Extemporaneous Class.

The closing banquet of the East Jordan High School Extemporaneous Class, held last Friday evening at the High School Building, was highly successful. About forty guests witnessed the short program, joined in singing some of the old songs, and then repaired to the halls where the tables were set. After a very well prepared and served supper, were more merrymaking and speeches.

This class held its first meeting the first Monday of the school year and has held a meeting every school week this year but one. Much of the first semester was spent in considering the economic questions of the day. After that literature, history, science, invention, politics, infidelity, art, idealism, in fact almost every question of importance has been touched. Prof. J. M. Tice, the instructor, has spent many valuable hours of hard labor in this work, selecting subjects, criticizing and asking timely questions. Students, who have put their best efforts upon this work, and only those who have been present at almost every meeting, can realize the progress made. Not only have the students been forever cured, to a large degree, of stage fright, but their mental horizon has been broadened, and life looks different to them.

To Mr. Tice belongs the credit of having introduced this best of branches in the East Jordan High School and we can only hope that the good seed planted by him will live on for years in our school.

Following is the class roll: Bess Greenwood, Ella Dunlop, Madge Nicholas, Grace Gregory, Clio McKee, Nell Maddaugh, Oral Misenar, Clayton Shapton, Mildred Gilbert, Homer Maddock, Ray Clark, Austin Sheldon, Howard Porter, Dan Seymour and Loyd Bennett.

Newspapers Versus Handbills

Some business men have an idea that handbills and dodgers are superior to newspapers as advertising mediums. Handbills are good in their way as auxiliaries, but they are no more to be compared to the advertising columns of a newspaper, says the Danville Advertiser, than a pig-heart peddler on Broadway is to be compared with John Wanamaker's great emporium. The peddler attracts attention for a moment if he be an expert, but the great store rivets the eye and loosens the purse strings of those whose trade is worth having. The handbill is crumpled in the hand and soon thrown aside. The newspaper is carried home, read and reread and filed away. There is something besides the advertising there—entertainment, information—which adds value to the advertising beside which it is placed. Advertisements are read now more than ever before, sometimes before what is commonly known as news, for advertisements are sometimes the latest and most vital news, vital to everyday life. The headlines of an ad. can be made as attractive as the headlines of a wedding and the bargains offered as alluring as the wedding feast. The business man who talks to the readers of a newspaper as he talks to the customer in his store is the one who wins. Use handbills and posters if you wish, but place your great hope for returns in the columns of the favorite newspaper.

THE CALL TO ACTION AMONG BIRDS.

Mr. Craig S. Thoms tells a number of interesting things about young birds in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for June, and speaks of the significant intonations of a bird's voice as follows: "If one happens near a nest at a time when the young birds are able to come off, and gives it so much attention that the parent birds are alarmed for the safety of their nestlings, they call their young to leave the nest with a note I have never heard under any other circumstances. It is not a note of alarm, scolding or pleading, as when the young are helpless, but one of command, and command that has in it a note of encouragement, and also the assurance of being obeyed. This command the nestlings recognize instantly, and they know its meaning; they also obey it, if possible. I have seen a brood of sparrows transformed in a moment by it from contented nestlings to animated, restless, bounding spirits that one could not keep in the nest except by main force."

Primary Reform Contest Ended

Brief History of its Progress.

Preparations for Michigan's Direct Voting Experiment Almost Completed.

Lansing, May 15, 1905.

The Michigan senate has fully justified the faith repeatedly expressed in this correspondence, and has completely fulfilled the prediction of one week ago and two weeks ago, that a primary election bill would pass the senate not materially differing from that which was sent from the house as the Double Ivory-Dickinson bill. It does not matter now about the name; the substance is in the bill—practically the same as that which received every vote in the house except one, and then received the earnest and loyal support of the governor—only amended in minor points to perfect its terms and make it more easily workable, in which the house will readily concur.

This result has not been reached without a very determined struggle on the floor of the senate occupying parts of four days, beside the prolonged consideration in the committee on elections, which was also not altogether smooth and harmonious. It will be remembered that the committee reported out the bill May 3, so changed from its original character as to be unacceptable to the senate. It had been amended to include all state officers and to require a majority vote to nominate in which form its enactment into law was regarded as hopeless, and its successful operation impossible if it could be enacted. The report was at first accepted, but was the next day reconsidered—with spirited debate on both occasions—and the bill recommitted with instruction to report back on the 9th and make it a special order for Wednesday the 10th. It is worth while to follow its fortunes somewhat fully, to appreciate the vigilance with which the friends of the house bill guarded it and brought it to its successful issue against the noless firm and faithful and vigilant opposition whose views compelled them to oppose it.

The committee only reached agreement after a morning spent in the effort, and a session in the afternoon just before the senate's session at two o'clock, when by unanimous consent they accepted a substitute which eliminated the Dickinson feature for nomination of governor and lieutenant governor, and was substantially the Double Ivory bill of the house, covering the explicit provisions of the republican platform. This was reported to the senate and made the special order for three o'clock the following day, and ordered printed. Promptly at that hour the senate took up the bill, and went into committee of the whole for its consideration, with Senator Baird in the chair. The bill was read section by section, and many amendments were offered, mostly of small significance and sometimes with apparently little serious purpose except to embarrass the measure. These were uniformly voted down by an emphatic majority, except an occasional one for perfecting the phraseology.

That emphatic majority, it gradually became manifest, had a definite purpose and was well organized—a purpose to protect the bill from unfriendly amendment, and to restore it as early as possible to the form in which it had passed the house, as the only course which could promise the final enactment of any primary law at all. When the end of chapter three was reached, Senator Doherty offered two additional sections, which were the Dickinson provisions for nomination of governor and lieutenant governor, except that he required a majority vote to nominate at the primary; and now the real crisis of the struggle was reached. Parliamentary tactics and vigorous debate, amendment and counter amendment, impassioned eloquence and thoughtful argument, marked the most momentous conflict of the session, and attracted a large audience, members of the house and other officers, and private citizens, upon the floor and in the galleries.

The first move was an amendment to the amendment, by Senator Mills of Menominee, to omit the lieutenant governor, which was a sensitive spot for the upper peninsula. That was supported by Senators Smith and Brown, and opposed by Glasgow, Crosey and Farr, and on vote was defeated. Senator Heine of Bay offered a substitute for the Doherty amendment, to include all state officers, supported by McKay and Woodman, and opposed by Fyfe, and on vote defeated. Senator Fyfe of Kent offered an amendment, to permit nomination by a plurality of not less than thirty-five percent instead of a majority. This was vigorously opposed by Senators Brown and Woodman, and ably defended by Fyfe, but on vote was lost. Many of the speeches on both sides of these propositions, were able and eloquent, and specially notable were those of President protem, Glasgow and Senator Brown of Lapeer, opposing champions.

At half past five o'clock a vote was reached on the main proposition, Senator Doherty's amendment restoring the governor and lieutenant governor to the bill, and it was adopted by an emphatic vote. A recess was then taken until half past seven, after voting down a proposition to adjourn till the next afternoon. On reassembling the work was taken up again, and a conflict with Wayne county was immediately precipitated by the provision in the bill for apportioning delegates upon the party vote for governor. Senator Traver moved to substitute secretary of state, supported by McKay and opposed by Doherty, and lost. He then proposed presidential electors, which shared the same fate; and then Martindale moved to leave the subject to the state central committee, and that was voted down. A particularly hot shot was fired at Wayne for her insistence that it was unjust to that county to apportion on the vote for governor instead of secretary of state, when a senator inquired if she would not gain as much in the democratic convention as she would lose in the republican. About nine o'clock the 31st and final page of the bill was reached and passed. The committee then rose and reported to the senate its recommendation that the bill pass, and the senate then adjourned.

The task was resumed as the unfinished business at the session of Thursday afternoon, and the amendments made the previous day by committee of the whole were concurred in by a vote of twenty-four to eight. An amendment was then offered by Senator Doherty including in the operation of the bill municipal and probate judges, which had not been included, and this was adopted by the senate. Senator Crosey offered an amendment substituting a plurality of not less than forty per cent, instead of a majority as necessary to nominate, which was warmly contested by Brown and Sheldon, but was adopted on a yea and nay vote, twenty-four to seven. The bill was then put upon its passage, and went through with the votes of all but two of the senators, Messrs. Baird and Brown alone voting nay.

Like all important measures upon which there are radical differences of opinion, it is the result of compromise and mutual concession, and there is nowhere room for just desecration, but much ground for mutual congratulation that the subject has reached a disposition so fair and so generally satisfactory as this conclusion is.

The governor has signed an act authorizing townships, cities and villages to appropriate money for the celebration of Memorial Day, and some municipalities will act under it this year. The veterans are becoming too few and too feeble to conduct those celebrations much longer, and the communities must soon assume the duty which they have so long discharged; and we may hope that a more general interest will be aroused in all classes of the people, which shall save the day from the tendency to degrade its sacred character with roystering sports, and make it more completely what it may become, a holy Memorial Day of all the people for all of their cherished dead.

SLAVS IN UNITED STATES

Strain is Certain to Miss Largely in the Blood of the Future Composite American—Skilled Trades Have Sparse Representation in Their Ranks—Have Not the Fault of Huddling in the Cities, as Have Other Nationalities.

Charities published in a recent number the results of a detailed study of Slavic immigration in the United States. In spite of the proportions which it has reached—some 230,000 Slavs came over last year—popular ignorance on the subject is marked. In northern Pennsylvania the great hordes of Ruthenian, Polish and Slovak miners are contemptuously classed as "Huns," and even the more intelligent are disposed to associate them with the followers of Attila. For good or ill, however, the Slavic strain promises to mix largely in the blood of the future composite American. In the daily arrivals at Ellis Island it is outnumbered only by the Italian and possibly by the Jewish; hence it is encouraging to note that the Slavs, too, improve on closer acquaintance. Properly Slavic immigrants should not be classed as a single group. They are really a congeries of some twenty-one peoples, differing in race, language and frequently in religion. They range all the way from the highly civilized Bohemian, almost invariably literate and skilled of labor, to the ignorant Ruthene of Galicia, economically and educationally on the lowest plane. Practically all religions are represented—Orthodox Greek, Roman Catholic, Protestant and Lutheran. With such eccentricities as the Doukbohors and regularly organized sets of Preethinkers.

According to Miss Kate Holladay Claghorn, the causes of immigration are largely political. Thus it is almost invariably the subject races that leave home. From Russia the genuine Muscovite seldom emigrates; it is the Pole, the Lithuanian, the Jew and the Finn. The dominant German does not abandon Austria in large numbers; it is the more or less subject Slav. Roumanians do not emigrate from their own country, Roumania; but from Hungary. Ruthenians come from Galicia, not from Russia. Economic causes, too, are influential. According to Ivan Ardan, the peasants of Galicia subsist almost entirely on potatoes and cabbage; 50 per cent eat no bread for six months in the year. Under these conditions a high standard of education and manners could hardly be expected. They have some traits, indeed, not unlike the Asiatic hordes from which many of them are sprung. They are hard drinkers, ready fighters, though seldom quarrelsome. With the exception of the Bohemians and Magyars (the latter, of course, are not Slavs, though loosely so reckoned by Charities), the rate of illiteracy is high; and the skilled trades are sparsely represented. Like the Italians, the Slavs come here first without their wives; send home their savings, and, when work is slack, go back themselves. Also like the Italians, however, they are not contented to remain away; but soon return, this time with their families, and definitely establish here their homes.

Unquestionably, the Slavs are more assimilable than some other elements in the new immigration. They meet the supreme test—that of distribution. They do not huddle in the great cities, like the Italians and Jews; there are Slav colonies in New York, but they are comparatively unimportant. They are distributed pretty generally from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river, in accordance with the demands of labor. They have one great advantage in that the part of Europe from which they come is, physically and climatically, almost identical with our own. The fertile plains of the Danube are reproduced here in those of the Mississippi.

The Russian Jew here takes up a new trade in the sweat shop; the Italian from the farms of Sicily and Basilicata here has to adapt himself to rough laborer's work, but the Slav, in large measure, simply resumes the occupations to which he has been bred at home. They are miners in the anthracite fields and iron mines of Pennsylvania; wheat growers in Wisconsin and Illinois, where they are frequently proprietors; tobacco raisers in Connecticut; "abandoned farmers" in New England. They are employed in the steel shops of Pittsburgh, the shoe factories of Lynn, the oil and sugar refineries of Greater New York and the hat shops of Newark. They work as stevedores on the docks of Jersey City and in the packing houses of Chicago.

They are found in largest numbers in Pennsylvania, where, in the iron and coal mines, there are now about 110,000—in the main Poles, Ruthenians and Slovaks. To New York state came 32,000 last year, to Illinois 24,000 and to Ohio 19,000. In general, they are industrious and law-abiding; utilize educational opportunities for their children—though still too closely attached to the parochial school; belong equally to both the two great political parties, and constantly improve their condition. The Magyar colony of New York—bounded by Stanton and Seventh streets, First avenue and East River—is a distinct gain. Here they are furriers, shopkeepers, merchants and workmen in cigar, wire and shoe factories. And in Hungarian cafes they have added an interesting social institution to the metropolis.—New York Post.

Stature in Army and Navy. It is not improbable that the army regulations will be modified in the matter of the stature of enlisted men. Under the present regulations a man must be of pretty good height to be accepted for either the army or the navy. But the Japanese soldiers and sailors are not large men. "No," replied Mr. Rogers. "Well, that is the Thomas W. Lawson pink," he was told. What Mr. Rogers said will never be printed in the newspapers.

CURING BRAIN BY PROXY.

How Balance of Seat of Reason Can Be Restored.

With the surroundings of the brain proper there have been remarkable surgical achievements; some of them in operations performed half a body's length from the disturbed organ. Between the brain proper and its lining is a shallow sea of fluid which extends all the way down the hollow inside of the spine, around the spinal cord. If this fluid becomes deranged or compressed the brain is affected. Now, in one part of the head this liquid substance constitutes a little spirit level, like a carpenter's level, which serves to keep the human machine properly balanced. Sometimes the fluid in this level increases beyond the normal capacity. Then the patient is annoyed by constant ringing in the ears and presently becomes subject to severe and dangerous vertigo. This is because the unconscious sense of balance is disturbed. A few years ago the medical faculty were at a loss for a cure. Now they know that the brain fluids may be controlled from the spine. So they tap the victim of the deranged spirit level near the base of the spine, draw off the surplus fluid and send him on his way, relieved, balanced and rejoicing. This lumbar tapping is of inestimable value in the diagnosing of meningitis, abscesses and other cerebral diseases; the examination of the fluid drawn from the spine, in fact, affording diagnosis for all brain diseases other than the purely nervous affections.—McClure's Magazine.

He Wasn't Worried. The Great Ice Age came sweeping over the prehistoric world, waiting its icy warning from the line of glaciers, that were crunching their way over the paleozoic rocks and driving herds of hairy mammoths, glyptodonts and other affrighted creatures before them.

Just then the prehistoric Paul Revere came bounding along, mounted on the back of his faithful dinosaur and shouting guttural warnings to the Cave men.

"Fly!" he cried. "The glaciers are coming! Run for your lives or you will surely perish!"

"Tut, tut!" said Abou, the Cave man, emerging from his cavern and calmly munching the thigh bone of a mammoth.

"Man, are you mad?" cried the hero, rather nettled. "Don't you know that now approaches the Age of Ice?"

"Well, so long as it's not the age of Plumbing, the Age of Coal, or the Age of Graft, I care not!"

Whereat the prehistoric philosopher retired calmly to his cave and dressed himself in his glad raiment, so that his fossil remains would make a good appearance upon their debut in an American museum a million years later.—New York Sun.

No Weather There.

"I lived among the people of Japan for four years," said the Cincinnati man, "and I pledge you my word that not once in all that time did I hear one single person make any reference to the weather. You can judge what a relief it was. Here and elsewhere the weather is a constant topic.

"Was nothing said when it was hot or cold or stormy?" was asked.

"Not a word—not the slightest hint. No matter whether it was pouring rain or the sun was shining, nobody spoke of it. The nearest I ever heard any Japanese trench on the weather was when my valet one day asked me for half a day off. When I hesitated over it he said:

"Your excellency, I have a corn on my toe and I want to get the thing fixed before next winter sets in and freezes the thing off!"

Conclusive.

"Yes, ma'am," said the man with the old valise; "I acknowledge that I used to go trampin' around this neighborhood, beggin' for cold victuals, but I don't do that any more. I've reformed."

"What evidence have I of that?" asked the woman of the house, still eyeing him with suspicion.

"Well, ma'am," he said, opening the valise, "the fact that I'm sellin' soap now ought to be enough to convince anybody. Oughtn't it?"

What R. I. P. Means.

Charlie was being taken for a walk through a cemetery. Suddenly he asked: "What does 'R. I. P.' stand for? Some of the gravestones have a lot of reading on them, and then at the bottom of the words there are the big letters 'R. I. P.'"

"What do you think they mean?" asked his father.

Charlie paused for a moment. "I think, father, they mean, 'Return if Possible.'—Harper's Weekly.

Modernized.

"Here is one of the inns where George Washington used to stop."

"You don't say! What has become of the ancient sign, 'Accommodation to Man and Beast?'"

"They've taken it down and put up a sign, 'Accommodation to Man and Automobile.'"

"And where is the hostler who used to come out with a can of oats?"

"Oh, he comes out now with a can of gasoline."

Nemesis.

I came to the window where years ago she kept the watch-light burning to safely guide by its patient glow her prodigal returning.

I came to the window—twas dark and lone!

The years had with honors crowned me; I would have given them all to atone; Could she have come back and found me.

COMING HOME AT LAST.

—New York World.

MOURN LOSS OF JEFFERSON.

Veteran of the Stage Beloved by All Theater-Goers.

Joseph Jefferson was undoubtedly the best loved of American actors. The older generation of theater-goers remember him as the leading exponent. It was not the originator of a new school of acting in which simplicity took the place of traditional stage art and mannerisms. The younger generation remembers him as Rip Van Winkle, a character which he made ever more attractive as he grew older.

In the late '50s Jefferson was associated with the most popular players of the time. Those who were with him on the stage and those who heard him felt the influence of his new method. It appealed to the most artistic, the most critical, as well as the humblest of playgoers.

This quality of Jefferson's playing attached actors and people to him when he first played "Asa Trenchard," in 1858, as it did when he first played "Rip Van Winkle," seven or eight years later. On this point the recollections of Edwin Booth, Couderk, Sothen, Boucicault and Raymond as to first impressions are not notably different from those of the unsophisticated enthusiast from the country or the playworm first nighter of the city.

The art of Jefferson touched all, and certain modulations of voice and simple gestures and poses gave keenest pleasure every time they were remembered.

Only those whose memories cover forty years can understand what Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" meant to the generation that first heard it. It was like a revelation to the infrequent theater-goer, and did more to break down prejudice against the stage than any other play ever presented.

Clergymen and thousands of men and women who had never entered a theater counted it an event in their lives to see Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." Men did not know why they laughed and cried like children, and they did not care. There was a magic in the drama that had been there before, and Jefferson was the magician.

At first it was Jefferson the actor that the people loved. Then they came to love Jefferson the man. "Rip Van Winkle" was a means of revealing to old and young a personality as wholesome in its influence as any ever associated with the stage.

In summing up Jefferson's career it is enough for people to say "Rip Van Winkle." Called upon to give him rank among the great actors of the world, ninety-nine out of a hundred people would count it superfluous to say more than "Rip Van Winkle." And yet "Rip Van Winkle" would mean so much to the world, could not hold first place in so many hearts, had not been for the consummate art, the genial spirit, and the simple human nature of the very human old man who died at Palm Beach on Sunday.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Small Estates in England.

It is considered strange that in England only one will disposing of as much as $5,000,000 had been filed during the financial year ending March 31. The average number of such wills has been between five and six. Thus, in 1900 there were nine estates with a total of nearly $100,000,000; in 1901, eight estates, total value more than $50,000,000; in 1902, five estates, with the same total; in 1903, five estates valued at $40,000,000, and in 1904, three estates valued at $25,000,000. Of twenty-four of the richest testators only one was under 60 years of age when he died; fourteen were over 70 years old and six more than 80 years. The average age was 74 1/2 years. John Dawson, who left $3,500,000, was 99 years old. The earl of Strathmore, aged 79 years, left $4,751,000.

Helpful Millionaire.

Coleman Dupont, the millionaire powder manufacturer of Wilmington, Del., rode down to his office on the rear platform of a street car the other morning. The conductor, a new man, was slow in collecting fares, and Mr. Dupont pulled the bell rope half a dozen times to let passengers on. At one corner an old woman with a market basket stood waiting. The millionaire lifted her basket on board, helped the old woman up the steps and paid her fare, smiling at her profuse thanks.

AFRAID OF A LITTLE DIRT.

Why Young Men Exhibit No Fondness for Horseshoe Trade.

Master horseshoers throughout the country complain that they are having difficulty in securing a sufficient number of young men to learn that trade. It takes a man of judgment to properly shoe a horse and to comply with all the regulations governing that calling. Humane methods of horseshoeing have made necessary an amount of study and experience that most young men will not undertake and acquire unless it promises a better position in life than that of a master horseshoer. The trouble is that when boys acquire the education and knowledge called for by the state regulations they feel that they are entitled to "a better position" than that of a blacksmith. False pride is at the bottom of most of this feeling of distaste for the ancient and honorable trade of the blacksmith. Skilled horseshoers earn wages far exceeding those at the command of workers in many trades and so-called professions that are not so "dirty." It is the grime and sweat that the blacksmith must dabble in and exude that stand out in the eyes of too many young men who are thinking of making a start in life.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Press.

GOES TO POST IN SWEDEN.

Col. Charles H. Graves, the newly appointed American minister to Norway and Sweden, said farewell to his friends at Duluth and departed for Athens, Pa., where he was married to Miss Alice Kinney Tripp, April 25. The minister and his bride will depart at once for his diplomatic station.

No Luncheon for Secretary Taft.

Secretary Taft in his triple role of acting president and head of the state and war departments is enjoying full opportunity to show his great capacity for work. For weeks he has never left his office from about 9:30 in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon unless to attend a meeting or to pay an official visit. Secretary Taft has told some of his intimates that he does not believe in the luncheon meal anyway. "When I get down to work I want to keep at it until I get rid of it," he said. "Luncheon is a superfluous meal and it breaks up the day."

Indian Woman in D. A. R.

Mrs. Carrie F. Adams of Fort Gibson, I. T., is the only daughter of the American Revolution who is descended from Indian blood. One of her ancestors was John Ross, who was chief of the Cherokee nation for forty years. Her husband, Richard C. Adams, is a Delaware Indian, who for several years past has been representing his people in their material claims before the department of the interior and the Dawes commission. He is a direct descendant of Capt. White Eyes, who was an officer in the revolutionary war.

Statesmen Own Fine Farm.

Congressman Hull of Iowa and Congressman Wadsworth of New York jointly own a fine farm in Virginia, a short distance down the river from Mount Vernon. Former Interstate Commerce Commissioner Yeomans, also of Iowa, was interested in the agricultural venture, but recently he has withdrawn, leaving his two partners to carry on the business. They have a very comfortable residence fitted up there, with electric lights and other fixings unknown to the ordinary farmer.

WHAT SMART WOMEN ARE WEARING

Veil Pins.

In selecting pins for her veil, the tidy girl is careful to affect no violent contrasts. For her white veil she has pearl-headed pins, and for her black veils pins of polished jet. If she has a variety of veillings in colors she does not fail to have on hand a pin ball or cube holding pins headed with various colors. In fact, these colored pins are essential to the make-up of the tidy girl, as modern fashions require a liberal use of pins despite the efforts of the most clever dress-makers to provide the requisite number of loops and buttons.

New Shirt Waist Design.

Blouse of wool, made with a box plait in front and gathered to a round yoke, which is trimmed with bands of the material cut with tabs, the latter ornamented with buttons.

The collar or chemisette is of lace. The sleeves, full at the top, close fitting below, are trimmed with the bands and buttons.

Spring Wraps.

The modish woman never fails to be possessed of a separate wrap for spring wear. Her choice may be a blouse bolero, an Eton with or without postilion back, a long redingote, or a Louis XV. coat, each of which has many modifications. If silk is preferred, she may choose black satin, tulle, bengaline, moire, taffeta, or one of the smart weaves of tussur-silk. A loose, comfortable coat is the one garment every woman should possess. It should be large enough to go over a short jacket and skirt, and yet look well when worn with a blouse suit. It can be worn on rainy days, in very cold weather, for traveling, driving and automobiling. These coats can be bought ready-made in the shops, but can be made at home, providing one has a good pattern, as they require but little fitting except at the shoulders. They are shaped at the back by means of wide seams, or are held in by double straps of leather or cloth.—The Pilegrim.

The all-white linen suit is decidedly the most fashionable, yet touches of color are wonderfully attractive. All the blue tones—gobelin, Sèvres, Saxons, delft and the other porcelain shades, together with the light and sky blues—French rose and a long line of yellow, amounting to other leaf greens are the favorite additions.

A pretty frock, for instance, of sheer white linen had its trim, shirt waist decorated with bands of open-work embroidery simulating a bolero. At the neck appeared a little white guimpe closed by a knot of peach-pink silk, the long ends of which were drawn through eyelet holes down the front of the blouse more than half the distance to the waist line. Waist belt and hat trimmings were of the same delightful pink shade.

Novelty Laces.

The lace blouses for evening are very pretty. The simplest are made of Valenciennes lace, which comes at its prettiest about an inch wide. This lace is overlapped so that there is an edge which looks like a little ruffle. And row after row of lace can be put together, making dozens and dozens of these little ruffles. The work must be all done by hand, and there must be the daintiest stitching put upon it.

Finally, the bodice is cut out and, when completed, it is a mass of little lace ruffles. It needs very little trimming. Yet around the yoke and around the stock, or bordering the bertha, there is a twist of satin to give it a finish and a touch of color.

Satin is wrought in very pretty ways right into the waists of washable dresses. Of course, they are never meant to see the tub and for that reason the satin is used as a piping and as a tiny little bow finish here and there. Little bows of satin are concealed in the trimmings and the ends are pulled out to look like butterfly wings.

Try Soft Castile Soap.

One of the most convenient things to have on every washstand is a jar of soft castile soap. This is made by scraping a cake of pure soap and adding about a pint and a half of water. Put them together into a saucepan and stand over a brisk heat, but not one that will boil the liquid. When the soap is dissolved pour into a wide-mouthed jar. When the mixture cools it will be jelly. This is excellent to have to rub on the hands when washing, diluted with more water, to which a couple of pinches of soda is added. It is a harmless and cleansing shampoo to be rubbed into the head, which is then rinsed thoroughly.

In Chestnut-Colored Cloth.

The costume at the left is of chestnut-colored cloth. The new skirt is plaited at the top to a hip yoke which is cut in one piece with the front breadth. The yoke itself is cut in round tabs ornamented with buttons of leather, surrounded with metal. The bottom of the skirt is trimmed with a wide band of the material, which is finished at the top with a stitched fold. The blouse is covered with a sort of plastron cut in scallops, ornamented with buttons like the hip yoke. The leg-of-mutton sleeves are cut in the same way at the bottom and finished with cuffs of brown velvet. The turnover collar is also of this velvet and the chemisette is of lace.

Old English Pudding.

Half a loaf of bread crumbs, to which add a little salt. Pare, core and cut into thin slices two greening apples, four ounces of chopped suet, half a cupful of boiling water, sufficient to moisten the mixture. Rub a little salt on the inside of the mold to make it smooth. Pack the mixture firmly, as tightly as possible into the mold, fasten the lid down securely, and place in a boiler with only sufficient water in the bottom to make a steam. Let it boil this way for one hour.

Dainty Summer Collars.

The collar is really very simple, but looks dainty on a summer dress, and is very cool and comfortable. Get a large sized ladies' handkerchief, cut it like illustration, and bind around the neck. Edge with a row of heading with valenciennes slightly pulled on that (or use the valenciennes that can be bought with the heading on it) and run a piece of black baby ribbon through beading, tying in little bow at point in back. When worn the points lap slightly. This can be made of a square of linen of the right size, and trimmed as much as one likes, with ruffles or insertions. It is pretty with a band of drawn work just inside the hem.

Hat Trimmings.

Possibly, the most noticeable thing among the new importations is the unanimity with which milliners have posed the bulk of the trimming upon the backs of the hats. At a recent showing of spring hats was a turban in fine green chip, with folds of green velvet slightly darker around the crown and small roses in browns from chestnut to orange and yellow trimming the back and right side.

Fancies in Sleeves.

The majority of the shirtwaists of the season are made with very fancy sleeves, giving an opportunity for a new sleeve chapter. One of the prettiest of sleeves is a needlework coat sleeve, with a white lawn shirring around the top. The white lawn is gathered in the middle and sewed to the back of the sleeve to simulate angel wings. They are small and dainty and pretty.

The Looking Glass.

When looking glasses have to be cleaned first wash the glass all over with lukewarm soapsuds and a sponge, and when dry rub it bright with chamois leather and a little prepared chalk which has been finely powdered. A splendid gloss will be given to glasses by rubbing them quickly with newspapers.

Fried Fish Cakes.

Take any cold fresh fish, freed from all bones, and about three mashed potatoes. Beat one egg with a pinch of salt and pepper. Mix all together and make into balls about the size of a small apple. Dip in egg and bread crumbs. Fry in boiling fat.

MODERN METHODS OF SPELLING

Exchange Telle of Hardships They Caused One Unfortunate.

"Imagine the case of a person who at different periods of his life was obliged to learn to spell all over again," said the professor. "I knew of such a man, not originally a poor speller, who was compelled three times to take up the study of orthography. It happened in this way:

"This friend of mine was reared in the country, attended the school, and acquired therein the necessary proficiency under the rules of the old-time teacher. As a matter of fact he learned to spell while standing. It was a curious fact that for many years that man could not spell some of the simplest words unless he stood up. On his feet, he was the best speller in the class, and acquired many a prize in the spelling 'bees.' There was not a pupil in those days who could 'turn him down,' when it came to an exercise in upright orthography.

"Then, years afterward, he had to learn to spell with a pencil. All his spelling talent went into his pencil. His tongue had lost its cunning, and whether standing or sitting he would miss the easiest words, unless he used his pencil.

"Finally, with the advent of the typewriter, he was obliged again to learn how to spell, this time with the machine. Queer thing, isn't it? Unless the word is a simple one, my friend's tongue refuses its aid, his pencil declines to afford its old-time help, and he is compelled to refer to the writing machine. And yet he's a good speller.—The Sunday Magazine

The Bishop's Mistake.

Bishop Johns was holding service at a little log church in the mountains of the South. Two young mountaineers, proud parents of a lusty youngster, presented themselves before the bishop to have the child christened. The bishop asked: "What name?"

"The father of the child replied: 'Beelzebub.'"

"No?" exclaimed the bishop, amazed that the Prince of Darkness should be so honored. "No, we'll call the child John. John is a good name."

Whereupon he continued rapidly with the "I baptize thee, John—" He signed with the sign of the cross and dismissed the parents.

They had become more and more confused under the unwonted solemnity of the unfamiliar ritual. The father stood on one foot, shifting his weight to the other; the mother was equally disturbed.

When the two reached the door of the church the father turned, and at last finding his voice, called back toward the rude chancel: "Mister Bishop, dis heah's a gal baby!"—The Sunday Magazine.

Lazy.

When a feller's good and hungry, Then he can't work no mo'; He's got to do some eatin' To make the old wheels go.

An' when he's ben to dinner I'd like to go a struttin' To that there golden sho'. An' loosen all my buttons Of yallah yams an' possum An' sleep an' eat an' sleep.

I'd love to go a-fishin' In th' everlastin' stream, An' hook the line ter my big toe An' perch up there an' dream; I'd like ter ketch a catfish An' fry him in de pan. I'm a sleepin', eatin', sleepin', A sleepin', eatin', man!

But Etiquette Hardly Applied.

A. H. Hummel, the well known lawyer of New York, was talking, between the acts of a drama, about the leading woman.

"Though her salary is large," said Mr. Hummel, "she is always hard up, always in debt, they say."

"The other day I heard a story about her. A female bill collector called on her to try to get her to settle a bill for a sable coat."

"I am sorry," she said to the collector, "but I can't settle this bill at present."

"Very well, madame. When shall I call again?" the collector asked.

"Well," said the actress, "it would hardly be etiquette for you to call again until I have returned the present call."

Knew His Own Yacht.

Truman H. Newberry, the rich young Detroit who is going to succeed Assistant Secretary Darling, was a member of the Michigan naval militia at the time of the war with Spain. His fine yacht was tendered to the government and was used, and Mr. Newberry himself served as a common sailor on the Yosemite. When President Roosevelt was last in Detroit he made a speech in which he said:

"I cannot say that the story is true, but they do say that during the Spanish war a common sailor while scrubbing the decks was asked what yacht that was in the distance."

"It's the Dawn," replied the sailor. "How do you know?" was the query.

"I know," said the common sailor, "because I own her."

Eager to Honor Choate.

For the farewell banquet to Mr. Choate, to be given at the mansion house, London, on Friday, May 5, one of the most distinguished gatherings will be present that ever assembled to do honor to a foreign diplomat. Among those who have accepted invitations are Mr. Balfour, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Rosebery, John Morley, Sir Henry Fowler, Mr. Bryce and the archbishops of Canterbury and York.

Selling Milk.

I live near a small city and so we find it more profitable to dispose of our milk direct to the consumer than to sell it to the regular milk dealers. When the price is six cents per quart, as it is at this time, we get about $3 per 100 pounds for milk. This is a very good price, considering the little distance it has to be taken for delivery. I think that any man that produces good milk on his own farm can sell all he can produce; for people prefer to buy milk from the man that produces it rather than from the man that in turn has bought it from the man that produced it.

There is one great obstacle to this trade, and that is the running short of milk in the dry time of summer. I, like many other farmers, have not reached the point where I have a silo and an abundance of summer forage of a succulent nature. I depend on the pastures only. The hay mows and bays are empty at this time, and the grass in the meadows must be saved for hay for winter use. The shortness of milk at the time mentioned causes me to lose customers now and then, as, during that time, some of the people that have been buying of me have to turn to the regular dealers, who ship in milk. Once with them, they do not like to come back to me, as they fear I will again run out of milk.

The only way out of the dilemma that I can see is to raise a large amount of corn fodder for use in the summer time, and this I propose doing for this coming season.

Soil For Fruit Raising.

Soil to be good for fruit raising must have several characteristics. It must be easy for the roots to penetrate, and for this purpose we turn up the virgin soil with the plow and pulverize it with the harrow. The finer it is, the more easily do the roots penetrate it. For this reason also clay soil will not produce crops unless it contains enough sand mixed with it to make it friable.

Soil must be retentive of moisture and fertility, though not too retentive. A soil that will not retain moisture will not retain some of the fertilizers that readily leach out. This is the trouble with many of our sandy soils. They can be corrected only by adding large quantities of clay, which is expensive, or by plowing in large quantities of manure or green crops to make humus, which helps to hold both the moisture and the fertility.

The soil also must be able to absorb solar heat, which it will not do if it holds too much water or is of a too clayey nature. A great many people fall in their attempts to raise fruit on virgin soil for the reason that it has never been drained artificially and holds so much water that it will not take in heat. It is extremely difficult to heat water with heat applied from above, and this is more so when the water is in the ground and the wave heats are checked by the surface soil.

Wallows.

Hog wallows may not always be a source of disease with the hog, but the permanent wallow should not be permitted to exist. From the very nature of the case the permanent wallow becomes a breeding place of diseases. The increase of filth in it draws flies from far and near, and many of them may have been feeding on diseased animals or filth. The hogs should be encouraged to find new wallows if they must have them. The wallow is not a necessity, but it apparently a comfort to the hog.

Quality and Consumption.

The increase in the quality of butter causes an increase in its consumption. With the increase in consumption of butter comes an increase in the price that can be realized for it. It is probable that we have never had better butter than we have at the present time, though there is still great room for improvement. The paying policy is to go forward continually improving the quality, and, as a result, improving the price.

System on the Dairy Farm.

Following a system is necessary on the dairy farm. One of our best creamery men says that he tries to follow exactly the same procedure every day, as by so doing time can be saved. There is no loss in debating if this or that shall be done first. Besides, the cows get used to a certain way of doing things and seem to give more milk when there is no change in the methods of caring for and feeding them.

Soiling System.

There are any number of tarus in America where the soiling system is the best to follow, and those farms are on high-priced lands. There are more farms where it still pays better to pasture than to cut, feed and carry to the cows in summer time, because the land is still low in price in most sections of the country. As the land increases in value the practice of soiling must increase.

It is impossible to exhaust the fertility of the world, but we may by careless methods change it around so that it will take till our grandchildren's day to get some of it back into a position where it may be used.

FATHER OF PRESSED STEEL.

Philadelphia Cooper Led by Accident to Inaugurate Great Industry.

The pressed steel industry, which is one of the largest in the country today, was born in a little cooper shop not far from St. John and Buttonwood streets, in Philadelphia.

Charles J. Schoen, who is literally the father of this business, was engaged in Philadelphia following the occupation of a cooper and presided over a little plant at which he constituted the entire force of workmen.

While doing this he conceived the idea of making a doorstep for railroad cars, which at once forced itself into popularity with carbuilders and was generally adopted. It was an instant success; for the reason that it was extremely simple and at the same time effective, holding the door open by a spring in the floor of the car.

The demand for these devices soon overtaxed the capacity of the little cooper shop and in casting about for some quicker means of making the things the idea of pressing them out of steel was hit upon. From this humble beginning pressed steel was soon found available for other purposes in carbuilding, and to-day the entire freight car, including the wheels, is made in this manner, no wood entering into the construction whatever.

A Great Discovery.

Clayton, Tex., May 1st.—(Special)—That a genuine cure for Diabetes has been discovered is the opinion of Mr. J. H. Bailey of this place. Speaking of the matter, Mr. Bailey says: "I believe, Dodd's Kidney Pills is the best remedy for Diabetes and the only one that has ever been discovered that will cure Diabetes."

"I have a genuine case of Diabetes. I have taken seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am still taking them. They have helped me so much that I am now up and able to work some. I believe that if I had conformed strictly to a Diabetes diet I would now have been completely cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured hundreds of cases of Diabetes and never once failed. It is an old saying that what will cure Diabetes will cure any form of Kidney Disease and that's just exactly what Dodd's Kidney Pills do. They cure all kidney diseases from Backache to Bright's Disease.

Aged Vegetarian.

There is a man of eighty-six in New York who has not tasted meat for thirty-eight years. He expects to live twenty-five or thirty years longer. He has brought up a large family on vegetables alone. His eldest son, who was in childhood very delicate, became a vegetarian with his father thirty-eight years ago, and is a fine, vigorous, hearty man, educating his children in the same regimen.

ECZEMA FOR TWO YEARS.

Little Girl's Awful Suffering With Terrible Skin Humor—Sleepless Nights for Mother—Speedy Cure by Cuticura.

"My little girl had been suffering for two years from eczema, and during that time I could not get a night's sleep, as her ailment was very severe. I had tried so many remedies, deriving no benefit, I had given up all hope. But as a last resort I was persuaded to try Cuticura, and one box of the Ointment and two bottles of the Resolvent, together with the Soap, effected a permanent cure.—Mrs. I. B. Jones, Addington, Ind. T."

AN ATTRACTIVE STREET DRESS.

This is a very smart walking suit that has just been sent over from Vienna by one of the well known modistes there. The coat is of the popular three-quarter length, the back cut without a seam at the center.

The sleeves are a pretty feature of the garment—they are cut with but one seam and finished to the elbow with a lap and buttoned down. The skirt is cut with a waist top, on which is set a box-plaited flounce. A trimming band of the goods finishes the line of joining. A narrow vest, which is hooked down the center, is set into the front of the coat.

This style would be adapted to almost any goods, light-weight woolen material like voile or mohair, or some other pretty linens that are so useful for the spring and summer season. The skirt is cut in walking length, and makes a very attractive and practical costume.

BOY'S RUSSIAN SUIT.

One of the most popular styles for little men is the Russian blouse, with full, short trousers, and some of the late importations show very smart little garments of this description for small boys. They are especially popular with French tailors, who are sending over more models of this fashion than of any other style. Our model for to-day is from Paris—a stylish little suit of heavy white linen, the loose blouse finished with a long sailor collar, pointed in front and cut square across the back. With this is worn a bright red taffeta silk scarf and red patent leather belt. In the corners of the collar, on the sleeves and on the shield in front are worked stars and chevrons in red, to match the tie. The trousers are full and comfortable, elastic bands holding them firmly at the knees. The belt is held in place by little straps of the goods, through which it is slipped, and completes the finish of a very effective suit for the happy little man who is to wear it.

Mothers find this style of a garment very easy to make, and also very easy to launder after it is made and are partial to it on that account.

They are very smart made up in white linen, pique, serge or broadcloth.

for dress wear, while serviceable suits for playtime can be made of darker materials—gingham, linen or any of the many kinds of mercerized cotton.

Michigan Crop Report.

The weather during the past month was cold and dry. These conditions were not particularly favorable for wheat and grass but did enable farmers to make rapid progress with their spring work. In some localities there were heavy showers which interfered with the sowing of oats. There were some heavy frosts but it is not thought that any serious damage was done to fruit.

FARM WAGES.

The average monthly wages, with board, is, in the southern counties $22.32, in the central counties $20.56, in the northern counties $21.29 and in the state $21.85. The average wages by the day, without board, is, in the southern counties $1.36, in the central counties $1.27, in the northern counties $1.33 and in the State $1.34. The average wages by the month last year, with board, was, in the State $22.20, and the average wages by the day, without board, was $1.34.

FRUIT.

The prospects for fruit are good and unless very late frosts occur the yield will be up to the average. Some varieties of apples will bear a light crop this year on account of the heavy crop of a year ago. Some pear trees are dying of blight but this is likely to occur each year until some specific remedy for the disease is discovered. Peach trees are dying in some localities from the effects of the cold winter of 1904. Strawberries are reported to be in fine condition but the acreage is considerably below the average. Many reports are received of the presence of San Jose Scale. It is evident that the orchardist who wishes to preserve his trees will need to spray thoroughly and systematically hereafter. From one standpoint this pest may be a blessing in disguise since it will completely kill many orchards that have been neglected for years and have been breeding places for fungus diseases and insect enemies, leaving the fruit growing industry in the hands of competent men who care for their trees.

The following table will show the prospects for a crop of the various kinds of fruit at the present time:

Apples 89, Pears 83, Peaches 79, Plums 78, Cherries 95, Small Fruit 91, GEORGE A. PRESCOTT, Secretary of State.

E. J. Literary Club

The East Jordan Literary Club observed Science and Education day Thursday at the home of Mrs. F. A. Foster. The program consisted of: Vocal Solo, "The Mission of the Rose" by Mrs. S. A. Push. An excellent paper on "Photography" was read by Mrs. Wm. Palmiter. Mrs. C. G. Bush furnished instrumental music. Current Events were given by the Club. Mrs. W. P. Porter will entertain the Club May 25th. Quotations Women Writers.

Mrs. Court Rhinemiller of Albion was so annoyed by her neighbor's hens scratching in her garden that she baited a lot of fishhooks with nice worms and tied the lines to the garden fence. As was their custom the neighbor's hens pounced down upon the garden as soon as she had turned her back, and they began to gobble up the nice fat worms. Riley Bronson, noticing a hen that seemed to be tied with a string, investigated and then fell into a towering rage, and calling the woman to the door he used language more forceful than elegant. Neighbors heard the conversation, and when Bronson was arrested for using indecent, obscene and vulgar language in the presence of women and children there were plenty of witnesses against him, and Bronson pleaded guilty, and Justice A. L. McUTCHEON imposed a fine and costs. He reluctantly paid and hurried home to see if any more of his fool hens had been caught with hook and line.

Lawrence Tooley, living near Iron-ton, drank an ounce of oil of winter-green Monday evening, to cure a cold and died shortly afterward in great pain from poisoning. Tooley was aged about 18 years and was living with his father, Samuel, on the farm. His mother died some time ago. He drove to Iron-ton to purchase some groceries and while there purchased an ounce of oil of winter-green. On the way home he began tasting the medicine and when he arrived home had taken the entire ounce. After eating supper, he was taken violently ill and his father gave him hot drinks to alleviate his sufferings. The boy gradually became worse and a physician was summoned, but not until it was too late. Dr. Sweet decided, after questioning the neighbors and a boy who saw young Tooley suffering, that a coroner's inquest was unnecessary and authorized Undertaker Whitting-ton to go ahead with the burial preparations, same taking place this Friday afternoon and interment in Hipp cemetery.

The Presbyterian Missionary Society met with Mrs. S. A. Bush last Friday afternoon, subject, "Siam and Laos." The program committee consisted of Mesdames Clark and W. C. Haire. Same opened with a song, "He Leadeth Me." A very interesting talk was then given by Mrs. J. A. McKeep on "Siam, its Schools and People." Among other things she told of the pioneer missionary going to and from the different stations along the coast in a boat called the Kalamazoo, given to that mission by the Kalamazoo, Mich., people. They also have house-boats and on land are carried around on elephants. The Presbyterians are the only mission in Siam. A duet by Mesdames Clark Haire and S. A. Bush was then given. Paper on "Loas" was read by Miss Agnes Lewis. She said in part—

Loas, which is north of Siam and closely connected with it, being subject to the same government, is an organization distinct and separate. The Loas speaking tribes number five million; as a people they are gentle, polite, passive, with a somewhat stronger character than the other native races and are very receptive of religious training. The women of that country are not acknowledged to have a soul, are not taught to read or write; their only hope of salvation is to be born again in the form of a man. The work among these people is one of great promise and opportunity; if allowed to pass it will mean hearts more hard and difficult to approach. Opportunity brings responsibility; the Master says: "Go ye; pray ye; give ye." Recitation, Miss Marguerite Hoyt; Solo, Mrs. D. L. Rogers. Following this was a very fine address by Miss Anna E. Haire on "Home Missions" or foreigners in the United States. She told of the rigid examination they were given when landing at Ellis Island, N. Y., and were there made to feel they were citizens of this country; but that it should not drop there; the children should be obliged to go to school—at least till they go through the grammar room. Then there should be industrial schools where the boys could learn trades and the girls to be house-keepers—which is an art in itself. And in the meantime the church should have their missionaries to teach them the Gospel and thus they would become useful citizens. Singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Dainty refreshments were served and then they adjourned to meet with Mrs. Crowell June ninth.

Some of the papers of this region have been running a little squib to the effect that there are 53 Sundays in this year and that this occurrence will not happen again in 110 years. As a matter of fact, this same number of Sundays occurred in 1888, in 1893, and in 1899. And if the past is any criterion, the same thing will happen again at intervals of five and six years, bringing 1911 as the next date. This will occur regularly until the year 2098, when, instead of 2103 being a year with 53 Sundays, it will pass over to 2104, as this year 2100 is not a leap year.

This office has received an attractive announcement of the fifth annual summer session of the Central State Normal School, located at Mt. Pleasant, Mich. The Mechanics of Love

Love's a force that moves the world,
Whose source, the throbbing heart,
While but a pump with valves, yet plays
A great dynamic part.

Love's converted into heat
Where rivals are concerned;
Its friction causes jealousy,
And many hearts are burned.

It varies as the mass of heart,
Or the buxom maid's resistance,
And then again, love's hot or cold,
Depending on the distance.

And while some scientific minds
Call it a serious matter,
I feel its force and disagree
To secret, with the latter.

—Frank J. Alsdorf.

John Given's Note

By J. C. PLUMMER

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Given stared at Mr. Craig, the lawyer.

"I'll take every cent I have in the world," she said. "I'll have to sell my house to pay this here note."

"You admit this is your husband's signature," retorted the lawyer, "and he must have owed the money or he wouldn't have given the note. If it had been paid it would not have been the possession of Captain Downing and there's no indorsement of any money having been paid on it. In common justice the note must be paid."

Mrs. Given picked up the note and spelled it over.

"On demand I promise to pay to Robert Downing, five hundred dollars. (Signed) John Given."

"I'm sure," she said, "that if John had owed this here note he'd told me of it."

"There's the note, ma'am," said the lawyer, drily. "I'm afraid you'll find it difficult to prove its payment."

Mr. Craig took his departure with an ominous shake of his head and Mrs. Given looked gloomily out of the window at the grey clouds that hovered over the town.

Captain Downing and Given had been close friends. They had worked their way from before the mast to skippers, and then to being vessel owners in a small way. Captain Downing, who had never married, had accumulated the money for John Given and was free handed and when he died left only the house he lived in to his widow.

Mrs. Given had met conditions heavily. She had formerly been a dressmaker and now took up her calling. Her son was a sailor and her daughter, Julia, had obtained a position in a millinery store. With Mrs. Bond as a boarder, the aggregate income was enough to afford moderate comfort but with house rent to pay and no boarder, prospects were gloomy. It was evident that the house would not bring more than enough to pay the note, if that much.

The brig which Captain Downing commanded had been encountered at sea, and abandoned in a sinking condition. The crew had probably taken to the boats and as nothing had been heard of them for the space of five months they were given up as lost.

Captain Downing left no will, and his very comfortable property went to his sister, Miss Janet. The note of John Given had been found in the chest drawer in which Captain Downing kept his papers. As the two mariners had many joint transactions it seemed entirely plausible that the note had not been paid and that John Given had not been mindful of it when he died.

Captain Downing had kept his business affairs in the crudest manner and there was no record of any transactions between him and Captain Given.

Miss Janet Downing was a lady of fifty, austere and plus. She was a devoted church woman and extremely economical. Her neighbors denominated this trait, stinginess. With a

Mrs. Given, "can't you take it in drabs and drabs, so I won't have to sell my house. You can't need the money. You're plenty."

"But I do need it. Sister Given," replied Miss Janet. "I'm going to give it to the missionary fund. Since I heard Brother Baggs preach so grand about them poor darkened sinners in the South Sea Islands, I have been anxious to help the cause. I heard you say at the church when Brother Baggs had finished his sermon that that is apparently more artistic for much less than that, but this bit of pottery has the distinction of rarity and represents the highest achievement of the potter's art at a period when it was in its historical fullness. Many of the best bits of pottery in the world are in the hands of public institutions, such as the South Kensington museum, in England; the Louvre, in France; and the Metropolitan museum, in America. The Rothschilds have also been holders for a long time. Very few of these pieces, however, are likely to tempt buyers, because of a prohibitive price and because they do not make the same appeal to the general modern taste as some of the superbly painted products of Sevres and of Dresden.—New York Herald.

Recited Creed as Surgeons Operated. While expert surgeons slowly cut a large portion of flesh from a vital part of his body, Charles Welle of Santa Barbara, Cal., watched their work and recited in Latin the Nicene creed of the ancient church.

Mr. Welle, who is 60 years old, faced almost certain death for a year. Finally nothing remained but, an operation, almost always fatal, but never before performed in Santa Barbara.

Knowing his dangerous character, Mr. Welle preferred to die in full possession of his faculties and refused to take ether. Drugs to allay pain were administered and while the surgeons removed the flesh the patient watched every movement. As the effect of the anodyne wore off the pain of the operation was felt in its full force, but never for a moment did Mr. Welle lose self-control. There was a total absence of shock in the case, and to this, the surgeons say, is due the recovery of their patient.

Natural Cross of Pearls. Some curious things have been found in the briny deep, but one of the oddest is an ecclesiastical emblem made of pearls which was washed ashore on the coast of West Australia.

There are nine good-sized gems in this natural curiosity. These have been joined together to form a perfect Latin cross. Seven pearls of equal size comprise the upright, and two more form the transverse piece. The joining has been the work of nature. The odd prize, discovered in a pearl oyster, is said to be worth at least $50,000. It is called the Great Southern Cross pearl.

Growers Get Small Percentage. William Soule of South Livermore, Me., recently undertook the shipment of a lot of apples to England through commission merchants in Liverpool. While packing the apples, Mrs. Lillian Bassett placed a note in one of the barrels asking the buyer to send her a card stating the price which he paid for the fruit. The answer was received the other day, stating that the barrel in question sold for $2.48. Soule got 68 cents per barrel. A little arithmetic, however, brings out the fact that while the grower got the trivial sum of 68 cents, the transportation companies and English apple dealers got $1.80.

The Moon's "Volcanoes." A Scotchman has come out with the theory that there were no volcanoes on the moon for the simple reason that the moon was never hot enough to make one. He says that the things that look like volcanoes from here are dents made by meteors that have hit the moon when it was not glowing.

The angel, standing over the dead man who had lived brutishly and selfishly, was sore perplexed. He could scarce distinguish between soul and body.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"There's where it belonged," retorted Captain Bob.

"You'd like to give him a hundred dollars for the heathen, Sister Given."

"Apparently Mrs. Given's enthusiasm over Brother Baggs' sermon had cooled, for she made no reply.

"It will be a glorification to us both," continued Miss Janet, "to know that this here money is being put to such a use and I'm sure you will feel as glad as I do that we have it to use that way."

"Them there heathen," remarked Mrs. Given slowly, "have no house rent to pay and no coal to buy."

"They have souls to save," put in Miss Janet.

"Then you must have the money?" "We will donate it," suggested Miss Janet.

"To think," said Mrs. Given, as she recounted her interview to her daughter and the boarder, Mrs. Bond, "that that rambler rose bush 'll be out this spring better than 'ever. 'It 'll cover the back porch and the house won't be ours."

"Hi'm a member of the church of England," said Mrs. Bond, viciously, "and a good Christian, but I opes them there 'eathen 'll buy new idols with that money Miss Downing gives 'em."

Accordingly, a bill was put in the window, offering the house for sale, and Mrs. Given, with a heavy heart began to look around for cheap lodgings.

One day, when the first snow of winter was falling, Mrs. Riggs, wife of the ship chandler, came rushing into Mrs. Given's kitchen.

"He's saved!" she gasped. "Captain Downing and his mate are saved; picked up by a ship and carried to some outlandish place. He's in New York and will be home to-night."

"Thank God," ejaculated Mrs. Given, "Captain Bob 'll give me some time to say that there note."

As the suspense was unbearable, Mrs. Given hastened around to Captain Downing's house early the next day.

Miss Janet, Mr. Craig and the Captain were in the room. Mrs. Given, without even congratulating the Captain on his rescue, put in her petition.

"Jack Given didn't owe any note," replied Captain Bob, "he paid it long ago."

"Then," said Mr. Craig, "what was it doing in your table drawer?"

"There's where it belonged," retorted Captain Bob. "I never used any of them notes and when Jack borrowed the money he had some new fangled idea about giving this here note. I took the note and then I tells Jack to keep it so he could tell he owed it, and when Jack pays it he tells me to keep it so I could tell he had paid it. That's all business."

"Hum," coughed Mr. Craig.

"And the poor heathen," whimpered Miss Janet.

JUG WORTH A FORTUNE.

Piece of Pottery It Would Take Almost $20,000 to Buy.

A man who works hard for a moderate salary will wonder what is the secret of the insane extravagance which impels men to pay a fortune for a picture, a carving, a rug, or an apparently unpretentious bit of pottery. Here is shown a jug which is valued at $19,950.

You could probably purchase one that is apparently more artistic for much less than that, but this bit of pottery has the distinction of rarity and represents the highest achievement of the potter's art at a period when it was in its historical fullness.

Many of the best bits of pottery in the world are in the hands of public institutions, such as the South Kensington museum, in England; the Louvre, in France; and the Metropolitan museum, in America. The Rothschilds have also been holders for a long time. Very few of these pieces, however, are likely to tempt buyers, because of a prohibitive price and because they do not make the same appeal to the general modern taste as some of the superbly painted products of Sevres and of Dresden.—New York Herald.

Recited Creed as Surgeons Operated. While expert surgeons slowly cut a large portion of flesh from a vital part of his body, Charles Welle of Santa Barbara, Cal., watched their work and recited in Latin the Nicene creed of the ancient church.

Mr. Welle, who is 60 years old, faced almost certain death for a year. Finally nothing remained but, an operation, almost always fatal, but never before performed in Santa Barbara.

Knowing his dangerous character, Mr. Welle preferred to die in full possession of his faculties and refused to take ether. Drugs to allay pain were administered and while the surgeons removed the flesh the patient watched every movement. As the effect of the anodyne wore off the pain of the operation was felt in its full force, but never for a moment did Mr. Welle lose self-control. There was a total absence of shock in the case, and to this, the surgeons say, is due the recovery of their patient.

Natural Cross of Pearls. Some curious things have been found in the briny deep, but one of the oddest is an ecclesiastical emblem made of pearls which was washed ashore on the coast of West Australia.

There are nine good-sized gems in this natural curiosity. These have been joined together to form a perfect Latin cross. Seven pearls of equal size comprise the upright, and two more form the transverse piece. The joining has been the work of nature. The odd prize, discovered in a pearl oyster, is said to be worth at least $50,000. It is called the Great Southern Cross pearl.

Growers Get Small Percentage. William Soule of South Livermore, Me., recently undertook the shipment of a lot of apples to England through commission merchants in Liverpool. While packing the apples, Mrs. Lillian Bassett placed a note in one of the barrels asking the buyer to send her a card stating the price which he paid for the fruit. The answer was received the other day, stating that the barrel in question sold for $2.48. Soule got 68 cents per barrel. A little arithmetic, however, brings out the fact that while the grower got the trivial sum of 68 cents, the transportation companies and English apple dealers got $1.80.

The Moon's "Volcanoes." A Scotchman has come out with the theory that there were no volcanoes on the moon for the simple reason that the moon was never hot enough to make one. He says that the things that look like volcanoes from here are dents made by meteors that have hit the moon when it was not glowing.

"There's where it belonged," retorted Captain Bob.

"You'd like to give him a hundred dollars for the heathen, Sister Given."

"Apparently Mrs. Given's enthusiasm over Brother Baggs' sermon had cooled, for she made no reply.

"It will be a glorification to us both," continued Miss Janet, "to know that this here money is being put to such a use and I'm sure you will feel as glad as I do that we have it to use that way."

"Them there heathen," remarked Mrs. Given slowly, "have no house rent to pay and no coal to buy."

"They have souls to save," put in Miss Janet.

"Then you must have the money?" "We will donate it," suggested Miss Janet.

"To think," said Mrs. Given, as she recounted her interview to her daughter and the boarder, Mrs. Bond, "that that rambler rose bush 'll be out this spring better than 'ever. 'It 'll cover the back porch and the house won't be ours."

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

The Goat,
On circus posters hurried,
His head is the butt end of him—
He travels butt end first.
'Tis true he feedeth on tin cans,
And other bric-a-brac,
And wears a bored expression,
And eternally says, "Ba-a!"

When he has quit this world of sin—
Eternally stopped buttin'—
We greet him in our Spring-room—
He comes disguised as mutation;
He has the cutest little tail,
A set of horns, also,
They're each at different ends of him—
At the butt end, you know.

I would not care to meet a goat
And pat it on the head;
I hate trained nurses all the while
Tip-toeing round my bed;
My father and my mother too—
It worries them like sin—
A goat's the impolitest beast—
He's always butting in.

Where Fish Come From. "In my garden," said a resident of Brookline, "I dug last fall a hole three feet deep, thirty feet long and thirty feet wide. I filled this hole with water; I made an artificial lake out of it. To-day that artificial lake is full of fish. Where did they come from? I didn't put them there."

"The question you ask me," replied the biologist, "has been asked me many times before. Innumerable men, building artificial lakes, have, like you, been mystified to find these lakes spontaneously producing hosts of fish.

"This is the secret of the matter. Fish-eating birds, the gull and hawk and so on, settle on these new waters, drop into them from their bills fish spawn—the crabs, so to speak, of a recent meal—and these crabs propagate, become fish. Thus in time we have an apparent miracle, an artificial lake spontaneously producing hundreds of finny denizens."—Boston Herald.

Convict's Display of Ingenuity. With nothing but a jackknife to work with, one of the convicts at the prison at Wethersfield, Conn., has recently finished two wooden models of locomotives. These models are each about eighteen inches long, including the tender, and perfect in every detail. Nothing except wood is used in the models, yet they may be operated by turning a crank under the engine. The wheels go around, the pistons slide back and forth, the cab windows may be moved, the bell rung and the engine and tender uncoupled. The convict had nothing to work by except his own memory.

Australian Railroad Deadheads. It is nice to have a gold pass attached to one's watch chain which franks one first class over the railways of a continent, and sends every ticket collector's hand to his cap. Such is the happy lot of Australian miners and ex-miners, but the "deadheads" are now so many that the question of restricting the issue of passes has been engaging the premier's conference at Hobart. The loss of railway revenue runs into many thousands of pounds. In Victoria alone there are eighty ex-miners with free passes. One has had his pass since 1857. He must be the record "deadhead" of the world.

Ancient Bedchambers. In the seventeenth century Englishmen thought it injurious to sleep in rooms facing the sun, so most of the rooms faced north and east, opening off a passage or else out of each other. At the head of the stairs slept the master and his wife, and all the rooms tenanted by the rest of the household were accessible only through that. The daughters of the house and maid servants lay in rooms on one side, say the right, with the maids in those most distant; those of the men lay on the left, the sons of the house nearest the chamber of the master and the serving men farthest away.

The Land of Thunder. Java is said to be the region of the globe where it thunders ofttest, having thunder-storms 97 days in the year. After it are Sumatra, with 86 days, Hindostan with 56, Borneo with 54, the Gold Coast with 52, and Rio de Janeiro with 51. In Europe, Italy occupies the first place with 38 days of thunder, while France and Southern Russia have 16 days. Great Britain and Switzerland have each seven days, and Norway has four. Thunder is rare at Cairo, being heard only three days in the year, and extremely rare in Northern Turkistan and the Polar regions.

Drank Rebel Chief's Blood. His Excellence the Viceroy of the Two Kuang, at Kuelin, a short time ago, at the execution of a famous rebel chief, stepped forward and caught some of the blood and drank it.

Whether he wished to become impregnated with the courage of the robber, or whether it was a feeling of revenge that prompted the act, can only be surmised.—Canton Times.

Flintlock Saw Long Service. John Macey of Northfield, Vt., has a relic of revolutionary days in the form of a flintlock pistol. He has traced its ownership in this country as far back as eighty years. The weapon was made in London, Eng., by W. Kelland & Co., and it is made of brass with a bore large enough to admit an ordinary marble. The pistol was probably the property of some of King George's soldiers.

TALES TOLD BY OLD POTTERY.

Old Stoneware That Rings to Mind

Half-Forgotten Customs. Pottery students and collectors find much to charm them in the old wares they sometimes hit upon. For instance Michael Salt of Buxton, England, says the Philadelphia Record has gathered eleven pieces of pottery illustrating the sports of bear-baiting, bull-fighting and cock fighting.

Some of them are of Nottingham make and probably date from the seventeenth century. They are all drinking vessels. The bears are shown muzzled and in various attitudes.

Shakespeare has references to the sport of bear-baiting. Bear gardens, each kept by a bearsward, were common in his day. Bull-fighting and cock-fighting are also illustrated. The figure of the cock is formed of the ware which is characteristic of the Ashbury Wood period and previous to the cream ware development of Josiah Wedgwood. The yellowish white is shaded by patches of brown. The black eye is characteristic of the period.

Trying Chinese Bride's Temper. On the day of a Chinese marriage uninvited friends and neighbors, or even perfect strangers, are allowed to come in and see the bride and they may make any remark about her, or to her, they please, says the Boudoir. Sometimes things horribly rude and disgusting are said.

To try her temper a man will say: "Fetch your husband a cup of tea!" If she does so, all will say jeeringly: "What an obedient wife you are!"

If she sulks and does not do as she is told they remark: "That is a pretty wizen with which to begin married life. We cannot congratulate you on that tartar," and other words to similar effect.

Then the poor thing is made to stand on an inverted cup to show how small are her feet.

Find Oil Paintings. In the recent overhauling of an ancient moated farmhouse near Birmingham a collection of oil paintings was found under an old rotted floor. The pictures date back as far as the sixteenth century and are considered very valuable.

A VOICE FROM THE PULPIT. Rev. Jacob D. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions."

Indian Head, N. W. T., Jan. 20th, 1904. Immigration Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada:

I am sending you the return of two fields of wheat grown on my home farm last year. These returns are perfectly accurate, and not over-estimated.

I summer-fallow about one-third of my farm every year, and afterward take off two crops and summer-fallow again. The summer-fallow is ploughed twice during the summer, first shallow, afterwards deep and no weed allowed to grow. The stubble is left as long as possible when cutting the first crop, and is burned the following spring, drilled directly afterwards, and harrowed after drilling. This gives much better result than fall-ploughing.

THE END OF THE GRIP

RECOVERED AFTER EIGHT YEARS OF COMPLICATED TROUBLES.

Deafness, Hissing Sounds in Head, Stomach Disorder, Fatiguation of Heart and Debility Overcome at Last.

Mr. Newman certainly had a very tough time with the grip, and it is no wonder that he thinks that the remedy that cured him can't be best. His case shows how profoundly grip poisons the system and how obstinately it resists all ordinary efforts to eradicate it.

Few cases can be worse than Mr. Newman's for he had head, heart and stomach troubles combined with great weakness. He recently said:

"The attack of grip which I had eight years ago left me in a very bad fix. I became nearly deaf and my head ached continually and was filled with hissing and roaring sounds. My heart fluttered and had regular running-away spells. My stomach was so sore that I could hardly bear a touch on that part of my body. I had a great deal of pain in the region of my liver and the doctor said that organ was enlarged. My kidneys ached so at times that I could hardly stand."

"Didn't you give up and go to bed?" he was asked.

"No, I simply wouldn't. My head and my back ached dreadfully, but I obstinately dragged myself about, kept growing worse and, finally ran down to almost nothing."

"What did you do to get relief?"

"First I tried a doctor, but he did me no good. Then I took all kinds of advertised preparations but nothing proved helpful until I began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. As soon as I got them I knew that I had at last hit the right remedy for my case. The very first box did more for me than anything else I had ever taken. They gave me relief right away and in three months they positively cured me. I think I was scarcely ever in better health in my life than I am at present."

Mr. William A. Newman is a well-known Camden county farmer, living at Sagrada, Missouri. His case was a severe test for any remedy, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills met every requirement. Other remedies merely drive the poison of the grip into hiding, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills drive it out of the system. They are sold by every druggist.

Take Care of Your Books. Take every book from your cases, and dust them first, "librarian's way," which is by striking one with another lightly, so that the dust flies out; then dust them with a cloth. Take the same precaution with the book-cases as you do with bureaus—wipe them out with turpentine water.

A TRAINED NURSE

After Years of Experience, Advises Women in Regard to Their Health.

Mrs. Martha Pohlman of 55 Chester Avenue, Newark, N. J., who is a graduate nurse from the Blockley Training School, at Philadelphia, and for six years Chief Clinic Nurse at the Philadelphia Hospital, writes the letter printed below. She has the advantage of personal experience, besides her professional education, and what she has to say may be absolutely relied upon.

"Many other women are afflicted as she was. They can regain health in the same way. It is prudent to heed such advice from such a source.

Mrs. Pohlman writes: "I am firmly persuaded, after eight years of experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that it is the safest and best medicine for any suffering woman to use."

"Immediately after my marriage I found that my health began to fail me. I became weak and pale, with severe bearing-down pains, fearful backaches and frequent dizzy spells. The doctors prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I would blast after eating and frequently become nauseated. I had an acrid discharge and pains down through my limbs so I could hardly walk. It was as bad a case of female trouble as I have ever known. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, however, cured me within four months. Since that time I have had occasion to recommend it to a number of patients suffering from all forms of female difficulties, and I find that while it is considered unprofessional to recommend a patent medicine, I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have found that it cures female ills, where all other medicine fails. It is a grand medicine for sick women."

Money cannot buy such testimony as this—merit alone can produce such results, and the ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for all female diseases known to medicine.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

The needless suffering of women from diseases peculiar to their sex is terrible to see. The money which they pay to doctors who do not help them is an enormous waste. The pain is cured and the money is saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Experience has proved this.

It is well for women who are ill to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. In her great experience, which covers many years, she has probably had to deal with dozens of cases just like yours. Her advice is free and confidential.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

CONVICTS SIT AND GAMBLE.

In Western Prison They Are Allowed to Play for Stakes on Sundays.

"A few weeks ago, while sojourning in Carson City, the capital of Nevada, I witnessed a scene that struck me as exceedingly curious, and which probably was never duplicated anywhere in this country," said T. B. Gardiner of Chicago at the Shoreham.

"A friend of mine who was on good terms with the warden of the state penitentiary took me to that institution on a Sunday afternoon, and there I saw all the convicts, numbering several hundred, assembled in the long dining room of the structure, playing poker, seven-up, monte, faro and nearly all the gambling games known to western sports. Don't think for a moment that these men were merely playing for fun; they were betting chips which stood for sure-enough money and the play was just as serious and as much on the level as though it were taking place in a regular gambling establishment.

"This gambling, my friend told me, was never allowed on any other day but Sunday, the idea being that as the state laws licensed it there was no valid objection to the inmates of the prison engaging therein. Every convict was issued checks showing how much cash there was to his credit, and if he chose to lose these checks representing his money at cards it was his own affair. While the men played, which they did with all the fervor of free gamblers, a couple of guards sat watching them with loaded Winchester in their laps, ready to put down the slightest outbreak or least indication of disorder with a form of argument that scarcely ever fails to persuade."—Washington Post.

Great Bank Squeezes Pennies.

The World's Work, in a recent issue, shows how carefully the First National bank of Chicago looks to its postage account. "Stamped" postal cards are not used, and not one of the thousands of routine letters that are written every day is stamped and sealed until the whole routine mail of the day is assembled in the afternoon. Then all the cards and letters to one correspondent are put in a single envelope, and—except for letters from the officers and the like—the bank comes as near as possible to getting its entire mail carried at 2 cents an ounce, or 1 cent for every postal card, instead of often paying 2 cents for a quarter of an ounce, as it would have to do if every communication were sealed and stamped separately. This little matter of getting full value out of a 2-cent stamp makes a saving of $25 to $30 a day."

Butcher's Hair Was Like Wagner's. Wagner, a German folk tale relates, became afflicted with headache and determined to have his hair cut. He accordingly arranged with a barber to perform the operation on a certain day. That worthy resolved to make a good thing of it, and accordingly informed all his customers of Wagner's impending sacrifice.

Most of them paid him a certain sum down. To the barber's horror, Mme. Wagner superintended the cutting, and when it was over appropriated the whole of the coveted locks.

The barber, in despair, confessed that he had sold them many times over, whereupon madam suggested that the barber had hair much like Wagner's.

And the story goes that that night half Dresden slept with the butcher's hair under its pillow.

Two Great Men.

It was when Odell was governor of New York state and a visitor to the fair at Mineola, L. I., that a plain-looking, plainly dressed woman shoved her way through the crowd and said to him:

"Governor, I want your permission to bring my husband here and introduce him."

"What's the name, please?" queried Odell.

"Jones, sir—Tim Jones."

"Jones? Jones? I beg pardon, but I don't remember to have heard of him before."

"No, I don't s'pose you ever did; but he's just won the race for 3-year-olds, riding his own horse, and is now as big a man as you are."

Protecting Against Rate Reduction, Atlanta, Ga.—The recent proposition of J. Pope Brown, Chairman of the Georgia Railroad commission, to reduce the passenger rate in Georgia from three to two cents per mile was protested against by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors, and unions of the blacksmiths, machinists and telegraphers, boiler-makers, railway trainmen, carpenters and joiners, clerks and ear men. These organizations employed an attorney especially to represent them, who urged that such a reduction would work against the prosperity of the state and lead to a reduction in the number of railroad employes, as well as of their wages. The Travelers' Protective Association also protested that a reduction, as proposed, would result in fewer trains and poorer service.

When Mrs. Stowe Awoke. A friend of mine, a Northern woman, long resident in Florida, once gave me the following account of a visit from Mrs. Stowe: "I had invited her to spend the day, with several other ladies, at my villa. She came with an old white fur tippet wrapped about her neck. She sat all day near the open fire, occupied apparently with her own thoughts, for she spoke to no one. When the day was well nigh spent, one of the guests related the remarkable experience of a woman who had passed through some danger, I forget of what sort. Mrs. Stowe presently startled us all by inquiring, with some show of interest, 'Did the woman live?'—Julia Ward Howe's Article on Harriet Beecher Stowe, in the Reader Magazine.

John W. Glenister, of Providence, R. I., champion long distance swimmer of America, has performed notable feats in this country and England. He has used Peruna as a tonic and gives his opinion of it in the following letter:

New York. The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"This spring for the first time I have taken two bottles of Peruna, and as it has done me a great deal of good, I feel as if I ought to say a good word for its worth."

"During the springtime for the last few years, I have taken several kinds of spring tonics, and have never received any benefit whatever. This year, through the advice of a friend, I have tried Peruna and it has given satisfaction."

"I advise all athletes who are about to go in training to try a bottle, for it certainly gets the system in good shape." Yours truly, JOHN W. GLENISTER.

ATHLETES realize the importance of keeping in good bodily trim. The digestion must be good, the circulation perfect, sleep regular and enough of it.

If the slightest catarrhal condition of lungs or stomach is allowed to exist, neither digestion nor sleep will be strength-sustaining.

Those who lead very active lives, like athletes, with good muscular development, find the spring months especially trying.

Athletes everywhere praise Peruna because they, of all men, appreciate the value of a tonic that dispels physical depression.

The vocation of some men may allow them to endure the depressing feelings incident to spring weather, but the athlete must never allow himself to get "under the weather."

He must keep in the "pink of condition" all the time.

In order to do this he must avail himself of a spring tonic upon which he can rely.

Therefore athletes are especially friendly toward Peruna. Peruna never fails them.

What is Castoria.

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisingraher, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Skidson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician do? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Albert J. Weston, of Cleveland, O., says: "I have used your Castoria in my practice for the past eighteen years with the utmost success."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

Let Common Sense Decide

Do you honestly believe, that coffee sold loose (in bulk), exposed to dust, germs and insects, passing through many hands (some of them not over-clean), "blended," you don't know how or by whom, is fit for your use? Of course you don't. But is another story. The green berries, selected by keen judges at the plantation, are skillfully roasted at our factories, where precautions you would not dream of are taken to secure perfect cleanliness, flavor, strength and uniformity.

From the time the coffee leaves the factory no hand touches it till it is opened in your kitchen.

This has made LION COFFEE the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES. Millions of American Homes welcome LION COFFEE daily. There is no stronger proof of merit than continued and increasing popularity. "Quality survives all opposition." (Sold only in 1 lb. packages. Lion-head on every package.) (Save your Lion-heads for valuable premiums.) SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE. Every Heart-Ache

Every pain in the breast, difficult breathing, palpitation, fluttering or dizzy spell means that your heart is straining itself in its effort to keep in motion. This is dangerous. Some sudden strain from over-exertion or excitement will completely exhaust the nerves, or rupture the walls or arteries of the heart, and it will stop. Relieve this terrible strain at once with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. It invigorates and strengthens the heart nerves and muscles, stimulates the heart action, and relieves the pain and misery.

Take no chances; make your heart strong and vigorous with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I suffered terribly with heart disease. I have been treated by different physicians for many months without results. I went to a physician in Memphis, who claimed that I had dropsy of the heart. He put the X-ray on me, and in connection with his medicine he came near making a finish of me. Some time before this a Mr. Young, of St. Louis, was in our town. He saw my condition, and recommended Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to me. I gave it little attention until my return from Memphis, when I concluded to try it, and am pleased to say three bottles cured me.

THE JUNE DELINATOR. A striking cover design, a girl's head in pastel, by George Gibbs, introduces the reader of the June Delinator to a varied and interesting table of contents, supplemented by a complete summary of the season's styles. In the literary portion of the magazine, Weymer Jay, Miller contributes the first of a series of "Romances of Summer Resorts," which promise much of interest, pictorially and otherwise. A noteworthy feature also is F. Berkeley Smith's description of "A Corner in Normandy," an enjoyable travel sketch that gives more than a passing glance at one of the most curious nooks in the Old World. For the benefit of those who have the collecting instinct, N. Hudson Moore writes on old glass, in "The Collector's Manual," and Dr. Murray discusses the care of the eyes and ears in a paper that will appeal particularly to young mothers and those who have the care of children. Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," is the subject of a paper by Allan Sutherland in the series "Famous Hymns of the World." In the matter of fiction, Albert Sigelow Palne's serial, "The Lucky Piece," proceeds along pleasing lines, and Heler Choate Prince contributes a short story of great strength and charm. Grace MacGowan Cooke adds a chapter in the amusing history of Son Riley Rabbit, and L. Frank Baum gives an animal fairy tale, called "The Pea-Green Puddle," both of which will delight the little folks. In addition there are house plans and house-furnishing ideas, and many pages devoted to the particular interests of the home, including among other features a paper on "The Practical Side of the Wedding," and a variety of suggestions for kitchen economy.

Counterfeiting The Genuine. Croup is quickly relieved, and Whooping Cough will not "run its course" if you use the original Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar. This Cough Syrup is different from all others because it acts on the bowels. You can not cure Croup and Whooping Cough until you rid the system of all congestion, by working off the cold through a copious action of the bowels. Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar does this, and cures all Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. No opiates. Sold by Warne's Pharmacy.

HERMIT'S KIDNEY CURE Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in coarser form than Theodor's Black-Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so healthful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roop and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial. It costs 25c a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

PITTSBURG, Kas., March 23, 1904. I have been using your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine on my stock for some time. I have used all kinds of stock food but I have found that yours is the best for my purpose. J. S. HANSON.

If your stock is not doing just as well as you would like, there is undoubtedly a cause which can be easily remedied by RANCH FOOD. There is no season of the year when the condition of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs can not be improved by a tonic like RANCH FOOD, which tones up the animal system throughout, cleanses the blood and prevents disease. RANCH FOOD is almost infallible for the cure of the general diseases of domestic animals, including Distemper and Pinkeye in horses, Indigestion in cattle, Catarrhal Troubles in sheep and Hog Cholera. RANCH FOOD is not like the common stock foods on the market; it is made from roots, barks, herbs and seeds and is nature's own product scientifically compounded.

GRADUAL DECLINE

This is the fate of sufferers from Kidney trouble, as the disease is so insidious that often people have serious Kidney trouble without knowing the real cause of their illness, as diseased kidneys allow the impurities to stay in the system and attack the other organs. This accounts for the many different symptoms of Kidney Disease. You begin to feel better at once when taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE as it stimulates the heart, increases the circulation and invigorates the whole system. It strengthens the urinary organs and gives you new life and vigor.

Chicago Business Man Cured. Foley & Co., Chicago, Gentlemen:—About a year ago my health began to fail, I lost flesh and never felt well. The doctor thought I had stomach and liver trouble, but I became convinced that my kidneys were the cause of my ill health and commenced taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. It increased my appetite and made me feel stronger, and the annoying symptoms disappeared. I am now sound and well.—J. K. Horn, 1344 Diverdy Blvd., Chicago, June 11, 1902. Cured His Wife. E. C. Watkins, sexton of the Methodist Church, Springfield, Pa., writes: "My wife has been very bad with kidney trouble and tried several doctors without benefit. After taking one bottle of FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE was much better, and was completely cured after taking four bottles." One Bottle Cured Him. A. H. Davis, Mt. Sterling, Ia., writes: "I was troubled with kidney complaint for about two years, but a one-dollar bottle of FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE cured a permanent cure." L. G. MADISON
