Porter J. White in "Faust"

A Gorgeous Electrical and Mechanical Display.

In brief, the plot is as follows: Faust, a learned alchemist, doctor of philosophy, having reached that age when all pleasures that the world contains fails, invokes the aid of the spirits to give him new emotions, that life might be worth living. In response to his frenzied appeal, Mephisto appears and agrees to give Faust youth, health and passions, and all the pleasurable enjoyment to be drawn therefrom, upon condition that when the gamut has been run his soul shall belong to Mephisto. Faust is dazzled and held spell-bound by a beautiful vision of Marguerite, wrapped in an angelic halo, which fades away as he passionately rushes upon it. He accedes to Mephisto's demand and a compact is drawn between them. The aged and senile philosopher is transformed into a handsome youth, burning with passion and eager with anticipation. From this time forward his one thought is of Marguerite. Then follow his meetings with her, their mutual love, his betrayal of her confidence, the poisoning of her mother, while seeking only to make her slumber more deeply; the return of Valentine, her soldier brother whose anguish and rage know no bounds when informed of his blasted home. He meets Faust in a duel and by the devil's aid is killed. Insidious Mephisto excites the justice-loving neighbors of Marguerite by informing them of the seeming unnatural murder of her mother, and she is carried off to prison. Faust finds his way into Marguerite's cell partially demented. He proposes to carry her away to escape the dread consequences of her crime, but at this time the gentle spirit goes out and Mephisto claims Faust as his own, who is saved by the intervention of the spirit of repentance and remorse. Ministers throughout the country highly indorse "Faust" as a moral lesson. Faust will appear at Loveday Opera House soon.

PEOPLE WHO RADIATE CHEER.

This world is too full of sadness and sorrow, misery and sickness; it needs more sunshine; it needs cheerful lives which radiate gladness; it needs encouragers who will lift and not bear down, who will encourage, not discourage. Who can estimate the value of a sunny soul who scatters gladness and good cheer wherever he goes, in stead of gloom and sadness? Everybody is attracted to these cheerful faces and sunny lives, and repelled by the gloomy, the morose, and the sad. We envy people who radiate cheer wherever they go, and filling out gladness from every pore. Money, houses and lands look contemptible beside such a disposition.

"The President"

Brief Sketch of Our Chief Executive.

The Herald takes pleasure, this week in presenting to its readers a good lithographic picture of The President. It was taken from one of his latest photographs and is considered a very good likeness.

Quotations from Emerson.

Because She Loved Him.

Mollie Little of Traverse City died Sunday night from the effects of Paris green taken Thursday. She was only 17 years old, but loved a man whose wife died last summer. It is alleged that he promised to marry her, but time after time refused. The girl became very melancholy and brooded constantly. Her father was killed in the big Pere Marquette wreck last year, and she lived with her grandfather, H. C. Davis.

THE NOVEMBER "SMARTSET"

There are thirty-eight signed contributions in the November Smart Set, and no magazine can offer a greater variety of stories and poems; certainly no standard is higher. The novelette which opens the issue is called "The Surrender," and is written by J. H. Twells, Jr. It is a powerful study of divorce, presented with great insight and feeling. The scenes, many of which are dramatic in the extreme, are laid in Paris, and the author reveals an intimate knowledge of the French capital.

A timely essay by the distinguished dramatist, Clyde Fitch, entitled "The Play and the Public," will be widely read and discussed. Mr. Fitch writes from the inside, and everything he says on a dramatic subject is spoken almost "ex cathedra."

In the long list of short stories it is difficult to choose any particular one which could be called "the best," for all are superlatively good.

The number is rich in excellent verse. Among the contributors are Edith M. Thomas, Joaquin Miller, Theodosia Garrison, Edward W. Barnard, Madeline Bridges, John Vance Cheney, Richard Burton, P. McArthur and Madison Cawein.

MAJORITY JURY VERDICTS.

Several states have laws permitting majority verdicts to be returned by jurors in civil and criminal cases, the concurrence of from two-thirds to five-sixths of the jury being necessary. The trouble with the present system is that when jurors refuse to sacrifice their convictions there is a costly and unnecessary disagreement. The cause of justice would be served by a two-thirds vote in criminal cases. Another advantage to be gained by the change would be that the corruption of jurors then would be a more elaborate costly and dangerous process.

BOOSINGER BROS. SHOES

Considering

The distance you have to travel, cheapness should not predominate in your Shoe buying. The higher the grade the better the trade. At the same time you do not have to pay a "fashionable" price in order to get good Shoes and get them to fit you perfectly. The great success we have had and the satisfaction that all our customers have had with the Pingree Shoes at $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 prove their popularity.

For Fall wear, for hard knocks, for durability there are no Shoes can equal the Rindge Oregon Calf, Hard Pan, and Velour Calf. The prices vary from $2.25 to $3.50 for the Men's goods and from $1.50 to $2.25 for the boys. Supreme strength, overweight soles, outside top.

We know the need of strong Shoes for everyday wear. Our kind make satisfied customers. Are you one of them? Call today, or any day, soon.

Homesick for Old Halsted

A Ballad of Bubby Creek.

All around the world we've wandered, ranged through every foreign land, Heard the Bow Bells chime in London, sauntered through the roaring Strand.

We have sailed to San Francisco, where they liked in 'forty-nine, And have roamed through old Calcutta where the greasy fakery whine.

Up and down big British India, through Rangoon and Mandalay, Have we sashayed like a gypsy, always thirsting for the fray;

In a cattle ship we clustered when our currency ran shy; And we hid us in the steerage from the captain's furtive eye.

Always roaming like Ulysses with a fierce and hungry soul, Through the East we sashayed blithely, north and south from pole to pole;

But the bells of old Chicago lured us from across the foam, Oh, the sunny side of State street, and the haunting spell of home!

Here the keen breeze off the prairie fans your hot and fevered brain, And the witchery of the city soothes your heartache and your pain;

Lonely exiles have we wandered o'er treacherous, alien foam, Always yearning for Chicago and our friends and girls at home.

No matter where you wander, you may not escape her spell, You'll be homesick for the city as the ocean claims sea shell;

Bubby Creek looms on your vision, you can smell it for a mile, And the fragrance of the stock yards knocks you dizzy for awhile.

And the twenty-storied buildings seem to scrape theapphire sky, And the saucy tug boats darting as the skimming swallows fly;

And the high bridge spans the river lifting up its braughty head, And the foaming current snarling with its cargo of the dead.

Bubby Creek, what memories cluster round thy hollowed fragrant name; Bubby Creek is bright emblazoned on the starry scroll of Fame.

Bubby Creek, where oft I wandered as I lured me to her side, Swimming in the murky waters, oh, what fierce and soothing joy!

Take me back to old Chicago far across the gaudy spray, Harbor lights of home are gleaming there, our soft-eyed sweethearts stay;

I am sick of foreign places, Chicago lures me to her side— Take me back to Old Chicago far across the Great Divide!

Passing of Old Hotel

The Girard hotel of Brownsville, the oldest hotel in the United States west of the Allegheny mountains, and which has been in continuous service furnishing entertainment for man and beast for over 100 years, was sold by the sheriff of Fayette county recently to satisfy a mortgage.

While not the first hotel built this side of the Alleghenies, the Girard is without doubt the oldest in point of service. It was built in 1800, and just four years ago this summer celebrated the centennial of its establishment.

In the more than a century that has passed since it was first erected the hotel has been in constant service. It has changed hands frequently, but has always been a favorite place for travelers to stop.

In the old days of the National Pike it was a famous hostelry. Brownsville was then the head of navigation on the Monongahela river. The only route from Washington and Baltimore to all the vast domain that lies west of the Monongahela river valley was through Brownsville. At least that was the direct road, and one of the most traveled. Governors, senators, congressmen and travelers of every kind and description journeyed that way and made the old Girard-house their stopping place.

Andrew Jackson was a guest there. So was Henry Clay. Gen. Lafayette was entertained at the Girard, and a host of others whose names are familiar in American history. Jackson was a frequent guest at the house, and always insisted on having the best Monongahela rye whiskey the valley could produce.

It is related of him that on one of his trips over the pike he suffered a sprained ankle and put up at the Girard for repairs.

The Brownsville physician called to attend him undertook to bathe the injured ankle with whiskey, to which "Old Hickory" vigorously objected.

Although the medical man had his way, the hero of New Orleans insisted that the use of the remedy internally would do more good and save a sacrifice.

Of late years the management of the old house has not been so successful, and it may soon make way for modern improvements. — Pittsburg Dispatch.

House Built in Waterfall

In the deep shade of the wooded cliffs beneath the Pizzo di Torno, lies a villa. This is the Villa Pliniana, built in 1570 by the Count Anguissola of Piacenza, and now the property of the Trotti family of Milan.

The place takes its name from an intermittent spring in the court, which is supposed to be the one described by Pliny in one of his letters, and it is further celebrated as being the coolest villa on Como.

It lies on a small bay on the east side of the lake, and faces due north, so that, while the villas of Cernobbio are bathed in sunlight, a deep green shade envelops it.

The house stands on a narrow ledge, its foundations projecting into the lake, and its back built against the almost vertical wooded cliff, which protects it from the southern sun.

Down this cliff pours a foaming mountain torrent from the Val di Carole, just beneath the peak of Torno, and this torrent the architect of the Villa Pliniana has captured in its descent to the lake and carried

Must Have Nimble Heels

That royal women are so passionately fond of dancing is not to be wondered at, since it is only within a comparatively recent period that the rigorous etiquette by which they have been surrounded has been modified to the point where it is permissible, in a game of tennis or golf, or any game whatever, for an opponent of less exalted rank to play his or her best game without infraction of the rule that not even by accident should the royal player be defeated.

Golf, tennis and such games lost interest with those who were obliged to play under these conditions, and it was only natural that queens and princesses regarded the ball room as the sole place where they might indulge in exercise on an equal footing with a partner instead of an opponent.

Love's Extravagance.

The sunlight of your smile, the wit
That sparkles in your eyes,
Has born within my heart a love
As vast as God's blue skies.

The glamor of your hair, the fair
Chaste contour of your face,
Has born within my heart a love
As limitless as space.

The carmine of your lips, their drips
Of laughter light and free,
Has borne within my heart's love
That hungers but for thee.

The beauty of your heart, your art
Of innocence divine,
Has born within my heart a love
Undying, wholly thine.

This story has several morals. Also it has three heroes, a heroine, an eccentric philanthropist and a score of supernumeraries of too little importance, so far as this incident is concerned, to be mentioned by name. The heroes are Mr. Swallow, Mr. Spilkington and Mr. Spiker; the heroine is, or was, Miss Honeygarde; the eccentric philanthropist is Mr. Wilson. So much for the introduction; now for the story:

Swallow, Spilkington and Spiker work for Mr. Wilson. On the 4th day of January last the three young men held an important interview with their employer.

"What do you want?" said Wilson to Swallow.

"A raise," said Swallow.

"And you?" to Spilkington.

"A raise."

"And you?" to Spiker.

"A raise."

"Can't have it," said Wilson. "You get $25 a week now."

"I know that," said Swallow, "but that ain't enough. We are worth more than that. We want $30."

"Too much," said Wilson. "Still, I do not wish to discourage you. You are worthy young men, and I like you. I do not wish to leave you without hope. I will increase your salary on one condition. If you will get married I will pay you $30 a week."

Swallow, Spilkington and Spiker turned pale.

"Married?" they said. "This is very sudden. We must have time to think."

They retired into an adjoining room and thought. After due deliberation they reported their decision.

"Sir," said they, "we refuse to accept prosperity on such onerous terms. Twenty-five dollars a week, according to our calculation, will go further for one than $30 for two. We prefer positive to potential evils. We will not get married."

Then Swallow, Spilkington and Spiker went back to their desks and continued to work for $25 a week, always bearing in mind the opportunity for advancement should they care to purchase promotion at such a cost.

Swallow, Spilkington and Spiker are good friends. Usually they lunch together. Last Monday that amicable arrangement would have been satisfactory to Swallow and Spilkington, but when they got ready to leave the office and looked around for Spiker they found that he had already gone. They saw him at the restaurant but they did not join him. Spiker was not alone. Miss Honeygarde sat opposite. Miss Honeygarde beamed upon Spiker and Spiker beamed upon her. They were happy. Swallow and Spilkington were not happy; they were envious.

"Ungrateful dog," said Swallow. "So that's why he left us? He has treated us most shabby. But we'll get even. We'll have revenge."

He called the waitress.

"Delta," he said, "do you see our friend over there? Well, he has deserted us. He's married."

"Married?" cried Delta. "Sure?"

"Sure," said Swallow. "Married last night. My friend and I were at the wedding. Weren't we, Dick?"

"Th-h-hub," said Spilkington.

"You don't say," said Delta. "Was an advocate of domestic tranquility. I like a man who has home ties. I shall do well by you. You deserve more than $30 a week. I will promote you. You shall have $40 a week, with the prospect of $50 the first of next year."

Swallow and Spilkington, almost fainting, when they came to Swallow asked:

"Say, Spike, were you married at lunch time, yesterday?"

"No," said Spiker. "Hadn't thought of it then. Little girl just came in to spend the day. You put the notion into our heads. Congratulations, you know, and gossip and dishes of rice and wedding cake. Seemed like the real thing. Little girl awfully nice. Known her long time. Like each other tremendously. Why not?" says I.

"Why not?" says she. "Let's," says I. "Let's," says she. "So we did. All due to you. Thanks awfully."

"Good Lord!" said Swallow.

"Good Lord!" said Spilkington.

Swallow addressed Mr. Wilson timidly.

"Sir," said he, "are there any more jobs of the same kind where this came from?"

"No," said Wilson, "no more promotions in sight. Even if you two fellows should get married now, you'd have to peg along on the $25 basis."

"Forty dollars, you know," mused Spiker, maliciously, "and the little girl's old man was so delighted he plunked down $1,000 cash as a wedding present."

"Good Lord," said Swallow and Spilkington again.—New York Press.

Would Name the Dog Care.

The family had added a bull terrier to its stock of pets. The first day after his arrival the new member ended the career of a pet cat. He was forgiven, however, and that night there was a discussion over a name for dog. Six-year-old Pauline listened to several suggestions, and then said, gravely: "I'd call him Care. I think. You know grandma says, 'Care killed a cat.'"

Fastest Time on Bicycle.

The fastest that has been done on a bicycle is the record of 66 feet a second.

ONE CAUSE FOR DRINK HABIT.

Expert Traces Intemperance to Improper Feeding.

"There is a cause for the drink habit which even good Christian parents do not understand," says a writer in What to Eat. "They cannot realize why their children, with beautiful surroundings and daily Christian influences, sometimes go far astray, becoming sadly immoral, and in many instances drunkards. When they, as well as many of the physicians, shall have exhausted all other efforts to locate the cause of the trouble, let them look to the stomach—the poor, abused stomach—and they will, in all probability, find the source of the evil. From infancy many of the little ones are given food beyond the capacity of their digestive organs. As soon as several teeth have appeared, meats are frequently a part of the bill of fare. These, as well as the other articles of food, are necessarily swallowed without proper mastication. Pepper, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, vinegar and highly seasoned salads also find their way into these young and tender stomachs until, as the result of such a diet, fermentation sets in and a little distillery is created in these youthful temples. Under such conditions a child becomes irritable, quick tempered, untruthful, and it would be surprising if it grew up to noble manhood."

PREPARE FOR LONG FASTS.

Nature Takes Good Care of Animals That Hibernates.

A large number of species of animals undergo more or less prolonged and continuous fasts during the period of their winter or summer sleep. During such slumbers the more active functions of the body are to a great extent suspended, while those that are carried on act slowly and entail comparatively little waste of tissue and energy. Moreover, before the period of the winter torpor or hibernation takes place, many animals, such as bears, accumulate large stores of fat on various parts of the body, which suffice to supply all the waste entailed by the respiratory function during the period in question. Fat is also accumulated by the mouse-lemmings of Madagascar previous to the summer, sleep, or aestivation, and is used up in a similar manner, their summer sleeps being undertaken for the purpose of avoiding the season of great heat and drought, when food is difficult or impossible to procure.

"Ah Sin, Esquire."

By way of corroborating my view that the title "Esquire" is utterly devoid of meaning, one of my readers mentions that in Singapore, where he has resided for eleven years, it is not only universally bestowed on every white man, but also upon the wealthier Chinese and Asiatics. "Ah Sin, Esq." looks and sounds well. It will surely lend an additional attraction to life in a Rand mine or compound when the Celestial knows that the wealth he amasses out of his "average minimum" wage will entitle him to such a designation. He could not get a peacock's feather or a yellow jacket at home for anything like the price.—London Truth.

Grouse Has Many Defenses.

The grouse has a hundred tricks of defense. It will lie still until the hunter is within a yard of it, then soar straight upward in his front, towering like a woodcock; again, it will rise forty yards away, and the sound of its wings is his only notice of its presence. It will cover upon a branch under which he passes, and his cap will not be more than a foot below it as he goes, and though it has seen him approaching it will remain quiescent in fear until his back is turned. It will rush then, and when he has slowed himself hurriedly around he will catch only a glimpse of a brown, broad-wing far away.

One of Corea's Superstitions.

Near the city of Seoul, the capital of Corea, is a hill called Pook Han, which was formerly covered with trees. The legend runs that so long as a tree remained on the hill so long will Corea maintain its independence, and therefore no one is allowed to cut or touch a tree. But the natural consequence of this want of forestry has been that the trees have gradually died off, until now only one is left. On this one tree it is believed that the fate of the country rests, and when it goes Corea as an independent state will go with it.

My Queen.

I did not know I had a friend
So near, by chance to save;
It seemed my fortune here must end,
I just plundered by a knave.
Her back was turned, I knew her not
In my perplexity,
Yet she was there to spoil the plot
Of my arch enemy.
And when I saw her royal face
Appear upon the scene,
Victorious champion of my case,
I hailed her as my queen.
There may be those of higher rank,
Of greater worth than she,
But now the queen of trumps I thank
She took the trick for me.—New Yorker.

Counted His Grandmother.

When some surprise was expressed that a small boy should prefer to go for a summer outing to the sleepy village where his mother lived as a little girl, instead of to the seashore with its "attractions," the little fellow replied: "I count my grandmother." In the plans of many families at this season of the year "counting the grandmother" plays an important part. Her welcome arms form for the child "the first line of reserves," to use a military phrase.—Youth's Companion.

Misses' Seven-Gored Klitted Skirt.

Skirts that are made flat over the hips and are so plaited as to mean generous fullness below that point increase in favor week by week, and are shown in many variations. This one is peculiarly attractive and suits young girls to a nicety, being made of plain cut bias and stitched with corticeil silk. The plaits are turned backward and are so arranged as to conceal all seams, while the many gores do away with unnecessary bulk. All suiting and skirting materials are appropriate.

The skirt consists of seven gores and is closed invisibly at the center back. The plaits are laid on indicated lines and are pressed flat for their entire length, but stitched for a portion only.

The quantity of material required for the medium size (14 years) is 6 1/2 yards 21 or 27 inches wide, or 3 1/2 yards 44 inches wide.

Whole Cucumber Pickles.

Lay a hundred cucumbers in cold water for an hour. Drain, put into a stone crock and cover with cold brine that is strong enough to bear up an egg. Set aside for three days, drain off the brine, and wipe the pickles dry. Wash out the crock, put in the cucumbers, cover with cold water and leave for twenty-four hours. Boil in vinegar two minced onions, twenty cloves, an ounce each of mustard and celery seed and a few blades of mace. Add a cup of sugar and fill the crock with this boiling mixture. Stir the cucumbers well, then cover closely and leave for a week. At the end of that time drain off the vinegar, boil it up again and again pour it over the pickles. Do not use for several months.

Skirts Long and Full.

The newest skirts, in spite of all the prophecies to the contrary, are very long and full, and, when puffings and gaggings are not employed, there are many small frills, much tucked and ruffled, or inserted with lace. There is a general air of droopiness about all the smart toilettes of the moment, and one really cannot deny their graceful elegance. A lovely little linen gown seen the other day—it had been made in Paris for one of the smartest Parisiennes renowned for her perfect taste in dress—had the skirt cut very long, and decorated with four "fouces" of embroidery in graduating widths separated by nun's plaits. The plaited bodice had a little fichu fastened in front of either shoulder by a rosette of black-velours mouseline, and the deep pointed belt was also of the velours mouseline.

Skirt Styles.

Styles are, in the main, very much what designers have been leading up to for a year or more. Skirts, instead of molding the form, spring light away from the waist-line, though many still bear witness to the very natural fear of looking bunched and thick, which haunts most women no longer on the right side of twenty-five, by being set into cordings and gaggings. The plisse skirt and the box-plaited variety are both admirable, and likely to endure.

The short skirt has found its right place strictly as a walking skirt, for early morning wear, for shopping, or for country and sports; the most usual length is that which just touches the ground all around. Trains are reserved for evening gowns and ceremonious toilettes.

Shirt Waists Here to Stay.

"Shirt waists are too comfortable to ever go out of fashion," said a prominent modiste recently. "They are growing more dressy every season, and yet I doubt, too, if the real plain tailor-made shirt waist, worn with a white collar and black tie or a neat stock, will ever be superseded for certain occasions by the dressier affairs. I make up quantities of the white handkerchief linen waists, hand-embroidered, right through the summer and winter. They launder well, are extremely becoming, and cool."

French Finery.

Linen gowns, it should be explained, are the chic thing for morning wear at all the smart French holiday places just now, and when they are not possible, on a dull or rainy day, smart little coats and skirts of fine serge or some thin cravenette cloth are in accordance with good taste. But muslin dresses are a thing apart; they are for afternoon and garden party and semi-evening wear, dainty robes painted or printed with tiny pompadour designs of flowers, and commingled with cobwebby laces threaded with the very narrowest of velvet bebe ribbons that look as though fairy fingers alone had fashioned them. Roses, by the way, are the most modish of all flowers and the most admired for wear this season, and apropos of matters millinerial, all the newest hats have decidedly high crowns.

Artistic Fruit-Centerpieces.

The English taste for fruit centerpieces for the dinner table has been stimulated by the beautiful designs in electroliers which goldsmiths and silversmiths are turning out.

The wiring is done through a hole in the center of the table and cleverly hidden by low bowls with tubes running through the center, from which rise and spread the electroliers.

In one design, a bowl of exquisite carved Italian marble is supported by six cupids and from the center spring the gold-plated electroliers in a spray of three, showing narcissi lights. This bowl may be filled with fruits according to the English fashion or, to meet the American taste, pink roses are preferred.

Another centerpiece has narcissi blooms at the base as well as on the upper electroliers, and cupids are posed, reaching from the lower row of lights to the upper.

Elaboration in Gowns.

Modes of the moment seem as fussy as ever, and nearly all of them appear to one or other of the Louis periods. There is simplicity in effect, but in reality how different it all is! Gaggings and puffings and festooned flounces, to say nothing of the flat bouillonnages now in vogue, spell endless handwork, and it is really true that dressmaking just now is neither more nor less than fine needlework. More especially is this the case with mousseline and taffetas frocks—the required lightness and daintiness of effect can only be produced by hand stitching, and as the newest skirts are guileless of lining it goes without saying that the very finest needlework is alone admissible. Taffeta is more and more in evidence, and its most serious rival is glace silk, softly riched with chiffon.

Parisian Creation.

One of the pretty American women in Paris recently appeared at a reception gown in a dress of black Chantilly, beautifully made over a lustrous satin foundation. The hat was a great wide-spreading black lace picture hat and she wore long black gloves. The note of color was found in a beautiful turquoise blue sash, in a great, long, blue ostrich plume and in a handsome turquoise brooch at the throat. The costume was by all odds the most attractive in the room.

Kimono Dressing Sacque.

No other form of dressing sacque is quite so comfortable and satisfactory as the kimono. This one is peculiarly attractive and is made of light weight wash-fannel with bands of wash silk in plain color. As shown, the sleeves are pointed, but round ones can be substituted whenever preferred. Again, the yoke can match the band in place of the kimono when that combination is liked. In addition to the light weight wools Oriental cotton crepes and all washable materials are eminently appropriate and, in place of the bands being plain and the material figured, the material can be plain and the bands of any pretty figured, silk or ribbon that may be chosen.

The kimono consists of full fronts and back which are joined to the yoke and is finished with a collar and hand cut in one piece. The sleeves are in one piece each and slightly full at the shoulders.

British Army Conquests.
"Ours is the only army," says the London Telegraph, "which has, with the occasional assistance of the marines, fought in all the five continents from the Rhine to the Crimea, from Syria to Peking, from Hudson bay to Patagonia, from Egypt to the Cape, and in the Australian seas from New Guinea to New Zealand. But the ascent of the Himalayas and the march to Lhasa surpass, in purely picturesque fascination; everything in British military annals."

The Old Stair Carpet.

Old stair carpet can be turned to good account as follows: First shake it well and cut away the bad parts and with the best of it make pads for doubling short lengths and tacking them at the edge of each step where the tread comes before laying the new carpet. This will make a new carpet wear twice as long and also make it very soft to walk upon, says the Brooklyn Times.

Invention of Panama Indians.

We should never have had the Panama hat but for the quick-fingered Indians of the Isthmus of Panama. Even to-day their secret process for seasoning the grass blades used in weaving these hats remains unrivaled. Basketmakers of the same region make baskets which will hold water without leaking—another invention which is quite beyond us.

Many Buried in One Grave.

While making excavations for the enlargement of a church at Rogiet, Monmouthshire, Eng., the other day, about a hundred skeletons were discovered. The bodies had apparently been buried in one grave. They are supposed to be the remains of victims of the plague, or of men who fell in a border raid. The skeletons have been reinterred.

The Gypsy in Europe.

Europe is the principal home of the gypsies. For centuries they have passed along the roads of the countries upon that continent in their rolling houses, calling themselves in their pride of race simply and superbly Roma, meaning the men. In France they are called Romanichels, but chiefly Bohemians.

Sleep Through the Winter.

Bats generally remain torpid throughout the winter months; while the African lung fish passes the whole of the dry season comfortably sealed up within a nest formed by the caked and dried mud of the river bed. In these cases the fast must accordingly be prolonged and of a severe type.

Indian Cotton Weavers.

Cotton weaving has done more for Great Britain within the last century than any other one industry. The Indians of Central and South America have for centuries past used a loom so elaborate that ours is, comparatively speaking, but a slight improvement upon it.

Most Popular Names.

William, Mary, John, Elizabeth, Thomas, George, Sarah, James, Charles, Henry, Alice, Ann, Joseph, June, Ellen, Emily, Annie, Frederick, Margaret, Emma, Robert, Arthur, Alfred, Edward, these, in the order given, are the most popular Christian names.

Latest from Billville.

Following is the latest news from Billville: "The millponds have been gayly decorated, the alligators have taken to the woods, and all you have to do is to jump in—and imagine you're at the seashore!"—Atlanta Constitution.

English Army Maneuvers.

Army maneuvers were recently held in the southern part of England, under actual war conditions, and a scout of the invading army called the Windsor postoffice to borrow a map of the district for his commanding officer.

Comforting Philosophy.

The joy of to-day may be ashes of sorrow, but the humiliation of tomorrow will surely be the jest of to-day after. Always, in some way, the future justifies the past.—Ina Brevoort Roberts in September Lippincott's.

Use for Spurious Coins.

Spurious coins are legally made in China. They are used to put in the coffins of the dead, and the superstition prevails that they make the dead happy.

Gaelic Hockey.

"Camogaidheach" is the name of a game, somewhat like hockey, invented for the women of the Gaelic league in Ireland.

Leather Trunks Long Used.

Leather trunks for transporting clothes were made and sold in Rome as early as the time of Julius Caesar.

London Honor to John Harvard.

American residents of London propose to honor the memory of John Harvard, founder of the famous Massachusetts college, by a window in St. Saviour's church, Southwark, where he was born.

Products of Dogfish.

The Canadian government has decided to construct three factories in Nova Scotia for the manufacture of glue and other material from dogfish—all that the dogfish is good for.

The heroes are Mr. Swallow, Mr. Spilkington and Mr. Spiker.

It a church wedding? I hope so. I do love church weddings. They are so well and so awfully solemn.

"No," said Swallow, "this was not a church wedding. It was just a home

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HERALD

G. A. Lisk, Publisher

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR

Entered at the postoffice at East Jordan, Michigan, as second class mail matter.

Our County Tickets.

The Republicans of Charlevoix County have reason to congratulate themselves in the personnel of their County Ticket. Every man on the ticket has been tried and all have shown those qualifications that are adapted to and for public service. In state and national issues they stand firmly on the party platform and will do all they can to advance Republican ideas.

The talk of "Ring" and "Bossism" seems to be somewhat out of place when one gives good, honest thought to the matter to the convention that nominated them. Nearly a full delegation was present and each man nominated, if not unanimous at least had a large majority vote. There is a good party organization and no one will dispute the fact that such an organization is requisite to good government. The only time that an organization becomes menacing is when it is used for illegal purposes. No one would think of charging any Republican nominee with any crime greater than a party zeal. Every man on the ticket will be elected and there will be no regrets.

If our brother publisher really wants to know anything further in regard to THE HERALD's editorial of last week, we respectfully refer him to certain DEMOCRATS who have ordered their names struck off from the Demosorehead ticket.

MR. WARNER'S RECORD

He Has Been a Faithful Public Servant.

SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED

For the Duties of Governor—Paper Now Assailing Him Also Vilified McKinley, Hanna and Chandler

No warmer commendation was ever given to the public acts and purposes of any man than was given by the Detroit Evening News and the Detroit Tribune in referring to the legislative course of Fred M. Warner during the sessions of 1895 and 1897. On May 31, 1895, at the close of Mr. Warner's first term as senator the News said of him:

"While the term corporation will always be associated with the legislature of 1895, and deservedly, too, it is only fair to say that there was a respectable minority in both houses, which had it been able to shape the course of affairs, would have made a brighter history. Such senators as Warner (and seven others, naming them, and thirteen members of the house, naming them) were the more conspicuous of the little group at each end of the capitol whose course was uniformly the reverse of that marked out by the machine and other corporation lobbyists."

After Fred M. Warner's Second Term as Senator.

"There has been a small minority in the senate that has all along resented the patronizing way Thompson talked about them and of his ability to swing the majority for or against any bill as he pleased. They are Republicans like Warner (and five others, naming them). Their districts will make no mistake in re-electing them." —Detroit Evening News, June 1, 1897.

Warner's Record as State Senator. Fred M. Warner voted in favor of a bill for the taxation of sleeping cars in 1895.

Fred M. Warner was one of the twelve senators who voted (May 27, 1897), to take the Michigan Central Charter Repeal bill from the committee.

Fred M. Warner voted for the so-called Atkinson Railroad Taxation bill at the special session of 1898. Discussing the measure (Senate Journal, 1898, p. 238) he said: "I am in favor of the passage of this bill. I think it is in the line of equal and just taxation and should be passed."

Fred M. Warner was one of the nine senators who voted against tabling the bill which provided for the reduction of railroad fares in the Upper Peninsula.

Fred M. Warner was one of the seventeen senators who voted in favor of increasing the rate of taxation of express companies in the special session of 1898.

The above is proof positive that Fred M. Warner never has been and never will be controlled by any man or machine or combination whatsoever.

DON'T LOSE SIGHT OF THIS FACT.

Republicans should not lose sight of the fact that the next legislature will reapportion and redistrict the state on congressional and legislative lines. How would you like to see the state gerrymandered by a legislature bossed by Czar Campau, with a governor, Campau-machine-made, to sign such a bill? It would, of course, mean a gerrymander that would outgerrymander anything ever before attempted, and for what purpose? To elect Campau United States senator and give the Democrats in congress comfort by the election of several Democratic congressmen two years hence. It would make Michigan the battle ground in the next congressional election with a probable Democratic electoral vote in 1908. Republicans will not be drawn into this trap.

WAS REPUBLICAN LEGISLATION.

The Australian ballot system means in the mind of pretty much everybody, the feature of an authorized uniform ballot furnished by official authority, and the private booth in which the voter prepares his ballot secure from observation. These are the effective safeguards that are in the mind of every man when he speaks of the Australian ballot, and without which other features of it would be worth anything. Those are provided in the election law enacted by the Republican legislature of 1899, and approved by Gov. Cyrus G. Luce. The law was passed by the votes of 80 per cent of the Republican members, while 60 per cent of the Democrats either voted against it or did not vote at all. In an amendment adopted by the succeeding Democratic legislature the feature of the blanket ballot was added; but that is a detail of trifling consequence beside the provision of the official ballot to be furnished by the state or the county, and the private voting booth, which are the features of vital consequence, and were both Republican measures.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES.

It is reason for congratulation that the head of the Republican state ticket has with him as accompanying candidates a list of gentlemen who will well bear the scrutiny and investigation which comes to men who desire official positions. In every instance they are cordially supported by their home friends, several of them having won their way to official promotion through faithful and intelligent service rendered in other official state relations. The Republicans of Michigan need have no fear as to the personal strength of their candidates before the people, nor as to their ability to well perform the duties that will come to them after their election.

Fruit at the Breakfast Table!

Nature Provides Its Own Remedies Which, If Used Judiciously, Insure Perfect Health at All Times.

Aside from the pleasure of eating reasonable fruits beginning the first meal of the day, this custom has undoubtedly arisen from the well known fact that nearly all fruits, and more particularly plums and PRUNES contain natural laxative principles which act directly on the stomach and bowels.

Constipation, that dread and troublesome complaint which is undoubtedly the basic cause of nine-tenths of the dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, etc., so prevalent among our people today, and which if neglected, surely leads to more complicated and serious organic diseases, can surely be prevented, and when not too far advanced, can be absolutely cured by the judicious use of the modern laxative and cathartic California Prune Wafers.

They are not a patent medicine in the ordinary sense of the word, being compounded from fresh California Prunes, which every intelligent person knows is truly nature's laxative.

A dainty little wafer, always the same, compounded in a highly concentrated form from fresh California Prunes.

Nature's own dissolvent, California Prune Wafers cure constipation and all bilious troubles. 100 for 25 cents. Ask your Druggist. For sale at Warne's Pharmacy.

Jas. Taylor, of Kendallville, Ind. was seriously diseased with kidney and bladder trouble for 20 years. He tested every known remedy without much benefit, until he used Pineules. This new discovery cured him, and Mr. Taylor, advises all persons suffering from kidney or bladder trouble to get a bottle of Pineules at once. Sold by Warne's Pharmacy.

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it.

In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

CHAPTER XXXI—Continued.

Both accepted the invitation. For some moments after Mr. Hawkins had left no word was spoken between John Burt and James Blake. Each was busy with his thoughts, but John broke the silence.

"When is Miss Carden expected to return?" he asked, quietly.

"I'll try to find out to-night," said Blake, looking his partner full in the eyes. "My head has been so full of stocks that I've thought of nothing else. But I'll know all about it, John, before I meet you and Hawkins at dinner. Perhaps Jessie—or rather, Miss Carden—is back now. Who knows? This is your lucky day, old fellow, and all kinds of things may happen before midnight. Wouldn't it be great if I went up to the Bishop house and found her there? Of course I wouldn't say a word to spoil the surprise you have planned. Well, I must be going. Hope I'll have good news to see you when I see you later."

Early in the evening Blake rang the bell of the Bishop mansion, and was greeted by General Carden.

"It is a pleasure, General Carden, to tender you this check, which represents your share of the profits. Don't say a word of thanks to me, for I do not deserve any credit. Is Miss Carden at home, and may I see her for a moment?"

"She will be delighted to see you. I will call her."

The general disappeared, and James Blake lay back in his chair, with his eyes fixed on the portrait of Jessie Carden.

He heard the faint rustle of a garment and turned to see Jessie Carden as she entered the room. A tender light glowed in her brown eyes, but there was something wistful in the smile; a blending of happiness, restraint and pity. The eyes dropped for a moment as they met his frank gaze, but her voice was clear and "There is no mystery about it," said Jessie, her eyes flashing with anger. "Mr. Morris saw fit to take advantage of papa's bankruptcy, which gave him possession of our Boston residence. This portrait hung on its walls, and he doubtless had a copy made from it. This is consistent with other acts from which we have suffered at his hands. I—"

The portieres parted and Edith Hancock entered the room. Her eyes rested first on Blake and then on Jessie.

"Pardon this intrusion," she said. "I am looking for a book and did not know that any one was here. You are to be congratulated, Mr. Blake; doubly congratulated."

There was a tremor in the voice, but a proud flash of the lovely eyes as Edith bowed slightly, and, brushing the portieres aside, left the room.

"Don't go, Edith!" cried Jessie. There was no response, and Jessie was too wise to follow her fair cousin. For some moments no words were spoken.

"I am going to tell you the story of that portrait," said Jessie. The crimson touched her cheeks—and a light, such as Blake had never seen, was in her eyes. "Do you remember what you said last night? You said that it seemed as if we had been friends for years, and the same thought has occurred to me. I'm going to presume on that occult friendship, and tell you a secret. That portrait belongs to John Burt!"

"John Burt? The John Burt I knew as a boy? What do you mean, Jessie?"

"She opened an album and handed it to him. On one page was the faded duplicate of the photograph from which had been painted the portrait he had seen so often in John Burt's study room in San Francisco. Opposite it was a photograph of John Burt. The album opened naturally to a moment he was the careless, happy Blake, chatting lightly on trivial subjects.

"I must keep an engagement," he said, looking at his watch. "A friend of mine is here from California, and I'm to take dinner with him. He's a royal good fellow, rich, handsome, cultivated, and—and everything which a good fellow should be. I'd like to introduce him. May I call with him to-morrow evening?"

"Any friend of yours is welcome, especially a paragon with such bewitching attractions," laughed Jessie. "Good-bye, until to-morrow evening."

CHAPTER XXXII.

Through the Heart.

It lacked several minutes of the hour fixed for dinner when Blake strolled through the hotel safe and thence into the lobby. The babble of voices, the gesticulations and the nervous energy which pervaded the atmosphere were not in harmony with Blake's feelings.

"Jessie was afraid I was going to say something to-night, and so she told me that she loved John," he mused, throwing away a half-smoked cigar. "Dear old John! Lucky old John! Hello, what's the row? That sounds like Morris! I suppose he's drunk. If he had a spark of decency he'd be with his father. Here he comes!"

Morris pushed his way through the crowd and was followed by young Kingsley. Not until he was within a few feet of Blake did he recognize his rival. Though anxious to avoid a meeting, Blake scorned to retreat or to turn his back.

Morris stopped squarely in front of him. His lips parted with a sneer and his fingers toyed with a small walking stick. Blake leaned carelessly against a marble column, his eyes fixed on the man who confronted him. Had Blake been in a Western mining camp his fingers would have reached for the feel of a gun, but in a metropolitan hotel he had no sense of danger. The incident was trivial, but disagreeable.

"Lend me a thousand, Blake," demanded Morris.

A whisper passed around the room and many turned to watch these two men, whose names had filled the public prints of the day.

"Certainly," said Blake, a strange smile lighting up his handsome face. "Is a thousand enough, Morris?"

Blake took a wallet from his inner pocket and handed Morris a bill.

"And a match," ordered Morris, advancing a step nearer.

Ice Made in Open Air.

Dr. Wells, a London physician, in 1818, in his published essay on dew, was the first to draw attention to the curious artificial production of ice in India. Shallow pits are dug, which are partially filled with perfectly dry straw; on the straw board, flat pans containing water are exposed to the clear sky. The water, being a wonderful radiant, sends off its heat abundantly into space.

The heat thus lost cannot be replaced from the earth, for this source is excluded by the straw. Before sunrise a cake of ice is formed in each vessel. To produce this ice in quantities clear nights are advantageous, and particularly those on which practically no dew falls.

Should the straw get wet, it becomes more matted and compact, and consequently a better conductor of heat, for the vapor acts as a screen over the pans, checks the cold, and retards freezing.—Pearson's Weekly.

Indians of Jewish Strain.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie had an idea that the Indians of the far Northwest were partly Jewish in origin. From Lake Athabasca in 1794 he set out at the head of an expedition in a birch-bark canoe, 25 feet long, 4 1/2 feet beam and 26 inches hold, with 3,000 pounds of baggage and provision and a crew of nine French Canadians. He reached the Pacific coast and returned. The aborigines he met were "for the most part possessed of strongly religious instincts," said he in his report. "With regard to their origin all we are prepared to state, after a careful survey of their languages, manners and customs, is that they are undoubtedly of a mixed origin, come from the North-northwest and had commerce in their early history, perhaps, through intermarriage with people of Jewish persuasion or origin."

Had Fun With the Umpire.

William Hayes acted as umpire at ball game near Washington, Pa., last Sunday, and his decisions did not seem to give unmixed satisfaction. Toward the close of the game he gave one decision which evidently gave great pain to the players on both sides. Half a dozen of them seized and carried him to a near-by river and tossed him in. Umpire Hayes scrambled out in a hurry, whereupon the impatient athletes threw him back and held him under water until he was nearly drowned. Then they rolled him on a beer keg until he recovered, when they volunteered the information that he was not cut out for an umpire. On reflection Mr. Hayes is prepared to agree with this idea. However, he means to sue a dozen of his assailants.

German Empress Studies Medicine.

One of the most studious queens in Europe is the German empress, who cares very little indeed for pomp and ceremony. Her majesty's favorite study is medicine and she has instructed herself so well in the art of healing that she is regarded as quite an efficient adviser in cases of ordinary illness.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF SARAWAK

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

If the average person who goes up to take a civil service examination were asked where Sarawak is, he would, unless he had survived a youthful enthusiasm for stamp collecting, fall disgracefully. Yet the history of Sarawak is the story of one of the most remarkable examples of the rapid civilization of a savage people in three times, and to-day the principality, which is about the size of the State of Louisiana, has a considerable import and export trade.

Sarawak, which has an area of about 50,000 square miles and a population of about 600,000, lies on the northeastern coast of the island of Borneo. It is a fertile country, drained by many rivers, and remarkable for its spices, tobacco, coffee, rice, gutta percha, sago, and, it should also be remarked, orang-outangs. Gold is exported and diamonds and coal are mined. Although it lies in the torrid zone, its lowest boundary reaching within fifty miles of the equator, it has a fairly good climate, and the fact that Europeans may live there comfortably is borne out by the long residence of the Rajah's family. Sarawak, declared independent by the first Rajah Brooke, the adventurer whose story is as romantic as any that has found its way into print, in 1838 became a protectorate of Great Britain, and only its foreign affairs require the sanction of the British government.

Sir James Brooke was the son of a civil service employe of the East India Company, in the military service of which young Brooke entered as a cadet. He spent the early years of his active life in Bengal, and was later commissioned a lieutenant. In the Burmese war he was shot through the lungs, and returned home to recuperate. He recovered, but the ship in which he had taken passage back to India having been wrecked, he reached there the day after his leave had expired, and was told he had lost his commission. It was in vain that he explained he was a victim of a shipwreck. His explanation was not received, and the victim of red tape turned from his military career to one of adventure.

Turned from India, young Brooke accompanied the ship which had brought him out to China, and on the way he got his first glimpse of the wonderful Indian archipelago of which "Twelve Thousand Isles" Borneo is the pearl. The idea of exploring the mysterious islands and the value of the products from them took his fancy, and upon his return to England his mind was made up; he had decided on a life of adventure.

In 1838 his father died, and James Brooke succeeded to a fortune so handsome that his life of adventure was assured. He bought a schooner yacht, the Royalist, 142 tons, put a crew on board and then sailed into the Mediterranean, where, for several years, the crew was trained, and then selected with the care of a pirate chief. He wanted none but trusty, lusty and true men about the Royalist. Finding a crew to his liking, he weighed anchor and set out for the China Sea. When he reached Singapore he decided to take a look at Borneo.

Borneo at that time was under the rule of the Rajah Muda Hassim, as fine an example of a cutthroat as ever ing chorus was on, and it was plainly his cue to appear with a recitative. So the yacht Royalist set sail, with numerous presents for the Rajah.

He found Muda Hassim to be generous and well affected to the English, and he found the rebellion had been underrated. The Rajah intimated that he would like to have him stay a while, but instead Brooke pushed into the interior and visited several wild tribes. He saw enough to convince him that Sarawak was a golden opportunity; but he left the country after having satisfied himself. In 1840 he paid another visit, and found the rebellion had increased. The Sultan of Bruni (Borneo) was bestirring himself, and the Rajah considered it time to make a move. He approached Brooke and asked his assistance in putting down the rebellion.

Brooke enjoyed the scheme, and led parties of Malays and Dyaks against the rebel chieftain, Sherref Moksain. He built forts in the jungle, and reinforced his native troops with men from his yacht; finally, after a terrific battle in which Brooke was wounded, he drove the rebels into a river. There was a whirlwind action in the methods of the European which showed the rebels that they were contending against training and skill, so they agreed to a truce, and in December, 1840, after four years of hostilities, a treaty of peace was signed. Brooke made the rebels burn their stockades and surrender their arms, and as a conquest the affair was complete.

It was then proposed to transfer the government to Brooke, who showed he was more capable than the reigning Rajah. He assented to the proposition, and then turned his attention to the pirates which infested the coast, and soon that business, which had been an honorable profession for 2,000 years, was wiped out. Brooke began to organize a government. He ruled with fairness and firmness, drew up laws, had them properly executed, designed a national flag, in which the cross from his family coat-armor figured, and declared the independence of Sarawak.

DON'T GRIT YOUR TEETH.

The Man in the Chair Gets a Pointer or Two From the Dentist.

"No teeth to fill," the dentist said to the man in the chair, "but you are grinding off your teeth more than you ought to. Do you grit your teeth in your sleep?"

And the man said he didn't stay awake long enough to know about that, but were they much ground off? "More than they ought to be at your age," said the dentist. "You have worn the enamel off from some of them and got down to the dentine."

"What's going to happen?" asked the victim.

"Why, if you keep on grinding them off," said the dentist, "the teeth will hollow out and we'll have to put plugs in them with gold tops to give them new grinding surfaces."

This wasn't a very pleasant prospect, so later the man sought to ascertain for himself whether he did grit his teeth unduly. And while he was still unable to stay awake long enough to find out, he did discover that he had a habit at times of gritting his teeth, in his waking moments, when he sat back from his work to think of something, for instance. And he made up his mind that he would stop that, anyway, and he hoped that he might thus stop grinding his teeth in his sleep, if he did so grind them. For, fine as they might be, he didn't want any of those nice little gold-capped plugs put in his teeth if he could help it.

Stingy Woman.

Employment Agent—Why did you leave Mrs. Goodsoil so soon? She is said to be a very nice woman.

Domestic—Nee! She's that stingy she begrudges the very air ye breathe.

"You amaze me."

VARIOUS KINDS OF DAYS.

Word Said to Have No Real Meaning Without Defining Adjective.

Five kinds of day are recognized, and it has been said that the word "day" has no real meaning without an adjective defining what kind of a day is meant. There is a civil day, the astronomical day, the apparent solar day, the mean solar day, and the sidereal day. The civil day begins at the midnight preceding mean noon, and consists of twenty-four hours counted after twelve o'clock; the astronomical day begins twelve hours after the civil day, or at the mean noon of the corresponding civil day. These hours are reckoned from 0 to 24. It will be seen, therefore, that while 10hr. 12min. January 1st, astronomical time, is also 10hr. 12min. January 1st civil time, yet 22hr. 12min. January 1st astronomical time, is also 10hr. 12min. a. m., January 2nd civil time. There are many anomalies growing out of this use of the civil day, and there are many arguments in favor of using the astronomical day. It is one of the reforms which undoubtedly will come some time.

The Reason Why.

Drummond, Wis., Sept. 19 (Special)—Whole families in Bayfield County are singing the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills and the reason why is given in experiences such as that of T. T. Wold, a well-known citizen here.

"I had such pains in my back that I did not know what to do," says Mr. Wold, "and as I came across an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills I sent for a box. That one box relieved me of all my pains. My wife also used them and found them just what she needed. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a sure cure for Backache and other Kidney Troubles."

Backache is one of the earliest symptoms of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure it promptly and permanently and prevent it developing into Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease.

The Old-Time "Nanna."

A writer in a recent number of the Queen expresses the opinion (which is shared by many other people) that children are not one whit better brought up by the smart, white-crocked, certificated nurses so much sought after nowadays than they were by the comfortable "Nanna" of the days gone by. The old nurse still holds a place in the hearts of the men and women who knew her loving care when they were children, and they will never forget her "treats" that used to delight their hearts. "Best of all," says a woman, "was lantern tea, when all the lights were put out, and the nursery was illuminated by penny tin lanterns, containing colored candles, which cast weird shadows on the splayed faces round the festivo board."

Irish Village of Baltimore.

Baltimore, in Maryland, gets its name from a small and unostentatious fishing village in Ireland. The word Baltimore signifies the "village that grew up about the big house" and the derivation is plain when one sees the sky-covered ruins of the very remarkable big house that was once the stronghold of the O'Driscolls. It is situated upon an imposing height, a sentinel over the numerous little dwellings that have sprung up and increased in the vicinity of its wrecked and deserted life. From the village of Baltimore enormous catches of mackerel are sent to America.

Woman Bent on Vengeance.

As M. Leon Victor was passing along the Boulevard St. Michael, Paris, a woman attacked him and bit his ear off. He is now dangerously ill of blood poisoning. The woman said she had been jilted, and was determined to wreak her vengeance on every man she met.

CHANGE FOOD

Some Very Fine Results Follow. The wrong kind of food will put the body in such a diseased condition that no medicines will cure it. There is no way but to change food. A man in Mo. says:

"For 2 years I was troubled so with my nerves that sometimes I was prostrated and could hardly ever get in a full month at my work."

"My stomach, back and head would throb so I could get no rest at night except by fits and starts, and always had distressing pains."

"I was quite certain the trouble came from my stomach but two physicians could not help me and all the tonics failed and so finally I turned to food."

"When I had studied up on food and learned what might be expected from leaving off meat and the regular food I had been living on, I felt that a change to Grape-Nuts would be just what was required so I went to eating it."

"From the start I got stronger and better until I was well again and from that time I haven't used a bit of medicine for I haven't needed any."

"I am so much better in every way, sleep soundly nowadays and am free from the bad dreams. Indeed this food has made such a great change in me that my wife and daughter have taken it up and we are never without Grape-Nuts on our table nowadays. It is a wonderful sustainer and we frequently have nothing else at all but a saucer of Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast or supper." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Good food and good rest. These are the tonics that succeed where all the bottled tonics and drugs fail. Ten days trial of Grape-Nuts will show one the road to health, strength and vigor. "There's a reason."

This heart beat fast as he gazed into her face.

sweet as she offered her hand and said:

"You have made this the happiest day of our lives, Mr. Blake. I—"

"Not another word," interrupted James Blake. "You must not thank me. Please don't, Jessie. It's the only favor I ask."

"Why not?"

The parted lips and questioning eyes were eloquent with surprise.

"Because I don't want you to," he said, releasing the little hand.

His heart beat fast as he gazed into her face, but in that moment, he gained the final victory, and only the numbing pain of wounded passion remained.

Less than a day had passed since he had resolved to surrender all hope for the love of Jessie Carden. Why had he done so? James Blake could not answer that question. He had not calmly weighed his chances of success against those of failure.

Like a flash it dawned upon him that he could not—that he must not—be disloyal to John Burt. He did not reason it out—it was told to him in that voiceless, wordless language which has no name or key.

"You must not imagine," he said, "that your father is under the slightest obligations to me. On the contrary, our firm is indebted to him. The stock which he held was the key to the situation. Without it we could have done nothing. We have simply been able to verify the general's confidence in its value, and he is the one to be congratulated on the outcome."

"I don't believe a word you say," replied Jessie Carden, laughing. "I'm not so stupid about these Wall Street affairs as you imagine. If it had not been for you, Mr. Morris would have demanded pay out of all his property."

"Speaking of Morris reminds me of something which has often puzzled me," said Blake, changing the subject. "It's about that portrait. The first time I ever met Arthur Morris I saw your portrait in his library room. It has always puzzled me. Some time I'll tell you why."

"My portrait in Mr. Morris' room!" exclaimed Jessie, the color mounting to her cheeks. "Surely you are jesting, Mr. Blake!"

"It was probably a copy, though he said me it was the original," replied Blake. "He said you had it painted for him in Berlin, and that you presented it to him. The first time I came here I saw this one and thought it a remarkable coincidence."

these pages—sure proof that certain white fingers had sought them out many times.

"It was only a week before he went away," said Jessie, softly, "that these pictures were taken. It was a glorious day in autumn, and our horses had galloped miles and miles. Near the bay shore in Hingham we saw a traveling photographer, and I suggested that we have our pictures taken. We each gave the other one, and I have mine yet. We—"

"And he has his yet," said Blake, a far-off look in his eyes.

"He has! How do you know, Mr. Blake? Have you—"

"Of course he has it.—I'll wager dear old John has never parted with that little gift. Excuse my interruption, Jessie; I'm greatly interested."

"You spoke as if you knew," said Jessie, her heart beating wildly. "The last day I saw him he spoke of you. We sailed out to Black Reef and we talked of many things. John said he was going to California, and wondered if you were there and if he would see you. That seems ages ago, but it's only five years. And then we sailed back to the grove and he quarreled with Arthur Morris. You have heard the story. That night we parted, and a thousand times I have heard the hoofs of his horse as he galloped away in the darkness."

She paused, but Blake, with his eyes on the portrait, said nothing.

"When you told me that you were John Burt's friend I liked you," she said, in a voice which thrilled his very being. "You have been all that he said in your favor, and many times more. I would that it were in my power to repay you, Mr. Blake. You have at your command every thing which money can furnish, and I and my prayer for your happiness."

He took her hand and impulsively pressed it to his lips.

"You have made me very, very happy," he said, rising to his feet as she tenderly withdrew her hand. "I should like to tell you something which—which—but I must not tell it. Some day you will know me better. Will you promise not to be angry with me, then? Will you promise, Jessie?"

"Angry with you? I am sure I shall never be angry with you."

"That is your promise?"

"That is my promise."

He laughed gaily as she repeated the words, but his lips quivered and his eyes glistened suspiciously. In

CHRONOMETER PUT TO TEST
It is Kept on Ice to Secure Accurate Adjustment.
Each year the time chronometers of the United States navy are subjected to a test to determine their accuracy and to correct any irregularities. This operation commences in January and usually lasts until the middle of June, and during that time these delicate timepieces are kept on ice at the United States naval observatory. It is not for any fear that they will spoil that they are subjected to this frigid experience, but it is necessary for the purpose of accurate adjustment that they should all be maintained in a constant temperature. The necessity of having a ship's clocks all absolutely alike will be realized by the layman when he is reminded that an error of four seconds in the chronometer means an error of a mile in calculating the vessel's location. The temperature varies at different times of the test from 50 to 90 degrees and the losing or gaining qualities of the chronometers under these conditions are accurately kept. Thus with a chart expressing in curves just what he may expect from his chronometer under different conditions of climate, and with his thermometer and barometer close at hand, a sailing master may calculate to a nicety the correct time and get his location to a certainty.

Earnings of Popular Novellists.
For "Castle Rackrent" Marie Edgeworth received only $500, for "Belinda" $1,500, for "Patronage," published in 1815, she received the large sum of $10,500; for "Helen," published in 1834, the price was $5,500. Miss Edgeworth gave away much of this money and spent the rest of it in traveling. Apparently she parted with her copyrights. Still, in comparison with Charlotte Bronte, who received only $7,500 for her books, Miss Edgeworth makes a brave show with her $55,310.

The rates are reasonable, and Mr. Sweet has as his guests many people from all parts of the state.

THE DEPARTED.
The departed! the departed!
They visit us in dreams,
And they glide above our memories,
Like shadows over streams;
But where the cheerful lights of home
In color and in bustle
The departed, the departed,
Can never more return!

The good, the brave, the beautiful,
How dreamless is their sleep,
Where rolls the dirgelike music
Of the ever-tossing deep!
Or where the surging night winds
Pale winter's robes have spread
Above the narrow palaces,
In the cities of the dead!

I look around and feel the awe
Of one who walks alone,
Among the wrecks of former days,
In mournful rain strown;
I start to hear the stirring sounds
Among the cypress trees,
For the voice of the departed
Is borne upon the breeze.

That solemn voice! It mingles with
Each free and careless strain;
I scarce can think earth's minstrelsy
Will cheer my heart again.
The melody of summer waves,
The thrilling notes of birds,
Can never be so dear to me
As their remember'd words.

I sometimes dream their pleasant smiles
Still on me sweetly fall,
Their tones of love I faintly hear
My name in sadness call.
I know that they are happy
With their angel plumage on,
But my heart is very desolate
To think that they are gone.
—Park Benjamin.

A FIELD DAY

"I'm not worthy of her" cried Mr. Jackson, with dismal emphasis. "I never have been worthy of her, and I never shall be."
"Take care not to mention it," said young John Walmer, sagely, "and she won't guess. What is she like—to look at, I mean?"
"Charming."
"Then what have you to grumble about?"
"Everything," declared Mr. Jackson. "I helped her father out of some trouble, and I believe she's only going to marry me out of gratitude."
"You can tell," said John, "by the way a girl kisses you whether she's fond of you or not."
"She has never kissed me," said Mr. Jackson, "and I've never tried to kiss her. Is it usual?"
"An astonishing couple!" cried John, stopping to look at the decorations in Chancery lane. "Never heard anything like it."
"I wish I hadn't," cried the other. He took the best man's arm. "John Walmer," he went on, "get me out of this somehow. I've been a bachelor such a long time. Do help me. You're a clever man; you're getting on wonderfully. Remember that I gave you a start in London ten years ago."
"You're giving me one now. You don't mean to tell me seriously that you want to back out of it? Why, she'll bring action against you, and your letters will be read in court."
"She's not that kind of a girl," wailed Mr. Jackson, "and there aren't any letters. John Walmer, at whatever cost she and I must not meet this morning at St. Pancras Church in the Euston road."
"But I've bought a new frock coat," "I'll come in for something else."
"Opportunities for transit were that day something less than perfect, but John Walmer, once persuaded, made his way up to Highgate with all convenient dispatch, almost carried away now and again by the strong tide of traffic that was making its way down to the line of route. He arrived rather warm from the walk up the hill, warm also from blaming himself for accepting a delicate and a difficult mission. There was not much time to spare, for as he entered the road two carriages drove up with drivers wearing white flowers in their buttonholes; these he intercepted, telling them that their services would not be required that day. The drivers said to each other that there would be a chance after all for them to go and give our good old Queen a cheer. John gave his features an appropriate twist to denote sympathy and knocked.

"We are in the greatest possible trouble," said the weeping lady superfluously, as she opened the door. "Could you possibly call again some other time?" He gave his name. "Oh, come in then," she said, "I thought you were the rates and taxes. I'm so upset, and where my handkerchief's gone goodness only knows."
John entered into competition with goodness by pointing out to the lady that she held her handkerchief in her hand, and she thanked him for his timely sagacity.

"Rowena," she called, and disappeared. A slow swish of skirts came down the staircase.
"My name is Walmer," he said, speaking loudly in order to pretend that he was completely at his ease. "John Walmer, and I have a somewhat urgent message from Mr. Jackson."
"My name is Rowena," she said, "and I have a somewhat urgent message from Mr. Jackson."
Rather a pretty girl, John considered, short, perhaps, but he liked them short—the circumstance compelled them to look up to one. She offered her hand, moved a chair for him, and sat in a corner of the room.
"I wonder which is the more important," he said.
"Mine," answered Miss Rowena. "I was going to telegraph it. Here's the form I've just written out."

John read it and slapped his knee. "He's such a good man," she went on with earnestness, "and I ought to have discovered before this morning that I didn't care for him enough. My sister is cross with me. She says this comes of putting off everything till the last moment."
"The harm comes in putting it off later than the last moment."
"I know that everybody will blame me, and I know how good Mr. Jackson was to father. But I don't care!" she said sturdily, "I won't marry until I find some one I really like."
"And that encounter—?"
"Please give me Mr. Jackson's message," she said.
The elder sister had to be called down and invited to join in the general congratulations and to observe the wise and ingenious workings of Providence, and this she did, pointing out somewhat frostily that whatever might be said her day was thoroughly and completely spoiled. But John, declaring that this was a hasty anticipation of events, remarked that the mission over his day was now free and asked to be informed whether the ladies, under the altered condition of affairs, would care to see the procession. Elder sister replied that she for one was not going into the crowd to be torn into a thousand million pieces, and John said that being a man with some influence he had the right to three most admirable seats just on the other side of London Bridge, and—looking at his watch—if they could be ready in eight minutes he would gladly undertake the responsibility of conducting them to the point looking after them while there, and eventually seeing them home again. Elder sister had a quarter of an hour since determined to stay at home and have a good cry, but Rowena answering for both said that if Mr. Walmer was quite sure he did not mind—

London Bridge was closed, but John knew his way about too well to be baffled by this. How it was done the ladies never knew; what they did realize was that they crossed the river somehow, and crossed it by a bridge of some sort, and there they were, up a temporary wooden staircase, and in the division marked L and finding presently their numbers. The day was warm, but they had brought their parasols; and a friend of John's brought to the lady tumbler of some cool beverage with lumps of ice dancing a-top. The elder sister expressed a hope that it would not get into her head, but the day being special and the occasion rare decided to take the risk.

And after what the elder sister announced as two hours of solid waiting, but appeared to John as two fleeting moments, the barrier at the city end of the bridge opened, the band nearer stopped playing, and John's friend called from his seat below that the procession had left St. Paul's. Soon across the bridge came mounted soldiers, mounted representatives of foreign countries, marching men from every land that owned Victoria as Queen, and presently through a wild, long boom of cheers, in an open carriage, a little old person, in her eyes tears of thankfulness.
"The dear soul!" cried Rowena. John lifted her up by the elbows that she might see well over the heads of other people in the stand. "This is better than any wedding."
Bells clanging out from St. Saviour's, engines on the railway shrieking congratulations, folk from Horseleydown and Rothenhithe at the top of Tooley street cheering everybody, from a popular British general on a white horse to the black police from the West Indies. It did seem to the ladies that town had no secrets from John. At Cannon Street Hotel he warned them that they might have to wait their turn for lunch; he would do what he could. As a matter of fact, there was plenty of room at the tables, and when John asked the head waiter whether they could have a cold fowl the head waiter replied that the supply was so much in excess of the demand that he would let John have forty cold fowls. They took it quietly after lunch. Had a rest first and then strolled out into the city to see the decorations. John showed Rowena the office where he had once been a junior clerk; she said it was a very interesting place. He told her how remarkably well he had been getting on the last two years.

"It's been a much happier day," she said at Highgate that evening, "than I thought it was going to be. I can't think of anything being jollier."
"I can," said John.
"Excuse me, Mr. Walmer," interposed the elder sister, "but—if it isn't a rude question—are you by any chance engaged? Engaged to a lady, I mean?"
"Dear me, no!"
"Then," announced the elder sister, impressively, "we're always at home on Sunday afternoons."
John Walmer looked down at Rowena with a question in his eyes.
"Please," said the girl, "London Telegraph."

Miss Gannon, Sec'y Detroit Amateur Art Association, tells young women what to do to avoid pain and suffering caused by female troubles.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can conscientiously recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to those of my sisters suffering with female weakness and the troubles which so often befall women. I suffered for months with general weakness, and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains, and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restoration began. In six weeks I was a changed woman, perfectly well in every respect. I felt so elated and happy that I want all women who suffer to get well as I did."—Miss GUILA GANNON, 359 Jones St., Detroit, Mich., Secretary Amateur Art Association.

It is clearly shown in this young lady's letter that the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will certainly cure the sufferings of women; and when one considers that Miss Gannon's letter is only one of the countless hundreds which we are continually publishing in the newspapers of this country, the great virtue of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine must be admitted by all; and for the absolute cure of all female ills no substitute can possibly take its place. Women should bear this important fact in mind when they go into a drug store, and be sure not to accept anything that is claimed to be "just as good" as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for no other medicine for female ills has made so many actual cures.

HERALD NOTES.

The potato crop in this section is reported to be exceptionally good; the yield is large and the quality fine. The farmers as a rule expect a fair price for the product.

Every one that has tried the Paper Bag Honey pronounce it the finest Honey they ever ate. You will think the same. Just try it. 10c and 25c at your merchants.

It cost $17.50 for one woman to black another's eye down at Antrim. So Judge Foote said last week. Prosecuting attorney Williams and the Justice thought that was about what Mrs. Hughey ought to pay for blacking the eye of Mrs. Carroll and she paid it. Thus endeth the chapter of an assault and battery case. Mrs. Hughey paid the fine and costs and went home a poorer woman if not a wiser one.

Whatever you do, don't fail to get a package of Ira Bartlett's famous Paper Bag Honey. It is pure and the best on the market. Your grocer has it.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned. Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered Kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Prounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Huss, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."
