The Institute:

One of the Best Ever Held in Charlevoix County.

The State Teacher's Institute for Charlevoix County began an eight day's session in our village last Monday. Supt. J. M. Flee, assisted by Supt. J. W. Simmons of Owosso, and Miss Claribel Millman of the Charlevoix County Normal are conducting same. The sessions are well attended and much good is being derived therefrom.

Monday evening a crowd assembled in the High School Auditorium to listen to the lecture of Mr. Simmons and Miss Millman together with the rest of a well-prepared program. Same opened with singing by the teachers followed with a duet by the Misses Stone. W. E. Malpass, moderator of our schools, gave the address of welcome. Miss Robertson favored the audience with a solo. Miss Millman gave an address on "What is Manual Training?" which showed that the speaker was conversant with her subject. A recitation was given by Miss Ruth Patterson following which Miss Robertson favored the audience with another of her delightful solos. Supt. Simmons then gave a most interesting talk on the "Object of the Institute," which was full of good, wholesome truth. In defining the duties of a teacher Mr. Simmons said: "The true measure of a teacher is her ability to uplift and influence lives."

Wednesday evening, the business men of our city gave the teachers a little reception at the school house, consisting of program and refreshments. F. E. Boosinger had charge of the latter, which was as follows: Vocal duet, Miss Robertson and Mrs. Bush; Clarinet solo, Ellis Malpass; remarks by C. L. Lorraine; vocal solo, Mrs. Bush; Instrumental duet, Miss Madge Nicholas and Arthur Cole; Vocal solo, Miss Robertson.

The Institute closes next Monday evening with a lecture by Prof. Simmons on The Mammoth Cave, and to which everybody is invited to attend. Below is a list of those in attendance at the Institute:

East Jordan: H. L. Winters, Wm F. Bashaw, Ray I. Clark, John N. Roy, Cassie Winters, Mary Nemecek, Glyde McHate, Maude Crowell, A. Emma Stone, Nettie Chamberlain, Ruth Hawley, Alida E. Political Pointers.

The Republican Vice Presidential candidate belongs to the present; the Democratic to the past.

It is a new deal in American politics for a party to ask the voters to support a Western Union telegram.

It would be a source of pleasure to Judge Parker if the people would quit judging him by the company he keeps.

Vice Presidential Candidate Davis will not take a speaking part in the campaign, but will let his checkbook talk for him.

Hearst and Bryan have both served notice that they will try again in 1908. No party can be "safe and sane" with such elements hopeful.

Democrats assert that the Republican convention was conducive to sleep. The Democratic convention seems to have been conducive to nightmares.

It is admitted that Mr. Davis is too old for a Vice President, but he is not too rich for campaign purposes, and it is not expected that he will be needed longer than that.

A Man of the People

Such is Fred M. Warner, Our Next Governor.

(From Mt. Clemens Monitor.)
One day just ten years ago a young man with a good, honest face and modest mien came into the Monitor office. "My name is Warner," said he; "I live at Farmington, Oakland county—make cheese there—and I am thinking of becoming a candidate for the senate in the Macomb Oakland district. It is a Democratic district, I know, but I believe there is a fighting chance, and am willing to take it if the boys are willing. I believe I can carry Oakland county by three or four hundred, and if we can hold 'em down in Macomb county to two or three hundred, it is possible for me to get in by a hundred or so. It's close nipping, but it is worth trying for. I sell a lot of cheese in the two counties, and know a good many men."

The young man's candidacy grew finely. The more people got to know him, the better they liked him. He was a plain unaffected citizen, with a friendly word for all men. When the election came, instead of one or two hundred majority, he had 2,100. He entered the senate the youngest member, and at once proved himself capable and upright. He served four years, being re-elected by a very large majority in 1896. Mr. Warner stood steadfastly for the people while in the senate. He was heartily with Gov. Pingree in his policy of reform, and he was not for a moment "lined up" with corporate interests.

Mr. Warner was a candidate for secretary of state in 1888 and was defeated by J. S. Stearns, whose hoodie was more effective than his proclamations for "reform" have been since. Mr. Warner was nominated and elected in 1900, re-elected in 1902 in both cases running ahead of the average vote of his associates on the ticket. No better secretary of state was ever chosen by the people of the state. He has now been nominated for governor in a full and fair convention of the Republicans of the state, and practically without opposition.

He stands and will be elected on his record as a man and public official. When he is governor, as he will be by an overwhelming majority, he will be the same genial, gentleman and straightforward citizen that he is now. He feels that the office of governor will come to him as a great trust and a great responsibility. There need be no fear that he will betray the trust or prove unequal to the responsibility. He has a large acquaintance with state affairs, and no one will fool him for a minute. Neither for a minute will anybody be governor of Michigan but himself. Fred Warner is distinctly and conspicuously a man of the people. The people will elect him, and he will serve them first, last, and all the time with absolute fidelity.

The Republican state convention nominated a fine ticket, declared for as full a measure of primary "reform" as any republican state has, and adjourned with everybody singing "Hallelujah." The work of the convention could not of been better.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Mr. B. Spiegel of Evansville, Ind., writes: "For five years I was troubled with kidney and bladder affection which made me weak and thin and I had to give up work. Three of our Physicians failed to help me and I was given up to die. I bought a 50c bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me relief and the second bottle completely cured me."

and set them close together in a dish, to hold them in that shape until they are cool and hardened, then prepare the filling by cutting the strawberries, sweeten with powdered sugar and mix with thick whipped cream. Fill the baskets, and place a whole strawberry on either end. Do not fill the baskets until time to serve, as the cream softens the pastry, if allowed to stand, and the baskets lose their shape.

The Millinery of Summer.—The large and the small hat are in equal favor this season. For semi-dress occasions the small or medium-sized turban or sailor is perhaps in better taste, but the vogue of the wide drooping shoulders in costumes and wraps will undoubtedly make the picture hat more popular than ever.

The blending of delicate pink and blue is a feature of many hats, and in the association not only of small flowers but of ribbons as well is this discernible. Green also is a favored color, and for the hat to complete a green toilette or to be worn with a black or dark blue or a natural-colored pongee or shantung gown, it is a most attractive shade.

Green-trimmings—plumes, egrettes, braids and ribbon velvet—provide this smart touch when the hat is black, blue, ecru or white. Brown and green is another popular combination. No form of headgear is more charming than the dainty lingerie hat made in simple "baby" shape out of the finest lace or embroidery, with a large bow of ribbon as its only trimming.

These hats have a girlish effect, and to be successful they should be worn only by the youthful and with dainty frocks.—From The Delineator for July.

Told in Her Boudoir

Fancy stocks are much simpler than last year. Turnovers of finest linen are decidedly dainty.

Boas of any sort are not very much in evidence. A new heavy pongee has an almost shaggy surface.

A favorite braid for voile gowns is the bright-surfaced hercules. Wreaths of daintiest small flowers done in velvet, especially delicately pale blue forget-me-nots, trim hats.

The latest development of the sleeve frill is the employment of fine lace dyed to match the shade of the gown. Chiffon is also largely used for sleeve frills.

The fashionable décolletage line is somewhat higher this season, for, although the corsage is cut lower, it is finished with a dainty tucker of mousseline de soie, chiffon or net.

Pelerine collars slightly draped in front and finishing to a point, leaving the throat free, will be much worn this summer. Another effective collar yoke is a yoke and bertha in one, fitting closely on the shoulders and then falling with a full flare.

Separate Yoke and Collar.—The new plan of the yoke and collar being separate from the rest of the gown is an excellent one, as it permits of their being easily laundered.

ered without the entire waist being to be ripped apart, as is generally the case. In the simpler styles of gown this is most desirable, but it is also carried out in the more elaborate ones, and for the same reason that the laundering of any lace or embroidery is a difficult task unless the entire waist is cleaned at the same time. In many such respects fashion becomes more and more practical as time goes on; one reason, however, being that absolute cleanliness and perfection of detail are required in any garment that is to be considered at all smart.

Smartest Facing for Hats.—By all odds the smartest facing for hats to be worn with tailored dresses is that built from narrow lingerie frills. A facing of net is cut to fit the hat, then covered with innumerable ruffles of narrow lace, either gathered or accordion-pleated. Valenciennes lace lends itself best to this sort of facing, and if a vest, collar and half sleeves of lace edged flouncing are worn with the linen suit, the harmonious effect with the hat is very good.

Misses' Box Eton.—Box Etons are essentially smart and suit girlish figures to perfection. This one is adapted alike to the suit and

The general wrap and to a variety of materials but, as shown, is made of natural colored pongee banded with stitched silk and matches the skirt. The wide sleeves are graceful in the extreme and allow of wearing over back and under-arm seams. The wide sleeves are cut in one piece each and are laid in box plaits that are extended to cover the shoulder seams. A shaped band finishes the neck and the full ones of the season's waists without danger of rumpling, while the extended box plaits give the drooping line so essential to present styles.

The Eton is made with fronts and front edges and both the lower edge and those of the sleeves are faced to correspond.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 2 3/4 yards 21 inches wide, 2 1/2 yards 27 inches wide or 1 1/2 yards 44 inches wide, with 1 yard of silk to trim as illustrated.

A HANDSOME BLOUSE.

Handsomeness blouses are ever in demand both for the odd waist and the gown. Here is one that suits both purposes and allows many variations, but is shown in pale green messaline satin, with the yoke of tucked chiffon, vest and trimming of Chinese embroidery, on white edged with silk

BAFFLES ALL SKILL

PLAGUE IN INDIA THE BANE OF MEDICAL MEN.

All Efforts to Stamp Out Dread Disease. Have Been Futile—Natives Cannot Understand Necessity for Remedial Measures.

The years come and the years go, but the plague in India shows no signs of material abatement, says the Boston Transcript. The dreadful malady is becoming the despair of scientific investigators. They cannot stamp it out and they cannot account for its freakish manifestations. The Pioneer Mail, published in Allahabad, says they "cannot say why it takes hold upon one district and passes by another," why in one year and place on epidemic will begin and subside months earlier than in another, "least of all can anyone venture to prophesy when the country or any part of it will be free of disease." Nowhere, it is said, have preventive measures met with less success than in the Punjab, though nowhere else has the government attacked the problem with more energy and determination. "It must be admitted that the people were not overwilling to accept the good offices of the government, but that is a condition of things existing everywhere in India and it constitutes the chief element in the continual spread of the plague epidemics."

Inoculation has played an important part in the fight against this disease and with results that were very promising. Between May and September, 1900, nearly a quarter of a million people were inoculated. The percentage of attacks among all such was 1.32, as compared with 3.69 among uninoculated persons, and the mortality in cases of the latter were 52.15 per cent, as against 32.60 among the inoculated. Encouraged by these figures, in 1902-1903 the Punjab government undertook to inoculate 6,000,000 of people, practically the whole population of the thirteen districts most seriously affected by previous epidemics. This necessitated a daily supply of 70,000 doses of prophylactic fluid, which the Bombay research laboratory agreed to furnish. But instead of this number of doses daily it was thirty-one days in supplying a little over twice the amount, and then it was announced that the fluid would be supplied by a different method from the one previously followed.

On a certain day a number of persons were inoculated with the new preparation and all of them developed tetanus and died. That wrecked the whole scheme. Instead of the 6,000,000, only about 400,000 had been inoculated, and the results of the tainted serum had so impaired the confidence of the natives that they could not be persuaded to submit to inoculation with the pure mixture, and the government is now at its wits' ends. The authorities have practically acknowledged their helplessness by saying: "The measure on which most reliance has been and must be placed is evacuation."

That is, the people must desert their villages and remain away till the disease has died by lapse of time or been killed by disinfection. But that would seem to be rather a means of carrying it elsewhere, because all germs of it could hardly be left behind. A curious fact of its manifestation is that in the large towns, where the people are less amenable to preventive measures, there is comparative immunity, though the plague has been many times introduced among them. This is one of the most serious of England's present domestic problems, incident to her far-seeing battle line and earth-grinding possessions. She has here an evil to deal with that defies her, the more so that the afflicted natives do not take kindly to the means employed for their relief.

How a Mail Thief Was Discovered.—"Yes, there are some pretty nice pickings in the mail service if the clerks want to take chances," said one of the postal inspectors yesterday. "Take the case of just one fellow on whom we landed recently." In one year we traced $475 of missing money to him, and there is no telling how much he got away with that couldn't be accounted for. Of the $475, he swiped as high as $50 in cash from one letter, and as low as 60 cents. And these were not registered letters, which shows the foolishness of sending money through the mails without taking proper precautions. In one instance, a traveling man sent his wife $4 in a letter. It never reached her, and her kick brought $3 more. That was swiped, too, and the circumstance of two thefts in one family, one following the other so closely, was largely instrumental in casting suspicion on the culprit.—Philadelphia Record.

Hard to Duplicate Her.—Col. Allen S. Williams has his own troubles outside of editing a nautical magazine and managing the Lilliputians in Dreamland. A reporter came to his midget belle with a proposition to make her famous. It was this: She was to imitate the lost child on the upper east side, who slid down the chimney for fun and reached paradise. It didn't appeal to Mr. Williams, but he hesitated to stand in the way of the miniature star.

"It didn't worry me long, though," said he, "she was equal to a dozen reporters. Risk my life for a thing like that!" replied the midget. "What do you take me for? I have people dependent upon me. Do you think they could get another edition of me for 1 cent, like they can of your old newspaper?"—New York Times.

SCIENCE and INVENTION

Machine That "Magnifies" Time.—Although the stroboscope is not a new device, it has been applied recently to some interesting investigations. Into the nature of certain rapid motions. Briefly, the device mechanically reproduces at moderate speed successive views of an object moving so rapidly that it cannot be seen by the unaided vision. In a rapidly revolving wheel, for instance, the spokes are apparent as a mere blur, or else are quite invisible to the eye. By the stroboscope, a movement which takes place in a hundredth part of a second may be seen drawn out to a quarter of a second, or even more; the time of its movement, in other words, were magnified almost any number of times.

Like many wonderful results, this is achieved simply enough. By means of electric sparks fired at rapidly recurring intervals, or a revolving disk with slits passed in front of a lantern, the moving object is illuminated in a succession of flashes. If the flashes are repeated precisely as rapidly as the machine moves, they will show it always in one position, and it will seem to be at rest. But, if they move less rapidly, the machine under observation will seem to move slowly, because at each revolution it will be seen at a slightly later stage.

Thus the formation of a stitch in a sewing machine may be watched, or any other of the thousands of machine movements where it may be important to see what is completed at almost lightning speed.

This new use of the stroboscope is important because it permits the microscopic study of a machine working at its highest speed, and of noting of strains and vibrations at all points, the imperfections and the possibilities of improvement in its arrangement of parts and their relation to one another.

Automatic Coupling.—There is probably no other occupation for men which shows such a large list of accidents and deaths in comparison with the number of employees as railroading and if there is one branch of this business which is more dangerous than another it is the coupling of cars in the yards at the terminals and freight sidings. Of course, the introduction of the automatic couplers has reduced greatly the number of accidents from this source, but it is still necessary for an employe to station himself at each junction of the cars, to manipulate the coupler head by means of the lever on either car and in this there is chance of a mishap unless he is cautious.

Perhaps the largest number of couplings is made between the switching engine and cars it is to draw and for this work there has just been introduced an automatic arrangement which enables the engineer to connect or disconnect the engine and cars without leaving his cab. Within easy reach of his hand, as shown here,

Operated from the Cab.—There are levers which connect directly with the couplers at the front and rear of the engine, and as the engine approaches or recedes from a car a movement of the proper lever will set the coupler to engage or release the corresponding coupler on the car. The inventor is Augustus C. Hone of Louisville, Ky.

Kitchen Utensil Handle.—There are innumerable disadvantages in having to handle pans of various kinds which are provided with permanently attached handles. Burnt fingers frequently result and when cloths are used to lift the pans the acme of cleanliness is not always permissible. Then, too, there are pans which are not in the nature of things, provided with handles, and the housewife is left to her own devices to find means of lifting these from the stove. A Pennsylvania man, inspired probably by the admonitions of his wife, has devised a detachable handle that will meet the requirements of the situation. It can be used in lifting any pan, can be attached in an instant and will hold the pan as securely as if it was soldered directly to the side of the utensil. It is removable as easily as it is attached and one of these handles will serve for as many of the cooking utensils as the stove will hold.

Utility of Sun Spots.—Sir Norman Lockyer, the British astronomer, has advanced a remarkable new theory concerning the utility of sun spots. Sir Norman contends that the discovery and understanding of these phenomena will prove one of the most beneficial additions to the world in general. He believes that such knowledge may enable astronomers to convert the sun into an agent to enable the nations to cope with droughts and famines. The spots on the sun may render it possible to predict with practical certainty the coming of famine and the exact part of the world where it will take place.

In for a Long Rest.—The maid—Of the men of your acquaintance who have married which do you think are the happiest? The bachelor—the deadiest.

A Companion

He often brings us pleasure,
He sometimes brings us pain;
He fills our hearts with trouble,
Then cheers us up again.

He gives us introductions,
But fails to make amends
For the severance of loved ones,
For the loss of faithful friends.

The blooming cheek of beauty
He smites with slow decay;
The raven locks of manhood
He surely streaks with gray.

At each step on life's ladder
That we essay to climb,
He's always close behind us,
Old, ruthless Father Time.

"I think I'll get married," said Penelope to herself, as she sat in a quiet corner on the veranda of the Seaside hotel.

Penelope was young and pretty. No level-headed person would ever have thought of making an assertion that, by any possibility, could be construed as contradictory to such plausible facts. And every man at the hotel was heels over head in love with her.

After having reached this important matrimonial decision, she charged along the piazza, so wrapt in her cogitations that at a sharp turn she bumped, with considerable violence, into Tom Hathaway.

"Oh!" she gasped, "I beg your pardon!"

"You can't have it," interrupted Tom. "There's no reason why I should give it to you. It was delightful."

"Tom Hathaway, aren't you ashamed?"

"Not at all," said Tom. "Let's play golf."

"But it's so hot," protested Penelope. "Even the caddies are asleep."

"Never mind," said Tom. "Then we'll have the links all to ourselves. Come along."

Tom was on his knees, making her toe, when it happened. Penelope stood close by him. Suddenly he seized her hand.

"Penelope, dearest, for a long time I have wanted to tell you something. I want to say 'the fervently kissed her hand' that I—"

"Oh, Tom!" screamed Penelope. "Whatever is the matter?"

Tom had jumped to his feet and was wildly grabbing at his mouth and choking. He had planted a passionate kiss on a wad of damp sand that, in his excitement, he had pressed into his hand.

"Hello, what's up?" and Bob Hamilton, who had heard Penelope scream, came running out of the club house.

"I—I guess Tom has some sand in his mouth," said Penelope.

"Good," said Bob; "it's good for his digestion. But how on earth—"

He stopped short. Neither of his listeners was in a condition to utter an intelligible answer. Tom made a break for the pump, and Penelope was sitting on the ground, sobbing with laughter.

"What in heaven's name is the matter with Tom?" asked Bob, after she had in a measure recovered her composure.

"He just had an accident," she replied.

"Oh, all right," said Bob. "If you don't want to tell, I don't want to know. Let's take a walk."

They promenaded lazily until they came upon a secluded bench. They sat and chatted, and his arm crept toward her waist, much to the consternation of an old gardener, who unobserved behind them was sprinkling the lawn with a hose.

"There is something I have long wanted to say to you," began Bob.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Penelope to herself. "They all begin the same way." "I want to tell you a secret, darling," he said, approaching near to her lips than her ear.

The poor gardener was so perturbed at Bob's words and actions that he nervously dropped the hose.

Bob opened his mouth to make the rest of his declaration, and was astounded to receive in it an inch stream of water. Gasping and spluttering, he struggled to his feet. In mad consternation, the gardener clutched the offending hose and disappeared.

Penelope gazed at Bob with stunned horror and surprise.

"You—you are not having a fit, are you, Bob?" she asked tremulously.

"Some careless damn fool—" sputtered Bob.

"Beg pardon!" exclaimed Fred Chase, another of the Devoted Circle, suddenly coming into view, with a pair of oars over his shoulder. "Penelope, I'm ashamed of you. I didn't think you would tolerate profanity—even from Bob." He tacked on with good-natured sarcasm.

Bob glared at him, and, without a word to either of them, stalked away.

"What's the rip with Bob?" asked Fred. "He looks out of sorts."

"He feels a little tired," she said crisply. "Is it nice rowing?" she aided quickly, anxious to divert his attention from poor Bob.

"It is if you have a parasol and are prepared to be quite still," he said. "Come and try it, anyway."

As she sank down on the boat cushions, she gave a little sigh. "I suppose he couldn't have gone on after that," she murmured half loud.

"Eh, what's that?" asked Fred.

"I was thinking how handsome you look in that hat," she replied calmly.

"Thanks," said Fred. "The same to you and many of them."

"You don't talk connectedly, Fred," commented Penelope.

"How could I," suddenly burst out Fred, "with you so near me? Penelope, dear, I want a wife."

"He's original, at any rate," thought Penelope.

"And you, darling, ever since that day—"

"Look where you're going, Fred!" shrieked Penelope.

It was too late. The boat crashed into a rock that stood half out of the water. The boat stopped, Fred didn't. He kept on going and landed on his back several feet the other side of the rock.

"Fred, oh, Fred, are you drowned?" cried Penelope.

"You were going to say," she said, softly.

But it happened that Fred was not drowned. He presently reappeared, standing in about four feet of water. Nevertheless, Malarack Hartford, who, from the shore, had witnessed the latter part of the incident, jumped into somebody's boat and pulled frantically for the scene of the disturbance. He first made sure that Penelope was not hurt, and then rowed over to Fred, who was busily engaged in wiping the water from his face and cursing himself heartily.

"Too bad, old man," said Malarack. "Jump into the boat and I'll take you to Penelope."

"No," said Fred. "I'm too wet. You take her ashore, old chap, and I'll be everlastingly obliged to you. I'll take your boat."

Malarack was not at all reluctant to make the change, and soon had Penelope on terra firma.

"Do let us walk under the trees," said Penelope. "So much has happened to me to-day that my nerves are quite on edge."

Malarack assented. As they strolled along, Malarack suddenly turned and said:

"Penelope, there is something I have wanted to say to you for a long while. I—"

"Wait!" cried Penelope, with sudden decision. "Sit down on that bench—"

Malarack stared at her curiously and complied.

"You won't fall off, will you?" asked Penelope.

"I should hope not," said Malarack, looking at her in blank surprise.

"Please put that parasol over your shoulder," directed Penelope.

Malarack did so, eyeing her nervously.

"Have you any sand in your pockets?" she suddenly demanded.

"Penelope!" he began severely.

"There! It's all right now," said Penelope, sinking down beside him. Malarack, after all, was the one she would have chosen, she thought. "You were going to say?" she said softly.

"Eh? Oh, yes," replied Malarack. "I have been waiting to tell you, as an old friend, that you really powder your nose too heavily. Now, I hope—good Heavens! Penelope, what ails you?"

Penelope had fainted.

GRIEVED HIM TO PAY TWICE.

How Two Dollars Spoiled an Afternoon for Russell Sage.

Russell Sage seldom takes any amusement. His pleasure is working and gathering in the gold eagles. Yet Uncle Russell not only had to pay for tickets for an entertainment, but he had to pay the second time.

A few years ago Miss Helen Gould gave a lawn fete at Lynhurst on Hudson for the benefit of the navy branch of the Young Men's Christian association. The tickets of admission were $1 each. Mr. and Mrs. Sage are close friends of Miss Gould, and she often entertains them. Mr. Sage bought two tickets.

On the afternoon of the lawn fete, he and Mrs. Sage left New York for Irvington, and thence went to Miss Gould's stage. Miss Gould's orders were that no one should be admitted to the grounds without a ticket. The police were on hand to enforce this command.

The stage that Mr. and Mrs. Sage came in was full of people. Tickets were demanded, and every one showed his excepting Mr. Sage. He fumbled around in all his pockets, and kept the stage and its occupants waiting for about five minutes.

"Finally he said: 'I'm Russell Sage. I bought two tickets, but I have forgotten to bring them.'"

The ticket man replied: "Miss Gould's order is that every one must have a ticket. You are blocking the way; so please give me $2 or stay out."

Mr. Sage reached down deep and brought out two old dollar bills, and handed them to the ticket man, heaving a heavy sigh. The saddest part of the story was that Mr. Sage found the two missing tickets after he was in the grounds.

At Rest.
Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ!
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy rest, thy God,
The voice at midnight came,
He started up to hear,
A mortal arrow pierced his frame;
He fell, but felt no fear.

Tranquil amidst alarms,
It found him on the field,
A veteran slumbering on his arms,
Beneath his red-cross shield,
His sword was in his hand,
Still warm with recent fight,
Ready that moment at command,
Through rock and steel to smite.

At midnight came the cry,
"The God prepare!"
He woke, and caught his Captain's eye,
Then, strong in faith and prayer,
His spirit went in peace,
Ready that moment at command,
His tent, at sunrise, on the ground,
A darkened ruin lay.

The pains of death are past;
Labor and sorrow cease,
And life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace,
Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Saviour's love.

No Children in Japan.

There are no children in Japan. They are dignified by the names of the grown-ups. The little girls of the family take care of the babies by having them strapped to their backs. Nearly every maid of 5 or 6 has a baby tied to her back and perhaps that accounts for the bent back and tottering gait of the Japanese woman. Though one never hears a Jap baby cry, if one begins to make a mouth and wrinkles up its funny little face, its child-mother quiets it by raising her body on her toes and heels as fast as she can, and placidity reigns in short order. A man would feel like a fool quoting "Mother Goose" to a Japanese child or trying to amuse it as one does our children. As for chucking one under the chin, that's unthinkable.

Countess to the Rescue.

The Countess Cassini at the bazaar that she recently held in Washington for the benefit of the Russian Red Cross was conversing with the rather elderly wife of a Senator when a third lady drew near.

"How do you do, Countess? Mrs. Blank, how do you do?" said the third lady. And then she added, in a spiteful tone: "You look older to-day than usual, Mrs. Blank."

"Poor Mrs. Blank blushed, but the Russian Countess came to her rescue gallantly."

"Well," she said, laughing, "why shouldn't she? She is older to-day than she ever was before in her life."

Pleased With the Prospect.

Sheriff Dienst of Labette county recently took Rastus Rose, a photographer, to the insane asylum at Osawatimie. Mr. Rose was pleased with much that he saw along the road. He continually regretted the absence of his camera, which prevented him from preserving the beautiful landscapes through which the train was passing. Arriving at Osawatimie, he was enraptured with the gardens and shrubbery surrounding the asylum. "You like it, do you?" asked the sheriff. "Like it! Like it!" exclaimed the prisoner. "Why, if I'd known it was like this, I'd have gone crazy a year ago." —Kansas City Journal.

BOYS & GIRLS

Little Prisoners.

When mother's gone away to work, us kids is just as good as prisoners. We never do a single thing 'cept what she said we could.

She gives us all a good-by kiss, an' locks the door up tight. So's to be sure to find us here when she gets home at night.

She leaves the key with Mrs. Brown, who lives next house but one. An' if there'd ever be a fire, why, Mrs. Brown would run.

An' let us out, for mother's work is most a mile away. We know, 'cause once she took us, but they wouldn't let us stay.

We see the school kids goin' by, an' then we know it's noon. An' time to eat our dinner, which is always ready soon.

'Cause bread and cheese is all we have, an' then we play around. Or little brother goes to sleep an' we don't make a sound.

We watch the funny postman, an' the wagons rollin' past; The streets get dark, the lights come out an' pretty soon, at last, Somebody taps the windowpane, the doorknob turns an' then, You'd ought to hear us shoutin', 'cause it's mother home again.

Soap Bubble Fountain.

A fountain that spouts soap bubbles is one of the novelties shown in the Palace of Liberal Arts at the World's Fair. It is about 25 feet high, and is surmounted by a statue of a fairy. Millions of soap bubbles pour out from the top basin, over the sides and into a larger and lower basin which, in turn, fills and overflows, the bubbles being carried off at the bottom.

The effect is much more brilliant than a water fountain, for each of the tiny bubbles reflects all colors of the rainbow. To add to the brilliancy, electric lights are concealed in the lower parts of the two basins, throwing beams of light of all colors up through the bubbles and producing an electric fountain whose effects is magnified by every one of the globes of water.

The bubbles are produced by specially built machines which agitate the soap in clear water and under pressure force it up to the top of the fountain.

A Dovecote for Your Lawn.

If any of you boys or girls are thinking of putting up a dove-cote or bird-house out on the lawn so as to attract the birds to your place, here is a beautiful model for you to copy.

If your father happens to have a tree on the grounds that he does not wish to keep alive, it will be just the thing for your purpose. Saw it off about ten feet from the ground, or as much lower as will leave a clean, straight trunk. (A pole set in the ground will serve the same purpose, but will not look quite so well at first.)

If you can, at the top of the trunk leave three or four portions of branches, sawed off clean and level at the ends. (If you can't, then nail three or four wooden supports to the top of the trunk.)

A platform thirty-six inches square should be nailed on top of the supports.

Then on top of this platform set up a house with inclined sides. Measurements: 24 inches square at bottom, 20 inches square at top, and 40 inches high (42 inches if measured along the inclined edge.)

Cut five windows in each side, and underneath the upper tiers of windows faster, little shelves for the birds to perch on.

On top of the house set up a tall attic roof, with the ridge lines a little curved instead of straight. (This makes the effect more graceful.) Leave the eaves sufficiently wide to protect the birds from the rain.

Threading a Needle.

This is not so much a trick as it is a test of limberness and agility. Every boy, unless he be a very stout boy, or has very short arms and long legs, should be able to do it easily after a little practice, although at first it looks very startling.

Get a thing stick, about three feet long. Hold it before you with both hands and, jumping into the air, try to pass the stick beneath your feet without letting go of it with either hand. It is not so easy as it looks in the picture, and at your first attempt you will probably strike your ankles or toes against the stick and knock it out of your hands.

As the Trick Should Look.

On your second or third try you may get your toes just over the stick, when, to your surprise, you find it torn from your hands and, lo! you are standing with both feet on it!

If you keep at it, you will soon learn the knack of it, which is in moving your arms just far enough to pass the stick beneath your feet at just the proper moment. Then, when you are an expert at this, try it backward, holding the stick behind you and bringing it beneath your feet to its old position in front.

When you can do both these with ease, try the feat on some of your friends and when, at their first attempts, they pronounce it impossible, surprise them by doing it both forward and backward.

The Disunited States.

A guessing contest which seems easy to most girls and boys when they hear of it, but proves more difficult than they supposed, is the Disunited States.

Make an outline, nothing more, of each state in the Union. These must be drawn on separate cards or pieces of paper and be exactly like the outlines on the map. Have each card numbered and its number placed opposite the name of the state on a separate piece of paper, which is not shown until the contest is over.

You will be surprised at the mistakes made, for even those who have studied geography for years find it difficult to decide which state the outline stands for when it is all alone.

Each player writes his name on a slip of paper bearing the number he ventures to guess. The one who has the most correct answers should receive a prize. This is a simple game, but it affords amusement to school boys and girls and to older people, having left school before many of the new states were added to the Union, and it is no easy task to guess the state by a mere outline.

Sometimes a river or a mountain sketched through the state in its proper place will give the guessers a better chance, but even then many funny blunders are sure to be made.

Can You See?

Try it in this interesting game, which any number of persons may play. The objects to be seen are placed on a table in a separate room, or they may be the ordinary articles of furniture in such a room. One of the players should prepare the room or the table. The more articles there are the better. Each player is admitted to the show room the same length of time, say a half minute, or, the whole company may file in slowly and keep in line as they pass around the room and out again, looking carefully at every object. Then all write down as many articles as can be remembered. Each player is allowed the same length of time to think and write.

These lists are then read aloud by a leader and checked by a correct and complete list previously prepared. The points a player makes equals the number of articles he names correctly. If he names an article that was not in the room he loses a point. The prize goes to the player who has the most points at the close.

The same game may be played out of doors, and each player be given three minutes to write down what he sees from the piazza or wherever he may be sitting.

Girls Now Run Chalk Race.

Boys have their many games, and now here is a novel pastime for the girls, although there is no reason why the boys should not play it, too. If they can tear themselves long enough away from their marbles, baseball and other boy sports of the season—

It is a chalk race, that sounds as if it might be exciting, does it not? Well, so it is, and the beauty of it is that two or any larger number can join in it, as many as can find bits of chalk or anything else which will make a mark on a stone pavement.

Each girl arms herself with a piece of chalk and stands at the starting line with her back toward the finish line, which may be any distance away, although sixty feet is quite far enough for an ordinary race.

At the starter's signal the racers are off, each girl placing her chalk on the starting line and drawing a circle. This circle may be as large or as small as the racer pleases, but it must be a complete circle; there must be no gap in it.

Now the racer draws another circle, beginning at the farther edge of the first, and joining that, a third circle, and so on, taking a step backward each time until the finish line is reached. The first one to draw a circle one edge of which touches the finish line wins the race, provided her other circles form an unbroken chain to the starting line.

If one of a racer's circles should be separate from another and not touch it at all, that girl is out of the race, although the circles may overlap as much as you please.

Some may like to make a lot of small circles, for they can be drawn very quickly, while others prefer large circles because one covers so much ground. Whichever method you try, you will find that it takes quickness, good judgment, and a steady hand to win. Try it; you will find a chalk race lots of fun.

Japanese Game.

A favorite card game of the Japanese is played as follows: One hundred well known proverbs are selected, each divided into two parts, and each part printed on a separate card. The host of the evening has the hundred first halves, which he reads aloud, one by one; the hundred second halves are dealt to the other players, who place their hands face upward on the "tatami" or thick mat of rice straw, on which they sit. As the first half of any proverb is read, the holder of the second half throws it out, or, if he sees it unnoticed among his neighbor's cards, seizes it and gives him one of his own. The player who is first "out" wins. It is a very simple game, but it affords great entertainment to the players; for the quick-sighted and keen-witted are constantly seizing the cards of their duller and slower neighbors, and this leads to much laughter and many good-natured sarcasms.

Death of the Sun.

Among the Ojibway Indians, who once occupied the lands about the great lakes in Canada, the sun, moon and stars were all objects of worship; for the red man was, in his own way, a decidedly religious person. At dawn the old chief and warriors chanted the praises of the sun, and at nightfall they thanked him for the light and heat with which he had supplied them during the day. An eclipse of the sun filled them with dismay; that event was looked on as his death, and they were then very anxious about his safety. They used to fasten bits of live coal to the points of their arrows and shoot them up into the air in order that the expiring sun might be re-lighted. As for the moon, it was equally precious; they reckoned their months by it. Their children were forbidden to point at it with their finger lest it should be bitten off.

Pindertoy.

The pindertoy is a very simple and amusing toy, which can be made in two minutes. Cut out the pieces, and with one pin fasten all together. The head piece belongs in front. If you have a cork to pin it on the result will please you.

How to Make a Doll's House.

To furnish a doll's house collect as many corks and bungs as you can get, a few ounces of colored beads, all one size, with two or three dozen big ones, a packet of pins, and you have all you want except a small skein of wool. Slice up the corks crosswise to make the seats of the chairs and the table tops. The bungs will do for the sofa seats. Slip half a dozen of the beads on a pin, putting a big one on first of all, and fix the points into the slices of cork to make the chair legs. The chair and sofa backs are made with plain pins and the wool faces across them from side to side. If you want the furniture to be very grand the cork may be painted with enamel or gilded.

Probate Order.
STATE OF MICHIGAN. The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office in said County on Monday the eleventh day of July in the year one thousand nine hundred and four.

Present, John M. Harris, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of the Estate of Joel M. Buehler, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Wealthy McCalmon praying among other things that her final account as executrix of said estate under the will shall be allowed and that she and her other bondsmen may be discharged;

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the eighth day of August next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examining and allowing such account and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden in the Probate Office in the Village of Charlevoix and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

JOHN M. HARRIS, Judge of Probate.

PROBATE NOTICE—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix. Notice is hereby given, that by an order of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, made on the 27th day of June A. D. 1904, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Elizabeth Scheffels, late of said county, deceased, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court, at the Probate Office, in the Village of Charlevoix, for examination and allowance, on or before the 27th day of December next, and that such claims will be heard before said Court, on Tuesday, the 27th day of December, and on Monday, the 27th day of September next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.

Dated, July 5th, A. D. 1904.
JOHN M. HARRIS, Judge of Probate.

THE MAN WHO WHITTLES

Every community knows the man who sits on a storebox and whittles, finding fault with his neighbor and bragging how much better he would do it than his neighbor, yet who never goes out and does anything right himself? We have all seen that fellow.

He is the prototype of the Democratic party in politics. It has been so for forty years, hand running, and now is starting on a new lap. The platform of the Democratic party, adopted at St. Louis, shows conclusively that the party is not ready to do anything; it is sitting on the storebox abusing the other fellows and bragging about what it would do if it had a chance.

The Republican party began "doing things" in 1861. Every step of progress this country has made since then has been under Republican administration and Republican laws. The party in 1897 had to go back and do them over again, after a brief Democratic administration had undone the labor of years.

Republican party in its platform tells in plain language what it intends to do. The Democratic party is not specific, but intimates that it will work wonders.

Now, if you had a job of important work you wanted attended to would you give it to the fellow who has been sitting on the storebox for forty years, whittling, bragging and faultfinding, or would you entrust it to the other fellow who has been "doing things," and doing them right, notwithstanding the faultfinding and nagging of the chap on the storebox.

And the man on the storebox will sit and whittle and scold and brag for another spell.

Briefs of the Week

Reunion Sept. 14, 15, 16.
"Uncle Josh Spruceby" Aug 17th.
Charlevoix County Fair, September 27-30.
"The Mammoth Cave" next Monday evening by Supt. J. W. Simmons at the High School Building.
A party of some 25 of our young people enjoyed a marsh mallow roast up at the Pines Tuesday evening.
The E. J. & S. train leaving here has been discontinued owing to lack of traffic. The other trains will run as per schedule.
Capt. Jepson has changed the name of the Str. Pilgrim to "Hum" in honor of a young lady in the custom house at Charlevoix.
W. N. Ferris is the democratic nominee for Governor. Stearns declared himself an out and out democrat and got turned down good and proper.
Supt. J. W. Simmons will lecture on the Mammoth Cave next Monday evening at the High School Auditorium. This is part of the Institute and therefore free. Everybody should attend.
The bill of lading of the Republican National convention specifies the kind and quality of goods proposed to be delivered. They will be delivered in good order and without shortage or breakage.
Mr. P. H. Case, assistant manager of the Boys' Home at Bay Springs, will preach for Rev. J. A. McKee on Sunday morning, and at night will give an illustrated lecture on the Waifs of Chicago.
Mrs. White, an inmate of the county farm from Boyne Falls, fell off a stairway at that place yesterday afternoon, receiving a broken hip and other serious injuries. Dr. Warne was called to attend.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby" Aug 17th.
Archie Burdick is on the sick list with malaria fever.
Miss Nellie Maddaugh leaves first of the week for a fortnight's visit with friends in Northport.
Some cream routes have already been established for the East Jordan Creamery and more are wanted.
Mrs. R. F. Steeles and baby left Thursday morning for Manitowish to spend the summer with her brothers.
Mr. and Mrs. L. Nyquist spent Sunday with friends at Deward and attended the dedication of the new Swedish Church.
Boosinger Bros have some very pretty pictures and frames which they are offering as premiums. See them in their windows.
Hear Supt. J. W. Simmons lecture on "The Mammoth Cave" next Monday evening at the High School building. The lecture is free.
Rev. J. A. McKee started on Thursday on his annual vacation which he will spend at his home in Crawfordsville, Ind. and at the Winona Bible Conference.
Glen Griffith of Big Rapids and Miss Mae Weatherup of this city were united in marriage last Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Richard Supernaw. Rev. J. A. McKee officiated. After the wedding a luncheon was served.
In Justice Boosinger's court this week "Pudge" Brown was up for getting too much bug juice and getting hilarious. Considering the trouble that Marshal Johnson was put to the Justice figured out that the fun was worth about $16.00 or 30-days outing with Sheriff Pierson. "Pudge" took the former. Yesterday in the case of Worden Grocery Co vs N. Muma a summons to show cause was issued by Justice Boosinger.
The taking off of the E. J. & S. evening train will be remembered by one resident of this village for a number of weeks. He likes to fish for trout up in Jordan river and went Monday to enjoy the sport. The fish this time didn't seem to take kindly to his bait and refused to be hauled in. When it became dark the sportsman set himself down to await the evening train to bring him back home—nine miles. Toward midnight a tired footsore, weary and disgusted fisherman was seen wending his way up Main St. If you want to know just how it feels to walk nine miles in the dark just ask Charles Bush.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby" Aug 17th.
Pat Walsh was home middle of the week from Gd. Rapids.
Mrs. H. I. McMillan who has been quite sick, is convalescing.
Emily and Lydia Malpass are spending a week at Bay View.
Mrs. J. A. Boosinger is entertaining her sister, Mrs. Theresa McRae of Mt. Pleasant.
Misses Hattie Barrett and Nellie Rowley were at Charlevoix one day last week.
Mrs. Hugh W. Dicken is entertaining her aunt, Mr. Susan Atkins of Baltimore, Md.
Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stroebel now occupy the dwelling rooms over the Hardware store.
The American people demand results, not talk. They like the man who delivers the goods.
Misses Dennis and Candus Procter have returned from an extended visit at Mackinaw and elsewhere.
Remember the East Jordan Creamery will open for business Aug. 10th. Be on hand with your milk and cream.
A. B. Cornell undersheriff of Kalkaska and wife were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Landrum middle of the week.
Mrs. L. A. Hoyt and sister, Miss A. M. Kneale went to Rochester, N. Y. last week called thither by the demise of a brother.
A number have availed themselves of the subscription offers to the Herald. Look them up. They're among the best we'll have to offer.
The Petoskey Bug Mfg Co wish to warn the readers of the Herald that it has no agents canvassing and to look out for cheap concerns trying to get orders on their reputation.
Mrs. A. R. Cocksill and Mrs. J. B. Fergus of Chicago, sisters of D. C. Loveday, are guests at "The Elms."
The former lady has just completed a 3 years trip around the world.
World's Fair excursion tickets are on sale daily to St. Louis via G. R. & I., with choice of routes. Rates from Petoskey are $19.75 good 15 days, $23.70 good 30 days, and $28.40 good until Dec. 15th.
PASTURAGE—I have a large pasture for cattle or horses which will easily accommodate fifty head. Will rent same at a very reasonable price to anyone wishing to place stock therein. JEROME SMITH.
Mrs. J. J. Pfender arrived Tuesday from Brown City Mich where she has held a position with the Maple Valley Creamery Co. for the past three years, and will be book-keeper for the East Jordan Creamery here.
Pine-salve acts like a poultice. There is no sore, boil or abrasion of the skin. Pine-salve will not cure. Pine-salve draws the fire out of a burn instantly and heals without leaving a scar. Sold by Warne's Pharmacy.

CHAPTER XXI—Continued.

General Carden applauded vigorously and demanded an encore. The trio sang several songs, and the old soldier lay back in his arm-chair and let his mind drift back to the hours when the one of whom Jessie was the image lifted her sweet voice in the ballads he loved to hear. At his request they sang "Douglas, Tender and True," "Robin Adair," "The Blue Bells of Scotland," "Annie Laurie," and several old war songs.

Then Jessie proposed a rubber of whist, and in the cut she became the partner of James Blake. Jessie played well and they defeated the general and Edith.

"You don't know what a victory we have won!" declared Jessie, her eyes sparkling with pleasure. "Papa and Edith think themselves invincible, and this is their first defeat. Let's go to the conservatory. I want to show Mr. Blake those lovely bulbs I sent you from Holland," and leaving Edith and the general to follow, she escorted Blake to the great glass house with its arched roof and wilderness of palms, ferns and flowers.

"I know this is not much of a treat to you," ventured Jessie. "I had forgotten that you have spent all of your life in California."

"But I have not spent all of my life in California," Blake said. "I lived in California only seven or eight years and had little chance to study flowers. What little knowledge I have of flowers dates back to my boyhood days in New England."

"New England? What part of New England, Mr. Blake?"

"Massachusetts," he answered proudly. "I was born in Boston, less than half a mile from where the tea was thrown overboard. My mother's name was Smith, so I'm a Yankee all over."

time the deceit was his own and not a sacrifice for another.

"Of course I knew John Burt," said Blake reflectively. "Dear old John! I owe him thirty-five dollars. When I ran away from home he gave me every dollar he had, and I've not seen him since. Did you say he had gone to California? Is that so? No, I never saw him there. And you know him? Really, Miss Carden, I almost feel as if we were old acquaintances. Ah, here comes Mr. and Mrs. Bishop! I had no idea it was so late."

Mr. Thomas Bishop was introduced, and after a brief conversation, in which Jessie acquainted her uncle with the fact that their guest was formerly from Rocky Woods, Blake excused himself. He accepted an invitation to call again.

"Then we will continue our recollections of Rocky Woods, Miss Carden," he said on leaving.

Instructing his coachman to drive to his apartments, James Blake closed his eyes and attempted to calmly review what had happened. He found it impossible. One emotion held mastery over him—he was in love, madly and defiantly in love with Jessie Carden. He thought of Arthur Morris and hated him. He thought of John Burt and pitied him. Neither should stand in his way.

Could she be engaged to Arthur Morris? Now that he had met Jessie Carden he found himself unconsciously repeating John Burt's indignant declaration: "It is a lie, an infamous lie!" If an engagement did exist, it should be as a barrier of mist to his ardent progress. But she did not, she could not love Arthur Morris.

Did John Burt love her? Did she love John Burt?

These were the stinging, burning questions which seared his brain, but the clamor of his conscience was Blake arrived at his office at an unusually early hour on the morning following his introduction to Jessie Carden. He had spent a miserable night. No sleep came to his blood-shot eyes, and for hours he restlessly paced the floor.

"I love her, my God, how I love her, but I also love John!" he exclaimed again and again, as the night hours crawled slowly away. "What shall I do; what can I do? I cannot give her up. By God, I'll not give her up for any man, not even for John Burt! Would John surrender the woman he loved for me? What am I to do? I must decide before I see him. If I tell John she is in New York he will see her inside of twenty-four hours. That will be the end of my hopes. She shall love me! She must love me! I cannot live without her! Oh, why did I ever see her!"

In this unequal contest between loyalty and passion in a weak and self-indulgent nature, passion won the battle, but at a frightful sacrifice. His judgment warned him that he was doomed to defeat, but with the frenzied desperation of a gambler he staked everything—honor, friendship, loyalty, his business career—all on the turn of a card, and dared to meet John Burt with treachery in his heart and a lie on his lips.

Blake knew that John Burt was in his private office, but for the first time in his life he hesitated to enter it. Prosperity had erected no wall of formality between these two. From the day they fought their boyish battle, on the edge of the fishing pool, they had called each other "John" and "Jim." In tacitly accepting John Burt's leadership, Blake recognized in his companion those traits which attract allegiance, and which hold it by unseen but powerful bands. By a display of tact which amounted to genius, John Burt had aided James Blake without patronizing him, and had forgiven his repeated mistakes without offending him.

Blake strolled slowly through the connecting offices and entered the large room reserved for customers. Those who knew the famous operator bowed respectfully. Blake gazed absent-mindedly at a bulletin board containing the early London and Paris quotations. He read them; but they had no meaning. He was thoroughly, abjectly, miserably.

"Who is that gentleman?" asked a smooth-cheeked and dapper young man, who had embarked on his first speculative venture by risking the major part of his quarterly allowance.

"Why, don't you know?" exclaimed his companion. "I should have introduced you. That's James Blake—the famous and only James Blake. Five years ago he didn't have a dollar. Twenty millions in five years is his record? And it hasn't enlarged his hat in the least. He tells a good story, sings a good song, and no man in the club can drink him under the table."

NEVER SEE HEARSE AT NIGHT.

New York Undertaker Explains Why They Are Not Sent Out.

"Nobody gives us fellows credit for having a large bump of sensitiveness," said a west-side undertaker, "but the fact is, we go to a good deal of trouble to safeguard the feelings of the general public. For one thing, we try never to keep our hearses in the street after dark.

"Of course, in the case of afternoon funerals and long distances we cannot avoid getting home late, but, even so, we make it a point to get under cover as soon as possible after night-fall. And we do that absolutely out of consideration for the public. By nine people out of ten the sight of a hearse on the street at night is taken as a sure sign of impending death and disaster.

"Even in the daytime a hearse is a gloomy affair, but to run up against one at night is pretty sure to give the most jovial fellow alive a depressing turn. I know how it is myself. Accustomed as I am to handling hearses, I don't like to bump into one unexpectedly at a dark corner.

"Most men in the business feel the same way, therefore we strive to be considerate. That we succeed remarkably well is apparent to anybody who will take the trouble to count the hearses he has seen out at night. These are so few that I'll wager the most confirmed gadabout cannot recall more than three or four of them."

—New York Times.

John Wesley's Ideas on "Ailing."

It is pretty generally known that John Wesley, during his unparalleled apostolate of half a century, traveled 250,000 miles and preached 40,000 sermons, but comparatively few are aware of the prodigious amount of literary work he managed to accomplish. His most curious and eccentric book was entitled "Primitive Physic; or, An Easy and Natural Method of Curing Most Diseases." It was published in London by Barr & Co. in the year 1743.

The preface is characteristic of the author. "When man came first out of the hands of the Creator there was no place for physic or the art of healing. But when man rebelled against the Sovereign of heaven and earth the incorruptible frame put on corruption, and the immortal put on immortality."

Turks Tax the Greeks. The Porte having issued orders for the collection of license taxes from Greeks in the Turkish dominions, it is feared at Athens that there will be fresh trouble, especially at Smyrna.

The Irish Parliamentary fund for the year 1903 amounted to $63,945.

POULTRY

The Incubator on the Farm.

The incubator and brooder are the modern allies of the poultry raiser. Originally the fowl laid but few more eggs than she could hatch. It is different now. We have developed our hen to lay 150 eggs a year, and she can at most hatch not more than thirty of them. To keep the hatching ability up to the laying ability we have had to invent the incubator and brooder. These machines are especially adapted to the use of people that are making a business of poultry raising, but they are also adapted in a lesser degree to the use of our farmers that keep flocks of a hundred or more fowls. On some of our large farms from 200 to 500 fowls are raised annually. Yet in a good many instances the only means of hatching is from hens. The operation drags along through the summer, with the result that in the fall the farmer has a good many kinds and sizes of fowls for sale, some of them marketable and some not. On a farm such as we have mentioned it will certainly pay to buy and use an incubator and brooder or brooders.

In the first place there is uniformity in the flock, both as to age and size. The birds can be raised by the hundreds in March and April, at which time eggs are readily obtainable, and when fall comes the birds that are to be disposed of will be all of a size and well grown. They will then bring a better price than otherwise, if the seller knows his business. This will be true whether the birds are sent to some commission house or are disposed of to the private trade.

Another advantage in using an incubator is the increased certainty of having chicks at all. There are some years, as all of our poultry raisers know, when the hens show little inclination to be broody and more than once the poultry raiser has found himself at the beginning of summer with only half the number of chicks he expected to have. The number to be hatched is controllable by the machines, but not otherwise. A man can start the machines in February or March and hatch till he has secured the number he wants for raising. Then he can stop. If the first batches prove a disappointment he can continue to use his machine a little longer. Not so the hen. She will often disappoint one and then make no second attempt to make good her promises to bring forth a brood.

Then, too, the brooder removes the necessity of making-nests for the sitting hens. This is a large task where hundreds of birds are to be raised. Frequently the nests of the sitters interfere with the placing of nests for laying purposes. The care of the hens is certainly as great as is the care of the incubator, and after one becomes expert with the incubator the care is less. The care of an incubator lessons in proportion as we get acquainted with it, which can scarcely be said of the hen. We have referred only to the use of the incubator in the spring, as the fall use relates to the production of broilers, which is a business almost of itself. The incubator also makes it possible to get the birds out of the shell in time to develop into winter layers before the snow flies.

Packing and Shipping Eggs in Denmark.

The work of grading and testing is done mostly by women, who become very expert. The eggs are graded according to weight. There are six recognized classes, ranging from 6 1/2 to 9 kilograms per 120 eggs (1.43 to 2 pounds per dozen eggs). The expert graders work behind a long table, upon which they have six wooden egg racks, or frames, each frame with ten dozen holes in which the eggs are placed. The grader can tell at a glance to which grade an egg belongs, and they distribute them very deftly.

When a frame is filled with ten dozen eggs (which are taken directly from the boxes received from the circles), the frames are taken by a man and weighed. If the 120 eggs weigh too much or too little for the grade for which they are intended, eggs are taken out and substituted with larger or smaller ones, as the case may be.

The frame of 120 eggs is taken into a small, tightly closed room and set on top of a hopper-shaped box, which is about two feet deep, the sides of which are lined with looking-glass. The bottom of this hopper-shaped box is about eight by thirty inches. Four sixteen-candlepower electric lights stand up from the bottom, equal distances apart. The eggs, as above indicated, are placed over these lights and looking-glasses, which ends up the tester looks carefully at and through each egg, and if any be unsound they are rejected.

The eggs are then carefully and snugly packed, side by side, with nothing between them, in four layers, in pine boxes 22 by 7 1/2 inches, nine inches deep. Between each two layers of eggs is a substantial layer of straight, clean rye straw; on the top layer of eggs another layer of straw. The thin boards are securely nailed on, the boxes are properly marked with the company's trade-mark, the number of eggs and the grade indicated, and they are sent to the ship. All eggs are sold by the pound. The co-operative company pays all expenses from the time the eggs leave the circles until they are placed on board ship. The average expense is about one cent per dozen. The cost of collecting the eggs from the farmers and bringing them to the circle centers is borne by the circles themselves. This work is done by a collector selected by the circle board. The collector is usually paid so much per pound of eggs collected. The expense of this collection is very low, perhaps on an average not more than one-half cent per dozen. The total cost to the farmer from the time the eggs leave the nests until they are on board steamer is therefore one and one-half cent per dozen.—United States Consular Report.

To Get Winter Eggs.

I have been in the poultry business for a long time, and my experience has convinced me that the first thing to do to secure winter eggs is to have a warm place for the hens. The temperature should not be lower than about 40 degrees above zero. I feed all kinds of grain I can get, but not too much corn, as in that case the birds will get too fat. The houses and yards should be kept very clean, and the fowls should not be allowed to eat foul stuff. They should have a good deal of exercise, and this may be induced by throwing grain into litter. The nests should be kept clean and the nest litter changed quite often. Green cut bone is the best thing to stimulate egg production that I have ever used.

A Few Sheep.

In looking over some reports of sheep on farms we are struck with the fact that in some of our states not one half of the good-sized farms carry any sheep. In the old days it was assumed that every farmer had at least a few sheep. We believe that to-day it would be better for the farms and better for the whole population of the country if every farm had a small flock of sheep. It appears to us that a small flock of sheep could be kept in the summer time at least at almost no cost and with great benefit to the arable portions of the farms. The husbandman works to get the weeds out of his fields, but the whole length of the pasture fence is a mass of weeds on the side of the pasture and from their tops blow millions of weed seeds every year. The sheep would keep most of these weeds down and thus destroy the source from which the fields get their annual supply of weed seeds. One reason why farmers do not keep more sheep is that dogs are destructive to the flocks; but as these ravages occur generally in the night the trouble is obviated by penning the sheep at night. The matter of fences is another cause that deters some, but a fence that is hog proof and horse proof is generally sheep proof. During the last few years there has been a steady decline in the sheep growing industry in every state except one east of Mississippi. This condition of affairs is profitable neither to the nation nor the farmer.

Pigs in Prison.

In the older parts of the country it has been the practice to keep the pigs shut up from birth to maturity. A little pen in the barn was thought to be sufficient and sometimes there was even no yard for the pigs to run out in. The said pen was sometimes only six or eight feet square. Here the pigs were kept close prisoners. No wonder that troubles like flumps were common with pigs so treated. To some extent this practice still remains. There is no question that swine should be given room for exercise, even if no pecuniary advantage can be figured from it. None of our farms are so small that there is not an abundance of room for the yard that should be connected with every pig pen. The larger the yard the better, and if it is large enough to be divided into sections in which green stuff may be grown alternately, it will be the more profitable.

A Manipulated Test.

Reports from Vermont say that at one of the creameries in that state a little unpleasantness has been occasioned by the discovery that two of the patrons had been working a slight-of-hand trick on the cream gatherer and had continually substituted test bottles filled with very rich cream for the bottles containing the samples of cream from the product of the patrons in question. One man had thus secured from the creamery payments in excess of a thousand dollars not belonging to him. At last the creamery officials began to suspect that something of the kind was being done and laid a trap for these patrons. The two were caught at the trick and means taken to secure repayment of the money thus fraudulently secured.

More Trophies for College Boys.

The Union Stock Yards and Transit Company of Chicago has decided to offer two new trophies to take the place of the Spoor trophy, won permanently by the Iowa State College. One of these new trophies will be offered for excellence in judging cattle, hogs and sheep, and the other will be awarded for judging horses. These trophies will be offered as prizes to students representing the various agricultural colleges of the United States and Canada at the coming International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago the first week in December, and, in addition, it is expected that liberal cash prizes will be offered.

The orchard that is not looked after will be a failure. We have seen orchards that have been planted by proxy by city men who evidently expected to make a great fortune out of them. But their end came as a result of being overrun by grass, caterpillars and scales.

LIVE STOCK

Live Stock Industry Working South.

Gradually our live stock interests are working southward though they have not as yet reached in a very considerable degree even the more westerly limits of what we are pleased to call the Northern States. We have noticed this gradual movement in Illinois during the last ten years. At the present time a traveler in Southern Illinois is struck by the comparatively few cattle to be met with there, yet he will also notice that the number is much larger than it was a few years ago. Here and there stock farms have been established that are being looked up to by the farmers of the vicinity, most of whom have no stock to speak of. In the very southern part of the state the writer passed one farm on which was a fine herd of Herefords. A man of the neighborhood said: "Yes, Judge, is beginning to get something from his stock farm now, though for some years he put two dollars into it for every one he took out. But he was all the time bringing up his land. Now it is in fine condition. But then he was a judge and his salary helped run the farm."

This points a double lesson. First, that the belief must be inculcated into the farmers of those sections that live stock is a good thing, and, second, that it takes capital to tide over the time when the live stock farm is being established, if all things are to be done at once and on a large scale. The southern parts of Illinois and Indiana have a climate and soil well adapted to the growing of live stock. The location is not far enough south to endanger the animals from Texas fever and is not so far north that beef cattle need much protection in winter. The growing of live stock is the difference between constructive and destructive farming. The presence of live stock helps to build up the land. Its absence frequently results in depleting it, though this is not absolutely necessary. It is, however, the usual result and is likely to be for some generations to come.

Care in Dressing Animals.

In the dressing of any animal it is always well to consider that possibly it may be affected with tuberculosis or some other contagious disease. There is little danger of infection if there is no wound on the hands that can come into contact with the meat. A good many cases are on record where men have lost their lives by carelessness in this regard. Butchers are perhaps oftener the subject of such accidents than any others; and the amateur butcher is as certainly in danger as the professional. A Chicago man reports as follows to the United States Bureau of Animal Industry:

G. E. W. Pole; age, 34; weight, 170 pounds; healthy looking man; butcher by occupation. Family history negative. Father of three healthy children. Has no recollection of having been previously sick. On May 3, 1899, while cleaning cattle viscera, he fell and a stationary meat hook upon which the hearts and lungs are hung, penetrated through the right hand between the second and third metacarpal bones. A tando vaginitis resulted, with some lymphangitis of the arm. He received the usual treatment for an infected wound and apparently made a good recovery, with, however, some limited motion of the fingers and a sensitive scar at the site of puncture. Four months afterwards an abscess formed in the axilla, which was cleaned out and tubercle bacilli were demonstrated in the broken-down gland tissue. At this time there was no soreness in the arm lymphatics or elbow gland, but he complained that there had been. In three months afterwards, or seven months from the original accident, he died from pulmonary tuberculosis.

System in Feeding.

Animals cannot get the best results from their feed unless it is given them regularly and in quite uniform portions. Every farmer should have a regular system for the feeding of his farm animals, whether the animals be the ones used for the production of meat and milk or for the production of force to be expended in labor. Irregular meals are as bad for animals as for human beings. The digestive systems adapt themselves to certain habits and seem to be as much opposed to irregularity as if they were sentient beings. On many farms there is no system of feeding and the results obtained are poor. One man will work his horses for hours beyond their regular meal times. During the last hour or so the animal is losing vigor rapidly. He is given food when his strength is partly exhausted. The stomach had not the vigor of digestion that it had at the regular eating-time, and the result is more or less disarrangement, sometimes resulting in the imperfect digestion of the food taken. This is a matter that every human being has experienced himself. The results are far more disastrous than we have been led to suppose. The fact is easier to establish than the reason for it. The cow, the pig, and the sheep, when depending on man to do the feeding fare best and thrive best when their food comes in accordance with a regular system. It is not so much a question of how many meals an animal has a day as of their regularity.

Bare-faced fish are apt to grow up and become bald-headed lies.

WIFE OLD SCHOOL DIGNITY GENERAL GARDEN PRESENTED JAMES BLAKE.

"So am I," laughed Jessie. "John Hancock once lived in the house where I was born, and Samuel Adams was there many, many times. As much of a Hancock as Edith, though she won't admit it. Don't you like Boston better than San Francisco, Mr. Blake?"

"Really, I remember very little of Boston," replied Blake. "When I was a small boy we moved to Quincy, and from there to a farm near Hingham. That part of my New England life most vivid in my memory clusters round the old farm in Rocky Woods."

"Did you live in Rocky Woods?" The dark eyes opened wide and Jessie looked wonderingly into Blake's face.

"Why, yes, I lived there for several years. Do you mean to tell me that you ever heard of that desolate patch of rocks, pines, stone fences, huckleberry swamps and cranberry marshes?"

"Certainly I have. Uncle Tom—Mr. Bishop—lived there for a generation, and spends the summers there now. I have often been there. Isn't it strange, Mr. Blake, that both of us are familiar with that out-of-the-way country? Where was your father's farm?"

"It was then known as the old Leonard farm. Do you know where Peter Burt lived—Peter Burt, the old crazy man who used to pray at night from the top of the big rock?"

"Yes," said Jessie softly, with a little catch at her breath as the blood mounted to her cheeks.

James Blake watched her face intently. Both were thinking of John Burt, but with what different emotions! Since the sun had set, a gulf had opened between John Burt and James Blake.

And Jessie Carden? Intuitively she felt that James Blake knew John Burt, but in a flash it occurred to her that Blake's business with her father was a subterfuge. Was he the bearer of tidings from John Burt? Perhaps John was dead? If alive, why did he not come himself?

drowned in the louder din of his passion. He had not yet reached a point where, with calm selfishness he could voice the brutal aphorism of moral and physical desperadoes: "All is fair in love and war." He was eager to clear himself of self-accused disloyalty to John Burt, and he clutched at any defense which would serve as possible justification or extenuation.

John Burt was his friend, the founder of his fortunes; the loyal, trustful comrade to whom he owed all he was or could hope to be. Blake knew this, and yet, with the truth confronting him and pleading for justice, the sophisticated arguments and evasions of a vaulting passion came readily to his lips.

"How do I know John loves her?" he pleaded. "He has not told me so. He has sent her no word. He could have done so easy enough. She does not know if he be dead or alive. Is that the way for a lover to act? If John has lost her it is his own fault. Perhaps he gave her up long ago. Honestly, I believe his hate for Morris is more to him than his affection for Jessie Carden."

Thus quibbled James Blake. Awakened love loosens a million eloquent tongues to plead for self, and palsies the voice which should speak for others.

The love of a man for a woman is the culmination of his egoism; his unconscious exaltation of desire.

CHAPTER XXII.

Unreasoning Passion.

In all the vast world only two persons knew that such a man as John Burt lived—James Blake and Peter Burt.

John Burt owned stock in thousands of miles of railroads. He was an investor in other great enterprises and activities. An army of men worked under his direction, and the stock market rose and fell at the pressure of his unseen hand. For years he had rebelled at the fate which had made him a recluse, which denied him the fellowship and confidence of his peers. He felt a keen joy over the knowledge that the day was approaching when he could assume his true place in the world of vast affairs.

But of earth's countless millions there was one above all others to whom he wished to tell his secret. He impatiently awaited the time when he could look into Jessie Carden's face and read the verdict in her eyes. Were years of patient waiting and working to be rewarded or unrecog-

"He Giveth His Beloved Sleep."
The plink of dawn is o'er the hill;
Awake, there is thy field to till;
In Autumn north the Monday's sun
Go forth and reap till day is done.
When winter's near and starlings peep,
"He giveth His beloved sleep."

When last thy weary toils are done,
Upon thy pillow downy pillow bed,
If love thou hast within thy breast,
There's One above who guards thy rest,
A silent watch His angels keep,
"He giveth His beloved sleep."

Faint not when life's great trials come,
Nor from the narrow pathway roam,
March on, breast forward, glance ahead,
And when the barriers all have fled,
And thou the dreary road hast run,
"He giveth His beloved sleep."

When last thy weary toils are done,
The race is run, the goal is won,
And when thou takest thy just rest,
He still is near; thou shalt be blessed,
When midst the angels' throng thou creep,
"He giveth His beloved sleep."

How Character is Made and Shown.
He was known to them in the breaking of bread.—Luke, xxiv., 35.

There are many wonderful and glorious passages in the New Testament, but few more pathetic to my apprehension than that little story of the walk at Emmaus, the disciples not recognizing the Master, white yet their hearts burned within them as they talked with Him by the way. And the story reaches its climax of beauty, unfolds the sweetest flower of its significance where the disciples, rehearsing the details of the event, tell how Jesus "was known to them in the breaking of bread."

How interesting and suggestive that He was not known to them by any sign that marked Him as the Messiah or in any way pre-eminence, but by one of the simplest things He had ever done in their presence. One likes to think of their recalling something pleasant in His manner, some happy, grateful look upon His face, as if He were God's minister in answering the prayer. "Give us this day our daily bread" which He had taught them when they asked Him how to pray. Perhaps the time when He sat at table with them was the time when the conscious burden of His ministry was least oppressive and He unbent Himself in the most intimate and friendly manner.

It is very lovely to be thought of when alive and remembered when dead as doing kind and pleasant things. Among the thousands of exaggerated and pretentious epitaphs in Mount Auburn there is one which reads:

She was so pleasant,
I think it one of the most enviable. And there are many women and as many men who earn it perfectly; they do not strive nor cry, but wherever they go and whatever they do they diffuse an atmosphere of comfort and content. They make sick people well and sad people merry. They dispel the gloom from anxious hearts and the fevered pulse is quieted at the cool fountain of their unflinching cheer.

A great many persons are known to their families and friends in the same way as Jesus was known in the New Testament story—by their behavior at the morning, noonday, or evening meal. "Joy of the street," says the Provencal proverb, "curse of the home." It is proverb which fits many people like a glove. These are men who spend all their pleasantness and gaiety on their companions in business and at the club and have only sour looks and cross words at home. There are women who can "smile and smile" at the afternoon reception and the evening party, and be anything but agreeable in the uneventful round of their domestic cares. But what men and women are in this uneventful round goes far not only to show their true character, but to make it what it is for better or worse.

Francis Bacon said: "God hangs the greatest weight upon the smallest wires." That would be dangerous mechanics were not the wires so many that in their aggregate they are of as great strength as that of the cables on which our great suspension bridges swing in air. The atomic theory may be true or false in physics; it is certainly true upon the spiritual plane. All great actions, characters and events are prepared for in silence and obscurity by innumerable little seemingly unimportant actions, refusals, acceptance, disposition. The roots of a great character spread out like the roots of a great tree, ten thousand filaments drawing their virtue from the dark earth and secret springs, and yielding each its proper increment to that great strength with which the tree or character flings wide its branches and defies the storm. Men and women are best known as they are most surely fashioned by such little seemingly petty actions as the breaking of bread or the making of it, or the tasks necessary for the honest earning of it, because the whole character rushes into expression in every part, because every part reports the soundness or unsoundness of the whole to which it has contributed its due proportion of those elements which in their aggregation and co-ordination make up a human life.—John White Chadwick.

The Constant Christian.
Constancy, stability among Christians, is currency above par. The exigencies of the Lord's work are such that we cannot afford to be unstable. The unstable Christian is one of the greatest stumbling blocks in the way of sinners. Thousands of men outside the church give this as the main reason for their active opposition or pathetic indifference to Christianity. The unstable Christian is a reproach to his profession, a reproach to his church and a reproach to his Christ. Constancy, stability, is one of the Christian worker's strongest assets.

Many of us may not be able to engineer vast enterprises in the church, many of us may not have the natural powers and gifts of some of our brethren, many of us may not have enthusiastic, hopeful and positive natures; but there is not one of us, not one but can be constant in our efforts as Christians in our own sphere, if we will take ourselves and our profession seriously. It is not child's play to be a representative of Christ. It is the work of a man and worth that man's highest thought and best endeavor. Nothing among the so-called negative vices undermines character like instability. Nothing so stamps a man as useless to his church, to his community and to his Christ as inconstancy. On the other hand, nothing tends to build up a noble and exalted character so much as constancy and faithfulness; nothing will be more likely to raise a man's usefulness to his highest notch than these qualities. To be inconstant, unstable, that were of the earth, earthy; but to be uniformly true and steadfast, that were of Christ, Christlike.

Through Sorrow's Gate.
There are many things, besides sorrow's self, that come through sorrow's gate—gentleness, tact, sympathy, strength, beautiful traits of character, which seem to find no other mode of entrance into life. Long for unclouded joy as we may, it still remains true that few of us would choose for our most valued friend one who has never suffered. The eyes that have not known tears must needs lack something of tenderness. The heart that never has been torn with anguish and loss has never sounded its own depths, and cannot measure those of another. The soul grows strong through storm and conflict, if it ever grows strong at all, and, however sweet a nature may be, we find it incomplete and unsatisfying if it has never known the softening, hallowing touch of grief. There are dark pages in our lives where we would gladly have changed the story if we could. There are wounds that still ache, and losses that even yet are hard to bear; but however we may feel about the sorrow itself, there are few of us who would be willing to give up all that it brought and taught us—to be just what we were before it touched us. There are some precious gains that come through sorrow's gate.

Rejoicing in Tribulation.
This is contrary to the flesh, but in harmony with grace. Men naturally shun what is disagreeable and irksome. To endure tribulation with joy, it must be of a kind which has not come upon us by our own folly and sin. If we bring trouble and hardship upon ourselves by our own wrongdoing, we should mourn and repent, rather than rejoice. But if for fidelity to truth and devotion to Christ we suffer, then we can rejoice that we are accounted worthy to enter into the fellowship of his sufferings. To such Christ speaks: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Such as bear trial for Jesus patiently and joyfully, thereby give a good and effectual testimony of the reality and beauty and helpfulness of the Christian religion. The world has respect and reverence for a Christian who is himself a living example of the faith he professes. But the ungenerous hate, despise, hypocrisy in religion and take a discriminating view of practical Christianity as they read it in the life of professed followers of Christ.

God Hears.
Prayer must be addressed to the Father. As soon as we utter that sacred name the divine nature responds and, to put it vividly, is on the alert to hear what we desire. A little child cannot utter a sigh however slight, a sob however smothered, without awakening the quick attention of its mother; and at the first whisper of our Father's name He is at hand to hear and bless. Alas, we have too often grieved His Holy Spirit by a string of selfish petitions or a number of formal platitudes. To the wonderment of angels we thus fritter away the most precious and sacred opportunities. Be still, then, before you pray to consider what to ask. Order your prayers for presentation and be sure to begin the blessed interview with words of sincere and loving appreciation and devotion.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Human Life.
It is the salvation of a noble nature to have some task of self-denial, some motive for self-sacrifice left, when all that made the daily burden of life endurable has passed away. Happy he who has habituated himself to look upon his whole earthly career but as a task of which the reward, though not given here, is as priceless as it is certain. I have remarked that a true delineation of the smallest man and his scene of pilgrimage through life is capable of interesting the greatest man; that all men are to an unexpressed degree brothers—each man's life a strange emblem of every man's—and that human portraits faithfully drawn are of all pictures the welcome on human walls.—Thomas Carlyle.

NO NERVES IN HIS TEETH.

John Chinaman Has at Least One Cause for Congratulation.
The impassivity of John Chinaman's countenance is now at least partially explained. He has no nerves in his teeth. This interesting bit of information comes "way from Oregon, where the dentists have been having a state meeting. One of the speakers, who makes no claims to "painless dentistry," said he had tinkered with the teeth of many Chinamen, and never once had known of them to whimper. The only thing in regard to which they show the least anxiety is to "secure any teeth they have pulled, which they want to take back or send back to China in order that they may have a full set when they are reincarnated." A Chinaman would be a good subject for a "painless dentist" to use in a public demonstration.

School for Theatrical Critics.
A school of theatrical critics is to be opened in Paris. The students are to attend dress rehearsals and write them up for practice.

Of Wide Interest.

Breed, Wis., July 18.—Special—Charles Y. Peterson, Justice of the Peace for Oconto Co., has delivered a judgment that is of interest to the whole United States. Put briefly, that judgment is, "Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best Kidney medicine on the market to-day."

And Mr. Peterson gives his reason for this judgment. He says: "Last winter I had an aching pain in my back which troubled me very much. In the morning I could hardly straighten my back. I did not know what it was but an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. After taking one box I can only say they have done more for me than expected as I feel as well now as ever I did before."

Pain in the back is one of the first symptoms of Kidney disease. If not cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills it may develop into Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism or some of the other deadly forms of Kidney Disease.

German Love of Sauerkraut.

Here is an imaginative story to illustrate the estimate that some German citizens place on sauerkraut as a food staple. A German was speaking about the high price of cabbage. "Tell you, those kabbages is awful high this year," he said; "me und me wife puts up six, seven, eight barrels of sauerkraut every year—but we can't do year. Dem kabbages dey cost too much." "You put up some sauerkraut, didn't you, Christ?" he was asked. "Oh, yes—two or three barrels—just to haf in de house in case of sickness."

Leprosy Among Fish Eaters.

Statistics are quoted showing that while in India the average occurrence of leprosy is three or four cases per 10,000 of population, in the island of Minicoy, in the Indian ocean, whose inhabitants are devoted to fishing, it rises to 150, and at Kalligoan, a fish-curing center, it amounts to 500.—Harper's Weekly.

Horsemen's Kindergarten.

"The men who are training the horses must be strict, and, at the same time, kind to them, and under no circumstances must they be played with. It is also not advisable to encourage the horses with sugar, carrots, etc.," is an order issued to the London Metropolitan Fire Brigade.

BACK LICK

Settled the Case With Her.

Many great discoveries have been made by accident and things better than gold-mines have been found in this way, for example when even the accidental discovery that coffee is the real cause of one's sickness proves of most tremendous value because it locates the cause and the person has then a chance to get well.

"For over 25 years," says a Missouri woman, "I suffered untold agonies in my stomach and even the best physicians disagreed as to the cause without giving me any permanent help. Different ones saying it was gastritis, indigestion, neuralgia, etc., so I dragged along from year to year, always half sick, until finally I gave up all hopes of ever being well again."

"When taking dinner with a friend one day she said she had a new drink which turned out to be Postum and I liked it so well I told her I thought I would stop coffee for awhile and use it, which I did."

"So for three months we had Postum in place of coffee without ever having one of my old spells but was always healthy and vigorous."

"Husband kept saying he was convinced it was coffee that caused those spells, but even then I wouldn't believe it until one day we got out of Postum and as we lived two miles from town I thought to use the coffee we had in the house."

"The result of a week's use of coffee again was that I had another terrible spell of agony and distress, proving that it was the coffee and nothing else. That settled it and I said good bye to coffee forever and since then Postum alone has been our hot meal-time drink."

"My friends all say I am looking much better and my complexion is much improved. All the other members of our family have been benefited, too, by Postum in place of the old drink, coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

In a Dutch Village.

At Marken, a fishing village of Holland, few men are to be seen, as they are nearly always out at sea in their boats. Those whom one does see are like Dutchmen in a play, in queer headgear, in the most voluminous knickerbockers that ever delighted the heart of a caricaturist and having on clattering wooden shoes which are, as a coasting skipper once said, the surest preventive of colds and of "cold feet" (which he spoke of as if they were a disease) to be found in the world. Clumey-though these Dutch fisher folk look, but they are handy in a boat. But there is agriculture, too, of a simple kind at Marken. Not a man usually is to be seen working in the bay harvest of at other employment in the fields. The women do the farm work.

Low Wages Paid in Egypt.

The population of Egypt is about 8,000,000, and most of the people are engaged in a sort of desultory campaign against mother earth to force her to yield enough grain for the mere sustenance of lazy life. The labor supply is large and dilatory; the wages are correspondingly low. In upper Egypt one can hire farm laborers, or loafers, at 9 cents a day, and in lower Egypt at 13 cents, the laborer, or loafer, to board himself. These laborers, or loafers, want no money in pay, but will take part of the crop.

Grasp the Opportunity.

In 1865, Durham was a village of a dozen houses. When the soldiers plundered the place, they got a quantity of smoking tobacco. They liked it so well that they hardly got home before they began to write to Durham to get more. There were in the town men of enough enterprise to see the opportunity which this situation offered them. It was not long before Durham salesmen were selling Durham tobacco in every part of the world.—The World's Work.

Soldiers' Superstitions.

Among the numerous superstitions of the Cossacks there is none stronger than the belief that they will enter Heaven in a better state if they are personally clean at the time they are killed. Consequently, before an expected battle they perform their toilets with scrupulous care, dress themselves in clean garments and put on the best they have. This superstition is not confined to the Cossacks alone, but is widely prevalent in all branches of the Russian army.

A Trip to Colorado, Utah or California is not complete unless it embraces the most beautiful resorts and grandest scenery in Colorado, which are found on the Colorado Midland Railway, the highest standard gauge line in the world. Exceptionally low summer round trip rates to Colorado interior state points, Utah, California and the Northwest are offered by this line. For information address Mr. C. H. Speers, General Passenger Agent, Denver, Colo.

Imitation Furs.

The skin of the muskrat or musquash makes a much more durable and richer looking fur, and from imitation Alaska sable coats frequently are made. Rabbit skins also are used after a complicated treatment in the manufacture of imitation chinchilla. No wonder there is such a difference in the chinchilla furs.

Man Should Be Vegetarian.

Man's structure, compared with that of other animals, indicates that fruits and esculent vegetables are his natural food. The man-like apes live exclusively upon fruits, nuts and green leaves.

Work and Prayer.

Praying for things and working for them brings results. Work brings results which are at least satisfactory for prayer may be answered in a way that is unexpected.

Catarah Cannot be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarah Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarah. Send for testimonials, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, Price 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

INEIRM, BUT LONG LIVED.

English Vicar Disappointed the Buyer of His Living.

In England the purchase of an advowson, or the right to succeed to a vacant church office, is not uncommon. There is a story told of a country vicarage whose incumbent was, though but middle-aged, very infirm. His tenure of the position being thus uncertain, the living was advertised for sale. The auctioneer who at the time had the disposal of all church preferments mentioned as a special advantage to intending purchasers that the holder could not last long. To put this prospect to the test several possible buyers went down to the village to look over the vicar. A father and son attended the Sunday services at the church. A servant led the silying vicar, but the latter managed to get through a very earnestly delivered sermon lasting half an hour. In the afternoon he again conducted service, baptized children and preached for fifty minutes. Service in the evening was to follow. But the man who had come to buy had seen enough. "My son," he said, "that old cock ain't a-goin' yet; I am," and he forthwith departed. In the end a young parson bought the place for himself. The invalid outlived by twenty years the man who had bought his living; he lasted fifty years beyond the sale and died of sheer old age at 92.

THE WEAK SPOT.

A weak, aching back tells of sick kidneys. It aches when you work. It aches when you try to rest. It throbs in changeable weather. Urinary troubles add to your misery. No rest, no comfort, until the kidneys are well. Cure them with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. W. M. Daucher, of 25 Water St., Bradford, Pa., says: "I had an almost continuous pain in the small of the back. My ankles, feet, hands and almost my whole body were bloated. I was languid and the kidney secretions were profuse. Physicians told me I had diabetes in its worst form, and I feared I would never recover. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1896, and I have been well ever since."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Daucher will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers, price 50 cents per box.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

Paxtine is in powder form to dissolve in water—non-poisonous and harmless to delicate tissues. Contains antiseptics containing alcohol which irritates inflamed surfaces, and have no cleansing properties. The contents of every box makes more Antiseptic Solution—lasts longer—goes further—has more uses in the family and does more good than any antiseptic preparation you can buy.

The formula of a noted Boston physician, and used with great success as a Vaginal Wash, for Leucorrhoea, Pelvic Catarrh, Nasal Catarrh, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Cuts, and all soreness of mucus membrane.

In local treatment of female ills Paxtine is invaluable. Used as a Vaginal Wash we challenge the world to produce its equal for thoroughness. It is a revolution in cleansing and healing power; it kills all germs which cause inflammation and discharges.

All leading druggists keep Paxtine; price, 50c a box; if you do not send us for it, Don't buy imitations—there's nothing like Paxtine.

I was all run down from nervousness and overwork and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a fine tonic and excellent for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned. Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered Kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Huss, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."
