
A morn to a poet's wishing,
All tinted in delicate grays and greens,
Miss-Bessie and I went fishing.

I in my tough-and-tumble clothes,
With my face at the sun's kindly mercy,
She with her hat tipped down to her nose,
And her nose tipped vice versa.

I with my rod, my rest, and my books,
And a hamper of luncheon recesses,
She with the bait of her comely looks,
And the scene of her golden tresses.

So we sat down in the shade of a dyke,
Where the white pond lilies teeter,
And I went to fishing like quaint old Ike,
And she, like Simon Peter.

All day I lay in the light of her eyes,
And dreamily watched and waited,
But the fish were cunning and wouldn't rise,
And the batter alone was baited.

So when the time for departure came,
My bag was as flat as a flounder,
But Bessie had nearly hooked her game,
A hundred-and-eighty-pounder.

FIGURING IT OUT

BY RUBY DOUGLAS

"I can never thank you, Miss Carew," began Tom Stanton for the sixth time within half an hour.

He stood in front of the big, open fireplace in the Carew sitting-room, very wet and disheveled. His overcoat and hat, soaked likewise, hung on the back of a chair before the fire. A pair of skates lay on the floor.

"In only one way, you may," answered Diana, at last.

She spoke as if she had suddenly determined to say something upon which she had been pondering. Each time Stanton had tried to thank her she had artfully turned the conversation into foreign channels and ignored his expressions of gratitude.

"Give me your solemn oath," she continued, "that you will never ask me to marry you, and I am fully thankful for what I have done. Yes, I know that sounds presumptuous, Mr. Stanton, but nowadays persons—labor under the delusion that if a girl does some—O some little thing like I did—for a man, that he is in honor bound to ask her to marry him. I won't have it, so promise."

She looked as well as he did in heavy wet clothing—and with his hair curling recklessly about his broad, white forehead.

"But you say—" he began, but was interrupted.

"Don't—don't dare to say it! I did not!" And Miss Carew stamped her foot emphatically.

"But you did; you saw me floundering about among the chunks of ice and you ran all the way, at a great risk to yourself, and pulled me out. I was foolish to skate on such dangerous ice. I could never have crawled out before I was frozen—so there! I must refute your denial. What do you call it, Miss Carew?"

"Never mind, only give me your promise. It was mere luck that I happened to be in the window of my room and saw you go in. I know the air holes in the slough, living so near. Your promise?" she said interrogatively.

"Is that quite fair?" he asked. "Suppose—"

"No, I won't! I would never, never marry a man who thought I had saved his life even if it were years and years afterwards. I should always feel that he asked me out of gratitude."

"But I won't feel that way," said Stanton, honestly feeling it might be true, but smiling down at the look of despair she gave him.

"There you are, this very minute," she argued, "before you have known me an hour, already contemplating it. O, please promise!"

Diana was so earnest that Stanton

"Don't—don't dare to say it!"

stopped smiling and turned his other side to the fire before answering.

"I'll promise on the condition that you will permit me to continue our acquaintance—if I may come to see you and learn to be friends. I could not thank you in a lifetime for what you have done, so we will let that pass. It was brave and—"

He was going to say sweet, but refrained wisely. Neither did he tell her he had the wet belt and tie which she had knotted together. He would keep that always.

"Very well, now promise," she said, extending her hand.

He took it in his. "I promise, Miss Carew, never to ask you to marry me out of gratitude," he said.

"No, no, no!" she cried, hopelessly, and taking her hand abruptly from him. "Promise never, under any circumstances, to ask me to marry you."

He hesitated while he looked earnestly into her eyes. And because he saw a troubled, eager expectancy in her expression he took her hand again and said, "I promise." But he was sorry the moment the words had left his lips.

Now that she had extracted her promise Diana chatted on merrily with

"Is it all figured out?"

Stanton, and long before he was dry enough to go out of doors she had learned why she had never seen him before.

He had only the night before come to Cedar Rapids and, in wandering about to get his bearings in the town before taking up his duties with his firm, had come upon the Little-Slough. He had secured some skates at a near-by shop and—Diana knew the rest.

In due time he came to call. Only one subject was tabooed when they were together, and that was the skating accident and the promise.

"Diana," said Tom one night—he had called her Diana for some time. "I did not promise to refrain from telling you I love you, and I do! I love you better than anything in life, and if you can't figure out some way out of my difficulty, I shall be sorry your were in your window that morning. I shall, Diana!" He tried to take her hands and to force her to look at him.

"Tom Stanton, don't you dare!" she said, laughing at his seriousness. "You are dangerously near breaking your promise, and I won't pull you out if you go over the brink as I did on the ice."

Almost a year after Diana had extracted her promise from Stanton she came into the room where he was waiting for her and sat down beside him on the couch.

"Have you a pencil and paper, Tom?" she asked. "I want you to figure something for me." She moved close to him.

"But first, Tom, are you quite, quite sure that you love me—that you would have loved me anyway? No," she said, repelling his attempt to take her hands. "Tell me."

"Yes, positively sure, Diana," he said, earnestly. "Are you going to release me?"

"Nonsense!" she cried. "I just wanted to be sure; I will never release you from that promise."

Silence fell between them for a moment. He was thinking of how many times within the year she had raised his hopes, only to dash them to the ground again. And yet he loved her.

"Now put down the figures I tell you," she said, after a minute, "and don't ask questions. One."

He put a figure one on the paper. Beside it a nine," said Diana. He did it.

"Nought! Four!" said Diana, excitedly.

"Very well," said Tom.

"Now divide it by four," she said.

"Four hundred and seventy-six," he read, when he finished. "Well, what of it?" He was mystified beyond expression.

"Is it all figured out?" she asked. "Yes."

"And can't you see that 1904 is divisible by four and that it's leap year, and—O, Tom, I love you so. Won't you marry me? Please do," she cried.

And if taking her in his arms and holding her as if he would never let her go again was giving a positive answer, Diana's leap year proposal was accepted.—Ruby Douglas, in Boston Globe.

GARDEN OUT OF PLACE.

Misfakc Was in Locating it on Baseball Diamond.

Henry Turner Bailey, until recently State Supervisor of Art of Massachusetts, says there is a wrong and a right way to induce the children to love the beautiful, and he tells the following story as an illustration. A superintendent of schools, during the vacation period, made a beautiful garden in a school yard, thinking that if he made it beautiful enough the boys would not destroy it. With September a lot of energetic boys came back to school, and in a few weeks the garden was trampled down and ruined. The townspeople were indignant at the ruffianly behavior of the schoolboys, and spoke of them in rather harsh terms. Early in the spring there was a change of superintendents, and the new man heard almost immediately of the spoiled garden. He went up to the school and made friends with the boys, and then he said, "You boys don't like flowers, do you?"

"They declared emphatically that they did."

"Then why did you ruin that flower garden?" he asked.

"Well," said the spokesman of the crowd, "they ought to have known better than to make it on our baseball diamond."

COULD NOT FOOL DARWIN.

Great Scientist at Once Settled Status of the Bug.

Miss Daisy Letter has brought back from London a story about Charles Darwin.

"Two English boys," said Miss Letter, "being friends of Darwin, thought one day that they would play a joke on him. They caught a butterfly, a grasshopper, a beetle and a centipede, and out of these creatures they made a strange, composite insect. They took the centipede's body, the butterfly's wings, the grasshopper's legs and the beetle's head and they glued them together carefully. Then, with their new bug in a box, they knocked at Darwin's door."

"We caught this bug in a field," they said. "Can you tell us what kind of a bug it is, sir?"

"Darwin looked at the bug and then he looked at the boys. He smiled slightly.

"Did it hum when you caught it?" he asked.

"Yes," they answered, nudging one another.

"Then," said Darwin, "it is a hum-bug."

The World Beautiful.

Oh, dwellers on the lovely earth,
Why will ye break your rest and mirth
To weary us with fruitless prayer?
Why will ye toil and take such care
For children's children yet unborn,
And garner store of strife and corn,
To gain a scarce remembered name,
Cumbered with lies and soiled with shame?

And if the gods care not for you,
What is this folly ye must do?
To win some mortal's feeble heart?
To win a world to you is given,
And needs his fellow little more
Than these blue waves that kiss the shore.

When for my sins thou drawest me forth,
Hast thou forgot what this was worth,
Thine own hand made? The tears of men,
The death of three score years and ten,
The trembling of the timorous race,
Had these things so bedimmed the place
Thine own hand made, thou couldst not Know.

To win a heaven the earth might grow,
If fear, beneath the earth were laid,
It hope failed not, nor love decayed.
—William Morris.

Wooing Done by Music.

Among the Yaw Midos, one of the many Burmese-Tartar people, the young men woo their wives absolutely without words, but to the sound of music. On the first day of winter they have a great feast, at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree," each playing his favorite instrument. As the maiden he loves passes him the youth plays louder and more feelingly. If the girl ignores him and passes on he knows that she will have none of him; if she steps up to him and lays a flower upon the instrument he jumps up, grasps her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and they go away together.

How Did He Do It?

Charles M. Schwab is still telling his friends his amusing experiences while abroad. One of these relates to an inscription he saw on the placard fastened to the breast of a beggar in Paris. Here is the literal translation:

"Gentlemen and Ladies—Kindly assist a poor man who has lost both his arms and is compelled to hold out his hands for alms."—New York Times.

Stoddard's Modesty.

As is not the case with many present-day celebrities, no one could justly accuse Richard H. Stoddard of being puffed up with an exaggerated idea of his own greatness.

"Well," said a friend to him several years before his death, "the papers will say a lot about you when you die."

"My friend," was the poet's quiet reply, "I will scarcely be mentioned."

TRAPPIST MONKS HOKKAIDO

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

I begin this letter in the monastery established by the Roman Catholic monks of La Trappe, near the village of Tobetsu in Hokkaido. As nothing is said of this remarkable institution in any of the guide books of Japan, I think I may dwell somewhat in detail on my experiences here.

The monastery, which is visible from the landing place, is not a building of any architectural pretensions. It consists of a white, barnlike, one-story structure, about 200 feet in length and facing the sea, its main building being flanked by two higher buildings, whose gables are turned toward the visitor and cut in two equal parts by an entrance door, behind which rises a church steeple sixty or eighty feet high, bearing on the summit a cross, and near the summit a large terra cotta image of the Madonna and Child.

The effect of this severe edifice, standing out against a bleak mountain, is austere. Before reaching the mon-visitors would rather serve to amuse them. This, I suppose, is why this custom has been abandoned.

Next the two religieux invite the visitor, by signs only, to follow them to the church "parce que le Maitre de la maison, c'est Dieu." On returning to the hotel, one of the two takes up a religious book and reads a chapter of it for the benefit of the newcomer. "Le chapitre que vous entendez lire parait toujours avoir été écrit pour vous."

As I have already remarked, my friend and I were conveyed directly to the hotel, and, as it was near noon, the lay brother who had taken charge of us from the beginning, and who seemed to have charge also of the guests' quarter, hastened to order dinner for us, deploring at the same time that we had not warned him beforehand of our coming so that he might have had something really ready for us.

This lay brother was, strange to Entrance to Temple.

As one passes a long, low building, used as an orphanage, and a more pretentious building used as a school.

A good deal of the land about the monastery seemed to be cultivated by the monks, but their waving fields of corn contrasted strongly with the uncultivated and apparently uninhabited country around about, while the deserted appearance of the gloomy building in front of us was heightened by the entire absence of life and movement. It was not till we had arrived at the entrance gate that there was any indication that the place was not deserted. A busy, bustling little brother in a brown monk's robe, with a hood and a leathern girdle, then rushed out to welcome us. His head was bare, his grown beard, long and flowing, his face rather handsome, with aquiline nose and bright, vivacious eyes, but rather pale and worn. He insisted on carrying our luggage himself to the guests' quarter on the right, which contained by far the most comfortable rooms in the house.

Everything our eyes encountered was monastic. The entrance hall contained large statues of the Sacre Coeur, Notre Dame de Lourdes, and St. Joseph. The long cloister along which we passed was hung with sacred texts and pious maxims in Latin and Japanese.

It seems that we were not received exactly according to the manner laid down in the rules, but it can be easily understood of course that some unimsay, a Dutchman, and he told us that the cook was a Dutchman also. It was only for guests; however, that this Dutch friar No. 2 officiated in the kitchen, the ordinary cook of the community being a Japanese brother, and, considering that the Trappists are strict vegetarians and only eat very simple dishes, a Japanese ought to suit them very well.

There are twelve foreigners in the community—two Dutchmen, one Italian, and the rest, including the prior, Frenchmen. Strange to say, the Japanese monks outnumber the foreigners, numbering as they do thirteen. Eight of them are novices.

The monks work with their hands for six hours a day, and pray a little more than six hours, the rest of their time being devoted to domestic affairs or to reading. In winter, study is their principal occupation, which means that they study a good deal, for winter lasts six months in this part of Japan, which is further north than Aomori, where 200 soldiers were lost in the snow last January. During that period of the year the cold is intense, and the snow sometimes attains a great height, so that the monks have to issue in straw snow shoes to gather fuel on the mountain. For the same reason great care has been taken to heat the monastery thoroughly, and we could observe that the wall of every chamber was pierced to allow of the passage of a stovepipe. Brother Leonard told us that in win-

portant changes in matters of detail may be advantageously made in this country. According to the old rule of the order two religieux present themselves first of all before the visitor and prostrate themselves flat on the floor, remaining in that position a few seconds, their foreheads pressed against the threshold. This, as may be seen, exactly similar to the ordinary everyday method of salutation in use among Japanese tea-house girls, and far from impressing Japanese ter water is frozen in the chapel, even at a short distance from the stove.

The wind, too, is sometimes very strong, and on that account there are double windows in at least one chamber, a chamber set apart for guests. The monks get seven hours' sleep. They go to bed at 8, rise at 2, and sleep for an hour after the midday repast, which is the only meal they take, excepting a light collation in the evening.

Handsome Bible. The most beautiful volume in the Congressional Library at Washington is a Bible which was transcribed on parchment by a monk in the sixteenth century. The general lettering is in the German text, each letter is perfect and there is not a scratch or blot from lid to lid. Each chapter begins with a large illuminated letter, in which is drawn the figure of a saint, some incident of whom the chapter tells.

"Graveyard of North Pacific." The graveyard of the North Pacific is the somber but expressive name that was bestowed on the west coast of Vancouver Island so many years ago that the identity of the man who named it has been lost. Time has not changed the significance of that name, and the harvest of death and destruction of property still go on.

Tell Fortunes by Kites.

On the flat housetops of Morocco girls may often be seen flying kites which they believe will give an augury of their future. If the kite remains unbroken good fortune is in store for them; if mishap befall it, evil days will be their portion. Their faith in the oracle is so great that mishap to the kite plunges them in dejection.

Obvious.

This is a Chinese saying: When the sword is rusty, the plow bright, the prisons empty, the granaries full, the steps of the temple worn down and those of the law courts grass-grown, when doctors go about, the bakers on horseback, and the men of letters drive in their own carriages, then the empire is well governed.

Goldenrod the Favorite.

Twenty-one of the forty-five states of the Union have adopted a state flower. The goldenrod has proved to be the favored one in four states—Alabama, Missouri, Nebraska and North Dakota. None has taken the trailing arbutus (May flower), and it is suggested that New Hampshire choose it.

Where Frogs Are Raised.

The states supplying the largest quantity of frogs for the market are California, Missouri, New York, Arkansas, Maryland, Ohio, Virginia and Indiana. Frogs are very plentiful in New York, but they bring less than those of the Western States because of their small size.

Used in Disseminating News.

Of all the paper produced in the United States, New York uses one-eighth for its newspapers. It is estimated that all the paper mills of this country turn out about 4,000 tons each day, and of this the newspaper presses of its chief metropolises consume 500 tons.

Decries American Women.

A Hungarian writer, Dr. Emil Reich, declares that the number of distinguished women workers in America in the domains of art, letters and science is ludicrously small compared with the number of brilliant women authors and women painters of Europe.

Old Notion of Sea Serpent.

Olaus Magnus wrote in the middle ages of a sea serpent 200 feet long and 20 feet thick which haunted rocks and caves near the sea coast, the old writer adding, "and he puts up his head on high like a pillar and catcheth away men, and he devours them."

Bigger Men Than Our Ancestors.

"The young man of to-day has outstripped the men of past generations, in so far as physical development is considered. The change is due to the love of athletic recreation." This is the consensus of opinion among American tailors.

Digging for Thorium.

Thorium, which gives light from a gas mantle its intensity, was a curiosity twenty years ago, but hundreds of persons are now making a living digging it in North Carolina, and the annual output is worth $500,000.

Diamonds Denounced.

There is a preacher in Manchester who has been expressing his regret that Britain spends £3,000,000 a year on diamonds, "a stone whose history is associated with every class of crime and vice."

Licorice in Tobacco.

Americans buy about $500,000 worth of licorice root annually in Smyrna. The licorice from it is used almost entirely in chewing tobacco.

Must Pay for Crests.

For wearing a crest upon a finger ring without a license, a man was fined $5.75 in a London court the other day.

Coal for War Purposes.

France has kept 200,000 tons of coal stored at Toulon since 1898, to be ready in case war should break out.

Male and Female Vanity.

Women are no more vain of their looks than men of their ability. If you wish to flatter a man it is sufficient to say: "In business every one recognizes your genius."—Anna Woodward.

Ascertain Your Feelings.

Schopenhauer said: "If you want to find out your real opinion of any one, observe the impression—made upon you by the first sight of a letter from him."

KING OF THE GRIZZLIES IS DEAD.

Biography of "Old Mose."

Age, 45 years.
Weight, 1,000 pounds.
Killed: 4 men, 800 head of cattle, horses, colts, etc.
Shot over a hundred times.
Reward offered for him for thirty years.
Cost of his depredations, $30,000.
Identified by toe missing on right hind foot.

"Old Mose," the most dreadful grizzly bear in the United States, met death befitting his long life of murder and outrage on a recent Saturday evening. His last stand was made in a quaking asp draw within the confines of his home among the broken rocks at the northwest corner of Black Mountain. He died befitting his rank and lay down in his last sleep with imposing grandeur.

Shot through and through times without number, baited with every device and cunning known to the trapper; chased by demon posses of cowboys and ranchers bent upon his extermination—in all this he has met them with superior generalship, cunning unexcelled, and knowledge supreme for thirty-five years by actual record of the cattlemen of the middle southern Colorado country. His taking away is due solely to years of training of a pack of incomparable bear dogs, who know their quarry, his habits, mode of attack, and retreat as well as this magnificent animal himself. He was handicapped by this band of intelligent trailers and knew not their circling, pinching, running away tactics.

The talk of the dogs brought the old monarch to a standstill with wonder and amazement. He did not even strike at them, but sat still, and seemed to ponder and try to unravel their unknown and untried quality. So he sat and looked and looked without a growl or even a passing of the murderous paws. J. W. Anthony knew the language of his pack with wonderment, this hunter with over forty bear pelts to his credit, and his amazement grew as he watched the unusual action of the monstrous grizzly.

"Now, what in thunder is that old fellow figuring on? Never in my life did I see such an attitude of utter indifference by any bear toward my dogs," muttered Anthony.

"I'll just take a shot—lemme see—about eighty yards."

Bang went the carbine, carrying a soft nosed 30-40. "Old Mose ignored the shot, although it went through his jaw and cut a quaking asp on the other side. "Too low—damn that dog, that was in the way."

The bleeding wound did not even interest the massive animal, and he did not as much as look toward the man with the gun. His interest was centered upon the four dogs snapping around his immense bulk. Likely he said to himself, "You are not the first that has put bullets in me. I'll attend to you later—at present I must investigate these funny acting little dogs."

The second shot went into the left shoulder and passed clearly through, and still he stood speculating upon the little fighters—merely glancing at the man who was firing the death dealing missiles into his body.

The third shot brought the seeming inanimate body into lightning activity. The bullet struck a quaking asp and threw splinters in his face. A sweep of his mighty paw directed at one of the dogs cost him a claw, and, missing the dogs, he uprooted an aspen that was six inches in diameter. But never a snarl nor a growl from this king of all grizzlies. In a leisurely manner, without even condescending to notice the dogs, he started at a slow walk toward Anthony.

The hunter fired his fourth shot, which went a bit high through the shoulders, and Old Mose turned and went back to the point where the dogs had stopped him and sat up for a moment, apparently surveying the country, and acted as though there was neither man nor dogs within a thousand miles. The fifth and sixth shots were hurled into the carcass, both taking effect through the shoulders—and never a howl, growl or snarl did he make.

He took his medicine in the same manner as he had administered his power for thirty-five years—neither giving nor asking quarter. The sixth shot did not bring forth the expected, the awful death cry of the bear, nor did he by sign or symptom show cowardice or anger.

Looking steadfastly at the man refilling the magazine of his rifle for a few short seconds, he at last made up his mind that it would be policy to first kill him and then pursue his uninterrupted analysis of these strange dogs that had the courage to snap at him and tear bunches of fur from his incomparable coat. Slowly he started toward the hunter, never leaving the awkward, slow walk of his species.

His eyes burned as with fire and his coming was terrorizing to any but the seasoned bear killer. When sixty feet away he lowered his head with an unsounded challenge, and, as his head was bended low, the hunter drew bead at the point between the ears, and, taking a long breath, gently pressed the trigger.

Slowly, as the mountain pine begins to fall under the woodman's ax, Old Mose, the terror of all man and beast alike, began to settle down. Slowly, slowly, with neither sound nor quiver, the massive king gave up his life as he had lived it, in blood and violence. He met his death with honor, willing to the last to measure his great strength and cunning in mortal combat with that of the hunter who dared to stand before him and dispute his reign.

Jake Ratcliffe, an old time bear hunter, camped on his trail for years and years. In 1886, with a party of hunters, he got on Old Mose's trail. For ten days they followed fresh signs all the time. Up in a rough gulch on Tallahassee Ratcliffe found his den, and while peering down into the box gulch fell. In a second Old Mose came out of the rocks, twenty-five feet away, and charged the intruder.

Ratcliffe fired his Old Henry. He was unable to load and fire again. The bear took one fell swoop of his iron arm and paw and Ratcliffe fell to the ground, his scalp torn completely from his head and five gashes down his back, stripping the flesh from the bones. He fell fainting and Old Mose walked away.

When he revived he began to call and his companion heard him, but, unfortunately, so did the bear, and with another rush he was upon his victim and began his murder. Ratcliffe was cuffed and bit until he was a mass of broken bones and mutilated flesh. Old Mose hit the trail, and when the hunters found their friend they gave up all thought of the bear. The last words he uttered were: "Boys, don't hunt that bear."

On Cameron mountain a skeleton was found with a rusty rifle beside it and Old Mose was credited with the death. Last summer a skeleton was found on Thirty-Nine-Mile Mountain—that of a cowboy, the boots and spurs were beside the bones, and as this was the stamping ground of this mammoth he was duly credited with the murder.

Old Mose received his appellation from the manner in which he moseyed toward men he would happen upon—his slowness in leaving a carcass when fired upon and his general habit of just plain "mosey." He has caused no small amount of trouble and many are the partly eaten steers that this bear has pulled down—of course, he was always known by the missing toe of the right hind foot, and could be easily identified.

A strange thing comes to light with the passing of the king. There has been following in his wake of murder a cinnamon bear that, measured from the reach on their several rubbing posts, showed but a difference of eight inches in this cinnamon's height and that of the dead bear. This bear has never consorted with the old bandit, but has carefully followed him and taken the leavings. But never have their trails crossed; Mr. Cinnamon has invariably been in the rear.

WEAKNESS OF STRONG MEN.

No One Absolutely Free from All Manner of Defect.

Those who are seeking through study of superior men to make themselves at least less inferior are often puzzled and baffled by the discovery of characteristics that seem absolutely incompatible with greatness. There is hardly a great man whose life is at all accurately known in whom there was not a weakness that would destroy an ordinary man—sometimes mental weakness, as utter lack of judgment; sometimes moral weakness; again, physical weakness.

But is there on record a single case of a great man who had not through his character a certain toughness of fiber which made him free from the common weakness of whining and rushing about for refuge at the first black lift of adversity? Is not that fundamental sense, of insecurity, or inability to stand alone, the great enemy we all have to fight? Is it not the enemy that drives some to the false courage of drink, others to sink and crawl along the byways of indirection and crime, many, many others to resign the guidance of their destinies to some master or masters with hardly an effort to thing or do for themselves?—Saturday Evening Post.

WHY HE WAS NOT DISTURBED.

Clergyman's Explanation Disconcerted Would-Be Joker.

A clergyman who was traveling stopped at a hotel much frequented by wags and jokers.

The host, not being used to having a clergyman at his table, looked at him with surprise; the guests used all their rally of wit upon him without eliciting a remark.

The clergyman ate his dinner quietly, apparently without observing the gibes and sneers of his neighbors.

One of them at last, in despair of his forbearance, said to him: "Well, I wonder at your patience! Have you not heard all that has been said to you?"

"Oh, yes; but I am used to it. Do you know who I am?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I will inform you. I am chaplain of a lunatic asylum." Such remarks have no effect upon me."—Short Stories.

One Secret of Carnegie's Success.

Business rivals of Andrew Carnegie were at one time helpless to account for his ability to undersell them in whatever market they turned to. They sent experts quietly to look over his work and report. Mr. Carnegie, it is said, heard of their presence. He invited them to an inspection, with himself as guide, and at last offered to show them the secret of his success. He took them into a room lined with books and reports, where a dozen clerks were at work on documents and figures. This room represented an expenditure of $80,000 a year. "It is worth that," said Mr. Carnegie, "for a business man to know at any moment all the details of his business."—World's Work.

"Stumped" the Head Waiter.

Jesse Lewison was dining at the most fashionable restaurant in the metropolis with a western millionaire who is very fond of joking. The latter summoned the head waiter and said:

"I presume everything in this place is the best that money can buy?"

"Most assuredly, 'sir," replied the waiter, with a dignity that might have aroused the envy of a United States senator.

"Well, that's all right, but when you run short, what substitute do you use for terrapin?"

For once in his life that head waiter was "left at the post" and never tried for an answer.—New York Times.

The End of All Armies.

We may really be on the verge of the millennium, for M. Emile Guahini has come to the conclusion that it will soon be possible to destroy armies by lightning. Receiving a shock from a wireless telegraph apparatus through an umbrella, he experimented with a Ruhmkorff coil, and found that shocks could be transmitted through the air with moderate currents. He concludes that the energy of 1,000 horsepower, at 100,000 volts, could be concentrated by antennae so as to destroy life at a distance of twelve miles. The present difficulty, which he believes will be soon overcome, is that of controlling and directing the electric waves.

Speak No Words of Love.

When a Dyak of Borneo makes love he helps the girl in the hardest portion of her daily toil. If she smiles upon him, no matter how sweetly, he does not immediately respond, but waits until the next dark night. Then he steals to her house and wakens her as she lies asleep beside her parents. The parents, if they approve, make no sign, but sleep on—or pretend to. If the girl accepts his suit and takes from her lover the betel and sweetmeats he has brought her. That seals their betrothal and he departs as he came, neither speaking nor being spoken to.

Not Alone.

When our dear ones leave us One by one, Never on the strange path Do they go alone.

Swift as light from heaven, Swift as love, Comes the Lord to meet them, Hastening from above, Little child, or pilgrim, Worn and old, Do not have to wander Looking for the fold.

For the Christ who brought us Heaven's grace Takes their hand and guides them To his dwelling place.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Every Where.

Thrift in Sheep.

In the raising of sheep slight must at no time be lost of the necessity for keeping them thrifty. Some human beings may go without their breakfast and get along on a half ration, but this rule must not be applied to the sheep. The thrifty sheep is a healthy sheep, and one that can and will resist disease, because it is thrifty. Thrift means that there can be an increase in productiveness and in growth because the internal organs are working well. Both quantity and quality of gain come out of thrift. There is no better way to stave off disease than by thrift. There is no better way to help the sheep keep away intestinal parasites than by keeping it thrifty. This should be the first object of the intelligent flockmaster. Not only is the amount of mutton made governed by this matter of thrift, but even the quality of the wool is affected. The elements that go to make thriftiness in sheep are, first, good feed, and all of it that the sheep will eat and digest; second, good and pure water and enough of it; third, good shelter, which means a shelter not too close nor too open; and lastly, attention by the shepherd. One would think these to be self evident truths and that no attention would need to be called to them. Yet in the matter of food we know that it is quite a common custom on many of our farms to allow the sheep to care for themselves in the summer, even when the drouth has dried up the pasture so that it is a most difficult task for these animals to get enough to eat to appease their hunger. We have known such sheep pastured on the tops of mountains, where it was a long distance to any water supply, and the sheep would, of course, become very thirsty before taking their long journey to the spot of the mountain. In such a flock there can be little profit either in mutton or in wool. This condition is more likely to occur in late summer and early fall than at any other time.

The shepherd will then be hardly likely to notice the lack of thrift, as the wool is increasing slowly on the backs and sides of the sheep and the shrinking carcass is not seen. At this time of year too there is a tendency for the wool to grow long on account of the approaching cold weather, this being a provision of nature to protect the sheep against the cold of the coming winter. A flock so kept will be a disappointment to the farmer, for he will not be able to get either the weight of wool or of carcass he expected. His greatest disappointment will come when the carcasses are weighed, and he will fail to understand why sheep that seemed to be all right when on pasture should shrink so on dressing. If the pastures do not furnish enough feed at all times to keep the flock thrifty, it will pay well to watch the decadence of the feed in the pasture and supplement it by feed given at the barns.

The Power of Heredity. Man has greatly modified the forms and habits of all the animals that have been domesticated by him, yet he has not been able to eliminate certain traits that have come down through thousands of generations from the remote past. Even the house dog, furnished a bed to his liking, will turn round a number of times before lying down, just as did the wild dog, his remote ancestor, who had to do that to break down the tall grass for his bed. Even the cow on the range has not forgotten the habits of her remote progenitors and hides her calf in the bushes, though the careful herdsman will take care of it, and the cow knows it. Even the custom of the mare in nursing her foal a little at a time, but often is believed to come from habits developed by thousands and thousands of years of experience when the mare had to depend on herself to keep out of the way of ravenous animals. The colt would not be able to run fast with a full stomach and so the mother was watchful to give him a little at a time and keep him in running trim. If we have not been able in some thousands of years to eliminate such traits, how long must have been the period during which they were forming?

The Good Feeder.

The hide of the easy feeder should be of medium thickness and should be soft and mellow. The hair should be fine and thick, as this indicates good respiratory and circulatory organs within. The skin tells a more truthful tale of the ability of the steer to make the best use of food than most of us suppose. When the digestive organs lack strength and the circulation is poor and sluggish, the hide becomes thick and unyielding to the touch, and the hair is harsh and wiry. The head should be short, measuring from a line drawn across the eyes to the nose, and should be broad. This indicates the ability to masticate food. The large mouth is indicative nearly always of an ability to take care of a great deal of food. The nostrils will generally be large in an easy feeder, this indicating good-sized organs for breathing. This is of importance, as it is by means of the lungs that the carbon in the body of the animal is changed into carbonic acid gas, thus producing force in the change. Skillful feeders declare that steers that do not have these characteristics seldom give a good account of themselves in the feed lot, and, when sent to market, are a disappointment.

Married Life in Abyssinia.

In Abyssinia, a husband who can afford the expense is continually adding to his household of wives. As soon as his favorite begins to pall on him he deposes her for another. The new wife rules the house, dictates orders to the other wives, who, strange as it may seem, obey her without open remonstrance. If any of the former favorites ever cared for their lord they soon cease to be jealous of his affections. They know, too, that the time will surely come when they will be turned out into the streets to look for another master.

Show Surgical Operations.

Cinematograph records are now made of all operations performed by a certain famous physician and surgeon in Paris. He entered some time ago into an arrangement with an operator of the bioscope, who has taken pictures for the doctor on several occasions. It is stated that the records in question are invaluable as scientific documents. One of the surgeon's operations which has been cinematographed was that by which the link of flesh connecting the Hindu twins, Redica and Douding, was severed.

Old Soldier's Story.

Sonoma, Mich., June 13.—That even in actual warfare disease is more terrible than bullets is the experience of Delos Hutchins of this place. Mr. Hutchins as a Union soldier saw three years of service under Butler Barke in the Louisiana swamps, and as a result got crippled with rheumatism so that his hands and feet got all twisted out of shape, and how he suffered only a rheumatic will ever know. For twenty-five years he has been in misery, then one lucky day his druggist advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Of the result Mr. Hutchins says:

"The first two boxes did not help me much, but I got two more, and before I got them used up I was a great deal better. I kept on taking them and now my pains are all gone and I feel better than I have in years. I know Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure rheumatism."

When gratitude goes up it never comes back empty-handed. Fewer married men than bachelors commit suicide.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by E. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: E. J. Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over. Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health—I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. Yours very truly, MISS M. CARLEDGE, 533 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga. —$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proves genuineness cannot be produced.

TOLD IN CALIFORNIA.

Helping the kidneys is helping the whole body, for it is the kidneys that remove the poisons and waste from the body. Learning this simple lesson has made many sick men and women well.

Judge A. J. Fetter of 318 So. E. St., San Bernardino, Calif., says:—"For 18 years my kidneys were not performing their functions properly. There was some backache, and the kidney secretions were profuse, containing also considerable sediment. Finally the doctors said I had diabetes. Doan's Kidney Pills wrought a great change in my condition and now I sleep and feel well again."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Judge Fetter will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price 50 cents per box.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct., 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned.

Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered Kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Hubs, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."
