EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1905.

No 27

Program for the FOURTH.

Program for the Fourth of July celebration at East Jordan is now practically complete and insures all a good time to those who come to our city to celebrate. In addition to the East Jordan Military Band, the Bellaire Band has also been engaged for the day. The forenoon program consists of a ball game at 9:00 o'clock at the ball park; at 10:30 the East Jordan Military Band give their military drill; and at 11:15 the Bellaire Band will give a concert.

At 1:30 in the afternoon the following street games will be held:
 100-yd. Foot Race 1st $2.00, 2d $1.00
 Fat Man's Race 1st $2.00, 2d $1.00
 Boys' Foot Race (under 14 yrs) 1st $1.00, 2d 75c, 3d 50c
 Running Broad Jump 1st $2.00, 2d $1.00
 Sack Race 1st $1.00, 2d 50c
 Tumbling Contest, 1st $5.00, 2d $2.50
 * At 3:00 o'clock Ball Game at park, Dewar vs. Echo; $40 in prizes. A small admission of ten cents will be charged to see this game.

Water Games will be given at 4:30, as follows:
 Tub Race, 1st $1.00, 2d 50c
 Log Rolling Contest 1st $2.00, 2d $1.00
 Boat Race 1st $2.00, 2d $1.00
 At 7:30 in the evening the East Jordan Military Band will give their Torch Light Drill.

The day will close with one of the best Fireworks Displays ever seen in northern Michigan, consisting of a Naval Parade and the Attack, Capture and Destruction of Port Arthur. If you miss the evening's entertainment, you'll have something to regret the rest of your days.

State Taxes Are Reduced.

Governor Warner has put in a very busy week, even for him, during the past seven days; and yet he found time in the intervals of examining the big grist of bills left for him by the legislature, to go over to Cassopolis and make a speech to the pioneers on Wednesday, and then run down to Ypsilanti and review the first regiment of the national guard, and give some good advice to the people at the homecoming celebration in that charming city on Thursday. He is now practically through with the examination of the bills, and he has found occasion to withhold his approval from only a very few. One of those, of considerable prominence though of only local application, was the Detroit civil service bill, which he defective in some of its important provisions, especially that which would have required the appointment in every case of the candidate receiving the highest markings in the examination, regardless of any other elements of fitness, instead of providing an eligible list from which selection could be made. The Detroit police court stenographer bill was also defective in naming a wrong section to be amended, so that it would have abolished the court for which it provided a stenographer. Among the latest acts signed was the so-called anti-trust act, forbidding combinations and agreements in restraint of trade, which is immediately to be tested in the courts by the fish trust. One that was approved permits the docking of horses when a veterinary certifies that it is "necessary." Since four of the physicians of this city testified lately in a prosecution of Sunday baseball players that the Sunday game was a "necessity" for the health of men who work all the week without recreation, and the court was then able to find that the game was not obnoxious to the law, which excepts works of "necessity" and charity, it is likely that the necessary authorization can be found for the man who wants to cut off his horse's tail.

The approval of appropriation bills makes possible some comparison of appropriations of this legislature with those of the preceding ones, rather of the tax levies provided. The specific appropriations of a particular legislature would afford but a partial and imperfect exhibit and a misleading comparison, since important items of public expenditure are often provided for in continuing appropriations, which do not appear in the appropriations of succeeding years, but do appear in the tax extensions. The taxes necessary to provide the several funds appropriated by this legislature and for the continuing appropriations of former legislatures are extended and distributed to the various counties by the auditor general's department as fast as the approval of the acts gives them the authority of law and it is now possible to make an approximate comparison between the taxes to be levied this year for the conduct of the state government and the maintenance of the state institutions, and those of two years ago.

The total levy will be about a quarter of a million dollars below the amount of two years ago. The amount for 1906 cannot be precisely shown now, but it will bear about the same relation to 1905 that 1904 had to 1903, which was one-third less. Senator Baird proposes to reduce both amounts five thousand dollars by enjoining the Agricultural Society appropriations, but perhaps it will not turn out that way. With the levy for 1905 as here found, the tax rate would be $2.45 per $1,000 valuation, as against $2.54 in 1903, and the promise to reduce expenditure has been fulfilled, though the reduction is not large. It is likely that the people of the state do not wish it to be large. They do not want state institutions crippled, nor state enterprises cramped for funds. They do want wasteful methods of legislation reformed, and they will probably see to that next spring, when they vote on a constitutional convention, and afterward, when they create and conduct the convention.

Their Rugs All Right.

The Herald man is in receipt of a dining-room rug purchased of the Petoskey Rug Mfg Carpet Company which is certainly as handsome a rug as was ever made. The Petoskey people are masters of that industry, and a rug purchased of them is a guarantee of its durability. They manufacture rugs from new wool, jutes and old carpets, any size you wish, and at a small price per square yard. Their address is 465 Mitchell st., Petoskey.

Peril in Refrigerator.

If raspberries are put in the refrigerator they will almost surely be smitten with mold—and this means ruin. The sagacious housekeeper comes to find out that raspberries are certainly spoiled by a journey in the ice chest as they would be by being dropped into the garbage barrel. Small fruit, such as raspberries, strawberries, currants and cherries, are much better kept on a broad tray carefully spread out so that the air can circulate through them. Some housekeepers will even put bananas and can aloupes in with milk and sterilized water, with the result of both milk and water bringing to the palate of the subsequent partaker most unwelcome evidence of association. I have seen this thing recur summer after summer without anybody's discovering that anything was amiss. People are sometimes poisoned by the peculiar deterioration that goes on in a refrigerator. I knew a child to mid-summer to sicken and die under circumstances that appeared no less than mysterious in view of the extreme sanitary precautions that had been taken with everything that pertained to the little one. My own, by no means ungrounded, suspicion was that the milk which had been so carefully sterilized for its use had, later on, been defiled by the thick, strong and complicated smells that infested the ice chest in which it had been kept, and whose walls were never thoroughly dried or exposed to the sun's rays in that particular household. Without this process there is, and can be, no salvation. A refrigerator that is ill-kept is a grave at once for the food that is put into it and (not seldom) for the people who eat it.—Good Housekeeping.

Scarcely had President Roosevelt laid away his rifles and hunting accoutrements when he was called upon to become custodian of the dove of peace.

One of Minnesota's sagacious jurists has sent a train robber to prison for fifty years. Probably train robberies henceforth will not figure conspicuously in Minnesota's criminal statistics.

As some of the new Fourth of July toys are said to be especially dangerous, little Johnny's chances of figuring conspicuously in the newspaper reports on July 5 are still far too bright.

Nicholas has ordered his cruisers to remain at Manila until the war is over.—It is needless to say that they will obey orders.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Russia may change its mind about peace after it has seen the bill.

There is a pleasing prospect that we will soon be getting more dirt and less data in the Panama Zone.

The Russian people have apparently no more to say about stopping the war than they did about starting it.

It is going to be in awful disappointment to the political machine, if Philadelphia refuses to go "to sleep" again.

Castro has elected himself president of Venezuela once more. If any one "also ran" in the race, probably he is still running.

It is stated that there is no word meaning "hurrah" in the Russian language. Does not seem to be any need for one the way we look at it.

There would be more heart trouble in the world if the girls were as sweet and cuddlesome as they appear in the pictures in the 10-cent magazines.

King Alfonso refused to be worried over that bomb incident in Paris. He probably thought it was just the French way of making him feel at home.

Wheat harvesting has begun in Oklahoma and is moving north toward Kansas. The annual agonizing cry for Kansas farm hands may be heard at any moment now.

If in the far future speed is increased until the trip between the two cities is made instantaneous, the man leaving New York will reach Chicago one hour before he started.

As showing the sincerity of his declaration that he will not run again for the office he holds, Gov. Douglas of Mass., has appointed a lot of republicans to good official positions.

Beef is almost as "high" in Canada as it is in the United States. Those Chicago beef magnates, who are hiding in Canada from the Investigation Committee, have apparently been improving their "opportunities."

You can apply Manzan inside, right where the pain is. It is put up in collapsible tubes with nozzle attachment for introducing it. Manzan stops pain instantly and cures all kinds of blood, bleeding, itching and protruding piles. Sold by Warner's Pharmacy.

WAS ASHAMED TO BE SEEN.

Mr. Edward Smith, of Wabash, Ind., writes: "A skin disease broke out on my face some time ago, and kept growing worse until I kept out of sight. I tried many preparations which seemed to aggravate the trouble. Two physicians failed to help me. Banner Salve cured me completely." Sold by L. C. Madison.

Convulsion, Fits, then Epilepsy.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Neryine has been so successful in curing these brain-wrecking diseases that there is every reason to believe that even the most hopeless cases can be benefited, if not fully restored. We will be pleased to refer any one thus afflicted to many who now enjoy the blessing of health, after years of hopeless suffering.

"I have a son that had brain fever when two years old, followed by fits of the worst type, and he was pronounced incurable. I spent hundreds of dollars for him, without relief. After about fifteen years he became so bad that we sent him to Longhill hospital for the insane, at Logansport, Ind. He was there nearly three years, but he continued to grow worse, so we brought him home July 30, 1902, in an awful condition. He had lost his mind almost entirely. He hardly knew one of the family; could not even find his bed; was a total wreck. He had from 5 to 10 fits a day. We were urged to try Dr. Miles' Neryine, and before the first bottle was used, we could see a change for the better. We were urged to try it ever since, and he has had but two very light spells since last August, 1903, and then he was not well other ways. We pronounce him cured, as he can work and go anywhere. If any one wishes to ask any questions concerning this, they are at liberty to do so."

E. H. BUNNELL, Lincoln, Ind.
 Dr. Miles' Neryine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

In linen suits the redingote is the prime favorite, but the redingote of this year of grace has taken on many shapes. There are the close fitting, the half-fitting, the blouse body, part and full or plain basque, and even a bolero effect hanging over a high girdle.

The redingote, were it a talker, might admit—as much confusion as to its real character as the old woman of Mother Goose fame who left it to her little dog to establish her identity.

WORK FOR THE PARSON

Street Car Conductor Was Altogether Too Busy to Preach.

An open car in the Sixth avenue shopping district was well filled with passengers. One row of seats was occupied by three women and a clergyman, who manfully maintained the offside seat.

"When did you get this?" "Just a minute ago," was the prompt reply.

The conductor scowled. "That'll do for you," he said.

In a minute or so the man at the end asked: "What was the matter with that transfer?"

"Six hours old," was the conductor's laconic reply.

"Then, my man, you should put him off the car. Why didn't you?"

"Didn't want to annoy these ladies," snapped the conductor, moving along the footboard.

"You are teaching that lad to be dishonest. You are robbing his employer and yours. You—"

"See here, ain't you a parson?" "I am," was the dignified reply.

"Then invite that lad to your Sunday school and tell him what you've got to say about dishonesty. I ain't got no time for preachin'," said the conductor.

—New York Times.

Why She Preferred Virginia. William Waugh Smith, Chancellor of the Randolph-Macon system of educational institutions through the Virginias, tells an amusing happening which befell him in earlier days when he was one of the engineering party which ran through the new State line between Virginia and South Carolina.

They had reached a place where the division would evidently cross a little form presided over by a not unattractive widow, but when they took luncheon at her hospitable table they had not yet decided whether the house itself would be in the one State or the other—and that was a question in which their hostess showed the keenest interest.

But at supper time, when again the surveyors and their assistants were the lady's guests, Dr. Smith was able to say: "Madame, very little of your place is in South Carolina. The home itself is well into Virginia."

With a glad cry she caught his hand, and as she shook it again and again, she exclaimed: "Oh, I'm so glad! I'm so glad! I've always heard tell it was so unhealthy down in Carolina."

Fools All the Doctors. "There is a hale and hearty looking old chap walking about town," remarked a New York physician lately, "who for years has had a complicity of diseases which make him most interesting to the profession. The ailments of which he shows undeniable symptoms are rarely seen in combination and the state of his inner workings is a matter for speculation among the doctors who have examined him."

"The old fellow himself loves to tell that when he first asked medical advice, some twenty years ago, the physician, a famous practitioner in those days, wrote across the diagnosis he had put down on paper: 'This man cannot live thirty days. I should like to be present at the autopsy.' That great doctor has been dead these many years and the dying patient still smiles cheerfully and seeks a cure for his malady. Queer, isn't it?"

HUMOR of the

Billville Celebrities. "Any celebrities in your town?" asked the visitor.

"Well, we've got a good snake liar, a dozen or more fish liars that are purty good in their line, and a mat who never predicted the failure of the fruit crop."

"That all?" "No; that's one chap in town who claims he never told a lie—the biggest liar of 'em all!"—Atlanta Constitution.

In Reality.

Extract from letter sent by Mr. Wiggins to long-absent friend—You remember, dear old boy, the remark I used to make that if ever I got married it would be to a woman who knew her position—and kept it. Well, I've found that woman!

Note—the above sketch was "not" sent with the epistle.—Half Holiday.

Billings Was a Good Uncle. "Is Billings a judge of a cigar?"

"I don't think he is. That very rich uncle of his came along yesterday afternoon and stopped to speak to Billings—Billings is his favorite nephew—and Billings said he noticed that his uncle was smoking an excellent cigar—and 'pon my word, it was the worst smelling stogie that ever came out of the box!"

All the World to Him. "Harry," said the wealthy wife, as she handed him a roll of the long green, "do you remember how you used to tell me that I was all the world to you?"

"Yes," replied the husband, "and I meant it, too. Do you doubt it?"

"Not a bit, not a bit! But, Harry, can't you get over the idea that the world owes you a living?"

Where Friendship Ceased. Mrs. White—"What's the trouble between you and Mrs. Green?"

Mrs. Black—"I let her have her own way too much."

Mrs. White—"Why, that wouldn't make her angry?"

Mrs. Black—"Indeed it did. She wanted to pay for the ice cream soda and I allowed here to do it."—Detroit Tribune.

Lucky Thaddeus. Smarticus—it's a good thing Thaddeus isn't there now.

Smarticus—Thaddeus? Who and where?

Smarticus—Why, Thaddeus of Warsaw. He was such a striking figure that if he were living to-day he'd be sure to be mixed up in those labor disturbances.

None Left to Chloroform. "Shall we chloroform the old folks of the next generation?" asked the sage of Plunkville.

"If cigarettes an' tight lacin' keep their present holds on the respective sexes," retorted the Pohick philosopher, "there ain't goin' to be no old folks in the next generation."

The Cheerful Idiot. "Yes," said the tired citizen, "I may say I got my education along practical lines, such as it is, in hotels here and there over the country. Of course, I have paid a high price for it, but it is worth all I've paid for it."

"Would you call the money paid for such an education an investment?" asked the cheerful idiot, laughing heartily.

Bugville Fun.

Joe Manover.

Bug—My! Just see the fine diamond. What a great game we could have if we only had a bat and ball.

Editorial Chatter. "Ah!" began the pen on the reporter's desk, "I am mightier than the sword."

"Oh, but look at me," retorted the editor's blue pencil.

"Hub! Of what use are you, pray?" "Well, to make a long story short,"

HORTICULTURE

The Periodical Cicada.

The Periodical Cicada or 17-Year Locust is due to reappear in certain sections of the Western states this year. The only way the places where they are likely to be found this summer can be told is by the history of their previous appearances. As a usual thing this insect does not disappoint those that are looking for it. In May, 1902, the Farmers' Review published a map showing the places where it was expected that year, where it was later found. The places where it appeared then are not the same as those in which the insects are to appear this year.

Relative to the brood this year, Professor S. A. Forbes, State entomologist of Illinois, writes us as follows: "I enclose you an outline map of the state showing the distribution of the coming brood of the periodical Cicada.

or seventeen-year locust, according to observations made at the time of its previous occurrences. The counties from which it has been previously reported in this state are all those in the northern part of the state above a line running from Mercer county southeast to Peoria county, and thence to Menard, Logan, Shelby and Edgar. It has been reported also from northeastern Indiana, Southern Michigan, Eastern Iowa and southern Wisconsin.

We publish a cut of the map sent us by Professor Forbes and also a number of other cuts showing something of the history of this insect. The Cicada appears in the latter part of May or early in June. These are not true locusts, as they have not biting mouths, but suck their food through a tube from the inside of the bark of trees. Our second cut shows the Cicada one-fourth natural size. In this illustration the newly hatched larva is seen at 1; the pupa at 2; "a"; "b" cast pupal shell; "c" adult; "e" two eggs enlarged; 3, side view of adult female to show break, which may be discerned at "a" and the avipositor at "b".

About five days after the males appear they begin to sing, and in eight or ten days from that time the sexes mate. In less than a week after that time the females begin to lay their eggs, and the number deposited by each female is in the neighborhood of 500. The females push their ovipositors into the stems of trees and shrubs and through the ovipositors insert the eggs. In six weeks the eggs hatch and the larvae come out and fall to the ground. They work themselves into the soil, sometimes penetrating it to a depth of ten feet. Here they feed for about thirteen years, and then as they become mature begin to work up towards the surface. By the end of the sixteenth year they approach the surface in large numbers, and in April of the next year they construct exit galleries to the surface.

Some of these galleries are shown in our third cut. At the left are the pupal galleries, a front view of the orifice being had at "a" and a view of a transverse section at "e." In the top of the second gallery is seen a pupa awaiting its change, while at "d" is a pupa ready to transform. At the right are clay buildings of the Cicada, some of which only extend to the surface of the ground.

The pupae emerge from these galleries at night and proceed to the nearest upright object, upon which they can climb. Soon the skin of the insect splits open and when day comes the insect takes flight.

Our fourth cut shows how fruit trees are injured by the insects, which injury sometimes amount to complete ruin. At "a" is a recent puncture, "b" same with wood removed to show eggs, "c" side view, "d" cavities left by hatched insects. At the right is shown a healed twig.

English sparrows and Megastizus wasps are the chief enemies of the Cicada. Our fifth illustration shows one of these wasps carrying a locust to its furrow, where it will serve for food.—Farmers' Review.

Staking Tomatoes.

I think that it pays to stake tomatoes, though I have not made any experiments comparing staked with unstaked vines. I have, however, obtained such good results with the staking method that I can heartily recommend it to all, especially those that want to produce good ripe tomatoes in the shortest possible time.

I set the vines about four feet apart and train the vines to stakes, each of which is about five feet high. This is a good height, but not too great, as the vine should be trimmed to one or two stems. This permits the sun and air to get to all sides of the vines and the results are correspondingly good.

One thing that we avoid is rot, which results when the tomatoes are permitted to lie on the ground. Then, too, when the vines are thick and are not staked I find that tomatoes are frequently missed in the picking. This missing amounts to a considerable item when there are many vines. When the fruit is hanging on the stakes every individual fruit is in full sight and is picked when it is ripe enough.

The picking also is facilitated, and this I think will more than offset the cost and trouble of setting the stakes. I have more than once, when I was growing tomatoes by the old method gone over the vines at picking time and here and there found half a dozen good fruits rotted on the under side and far beyond their prime for eating. The only thing that could be done with them was to throw them away. I notice that where they grow to matatoes in the green houses they always stake them, as in that way only can they make the most out of the area planted to tomatoes. I do not see why the principle that is good in the green houses is not good in the fields.—Helen Jones, Calhoun Co., Ill. in Farmers' Review.

Hardy Strains of Plants.

We have not yet fully awakened to the advantage of growing hardy strains of plants in contradistinction to the usual varieties. One of the means of getting hardy varieties seems to be the use of seed produced in the locality in which it is desired to grow the hardy plant. In the matter of clover grow in Minnesota it has been found that in a good many cases the seed brought in from the south produced plants that in turn produced the usual number of seeds, but that the seed of such plants was so poorly filled as to be worthless while the plants from seed produced in the same locality gave seeds that were all plump and full of vitality. This is not always the case, yet if it is so part of the time, it serves to act as a signboard to point in the true direction for developing hardy plants.

Packing Apples for Export.

Importers in England say that apples for that country should be packed as tight as possible and be undamaged by frost. The Canadian minister of agriculture has given notice of intention to favor a resolution to amend the act respecting the packing of various commodities so as to provide that when apples are packed in Canada for export for selling by the box, they shall be packed in good and strong boxes of seasoned wood, the inside dimensions of which shall not be less than 10 inches in depth, 11 inches in width and 20 inches in length, representing as far as possible 2,200 cubic inches. Provision is also made for a penalty of 25 cents on each box of apples not packed in accordance with this regulation.—W. R. Holloway, Consul, Halifax.

Fruit for All.

It used to be said (but that was a long time ago), that the apple was the fruit of the common people, the orange the fruit of the wealthy and the grape the fruit for the king. Now all fruits have become well-nigh universal. The orange now is about as cheap as the apple, and the grape is cheaper than either apple or orange.

For home use soft fruits are more suitable than hard ones, but such will not bear market.

DAIRY NOTES

A Danish Example.

The Danes are not exemplary butter makers, but they are so far ahead of some other people in their dairying that it will pay us to give their methods some attention. Visitors to the Danish dairies say that very many of them have concrete floors and water so placed that everything can be washed daily if need be. The stables themselves are in many cases, fire-proof. In some of the best stables there is a tablet in front of each cow giving her name, date of birth and pedigree. Beside this hangs a slate on which is written the daily record of milk produced and the test, when testing is done. The sick cow is taken away from the other cows at once and put into what is called a cow hospital. The law does not permit the selling of milk from sick cows.

Particular care is taken that the women, who do most of the milking, dress for that particular act. The milkers are not allowed to wear sleeves below the elbow and are required to wash both the cows' udders and their own hands before beginning to milk. Most of them wear white linen caps and aprons.

The feed of the cow is looked out for with great care, every weed in the pasture being pulled up. The Danes still hold to the opinion that weeds eaten by the cows will taint the milk. The cream is generally pasteurized. The great secret of the high quality of Danish butter is its cleanliness, and this accounts also for its long keeping qualities.

The Manure Pile.

A manure pile just outside the stable may not be much of an objection in case of the beef steer or the horse, but it is an objection when found just outside the cow stable. In the summer time there is always a disagreeable odor rising from it, and if the cows have a partial ration of ground grain, the flies that collect about the manure pile are more numerous than in the ordinary manure pile. The manure should be kept away from the stable during hot weather if at no other time.

Every few days during the warm weather the manure should be hauled away and put where it will do the most good, preferably in the garden. When the weather is drying it is desirable to get it under ground as soon as possible. I know a man who has a covered box in one end of his barnyard, and into this he throws the manure every day during the summer time. The box is built of heavy plank and has a cover of plank. It shuts down close enough to keep out the flies and keep in the smell, most of it. This is perhaps the easiest way of keeping the manure pile from becoming a nuisance during summer. The only objection to the box is the trouble of getting out the manure when it is to be hauled away.—Hobart Wilkins, Andrew Co., Mo., in Farmers' Review.

Paper Milk Bottles.

That the glass milk bottle may be largely replaced by the paper at no very distant day now seems probable. There are many points in favor of the use of paper bottles, one of the most important being that the bottle is discarded after it is once used, thus obviating all chance of infection through the repeated use of unclean bottles. The many difficulties which have been hitherto encountered in the attempted manufacture of paper bottles have been nearly all overcome. They are stamped out of heavy paper in conical shape, with the lower edges locked in such a manner as to be strengthened by pressure from above. The stout cover has protruding lips which make its removal more convenient. After the edges of the bottle are sealed they are covered with paraffin. Lastly the finished receptacle is sterilized.

Cool Cured Cheese.

Some of the cheeses cured by the cold curing process in Canada have been recently sent to English merchants with a request for criticisms on the quality. The cheeses were also submitted to the paraffining process, which has not been approved by English dealers in cheese. The cheeses were sold and carefully judged by the dealers in different localities. A committee appointed to voice the sentiments of the buyers said that the cool curing process is an improvement over the old method, the money value of such improvement being from 50 cents to $1 per 112 pounds. Paraffining was pronounced to be a success on closely textured, well-made cheese, but does harm on mushy, soft and acid cheese. Wherever the paraffining is used it should be thoroughly done.

Calves in Groups.

It is highly desirable to have calves come in groups where a large number of cattle are being kept and the calves are to be raised for beef. It is only in this way that uniformity in size, weight and finish can be obtained for the car loads of cattle that are to be sent to market. If there are but few cattle it is better to have only two groups of calves, one in the spring and one in the fall. It will be easier to care for them if they are in groups of about the same size than if they come at all months in the year.

Trouble never troubles a man who is always smiling.

Attractive Box Furniture for the Summer Bedroom

The craze of the moment for flowery designs in clothes and hats also extends to summer house frocking, and nothing indeed could be more attractive and better suited to summer houses than the Dresden and pompadour designs in wall coverings and upholstery.

Nor is it necessary to limit the floral furnishing of one's bedroom to these articles. The best possible sort of outfitting for a summer bedroom which one wishes to be both pretty and inexpensive can be made out of boxes by any clever girl or woman. This sounds impractical, but is absolutely a genuine suggestion, which you will find both useful, and ornamental, not to mention its other quality, inexpensiveness.

To make a chest of boxes all that one needs is a framework of wood, which may be enameled in white or simply painted, preferably in white or green, although other colors if chosen harmoniously might also be effected. No particular skill as a carpenter is necessary to construct this framework, but if there is no one at home who cares for simple carpenter work, then any village carpenter can do it. The charge for a good-sized set for the boxes, including the entire cost of wood, paint, etc., and in small villages and towns where wages may be padded slightly on the inside before this is done. For the lining thin silk of the dominant tone of the upholstery or of white lawn, denim and similar fabrics is suitable. If the lid of the box is lined also care should be taken not to make the lining too thick on the sides, as it may prevent the lid fitting. Before starting to cover the box, and especially the lid, it is well to reinforce the corners by pasting pieces of strong linen neatly over those doubtful places, as otherwise they may be broken in the course of upholstery.

When the box is entirely covered tabs of the material used should be made for each box. The tabs are about two inches long and one wide. For this purpose the material is used double and overseamed all around. One end of the tab or flap is then overseamed to what is to be the front of the box on the front bottom edge and about three inches from the end of the box. Two of these flaps are sewed on each box in order that it may be pulled out from the frames easily. They fill the position of the handles of bureau drawers.

In making a set of boxes for your hats it is a good plan to use a small table such as are usually found in bedrooms. The table may be rectangular in shape and should have a shelf underneath and a shelf or framework are not so high as in the cities, $3 would be a good price. For a chest of the largest size which would be attractive in this piece of furniture the framework should be fifty inches high. When constructed this frame looks like a small set of book shelves open at the sides with the shelves left out, but with the frame on which the shelves might rest arranged at proper intervals. Instead of shelves or drawers resting on these frames the boxes do so.

Now for the boxes. You want pasteboard boxes which, after being covered with the chintz, are twenty-seven inches long, eight inches deep and twelve inches wide. It is necessary to allow a little, but hardly an appreciable amount, for the covering. If you cannot find exactly the size you want it is not a difficult thing to cut down a box and alter it to the required size, but what is even easier is to buy your boxes first and then have your frame made to fit them.

The entire box, sides and lid should be covered. The bottom of the box, of course, need not be. The covering is overhanded at the edges and in corners. The box is also lined and across the bottom. These two shelves should be far enough apart to give the depths of a hat box from the bottom shelf or framework to the middle shelf, and again from this shelf to the table top. The shelves will be long enough to hold two boxes apiece, and thus you can fit in four boxes for hats, which, being neatly covered with chintz, will add to the attractiveness of your bedroom rather than otherwise, and which will not destroy the usefulness of your table.

A box closet is also an excellent device for the care of evening dresses or the more delicate summer frocks. In making this proceed as in the case of the chest of boxes. Make the same sort of a frame and select your boxes to fit. Your frame must, of course, be made large enough to accommodate dresses laid out as they are sent home from the dressmaker's. Instead, however, of covering the boxes with chintz an easy method is to hang a chintz curtain across the front of the framework and smaller curtains across the exposed sides. It is even better, perhaps, to have the sides made of wood, as in a bookcase.—New York Herald.

Miss Reed's Reply.

To the request of her publishers for biographical details Miss Myrtle Reed responded with the following facetious statement: "I discovered America thirty years ago and liked it so well that I have not left the country. When I came I had a pen in one hand, a sheet of paper in the other and was yelling for ink. At this my father knew that I was destined for the fourth estate, and ran to the dictionary for a name that would look well in print. Hence my title, which everybody thinks a pseudonym, and the English reviews insist to be the name of a 'gentleman,' one of them saying: 'The gentleman who calls himself Myrtle Reed! Don't you call that hard when I have always been a perfect lady?' After this auspicious beginning the rest of my career is history. See chronicles Knickerbocker Press last seven years."—Boston Transcript.

Queen Anne's Sugar Tongs.

Sugar tongs at meals came in during the reign of Queen Anne and the use of them was long confined to British households. Dr. Johnson is commonly supposed not to have been over-averse about his table manners, but he pronounced the French "an indelicate people" because they knew not the article when he visited Paris in 1775. The incident that excited his disgust occurred at a party at Mme. du Bouché's. The footman took the sugar in his fingers and threw it into the doctor's coffee. "I was going to put it aside," said the doctor, "but, hearing it was made on purpose for me, I've tasted Tom's fingers."

Quick Wit in Resenting Insult.

Of Gen. Ogelthorpe, the founder of the state of Georgia, Boswell, Dr. Johnson's biographer, relates this story: "When a very young man, only 15, serving under Prince Eugene of Savoy, he was sitting at table in company with a prince of the house of Wurttemberg, who took up a glass of wine and by a flip made some of it fly into Ogelthorpe's face. The young soldier was in a dilemma. He durst not challenge so distinguished a personage, yet he must notice the affront. Therefore, keeping his eye fixed on his highness and smiling at the time, as if he took what had been done in jest, Ogelthorpe exclaimed: 'That's a good joke, but we do it much better in England.' Whereupon he flung a whole glassful of wine in the prince's face. The affair ended in good humor."

Took Risks with Savages.

An explorer in the backwoods of Australia tells how some timber cutters took big risks. "I had given instructions to the men in the bush that on no account were they to lay aside their firearms," he says. "After having been absent for a short time I returned and found that they had slung their revolvers and carbines on a small tree and were working at about fifty yards from them. I can tell you they heard of it. The natives have a playful habit of dragging their spears through the grass with their toes and all the while looking as innocent as it is possible for them to look. If the natives had only thought of it they might have given the cutters a warm time."

GAS AND WATER

IS ONE AS NECESSARY AS THE OTHER?

Citizens of Large Cities Say It Is.

New York, June 13.—In the recent agitation here about the price of gas, the demand for lower rates was supported by the argument that every resident is as dependent upon a supply of gas as upon a supply of good water.

It has come to pass that the day-laborer uses gas as his only fuel for cooking, because of economy, and the rich man uses gas on account of its convenience. Gas for lighting, with modern improvements in burners, is cheaper, better and more satisfactory than any other kind of light. Gas sells at $1.00 per thousand cubic feet in large cities and from that to as high as $3.00 in smaller towns.

The consumer of gas in the country uses Acetylene (pronounced a-set-a-lene), and each user makes his own gas and is independent of Gas and Electric Companies. Acetylene is a more perfect illuminant than the gas sold by the big gas companies in the cities, and the cost to the smallest user is about the equivalent of city gas at 85 cents per thousand.

Acetylene is the modern artificial light, the latest addition to the many inventions that have become daily necessities.

The light from an acetylene flame is soft, steady and brilliant, and in quality is only rivaled by the sun's rays. If water and a solid material known as Calcium Carbide are brought into contact, the immediate result is the making of this wonderful gas. The generation of acetylene is so simple that experience or even apparatus is not necessary to make it. If it is desired to make it for practical lighting, and to keep it for immediate use, then a small machine called an "Acetylene Generator" is employed. There are many responsible concerns making acetylene generators. In practice, this gas is distributed in small pipes throughout buildings, grounds, or entire cities and towns, in the same manner as ordinary city gas. Acetylene is the only satisfactory means of lighting isolated buildings located in the country or suburbs at a distance from city gas or electric plants.

Floating Nests.

When mother grebe is ready to lay her eggs she searches out some retired spot, among the reeds and rushes of a lonely lake, and there she scrapes and pushes together a low heap of mud and decayed reeds, says C. William Beebe, in Recreation. Here on the water-logged islet this merest semblance of a nest—she broods her eggs. A moose splashing among the nearby lily pads may send floods of water over the sitting bird, or the winds may disentangle the little raft of reeds, sending it scudding to the farther end of the lake, but the bright eyes of the mother bird never falter. She carefully covers her eggs with decayed leaves whenever hunger forces her to leave them. Although she does not weave the reeds, yet in some way they hold together until the last little grebe crawls to the edge and plunges off head-first. Or he may leap upon his mother's back and thus ride proudly forth into the world, exchanging the soaked, decayed leaves of his cradle for her feathers.

RAILROAD RATE LEGISLATION.

Testifying before the Senate Committee at Washington, Inter-State Commerce Commissioner Prouty said in discussing the proposition to give to that Commission the power to regulate railway rates:

"I think the railways should make their own rates. I think they should be allowed to develop their own business. I have never advocated any law, and I am not now in favor of any law, which would put the rate-making power into the hands of any commission or any court. While it may be necessary to do that some time, while that is done in some states at the present time, while it is done in some countries, I am opposed to it. * * * The railway rate is property. It is all the property that the railway has got. The rest of its property is not good for anything unless it can charge a rate. Now it has always seemed to me that when a rate was fixed, if that rate was an unreasonable rate, it deprives the railroad company of its property pro tanto. It is not necessary that you should confiscate the property of a railroad; it is not necessary that you should say that it shall not earn three per cent or four per cent. When you put in a rate that is inherently unreasonable, you have deprived that company of its rights, of its property, and the Circuit Court of the United States has jurisdiction under the fourteenth amendment to restrain that. * * * I have looked at these cases a great many times, and I can only come to the conclusion that a railroad company is entitled to charge a fair and reasonable rate, and if any order of a commission, if any statute of a state legislature takes away that rate, the fourteenth amendment protects the railway company."

Peculiarity of Swiss Lake.

Lake Morat in Switzerland, has the curious property, every tenth year, of turning red, owing to the presence of certain water plants which are not found in any other lake in the world.

Meaning of "Impeachment."

An impeachment is not a conviction. To impeach is to charge with a crime or misdemeanor; especially, to charge, as an officer, with misbehavior in office.

A jolly crowd of 24 Lady Macabees went over to Charlevoix Tuesday night on the Str. Hum. 'Twas in response to an invitation of the five there, and they entertained the East Jordan ladies royally. A class of eight were initiated, and, after a drill by sixteen of the ladies, supper was served. 'Twas about 2:00 o'clock a. m. when the Hum's whistle was hailed with delight by a number of East Jordan huddles.

The Gun Club met Tuesday afternoon and had a very successful shoot. Dr. Sweet had particularly good luck, making 27 out of the 30 singles, and to the 20 doubles did not miss a bird. He's wearing the badge now. Following is the score: Singles—30 birds; Sweet 27, John Boosinger 20, Whittington 22, Warne 22, Wm. Stroebel 7. Doubles—20 birds; Sweet 20, Warne 13, John Boosinger 11, Whittington 8, Wm. Stroebel 2.

Three young women, aged about 15 years, were drowned by the swamping of a row-boat on Walloon lake, Friday last, while two others with them were rescued. The victims are Edna, Van Amburg, Elma Karcher and Gladys Howe. The boating party comprised a portion of a Sunday School picnic crowd. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon they started out in an old boat which had been abandoned. They paddled around near shore for a time and when they got into deep water the old tub suddenly sprung a leak. One of the boys began bailing out the water with his hat, but the girls became frightened and jumped on the rail, swamping the boat. One of the young ladies was a friend of Miss Flora Simmons, and she, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Will Richardson attended the funeral services, Sunday.

The M. E. Church Social drew a large crowd Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Robertson. They were delightfully entertained with several vocal selections by Miss Blanche Robertson; Mrs. A. J. Suffer favored with an instrumental; and recitations by four of the Sunday School children. After which ice cream and cake were indulged in.

The forgery charge preferred by Kai Robert against James L. Hackett was heard before Justice Boosinger, Thursday. Hackett waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court for trial. He was released on bonds, but was immediately re-arrested by Dep'ty Sheriff Harrington on a second similar charge preferred by Mr. Roberts. The second case was heard Thursday afternoon and he again waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court; on Friday he was released on $500 bonds. Joseph Whitfield and Samuel Rogers went on the bonds in the first case and Wm. J. Carson and Joseph Eteher in the second.

A Child's Music

When Babble plays, and from the keys
Evolves strange childish melodies,
This as from elfland came the strain,
Not heard before nor known, or said,
But wayward, passing like a breeze,
Scarce meant for ears pedantic these
Soft chords that well the child-soul
please,
It even might to some cause pain
When Babble plays!

Yet as low surge of breaking seas,
Or bird notes far within the trees,
That echo long in heart and brain;
So through this humming love is felt
To hear the sweetest harmonies
When Babble plays.

SLIGHTLY UN-CONVENTIONAL

By GEORGE FRED LAWSON

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Lambert didn't really mean anything by it. She was not a flirt—at least not now, that she was a married woman. She had left all that behind her two years ago. Not that she was a flirt even then; oh, no. But she had been the possessor of the average amount of coquettishness inherent in most girls of nineteen—perhaps just the least little bit more.

But he looked so decidedly lonely and gazed at her so often, as if he wished to speak and didn't dare, that she really wished he would for he looked quite like a gentleman, and a handsome one at that; one who would know just the limitations of a chance acquaintance with a very pretty woman at a hot, stuffy, little out-of-the-way station, and with the prospect of a two hours' wait for the last train of the day before her.

Yes, she wished he would speak or do something else. But he didn't. She would have smiled, had she dared. Even at that he gave her little enough chance. She could feel him staring at her and once in a while could catch a glimpse of his face in the dusty little window opposite her. But when she turned carelessly in his direction ostensibly to gaze out upon the dusty stretch of track, he was always gazing interestedly at a forlorn "Sapolio" sign over her head, or was flicking a bit of imaginary dust from his immaculate sleeve.

And then she did it. You must remember that she was not a flirt. She was just a pretty girl stranded at a country station, the only occupants of which were, besides herself and the sleepy station agent, a prim old maid and—a man. It was hot, and dusty, and the prospect of two long hours of weary waiting was quite too awful. She swept by him toward the door with airy grace and sparkling eyes, and turned suddenly with reddened face at his:

"I beg pardon."
They stared at each other and he, too, reddened. "You dropped your handkerchief," he said.
"Oh, thank you. How careless of me," she replied, accepting the proffered bit of linen and lace—the little vixen. She smiled and tucked it into her corsage and turned to go.

Her heart beat fast as she turned, with the old-time feeling of coquetry. "I beg pardon," he continued, "that is, it is very longly here."
She agreed that it was with just the right degree of embarrassed inflection, and the correct angle to her drooped eyelids.

"You—" he proffered a card which she, little rascal, neglected to notice—"you might care to take a stroll

"Decidedly," she agreed, flirting down the hem of her skirt which a teasing breeze had fluttered back displaying shapely ankles modeled in black silk, "and it's so sweetly unconventional. It adds to the charm."
"I'm so glad you look at it in that way. I wanted to speak to you all the time, but you looked so decidedly offish I didn't dare."
"I?" She cast one of those old-time college-day glances at him and he edged nearer and neglected his pipe, which went out.
"Um—m, yes, you did. Looked kind as if you'd bite a fellow's head off if he so much as dared. I could have yelled with delight when you dropped your handkerchief. Wasn't it lucky?"
"Lucky? Oh, yes, wasn't it?" She smiled queerly. The wind was again playing tricks with the ruffles at the bottom of her skirt and she didn't appear to notice it this time. Besides, she was conscious of certain facts. He edged still closer till she laughed gaily and tucked her feet under her.

"He spoke. 'I don't believe in too much conventionality, especially when it makes no particular difference. You see, there was no one at the station to know,' he added hastily noticing a look of alarm on her face.
She was sitting bolt upright, her head held rigidly against the trunk of the tree, and was staring straight ahead of her and over his head. She smiled somewhat painfully as he spoke. "It's my hair," she explained, "it's caught on this plaguey tree, and I can't move, and—oooh, it hurts!" She reddened as he hastened to relieve her. His face approached very close to hers, and his arms all but enveloped her. The hair had become provokingly tangled about a tiny twig and baffled his efforts to loosen it. She

"Don't, please," she said smiling. He was going to beg her pardon again! Oh, he was too polite, and made it all the more difficult for her. If he would only say, "Come on. Let's take a walk and get away from this miserable hole," she felt sure she would have replied, "all right, come on."
At her "don't, please," he had started toward her when she supplemented this by adding:
"There is nothing to pardon, I'm sure. I'm only too well pleased to escape this horrid place."
"Thank you, Miss—" Again she paused. She bit her lip.

"You look much the same, Jack—only the beard changes you."

"Miss Wakeley." She tossed her head defiantly as she said it, that is, she meant it to be defiant. It may have been so, but he took no apparent notice of it. Anyhow the ice was broken and she stifled all thoughts of outraged propriety that arose in her mind and actually smiled at the old maid, who glared as they made their way across the glimmering-tracks to the field beyond.

It was very pleasant to stroll about. He didn't attempt to quiz her to find out all about who she was; he simply accepted her company thankfully and seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. Finally they found a gurgling stream and lolled upon its grassy banks, she with her back propped against the trunk of a tree and he spread out at her feet. The touch of his hand and the gentle pressure of it as he had helped her over a stone wall lingered in hers, and the look in his eyes as he slowly lighted his pipe tingled her heart.

"Much more pleasant than that dingy station," he vouchsafed.
"Decidedly," she agreed, flirting down the hem of her skirt which a teasing breeze had fluttered back displaying shapely ankles modeled in black silk, "and it's so sweetly unconventional. It adds to the charm."
"I'm so glad you look at it in that way. I wanted to speak to you all the time, but you looked so decidedly offish I didn't dare."
"I?" She cast one of those old-time college-day glances at him and he edged nearer and neglected his pipe, which went out.

"Um—m, yes, you did. Looked kind as if you'd bite a fellow's head off if he so much as dared. I could have yelled with delight when you dropped your handkerchief. Wasn't it lucky?"
"Lucky? Oh, yes, wasn't it?" She smiled queerly. The wind was again playing tricks with the ruffles at the bottom of her skirt and she didn't appear to notice it this time. Besides, she was conscious of certain facts. He edged still closer till she laughed gaily and tucked her feet under her.

She was sitting bolt upright, her head held rigidly against the trunk of the tree, and was staring straight ahead of her and over his head. She smiled somewhat painfully as he spoke. "It's my hair," she explained, "it's caught on this plaguey tree, and I can't move, and—oooh, it hurts!" She reddened as he hastened to relieve her. His face approached very close to hers, and his arms all but enveloped her. The hair had become provokingly tangled about a tiny twig and baffled his efforts to loosen it. She felt his hot breath upon her face and looked up at him. Perhaps it was unfortunate that, just at that moment, the hold on her hair gave way and she swayed toward him. At any rate, she felt herself crushed tightly to him and felt his impassioned kisses rained upon her face and lips. She was powerless to resist even if she would. She could struggle but weakly and lay like a fluttering bird in his strong embrace. She listened to his passionate words of love and felt supremely happy, and she wondered at it in spite of her joy.

Finally he released her and held her off at arm's length. "Oh, Editha!" he exclaimed tremulously, "did you think I didn't know you, even if it has been five years? It seems a long time, dear. Has it changed you?"
She gazed at him and smiled happily. "You look much the same, Jack—only the beard changes you."
"I know, dear. I allowed it to grow this summer. You see, I'm summering here and something seemed to draw me to the station to-day. Editha, say you—"

She stopped him with a coquettish gesture. "But, Jack, I—" "Oh, Editha!"
"It was more a family affair than anything else, Jack. His folks wished it, and mine wished it. I married him on his sick bed. Poor Mr. Lambert died the next day, and—"

He caught her in his arms and kissed the happy smile from her lips. "My darling!" he murmured, and she cuddled happily to him.
Two sharp whistles sounded on the warm summer air as the last train pulled out of the station, but neither of them noticed it.

NO MORE HOUSEHOLD DRUDGE

Dr. Thompson's Scheme for Saving Women from Cooking.

Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson of Philadelphia has a vision, if we may apply such a word to the well-pondered plan of a man of science, remarks a writer in Everybody's. Woman, the homemaker and mother, should not be hampered by household drudgery. Cooking is a matter of chemistry and will be done by men. All the tedious chores of housework, washing, dish-washing, scrubbing, ironing, sweeping, housecleaning—oh, word of horror to the ears of man—will be done by public corporations, syndicates, scientific co-operative housework concerns.

Houses will be heated from a central plant and swept by hydraulic brooms. Meals will come from the grand central cookery or its nearest branch. Stairs will be supplanted by automatic elevators. Washing day will disappear from the week. Even now many women send a telephone call for window cleaners, and have their husband's "socks" darned by specialists. In the cities you can have your clocks wound and your lamps trimmed and tended by outside experts. In the Norwegian town of Bergen everybody's food comes from the town kitchen. In Paris the workman gets his hot soup from the grand central dinner kettle.

Happy day, if it ever comes, when women have no servants and no household drudgery to earn wrinkles by! We do not understand, however, just how a woman whose husband "gets ter per" is going to have that automatic elevator. Do the city, the town, the state pay for these "private utilities," made "public utilities." Rich women escape drudgery now. How are poor women to do it?

Man's Dull Comprehension.

It was in a Chestnut street ice creamery. The waitress ran over the list of flavors glibly, and after due deliberation the young woman decided upon cherry ice.

"Thought you were so fond of pistachio," murmured her male companion as soon as they were left alone.
"Love it," she replied.
"Why cherry ice, then?" he inquired. "They have pistachio—I'll call the girl and change it."
She reached across and seized his wrist as he started to rap on the table. "Don't you know I can't eat pistachio in this old rose gown?" she whispered. "The very idea of the pale green and the old rose is horrible. It gets on my nerves. But cherry is just the thing—they have a beautiful shade of cherry here."

"Oh," said the young man.—Philadelphia Record.

Pleasant for the Host.

William Faversham, although an Englishman, tells this story at the expense of one of his countrymen in London. The latter, a young society man, was attending a West End social function which was proving extremely boring to him. Disconsolately wandering into the conservatory, he had met a gentleman who, although a stranger, impressed him as being a fellow-sufferer.
"Dispensing with an introduction," said the actor-recounteur, "he frankly delivered his opinion of the evening, and hopefully suggested that they adjourn to the club."
"Well—ah—I would, you know," rejoined the other, "but—ah—I'm the host here, don't you know."—New York Times.

Imperfect.

I wonder if ever a song was sung.
But the singer's heart sang sweeter
I wonder if ever a rhyme was rung.
But the thought surpassed the meter!
I wonder if ever a sculptor wrought,
Till the cold stone echoed his ardent thought!
Or if a painter, with light and shade,
The dream of his inmost heart portrayed.
I wonder if ever a rose was found,
And there glittering gem was fairer!
Or if ever a glimmering gem was ground,
And we dreamed not of a rarest!
Ah! never on earth do we find the best,
But it waits for us in a land of rest,
And a perfect thing we shall never behold.
Till we pass the portals of shining gold.
—James Clarence Harvey, in New Orleans Clearing.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Dignity of the Law.
A felon did a murder of a rather messy sort. The details were appalling, if we credit the report; but his innocence was proven, when they brought him into court.
By a "lawyer in good standing."

A gentleman of pleasure wearied of domestic strife. So he hatched some petty slanders that would compromise his wife. Result: A quick divorce obtained, a woman marked for life.
By a "lawyer in good standing."

A law of public justice brushed the elbows of a trust. Who did the dark and devious its energies to bust—
And the man who bribed and quibbled till the right was in the dust
Was a "lawyer in good standing."

A millionaire promoter who was known to be a thief. Caught gory-handed in a steal, bid fair to come to grief.
So he summoned his attorney, for he knew he'd find relief.
In a "lawyer in good standing."

The lawyer brought the case to trial with all precaution due. The judge discerned the clink of coin and smiled as if he knew.
The defendant must be innocent—you see his honor, too.
Was a "lawyer in good standing."

Plants as Supply Stores.

There are few plants that have not been utilized one way or another by mankind for food, paper, drugs or other purposes. Amongst many not so well known may be mentioned the Japanese wax tree, bearing bunches of fruit growing like grapes, which contain a species of wax used in making candles.

Another tree, found in the Pacific islands, and known as the candle-nut, yields a large quantity of oil, while the kernels are strung together on a stick and lighted as a candle. The fruit of the candle tree is between three and four feet in length, about an inch in diameter, and of a yellowish color. As they are seen hanging from the tree, they present the appearance of a number of wax candles, and are in such abundance as to give the idea of a chandler's shop. Some of these are grown in the Isle of Wight.

The telegraph plant, which grows in India, is a slender, erect shrub, so called because of some resemblance to signals in the motion of its trifoliate leaves—the two side ones rising and falling alternately for a time, and then resting for a period. Sometimes many of the leaves are in motion and sometimes only a few; the greatest activity being in the early morning, and not depending on the wind.—Montreal Herald.

A Prehistoric Cave Dwelling.

A prehistoric cave dwelling has recently been discovered near Winznau, on Lake Lucerne, in Switzerland. The entrance to this cavern has been blocked for ages by the accumulation of falling rocks and earth. Its existence being known, a party of antiquarians had the entrance passage into the cavern cleared of obstructions, and a grotto or series of caves, dating to the Stone period, was laid bare. A fine collection of stone implements, including knives, ax-heads and spears, gigantic shells rudely ornamented, evidently drinking vessels, and dishes was discovered. In one chamber of the cavern the explorers found the remains of the bones of many extinct animals; while one section of the cave, which is believed to have been the dwelling of an important family in the Stone age, had evidently served as a workshop for the stonecutters, for here were found many stones in the process of being shaped into implements.

Tree With Interesting History.

Secretary Hitchcock recently planted in the White House grounds an oak sapling grown from an acorn taken from a George Washington oak at St. Petersburg. The Russian oak was grown from an acorn taken from a tree planted by Washington. Some Russians who were visiting the United States gathered some acorns from the Washington oak at Mount Vernon, an immense tree near the general's house, planted then in St. Petersburg, and they are now among the most splendid trees of the avenues of the Russian capital. When Secretary Hitchcock was minister to Russia, he brought home some of the acorns from these trees and planted them at his home in Missouri. It is one of the resulting saplings that he brought to Washington.

Trout That Need Ice Water.

Golden trout from an icy stream 7,000 feet up the wild sides of Mt. Whitney were one of the attractions of a fish and game show in San Francisco, says Forest and Stream. The fish were caught in Whitney creek by R. W. Requa.
With two assistants he started up the towering mountain. One of his companions turned back when a blinding snowstorm came on, but the other two proceeded.
Requa got about three dozen of the trout, which were brought down in a bucket of water and ice. Plenty of ice was kept in the tank in which the fish were shipped, and a large chunk of it floated in the water in which they lived at the pavilion.

Dwarf of the Ox Family.

One of the greatest curiosities among the domesticated animals of Ceylon is a breed of cattle known to the zoologist as the "sacred running oxen."
They are dwarfs of the whole ox family, the largest specimens of the species never exceeding 30 inches in height.—Lahore Tribune.

SET THE BURGLAR RIGHT.

Squire Was Angered at Dullness of the Intruder.

This is one of the many stories told of old Squire Latham, a Plymouth county attorney of some years back. It fully illustrates his coolness and love of method.

He was awakened one night by his wife, who told him she thought there were burglars in the house. The squire put on his dressing gown and went downstairs. In the back hall he found a rough looking man trying to open a door that led into the back yard.

The burglar had unlocked the door, and was pulling it with all his might. The squire, seeing the robber's predicament, called to him: "It don't open that way, you idiot! It slides back!"—Boston Herald.

Crab Traps a Sparrow.

On the sands near Marse-by-the-Sea, Yorkshire, England, a crab was seen running along the beach with a sparrow in his claws. The crab had caught the bird by the leg, and so much was it struggling to get free that once it lifted the crab several inches off the ground. The crab eventually let the bird go, and ran off.

It Pays to Read Newspapers.

Cox, Wis., June 12.—Frank M. Russell of this place had Kidney Disease so bad that he could not walk. He tried doctors' treatment and many different remedies, but was getting worse. He was very low.

He read in a newspaper how Dodd's Kidney Pills were curing cases of Kidney Trouble, Bright's Disease and Rheumatism, and thought he would try them. He took two boxes, and now he is quite well. He says:
"I can now work all day, and don't feel tired. Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills, I couldn't walk across the floor."
Mr. Russell's is the most wonderful case ever known in Chippewa county. This new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—is making some miraculous cures in Wisconsin.

Some Famous Sayings.

From Dryden comes "through thick and thin" and "none but the brave deserve the fair." Nathaniel Lee, an English dramatist of the seventeenth century, wrote "when Greeks joined Greeks, then was a tug-of-war"—our modern "a case of Greek meet Greek." Shakespeare, of course, has showered the moderns with household phrases. Matthew Prior of the seventeenth century passed down to us "of two evils I have chosen the least"; Byron gives us "as clear as a whistle"; Goldsmith, "ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs"; and Cowper "not much the worse for wear." "Selling a bargain" and "fast and loose" comes from "Love's Labor Lost," and Pope's prologue to "Satires" gives "go snacks." "As good as a play" originated with King Charles when in parliament attending the discussion of a divorce bill, and Cowper exclaimed, "God made the country and man made the town."

Announces the Speaker.

There is a curious little clicking instrument in the smoking room and libraries of the British house of commons called the "annunciator" because it announces the name of the member who is addressing the chamber. The instruments are worked by some electric arrangements and the name of the member speaking is put on from the press gallery.

Two-Legged Dog.

The curiosities of Vienna include a small dog, which, having been born without front legs, has learned to walk about on its hind legs.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF TO-DAY

The opportunity for the man with little means is probably better to-day in the prairie states of the South-west than ever before in the history of the nation. To be sure, there is not the vast open choice of land for the homesteads that existed in the '70s. The lands then taken up under Government laws are now prosperous farms and ranches. There is no more land to develop in the country. In the Southwest, Indian Territory, Oklahoma and Texas, are vast areas of unimproved land not yet producing the crops of which it is capable. Practically the same thing is true of the towns. Few lines of business are adequately represented. There are openings of all sorts for wide-awake men. Are you one? If you are interested, tell us what you want, how much you have to invest, and we will gladly furnish the information. Write for a copy of our paper, "The Coming Country." It's free. THREE YEARS AFTER.

Eugene E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver, Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1899, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. Doan's Kidney Pills absolutely stopped my backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since."

The Earliest Newspaper.

The first daily newspaper was a manuscript letter written by salaried correspondents and forwarded by them every twenty-four hours from London to the provinces. That was in the days of the early Stuarts. During the Commonwealth these London letters were printed in type and circulated in large numbers. Even so long ago as 1680 the law of libel was such as to be characterized by Judge Scroggs as making any newspaper publication illegal and tending to provoke a breach of the peace.

TWO OPEN LETTERS

IMPORTANT TO MARRIED WOMEN

Mrs. Mary Dimmick of Washington tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well.

It is with great pleasure we publish the following letters, as they convincingly prove the claim we have so many times made in our columns that Mrs.

Mrs. Mary Dimmick

Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., is fully qualified to give helpful advice to sick women. Read Mrs. Dimmick's letters.

Her first letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I have been a sufferer for the past eight years with a trouble which first originated from a painful menstruation—the pains were excruciating, with inflammation and ulceration of the womb. The doctor says I must have an operation or I cannot live. I do not want to submit to an operation if I can possibly avoid it. Please help me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, Washington, D. C.

Her second letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"You will remember my condition when I last wrote you, and that the doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I received your kind letter and followed your advice very carefully and am now entirely well. As my case was so serious it seems a miracle that I am cured. I know that I owe not only my health but my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to your advice. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I wish every suffering woman would read this letter and realize what you can do for them."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 50th and East Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

How easy it was for Mrs. Dimmick to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and how little it cost her—a two-cent stamp. Yet how valuable was the reply! As Mrs. Dimmick says—it saved her life.

Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of just such letters as the above, and offers assisting women helpful advice.

New York Street Specialists.

There are specialists of various sorts among the New York street merchants, men who sell collar buttons, men who sell shoe laces, and so on, but as odd a specialist as any is the man who sells small boys' "knee pants." He displays his wares in a basket on the edge of a downtown thoroughfare that leads to a big market, and relies for his trade on mothers passing that way to do the family marketing.

Olive Oil and Bruises.

In the treatment of contusions where there is extensive discoloration of the skin, if olive oil be freely applied without rubbing the discoloration quickly will disappear. If the skin be broken, a little boric acid should be applied over the abrasion. A black eye thus treated can be rendered normal in a few hours, especially if the oil be applied warm.—New York Telegram.

NAMES BEST DOCTOR

MR. BAYSSON PUBLISHES RESULTS OF VALUABLE EXPERIENCE.

A Former Pronounced Dyspeptic He Now Rejoices in Perfect Freedom from Miseries of Indigestion.

Thousands of sufferers know that the reason why they are irritable and depressed and nervous and sleepless is because their food does not digest, but how to get rid of the difficulty is the puzzling question.

Good digestion calls for strong digestive organs, and strength comes from a supply of good rich blood. For this reason Mr. Baysson took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the cure of indigestion. "They have been my best doctor," he says. "I was suffering from dyspepsia. The pains in my stomach after meals were almost unbearable. My sleep was very irregular and my complexion was sallow. As the result of using eight boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, about the merits of which I learned from friends in France, I have escaped all these troubles, and am able again to take pleasure in eating."

A very simple story, but if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills it might have been a tragic one. When discomfort begins with eating, fills up the intervals between meals with pain, and prevents sleep at night, there certainly cannot be much pleasure in living. A final general breaking down must be merely a question of time.

Mr. Joseph Baysson is a native of Aix-les-Bains, France, but now resides at No. 2439 Larkin street, San Francisco, Cal. He is one of a great number who can testify to the remarkable efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the treatment of obstinate disorders of the stomach. If you would get rid of nausea, pain or burning in the stomach, vertigo, nervousness, insomnia, or any of the other miseries of a dyspeptic, get rid of the weakness of the digestive organs by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are sold by druggists everywhere.

Proper diet is, of course, a great aid in forwarding recovery once begun, and a little book, "What to Eat and How to Eat," may be obtained by any one who makes a request for it by writing to the Dr. Williams Medical Co., Schenectady, N. Y.—This valuable diet book contains an important chapter on the simplest means for the cure of constipation.

CHAPTER VI.

The Forged Check.
Lang, after leaving Regan, wended his way to the residence of Jim Denver.

Being admitted, not a word was spoken until the twin were safe from eavesdroppers in the detective's private sleeping apartments.

"Well?" queried Denver, taking a seat upon the edge of the bed, preparing himself to listen to Lang's story.

"I have made my boast," said Louis, flushed with excitement now that the time for real action had arrived, "that I could rob a bank in the morning. How am I to do it?"

"Forgery! my boy, forgery!" cried the detective, slapping Lang on the back. "You have the nerve to pass a forged check—a forged check that is not forged?"

"I am at a loss to understand you as yet."

"It is easy enough," was Denver's reply, seating himself at his writing desk and filling out a check from his book. "You arrive at my office in the morning, timing yourself so that you are there while Regan is in my room. I will then fill out a check for you in this manner," showing his protegee a check for ten dollars, made out in his usual open, sprawling style.

"An expert penman could easily raise this check if he wanted to," continued Denver, writing another check, "and make it look like this new one," showing him a check for ten thousand dollars. "What's to hinder you from keeping this check for the ten thousand dollars? Nothing! I have the money in the bank, and the bank people will cash it if presented. In the morning after receiving your check for ten dollars, you show it to Jack and make some remark about raising it. Then you go to your room and make a bluff at writing and scatter a few scraps around the floor. When you are ready, pass the large check. It will appear like a forgery to Golden and Regan, at least, whether I honor the check or not."

"Then you are perfectly willing to trust me with ten thousand dollars of your money?" asked Louis rather proudly.

"I am satisfied to risk this sum of money to find out where the stronghold of these villains is. Knowing what you are going to do to-morrow, I can disguise myself and keep you and the party in sight, up to the very gates of the city we are looking for."

"I am glad to hear you say you will keep in sight," said Louis, "for I confess that I am a little bit shaky in regard to the outcome of the matter."

"I, too, am sad to-night for some reason or other," said Denver, laying his hands rather tenderly upon Louis' shoulders. "It seems to me as if we are to part for a long time—I hope it is not forever! I have become attached to you, and would be sorry indeed if I were leading you to your death or even disgrace."

"I believe in your friendship for me," replied Lang, as he grasped the patron's hand. "I am a better man, mentally, morally and physically for the knowing of you, and whatever befalls me, you can rest assured that it will be through no neglect of duty on your part."

"You won't be alone in your undertaking," said Jim, as if reassuring himself. "I have succeeded in interesting the general government in this matter—and when you need help you will get it. Be true to yourself and providence will protect you. But let the thought of sudden death be ever before you, you will court it in many ways. Weigh well every word and every action. I can say no more!" It was their farewell.

Regan was in the general office of the detective agency with Denver when Lang called in the morning. He saw Louis draw Denver into conversation, while slyly stealing a blank check from the open bank book lying on Denver's table, and saw Louis receive a check from Jim presumably for ten dollars.

Regan followed Lang into the hall. "What are you going to do with that check?" Regan asked.

"Cash it," answered Lang.

"I mean the blank one you stole." "I understand you; and I repeat, I will cash it."

"For how much?" Regan asked. "Ten thousand plunks," whispered Lang.

"I'll bet you a hundred you don't." "You're betting on the wrong horse unless you mean to betray me?"

"Have no fear of me," Regan interposed. "I don't forget my compact of last night; anything you can get out of Denver will be peaches and cream to me. I hate the man!"

"I'll take your bet, Jack; I'll need your hundred; you'll be my meat." There was no time for hesitancy now.

"It's a go, then?" "Sure! I'm going to my room now and shall either raise this old one or write a new one." Then as a parting bluff: "Come on down to my room with me and see me turn the trick."

"I can't," replied the detective. "I must be on the lookout for G—." You can show me the check, or the money if you get it."

"Oh, I'll get it, you needn't be alarmed. I haven't been practicing on his signature for a year for nothing," cried Louis.

A short hour afterward, that is, about twelve o'clock, Louis presented a check to the cashier of the Madison bank. It was for ten thousand dollars.

The following conversation took place: A short hour afterwards, that is, about twelve o'clock, Louis presented a check to the cashier of the Madison bank. It was for ten thousand dollars.

"Rather a large sum of money?" queried the cashier, as he carefully scrutinized the paper. "How will you have it, a transfer to your account, or currency?"

"You may give me bills of large denomination," said Louis, composedly.

"It is an unusually large sum of money to pay out on a check to a comparative stranger—to any one but the owner of the money." The cashier was satisfied of the genuineness of the note, but was sparing for time, not feeling like taking upon his shoulders the responsibility of the possibility of mistake. Finally he made a peculiar signal. "You will excuse me a moment," he said, "and you may as well step into the private office."

Lang looked around. When he came in every door was open, and there was not a janitor nor uniformed officer in sight outside the railings. Now, as if by magic, all the outside doors were closed, and a man whom Louis took to be a janitor, but who was a detective, was making a bluff at dusting off the windowsills and picking up stray papers from the floor. Looking through the glass door leading into the street, Louis saw a policeman standing in rather an unusual position, with one hand grasping tightly his club, while the other was hid beneath his coat tails.

The bank president was seated at his desk. "Mr. Smith, I believe?" he asked pleasantly. "That's my name," answered Lang. "You are, or appear to be, in Mr. Denver's confidence."

"Lam."

"May I ask why Mr. Denver does not draw this check himself?" "He is not at liberty to-day."

"Is it important that you receive it immediately?"

"It is, and in money, not a check."

"Did Mr. Denver hint anything to you about the possibility of your being unable to draw that sum of money?"

"I am in no mood for parleying; why do you wish to converse with me?"

"Simply to keep you busy pending the arrival of Mr. Denver," said the president after a slight pause.

Louis colored up. Here was a new complication whether Denver was true or not. Had Denver prepared for this emergency? "You will not be able to find Mr. Denver," replied Louis with as much a show of calmness as he could command.

"That remains to be seen."

The conversation lagged. The banker grew restless. Louis fidgeted rather uneasily in his chair; but grew calmer as the moments dragged, and finally became the calmer of the two. The cashier returned, holding in his hands a stack of greenbacks. Louis rose up to receive it from him.

"You have concluded to cash the check?" he asked with a sigh of relief.

"The president intercepted the package. 'I have decided not to cash it,' he said rather bluntly.

"Why?" demanded Lang, resolved to force the issue.

"The check is a forgery!"

"All is lost!" thought Lang, but he did not flinch from the ordeal. "What makes you think so?" he asked while he tried to smile.

The banker hesitated; Lang noticed it. "You are overstepping your bounds!" he exclaimed. "And I shall sue you for any damage that may result from my not getting this money when I need it!"

"You can go any time you want to," added the president harshly, "I am not detaining you, and you should thank your lucky stars that I am so lenient with you."

"Very well," said Lang, a heavy feeling at his heart, realizing that he had lost his game. "You mean that you are not willing to run the risk of arresting me? However we'll let that go. Give me the check."

"We cannot do that," said the banker decidedly.

"By what right do you presume to keep both the draft and the money? You go too far. If you retain the draft, what evidence have I that you will not swear that I have received the money? You have no right to expect me to trust you, if you do not trust me, and you must either arrest me as a forger or pay me the money."

"We are recognized as responsible agents," responded the banker, attempting to appease Lang. "And have a right to protect ourselves as well as Mr. Denver."

"I shall remain here until I receive either one thing or the other," said Lang firmly. He seated himself very coolly in the chair he had vacated upon the arrival of the cashier with the money.

The president cast an inquiring glance toward the cashier; the cashier returned his superior's look, and then both gazed intently at Lang. The young man had stood their test admirably; they were convinced of the genuineness of the note, yet were loath to cash it. While the officers were debating as to the policy of turning over the money, a rap was given upon the door, and the "janitor" entered.

"Detective Regan on the outside sir. Shall I admit him?"

(To be continued.)

DEBUT OF TINY HEIRESS.

She Was Flower Girl at a Fashionable Church Wedding.

Little Katherine Mackay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, arrayed in a dainty frock composed of lace which was said by the women present to be worth $70 a yard and carrying a big basket of pink sweet-peas, made what may be ascribed as her first appearance in public—recently by acting as flower girl, along with the equally diminutive and similarly attired Kate Haven, at the wedding of Miss Marian Haven to Forsyth Wickes at St. Bartholomew's, says the New York American.

Miss Mackay's dress was of cream chiffon, with a finely cut yoke. On the shoulders were small capes of rose point, falling over short, puff sleeves, finished with a ruffle of lace. The belt was of lace and the skirt made with groups of fine tucks and had a ruffle of lace.

A large bow of white embroidered and lace-trimmed sash ribbon was fastened at the back of the belt; small white sandals were worn with white silk stockings. Instead of gloves, she wore white silk mittens.

Whisky as Is Whisky.

A man in Cincinnati bought a barrel of whisky thirty-five years ago and kept it in a third-story dry room, well ventilated, and in all the intervening period used only one pint for testing. There remain to-day only one and four-fifths gallon of the original thirty-four, the rest being lost through evaporation. A celebrated physician says: "One small drink of this whisky contains more electricity and rejuvenating properties than any medicine that can be prescribed."—As to quality, connoisseurs agree that this whisky, considering its pure distillation and great age, is the finest in the world, and that no King or Emperor, the Rothschilds, Morgans, Vanderbilts, Astors, Carnegies, Beits or Clarks, with all their enormous wealth placing at their will all the luxuries of the world, can command such a careful estimate of the cost of storage and a computation of interest and insurance for thirty-five years prove the cost of this whisky at the present time to be $489.01 a gallon.

Large and Roomy.

A violent windstorm which traveled over Berks county some time back saw fit to take with it an old shed wherein a certain blacksmith was wont to ply his trade. The blacksmith's determination to continue business in the open, pending the construction of a new building, caused not a little amusement among the neighboring farmers. One of these, driving along a day or two later, saw limping toward him a horse, led by a disconsolate looking individual, who, on drawing near, explained:

"My horse has lost a shoe. Can you tell me where I can find a blacksmith shop?"

"You are in the shop now," replied the other, facetiously, "but the anvil is about two miles down the road."—Philadelphia Ledger.

FANS BROUGHT FROM ITALY.

English Traveler of 1808 Describes Them as Curiosities.

The following description of fans by Thomas Coryat goes to prove that paper fans were not used in England at the time of his tour (1608), and that we borrowed them as well as forks from the Italians.

"Here I will mention a thing, that although perhaps it will seem but frivolous to divers readers that have already travelled in Italy, yet because unto many that neither have been there, nor ever intend to go thither while they live, it will be a mere novelty, I will not let it pass unmentioned. "The first Italian fannes that I saw in Italy did I observe in this space betwixt Plazhington and Cremona; but afterwards I observed them common in most places of Italy where I travelled.

"These fannes both men and women of the country doe carry, to-coole themselves withall in the time of heat, by the often fanning of their faces. Most of them are very elegant and pretty things.

"For whereas the faune consisteth of a painted piece of paper and a little wooden handle; the paper, which is fastened into the top, is on both sides most curiously adorned with excellent pictures, having some witty Italian verses or fine emblems written under them; or of some notable Italian city, with a briefe description thereof added thereunto."—Exchange.

Play With Large Cast.

Chilliwack, a little town on the Fraser river, holds the curious record of having performed a play in which no fewer than 2,000 individuals took part. All the characters were red men.

San Francisco's Destiny.

Statistics derived from the highest possible authorities are sufficient to establish the claim of San Francisco that it is the financial New York of the Pacific coast. They also point clearly to the observing person the fact that much greater things are in store financially for San Francisco. Many prominent persons in all parts of the world believe that San Francisco is destined to become eventually one of the great money centers of the world. There are sufficient facts to make interesting, and possibly instructive, a consideration of the possibilities of the future in this direction.—David H. Walker in Sunset Magazine for June.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

THE ORIGINAL. Foley & Co., Chicago, originated Honey and Tar as a throat and lung remedy, and on account of the great merit and popularity of Foley's Honey and Tar many imitations are offered for the genuine. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar and refuse any substitute offered as no other preparation will give the same satisfaction. It is mildly laxative. It contains no opiates and is safest for children and delicate persons. Sold by L. C. Madison.

The play, "A Burglar's Sweetheart" that was to have appeared at Cameron's Hall last Thursday night struck rocks at Thompsonville and according to the best obtainable authority skipped its lower peninsula dates and made tracks for the Soo. We should very much like to see the Burglar's Sweetheart and listen to her melodious voice and the jingle of her coin. We have a nice red ticket guaranteed to admit two whenever she deigns to show herself at Central Lake, and we want to use it. We also have a beautiful assortment of theatrical stationery printed in flamboyant colors by The Torch, that we will sell at a sacrifice to anyone wishing to enter the barn-storming arena. So if any of you fellows see anything of the Sweetheart's Burglar up the line, please tell him from us that we're still doing business at the old stand.—Central Lake Torch.

Everything you eat will taste good and do good if you take Ring's Dyspepsia Tablets. Sold by Warne's pharmacy.

A PROMINENT TRAINMAN. The many friends of G. H. Hausan, Engineer L. E. & W. R. R., at present living in Lima, O., will be pleased to know of his recovery from threatened kidney disease. He says: "I was cured by using Foley's Kidney Cure, which I recommend to all, especially to trainmen, who are usually similarly afflicted." Sold by L. C. Madison.

RANCH FOOD FOR STOCK

If your stock is not doing just as well as you would like, there is no doubtably a cause which can be easily remedied by RANCH FOOD. There is no season of the year when the condition of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs can not be improved by a tonic like RANCH FOOD, which tones up the animal system throughout, cleanses the blood and prevents disease. RANCH FOOD is almost infallible for the cure of the general diseases of domestic animals, including Distemper and Pinkeye in horses, Indigestion in cattle, Catarrhal Troubles in sheep and Hog Cholera. RANCH FOOD is not like the common stock food on the market; it is made from roots, herbs and seeds and is nature's own product scientifically compounded.

"RANCH FOOD is superior to a general conditioner and grain sizer to anything I have ever used."—Ed. S. Gray, Sidney, Ohio.

NERVOUS DEBILITY CURED

Excesses and indiscretions are the cause of more sorrow and suffering than all other diseases combined. We see the victims of vicious habits on every hand; the sallow, pimpled face, dark circled eyes, stooping form, stunted development, bashful, meek, nervous countenance and timid, hesitating pronouncement to all the world his folly; and tend to blight his existence. Our treatment positively cures all weak men by overcoming and removing the effects of former indiscretions and excesses. It stops all losses and drains and quickly restores the patient to what nature intended—a healthy and happy man with physical, mental and nerve powers complete.

For over 25 years Drs. K. & K. have treated with the greatest success all diseases of men and women. If you have any secret disease that is a worry and a menace to your health consult our established physicians who do not have to experiment on you.

We guarantee to cure Nervous Debility, Blood Diseases, Stricture, Varicocele, Kidney and Bladder Diseases. Consultation Free. If unable to call, write for a Question Blank for Home Treatment.

DRS. KENNEDY & KERGAN, 148 Shelby Street, Detroit, Mich.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

Passed Stone and Gravel With Excruciating Pains. A. H. Thurnes, Mgr. Wills Creek Coal Co., Buffalo, O., writes: "I have been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for years, passing gravel or stones with excruciating pains. Other medicines only gave relief. After taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE the result was surprising. A few doses started the brick dust, like fine stones, etc., and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has done me $1,000 worth of good."

No Other Remedy Can Compare With It. Thos. W. Carter, of Ashboro, N. C., had Kidney Trouble and one bottle of FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE effected a perfect cure, and he says there is no remedy that will compare with it.
