S. D. A. Conference

Now In Session On the West Side.

During the past week the Adventist camp ground has been a busy place. About twenty of the ministers and workers, with some of their families, have been preparing the camp and the meetings which have now begun are full of interest. Delegates to the Conference and other campers are daily arriving and filling up the family tents.

The large pavilion is seated in a unique way and is attractively decorated with evergreens and vines.

Everything about the grounds and tents are neat and orderly, and situated as it is in sight of the lake it makes a charming spot for a gospel meeting. Several large tents are pitched on the grounds where daily services are held for youth and children.

A hygienic dining tent will be conducted during the meeting where good meals can be had at a reasonable rate.

There will also be a book stand with a full line of Bibles and choice religious literature. A line of health foods manufactured by the Adventists will also be on sale.

A number of prominent speakers will attend including Elders Allen Moore and W. D. Curtis of Indianapolis, Ind.; Elder N. W. Kauble, president of Berrien Springs Colleg.; Elder E. K. Sjåde of Lansing; Elder Luther Warren of Chicago; and Elder F. C. Gilbert, the converted Jew of Boston; besides ministers from all parts of the north.

Services for the public are held daily at 11:00 a. m., 3:00 o'clock and 7:30 p. m. standard time. A reception tent is located on the grounds where visitors and strangers can rest and all will be made to feel that they are welcome.

One of the pleasing features of the meetings are the song services in charge of Professor Spaulding.

Subjects of more than usual interest are promised, many of which will be illustrated by charts.

It is a cardinal belief of the Adventists that Christ is coming in this generation and that a warning message is now going to the world to prepare men and women for that great event similar to the message of Noah before the flood. While they do not believe in setting the day or hour, they claim that certain signs predicted by our Saviour and the Bible writers clearly indicate that his coming is near at hand.

They now have organized conferences covering nearly all the United States and Canada and large portions of Europe, Great Britain, South Africa, parts of South America, Australia and New Zealand, besides missionaries in nearly all parts of the world including many islands of the sea.

Healthful living and christian temperance is a prominent feature of the Adventist faith, and many of their missionaries minister to the bodies as well as the souls of men.

The people of East Jordan and vicinity are given a cordial invitation to attend the services held during the camp meeting.

Three Attractions

At Loveday Opera House, Beginning Tonight.

Three excellent entertainments are offered theatre-goers at the Opera House this Saturday evening, next Monday evening, and Thursday evening. They represent a variety and each is at the head of its class.

The Polamtier Sisters.

Above Concert Company appears here this Saturday evening under auspices of the East Jordan Military Band. They come highly recommended and lovers of good music will miss a treat if they fail to attend.

The Armorette of L. T., in speaking of the concert there, says: "The Polamtier Sisters appeared at the opera house last night under auspices of the local lodge of Elks. To properly describe the playing of the Polamtier Sisters would be a heavy task. Suffice it to say that the Orchestra is the best that has ever appeared here, and that is saying a good deal. The Company at once charms its audience with its overtures, waltzes, and other selections. * * * Whether one is musically inclined or not the performance of the company will be greatly enjoyed for its superiority. Those who attended the entertainment came away well pleased and the Elks are to be congratulated for bringing the company here." Seats are now on sale at Wiesman's.

"Her Only Sin"

With Julia Gray in the leading role needs no introduction to an East Jordan audience for those who witnessed its production here a year ago are a unit in saying it was one of the best ever presented in our city.

It is a play at once intense and quaint, in which comedy and tragedy intertwine, in which the joy of living lightens the gloom of sordid events, and the supreme power of love declares the ultimate triumph. It has been called another "East Lynne," but it is more than that. It is more refined in tone and literary in execution. No scarlet woman intrudes her unwelcome presence, nor suggestive scene mars the unfolding of its plot. While serious situations and thrilling import sway its climaxes, its final denouement is effected amid bright sunshine and mellow laughter.

Seats are now on sale for above Labor Day attraction at Boosingers'.

"Hans & Nix," Thursday.

(Below article is clipped from the Lancaster, Pa., Daily Era of July 26th.)

That local theatre-goers wanted a change of summer amusement was evidenced at Rocky Springs on Monday evening, when the largest first-night audience of the season witnessed Mathews and Walters' production of "Hans and Nix." The piece is a farce comedy, with a plot that really exists, containing seventeen musical numbers. The greater portion of the music was written by Howard Webster, and the composer has demonstrated that he thoroughly understands his business. The book tells of a couple of Germans who propose to have a good time at a summer hotel in a prohibition town, not letting their wives into the secret. Two attractive footlight favorites, however, are brought into the affair, but the wives of "Hans" and "Nix" tumble to the game and follow their spouses, accompanied by a detective. Complications of an amusing nature arise, but eventually everything is cleared up satisfactorily, and the piece concludes as all well-behaved comedies should.

The company is an exceptionally strong singing aggregation, every member of which did their best to insure a perfect performance. The major portion of the honor belongs to Dixon and Fields, who, in the title parts, manage to dislocate the English language in a manner that was really very funny.

Throughout the entire performance the ladies of the company, of whom there is a goodly number, were much in evidence. They sang well, danced gracefully, and, as nature has supplied them plentifully with good looks, they were altogether pleasing.

Next Thursday night at Loveday Opera House.

The Charlevoix County Battalion will meet at East Jordan Sept. 24th.

Labor Reigns

Every Heart-Ache

Every pain in the breast, difficult breathing, palpitation, fluttering or dizzy spell means that your heart is straining itself in its effort to keep in motion. This is dangerous. Some sudden strain from over-exertion or excitement will completely exhaust the nerves, or rupture the walls or arteries of the heart, and it will stop.

Relieve this terrible strain at once with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. It invigorates and strengthens the heart nerves and muscles, stimulates the heart action, and relieves the pain and misery. Take no chances; make your heart strong and vigorous with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I suffered terribly with heart disease. I have been treated by different physicians for my trouble without result. I went to a physician in Memphis, who claimed that I had dropsy of the heart. He put the X-ray on me, and in connection with his medicine he gave me a little X-ray of me. Some time before this a Mr. Young of St. Louis was in our town. He saw my condition and recommended Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to me. I gave it little attention until my return from Memphis, when I concluded to try it and am pleased to say three bottles cured me."

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

CONDUCTED BY M. J. WRAGG

Mr. Wragg invites contributions of any new ideas that readers of this department may wish to present...

EARLY CUT HAY.

You paid out a lot of money the last winter for grain in order that the cows might give more milk. When you went to the miller your only excuse for so doing, though you may never have thought about it, was to get digestible protein.

Don't wait until your grass is all ripe before you begin cutting. Get the bulk of it just as it is coming into bloom. It will be more work, and the first crop may not be quite so large, but you will have something that has milk in it when you get that kind of hay in the barn.

You are raising some oats for feed. Do not wait until they are almost ripe enough for threshing; you will never get much of the grain when the cow can make use of it.

Better not wait until the corn is ready to cut. Have it all done before August 1. If you have been in the habit of starting your haying after the Fourth of July suppose this year you get the most of it in the barn before that date.

The extent to which mules are bred in the south is illustrated by the relative numbers of mules and horses respectively. In the state of Missouri the value of the horses in that state is estimated at $42,000,000.

The value of mules in that state is estimated at $16,500,000. The value of mules therefore in Missouri is more than one-third the value of all the horses in that state.

The agricultural press not infrequently refers to clover soils in this country as being "clover sick." The term "clover sick" is apt to be misleading.

The value of the mule in the United States is likely to increase continually. In no other country in the world are mules bred to anything like the same extent as with us.

EAT MORE FRUIT.

If people ate more fruit they would take less medicine and have much better health. There is an old saying that fruit is gold in the morning and lead at night.

It never pays to make a scavenger out of the milk cow. She should be treated as the lady boarder who pays a fancy price for her board.

The time for harvesting potatoes is indicated by the dying of the vines. The ripening process in the tubers goes on up to this time, and it is therefore not wise to attempt to harvest before that time.

The consumption of food for heat is increased with the increasing size of the body. More internal work must also be performed to add increase to a large animal than to a small one.

The aerator is the coming dairy utensil. Cannot afford it? How many cans of milk spoiled through the heat of some July night would it take to pay for the aerator?

Calves being raised on skim milk should be fed ground feed, not in the milk, but dry, so that it will be mixed with the saliva.

Tell those fellows who are quarreling over whether to have the cow's teats wet or dry while milking that if they would try greasing them with a little fresh lard in winter, or tallow in summer, they would milk with neither wet nor dry teats, but greased, and the cow's teats would not be warty or sore, either.

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture names the standards approved, to be embodied in a bill to be passed by the several states, as follows:

The standard of milk is fixed at no less than 12 per cent of total solids, no less than 8 1/2 per cent of solids, and no less than 3 1/4 per cent of milk fat.

"Butter is defined and this statement added: By acts of congress approved August 2, 1886, and May 9, 1902, butter may also contain additional coloring matter."

While Cheviot sheep are making fairly good progress in the United States they do not seem to have been introduced as yet in large numbers on the ranges of the West.

GETTING A STAND OF CLOVER.

Although the principal object of growing clover is to increase the nitrogen of the soil, land should be seeded to clover for this purpose long before it approaches a condition of actual poverty.

Suitable preparation of the seed bed is of almost equal importance with humus. The most common practice is to seed clover after grain in ordinary cultivated fields, but the plan only succeeds well on comparatively new land, rich, mellow and crumbly.

Ordinary grain fields are rather unfit for the tiny clover seeds. Unless these are scattered on a smooth, well-pulverized surface, many will fall to lodge at a depth permitting germination, and many will be covered too deeply.

Cypress at Chepultepec Assigned That Enormous Age. The distinction of being the oldest living thing undoubtedly belongs to one of the giant trees, and many attempts to locate it and determine its age have been made.

The flogging horse is one of the ancient grammar school customs of England. Garrick, Addison and Johnson were flogged on this.

THIRD OF ITS KIND.

King Richard III Edition of 1605 Found in England. In a little Buckinghamshire village has been found a copy of the 1605 quarto edition of "The Tragedie of King Richard the Third," newly augmented by William Shakespeare.

There are only forty-six leaves of it, yet probably they are each worth something like $70. For this edition is one of the rarest of the Shakespeare editions.

There is one copy in the British Museum and one in the Bodleian library, but those are the only others known to be extant; and this particular copy is the more interesting in that it bears in five places the autograph of William Penn, an admiral in the British navy, and father of the man who founded Pennsylvania.

And another interesting find in an old house recently was a copy of the 1605 quarto of "The True Chronicle History of King Lear," on which Shakespeare three years later founded his story of Lear and the three daughters.—London King.

An Infant Prodigy. Even Ireland has its prodigy. Particulars of a wonderful infant's accomplishments are given with all reserve in The Tatler. Three and a half years old, a Kinnegad boy reads the newspaper, sings about fifty comic songs, and dances a sailor's hornpipe in a regulation Jack Tar suit.

It is astonishing to what extent the idea prevails that the use of stimulants in the food of poultry is beneficial.

Although the principal object of growing clover is to increase the nitrogen of the soil, land should be seeded to clover for this purpose long before it approaches a condition of actual poverty.

Suitable preparation of the seed bed is of almost equal importance with humus. The most common practice is to seed clover after grain in ordinary cultivated fields, but the plan only succeeds well on comparatively new land, rich, mellow and crumbly.

Ordinary grain fields are rather unfit for the tiny clover seeds. Unless these are scattered on a smooth, well-pulverized surface, many will fall to lodge at a depth permitting germination, and many will be covered too deeply.

The aerator is the coming dairy utensil. Cannot afford it? How many cans of milk spoiled through the heat of some July night would it take to pay for the aerator?

Calves being raised on skim milk should be fed ground feed, not in the milk, but dry, so that it will be mixed with the saliva.

Tell those fellows who are quarreling over whether to have the cow's teats wet or dry while milking that if they would try greasing them with a little fresh lard in winter, or tallow in summer, they would milk with neither wet nor dry teats, but greased, and the cow's teats would not be warty or sore, either.

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture names the standards approved, to be embodied in a bill to be passed by the several states, as follows:

The standard of milk is fixed at no less than 12 per cent of total solids, no less than 8 1/2 per cent of solids, and no less than 3 1/4 per cent of milk fat.

"Butter is defined and this statement added: By acts of congress approved August 2, 1886, and May 9, 1902, butter may also contain additional coloring matter."

While Cheviot sheep are making fairly good progress in the United States they do not seem to have been introduced as yet in large numbers on the ranges of the West.

The Mosquito

He comes, a slinger in the night—
A thing of terror, yet so small!
'Tis useless to attempt to fight.
And all in vain for help you call.
He seems so slight a thing as wealth.
When his dread visits make you wince;
His quest demands your rest and health.
Of graft he is the very prince.

He takes the public for his prey;
And not content with fattening,
He leaves before he goes away
Mementos that will smart and sting.
He has been caught. But oftener far
In safety he has fed and laughed,
To hear you curse your luckless star—
He is the very prince of graft!

THE JOURNEY'S END

BY R. B. SHELTON

(Copyright, 1925, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Yale had given an A. B. Heidelberg had made him a Ph. D. The World, the flesh and the devil had done the rest.

In the course of many wanderings and as many diverse experiences he had come to the province of Pan-Chau with a legend of a deserted gold mine of wonderful richness ringing in his ears and a parchment map very yellow and apparently of great age in the inside pocket of his khaki coat. But just outside Fu-Chang he encountered one of the many bands of highwaymen that infest the region. Being averse to trouble in any form, his two coolies had left him to face the music alone; and while they fled howling with terror he put up a single-handed but unavailing resistance, which, while it lasted, was a joy to his wild, reckless soul.

When darkness had fallen and there were only the great, silent stars to see, the two coolies came creeping back. They found him lying in the mud, his clothing torn, his face a mass of blood, and one arm broken where he had shielded his head from the blow of a cudgel. Near him lay two limp, silent figures, their yellow features livid and distorted.

The coolies held a whispered consultation. Then they lifted him between them and bore him down the slough, which was called a road, toward the distant lights of Fu-Chang. But first they rifed his clothes, and in an inner pocket they came across a map and a gold coin that the highwaymen had overlooked. The map, having no intrinsic value, they replaced.

They left him at the mission in Fu-Chang, and went their way, for the potentialities of that golden coin were strong upon them.

Another man would have died; but Robert Barlow had a grip on life that was almost uncanny. After weeks of unconsciousness, during which it seemed that each hour must be his last, he opened his eyes; slowly, painfully collected his wandering senses; then fell to roundly cursing the highwaymen for misbegotten vandals, and his coolies for equally misbegotten cowards. After which he sank back on the cool pillows utterly exhausted, and fell into a deep, refreshing sleep.

The old missionary smiled knowingly. "He will live," he said grimly, and he went to the kitchen to get some strengthening broth for his patient.

When Barlow awoke it was early evening. He could hear sandals clattering by on the uneven pavements of the street. The odor of some strange, sweet flower floated in through the open window. He stirred uneasily and sat up. He was quite alone in the room.

"I say, somebody," he called lustily. There was a sound of light foot-falls, the soft rustle of skirts. In the doorway was a gleam of white. He looked up to see a young woman standing there—such a woman as Barlow had not beheld for many months; the kind of a woman he had well-nigh forgotten existed in this world of disappointment and trouble. He felt his heart jump to his throat. The color crept into his sunburned face.

All these wasted years and nothing to show for it but the bitterness of his heart and an ancient yellow map. In his despair he caught the map from his pocket and tore it into small bits. Perhaps it was best after all, he reflected. He doubted his ability to remain silent had his assets been otherwise.

It was evening before he could trust himself to see her. He found her in the garden and went to her smiling bravely.

"I am going away to-night," said he. "I must somehow earn enough to repay the kindness that has been shown me here."

He saw her face pale a little. "You are not able to go yet," she said.

"I am better able now than I shall be later," he returned almost roughly. She looked up suddenly and saw he was trembling. His face was white.

"Don't—don't go," she urged. "Stay until you are stronger. Stay until—"

He drew himself up. "It means too much if I stay," said he.

"You must, anyway," she said in a low voice.

"Good God, child!" he burst out, "haven't I told you what I am?" She smiled up at him—a smile of perfect faith and perfect understanding.

"You have told me what you have been, not what you are," she said gently.

"Where am I?" Barlow asked. "This is the Fu-Chang Mission," said she.

"And you?" he inquired. "I am the daughter of Father Raymond, as they call him here."

"How long have I been here?" "Four weeks nearly," she said. "Two coolies bought you at night. They said you had been beaten by highwaymen on the Sheng-ti road. You mustn't talk yet," she went on as he was about to speak. "Shan't I read to you?"

Barlow nodded and closed his eyes.

"You have told me what you have been, not what you are," she said while she read him news from a London paper six weeks old.

He gained rapidly after that. In a week's time he was able to hobble about the mud-walled garden of the mission. The girl was with him constantly, reading to him on the little veranda, or singing to him in the soft glow of the September twilights.

Gradually he told her of his life—of his aimless wanderings, of his wasted opportunities. He neither softened his past nor excused it. There were many parts of it, of course, that he did not mention; but what he did tell her of it he told in a plain, straightforward way, with sometimes a note of wistful sadness in his voice. And she was always grave and sympathetic and eminently lovable.

So the days flew past—very happy days they were for Barlow, until there came a bitter night when he walked the narrow, crooked streets of Fu-Chang alone and had it out with himself. What was he that he should dare to love a woman like this? He cursed himself for a blind fool. That past of his own making rose before him like a grim gate, shutting him forever from paradise.

The gray morning light was breaking over the crooked, dirty streets of Fu-Chang when he returned to the mission and threw himself on his bed utterly exhausted; but sleep he could not, and after tossing restlessly for awhile, he arose and stood at the window, watching the sun creep up above the mud-walled huts.

With an inarticulate cry he sprang towards her, his face transformed by love and hope. The perfume of the garden came to him like a breath of Elysium fields. The bells of a distant temple were tinkling musically.

BOY OVERLOOKED A POINT Had Selected a Turtle Not Sufficiently Venerable

Speaking of the turtles that were recently found in Jersey, bearing dates of fifty and sixty years ago, recalls an incident that once occurred on the farm of the late Henry I. Deacon, a well-to-do and influential resident of the land beyond the Delaware.

A youngster, who was fond of roaming over the fine, well kept farm, found a turtle one day and it occurred to him to make it one of the ancient date.

Nothing short of the George Washington era would do. So, taking out his penknife the boy inscribed, "G. W. 1776," on the reptile's shell. The cutting, of course, looked very modern, but this was easily remedied by rubbing in it mud and polishing it on the grass.

This done to the satisfaction of the boy, rushed to the jolly-faced farmer, exclaiming:

"Look, Mr. Deacon, I just found a turtle more than 100 years old with George Washington's initials on the shell!"

"These has?" said Dr. Deacon, holding out his hand for the turtle.

"Yes, sir," returned the youngster with a very straight face.

The good old farmer glanced at the reptile just one second, and then burst into a merry laugh.

"Willie, thee darned fool," said he, "that turtle isn't half grown."—Philadelphia Record.

A Lounging Room. On the first floor of many houses there is an unnecessary little room, called through courtesy a den, a library or a reception room. As a matter of fact, it is without purpose, and I have never yet been able to understand why an architect should add this superfluous touch; but, since the room is there, it must be considered fittingly furnished. This little room can well be done in bamboo, suggests Vogue. Procure the kind of curtains that are used on piazzas to protect one from the sun and have the room covered in these with strips of bamboo partitioning off three-foot spaces and covering the seams; a strip of bamboo is also run at the top, close to the cove of the ceiling, and another finishes the matting at the bottom. High bookcases painted a deep cream stretch along the walls and natural color wicker furniture is effective in such a room. A square table, a lounging chair and a small high-backed settle comprise the furnishing. Very coarse mesh curtains are dyed a golden brown, and brown and yellow pottery in quaint shapes is placed on top of the bookcases—a box of flaming red geraniums are the one touch of vivid color in the room. On the table are the latest magazines and periodicals. The little room can thus be used as a rest lounge or waiting room.

A Tale of Horror. Not many years ago it took a baby boy to raise and bring him up as best I could in a strictly proper way.

I hired a homely girl as nurse. Who said her greatest joy would be to care for a non-existent baby. And service to the boy.

She said she'd had experience with baby boys and she assured me that for several years she'd bossed a nursery.

So in the guileless manner of an old bachelor confidence I left the baby boy to her. And ended my suspense.

But not for long; that evening when I came back home, the way was a household filled with dire dismay; and truly there was cause.

The baby boy was missing—lost; the nurse girl tore her hair, and like a loose detective she went searching everywhere.

The wretched creature said she'd bathed our darling, little Jimmy. But after that she didn't know what had become of him.

No baby boy; O, Rachel's grief! I rushed around in dread. The meantime using language which were better left unsaid.

At last I found the precious lamb. Down by the sink forlorn, Attired exactly as he was. The day that he was born.

CARE OF THE BODY

How to Acquire and Retain the Priceless Possession of Good Health

Summer Disorders of Infancy. The most common stomach disorder is known as acute gastric catarrh, acute indigestion, or acute dyspepsia—all three terms signifying the same disorder. The chief cause is irritation due to food, improper in quantity or quality, spoiling in the stomach.

This malady rarely occurs in infants fed on good breast milk, unless something occurs to upset the mother. Older children often have attacks from eating too much candy, unripe fruit, pastry and the like. In grown-up people this disorder is called a "bilious attack."

In bottle-fed infants, especially during the summer months, it is a very common complaint. The symptoms are loss of interest in play and surroundings, starting in the sleep, crying with colic pains, drawing up the legs on the abdomen, sharp, shrill cry, paleness around the mouth, blueness of the skin and cold feet; in severe cases, fever, nausea and vomiting of mucus and undigested food. When the food has been more than usually indigestible there are often convulsions and symptoms resembling those of inflammation of the brain and spinal cord.

The writer remembers well a typical case. A child of three years, after eating a number of windfall apples and drinking two cups of milk, was suddenly seized with convulsions, occurring every half hour or less, and remained unconscious for hours. Some effort had been made to empty the stomach by vomiting, but in vain. An emetic and tickling the throat with a feather brought up a mass of lumps of unripe apple and large, sour curds. This soon restored the little one to consciousness. A thorough enema and dose of castor oil freed the alimentary canal of the undigested food and poisons produced by it; but several days of fever followed, during which no food could be retained by the stomach, and even water was rejected for a time.

The best treatment in case of acute indigestion is to empty the alimentary tract at once by an emetic of warm water or the stomach lavage; a thorough enema and a mild cathartic to free the bowels. Stop all food at once, and do not try to put anything into the stomach until the vomiting ceases, unless it be ice-pills or sips of hot water.

The colic pains can often be relieved by fomentations. In the chill stage at the onset, a warm full bath or a warm sheet pack is good; and a hot mustard foot bath when the feet are cold. If there is diarrhea, hot enemata, followed by tepid or cool ones, are often very soothing. In cases of infants, especially bottle-fed babies, all milk should be kept out of the food for a time. During the first twenty-four to thirty-six hours, only pure cold water or ice should be given. After vomiting and purging ceases, the child may be fed a teaspoonful or two of white egg (the white of one egg mixed with four ounces of water or gruel). When the patient begins to convalesce, milk, modified and sterilized, may gradually be given.

Watch the effects of the change of food, as the stomach is likely to remain irritable for a long time, and relapses are common, which, in hot weather especially, may result in cholera infantum, or some other acute inflammatory disorder.

Tobacco. Since Jean Nicot discovered Nicotine, tobacco has had a hard name, but recent chemical investigators tell us the world has been on the wrong track for generations, and that nicotine has nothing to do with the tremors, the nervousness, and the other ills that afflict the habitual smoker.

The injurious property is, it seems, carbon monoxide gas, which is the very constituent that is dangerous in common water gas. The smoker should know, then, that in consuming one ounce of tobacco he produces one whole pint of carbon monoxide, which is a very fearsome thing. The cigarette, the object of excretion by all good men and women, especially women, produces very little of the monoxide, but if the practice of inhaling is followed, the deadly gas goes straight to the blood in the lungs, turns it pink and poisons it. The cigar is the great producer of the obnoxious gas, and would be more harmful than the pipe, were it not for the ordinary pipe's incurable filthiness.

Scientists are agreed that there is something bad about tobacco, whatever its name may be. Yet the sales are growing at so rapid a rate all over the world that the people seem to be rushing blindly to their own destruction, unmindful and regardless of their doom. And the hardened smoker believes that this is a case where ignorance is bliss.

Simple Test for Pure Air. Dr. A. T. Schofield, in his new book, "Nerves in Order, or The Maintenance of Health," gives the following simple test of indoor air which any one can easily make:

"Put one tablespoonful of clear lime water into a half pint bottle that has previously been brought into the room full of water, and emptied there so as to be filled with the actual air to be tested. If the bottle be then corked and the tablespoonful of lime water shaken up and down, it will get cloudy with chalk if the air be unfit to breathe, whereas it will remain clear if it is fairly pure."

To Balk the Merciless Sucker. With the ferocious mosquito now out hungrily seeking his prey, it would be well for those leading an outdoor life to know that a good way to keep these and similar pests at a distance is to apply to the hands and face the following lotion, recommended by the Journal of the Outdoor Life:

Spirits of camphor 12 dr. Oil of lavender 2 dr. Oil of pennyroyal 2 dr.

Here's another hint from the same journal. Scientists who have gone boldly into the favored haunts of the mosquito to study his ways, have discovered that the insects are partial to some colors and averse to others. They particularly dislike yellow. Their favorite is dark blue, with dark red next, then brown, then scarlet, then black, then blue gray, then olive green, then violet, then pearl gray, then white.

It should be borne in mind that the mosquito is the chief source of malarial infection. Certain species of mosquito constantly carry with them in their bodies the malarial parasites and in inflicting their bite they inject some of these parasites into the blood.

Dr. Schoo has observed that when mosquitoes have access to acid fruits their bite becomes less poisonous, or quite harmless. And Professor Celli has observed that in portions of Italy where tomatoes are largely cultivated, the people are practically free from malarial infection, although the region is naturally very malarious. It would seem, then, that the wide cultivation of acid fruits, such as tomatoes, strawberries, and other succulent varieties, may be made an important factor in ridding the world of this very troublesome pest.

Hygiene of Churches. The poet tells us that the groves were God's first temples. From a health standpoint they were far superior to our magnificent modern edifices, where the worshippers come in contact with countless germs lurking in the upholstered seats, and in the dust-laden carpets, and their minds are stupefied by being compelled to inhale the poisons that are constantly exhaled from the lungs of others, be they sick or well.

Clergymen should feel pride in having their churches hygienically constructed and well ventilated. Fixed carpets should not be used in places of worship where so many people congregate. The example of the great Roman divine, the bishop of Fano, in Italy, is a good one to follow in this respect. A circular was recently issued by him in which he asks the priests of his diocese to comply with the following rules:

1. In every church the floor must be regularly cleaned with sawdust, saturated with a strong sublimated solution. This thorough cleaning should take place particularly after holidays when great masses of people have visited the church.

2. Every week all ordinary chairs and confessional chairs, should be thoroughly cleaned with moist rags.

3. The grate of the confessional chairs must be washed every week with lye and then polished.

Pleasant Prescriptions. One word, you hypocochondriac! Let nature heal your woes. If you are blue, despondent, just call on Dr. Rose. With thorns, mayhap, he'll lance you. But, then, 'twere best the smart. He'll charm you with his beauty, And sweetness rare impart.

If appetite is flagging, just call on Dr. Green. He'll take you through the meadows where the beauties rare are seen. He'll give the green-leaf tonic, And spices from the wood; One treatment will convince you His medicine is good.

Mayhap ennui afflicts you; Go, call on Dr. Lark. (You'll find him in the meadows) And to his music hark. He'll tell you of the woodland, Breathe the secrets of the hills; And listening to his sweetest notes Will banish all your ills.

Therefore I am repeating: Let Nature cure your woes. There's healing hid in the meadows; There's health hid in the rose. Go revel in the gladness That's rampant in the hills. And flowers, and birds, and beauty Will rob you of your ills.

Best Sleeping Place for Hot Weather. The healing power of the great outdoors is rapidly becoming known to the great public, and an increasing number are availing themselves of the curative and hygienic advantages of the outdoor life.

The present is a favorable time for getting used to the outdoor life. A tent pitched in the yard or a screened porch is a far better sleeping place for the present season than an ordinary bedroom. To get the greatest possible benefit from the outdoor life, one needs to live out—continuously, day and night. The average man spends one-third of his life in sleep. The conditions which surround the body during sleep must necessarily exercise a powerful influence upon life and health. If this time is spent outdoors, in contact with the fresh air and the invigorating influence of the open air, a result in the highest degree beneficial must certainly be experienced.

One who is accustomed to sleeping outdoors can hardly endure the atmosphere of the house! Even with windows wide open there seems something lacking. A sense of depression or oppression is felt—a sort of cloud, which is lifted when one again gets under the open sky.

TORTURED BY ECZEMA.

Body Mass of Sores—Could not Sleep—Spent Hundreds of Dollars on Doctors, but Grew Worse—Cured by Cuticura for $8.

"Cuticura saved the life of my mother, Mrs. Wm. F. Davis, of Stony Creek, Conn. Hers was the worst eczema I ever saw. She was hardly able to eat or sleep. Her head and body was a mass of sores, and she despaired of recovery. Finally, after spending hundreds of dollars on doctors, growing worse all the time, living in misery for years, with hair whitened from suffering and body terribly disfigured, she was completely cured by two cakes of Cuticura Soap, five boxes of Cuticura, and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent.—Geo. C. Davis, 161 W. 36th St., N. Y."

Smallest Bird. The golden-crested wren is the smallest not only of British, but of all European, birds. Its average weight is only about eighty grains Troy, so that it would take seventy-two of the birds to weigh a pound. The length of the feathers is about 3 1/2 in., and the stretch of the wings about 5 in.; but when the feathers are taken off the length of the body does not exceed 1 in.

Cleanliness in the Dairy. To have healthful milk and butter, absolute cleanliness in caring for it is necessary, as nothing will absorb impurities so quickly as milk. Many housekeepers who are otherwise careful, overlook this when they wash milk utensils with cheap soap, made from filthy fats. Use Ivory Soap and thoroughly scald and air all pans and buckets. ELEANOR R. PARKER.

The Woman's Long Good-By. When a man wants to say good-by to another man with whom he has been spending an hour or so he just grabs his hat, shakes the other fellow's hand, says "so long" or "see you later" and is off. But a woman, having said good-by in the parlor, stops at least seven times between there and the vestibule and makes a final stand on the stoop to talk it all over once more. It would be better for men if they would cultivate more leisurely habits in their daily intercourse with one another, which they would be moved to do if they more sedulously observed the lack of precipitancy characterizing the association of women with their own kind.—Brooklyn Eagle.

What to Do if Constipated. Summer Bowel and Stomach Trouble.

Q. What is the beginning of sickness?
A. Constipation.

Q. What is Constipation?
A. Failure of the bowels to carry off the waste matter which lies in the alimentary canal where it decays and poisons the entire system. Eventually the results are death under the name of some other disease. Note the deaths from typhoid fever and cholera, stomach and bowel trouble at the present time.

Q. What causes Constipation?
A. Neglect to respond to the call of nature promptly. Lack of exercise. Excessive brain work. Mental emotion and improper diet.

Q. What are the results of neglected Constipation?
A. Constipation causes more suffering than any other disease. It causes rheumatism, colds, fevers, stomach, bowel, kidney, lung and heart troubles, etc.—It is the one disease that starts all others. Indigestion, dyspepsia, diarrhea, loss of sleep and strength are its symptoms—Piles, appendicitis and fistula are caused by Constipation. Its consequences are known to all physicians, but few sufferers realize their condition until it is too late. Women become confirmed invalids as a result of Constipation.

Q. Do physicians recognize this?
A. Yes. The first question your doctor asks you is "are you constipated?" That is the secret.

Q. Can it be cured?
A. Yes, with proper treatment. The common error is to resort to physics, such as pills, salts, mineral water, castor oil, injections, etc., every one of which is injurious. They weaken and increase the malady. You know this by your own experience.

Q. What then should be done to cure it?
A. Use the free coupon below at once. Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure Constipation and in the shortest space of time become a permanent remedy has before been known to cure Constipation positively and permanently.

Q. What is Mull's Grape Tonic?
A. It is a Grape Compound that exerts a peculiar healing influence upon the system, strengthening the muscles of the alimentary canal so that they can do their work unaided. The process is gradual but sure. It is no physic. It is unlike anything else you have ever used, but it cures Constipation, Dysentery and Bowel Trouble. Having a rich, fruity grape flavor, it is pleasant to take. As a hot weather tonic it is unequalled, insuring the system against diseases so fatal in hot weather.

Q. Where can Mull's Grape Tonic be had?
A. Your druggist sells it. The dollar bottle contains nearly three times the 50-cent size, but if you write to-day you will receive the first bottle free with instructions. This test will prove its worth.

CHAPTER XVI.

Lang Enters the City.

The order to his dogs to spring upon Lang and Wilson were the last words spoken by Paradise Pete, the brutal keeper. Wilson shot him through the heart before giving his attention to the dogs. For a moment there was a terrible time. Both Wilson and Lang fired point blank into the savage beasts' faces and with deadly effect, for it did not become a tussle—flesh against flesh, but one only of bullets.

When Golden arrived upon the scene with the torch and lit up the surroundings he was surprised to find the battle ended. Paradise Pete and his six man-killers, who on more than one occasion had been instrumental in tearing limb from limb the quivering flesh of escaping prisoners, lay dead upon the ground and standing back to back stood Lang and Wilson unharmed, yet vigilant.

"This is a bad business!" said Golden, shaking his head at Lang, "but I am glad it's all over. Hullo, Wilson, is it you?"

"Yes, this is me—or what's left of me," said that worthy coolly, and he put out his hand to shake with Golden.

"How is it that you were being pursued by the dogs?" Golden asked.

"Well, you see it was like this: Schiller last night brought home two captives, a Dr. Huntington and his daughter, of whom you no doubt have heard. It was his intention to lock the doctor in the haunted house, a prisoner, and take Miss Huntington to his palace as his wife, yet without the formality of a marriage, leastwise this is what he said to Huntington. Of course, this nearly crazed the father, and Miss Huntington, who is the bravest little woman I ever saw, knelt at the king's feet and prayed to him to permit her to remain but one night with her father—for her father's sake.

necessary. But I don't think that it will amount to that, for you, Golden, with a majority of the citizens at your back can enforce the law that will give me a chance and that's all I want!"

"You are right," returned Golden. "I can enforce the law, and I will! And if you are as handy in a fight with man as you are with beasts, tomorrow, no matter if you are condemned to die to-night, you may be a free man. Let us on to the city."

The City of Paradise, as Golden said, lies between three mountains, or rather hills, of large dimensions, and is enclosed on three sides. Walls of rock and shrubbery close up the gaps not otherwise provided by nature. The largest opening, toward which they were now journeying, was inclosed by a huge wall, through which the near-base of one of the mountains, a huge gate had been left up to which the road ran. To one not acquainted with the geography of the country would have thought that beyond this wall, overrun with clinging vines, lay a city, so completely isolated appeared the place. No lights could be seen from the outside and no sound broke the stillness of the night. The roadway was hardly perceptible, yet Golden without hesitation approached the gate, and knocked with the head of his revolver upon the frame work. A wicket appeared open and through it came the sound of a voice. "Who comes here?" was the challenge. "Friends!" answered Golden.

"Advance and give the sign," was the order.

Golden placed himself in position before the opening, one foot advanced, and holding up his right hand, palm outward, whispered "K."

"I?" In shape of a half question was the sentinel's ejaculation.

"N," added Golden.

"G," said the sentinel. "What does that stand for?"

were conducted all the important society events. On to one side, Lang noticed it at once, because it was dilapidated, lonely and dark, was a house which he recognized as the haunted cottage. Right in front of it, in bold outline, was the palace of the king. This was a grand structure, far superior to any of the other homes, for it was built of stone and enclosed on all sides by gardens of flowers and a well kept lawn. It was truly a grand sight, this city! Civilization in the very heart of the woods.

"The trip were surrounded by an armed guard, several of whom at the seeming order of the person who had been conversing with Golden, laid their hands upon Wilson. He did not resist.

"Halt!" cried Golden to the guards, in a voice of thunder. "I am Golden, and I command you to leave this man alone!" The guards hesitated. It was evident, that they held him in high esteem.

"All right," said the first guardsman, motioning his followers back. "Of course, Golden, if you become responsible for Wilson, that is your affair, but you understand that it is a crime punishable by death to disobey the orders of the king."

"Do you mean to tell me, John Rogers, that the people of Paradise have granted Schiller the power of life and death?"

"It has not been granted him openly," replied the guardsman humbly, as if ashamed to acknowledge the fact. "Nevertheless, Schiller has usurped this function from the people. He is surrounded by a pack of bloodthirsty scoundrels who, for the privilege of living in luxurious idleness, are always ready to carry out his orders. The toughs are in power now; the really honorable citizens are in the majority, though of course I know that none is actually in love with him."

"This power must be taken away from this man," said Golden. "It is not right that he possess it." Then Golden told Rogers how the attempt had been made on his own life. "It may be your turn next; for that reason it should be your duty to enforce the law—the law is what we want."

"Well, you can depend on me, and my men also, for that matter—What are you going to do?"

"I am first going to get Lang, my friend here, the oath administered. Then I am going to see that the two prisoners who were brought in last night are not dealt harshly with. Though we are outlaws, Rogers, it need not necessarily mean that we are heartless wretches!"

"I will go with you," replied Rogers. "I have a bone to pick with Schiller myself. I owe him no good turn, and will be glad to do you a favor if in doing so I can revenge myself on the unprincipled scoundrel. It was but a month ago that he condemned poor Silverman and Reynolds to life imprisonment in the mines because they refused to do some dirty work for him. A short time before that Schiller made overtures to Dickinson, a bank defaulter, who ran away from Chicago with Genevieve Johnson, 'pretty Jennie,' they call her here, to allow him to live with her. Of course Dickinson was infuriated at the man's audacity. He struck Schiller. Schiller was too cowardly to strike back and protected with his power, he sentenced Dick to death. His miserable hirelings pounced upon the defenseless and wronged man, and threw him into the lion's den without a chance; without even a knife to protect himself with!"

Louis Larg could feel the horrors creep up and down his spine at the recital of the case of Dickinson and his wrong. What if Schiller should take a sudden dislike to him? Of what value would be his life? In saying Wilson from the dogs, he had, under the new regime, forfeited his life to the crown! Would it be exacted of him? But Louis Lang was not of the faint-hearted kind; he resolved that if he had to die, he would die bravely.

NEW PROFESSIONS PAY WELL.

Expert Knowledge of One Subject Always in Demand.

"New professions pay well, in spite of all that is said against them," said a man of forty who had abandoned a general law practice to take a specialist's position in a technical training school. "We don't hear so much about the overcrowding of professions as we used to. The technical training schools scattered over the land teach doctors, lawyers, engineers, architects and editors to divide their work into separate departments. Salaries for specialists drawn from all the old professions range from $6,000 to $30,000 a year. A man who commands more than the last-named figure must be exceptionally clever in one line of work.

"It is never too late for a man to begin. I know a New York physician who thought he was doing very well with $3,000 in the general run of his profession until he was 50 years old. But he was fond of roses, and read everything that he could get hold of about their culture, the question of reducing the cost of existing varieties and the secret of producing new ones. He gets $12,000 a year now from a farm that sends the highest-priced roses to New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

"There is no end of variety of pursuits for which a man can prepare himself through a technical education. The telephone alone has opened up a vast field. Then there is mining, bridge building, electrical specialties and chemistry. The main thing is to screw up courage to get out of the rut."

Though the moon looks best when it is full, it's different with a man.

Japanese Keep Secrets

The minds of the greatest naval and military strategists of the world are now intensely interested in solving the problem of the phenomenal successes of Japan in the Far Eastern conflict. The overwhelming victory in the Strait of Tsushima, annihilating one of the finest fleets of modern times, requires an explanation. It is easy to say that Rojstvensky simply placed himself in the hands of Togo, and the result could not have been other than as it was. This, however, does not explain why the brilliant Russian admiral sailed into the trap with apparently open eyes. As a matter of fact, he did not know there was a trap; for he imagined, or was led to believe, that the Japanese fleet was miles away from its actual position. This affair but adds to the mystery.

The question now is not as to the superior fighting ability of the Japanese, but how the imperial government was able successfully to accomplish the unprecedented feat of keeping its own people and the rest of the world for more than two months in absolute ignorance of the plans and whereabouts of the combined naval forces of the empire. As one somewhat familiar with the enigmatical features of Japanese character, I believe that in accounting for this marvelous strategic achievement a large place must be given to the persistent esotericism which forms so marked a characteristic of the whole nation.

In Japan esotericism is a fine art. Here in the West the word reminds us only of Buddhistic cults or the occult vagaries of the late Madam Blatvatsky, but in Japan the word stands for life itself. A not inconsiderable experience among the natives of Dai Nippon leads me to the conviction that they always have secrets to keep, and that none knows better how to keep them. The humblest citizen of Tokio is absolutely silent on any question he deems none of the foreigner's business, and there is everywhere among the people a persistent and insuperable reticence on all matters of which it is thought the foreigner may disapprove. This obtains more so on questions under the ban of the censor.

No offense in the category of crime is deemed worthy of more condign punishment than the giving away of secrets, or even intermeddling with them. One of the greatest Ministers of State, Viscount Mori, who had graced the office of Plenipotentiary at the Court of St. James and also as Minister at Washington, was stabbed to death by a government clerk for daring to push aside with his cane a curtain that guarded the secret chamber where only a priest might gaze on the repose of the imperial ancestors. In Japan the secrets of the dead are as inviolable as those of the living.

Due to Two Influences.

This esoteric tendency of the Japanese mind, which has played so conspicuous and important a part in their past social and political history and in their recent victories over Russia, is due to two influences that for centuries have been running as a united stream through the minds of the people, bearing them on its way.

It is undoubtedly, first of all, a characteristic inherited from China, where, from the remote past, by the institutions of guilds and other secret bands, the inner life of the people becomes largely a mystery to the foreigner, and he to them nothing but a "white devil." There it stands as a wall that no intruding curiosity has yet been able to pierce. International honesty and genuine brotherhood, may some day break it down, but so far diplomacy has signally failed to enter the sacred precincts. As in China so in Japan, the oracular words, hidden, "secret tradition," hijutsu, "secret art," and okugi, "inner mysteries," have a high place in all achievement. "It is not only a question of advisability or of delicacy and good taste," but the national way of doing things, and in times of war, at least, has proved a most efficient factor, not only in concealing plans from the enemy, but from the whole world.

Influenced by Shintolism.

A second influence, under which this historic inheritance from China has been developed and employed is esoteric Shintolism. The adherent of this faith believes that the human spirit never dies, but, under the influence of the gods, is in constant circulation on behalf of men. Every Japanese is open to the influence of these ancestral spirits, because, being a son of Heaven, he is no less holy than his neighbors. Esoteric Shintolism teaches that the ancestral spirits can be made to circulate for particular ends, and in this way the Emperor can make the infinite myriads of the immeasurable past permeate the finite human forces of to-day.

It is difficult for us to realize or even appreciate the apparently superhuman courage with which a man is inspired who believes that the infinite life of the past is pouring itself out through him for the defense of his ancestral shores. Depend upon it, this accounts in no small measure for the unexampled bravery and patriotism of the Japanese soldier. Let any who doubt this read the imperial message to Admiral Togo, where in his Majesty takes occasion to say, "We are glad that by the loyalty of our officers and men, we have been able to respond to the spirits of our ancestors," to which the Admiral duly replies, "That we have gained a success beyond our expectation is due to the brilliant virtue of your Majesty and to the protection of the spirits of your imperial ancestors, and not to the action of any human being."

Family Is the Unit.

In another and no less effective way, also, does this faith tend to perfecting the Japanese soldier. In that country the family, not the individual, is the unit of the nation. He is taught from childhood to sink his individuality in his family, and that of his family in the nation. If you ask him how old he is, do not be surprised if he answers four or five hundred years, meaning his family; as for himself, he has no individual existence or age. Japan is a nation of families, and the whole nation is one family. In the language of the people distinctions of person and number are generally ignored, and true personal pronouns are entirely lacking. In ancient times if one member of the family came under the condemnation of the law, all the members had to suffer with him, even wife and children. The duty of primary importance to the head of a house is to perpetuate the family and keep the State supplied with defenders.

Higher than duty to family and arising out of it is duty to the Emperor, which supersedes all the duties of man. In a recent tidal wave in the northern part of Japan a father turned a deaf ear to the cries of his drowning wife and children, permitting them to perish, that he might save the Emperor's picture, and he was applauded for the act. A spirit of patriotism such as this, heartless as it seems, leaving wife and children to chance charity and piling up the dead in war, when charged with a faith in the influence of teeming myriads of its ancestral ghosts under the guidance of esoteric Shintolism, is a not unimportant factor in producing the invincible soldier that is to-day driving Russia out of the East.—J. Ingram Bryan in Philadelphia Ledger.

Following Carnegie's Example.

Morris K. Jessup, the New York millionaire, is emulating the example of Andrew Carnegie by giving $20,000 to the town of Westport, Conn., to erect a public library. Westport was once Mr. Jessup's home and the building is intended as a memorial for the Jessup family. The town agreed to appropriate $1,000 annually for the library's maintenance.

History of Kustenji.

Kustenji, the Roumanian port in which the mutineers of the Kutuz Potemkin surrendered, is the ancient town to which the poet Ovid was banished by the Emperor Augustus and where he died.

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womanhood is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and re-creator ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female illness, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties."

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength."

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

"Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, bloating (or flatulency), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well."

Slight Cause of Quarrel.

"You wouldn't think there'd be enough difference between the definite and the indefinite article to matter much, would you?" said a woman who writes for a living. "I made a life-long enemy of a woman once just by writing 'the' where I meant 'a.' It was an account of her wedding I was doing. I said something about the ceremony being performed at the home of the bride's aunt and then I added that there were present 'only the few friends of the family.' The bride never got over that 'the' in front of few. It happened over five years ago and when my name is mentioned she still froths at the mouth."

When Labor Did Not Tell.

A home missionary who visited Sing Sing prison recently took occasion to have a heart to heart talk with one of the convicts. "Don't you know, my friend," said he, "that crime never brings success? It is only achieved by hard labor." "I did six months of it at a stretch once, and I didn't come out no richer than I went in."

Ways of Criminals.

Prof. Ferriani declares that 75 per cent of criminals perpetrate crimes in ignorance of their consequences. Many criminals, he also says not only boast of their crimes, but exaggerate them, even in court, and to their own detriment, from a perverse sort of vanity.

HEART RIGHT

When He Quit Coffee.

Life Insurance Companies will not insure a man suffering from heart trouble. The reason is obvious.

This is a serious matter to the husband or father who is solicitous for the future of his dear ones. Often the heart trouble is caused by an unexpected thing and can be corrected if taken in time and properly treated. A man in Colorado writes: "I was a great coffee drinker for many years, and was not aware of the injurious effects of the habit till I became a practical invalid, suffering from heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness to an extent that made me wretchedly miserable myself and a nuisance to those who witnessed my sufferings."

"I continued to drink coffee, however, not suspecting that it was the cause of my ill-health, till, on applying for life insurance I was rejected on account of the trouble with my heart. Then I became alarmed. I found that leaving off coffee helped me quickly, so I quit it altogether and having been attracted by the advertisements of Postum Food Coffee I began its use.

"The change in my condition was remarkable, and it was not long till I was completely cured. All my ailments vanished. My digestion was completely restored, my nervousness disappeared, and, most important of all, my heart steadied down and became normal, and on a second examination I was accepted by the Life Insurance Co. Quitting coffee and using Postum worked the cure." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason, and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Well-Being," in each pkg.

Golden knocked with the head of his revolver upon the gate.

"King Schiller seemed to revel in the pain and torture that he was making Huntington undergo, and he brutally refused the request of the girl. As I understand the case, Schiller has never asked the girl to be his wife, and you know, as you helped to frame the laws, that a woman once within the walls of our city has an equal right with the man to say whether she will be that man's wife or not. As Miss Huntington refused to become his wife voluntarily, Schiller attempted to carry out his threat. The case appealed to me.

"I stepped forward and demanded that Schiller grant her request. Schiller turned on me like a savage beast and addressed me as a meddling upstart, heaping curses of a most horrible nature upon my head! I was enraged at his gross villainy and I struck him.

"I realized my mistake the minute I struck him; my chances for aiding the doctor and his daughter were now slim. The king sentenced me then and there to work in the mines for life! But to a certain extent I carried my point, for he relented and allowed the girl and her father to remain together last night, and I was locked in the cellar preparatory to being sent to the mines. During the night I managed to make my escape through the cellar window and, as I thought, over the walls of the city without being seen. It appears, however, that Schiller had purposely left this chance open to me, for Paradise Pete and his dogs were set on my trail early this morning and have kept it up all day, until at last they routed me out of my hiding place, as you are aware. Now that I am free I swear I will be even with Schiller, king though he is!"

"I am with you in that!" said Lang. "Count me in!" said Golden. "I am afraid, though, that you boys have gotten yourself into serious trouble by killing the dogs. (Then to Lang) "You can escape if you want to!"

"I am still resolved to go on," replied the youth. "I cannot, and I will not while I live see a helpless woman wronged if in my power to prevent it."

"Them's my sentiments, also!" replied Wilson. "I am willing to go back and run the death gauntlet, if

"K-i-n-g," spelled Golden. "The King of Paradise?"

"This well. Who are you, where do you come from, where do you go?"

"I am Golden. I hail from Chicago. I go to the king!"

"Unbar the gates!" was given as a command to some one on the inside.

As the gate swung open far enough to admit a person, Golden stepped aside, so that Lang could be seen. "I have in my charge a candidate, who having paid his rightful fee, is entitled to the freedom of our city," said Golden.

"Advance, candidate. Who else is with you?"

"Wilson."

"What does he do with you? He has been sentenced to life imprisonment in the mines and tried to escape!"

"At my request he returns to Paradise," said Golden.

"Why don't you disarm him?" was the sentinel's question, as the gates were closed behind the three friends.

"He is carrying Lang's gun. I consider him harmless."

"The man has been condemned to death by the king. It is my duty to arrest him!"

The party was now standing upon a high bluff, looking down upon the city, which was spread out before them. Lang, for a moment was bewildered at what he saw. The town was laid out in a circle. The houses, built close together, and of but a single story in height, were situated close up to the walls on all sides, as if it were to form a double barrier. From the lone window in each dwelling shone bright lights completely illuminating the paths which ran in front of the cottages, giving a very cozy and homelike appearance to the surroundings. In the center of the city was a massive building, in comparison with the others, at least fifty feet high, with plenty of windows, through which light streamed. Nearby also were three other buildings of large dimensions, which were comparatively dark and deserted. There were streets and lawns, and here and there bridges spanned the canyon which completely split the city in twain.

The well-lit building was the general assembly hall. In this building

Fought Like True Americans

A detachment of six men were carrying dispatches from a command near Red river to Camp Supply. Of the six two were scouts, Amos Chapman and William Dixon. The others were cavalrymen. Far from any refuge they were surrounded by nearly 200 Indians. They sought shelter in a buffalo wallow and prepared to hold their ground. The attack came at 6 o'clock in the morning and the long, long day stretched before them. In the first rush four of these six were wounded, Private Smith mortally. The other hurts were severe.

They were hemmed in on all sides in an open plain, and were outnumbered almost twenty to one. One of the scouts, while a severe fire was being poured in at them at close range, succeeded in throwing up a scanty intrenchment with his bowie knife and his hands. His comrades held the Kiowas and Comanches off until this little help was ready as a refuge and they moved into the trench, the wounded walking with brave and painful effort.

Although Private Smith was wounded unto death, he sat upright in the trench to conceal his crippled condition from the foe. From early morning until night this handful of five men was under almost constant fire, often at such short range that they could bring their pistols into play. Thus they fought for their own lives and defended their dying comrade, without food and for drink only a little muddy water mixed with their own blood. They killed more than a dozen Indians and wounded above a score.

Relief came that night, but it was thirty-six hours after the first attack before medical aid and food could be given them at the nearest post. Private Smith died before camp was reached. Every man was wounded, Scout Chapman severely and Scout Dixon several times, but not dangerously. This band of four soldiers and two scouts were of those who had been fighting and marching for weeks amid the most dreadful privations. They were worn to skin and bone, but their souls were as "big as all outdoors" and they flinched at no odds under heaven. And by such men as these was this nation made.—Outing.

Methods of Preparing Tea

An English traveler says in a letter to the London Times: "History tells us that, when coffee was first brought to the cities of western Europe the first makers of it were Turks. They roasted and ground the berries and served the liquor, as it is served to this day in the east, grits and all. We still drink coffee as we drank it then, with this difference, that we mostly omit the grits and drink an infusion instead of a decoction. It was not so with tea. No Chinaman was imported with the first pound of tea to teach us how to make and drink it. The consequence has been that we have never drunk tea in the Chinese way—that is, as a simple infusion.

"At first there seems to have been great doubt, as to how to deal with the new herb. It is even said that it was sometimes boiled, with salt and butter and served up as a sort of spinach. The old phrase 'a dish of tea' seems to bear out this legend. Finally it came to be settled that the most wholesome and pleasant way to treat the tea leaf was to make it into a kind of sweet soup with sugar and milk or cream. I have personal knowledge of no country in Europe, but one, where tea is used as in China.—Portugal, which got its knowledge of teamaking from a province of China, with which, at that time, no other nation of Europe was in contact.

"It was while traveling, on horseback with a guide in the wilder parts of Portugal away from shops and inns, where we had perforce to make experiments in the most economical use of the few ounces of tea and coffee that we could afford to carry with us, that we hit upon a discovery. Having no milk, we drank our tea, as most Portuguese drink theirs, as a simple infusion, sweetened with sugar.

"I remembered to have read, I believe in the travels of the Abbe Huc, that, when the Chinese desire to be thrifty in the use of the finer and more expensive teas, they grind the leaf to a powder and use less for the infusion. We found that tea could be ground in a coffee mill as easily as coffee, that tea made with the powder is as good as or better than when made with the whole leaf and that the powder, as it naturally would, goes farther than the tea leaf."

Paid Debt with Knighthood

In a recently published autobiography of Sir Henry Bessemer is told how, in 1833, when he was a youth of 20, he learned that the British government was losing about $500,000 a year through the use of forged stamps. He set about finding a remedy. In nine months he discovered how to forge government stamps with the greatest ease. This was a risky bit of knowledge for a struggling young man who wanted money where he could get it.

The British government was delighted. The device was accepted. And as no change of machinery or staff was needed, Bessemer was informed that no superintendent of stamps would be appointed. Thus he had deprived himself of a job.

Forty-five years later, after he had invented the "Bessemer process" of preparing iron and had made a great fortune, Bessemer wrote to Lord Beaconsfield, then prime minister, pointing out that he had saved the country millions without the reward of a penny. He no longer wanted money, but the government acknowledged the debt and paid it with a knighthood.

to tell his good luck to the girl of his choice. He explained to her the situation, how old stamps had been picked off documents and used again and how he had invented an elaborate plan to remedy this. "But surely," said the young lady, "if all the stamps had a date put on them they could not at a future time be used without detection." This rather startled young Bessemer. But he devised a simple method of marking the date. The British government was delighted. The device was accepted. And as no change of machinery or staff was needed, Bessemer was informed that no superintendent of stamps would be appointed. Thus he had deprived himself of a job.

Forty-five years later, after he had invented the "Bessemer process" of preparing iron and had made a great fortune, Bessemer wrote to Lord Beaconsfield, then prime minister, pointing out that he had saved the country millions without the reward of a penny. He no longer wanted money, but the government acknowledged the debt and paid it with a knighthood.

Visible to Physicians' Eyes

"The medical man is on nodding terms with death at most street corners in our larger towns."

A writer in this week's Lancet, pointing out that a doctor sees many things which are hidden from the average man's eye, sums up the position in this grim phrase.

The medical man, he says, must remain a pathologist in the street, and he sees many unsuspected tragedies. Who else would suspect the sword of Damocles that is hanging above this red-faced merchant, or see in his cheeks the signal of a fruit overripe?

To the lay mind this portly person stands for all that is prosperous and confident, and his appetite is the envy of many of his dyspeptic friends—who will send wreaths to his grave.

See the bluff and kindly manner in which he hands a shilling to a thin faced woman selling boot laces in the gutter. It is only the medical man who will dare to prophesy white hairs for her long after her benefactor has been gathered to his fathers.

Behind sunburnt cheeks—cheeks that make all these other jostling faces look pallid and worn by contrast—the medical man is quick to recognize the imprint of the health resort. Other things pointing to an ominous diagnosis.

The woman with the curious red spot upon her face affords him a sadder chapter for reflection. Whether it be lupus or epithelioma or rodent ulcer, it will mean far greater obsession of bodily and mental pain than that of any broken limb.

But, on the other hand, the doctor has compensations. He sees that the pallid man with his arm in a sling will in a few weeks be able to dig or ride to hounds; that the hopeless cripple appealing to the charity of passers-by is in no pain, and probably as well able to enjoy life as any one else.—London Mirror.

Decrease of White Plague

The modern crusade against consumption is no losing fight, but one in which every blow tells. It is encouraging to note, from the first annual report of the Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, that the death rate from this deadly malady is decreasing quite rapidly, especially in those places where the public is being instructed and the necessary sanitary reforms made.

The following statements recently made by Prof. Fisher of Yale show the encouraging rate at which tuberculosis is decreasing in this and other countries: "In England it declined in seventy years from thirty-nine per ten thousand of the population to thirteen. Although sanatoria did not exist in the early part of this period, England did have (and was the first country to introduce) consumption hospitals, which served like isolation wards to prevent the spread of infection. These hospitals, together with the English love of out-of-door sports and the use of ventilating appliances and open fireplaces are probably the explanation of their growing freedom from consumption.

"In Germany, during the past fifteen years, the death-rate has declined from thirty-one to nineteen and one-half—a full third less.

"In the United States the death rate in 1900, in the area for which registration has been well kept, was nineteen, as against twenty-six in 1890, showing a decline of twenty-five per cent in ten years. In New York city, owing largely to the work of Waring and Blügs, the death rate had diminished in twenty years nearly forty per cent. It is a conservative prediction that the next three decades will each see more remarkable improvement."

FOLK-LORE OF THE ESKIMO.

The Human Quality Predominates Throughout the Hero-Tales.

The most striking feature of Eskimo folk-lore is its thoroughly human character, says a writer in the International Quarterly. In a strict sense of the term the bulk of Eskimo tradition is not mythology but hero tales, which reflect with remarkable faithfulness the social condition and religious beliefs of the people. They treat of visits to fabulous tribes, of murder and revenge, of mercy and recompense of feats of shamanism and of witchcraft. The supernatural enters into them, but only as it enters into the everyday life of the people, to whom witches, guardian spirits of shamans, giants and dwarfs are existing realities. In this sense most of the Eskimo tales are true tales taken from life and show a great lack of imaginative power.

Setting aside this group of hero tales, there remain only a few entirely disconnected myths. One of them tells how a woman was mutilated by her father, who cut off her finger joints one after the other. From these joints originated the sea mammals and the woman became their mistress. Another myth tells of the origin of sun and moon, who in the beginning were human beings, a brother and a sister, and who were taken up to the sky.

KIDNEY DISEASES CAUSE ONE-THIRD OF THE TOTAL DEATHS.
 When the Kidneys fail to perform their functions properly by not straining out the poisonous waste matter from the blood as it passes through them, the poisons are carried by the circulation to every part of the body, deranging the different organs. This causes heart trouble, stomach trouble, sluggish liver and a host of other ills, all due to deranged Kidneys.
FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE
 corrects irregularities and cures Kidney and Bladder diseases in every form, tones up the whole system, and the diseases that have resulted from disordered Kidneys disappear, because the cause has been removed. Commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at the first sign of danger. Do not risk having Bright's Disease or Diabetes.
 CURED OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE.
 Mr. Robert G. Burke, Elmhurst, N. Y., writes: "I am glad to have an opportunity of telling what magnificent results I have had from using FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE after having tried other advertised medicines and several physicians. Before I began I had to get up from 12 to 20 times each night to relieve my bladder. I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired that I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. In fact, I was so badly used up that I had given up hope of living when I was urged by a friend to try FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. One 50-cent bottle worked wonders, and before I had taken the third bottle the superfluous fluid had gone, as well as all other symptoms of kidney trouble. My friends were surprised that I was cured, as they all thought I was going to die. Every few days some of my friends come from miles away to learn the name of the wonderful medicine that cured me of Bright's Disease, and to none that has tried it has failed to be benefited."

 Specialists in the Treatment of Nervous, Blood, Skin and Special Diseases of Men and Women. Established 25 years.
 Thousands of young and middle-aged men are annually swept to a premature grave through excesses. Chas. Anderson was one of the victims, but was rescued in time. He says: "I sowed my 'wild oats' when young. A change came over me—I could feel it; my friends noticed it. I became nervous, despondent, gloomy, had no ambition, easily tired, evil forebodings, poor circulation, pimples on face, back weak, restless at night, tired and weak mornings, burning sensation. To make matters worse, I became reckless and contracted other diseases. I tried many doctors and medical firms—all failed till Drs. Kennedy & Kergan took my case. In one week I felt better, and in a few weeks was entirely cured. They are the only reliable and honest Specialists in the country." READER—My guarantee to cure you or no pay. You run no risk.
