Eveline's Candidate

For Treasurer of Charlevoix County.

The Herald this week takes pleasure in presenting to its readers a good likeness of Daniel S. Payton, Republican candidate for treasurer of Charlevoix County and Eveline's popular supervisor. If the Republican party had searched the county over they could not have found a better or more efficient man to handle the finances of the county.

Mr. Payton is a southerner by birth, having been born in Louisville, Ky.

DANIEL S. PAYTON.

In 1856, He spent ten years of his life at Tombstone, Arizona, and came to Michigan and Charlevoix county in 1880. Shortly afterward he purchased a piece of timber land in Eveline township with about eight acres cleared. Here with his good wife, he has developed one of the finest farms in that township and now has over 70 acres cleared, principally through his own labors.

In 1895 the Republicans of Eveline elected Mr. Payton Supervisor of their township and, recognizing the merits of the man, have continued him in office ever since. He is the oldest member of the Supervisor Board in continuous service and has been twice honored by being elected Chairman of that body.

Four years ago the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society elected Mr. Payton president and, recognizing the merits in him that Eveline voters did, the Society has placed him at their head ever since.

Without doubt Mr. Payton will have one of the largest majorities of any of his colleagues in this fall's election.

Scissored Smiles.

In a cemetery there is a stone erected by a widow to her loving husband, bearing this inscription, "Rest in peace—until we meet again."

A country paper says the reason why the city boy often falls behind the country boy in the race for wealth and honor, is because there is no wood sheds in the city.

A few days ago a rather bashful young woman went into a store carrying three chickens. She inquired the price of chickens and at the same time put them on the counter. The clerk didn't know the chickens were there and asked if they would lay there. She bit her handkerchief and said: "No, sir; they are roosters."

An exchange is responsible for the story that a man of that place while plowing recently had his plow brought to a sudden halt. On investigation he found that it had struck a potato so large that it couldn't be moved.

Carmire (Tex.) New Century—Here's to the kicker, the faint-hearted kicker, the kickers so helpless and blue who always is crying and never is trying, some good for his town to do. No use to correct him nor need we expect him to get to the front like a man, for while others rustle, he'll sit down and hustle objections to raise to each plan.

Vocal Music Lessons.

Mrs. Jessie Dicken Reed, of the faculty of the Ann Arbor U. of M. School of Music is prepared to give private lessons in voice culture. The lady's time is limited here so those contemplating taking a course should see her at once. Her residence is with Dr. H. W. Dicken and family.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

I. C. S. means, I Can Succeed in the International Correspondence Schools. The only requirement for matriculation is the ability to read and write. All else they will teach you. Advertising, Publicity and Business courses. All the Engineering and Mechanical courses, Art, Letters, Mathematics, in fact 178 different departments. They do not teach by the lesson or term but give each student full instructions till he is fully qualified. Mr. B. F. Hall of Traverse City will be here all the week of July 25 and will show you how to get started.

THE RETURN OF MR. DOOLEY.

With the issue of Sunday, July 10, The Free Press began the publication of a new series of the famous Dooley sketches. Nearly two years ago, owing to other engagements, Mr. F. P. Dunne, the author of the sketches, discontinued them. During the years in which they had been published they won a higher degree of popularity than any other newspaper or magazine feature; and ever since their stoppage Mr. Dunne has been persistently urged to revive the sayings of the genial humorist-philosopher. This he has at last consented to do, and The Free Press has to be chosen as the medium for their dissemination in Michigan. It is the intention of Mr. Dunne to keep in pretty close touch with current events, and his admirers may expect to be entertained every Sunday, for an indefinite period, by his inimitable humor and keen satire, upon subjects of living interest.

COMMON COUNCIL.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

CONDUCTED BY M. J. WRAGG

Mr. Wragg invites contributions of any new ideas that readers of this department may wish to present.

SOW RUTABAGAS THIS MONTH.

Those who have never used root crops for swine will find the rutabagas (belonging to the turnip family) an excellent thing to grow.

Mr. J. L. McGrew of Redfield, Iowa, writes under date of May 30th: "Dear Sir—Please let me know when is the best time to trim one-year-old apple trees."

We are not certain whether Mr. McGrew is alluding to the manner of growing trees in the nursery row or handling them after they are planted out in the orchard.

We are glad to see that there is an inclination on the part of tree planters to plant small trees, because we have always contended that small trees, when given good attention and care, will give better results and less loss than to plant larger trees.

Do not neglect to read the papers because you are busy, but keep in touch with the world as much as possible. It will make your burdens seem lighter, and add greatly to the zest of life.

A moderate outlay in making the premises attractive brings profitable returns by enhancing the value of the property, and in that way, without taking into consideration the refining influence upon the occupants, will prove a profitable investment.

The question has been raised in an exchange as to the age at which stallions are the most useful. The answer to this question should be the same as applies to all kinds of live stock.

APPLIANCES FOR SPRING.

The poultryman should have a complete outfit of his own, especially for the poultry department. The foot-cutter, which shaves or cuts beets, carrots, cabbage or any kind of vegetables, will prepare food of this character in such a manner as will permit the fowls to easily pick the food to pieces.

For years we have warned farmers against the "creamery shark." This animal goes about in man's clothing, urging the farmers of a neighborhood to combine and build a creamery or canning factory.

GRIND THE FEED.

While there is considerable difference of opinion as to the advisability of grinding grain for some farm animals, it is generally conceded that it pays to grind for the dairy herd.

It is becoming so important now to find out what is the most profitable method of farming, fruit growing or trucking, that each locality should take means to have at least a few acres set apart for experiment or demonstration purposes.

The popular horse for the army seems to be one of the pony order; the progeny of a thoroughbred sire and a dam of the pony type.

In growing horses the aim with not a few is to give them very little grain. The object is to keep down expenses in production. While it would be possible to overdo in the matter of feeding grain to colts, the mistake in nearly all instances is found on the other side—they do not get enough of grain to make them grow sufficiently, consequently they do not attain that size which they would otherwise have, nor do they attain full size so quickly.

THE POTATO CROP.

One hundred millions of dollars is an immense sum of money, and yet it is no more than the market value of the potato crop of this country in a good year.

In potato growing, the market is the first consideration. Where it is good the soil must indeed be bad if it can not be so fitted that the local supply of this crop, at least for early summer and fall, may not be produced at a profit.

It is coming to be more and more apparent that if live stock is to be kept on our farms with as much diversity as could be desired, the cows must be milked. An abundant supply of skim milk is a splendid thing, not only for calves intended for the dairy, but also for calves intended for making beef.

A writer in one of the daily papers argues that a merchant is justified in selling adulterated goods in order to compete with others. His reasoning is that if the other merchant sells such goods at a lower price than you can buy pure goods you must compete with him on his own grounds.

The best time to do a good portion of the cultivating of the corn crop is before you plant the corn. It is better to delay planting for a few days, and spend the time putting the soil in the proper condition than it is to plant in a poorly prepared seed bed.

Butter is a condensed product. In dairying large quantities of coarse fodders and grain are put into mercantile condition, which can be readily transported. For $1-100 pounds of butter can be laid down in Chicago for instance, and is worth at that point $18.

A man in Michigan is said to be doing a flourishing business selling a powder which is to be placed in a hole bored in a fruit tree, for the purpose of preventing fungous diseases.

Do not do business with a man who knows more about your business, or thinks he does, than you do yourself, or a man who is always telling you about what big things he has done, how many tons, thousands, carloads, and what not he has sold in a short time.

IS FREAK OF NATURE.

Man in England a Peculiar Case of Arrested Development.

There is a young man in England who at the age of 24 is developing at the rate of only one-sixth of that of the average human being. At present he is learning his alphabet and can count up to ten only.

New Ornament for Women. To remove the sorrow which many women feel at being unable to wear more than one pendant on her neck at a time, a new ornament has just been introduced in Paris in the shape of a jewel for the back of the head.

For Baby's Safety.

This ingenious arrangement is found in many English country cottages, says the London Mail. The ring is movable and the little one is quite free to romp without danger of getting near the open fire.

Soldiers' Warm Meals.

Tinned meats for the Russian troops are prepared by a process which enables the contents of each tin to be served hot without a fire. This boon is secured by having the ordinary tin filled with food "jacketed" in patent tins.

Dog Had Charmed Life.

A peculiar incident was witnessed on the Admiralty pier, Dover, England, the other day. A dog belonging to a local tradesman ran barking at the engine of the boat service.

Mosquito Lore.

The malaria bearing mosquito attaches itself to a wall with this stand off air.

Champion Egg Eater.

By consuming thirty eggs, six of them boiled hard, E. O. Oyer of Canaan, N. H., established a reputation for eating that will undoubtedly remain unshared for some time to come.

JEST AND JOLLITY

Burdensome Responsibility. The new office boy stood beside his employer's desk, waiting for orders. The employer, who was new to the office boys, turned with a smile of kindly discipline.

A Pleasant Doctrine.

Forgone—What is reciprocity? Why, suppose I kissed you and you kissed me in return; why, that would be reciprocity.

Explanation.

Bangs—Funny about you. You laughed as though you would split at that joke in the second act; but when I told it to you a week or so ago it didn't seem to strike you as a bit comical.

The Better Man.

"The last time I passed through here," said the drummer, "your editor and the Rev. Bill Gunning were having quite a religious discussion. I guess the editor, after all, was just as good a man as the minister."

New Kind of Mother-in-Law.

"You're one of the few men I have met who don't object to his mother-in-law paying a long visit."

Her Proof.

"Do you know anything about hypnotism?" asked the girl in the pink waist.

Fatal Oversight.

"Patriotic songs? Huh!" snorted the publisher, handing back the manuscript.

Hint.

The Lady—Mercy on us! Why are you sitting there making that queer noise?"

The Bum—"Aw, I'm a-imitatin' er robin, lady, thinkin' dat maybe youse'd come to de window and throw me a few crumbs, missus!"

Like the Real Thing.

"Ah!" sighed the elderly visitor, "would that I were a little girl again, like you."

As Others See Us.

Biggs—What do you think of young Smyth's bride? Diggs—Is she wealthy? Biggs—Very. Diggs—Then he must have married her money and invited her to the wedding.

A SING OF AGE.

In your childhood days you worried
Over nothing, even rain,
And for nothing ever scurried
That some shelter you might gain,
All the weather prophetic errors
Were forgotten in a trice;
In the snow there were no terrors,
And you rather liked the ice.

Heat or cold did not distress you,
Or the changes e'er dismay;
Nothing would at all impress you,
Just so long as you could play,
There were games for cold December,
There was sport for pleasant June,
And all seasons, you remember,
Brought to you some pleasing boon.

But, with passing years, you worry
Over every trifling change,
And from home to office hurry,
Grumbling o'er the climate's range;
Feeling heat that's due to-morrow,
And dissatisfied to-day;
Finding time to trouble borrow
O'er the things to come your way.

Just remember, sir, that whether
You complain of heat or cold,
When you growl about the weather
You are surely getting old.

By JOSE GARCIA y MARISCAL

I.
"Well, there's one thing we must do together, Alice," said Mrs. Downs. "If your father and you have so positively arranged to leave Rome next Monday, I'm going to take you to see Gilbert Upton's studio. I have a half-hour in prospect with my dressmaker at three, and it's nearly three already. Now, you hurry on your things, and I'll tell you how we'll arrange it. I'll drive you to Upton's studio—it's on a ground floor, and open to the public, so you can go in freely. Then I'll hurry on to Mme. Bona's—she'll not keep me long—and join you again at the studio."

II.
"He's not here," remarked Mrs. Downs, who had alighted from the carriage for a moment in order to introduce her friend to the young sculptor. She raised the knocker a second time. "Well, the door's always open," she went on, pushing it ajar. "Visitors come and go so much that Mr. Upton never locks it. The old concierge is always about somewhere. Now, just wander around, Alice, and enjoy everything you see, and I'll be back in not over half an hour."

Miss Acton entered the large, dim, artistic apartment, and was soon absorbed in eager and admiring scrutiny. It was unquestionably true that this man's work had not been overpraised. Each separate work had meaning and interest and showed a something within and beyond the white, cold marble and the dim clay.

In her tour of the apartment, she had come to a heavy, narrow portiere. Supposing that it merely hid some choice figure in a recess, she innocently pushed it aside. It proved to be the entrance to the sculptor's inner workshop. There was no one within, but the girl was abashed at her involuntary intrusion, and was about to drop the portiere precipitately when—

"What was this before her? Her own face chiseled in the marble? She paused in a shock of utter astonishment. There could be no possible mistake. The bust before her, in this sculptor's workshop in Rome, was herself. Even the details of arrangement of hair she recognized, after a moment, as her very own of three or four years before.

Forgetful of place, time, and all else, the bewildered visitor sat gazing at the face before her, and trying to puzzle out the mystery. She did not hear the outer door of the studio open, and so deep was her pained abstraction that not until the newcomer's masculine footsteps were almost at her side and the portiere was lifted did she turn with a start.

"His work is really wonderful!"

To Alice Acton, the new surprise was if possible greater than the one which held her. She sprang to her feet.

"Blair Lewes!" she exclaimed.

"Alice!" he uttered, equally astounded, and he stood, his right hand holding aside the curtain.

"Are you?—was it?" she began.

"Yes, I'm Gilbert Upton as far as the thought makes me—oh, what shall I Rome is concerned," said the other, recovering himself, and with an attempt at lightness.

"I don't understand," she said. "Well, after that affair at the bank, you know," he returned, "my own name was rather in the way. Those things get about even over here."

"And so you—"

"So I began all over. Took a new name: came over to Rome; you know how I've always loved the chisel."

"I know," she murmured. "You ought never to have—"

"Tried financiering instead?" he finished, sardonically. "No. And after I—after things—well, after I luckily got out of that little affair with my liberty—I determined on a brand new start. And I've made it, Alice," he went on, eagerly. "I've gone into this—"

He motioned with his left hand toward the studio behind him, "with a perfect passion for work and achievement. And I'm succeeding, too," he added, with a touch of pride. "Rome has taken me up handsomely. Blair Lewes is a thing of the past. I'm Gilbert Upton now."

She had turned half abstractedly, during his words, and was gazing again at the face on the pedestal.

"You had no right to it," she flashed out, imperiously. "How did you come—how did you dare—to make it?"

He moved nervously; then he looked at her with defiance.

"Because I loved you, Alice," he spoke out, impetuously, "because I love you now, and always have and shall and must. You turned me down, almost contemptuously, too, months before that bank matter; but it couldn't change my feeling. And after that—well, that money exposure—dashed any hopes I might have had remaining. I came away with one good thing left in me anyway—love for you!—Other things were gone, but I've clung to that desperately. And this face—I've put my very heart and soul into it," he burst out passionately. "It wasn't to be for other eyes; it was my own, my very own. I had an old-time photograph of you, and with that and memory I've put spare minutes and hours and even days into that one thing. I never thought to see you, yourself, again; but I persuaded myself that perhaps—possibly—"

"Oh, Alice," he cried, holding his hands toward her. "I'm not good at bottom; I know it as well as you, but I've begun over again. I've been pretty straight since that time; and seeing you here before me fairly drives me to ask the old question again. If you only knew—"

The girl's eyes, at first sorrowful, had grown brighter with surprise and anger.

"Stop!—Blair!" she burst in. "Do you suppose for a single instant that, knowing you as I do, I can possibly listen to such words? Why the very thought makes me—oh, what shall I say? What can I say that is strong enough, unmistakable enough, without being hard and harsh?" She moved toward the doorway, and he instinctively held the curtain further aside to let her pass into the studio. "I don't want to discourage your new life work," she went on. "Your secret is safe with me. You are Gilbert Upton. I am glad if your life is a better one. But I am no part of it. I will not sanction your making me part of it—in thought or by image. To the face in there you have no right by consent of mine."

She paused at the studio's outer door.

"Will you please tell Mrs. Downs," she added, "that I could not stay?"

III.

As the wide door closed, leaving him alone, Blair Lewes made a sudden, half-dazed movement toward it, and then, dropping cowering into the nearest chair, hid his face in his hands.

Presently he rose, slowly and wearily. Going to the portiere, he lifted a heavy metal mallet that stood near, and with dogged, repeated blows shivered the bust into pieces.

WHISKEY NOT ALONE MEAT AND DRINK

But Washing and Lodging.

Mrs. John A. Logan, who has succeeded Miss Clara Barton in the presidency of the Red Cross, was educated in Kentucky.

In condemning intemperance Mrs. Logan said recently:

"Alcohol vitiates the mind that the degradation it imposes on its victims hardly seems like degradation to them. The woe of these men are changed to blessings in their besotted brains."

"For instance," said Mrs. Logan, smiling, "there used to live in Kentucky an old man called Fawcett Jones. Fawcett drank to excess, and he used to declare that whiskey was meat and drink to him. But one hot summer night he drank so much that he fell into a puddle on the way home, and in this puddle he lay snoring until dawn."

"A clergyman who had risen early found him with his head in the mud and his legs and body in the water, and the good man woke him up—"

"Ah," he said, "so whiskey is meat and drink to you, is it, Fawcett?"

"Fawcett rose to his feet and began to wring out his clothes."

"It certainly is," he said, "and washing and lodging, too, sir."

Emperor Menelik Flattered.

Sir John Harrington, who has been made minister plenipotentiary from King Edward's court to that of Menelik of Abyssinia, was appointed British agent in Abyssinia in 1898. He has done many things to establish cordial relations between the two countries. One of his great achievements was to persuade her late majesty to speak into a phonograph a message to Menelik and his empress. It was the only time she ever consented to such an experiment, and it was done then on the express understanding that when the message had once been spoken the record should be destroyed. Menelik was so excited when he heard the great queen's message in her own voice that he repeatedly stopped the machine in order to have a salute fired and his empress was so flattered to hear her own name mentioned that she called out her bodyguard as a mark of respect.

Children Still.

We seek no more a daily prize,
Nor triumph in our dreams;
We prize the lustre of the sides,
So faint and low the gleams.
Yet comes anew, when others play,
And are we dull and old to-day,
Or only children still?

We loved the battle cry, but now
We are not overbold,
Their wisdom on the weary brow,
And in our hearts the cold,
Yet in the light of our eyes,
We lose the wintry chill,
And then we are not overwise,
But simple children still.

The visions of our glorious youth
Have faded long ago;
We hope no more to find the truth,
And should we care to know?
Not ours to scale the viewless height,
But there's a purple hill,
And still we shudder at the sight,
And climb as children still.

How much of all the good we planned
Is perfect by the hour,
Who watched the lifting of God's hand,
And waits for his "well done,"
But when the children whom we love,
The good we missed fulfill,
Thank God our hearts prevail to prove
The hearts of children still.
—Hugh Macaulay, in London Saturday Review.

A. Dejection.

The late Channing Clapp of Boston was for some years after the civil war a cotton planter in the south. Mr. Clapp had on his plantation a little boy in buttons called "Sam." "Sam" one afternoon pointed to a bottle on his master's bureau and said: "Mars Channing, am 'dat hair oil?" "Mercy no, Sam, 't's glue," said Mr. Clapp. "I guess dass why I can't git mah cap off," said "Sam" thoughtfully.

Denounces Khaki Uniforms.

Mayor Jameson said in the British parliament the other day that the sudden resort to khaki uniforms was a "senseless craze." Because the Boers wore khaki and slouch hats the whole army was slapped into similar costume. If the Zulus had beaten it, the army would have gone about in feathers and paint. Three streaks of paint and an ostrich feather would have been the uniform of a field marshal.

China Not Overcrowded.

A recent census of China shows that that country, crowded with "teeming millions," has a population of 103 to the square mile. Belgium has 220 to the square mile, Great Britain 130, and Germany 105.

RAILROAD FROM CAPE TO CAIRO

Pet Project of the Late Cecil Rhodes Rapidly Nearing a Reality—Tourist Tickets on Line Now Being Issued

Writing in 1900, Ewart S. Grogan, a plucky young traveler who had just completed a journey from the Cape to Cairo, Cecil Rhodes said:

"Every one supposes that the railway is being built with the only object that a human being may be able to get in at Cairo and get out at Cape Town. That is, of course, ridiculous. The object is to cut Africa through the center, and the railway will pick up trade all along the route. The junctions to the East and West coasts which will occur in the future will be outlets for the traffic obtained along the route of the line as it passes through the center of Africa. At any rate, up to Bulawayo, where I am now, it has been a payable undertaking, and I still think it will continue to be so as we advance into the far interior. We propose now to go on and cross the Zambesi just below the Victoria Falls. I should like to have the spray of the water over the carriages."

If Cecil Rhodes were still alive, he would see this last wish realized, for the railway from the south has been carried from Bulawayo through the Wankie coal fields to the edge of those wonderful falls, which are twice the height and more than double the width of the Falls of Niagara, while a bridge consisting of a single span of 500 feet is now being constructed over the gorge below the falls, and will be completed by the end of the year.

The bridge will have the distinction of being the highest in the world, the rail level being 420 feet above the document to choose the western route, and accordingly the line northward from Bulawayo was begun in May, 1901. Last year it reached Wankie, a distance of 200 miles, and the additional seventy-five miles to the falls have been constructed in less than a twelvemonth. Tourist tickets to the Victoria Falls are being issued and among the visitors next year will be 250 members of the British Association, who have accepted the invitation of the British South African company to pay a visit to Niagara's rival.

Starting from the south, the railway is now completed from Cape Town to Victoria Falls, a distance of 1,635 miles, and a further stretch of 350 miles in a northeasterly direction to Broken-Hill Mine, 100 miles beyond the Kafue river, will be begun at an early date, the contract having already been let. This section, which is to be completed by the end of March, 1905, will tap a district rich in copper, lead and zinc deposits, beyond which is a region with vast supplies of rubber. There will then remain only a section of 450 miles to complete the connection with Kituta, at the southern end of Lake Tanganyika, where the Chartered Company's sway terminates. Survey work here is now in progress, and there is no doubt that within a few years this link will be made.

From this point onward, however, Rhodes' scheme has had to be modified as the nature of the country around the chain of lakes stretching from the Zambesi to the Nile came to be known. As Grogan pointed out, Lake Tanganyika is hemmed in by river or fifty-five feet higher than the dome of St. Paul's. While the construction of the great span is in progress the rails for the extension northward will be conveyed across by aerial gear to avoid delay.

It was originally intended to carry the line from Bulawayo due north through the Mafungabusi coal district, crossing the Zambesi at the Kariba Gorge. It was found, however, that the country north of the Zambesi at this point offers immense difficulties for railway construction, and that the value of the coal deposits is not to be compared with that of the Wankie coal fields.

The certainty of a large tourist traffic if the line were carried to the Victoria Falls formed a further inducing factor in the decision to alter the route. The Victoria Falls, steep mountains offering well-nigh insurmountable difficulties to railway construction, but on the other hand, the lake itself offers a magnificent waterway of 400 miles on the direct line between the Cape and Cairo. It may be taken as granted, therefore, that this part of the journey will be made by water, and that passengers will be carried by steamboat from Kituta to Usambara, at the north end of the lake. From here to Lake Kivu is 90 miles, offering no serious obstacle to a railway beyond a rise in level of 2,000 feet. Lake Kivu is sixty miles in length, and this sheet of water also is surrounded by high and precipitous mountains, so that another break in the line will have to be made and the waterway utilized.

Bribery.

Russell Sage was in early life an errand boy in a Troy grocery store.

At a certain directors' meeting, reverting to his boyhood days in Troy, Mr. Sage said:

"I remember well a frequent visit to our Troy grocery, a rich young farmer from Schaghticoke. He had fallen in love with a New York girl who had spent the summer in Schaghticoke, and in the autumn he called on her in the city and proposed marriage.

The story goes that, as soon as she refused him, the young man put on his hat and stalked out of the house. Once outside, though, an idea struck him, and, returning, he said: "Would the tower of Europe be any inducement?"

Crude Petroleum as Fuel.

A vessel using crude petroleum for fuel has made a successful voyage from California to New York. This craft has steamed nearly 13,000 miles smoothly and well in fifty-one days, keeping up a fair average of speed. The oil took up one-quarter less room than an equivalent quantity of coal would have taken, thus saving cargo space, and it was not necessary to stop at any point in order to renew the supply. In fact, upon her arrival at a Brooklyn pier this steamship, the Nebraska, had sufficient fuel in reserve for a passage across the Atlantic.

A RIDE IN THE DEEP.

Boatman Has Devised New Form of Entertainment.

Now there comes a Boston Jules Verne who grimly promises the amusement-loving public a rare "treat" in the way of entertainment. In truth, it would appear that the most fastidious could find no cause for complaint after trying this thing.

In brief, the affair is a sort of "shoot the chutes," except that the car in which the victims have paid to ride is wholly submerged in the water. To add to the excitement, there is no top to the car boat, the theory being that

The Submarine Boat.

It will dash through the pond so fast that the water will not have time to get in on the occupants. The inventor promises to take the first ride in the thing if his wife will let him.

CURES WROUGHT BY MUSIC.

Notable Cases Where Sweet Sounds Were Beneficial.

From the days of Saul and David music has no doubt been the means of alleviating, if not actually curing, many serious cases of mental disease. Modern experience has proved this conclusively, and many instances may be quoted from ancient history.

Pythagoras commended music in the treatment of the insane, and Thales, when a pestilence ravaged Sparta, found in music his most powerful means of combating it. Heracles soothed maniacs by it, and Theophrastus held that even the bites of venomous reptiles were rendered less fatal by subjecting victims to the influence of melody.

When Philip of Spain was in a morbid and desponding condition, Fari-nelli, the vocalist, was sent for by the queen, with a party of musicians, to sing and play in the adjoining room. The effect was a speedy and rapid cure.

Both Buckman and Hafeland relate instances in which music has cured cases of St. Vitus' dance, and Becker and Schneider demonstrated practically its influence in different cases of hysteria.

Sir Henry Hallford has chronicled the case of a mad Yorkshireman who was restored to sanity by the use of the violin six weeks after its introduction.—Montreal Herald.

Ancient British Stronghold for Sale.

Dunstanburg castle is about to be offered for sale by auction. It was first a British stronghold, then a Roman fortress, and at a much later period was garrisoned for Queen Margaret, after the battle of Hexham, when it was besieged and taken after an assault lasting three days. The legend of "Sir Guy, the Seeker," told in a ballad by M. G. Lewis, is connected with the castle. "Dunstan diamonds" are crystals found in the neighborhood. A deep chasm in the rock at the east of the castle is known as the "Rumble Churn." In rough weather the sea rushes in, and great clouds of spray are thrown up.—London Chronicle.

Women in Foot Races.

Recently women's footraces at Treptow, near Berlin, caused a great deal of interest. Two of the competitors boldly donned jerseys and knickerbockers, but the remainder ran in skirts. Several appeared on the track in high-heeled boots. A considerable number dropped from exhaustion within fifty yards of the starting point. One sprained her ankle, another fell and broke her arm, and a third fainted from excitement before the signal was given to go. Most of the competitors appeared to be absolutely untrained.

A hen near East Hampton, Conn., recently hatched out a red-tailed hawk from an egg which had been placed in her nest. The hen shows motherly affection for the hawk, but she may turn against it when she discovers its nature.

Charlevoix County Fair, September 27-28-29.

One of the peculiarities noticeable in insane asylums is that a very inmate always insists that he is "sane."

The country will not bestow in making its choice between Roosevelt and a Record and Parker and a Promise.

The State Teacher's Institute which is to be held here the first eight days in August will bring to our village a large number of teachers and others. All persons who can accommodate any of these teachers during their stay here will confer a favor on our County Com. of Schools, J. M. Tice by informing him either by letter or person, of the fact.

The Metropolitan Opera Co. announced last week for two nights' engagement at Lovelady Opera House, failed to appear. The company proved to be too large and expensive for the light business—the extreme hot weather has caused for the last week or two, and the pocketbook of the Manager run too low to warrant further moves without brightened prospects, so the company disbanded at Traverse City.

Below are the dates and route of the East Jordan Base Ball Team for the ensuing two weeks: Wednesday, July 20th at Petoskey. Thursday, at Kalkaska. Friday, at Thompsonville. Saturday, at Mt Pleasant. Sunday, at Lansing. Monday, July 25th (open). Tuesday, at Howell. Wednesday, at Plymouth. Thursday, at Ann Arbor. Friday and Saturday at Tecumseh. Sunday, and Monday, July 31st and Aug 1st, at Mt Clemens. Tuesday and Wednesday, at West Branch. Thursday, at Grayling. Friday at East Jordan vs Harbor Springs.

The demand for experts in all lines of business is now so great that success beyond the average resolves itself into a matter of special training for one particular line of work. It is the business of the I. C. S. to furnish this special training better than can be found anywhere else, as you will judge from the report of the Mosley commission from Great Britain last year, which pronounces the I. C. S. to be the greatest educational institution in the world. A special representative will be here next week and have on display at Shelter's Bakery a complete line of books, etc., used in the different courses.

East Jordan can now look down on its neighboring towns with utter contempt. We've got a full fledged dyed-in-the-wool MYSTERY which is as wicket as a certain box which is alleged to belong to one Captain Kidd. A number of years ago (as all good stories start) a small band of gypsies consisting of two men, a woman, and a child, were encamped in South Arm. When they left it is alleged that only one man was with them and that a certain box was missing from their luggage. Now, with years to develop the yarn, the story goes that the missing man was killed in a row, his body placed in the box and sunk in the lake. A searching party went out and, hocus pocus, found the box. A board from the box is hanging from a telephone pole at foot of Main st. We don't think the box has been raised yet, so succeeding chapters of this charming (seria) will be published in our next.

In every place large numbers of men and women would gladly change from the stress of competitive employment to the assured income of positions under the Civil Service Rules of the U. S. Government. These people form no distinct class. Your neighbor, your friend, your yourself may be tired of the eternal grind and uncertainty of your present position. If you want to be sure of a position as long as you live why do you not enter the civil service? The International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton Pa. will have representatives here the week of July 25 to tell you how you can succeed. He will be at E. E. Shelters' store.

Creamery To Be Started

It's Up to the Farmers to Furnish Cream.

J. J. Pfender of Brown City is here this week looking up prospects for the starting of our creamery. He found the creamery plant in first class condition and the machinery up-to-date in every detail. He has leased the Creamery for a number of years of the Board of Directors and will run it as an individual and not as a corporation. The inducements he offers to farmers to furnish cream are glittered. Payments for all cream received will be made promptly upon the 15th of each month, and the money for such purpose will be banked at once. The creamery will be open for inspection at all times and the tests made will also be open to those who wish to see same.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pfender have had years experience running creameries and will therefore make a success of the work. The gentleman is well-known by Carl Stroebel and any wishing to investigate farther are invited to call and see either of these gentlemen. Mr. Pfender will canvass our farmers and we sincerely trust that all will do whatever they can toward furnishing cream. A creamery is not only a good thing for the town but the farmers as well for wherever a creamery is, the market price of its product is always higher and steadier.

Appointed Wednesday J. H. Milford is Our New School Com'r.

The Chairmen of the various Boards of School Inspectors of Charlevoix County met at Charlevoix, Wednesday to receive the resignation of J. M. Tice as County Commissioner of school and to elect a successor. South Arm township was once more honored with the office and that sterling Republican, J. H. Milford appointed. Mr. Milford will make South Arm his headquarters.

Probably no new officer in the history of our county will give more general satisfaction than this gentleman. The South Arm High School of which he resigned as superintendent, Thursday, to take up his new work—is a monument to his efficiency. Mr. Milford is comparatively a new man in our county, coming here from Pennsylvania only three years ago. He succeeded his brother, Finley, who had charge of the schools eight years. During the three years that he has been in charge, the school has shown a steady development along most every line.

Mr. Milford will not take charge of the official work until after the Teachers' Institute, Sup't Tice having commenced same it was deemed best that he should conduct it. Increased work in the East Jordan schools compelled Mr. Tice to give up one of the duties, and his heart seems to be set upon making our schools one of the best in the state.

East Jordan's trio of fishermen, Messrs D. F. Clement, Dr. C. A. Sweet and G. G. Glenn have returned from their trip up on the Pigeon river.

Chapter XVII.—Continued.

Morris stood a few steps back of Jessie and devoured her with his eyes. He noted the soft folds of her hair, the rounded curves of her neck, and as one spell-bound watched her deft fingers as they glided over the surface of the sketch book.

With a little sigh of disappointment Jessie dropped the folio on her lap. Not in months had she drawn with less skill. What could be the matter? She felt oppressed and under some malign influence. Instinctively she turned and looked squarely into the ardent eyes and eager face of Arthur Morris. With an involuntary cry of surprise, fear and vexation, she sprang to her feet, the sketch book falling to the floor.

"Why, Miss Carden!" exclaimed Morris, with stimulated astonishment. "Really, this is an unexpected pleasure. I am delighted to meet you. Permit me—" And he picked up the sketch book, bowed, and extended his hand.

In those brief seconds Jessie had regained her self-possession. "You have surprised me, Mr. Morris," she said quietly, ignoring his proffered hand. "You must be aware that this is not a public reception room. We can talk without disturbing any one in the lobby."

A minute later they were in the comparatively deserted outer hall.

"You have no right to follow me here or to annoy me by your attentions," said Jessie Carden, confronting him with flashing eyes. He fumbled nervously at his watch-chain.

"It was purely accidental, I assure you," he stammered.

"Your arrival was announced in the Berlin papers," said Jessie, coldly. "I learned this morning that you bribed my servants, and realized that an interview with you was inevitable, but I did not think you would presume to intrude your presence during my papa dear, but you must not worry in the least over me. I have money, papa; lots and lots of money. I have saved nearly two thousand dollars out of my allowance. We shall get along famously."

That evening, in the modest apartments he had rented, General Carden told Jessie the story of his downfall. Randolph Morris was his principal creditor, and negotiations were then in progress by which he hoped to transfer his L. & O. stock to Mr. Morris, in consideration of a loan which would enable him to settle with his minor creditors.

"If Mr. Morris refuses to extend this accommodation I shall be in lasting disgrace," faltered General Carden. Jessie Carden had listened quietly.

Until that day she had given little thought to the problem which ever confronts the great mass of mankind—how shall we live, wherewithal shall we be fed, clothed and housed? The little room in which they sat looked mean and want-haunted. The faded carpet, the cheap wallpaper, the tawdry decorations, the low and marred ceiling, the wailing of a sick child through the thin partition, the odor of a kitchen, the rumble of traffic over a cobblestone pavement—surely this was a dream from which she would awaken to find herself in the stately mansion on the great boulevard.

Yet it was not a dream. At the sound of the name of Arthur Morris the past and the present stood before her in glaring colors. She must be brave; she would be brave. With that superb insight which nature gives to woman; the plot devised by Arthur Morris lay bare before her eyes. Her father was crushed in the net which had been set for him. To release him must she be caught in the toils?

The bishops had purchased a residence in New York, and there was waiting for Jessie a letter from her aunt inviting her to spend April and "I want to apologize for what I did in Berlin, or rather for coming to Berlin," he began. "I was wrong and I beg your pardon."

"That is not the offence for which you should crave forgiveness," said Jessie Carden. Scorn was in her voice and a warning flash in her eyes. "Your intrusion in Berlin was insolent, but it was in harmony with a greater affront which preceded it, and one of which no gentleman would be guilty. If you have nothing more appropriate to say, leave me, sir!"

"I have; I have!" cried Morris, cowering before her gaze. "Pray be seated, Miss Carden, and—give me a chance!"

"I should not," she said coldly. "I know the time you mean, Miss Carden. His face flushed a deeper red and he looked at her with appealing eyes. "You mean that affair at the clambake. I was intoxicated, Miss Carden. It's a hard word, but I'm going to be honest and throw myself on your mercy. I am very, very sorry; really I am, Miss Carden, and I want to be your—your friend."

She leaned to spurn his prayers and to ask him to take back the white locks from above her father's brow and remove the stain of disgrace.

She realized that the man who had crushed her father was now in her power, and felt that triumphant joy which only a woman can know. But it wounded and tortured her pride to think that Morris dared aspire to her love. She charged the sacrifice she was about to make against the account of a future revenge, and turned to him with a softer light in her eyes.

"I should not forgive you," she said. "When a man who pretends to your position so far forgets himself, he should first obtain his own pardon. He should then seek to redress the wrongs caused by his offense. Are you prepared to do that, Mr. Morris?"

"I don't exactly understand what you mean, Miss Carden."

"I will make myself plain," said Jessie. "You attempted to murder a young man who resented your insults in a public place, and in the encounter you were injured. For years you have had a standing reward for the arrest of this innocent man. Are you willing to take steps to absolve him? John Burt has been the greater victim of your conduct."

"But my dear Miss Carden, I haven't the slightest notion of where he is, do you know," said Morris with a puzzled expression. "For my word, I don't. We had a beastly row in which I got shot, and all the fellows who were with me say I started it, and that the pistol went off in my own hand. I assure you that I don't remember a thing about it. The governor offered the reward. I can get him to withdraw it, and put a notice in the papers promising that no prosecution shall be made. I'll do anything you say, Miss Carden."

"Publicly announce the withdrawal of the reward and state that he will not be prosecuted," said Jessie, as if the matter was merely one of abstract justice. "And if you are confident that I shall not again be embarrassed by your indiscretions I will try to overlook the past."

"You are very good!" he exclaimed, effusively. "It's more than I deserve, but you will not regret it, Miss Carden. My governor and yours are mixed up in business, and it's a beastly shame, don't you know, that we should be at odds. By the way, I'm awfully sorry about the general's financial troubles. Hope he pulls out of them all right, and think he will. I'm trying now to make a deal which will help him out. And you're not angry with me now, are you, Miss Carden? Let's shake hands and call it square!"

Morris extended a clammy hand, and Jessie, with an inward shudder, permitted him to clasp hers for a moment.

The summer season was at hand, and Jessie was looking forward with pleasure to a sojourn in Hingham. Arthur Morris had been devoted in his attentions, and Jessie felt a thrilling-wickedness at the tacit encouragement she had given him.

NOT WHAT HE WAS SENT FOR,

Irishman Had Reasoned Well, But He Was Wrong.

A farmer, accompanied by several of his hired men, went into the woods one morning in the fall of the year to cut down some trees. When about to begin work it was discovered that the cant hook had been left behind. Turning to one of the men, an Irishman not very long over, the farmer instructed him to drive back to the farm for the missing tool. The Irishman did not know what a cant hook looked like, but was averse to exposing his ignorance, so drove off on his errand, trusting to find some one at the farm who would enlighten him.

At the barn, however, there was no one to help him out of his dilemma. Casting his eyes about the place for the thing which would be most likely to bear the name of "cant hook," he saw a mooly cow with never a sign of a horn upon his head, and concluding it was that he had been sent for.

Propping a rope, he fastened the cow to the rear end of his vehicle and excitedly drove back to the woods. "What in Sam Hill have you there?" shouted the farmer on seeing his messenger and the cow. "I sent you for a cant hook to use in moving the logs; what have you brought that cow for?"

"Be jabbers, boss, divil another thing could I see around the barn that cant hook but this."—Star of Hope.

WE ARE THE PEOPLE!

We of the United States are Americans. We are the people. But are not the Canadians and Mexicans also Americans? Are they not also the people?

Europeans have long said "Yes." We of the United States have long said "No."

Now comes Archibald R. Colquhoun in his "Greater America" to fortify us in our answer. He writes of the United States of America and its dependencies alone, and he speaks of them as "America" without qualification.

"There is no other country," he says, "which could be spoken of as America."

And that is true. There are Mexicans, Canadians, Brazilians, Chileans, etc., but these are Americans only in the geographical sense. In the political and national sense only the people of the United States are Americans.

The name is ours, and ours alone by right of prior use and example to the rest of the Western world. But for us the names of the other American republics would have no national meaning at all—would be mere geographical expressions.

We made the Western hemisphere politically different, nationally different from Europe. We made it distinct in fact.

For those who have followed us we have every respect, but at present there is only one American people—only one American nation—and we are that people.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NEED OF THE FARMER.

The farmer must learn to place a cash value upon his own time and labor and know where they are expended and what results they produce. He must learn to think of the dairy cow as a machine for manufacturing clover, etc., into milk—a machine that will do its best work most kindly treated; sheltered from storms and fed a balanced ration. The small plots of idle ground should be made to produce something that will sell in the market or supply the family table.

The waste products of orchard, garden or grain field should be turned into pork, mutton or poultry, while everything that can serve no better purpose should, if possible, add fertility to the soil. Rotation of crops should make summer fallowing unnecessary and $10 worth of apples should not be lost for the want of $1 worth of spray.—Portland Oregonian.

SPIRIT OF RECKLESSNESS.

Many, probably most of the accidents on American railways of all kinds are due to recklessness. The same is true of accidents from other vehicles. Manifestations of this disposition are to be seen on every side.

Coachmen exhibit it by driving heavy carriages at full speed around their most busy and crowded corners of large cities. Messenger boys show it by propelling their bicycles like mad whenever they get where there seems a good chance to run anybody down. The automobile chauffeur acts as if it was no part of his business to look out for people ahead of him, and apparently thinks that the man or woman whom he runs down receives only his or her deserts for getting in the way. Everybody who operates any sort of a vehicle, from the locomotive engineer to the laborer or clerk hurrying to his work on a motorcycle, seems to have become possessed with the idea that it is his business to go as fast as he can, but no part of his business to take care that he doesn't kill anybody. This combination of speed madness with recklessness is causing more casualties in the United States than all other causes together.—Kansas City Journal.

EDWARD'S FOOT DOWN.

The English legation in the Serbian capital has been broken up. The house has been vacated and the staff dispersed to other capitals and the British Minister, Sir George Bonham, will go elsewhere. King Edward VII. informed the Serbian government that Great Britain did not consider the promotion of the officers personally concerned in the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga from their posts at court to higher offices in the army and in the state, as a satisfaction for the outrage perpetrated last summer. After a long suspension diplomatic relations are now permanently closed. This is an example which other powers of Europe may have to follow. The awful murder and the protection of the murderers by the man who was the beneficiary of the assassination is too much for civilization. King Edward will be respected in all sections where decent people thrive, for delivering this rebuke. There have been kings of England who have been bloody and revengeful, but they were long before the days of Edward VII., and very little of their blood runs in his veins. Edward is a modern king. The longer other rulers postpone action as to Serbia the harder will it be for them to wipe out the disgrace which is already sticking to them.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE Y. M. C. A.

There is no longer any disposition to scoff at the Young Men's Christian Association and among intelligent citizens everywhere its potency as an instrument of personal and civic morality is gratefully recognized. Dr. Mable has not exaggerated its claims to respect in saying:

"Whatever may have been the defects, either in quality or in management of the association in the past, it has become a model of high and effective organization. It is an expression of the religious life which fits the temper and the need of the day—and it is therefore fundamentally the right expression of that life. It is a religion of action, contrasted sometimes too sharply with the religion of meditation, but pre-eminently, in spite of its occasional over-emphasis on action, the religion which the modern world needs and which can do the most for the redemption of the modern world. It stands for the broad conception of life into which the young man of today is born. It demands the health of the body as well as the health of the spirit, sanity in out-of-door life as well as integrity in social and business life."

The word "sanity" is well applied to the activities of the association. It makes no appeal to mawkish sentiment, and takes no part in the cultivation of a merely emotional religion. Its business is to foster clean and wholesome living, to encourage a desire for moral and mental growth among its members and to put within their reach such means of rational enjoyment as most of them would otherwise lack. It is an admirable institution, managed on sound principles and productive of great results.—New York Tribune.

STATISTICS DO MISCHIEF.

The announcement that the director of the Yale "commons" has been obliged to put up the price of meals to $4.50 a week henceforth and that at the old price of a dollar or so less the college has lost $20,000 a year, will doubtless fill the hearts of many patient housekeepers with unspoken gratitude. For years the American housewife has been suffering from the baleful activity of the man of statistics, who proves conclusively in the columns of endless periodicals that $3 a week will feed anybody royally, and that a delightful dinner may be given for $2.50, including flowers. A periodical ostensibly devoted to the interests of the American home once published statistics showing how a man and wife and two children had lived comfortably on $200 a year. The misery caused by those statistics, over the whole broad land, was beyond computation.—Harper's Bazar.

HUMOR TO CURE NERVOUSNESS.

Dr. B. Laquer, of Weisbaden, has published a pamphlet upon "The Proper Nourishment of the Brain," in which he puts forth the opinion that many medical procedures employed in the treatment of nervous diseases are and should be merely intended as vehicles for the real method of cure, which is psycho-therapeutic. For nervous debility Dr. Laquer recommends light, soothing poetry, steady, moderate sport, the observation of nature and everything which tends to improve the senses and muscles. Three main characteristics of the physically unstable, he says, are abnormally increased self-analysis, fear and lack of will power.

To combat these he recommends books of travel, history, biography and especially humorous works.—He is even kind enough to point out some of the brands of humor which he considers to be especially adapted to the soothing of troublesome nerves, and for those who read English only he specifies the works of Dickens, Jerome K. Jerome and Mark Twain.

Of course, it is not probable that Dr. Laquer thinks he has exhausted the subject in his pamphlet. If he were to pursue his studies further he would probably be able to furnish prescriptions for the various kinds of nervousness. Dr. Laquer owes it to the humorists and to the public to go ahead with his researches, so that the world may know what brands of humor should be kept on hand and ready for use by the people who are doing the world's work in this nerve-racking age.—Chicago Record-Herald.

TREATMENT OF CONVICTS.

One of the curious phenomena of the present-day is the agitation which is being conducted by life-term convicts for the virtual abolition of life imprisonment, by providing that those so sentenced shall be liberated after a fixed number of years of good conduct. There are doubtless some life prisoners who are proper subjects of clemency, but there is another class whose members cannot be out of prison a week without committing crime. The public safety demands more and not less severity to habitual criminals, and there is grave reason to doubt that the discretion of our prison authorities in permitting and apparently assisting in this appeal to maudlin sentiment in favor of a general jail delivery.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HOW JACK LONDON "ARRIVED."

Popular Author Struggled Hard for High Position He Holds.

Jack London, the fascinating short-story writer and brilliant war correspondent, now at the front, is but twenty-eight years old. Three years ago he was unheard of by the reading world. To-day he is read everywhere, is sought by publishers, and the pages of the magazines, from The Century down, are open to him.

The story of how he "arrived," how he first set foot upon the stepping-stone to success, he tells in The Editor, the New York magazine for literary workers, incidentally giving the latter class some excellent advice. Here are a few of his terse, pregnant sentences:

Work! Don't wait for some good Samaritan to tell you, but dig it out yourself.

Fiction pays best of all.

Don't write too much. Don't dash off a 6000-word story before breakfast.

Avoid the unhappy ending, the harsh, the brutal, the tragic, the horrible—if you care to see in print the things you write.

Keep a notebook. Travel with it, eat with it, sleep with it. Slip into it every stray thought that flutters up into your brain.

"As soon as a fellow sells two or three things to the magazines," says Jack London, "his friends all ask him how he managed to do it," and then he goes on, in his own racy way, to tell how it happened to him.

He had many liabilities and no assets, no income and several mouths to feed. He lived in California, far from the great publishing centers, and did not know what an editor looked like. But he sat down and wrote. Day by day his pile of manuscripts mounted up. He had vague ideas, obtained from a Sunday supplement, that a minimum rate of $10 a thousand words was paid, and figured on earning $600 a month, without overstocking the market.

One morning the postman brought him, instead of the usual long, thick manuscript envelope, a short, thin one. He couldn't open it right away. It seemed a sacred thing. It contained the written words of an editor of a big magazine. When, months ago, he had figured in his mind what the offer for this 4000-word story would be at the minimum rate—$40, of course—he opened the letter. Five dollars!

Not having died right then and there, Mr. London is convinced that he may yet qualify as an oldest inhabitant. Five dollars! When? The editor did not state.

But, by and by, in the course of its wanderings, one of his stories reached an editor who could see the genius of Jack London, and had the patience to penetrate beneath the husk of wordy introduction and discover the golden grain.

Here is the incident that proved the turning point in Jack London's literary career, as he so graphically tells it:

"Nothing remained but to get out and shovel coal. I had done it before, and earned more money than I resolved to do it again, and I certainly should have done it, had it not been for The Black Cat.

"Yes, The Black Cat. The postman brought me an offer from it for a 4000-word story which was more lengthy than strength, if I would grant permission to cut it down half. Grant permission? I told them they could cut it down two-halves if they'd only send the money along, which they did, by return mail. As for the $5 previously mentioned, I finally received it, after publication and a great deal of embarrassment and trouble."

And the rate he received for his first Black Cat story was nearly 20 times what the five-dollar editor paid!

Nor is Jack London the only writer who has been lifted from obscurity to prominence by the lucky Black Cat, which, as the New York Press has truly said, has done more for short-story writers and short-story readers than any other publication.

Each of its famous prize competitions has brought new writers to the front. In its most recent, the $2,100 prize was won by a young Texan who had never before written a story, and the second, $1,200, went to a lawyer's wife in an obscure Missouri town.

It has just inaugurated another contest in which $10,600 will be paid to writers in sums of from $100 to $1,500. This will, no doubt, add many new names to the list of those who have "arrived" through its recognition.

The conditions are announced in the current issue of The Black Cat, and will also be mailed free to any one by the Shortstory Publishing Company, Boston, Mass. Even those who cannot write a winning story themselves may earn $10 by giving a timely tip to some friend who can.

But all should bear in mind that it will be entirely useless for any one to send a story to The Black Cat without first reading and complying with all the published conditions. Here is a chance for the reader to dig dollars out of his brain, for what life does not at least contain one tale worth telling?

stud. hours. You take an unfair advantage of an accidental acquaintance. That acquaintance was terminated last summer by your acts and conduct, and I have no desire to renew it. You have had the education and opportunities of a gentleman, and must respect my wishes."

She turned, and entered the gallery. Morris stood as if riveted to the floor—dazed, ashen-faced and speechless. Obeying a wild impulse, he rushed after her, but halted at the door. With a smothered oath he retraced his steps, and hailing his coachman, drove through Unter der Lindet.

For the second time in his life the fact had been forced upon him that there were ambitions beyond the reach of his money. The thought envenomed him. Again he made a vow that Jessie Carden should be his. His heavy lips parted in a sullen smile as he pictured her surrender. The longer it was delayed the sweeter would be his triumph.

The morning train for Paris had Arthur Morris for a passenger. It was months before he returned to New York to become a junior partner in the firm of Randolph Morris & Company.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Diplomacy.

After an absence of two years Jessie Carden looked forward with pleasure to a home-coming. She had bidden her instructors and friends adieu, and was about leaving Berlin for a brief visit to Paris, when she received a cablegram from General Carden, requesting her to return home at once. The message was so worded that Jessie was mystified, but not alarmed.

After a stormy voyage, the liner steamed into Boston harbor, and General Carden clasped his daughter in his arms. At first glance she hardly recognized him. His face was drawn, and the dark hair and beard had turned to silver-gray.

"You will be brave, my pet," he said, his voice choked with emotion. "I have sad news for you, Jessie."

"There can be no very sad news, papa dear, so long as you are alive," said Jessie. With a woman's intuition she guessed the truth.

"I am ruined, Jessie! My bank has failed, and my fortune is swept away. That is not all. Our old home is in the hands of creditors and I am a bankrupt—a bankrupt at the age of fifty!"

May with them in the metropolis, and to be their guest in Hingham during the summer.

General Carden advised her to accept the invitation, but Jessie had at first declared that her place was with him, and would not listen to his arguments.

"I have changed my mind about aunt Helen's invitation," she said, later in the evening. "I have decided to go to New York for a few weeks at least. I believe I can sell some of my sketches and paintings there, and—well, I think it best to go."

"You are a wise little girl, Jessie," said General Carden. "I shall be in New York nearly as much as in Boston, and you will be much happier there."

A week later Jessie was fondly greeted by her aunt. Thomas Bishop belonged to an old New York family, and was proud to introduce his beautiful niece to the exclusive society circles in which the Bishops had been welcomed.

It was at the Cregier reception that she again met Arthur Morris. For a moment Morris was unable to speak, and gazed at her blankly, first at Jessie and then at Mrs. Cregier.

"Really—why, really—why—why, don't you know, Mrs. Cregier, Miss Carden and I have met before!" he exclaimed. "In fact—why, in fact we are old acquaintances; are we not, Miss Carden?"

"I recall having met Mr. Morris," said Jessie, addressing her hostess. It was a trying moment for Jessie Carden. Before her stood the man she hated. Why had fate cast him as a reptile ever crawling across her path? She longed to crush the serpent's head with her tiny heel, yet she knew that the snake had cunning; she knew that her father was caught in his coils. Never until that moment did she realize the damning power of money, or sound the depths of a woman's hatred.

"May I say something to you, Miss Carden?" ventured Morris. "I've wished to talk to you for a long time, or rather to write something, but—but—let's get out of this crush so I can explain myself."

"I do not care to listen to you, sir," "I beg of you, hear me for a moment!" pleaded Morris, as Jessie turned haughtily from him.

"Since you seem determined to create a scene in which I am to be involved, I prefer the less conspicuous disgrace of listening to you," she said, bitterly. "Here is a quiet corner. What have you to say to me, sir?"

A REASON FOR SICKNESS.

Healthy kidneys take from the blood every 24 hours 500 grains of impure, poisonous matter...

Mrs. J. H. Bowles of 118 Core St., Durham, N. C., says: 'I was sick and bedfast for over nine months, and the doctor who attended me said unless I submitted to an operation for gravel I would never be well.'

Lighting a Match in a Gale.

Here's a hint to smokers, from a truckman in New York: 'Just take a match and shove the stick about a quarter of an inch toward the head, so's it'll look like a Cigarette's pompadour, an' then strike the match, it'll take a mighty strong wind to blow it off.'

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent physician of Rome, Georgia, went through a food experience which he makes public: 'It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients that the food is a wonderful restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle.'

DECLARATION of INDEPENDENCE

Let the Children Read and Remember the Immortal Document

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature; a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time after such dissolutions to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined, with others (that is, with the lords and commons of Britain) to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation.

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies.

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our government;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is, at this time, transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioner of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions, we have petitioned for redress, in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name, and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, Free and Independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

WAYS OF WILD CREATURES.

Easy Victim Preferred by Those Who Prey on Their Fellows.

In a recently published book on fishing, W. S. Hodgson, an English sportsman, argues that when a fish of the salmon kind, or a pike, takes a real minnow impaled on a flight of hooks or a manufactured thing resembling a minnow the fish is moved less by a desire to eat than by a desire to kill.

Suggestions by Dr. Hartman—How to Combat the Nervous Depression Incident to Warm Weather.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anæmic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoir for nerve vitality. These centers become bloodless for the want of proper nutrition.

This condition is especially noticeable during the warm season. Every summer an army of invalids are produced as a direct result of weak nervous systems.

This could easily be overcome by the use of Pe-ru-na. Pe-ru-na strikes at the root of the trouble by correcting the digestion. Perfect digestion furnishes increased nutrition for the nerve centers.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics. One reason why Pe-ru-na has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Pe-ru-na is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit.

At this season of the year we are peculiarly liable to inflammations of the stomach and bowels. It is a part of wisdom to learn how to cut them short and in the easiest and quickest manner. Pe-ru-na does this by its peculiar power over all forms of catarrhal troubles.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Pe-ru-na has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Pe-ru-na contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

Dragging Pains

2925 Keeley St.,
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Mrs. Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

Jake Muller, on a summer day, raked the meadows sweet with hay. The mule with which he raked the hay was mucked dun, with streaks of grey. Jake's shirt was of hickory, and his pants brown, with a patch on the part where he sits down. Jake cursed in a way that was hard to see, for the mule went haw when he said gee. A bumble bee's nest in the stubble lay, where Jake and the mule raked the clover hay. A rake tooth ran through that bumble home, the bees came out and began to roam in search of the man that summer day who raked the meadow of clover hay. The bees swarmed inside Muller's shirt and quickened the mule to a lively spurt. It was tough on the mule and worse on Jake and worse still on the sulky rake, for the mule turned loose in a promiscuous way and scattered the rake all over the hay.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned.

Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered Kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Huss, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."
