The State Legislature.

Lansing, April 3, 1905.
Just one week from the day when the public business of the state was suspended to pay honor to the memory of a former governor of Michigan, Cyrus G. Luce, on the day of his burial, similar expression of respect is made in memory of Honorable Stanley W. Turner, former representative in the legislature and auditor general, and the legislature stood adjourned and the auditor general's department was closed, during his funeral in Detroit last Wednesday, and committees of the two houses attended the obsequies. Such events, marking the close of the earthly careers of those who but lately occupied a large place in the public view, account for us the brevity of human life and the hollowness of even the greatest achievements of personal ambition, which at the time look to us so dazzling. After all, it matters little to any of us what we may win, or lose, in present personal successes, except in building of imperishable character for ourselves, and that is gained in all service except self service. It is by the measure of such services, such giving, and not by the measure of their winnings, that we acclaim our noble dead. We need always these reflections, to inspire loftier and worthier ambitions, and nowhere so much as in public and political life.

Last Tuesday, the house had a warm hour with a bill of Mr. Canfield, of Alpena, which would entitle a former owner whose property had been sold to the state for non-payment of taxes, in effect to redeem from such sale, regardless of time limit and of any tax deed that may have been issued by the state to a purchaser of the title, in cases where any portion of a tax may by error have remained unpaid. For instance, if Brown's quarter section went to sale in 1880 for four years' taxes and costs amounting to fifty dollars and was purchased from the state that year by Jones for the same money, and it is now shown that a ten-dollar tax for 1875 was overlooked, or perhaps a two-dollar disputed bridge tax, and has not been paid, Brown may pay that tax now, and recover possession of the land upon payment of what was originally paid for it, with simple interest and without anything to Jones for his twenty-five years' occupation and improvement of the property. Or if it suits Brown or his heirs to wait for some years more of improvement and enhancement before demanding a reconveyance, they could do so without incurring any penalty beyond interest on the original fifty dollars, and Jones, who has been the lawful and bona fide owner all these years, in ignorance of the danger, would have to surrender his home. Mr. Canfield made a fiery speech in support of his bill, and was opposed by Messrs. Dickson and McKay, and he got only thirty-six of the needed fifty-one votes for it on the rollcall, when he had it laid on the table, where it now reposes.

Wednesday afternoon the Holmes automobile bill was fought over in the house committee of the whole, and at the close of one of the most spirited contests of the session the autoists found themselves routed before the farmers' cohorts, and the bill was agreed to with slight amendment of its provisions as outlined last week. The speed limit in business sections of cities and villages was raised from eight to ten miles an hour, and the fine for first offense was reduced from fifty to twenty-five dollars, which were the only modifications the auto men secured. This practically assures the passage of the bill by the house when it is reached on the calendar.

The senate the same afternoon passed the house bill repealing the law under which the secretary of state has for many years collected and published in monthly bulletins the crop and weather statistics of the state. The bill was then laid on the table, to await the presence of a sufficient number to give it immediate effect. The business of the senate is constantly in a more forward condition than that of the house. The smaller body dispatches its work with less conflict, less discussion on the floor, and decidedly more expedition, than the more popular branch, and it usually clears up its calendar and adjourns for the day while the house is yet wrestling with its problems and continues to wrestle for an hour or more, finally adjourning about six o'clock with a heavy calendar left over for the future days.

Since the recomittal and practical disposal of the Stone primary bill, a bill framed from the provisions of two bills, one by Mr. Ivory and one by Mr. Double, both members of the elections committee, and now known as the Ivory-Double bill, has been introduced and referred to that committee. It provides for party registration, and the holding of primaries for all parties in all counties on the same day. Those primaries are, optionally with each party in any congressional district or smaller political division, for the nomination of candidates by direct vote, or for the election of delegates to nominating conventions, as the parties shall demand by petition of a percentage of the voters registered therein. Thus one party in a certain county or district, town or city, might employ one method, and another party in the same jurisdiction might employ the other method, at the same time and place. This would be carrying out to the fullest degree the option principle for which the republicans contended in the last campaign, and it is the measure preferred by Governor Warner, who, however, stands by his pledge to sign whatever primary election bill the legislature shall in its wisdom enact.

The joint hearing by the liquor traffic committee of the two houses, for arguments upon the Hudson local option bill Tuesday evening, attracted much attention, and the temperance forces of Detroit and other cities were on hand with strong delegations and able advocates, and the house has been deluged with petitions in behalf of the bill. The measure provides the same system which is now in force in Ohio, by which the voters of any township, village, city, ward or election precinct may vote out saloons from their limits, though local option may not prevail in the county or the city embracing such smaller division. Grant M. Hudson, sponsor for the bill, is a merchant of Schoolcraft, and is chairman of the house committee on the Industrial School for Boys.

Senator Cook's bill to prohibit book-making and pool-selling on horse races has been favorably reported from committee. It provides fines of fifty dollars to five hundred and imprisonment ten days to six months, "one or both in discretion of the court." Senator Freke has introduced a bill making appropriation for the expense of gathering information on the subject of old age pensions, the system is in practice in New Zealand, Australia and Germany. The senator hopes to see it in existence in Michigan, believing it to be a measure of wise economy as well as of humane duty; and the idea has other friends, and will have more when it is discussed.

The members of the two houses, such as were not weatherbound elsewhere by the driving rainstorm Wednesday evening, listened in Representative Hall to an address by Charles T. Harvey, engineer in charge of the original construction of the Soo canal, in the interest of a state appropriation toward the approaching celebration of the semi-centennial anniversary of that enterprise, for which congress has made appropriation. Governor Warner presided, and received for the state a historical map presented by Mr. Harvey, which he had prepared and exhibited to congress fifty years ago, showing a then projected railroad line to connect the great lakes with the gulf of Mexico.

The New Idea Woman's Magazine for May contains a number of articles apropos to the ever-recurrent spring wedding. Charlotte Millward writes on wedding gowns, and gives it as her opinion that, although sentiment still inclines many girls to the traditional white satin for their bridal dresses, this material is not nearly so much in accord with the fashions and taste of the present day as the softer and newer creations in chiffon, lace, net, supple silk, crepe de Chine, or crepe de Paris. An article by Francis Welsh-Britton takes up the etiquette of weddings, and details the proper forms, from the invitations to the rice shower. Wedding-breakfast menus and recipes for home-made wedding cakes are given in the cooking column; and E-perance Goodlove contributes an article on marriage as it appeals to the business woman, in which she concludes that "the girl who has had her liberty, who has fought her own battles and heartily enjoyed the fighting, none the less enjoys more deeply than she will, perhaps, admit, the womanly occupation of depending on a man."

A FAMOUS HYMN AND ITS AUTHOR.

John Keble, who wrote the hymn "Sun of My Soul," was remarkable for the beauty of his character as well as for his learning. In the May Delineator Allan Sutherland tells some thing of the gifted author himself and of the origin and romance of his grand hymn. He says:

"It is through his famous collection of poems, The Christian Year, that Keble is best known and will be longest remembered. These poems were written between 1819 and 1827. The early attempts were intended for his own church people to use on real-letter days in the church calendar, but the scope of the work was afterward enlarged so as to complete the entire calendar thus making it a practical summary of the Christian year, and a companion to the Book of Common Prayer. It was in the second poem printed in The Christian Year that Keble's famous evening hymn, 'Sun of My Soul' first appeared—a hymn which voices the sentiments and the prayers of countless Christian hearts as the twilight fades into night and we yield ourselves to sleep and to helplessness."

"A visitor once asked Alfred Tennyson what his thoughts were of Christ. They were walking in a garden, and, for a moment, the great poet was silent, then, bending over some beautiful flowers, he said: 'What the Sun is to these flowers Jesus Christ is to my soul. He is the sun of my soul.' Consciously or unconsciously, he was expressing the same thought in the same language used by good John Keble years before when he gave to the world his great heart hymn, 'Sun of My Soul.'"

By those who think there is reason for fear in that direction, some alarm has been expressed over the fact that immigration thus far this year is greater than ever before. The greater number of foreigners now coming to this country are from Italy, Austria and Russia. That the most of these people will become desirable citizens of the United States cannot be seriously questioned, but that some of them are undesirable from every point of view is as little in doubt. Much time has been given in congress and through the press to the discussion of more-desirable immigration laws than we now possess. The need of better laws is evidently becoming greater and restrictive legislation that will sensibly and helpfully restrict should be provided as soon as possible.

FOIBLES OF FASHION

Black Broadcloth.
Black is as popular if not more so than it was earlier in the season. A model recently turned out by a leading dressmaker in black broadcloth has a tight-fitting coat and an almost plain skirt that just clears the ground. The coat fits tightly in the back by means of curved seams, and a piece of the cloth about five inches wide and pointed at the lower end extends from the neck down the center of the back to a little below the waist line and is stitched twice at the edges. On each side of the coat skirts on both sides of the center seam similar pointed sections of the cloth appear. The sleeves are almost tight-fitting. Another attractive cloth model in steel gray has a plain skirt-cut ankle length and is untrimmed. The coat is a tailor-made affair, partly loose fitting and partly tight-fitting, single-breasted and reaches to the knees, with a velvet turnover collar and deep-velvet turnover cuffs. A strap runs across the center of the back to hold it in close to the waist line.

Smart Silk "At Home" Dress.
This is designed for afternoon wear, but would be suitable for a home dinner frock too. It is of light taffetas, trimmed with frills of narrow black and white lace and medallions of the same lace; black velvet bows as a "ladder."

The Morning Costumes.
The skirts of morning costumes will continue to be cut short, and they will fit closely about the hips, but they must flare a little below the line of the knee. With the long coats are worn the round skirts, either touching or just freeing the ground. These skirts are more becoming than the very short ones unless a woman has a pretty foot, and they are the only ones that can be worn with the redingotes. The very light weight broadcloths will be worn well into the summer, and tweeds, serges and coarse canvases will come in for their share of popularity.

Pork Cake.
One pound salt pork chopped fine, 1 pound of raisins, 1 pound of currants, 1/2 pound of citron, 1 quart flour, 1 pint of brown sugar, 1 pint of boiling water, 1/2 pint of molasses, 2 teaspoonsful each of cloves and cinnamon, grated rind of 1 lemon, 1 tablespoonful of soda dissolved in hot water; pour the water on the pork, stir until melted, then pass through the colander; add the sugar, molasses, spice and half of the flour; rub the fruit in 1 gill of the flour, then add it to the soda and the rest of the flour; bake in well buttered tins in a hot, steady oven.

Sunderland Pudding.
Half cup sugar, 1/4 cup of butter, 1/2 pint of milk, 1 cup of sifted flour and 3 eggs. Heat the milk hot; stir in the butter and let it cool before the other ingredients are added to it; then stir in the sugar, flour and beaten yolks of 3 and whites of 2 eggs. Flavor with a little grated lemon rind and beat the mixture well. Bake in well buttered cups half filled with the batter for about half an hour. Serve with any sweet sauce, and the white of 1 egg beaten with 1 spoonful of sugar dropped on each pudding in small drops.

Directoire Coats.
There is a decided liking shown for the well fitting directoire coat, with sleeves that set to the shape of the arm, though fancifully puffed and gathered and gauged very often, and with the outline of the figure carefully preserved.

Coming Styles.
Skirts are to be fuller than ever about the feet—every conceivable trick that will get a few more inches into the width will be employed; but about the hips they will fit smoothly. Lace will be everywhere, principally Irish crochet and Valenciennes; a daring use, which is as beautiful as it is daring, being the combining the two. And lace will be used in every possible way, from allover and strips and edgings to wonderful motifs which contain a host of suggestions in themselves for unusual, original uses.

Even embroideries will be used to trim these dresses, but embroideries this year have lifted themselves high above anything we've ever known before, and come in a new dignity that fits them for any use.

When cooking sausages let them heat very gradually and the skins will not burst.

To keep milk sweet for several days add a teaspoonful of fine salt to every quart of milk.

Stand pancake batter for two hours before frying. Beat it up again just before using.

Bones and bacon rind should never be thrown away, but added to the stock pot when making soup.

To brighten eyeglasses rub up the glasses with a piece of tissue paper. There is nothing better for the purpose.

When making sauces dissolve the butter in the stewpan, add the flour, stir well, and then gradually add the liquor.

To make varnish dissolve a pound and a half of shellac in a gallon of naphtha. Add a small quantity of dragon's blood to give it a good color.

Novelty Silks.
In the new goods there are so many novelty silks that one hesitates to start upon the task of naming them, knowing it to be absolutely hopeless. The chiffon taffetas is one of the best of taffetas. It is very light in weight yet strong. And there is a taffeta glace which is lovely and of the non-wrinkle order. Taffeta by the way has been marvelously improved the past season and it now wears very well indeed.

No eye can turn away from the poplins and their cousins the mohairs and the brilliantines and scilliennes without a sigh.

Bits of Lace.
A bit of real lace will often contribute greatly to the style of a frock, and it is an excellent plan to rip from the garments before they are thrown aside any lace trimmings.

No matter how badly soiled, every scrap of lace is worth saving. And this applies to the limitations as well as to the real, for if there is only sufficient to trim a stock collar it may be used for that purpose very conveniently and effectively on some future occasion, and as lace does not occupy a great deal of space and is not so popular with most as are many other materials it may easily be preserved.

Spinach in Molds.
Boil the spinach, press out every drop of water and chop fine. Cook together in a saucepan a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour. Add the spinach with pepper and salt to taste; cook for five minutes. Butter the insides of muffin-tins or pate-pans and press the spinach hard into these. Set in the oven to keep hot while you make a white sauce. Carefully turn out the forms of spinach on a hot platter, lay a slice of hard-boiled egg on the top of each form and pour the white sauce around it.

Velvet Walking Costume.
An attractive short walking costume of black velvet has a skirt gored to fit the figure and in the back are two underlying plaits, and scatter ones in the center fronts are pressed in and secured invisibly, while down each side are rows of small old silver buttons. The blouse closes with double rows of buttons to match the skirt and the sleeves are plaited and held in place by the buttons. The blouse is collarless and trimmed with several rows of silk braid.

Black velvet with embroidered white cloth vest.

Quaint Note in Drapery.
Quaint Austrian prints, quite unlike anything before offered for summer upholstery, are on view. These come in curtains, couch covers, and table covers to match.

RECEPTION GOWNS FROM PARIS.

The gown on the seated figure is of violet faille. A fancy border cut from velvet of a little deeper shade finishes the skirt at the bottom.

The bodice is draped, forming a sort of bolero covered with a large shoulder collar of venise lace. The reverse are of velvet, the collar of green satin embroidered in gold. Pendants of gold hang from the points of the revers over the draped corslet of the material. The chemisette is of white mousseline de sole, with jabot of lace. The short sleeve puffs are finished with puffs and frills of the venise lace.

The short sleeves forming double puffs are finished with bands of the satin, trimmed with guipure insertion.

The third gown is of delicate lavender taffeta. The full skirt forms a shirred corslet, and is trimmed at the bottom with three ruches of the silk, the two upper ones arranged in festoons. The bolero is shirred along the shoulders and at the bottom.

ished with puffs and frills of the venise lace.

The next gown is of soft white satin. The skirt is gathered at the top and trimmed at the bottom with a fancy border or cream-colored guipure insertion.

The bodice is draped and fastened a little on one with blue velvet buttons and ornamented with a jabot of where it is finished with a stitched band of the silk.

The waistcoat is of guipure, with edges and knots of pink panne. The elbow sleeves are puffed at the top, then fitted to the arms, where they are shirred and draped, forming little headings or frills. They are finished with narrow ruffles of the material and of guipure.

Made Sober
and Outcast
by His Umbrella

Forced to Seek Refuge in Den of Iniquity on the Sabbath-Day.

This is a faithful narration of the adventures of a Newark man who, was, for a time, made a social exile, an outcast, by his umbrella. All doors that he approached were closed to him, even those of his home; it happened in this wise:

The man works hard on Saturdays, late into the night, and when he arises and breakfasts on Sunday he feels the need of out-door air. This air he will have, no matter what the weather.

He was seen two or three weeks ago knee deep in the snow, floundering stolidly along, bent on getting his exercise and driving the fog and cobwebs from his brain. But last Sunday it was raining, an icy sleet filled the air, and the man raised his umbrella and the little pellets pattered on it like the rain on the garret roof. After he had gone a mile or so he found that the hand that held the umbrella was getting tired. He was a nervous man and he wondered if he was developing rheumatism or if incipient paralysis was upon him.

The lameness soon extended throughout his arm, even unto the shoulder, and at last the man realized that the umbrella was getting very heavy. But he went on with his walk, since no bodily discomfort could divert him from his constitutional.

At last the man could not hold the umbrella in his hand and had to let the shaft rest upon his shoulder. Still he plodded stubbornly on, until he reached the outskirts of the city. Then he thought he would take a car back to his home, and that was when his troubles really began.

He hurried over to a car with his umbrella sagging about his head; his progress much impeded by its weight. He put one foot on the car step and started to let down his umbrella. He wrestled with it until the conductor said some harsh things, gave the motorman the bell and left the man standing in the street wrestling with the umbrella.

It had as complete a roof of ice as any Esquimaux's house in the farthest North, or anywhere else. The roof glistened as if made of glass. The man exerted all his strength, but the ribs simply bent under the strain and the coating of ice was not so much as cracked.

The man strode on for a few blocks, thinking. He came to a little notion store where they sell newspapers, and thought he would go inside and thaw out the umbrella, but after an ineffectual struggle to get inside the door he gave it up and walked on.

The situation was getting serious. He tried another place, a harbor of refuge, as it was a Sunday school and the children within were singing joyous hymns that brought him a feeling of comfort, as if he were at last he would surely find help out of his odd misfortune.

But here again he could not enter. There was no double door and the umbrella absolutely refused to be crushed through the narrow door space.

Further on down the street he came upon a stoop and he told them he would give them ten cents for a can of hot water. They looked at him as if they thought he was crazy. He raised the ante to a quarter. Then one of the boys asked him if it wasn't a can of beer he wanted.

This was too much for the man, for he is strictly temperance, and if he had not been, the thought of patronizing a saloon on Sunday would have been utterly abhorrent. So he took up his tramp again.

The umbrella's weight seemed to increase with every step, until the man felt as if he was literally carrying the roof of his house over his head. He got out his jackknife and tried to scale the ice off, but could not accomplish much, so afraid was he of cutting through the cloth.

Once he was on the point of slitting the cover and removing it to throw into the gutter, but a glance at the gold handle deterred him. There was an inscription on the handle, telling how the umbrella had been presented by a body of grateful employes. The man knew that his whole factory looked to him to carry that umbrella on every stormy day and that to appear at the factory on the next rainy day without it would make talk.

He wished the umbrella was anywhere but where it was, and had he been a swearing man he would have cursed the luck that made him take that particular rain shield from the stand in his hallway when he started out.

When he got within a quarter of a mile of his home the umbrella seemed to weigh at least fifteen pounds. He was fairly out of breath and desperate. He knew when he got home he would be no better off than he was out of doors, for he could not get the thing into his house and his house has no areaway along which he might have carried it to the back yard.

Just then he saw a gleam of warm light over the green curtain hung in a saloon window. He hesitated. Then his eyes fell upon the sign "Side Entrance" upon a door.

The door was double. He pushed, in fact half fell against it, and both sides fell open. His qualms of conscience were stilled, how, and he marched, dragging his icebound umbrella behind him.

The few men in the saloon looked up in surprise when they saw him enter, and there was a faint attempt to escape, for the men recognized him as a prominent church worker and they feared he was out on a little tour of his own to gather information against violators of the Sunday law. But the man pulled himself together sufficiently to say that he had sought a warm place in which to thaw out his umbrella, and the bartenders and every one else saw that he was much more uneasy than they were, so they let it pass.

In less than three minutes the ice slid from the umbrella in great sheets and the man gave the head bartender a quarter for the muss he had made on the floor. He says that was the most uncomfortable walk he ever took in his life, and that the next time he goes for his Sunday walk in a storm he'll wear a mackintosh and let it go at that.—New York Sun.

The World's Medical Heroes

For the "Hall of Fame" twenty-nine names were selected in 1900, none of which was that of a physician, and this year twenty-six more will be named. Among the great men who have influenced American life for good and advanced the cause of civilization there can be no doubt with the considerate that medicine has furnished as many as any other calling or profession. Why, then, were medical men excluded? Simply because of the traditional failure on the part of the world to recognize the value of professional life to the community. This blindness should be done away with. The Western Medical Review proposes to nominate five medical heroes for the honors in the balloting of 1905 for the Hall of Fame, and gives the names of Rush, Ramsay, Warren, Sims and Holmes. The suggestion occurs that it might be better for the professional voters to limit their ballotings, and choose two, or at most three, physicians to honor. Warren, it seems, should be the first named, as the discovery of anesthesia has lessened human suffering, and at the same time advanced science immeasurably. As the John the Baptist of the gospel of protection against infectious diseases, Holmes deserves the gratitude of Americans and of the world.—American Medicine.

Sighing of the Children

(One million seven hundred and fifty thousand children between the ages of 5 and 15 toil in the mines and factories of this country.)
Have you heard the Cry of the Children,
The pitiful wail of the Little Ones?
Out of the mines and the workshops,
Out of the slums and the alleys,
Where cold and famine and fever,
Where cruel neglect and oppression
Rob life of its joy and sunshine,
And change its bright Spring into Winter.
Oh, the heartrending Cry of the Children,
Rising up, in chorus pathetic,
A dirge and a dead march of childhood,
Appealing to men and to angels,
And crying aloud unto heaven,
For judgment against the oppressors!
Oh, the sorrow and anguish and heart-breaking
In the pitiful wail of the children!

Oh, list to the plea of the children,
The moan and the sigh of the innocent,
Their voiceless yet eloquent prayer,
From the death-breeding slums of the city,
From the danger and dark of the coal mines,
From the hovels of vice and of squalor,
Where blows and chidings and curses
Take the place of love and caresses.
"We hunger in God's land of plenty,
We languish for love and for kindness,
We sicken and die in the darkness
With no one to help or to pity;
We toil in the mills and the coal mines
Like slaves, in the glad days of childhood.
We long for the fields and the flowers
To ramble about in the woodland,
Yet we sicken and die in the alleys!
Oh, merciful God and His angels
Have pity where man has no pity."
—B. F. Austin, in Reason.

John Adams' Stormy Wooing

Parson Smith of the Old First church at Weymouth, Mass., had two daughters, Mary and Abigail. They were attractive young maidens and in due time had lovers. Mary chose a man after the parson's wish, a man of substance and of standing in the community. Abigail, however, chose John Adams, a young lawyer of the neighboring town of Braintree, much to the parson's chagrin. In the pulpit at the Sunday service the worthy divine gave voice to his opinions in a sermon delivered from the following Scripture texts: "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her." Luke x, 42; "For John came neither eating nor drinking; and ye say he hath a devil." Luke vii, 33. Notwithstanding the eloquence of the eminent divine, and his dislike to the match, the young lawyer won his bride, and Abigail Adams, as the wife of our president, achieved world-wide fame, and is enshrined in the hearts of all true Americans as a loyal and true woman, the wife and also the mother of a president.

My Love dwelt in a northern land,
A gray tower in a forest green
Was hers, and far on either hand
The long wash of the waves was seen.
And leagues on leagues of yellow sand,
The wren forest boughs between!

And through the silver northern night
The sunset slowly died away,
And herds of strange deer, lively white
About the coming of the light,
They fled like ghosts before the day!

I know not if the forest green
Still girdles round that castle gray;
I know not if the boughs between
The white deer vanish ere the day;
Above my Love the grass is green,
My heart is colder than the clay!

—Andrew Lang.

A TOUCH OF LIFE'S IRONY

BY ZOE RINEHART

(Copyright 1909 by LITTLE, BROWN & CO.)

Suffering much pain? Oh, no; not enough left of me to feel much pain, I guess. There's nothing of me below the belt but pulp. A fellow in a fix like that is past feeling, I reckon, and that's something to be thankful for, if a fellow has anything to be thankful for in a time like this. It's only a question of a few hours, they say.

No. 6 and the Coast Limited came together like—well, like nothing this side of perdition, I guess. I was in the chair car, and the first thing I knew after the crash, I found myself in closer quarters than I was ever in before, or ever will be again. They finally got me out and brought me here.

There's one thing—I've no folks to be cut up over this affair. It'd be mighty tough for a fellow to be taken home to his family all mashed in like this. I've some friends that have been notified, and they'll see I'm put away decently and in order, so to speak.

It'll be a little hard on Sue. Do you know, as I've been laying here, waiting for the end of this business, I've been doing a little bit of thinking. It's queer the way a man's life turns out, after all. Three hours ago I was on my way as fast as steam could carry me, to Sue and the kids. She's got three, and everybody says they look more like Mart than like Sue. I was happy, if that's what you'd call the feeling a man has when he's about to get what he's been hankering after in his waking hours and in his dreams for fifteen years. And now look at me.

I was going to marry Sue. Yes, tomorrow was to have been my wedding day. You see, Sue's been a widow for five years now. And since Mart died of typhoid, she's had a pretty tough time getting along with the youngsters and all. Sue wasn't raised to work, that is, to work to earn her daily bread. But Mart didn't leave her much.

Say, man, if you know—as you more'n likely don't—what it is to see a woman you've loved with a heart-breaking love for fifteen years—I say if you know what it is to see that woman having a hard time to live, suffering and pining and maybe starving in secret, and know that you've no right to comfort her, and that there is no way to make her take of your plenty—God! If you know what that is, you know something of what the pains of hell must be like.

I loved her long ago. I worshipped the ground she set her dainty feet on fifteen years ago, when we were all three—Sue, Mart and I—young people together in the old neighborhood.

Sue knew it, of course. But I wasn't a good-looker, nor a bright talker, as Mart Day was, and he got the inside track, and came in under the wire ahead of me.

They were married. Well, of course, when a thing like that happens there's nothing for the fellow that gets left to do but "grin and bear it," as I've heard my old mother say. Some may think differently, but I've never held it a sin for a man to love a woman even if she's married, provided he loves her in the right way, and lets her alone. For I take it that if a man has loved a woman with all the mind and heart and soul the Lord has given him, he can't very well pull his love up, root and all, in a minute, and throw it away, just because she's gone and married another man.

I never saw Sue after she married

Mart. Never saw her again until she'd been a widow for three years. Her pink cheeks were faded, and there were gray streaks in her hair, and his children were around her. But, my God! I loved her still. And then a hope that I'd been wandering up and down the world trying to stifle and kill, sprung up, full-sized, and took a mighty hold on my soul.

But there was no wrong in it then. Any man had a right to woo her, for she's been a widow for three years. But I didn't woo her. I couldn't.

Asked her to be my wife.

I loved her better than the very life-blood in my veins, but I didn't seek her out. I saw she loved him still—him who had been her husband, for whom she had borne children. Though he was dead and gone, she loved him still. God! If I had only been the other man—aye, dead, as he was, but loved—by her.

She was poor. More than that, she was frail, and didn't know how to do things that bring in money to buy daily bread. And there were the children, still too young to help.

She was proud, too, proud as Lucifer. She chose to suffer in silence rather than accept anything that savored of charity. I saw it all, her pride, and her sorrow, and her poverty.

I had money. I hadn't had anybody to spend it on during all the years the woman I loved was married to another man. You'll never know the hours, the days, I spent thinking of schemes to help her without her finding me out. But she saw through all pretenses sooner or later, and she wouldn't let me help her in any real way.

She had a long spell of sickness, and got up from it paler and weaker than she had ever been. Then I went to her—I knew I couldn't help her in any other way—I went to her, and asked her to be my wife.

And she promised. She promised with tears of gratitude to marry me. Told me looking into my eyes that she didn't love me, but only respected and honored me. But for the sake of the children—his children—she would be my wife. Heavens, man, can you put yourself in a place like that?

But I loved her. You may not understand me, and in a few minutes returned, or worse yet, you may feel a contempt for me, when I tell you that my heart fairly burst with the wildness of its joy.

Fifteen years is a long time to love a woman, to love her hopelessly, to hunger for the sight of her face and the touch of her hand, and yet know that they belong to another. Now she was to marry me. True, she didn't love me. But that wasn't her fault. I suppose I couldn't have all of heaven on this earth.

I said it was queer the way a man's life works out. A man may fall in the purpose of a lifetime through a stupid little blunder of some fellow he has never seen. Tomorrow I would have married Sue, but to-day a chump forgot to flag a train.

Yet I don't say I have any kick coming against fate. Still I think I could die a little happier if I'd only been the other man.

No, there's nothing you can do for me; I'm quite comfortable. Thanks just the same. I haven't long to wait, you know. Good-bye.

To live in the hearts we leave behind is not to die.—Thomas Campbell.

ORDERED UP HOME RUNS.

When the Chemistry Professor Paralyzed the Professional Coach. Eddie Ashenback, one of baseball's best comedians, dropped into the Cleveland training camp down at Atlanta the other day and told this story.

"I was coaching the University of North Carolina ball team in 1902," remarked Ash, "and I was out with the squad one day when the professor of chemistry came over with a note book full of advice. He was an officious animal and handed me all kinds of wise tips how to run a team. Finally he walked up with this:

"Oh—I say—coach!"

"Yes, professor," said I, "what is it?"

"When you get a man on each corner of the bases—have the bases quite occupied, as it were—I wish you would instruct the batter to knock the ball over yonder," and he pointed to a bunch of weeds four and a half miles away, if it was a foot. Ordering up home runs like ham and eggs or a bottle of beer.

"I thought he was joking at first until I saw he meant it. 'Have I got to do this and hold my job?' I asked him. 'If I have, what times does the next train leave?'"

"Well, before I got through, I had to compromise and agree to have the trick turned every other time."

Mamma's Company Voice.

"Who is that in the parlor, Nellie?" asked the little sister.

"Nobody but mamma and Fred," replied Nellie.

"Oh, yes, there must be someone else," rejoined the little girl, "for mamma has her company voice on."

It was a little squib under the heading of "Fun," which a member of the family read aloud from the paper. The circle about the table who heard it smiled and one said, "That's a good joke." But a more thoughtful member turned it over in her mind. She was the mother, and she admitted to herself that it was more than a joke—that in many instances it was sober truth. It came home to her heart with great significance, for she acknowledged to herself that "the company voice" was entirely too often put on when in the presence of those outside the home circle. We wish to appear at our best before those whose good opinions we desire to gain. But with those who love us how often we speak in irritable, harsh, quick tones.

Facing the Facts.

I'd be quick to seize Wedlock's fond blisses
Were I not so by Poverty cursed.
Prue insists that "on coffee and kisses"
We could live very well at the first.
But to quite catch her view I'm unable,
Though I know, were I pushed to the wall,
I could surely provide for our table
If coffee and kisses were all.

Perhaps in my views I'm archaic,
Ultraromantic and lacking in dreams;
But this "love in a cot" grows prosaic.
No odds how attractive it seems:
For a parlor suite, royal of burnish,
No cash to provide can I call,
Though at home I feel sure I could furnish
If coffee and kisses were all.

There'd be carpets to buy chairs and pictures,
Half portieres, fanciful wove;
Rugs, curtains of lace, rods and fixtures,
And what's more ultraromantic—a stove!
How I wish it were right, Prue's contention,
For marriage, whatever might befall,
To be as easy as drawing a pension
Of coffee and kisses were all.

—Roy Farrell Greene.

Had Big Game in Net.

When Gov. Gen. Treppoff of St. Petersburg was chief of police in Moscow, before the establishment of the state liquor monopoly, he was told from the highest quarters to suppress the orgies at popular resorts in the town. A few days later the police raided the principal restaurants after midnight and the next morning Gen. Treppoff asked of his august master directions for the prosecution of one member of the imperial family, two judges of the high court, a mayor and deputy mayor, several generals and many women well known in Moscow society, who, among others, had been arrested in the "cabinets, parties" of the great restaurants of the town. The matter ended there.

Something as Good.

A lady who is a lover of books entered a book store in Detroit.

"Have you the last Literary Digest?" she asked.

The clerk was a young woman, and evidently a novice at bookselling.

"I'll see," she said, and presently returned to say the magazine wanted was not in stock.

"I'm very anxious to get a copy," said the lady.

"I'll look again," said the obliging clerk, and in a few minutes returned.

"I'm sorry, but the last copy has been sold. But I have something here that I think will do as well," and she handed the amazed customer a copy of "What to Eat and How to Cook it."—Detroit Free Press.

Put the Hellum Aport.

It adds to the impressiveness of a pulpit discourse to dwell at some length on certain points; but this sometimes has been overdone.

An earnest preacher who, in warning sinners against the rocks of ruin, had brought up the favorite illustration of a ship in imminent danger of going to pieces on a reef, was prolonging the horror of the scene, demanding what must be done, etc., when he was interrupted by an impatient sailor among his listeners with:

"Put the hellum aport, you lubber, and lut!"—The Sunday Magazine.

Liquid Air.

Dr. Maxim Boyd states that the first pint of liquid air which Prof. Dewar made cost about $4,000 and was the largest quantity then made.

To-day, eight years after, it is possible to manufacture one litre (nearly two pints) for about 50 cents.

FOR HEALTHY AND LONG LIFE

Simple Rules, the Observance of Which Will Double Capacity for Work and Pleasure

Daily Exercise.

Clerks, bookkeepers and thousands of other indoor workers suffer from the lack of pure air and muscular exercise. If an attempt is made to begin systematic exercise, or an hour or so is spent in digging or chopping wood, undue soreness and fatigue are produced. This disagreeable result often stops the experiment. Instead of discouraging the trial, the very soreness should point out the great need of the body.

If the work were persisted in and gradually increased the stiffness would soon disappear, and leave in its place a general feeling of increased vigor. The nerves are strengthened and the bodily activities quickened. The effect is not alone on the muscles used, but upon each organ. The blood is purified, and the digestion strengthened.

The effects of a prolonged sedentary life are overcome only by working off the accumulated poisons and creating an appetite for new pure food. This is built up in the body, and thus the whole man is renewed.

Exercise must be carefully increased and adapted to the individual muscular strength. The weakest muscles must be brought up to the standard of the others.

For feeble persons who are not able to do the desired work, massage, Swedish movements, and mechanical exercises should be employed.

For more robust persons, walking, horseback riding, rowing, bicycle riding and especially swimming are to be recommended.

How to Have a Clear Head.

The man who desires to have a clear head, a brain keenly alive to the subtle influences of the universe about him, alert to respond to every call made upon it by the bodily organs under its supervision—ready to receive impressions from the infinite Source of universal thought, and capable of thinking the high thoughts of God after Him, must live simply, abstemiously, naturally, and must avoid every harmful and inferior food. He will select the choicest foodstuffs. These consist of fruits, nuts, dextrinized grains—that is, well toasted grain preparations, toasted bread, toasted wheat flakes, etc. He will eat sparingly, never to repletion. He will exercise out of doors at least two or three hours daily, living as much of the time as possible in the open air. He will sleep eight hours at night. He will take a vigorous cold bath every morning on rising, and will take at least two or three times a week, a warm, cleansing bath, just before going to bed at night. He will conserve for useful work every energy of mind and body. He will endeavor to live righteously in the largest sense of the word.

Night Air and Consumption.

The old fallacy that night air is a dangerous miasm is not yet dead. Much has been said about fresh air, outdoor life and sunshine for tuberculosis. Many victims have experienced the healing power in these natural agencies. But too often the consumptive, after a day in the sunshine or in the cold, crisp winter air, retires for a night's sleep in a dark, stuffy, airtight room. Don't be afraid of night air.

Open the bedroom to all the sun possible during the day. The room will then be dry, though cold. Dampness is dangerous and more apt to occur in a closed than in a wide-open room. Keep at least one window in the bedroom open day and night, summer and winter. The door should shut the chamber off from the rest of the house. In the morning the patient should be taken quickly into a warm room for the cold sponge bath.

Insidious Poisons.

The poisonous effects resulting from the use of tea and coffee are very decidedly manifest to one who has given thought to this question, and has made careful observations in relation to it. The sallow complexion, common among women of the higher classes who have reached middle life, the almost universal nervousness among American women, and many common digestive disorders, and the increasing prevalence of nervous or sick headaches, afford to the experienced physician ample evidence of the toxic or poisonous character of tea, coffee, and the allied beverages, cocoa and chocolate. The well-known effect of these drugs in producing wakefulness, banishing as if by magic the sensation of fatigue, affords sufficient evidence of their poisonous character. No one would doubt for a moment the poisonous character of a drug capable of producing irresistible drowsiness in a person who is not weary. The power of a drug to produce wakefulness in a person strongly inclined to sleep as the result of fatigue, is equally evidence of its poisonous character.

The Only Safeguard Against Tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is a low-level disease. People are not subject to it until their bodies have become weakened, and their whole constitution undermined. It used to be thought that one could not have tuberculosis if only he exercised his lungs. A man who had exercised his lungs. A man who had exercised his lungs. A man who had exercised his lungs.

Tomato Sauce.—Put half a can of tomatoes over the fire in a stewpan, with a quarter of a minced onion, a little parsley, a bay leaf and half a teaspoonful of salt. Boil about twenty minutes. Remove from the fire and strain through a sieve. Melt in another pan a tablespoonful of cocoonut or dairy butter and as it melts, sprinkle in a tablespoonful of flour; stir until it browns a little. Mix with the tomato pulp and it is ready for use.

the man, "I am a band master now." To live a natural life is the only safeguard against tuberculosis. One climate may do as well as another if only you live out of doors, get plenty of cold, fresh air, bathe the body with cold water daily, eat simple, nutritious food and take as much exercise as possible without exhausting the body.

Inherited Consumption.

Some people think that because their parents died with consumption, they are doomed by the same plague. This is not so. Cases of inherited consumption are very rare. The real reason why so many in a family suffer from tuberculosis is to be found elsewhere than in heredity.

The afflicted member does not know the necessity for personal cleanliness, for religiously collecting and burning all matter spit up. The use of the ordinary pocket handkerchief and the washing of it in the family laundry is a constant source of danger. Rice paper handkerchiefs or old linen should be used and then burned.

The person himself is almost harmless. It is only the lack of care, in scattering the germs that makes him a dangerous companion. These bad practices are usually due to ignorance.

It is not necessary to isolate the patient for the protection of the family. Each person not affected should breathe fresh air, exercise out of doors, eat simple food, bathe daily and sleep eight hours each night. This will increase the body's vital power and resist the deadly germs which may be breathed in. The rest of the family being thus fortified, the patient should co-operate in the protection.

Let him study to prevent the germs from being scattered broadcast through the house. Then let all co-operate in the fresh air cure of the patient, and he may live in peace and pleasure, gradually fighting his way back to health, and in no way dangerous to his friends.

When every consumptive intelligently co-operates with the family and physician, the day of "inherited consumption" will be passed.

Stomach.

The majority of people never stop to think that the stomach is anything more than a receptacle for things that have been chewed. They get hold of something that tastes good and swallow it into the stomach to get it out of the way, so there will be room for something more. That might be all right if the stomach were a garbage box that could be carried off and emptied; but nature intends the stomach for another purpose. We are constructed of what we eat. We should stop to think of that. We should be careful what we swallow, for it becomes brain, heart, limbs, blood; and if we are to have good blood, clear brains, sound minds, sturdy legs and strong arms, we must eat food that is capable of making that sort of tissue.

Foot Prints of Alcohol.

Employers find that those addicted to the use of alcoholic beverages are not to be depended on. Even if they are always at their work the character of it suffers just in proportion to their indulgence. Now this condition is only a sign of disease in certain controlling centers in the nervous system. In this simple condition, as well as in a multitude of other diseases of the nervous system, we may trace the foot-prints of alcohol. Here we have an explanation of the overcrowded insane asylums of to-day, to say nothing of the army of sufferers at large. Statistics from France and other European countries show that the increase of insanity is parallel with the increase in the consumption of alcohol per capita.

RECIPES.

Cheese Straws.—Roll scraps of puff paste thin, and sprinkle with nut cheese, grated; fold, roll out, and sprinkle again, and repeat the process. Then place on ice to harden.

When cold, roll in rectangular shape one-eighth of an inch thick; place it on a baking pan, and with a pastry cutter dipped in hot water, cut into strips four or five inches long, and less than a quarter of an inch wide. Bake in a moderate oven.

Easter Lily Cake.—Bake sunshine cake in layer tins not more than one inch thick when done; also bake angel food in the same way. With a fancy pastry cutter of lily design cut the white cake into small cakes. Cut the sunshine cake in the same way, and put one of the yellow flowers on top of the white, with a white filling between. Cover the top of the sunshine layer with white icing, or if the white flower comes on top, cover the white with a yellow tinted icing. The cakes might be served separately with the lily formed from icing put on the top using white for the petals and yellow for the centers.

Tomato Sauce.—Put half a can of tomatoes over the fire in a stewpan, with a quarter of a minced onion, a little parsley, a bay leaf and half a teaspoonful of salt. Boil about twenty minutes. Remove from the fire and strain through a sieve. Melt in another pan a tablespoonful of cocoonut or dairy butter and as it melts, sprinkle in a tablespoonful of flour; stir until it browns a little. Mix with the tomato pulp and it is ready for use.

I therefore heartily endorse your remedy."

Imitation Tides in Great Lakes. The actual tides of a lake are excessively small. Nevertheless, noticeable alterations of level often occur, which were long regarded as mysterious. Recent observations in Switzerland make it certain that in these oscillations are due to differences in air pressure at different points on the lake. If the lake is large enough for the barometer to be high at one end while there is still a low-pressure area over the other, water will be forced toward the place where the pressure is lower and an oscillation of level will result.

Make a Religion of Hospitality. Hospitality offered to the stranger under the roof is almost a religion with the Syrian household, although to be the "stranger" is a difficult matter. Except among her own people the young Syrian girl is kept in haremlike seclusion. There is one way only in which the curious American can get into one of these homes, and that is in the guise of a buyer.

English Accident Insurance. For a trifling sum—2 cents for every $500—the person who buys a railroad ticket in England receives a ticket entitling his heirs to insurance money in case he should be killed on the journey. The other day a workman insured his life for $2,500 in this way, and his widow received the money. Now there is a great rush for such insurance.

The Simple Life. Ways That Are Pleasant and Paths That Are Peace. It is the simple life that gives length of days, serenity of mind and body and tranquility of soul. Simple hopes and ambitions, bounded by the desire to do good to one's neighbors, simple pleasures, habits, food and drink.

Men die long before their time because they try to crowd too much into their experiences—they climb too high and fall too hard. A wise woman writes of the good that a simple diet has done her:

"I have been using Grape-Nuts for about six months. I began rather sparingly, until I acquired such a liking for it that for the last three months I have depended upon it almost entirely for my diet, eating nothing else whatever, but Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I believe I could eat it for dinner with fruit and be satisfied without other food, and feel much better and have more strength to do my housework."

"When I began the use of Grape-Nuts I was thin and weak, my muscles were so soft that I was not able to do any work. I weighed only 108 pounds. Nothing that I ate did me any good. I was going down hill rapidly, was nervous and miserable, with no ambition for anything. My condition improved rapidly after I began to eat Grape-Nuts food. It made me feel like a new woman; my muscles got solid, my figure rounded out, my weight increased to 126 pounds in a few weeks, my nerves grew steady and my mind better and clearer. My friends tell me they haven't seen me look so well for years."

"I consider Grape-Nuts the best food on the market, and shall never go back to meats and white bread again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

He Spoke Japanese.

They told this on a Pittsburger who is dead now and therefore shall nameless, but the story is still to be about Washington when a crowd of newspaper men foregather and talk over old times and happenings. It was during the Harrison administration, and the Pittsburger was hot on the trail of a consulship. Several were suggested and rejected by the applicant, who didn't want a government job at Dahomey or some other out of the world place, but a first class charge. Finally he picked on Yokohama as the place where he would like to represent Uncle Sam and secured an audience with President Harrison.

"But do you understand the importance of this position?" asked the president. "Can you speak Japanese?"

"Oh, yes, the applicant understood the importance of the position; also he could speak the language.

"Well," said the president, "let me hear you speak it."

"All right! Ask me something in Japanese."

"There was a laugh all round, but the Pittsburger did not get the position.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Pina Gauze.

Pina gauze, made by the women of the Philippines from pineapple spikes alone, is as delicate as chiffon and far more durable. They use only the best leaves, and these, tied into bundles, are placed under heavy stones in the bed of a running stream. After two or three days of this treatment they are exposed for a time to the action of the sun and air. Each piece is closely inspected to make sure that the process of decomposition was thorough, and if it was not the leaves are subjected a second time to the operation. The fibrous threads are at last wholly separate from the cellulose and lignose particles and cleaned from the sap and gummy substance. The whole is then beaten with a wooden mallet grooved on the face like a fluting machine. The threads are kept moist while this beating is in progress, and the separate threads are thus blended into one mass. In color the fibers vary from cream and light gray to pure white. After the "pineapple cloth" is finished figures are stamped on it with blocks and afterward worked or embroidered by hand.—Chicago News.

His Latest Request.

There is a clever lad who will get his living in this world. For playing truant maternal authority cut off his supper. Casting one fond look at the authoress of his existence, he paused at the door to say:

"Mother, I am going to die, and when I am no more I wish the doctor to cut me open and look at my stomach."

The maternal heart was filled with awful forebodings, and the maternal voice asked what he meant.

"I wish it to be known," he answered, "that I died of starvation."

This was enough. The small boy was triumphant and retired to his little bed, surged to raptorial.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

The tug Irma L. Wheeler, of this port lies at the bottom of Pine Lake in one hundred feet of water, off the mouth of Oyster Bay. The Wheeler had been to Bayne City, having followed up the wake of the steamer Winnabago, Monday, through the heavy ice. She was returning Monday night through the still practically open channel, with ice-fields on either side, when fire was discovered in the forward hold. When discovered by Capt. Small the entire forward compartment was like a roaring furnace. To reach shallow water was impossible and taking chances as to the depth of water, the valves were opened, and the tug went down in one hundred feet of water. The crew all reached the shore on the ice. The Wheeler was owned by the Charlevoix and Vessey Owners' Tug Association, of which the stockholders are Ole Hansen, L. Oleson and Wm. Schlosser, of Milwaukee, N. R. Allen's Sons, of Kenosha, W. L. French of East Jordan, and G. C. Geiken and E. S. Small, of Charlevoix. Capt. E. S. Small was her master. Gus Holmes, an Iron county hunter and trapper, has been asked by State Game Warden Chapman to capture two male and two female beavers for the Detroit zoo. The game laws permit the taking of any wild animals for scientific purpose, and it is understood that the purposes of the officials of the Detroit zoo is to exchange the beaver with the German government for a rare species of squirrel which the American authorities are anxious to experiment with, the Germans taking the beaver for the same purpose. One pair of the beaver will go to Berlin and the other to Hamburg. Mr. Holmes is cognizant of the location of a colony of beaver on the Fence river, and does not anticipate much trouble in filling the order. The official notice, published all over the Philippines, that a general election will be held in two years for the election of a legislature and two commissioners, or delegates to the United States, and notifying the Filipinos to prepare themselves for the same, is a sufficient answer to those who still spout hot air about imperialism. This will be the first experience in limited self-government the Filipinos have ever been given, and it is an extent of liberty nearly the same as has ever been allowed to any of our territories on this continent—about as much independence as Michigan had when it was a territory.

Under the Apple Blossoms.
"How sweet, how pure, they are," she said, breathing in the fragrance of the apple blossoms on the branch he bent down for her.
"Like your—like a maiden's love," he added, with designed sentimentality.
"And how quickly they wither and come to naught—another similarity," she said, with malice aforethought, heading him off.
"Or turn hard and sour and fill us with pain and anguish—like silly little boys, we think we like them," he amended grimly, aware of her object.
For half a second she looked into his scowling eyes with a relenting twinkle growing in her own.
"But if we have a little patience they grow sweet and wholesome again, and— and delicious for domestic uses—pies, for instance," she whispered between a laugh and a sigh.
The scowl turned into a bewildered stare. Then Providence sent him a spark of intelligence.
"Mabel," he cried eagerly, seizing her hands—"Mabel, I adore apple pies."
"And—and, Jack, I make very good ones," she murmured demurely.
And then—all the apple blossoms flushed a delicate pink.

St. Elizabeth of Hungary.
It is curious that St. Elizabeth of Hungary should have spent only the first four years of her life in the country which always distinguishes her name. She was only just four when her father, the king of Hungary, sent her to Thuringia to be betrothed to the nine-year-old Prince Louis, and there she remained all through her childhood and married life until her death in 1231. Perhaps, says the London Chronicle, because she is one of the few saints whose holiness did not preclude love and marriage she always seems a particularly human saint, and the tales that are told of her—how, for instance, she gave away her toys and dolls to poor children when she was but a baby herself, how the food she was taking to beggars in a covered basket turned to red and white roses when her husband lifted the lid, how she heard a bird singing to her on her deathbed and sang to it in reply—all point to the poetry and charm which are associated with her name.

She Meant Dog, Not Husband.
The late Edwin Lord Weeks, the painter and illustrator, had always a great dislike for dogs. It was amusing, his friends say, to hear him harangue against dogs, and innumerable were the stories reflecting upon dogs in an unfavorable light which Mr. Weeks had on the tip of his tongue.
"I dined last night," he said one day, "with Blank. After dinner Blank and I went into the library to look over some John Leech prints. Blank was talking learnedly about Leech when he heard his wife in the next room say: "Where is my guardian angel?" "Here I am, my dear, Blank called. But his wife retorted: "Oh, I don't mean you. I mean Fido."—New York Tribune.

The Whisper Court.
At Rochford, Essex, England, the whisper court is a strange observance held annually under the superintendence of the steward of the manor. The business of the court is carried out at midnight in the open air. The absence of a tenant is punishable by a fine of double his rent for each hour he fails to be in attendance. No artificial light, except a firebrand, is permitted, and the proceedings are recorded by means of one of the embers of the brand. The roll of fourteen tenants is then called over and answered to in a whisper, and then they kneel down and swear allegiance. Very many years ago the lord of the manor, after an absence from his estate, was returning home by night. On the way he accidentally heard some of his discontented tenants plotting his assassination. Thus warned, he returned home by an unexpected route. Then he ordered that each year his tenants should assemble at the same time to do him homage around a post which he erected on the spot where the plotters met.

Salad of the Shoes.
Freshmen have troubles the world over. The "concerts," as they are called at the famous Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, are subjected to an amusing initiation called the salad of shoes.
The freshmen report some days before the upper class men so that they can receive their uniforms and become familiar with the routine of the school.
The first morning after their tormentors return the freshmen are aroused by a demand that they throw their shoes out of the windows into the courtyard. The shoes are gathered into a heap, and kneeling in a big circle around this, the freshmen are obliged to go through some ridiculous gymnastic movements at the command of their superiors.
When the study bell rings they have but a minute to appear in the classrooms, and it is a strenuous minute around that pile of shoes.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Zeney, who had little liking for the Spanish beauty, now took herself off, and the two girls soon went down stairs together, to see the Count de Cazeneau, whom, feeble and emaciated, they found lying back among the pillows of his chair.

On the floor, near the count's chair, were two sacks, which both girls saw were the counterparts of those brought to Gen. La Roche's house that same morning, and an old negro—one who seemed trusted in his master's affairs—was on his knees, having just finished tying the mouth of one of them.

His master then, as Lazalle and Rose entered the room, making a motion for him to desist, he had subsided to the floor, apparently waiting for the call to be ended, and Mademoiselle de Cazeneau felt that her grandfather was desirous that his visitors should leave him.

This they did, and were half way across the first field, when Lazalle put an arm about the shoulder of the slight figure beside her.

"Little Rose, when I found you I saw you had been crying, and I've been wondering about it ever since. Will you not tell me what has been troubling you?"

Rose, lifting a pair of earnest eyes to the dark, brilliant face, asked, "Tell me, Lazalle, have you known Capt. Jean long?"

Lazalle came to a halt and her lids narrowed as they dropped over her sparkling eyes, from which all laughter was gone.

"Known him long? Yes, and no. I doubt if any soul, even those nearest him, can claim truthfully to know that man. I lived for many years in my uncle's house, where Capt. Jean also lived; that is, he came and went. But, for the last three years, I've not seen him until this morning."

Something in her tone—something in her face—her manner, caused a suspicion to flash through Mademoiselle

"I happen to know, because I have heard the same tale from my uncle, who knew this boy at that time. The boy is now known to you as Capt. Jean Laffitte."

"Capt. Laffitte!" was the amazed, half incredulous exclamation. Lazalle nodded.

"Capt. Jean Laffitte!" repeated Rose de Cazeneau, her voice faint with astonishment. "And yet—she added, as if trying to grasp the wonderful fact, 'he told me, when he brought me to my grandparents, that he had known my mother, but I supposed he had met her in New Orleans.'"

"Was it Capt. Jean who brought you from the Choctaws?" asked Lazalle, now surprised in turn.

Mademoiselle de Cazeneau nodded, but seemed disinclined to enter into details and fortune favored her in this, for Lazalle said, "There is Capt. Jean now."

He was coming across the fields toward them, apparently on his way to Kanauhana. But, just as they noticed him he took a sharp turn to the left, in the direction of the timber, where, at the edge of the woods, two men stood as if waiting his approach. One of them was Shapira, who was leaning on a long gun, and his companion was Baptistine.

"That man with the gun is the one from whom grandparents rented our new plantation," said Rose, as the two girls, walking slowly, watched Laffitte's tall figure approaching the waiting men. "I wonder where he lives. He is always about the fields and woods, yet there is no house for many miles, except Gen. La Roche's and the one at Kanauhana."

Far in the depths of the wood upon whose edge Shapira and Baptistine stood, and upon the domain of Kanauhana, was the entrance to the so-called "Colonel's."

It was, apparently, nothing more than a ragged fissure of earth, choked by vines and tangled forest growths, and suggesting only the lair of a wild beast or deadly serpent. But, some formation that he was the boy whom her mother knew, had, taken in connection with her former admiration for him, greatly shaken Rose's recent prejudices, and, with womanly inconsistency, she felt hurt because he was unable to realize this alteration in her feelings.

From pain, she soon passed to anger, the exact source or nature of which she could scarcely have analyzed. But its immediate effect was that she entered into a seeming flirtation with the young Kentuckian, who was only too pleased to respond.

All this furnished a new and singular illustration of love's blindness—these four "playing at cross purposes" and wilfully misunderstanding one another; while, beaming upon them from the head of the table, was Gen. La Roche, his eyes and heart filled with unsuspected admiration and love for the beautiful Spanish girl who—so far as could be inferred from appearances—regarded him simply as her friend and banker.

Just as dinner was over, a mud-spattered negro and horse appeared before the outer door, the former bearing a letter from Gov. Claiborne to Gen. La Roche, urging his immediate presence in New Orleans.

"Why, you black scoundrel!" thundered the general, his face ablaze with wrath, after he had read the letter and glanced again at its date, "this is five days old and should have reached me four days ago!"

The frightened messenger looked woefully at his left arm, which was in a sling, and explained that, a short distance from New Orleans, down by the little Bayou d'Or, his horse had fallen and broken a leg, while he himself, pitching over the animal's head, had been stunned and lay until found by some negroes living in a cabin near by, who had bandaged his arm and shot his horse.

"Come inside with me, while I make ready to start," said La Roche to Laffitte, after ordering his horse to be saddled; "I want a few words with you."

When in his own room, he handed the letter to Laffitte, and fuming about it a cigar, while giving instructions to his valet in a most impatient manner that bespoke mental disturbance.

The governor had written him that, having received, from an unexpected quarter, a proposal promising valuable support for the defense of New Orleans, he had called a meeting of officials and prominent men of the city, at which he—the general—was urged to be present.

"I see," said Laffitte, after perusing the letter, "that the conference was to have taken place two evenings ago."

"Yes—damn it!" replied La Roche, rousing from his abstraction. "But I doubt if Claiborne takes any decisive action before I can get to him."

"You think, then, that there can be no doubt of Barataria's offer meeting with favor?"

"How can there be?" was the dogmatically put question. "Claiborne will not be so foolish—so lacking in foresight, at such a time as this. But," now showing a little anxiety, "even should he refuse, you will not go over to the British?"

The flash of Laffitte's eyes would have been sufficient answer to this. But he said quietly, "In such case I shall remain neutral."

"And if the British attack Barataria?" suggested La Roche.

"Then Barataria will defend herself."

Depended Upon the Appropriation.
Senator Cullom says there were no weather maps and no weather science when he was a younger man. To these new-fangled notions he ascribes the increased volume of modern talk about the weather. In fact, he thinks we should have much less weather were it not for the government's scientific meteorologists.

"The lack of foundation for weather talk," said he in conversation about the cold wave, "reminds me of a Chicago man who came here years ago in behalf of an appropriation for some health project in that city.

"Pneumo-pneumonia," said he, easily, "is just sweeping through Chicago."

"Oh, no," I answered. "You can't mean that severe cases of pneumonia are prevalent now in Chicago."

"Well," he explained, "they will be if we don't secure this appropriation."—Washington Post.

All to Be Renounced.
Prof. Duncan Campbell Lee, formerly head of the Cornell department of oratory, is an Adonis in form, a Chesterfield in manner and a Beau Brummell in attire. His one-time colleague, Morse Stephens, could readily obtain employment as a dime museum fat man did he not find history more lucrative. Finally Prof. Harry Powers of the same institution, though one of the most genial of men, was nothing less than Mephistophelian in appearance. Coming down the campus one day this striking trio passed two ladies, one of whom was evidently a stranger being shown the local sights. Her companion was about to explain, "Those were professors—"

"Professors, indeed!" interrupted the visitor. "I should call them the world, the flesh and the devil."—New York Times.

200 Persons Over 70 Years of Age.
A canvass of the city and township just made by George Phillips, an old resident, to ascertain how many persons were living at the age of seventy years and upward, found 200—viz.: males, 95; females, 105.

The oldest person found was Mrs. Emily Catten, colored, aged 99 years. Quite a large number were born in this city and vicinity.—Salem Correspondence, Cleveland Leader.

TWO MEN AT ONE SPADE.

Method of East Indian Coolies Divides the Labor.
At hill stations in the Himalayas, India, coolies are employed unceasingly in the care of the snake-like roads which wind round and round the sides of the hills. Their method of working provides a novelty to one accustomed to the methods of laborers at home. When digging, two men work at one spade, a rope being attached to the lower end of the wooden shaft, and pulled by one coolie to assist the other in lifting after the latter has filled the spade. The work is done very rapidly, so much so, indeed, as to justify the employment of two men at one spade; but it has a decidedly comical appearance, and reminds one of a clock-work toy.—Pearson's Weekly.

An Ex-Sheriff Talks.
Scott City, Kan., March 20th.—(Special.)—Almost every newspaper tells of cures of the most deadly of kidney diseases by Dodd's Kidney Pills, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism and Bladder troubles, in fact any disease that is of the kidneys or caused by disordered kidneys is readily cured by this great American remedy. But it is in curing the earlier stages of kidney complaint that Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing their greatest work. They are preventing thousands of cases of Bright's disease and other deadly ailments by curing Kidney Disease when it first shows its presence in the body.

Speaking of this work Ex-Sheriff James Scott of Scott County, says: "I have used eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and must say that they are just the thing for Kidney Disease. We have tried many kidney medicines but Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best of all."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is a test on record of a disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. A Secret.
It is often very desirable to know how to seal a letter so that it cannot be opened without betraying the fact. Steam or hot water will open envelopes closed with mullage and even a wafer. A hot iron or a spirit lamp dissolves sealing wax, an impression in plaster having been taken of the seal. By the combined use of water and sealing wax, however, all attempts to open the letter otherwise than by force can be frustrated. All that is necessary is to close the letter first with a small moist wafer and to pierce the latter with a coarse needle (the same applies to mullage), whereupon sealing wax may be used in the usual manner. This seal can neither be opened by dry heat nor by moisture.

What "So Long" Means.
"You may have wondered, perhaps, how the slang expression, 'so long,' came to be so generally used," said a Columbia college lecturer the other day. "It is usually used in closing a conversation, and is simply a form of good-by. The Norwegians brought it to this country. In that land of the midnight sun, 'sax laeng' is a common form of farewell. It means the same as the 'au revoir' of the French. Among the early settlers in America were many Norwegians, and the phrase was picked up from them. They pronounce it with the 'g' softened and accompany it by a wave of the hand."

MILD WEATHER OF SETTLERS.

The splendid yields of wheat, oats and barley produced by the farmers of Western Canada and the excellent prices received for the same, have been the means of giving an increased interest throughout the United States. As a result the inquiries made of the Agents of the Canadian Government have nearly doubled over those of the same period last year. Railroad companies are putting on increased carrying capacity to meet the demand made upon them for carrying passengers and freight. Everything points to a most prosperous year. There is room for hundreds of thousands additional settlers, much new land having been opened up for settlement this year.

It is quite interesting to look through the letters received from the Americans who have settled in Western Canada during the past few years, and considering the large number it is surprising how few there are who have not succeeded. An extract from a letter written by Mr. Geo. M. Griswold of Red Deer, Alta., formerly of Grever, Montana, written on the 2nd of January is as follows:

"I am located 1 1/2 miles from a beautiful lake 10 miles long, where there is church, school, 3 stores, creamery and two postoffices. The fine stock, both cattle (cows and steers) horses, hogs and sheep are rolling fat, grazing in pasture to-day, just a little snow, hardly enough for good sleighing, as we just had a Chinook which has melted the roads and laid bare the fields and pasture. There are fine wheat, oats, barley and flax raised here, also winter wheat and timothy hay for export to British Columbia. This is a mixed farming and dairy country. This is the right time to get a foothold in the Canadian West, as it was some years ago in the United States. We are free from wind-gumbo and alkali here and have fine, clear soft well and spring water at a depth of from 5 to 25 feet, and lots of open everflowing springs."

Telegraphic advices from Medicine Hat say that seeding has commenced at Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and other points. At the former place the temperature moderated gradually until on the 19th the maximum was 45 and the minimum 26. Thermometer readings since then have been as follows: 20th, 47 and 38; 21st, 51 and 34; 22nd, 56 and 39; 23rd, 48 and 40; 24th, 48 and 26.

During the last few days in February considerable ploughing was done near Lethbridge. P. A. Pulley, a recent arrival from Montana, ploughed and harrowed fifteen acres, and E. Lallibory about the same amount. Rev. Coulter White has also been harrowing his farm. All report the ground frost free and in excellent condition. Bricklaying has also begun in town. At Hartney further east on the 25th February the sun was warm and bright, wheeled carriages were in use and the plowed fields look as if they are ready for the press-drills. There is every appearance that spring has arrived, but farmers do not wish to be deceived by appearances and consequently have not commenced to use their bluestone and seed wheat.

"Then Barataria will defend herself."

de Cazeneau's mind, impelling her to say, before realizing that she had uttered the words, "Lazalle, do you love, or hate, Capt. Jean?"

Lazalle turned so fiercely that her small companion was startled and, regretting her query, hastened to say, "You speak kindly of him, yet your eyes seem to hold no kindness for him. I myself—do you know, I really dread him. I cannot tell what to think about the man; for Zeney says it was not Capt. Jean who killed men and burned their ships, and was a wicked pirate, but that these things were done by another man, whom Capt. Jean was with, and who is now dead."

"Did Zeney tell you the name of this other man—this wicked captain, who did such cruel things?" inquired Lazalle, with assumed carelessness, and her companion could not see the sudden fire in the dark eyes now staring straight ahead.

"Oh, yes; he was called Capt. Laro."

Rose was startled by a peculiar laugh from Lazalle, whose face was still turned away. But the hardening curve of the red under lip, to be seen in profile, told her that she had said something to affect the Spanish beauty unpleasantly.

She could not help feeling uneasy, and after a short silence added, with the wish to say something which might give no offense, "Is it not rather odd that it was this very Capt. Laro who brought my mother over from France?"

Lazalle's face had regained much of its usual expression, and Mademoiselle de Cazeneau, feeling somewhat reassured, slipped her hand within the rounded arm of her friend.

"And my mother told me of such a handsome boy who was in the place with them that night—one this Capt. Laro said he was as fond of as an own son."

A curious look was in the black eyes that glanced sidewise as Lazalle asked, "What was the name of this wonderful boy?"

"That I do not know; my mother never thought to mention it."
Lazalle laughed. "Shall I tell you his name?"
"You! How can you possibly know it?"

years before, an Indian had imparted its secret to Laffitte, and Shapira's deceased uncle, the former owner of Kanauhana, had been one of Barataria's most faithful agents.

Gen. La Roche and Laffitte had held a long consultation, during which the latter had told his host of the recent visit from the English officers; of their proposition and of Beluche's departure for New Orleans for the purpose of laying the Baratarian offer before the governor.

La Roche, like Laffitte, wondered at Beluche's unexplained failure to return. He also expressed surprise that, in the face of such an unusual and important event, he had not been sent for by the governor, with whom his relations, both personal and official, were very close, and who, he felt assured, would not decide the matter upon his own responsibility.

"I must go to the city this afternoon or to-morrow morning," at the latest," the general had said, when the consultation was ended, and the clock on the mantel of his study had, by chiming twelve, caused Laffitte to rise, saying that he must go over to Kanauhana, and see Count de Cazeneau.

He was back within an hour, but saw nothing of Mademoiselle de Cazeneau until all were seated at dinner, when young Stewart was giving a lively account of something that had occurred that forenoon, while he was hunting.

The story created considerable laughter, and Laffitte, noticing the softened look and gracious manner of the island Rose toward himself, ascribed them, as well as the fearless glances with which she met his eyes, to an entirely wrong cause.

They would have made him very happy, being so like those he had formerly known, had it not been for the belief that love for another man was now tempering her feeling and attitude toward himself, just as the reality of his own hopeless love was giving his bearing toward Lazalle a gentleness he had never before accorded the girl, and which, despite her cool reception of his advances, brought a brighter color to her cheeks, and awakened in her heart a strange thrill of hope.

The effect of Zeney's defense of Laffitte, and Lazalle's surprising in-

WOMEN'S WORLD

This Statement Has Been Unjustly Made, Because Modest Women Evade Questions Asked By Male Physicians.

An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful; they will lie to their physician." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex.

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women.

Is it any wonder, then, that women continue to suffer and that doctors fail to cure female diseases when they cannot get the proper information to work on?

This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To her they can do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients, through her correspondence with them than the physician who personally questions them.

If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

The fact that this great boon, which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in.

PLACE OF SKULLS

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF PIECE OF CALIFORNIA LAND.

One Million Acres, Recently Thrown Open to Entry, Worthless to the Settler—Strewn with the Skeletons of Prospectors and Bones of Settlers.

On June 15, 1903, 1,000,000 acres of land in California were thrown open to entry. This may be taken up either under the desert land act or as homesteads in ten-acre tracts. The strip stretches from Mojave to the Colorado river.

We wish to warn all intending settlers to let this land alone. There is a good deal of talk about "making the desert blossom as the rose." Some deserts blossom, but not this one. Nobody will ever do more for his desert than Mother Nature has done. The only blooming nature has brought about there is that its freckled bosom blossoms with large alkali postules or pimples, punctuated with sage brush and cactus. This sums up the flora of the new promised land. The fauna includes jack rabbits, horned toads, Gila monsters and venomous snakes.

The soil is coarse gravel, and on top of the coarse gravel there is a fine alkali powder which, when the wind blows—and the wind blows often—sweeps over the scorching and barren land like the dreaded sandstorms of the Sahara, which, by the way, they much resemble. Even far to the southwest, across the lofty mountain ranges, these desert sandstorms sometimes sweep, reaching the favored dwellers in southern California in the midst of their orange groves. Even this distant touch of the desert winds causes trees to wither, grass to scorch and men and animals to suffer keenly. Over this dreadful desert the sun moves like a ball of fire across a sky of brass. Rarely does a cloud break the intensity of the pitiless rays.

Those credulous persons who may believe that this is the kind of desert which, by irrigation, may be turned into a garden are doomed to disappointment. There is no water on this desert strip. The waters of the Colorado may be led on the lands of the Yuma desert, but that is far lower in level than are these. Much of this Mojave strip is at an elevation of 2,000 or 3,000 feet. As for artesian water, the writer personally knows of one well which was bored for nearly 2,000 feet, ending in igneous rock and producing nothing but profanity.

The last hope for the settler on this barren land would be the discovery of the precious metals. They may exist there. We do not say they can not be found. But we know that the land has been prospected by experienced miners for half a century. If a tenderfoot can find a gold mine where an old California miner fails he is a smart tenderfoot. But we doubt his success.

We warn all eastern people not to be deluded by false, even if well-meaning, representations concerning this strip of land between Mojave and the Colorado river. It is strewn with the skeletons of prospectors, the bones of animals. It is a place of skulls.—San Francisco Argonaut.

SCIATIC TORTURE

PAIN SUFFERED BY MR. MARSTON AS GREAT AS MORTAL CAN STAND.

For Six Months He Could Not Turn in Bed—He Tells of a Remedy Which Has Given Perfect Relief.

The case of Mr. Marston shows that sciatica can be cured, and no one afflicted by it should allow himself to be disheartened. He was first stricken about a year ago, and for six months he suffered pain which he thinks the most intense that any man could possibly stand.

Asked about the details of his remarkable recovery, Mr. Marston gave the following account: "I was attacked by a numbness or dull feeling just back of my right hip. I didn't know what the matter was, but thought it was simply a stiffness that would wear away in a short time. It didn't, however, and soon the pain became so very bad that every step was torture for me. When I finally succeeded in getting home, it was just as much as I could do to reach my room and get to bed.

"The doctor was sent for, and when he had examined me he said I had sciatica. He prescribed for me, and advised me not to try to leave my bed. The advice was unnecessary for I couldn't get out of bed if I wanted to. It was impossible for me to turn from one side to the other. The moment I attempted to move any part of my body, the pain became so excruciating that I would have to lie perfectly motionless.

"I suffered this torture for six months without getting any relief. Then I discharged the doctor, and on the advice of a friend I bought a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and began to take them, three at a dose, three times a day. I was determined to give them a thorough trial.

"Two months after I began to use them I was able to leave my bed and walk about the house, and a month later I was entirely cured and able to go about my work as usual. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine I ever used, and I heartily recommend them to anyone who suffers from sciatica."

Mr. Marston is a prosperous farmer and may be reached by mail addressed to Charles P. Marston, Hampton P. O., New Hampshire. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured other painful nervous disorders, such as neuralgia, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. They are sold by all druggists.

When the Baby Came Along.

I thought 'twas hard—the tollin', the tide a-pullin' strong. But I shouted "Halleluia!" when the Baby came along. He coaxed me back to youth time, made my life a livin' song—I was nappy, folks, I tell you, when the Baby came along.

For all the dreary winter—for all the skies so dim, I seemed to see my mother in the twinklin' eyes of him; An' a thousand sweetest flowers in deserts seemed to throng. An' I heard the birds a-singin' when the Baby came along.

Lord bless that little Baby—the best one in the ranch! He'll be yet there in the springtime—just a-tridin' in the branch. An' God gives him the pleasure of the right above the wrong—We were happy, without measure, when the Baby came along.—Atlanta Constitution.

Expensive Eye of a Potato.

The potato boom has not yet run its course in Lincolnshire, and a well-known cultivator, Mr. T. A. Scarlett, visiting Spalding weekly market, underwent much heckling as to the single tuber he paid £20 for to Mr. Findlay, the originator of the Northern Star and El Dorado varieties. Mr. Scarlett said he had since been offered £25 for this potato, but had refused the offer. As, however, the would-be purchaser was very pressing, he allowed him to cut out a single eye for the sum of £5. This is probably the first time in the history of the potato that a single eye from one has had a bank-note value.—London Tit-Bits.

PERSONALITY OF "AUTOCRAT."

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes Described by One Who Knew Him.

Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis writes of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Physically, he was a very small man, holding himself erect—his face insignificant as his figure, except for a long obstinate upper lip ('left to me,' he said one day, 'by some ill-conditioned great-grandmother'), and eyes full of a wonderful fire and sympathy. No one on whom Dr. Holmes had once looked with interest ever forgot the look—or him. He attracted all kinds of people as a brilliant, excitable child would attract them. But nobody, I suspect, ever succeeded in being familiar with him. I remember one evening that he quoted one of his poems, and I was forced stupidly to acknowledge that I did not know it. He fairly jumped to the bookcase, took out the volume and read the verses, standing in the middle of the room, his voice trembling, his whole body thrilling with their meaning. 'There!' he cried at the end, his eyes flashing, 'could anybody have said that 'better? Ah-h!' with a long in-drawn breath of delight as he put the book back."

Heart Weakness.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure has made many hearts well after they have been pronounced hopeless. It has completely cured thousands, and will almost invariably cure or benefit every case of heart disease.

Short breath, pain around heart, palpitation, fluttering, dizzy, fainting and smothering spells should not be neglected. Take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and see how quick you will be relieved.

It cannot make a new heart, but will restore a sick one by strengthening the heart nerves and muscles, relieving the unnatural strain, and restoring its vitality.

"I had a very bad case of heart trouble. For six months I could not work. Last July I was plowing corn and feeling bad all day; in the afternoon in plowing one row I had to lay down, or fall down, three times. My heart throbbed as though it would burst through, and I had difficulty in getting my breath. I purchased a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and before I had used half of it I could lay down and sleep all night. Previously I had to get up from five to ten times a night. I have taken several bottles, and my heart is as regular as clock work. I feel like a new man, and can work considerably for an old man. 84 1/2 years old."
H. D. McGILL, Frost, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sores the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and acidity. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and worn out and dyspepsia claims the victim.

Theford's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the natural stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.

You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Theford's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your druggist for 25c. If he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.
