The Week for Spuds.

This is the banner week for potatoes and one cannot pass down State-st without seeing several loads being delivered. Potato digging is nearly completely and the farmers are hauling rapidly, glad of the ready market and good price, which holds at 50 cents. The buyers are taking all the potatoes they can lay hands on and still want more. The high water mark was reached at Supernow's Warehouse on Monday when 3,802 bushels were received. Up to the middle of the week they had taken in 13,677 bushels and have 9,089 in storage.

The East Jordan Lumber Co., have already shipped over 24,000 bushels and are daily receiving big consignments of them from the farmers.

Joe Maddock Wins.

The Detroit Journal of Wednesday has, under big caption, the following to say in regard to East Jordan's renowned footballist:

Dan McGugin may have a wonderful team at Vanderbilt University. Herstein's Purdue bunch may upset calculations at Chicago this fall. Willie Heston's Drake aggregation may show improvement, but Joe Maddock, the greatest tackle ever turned out at Michigan, is having remarkable success at Utah.

In a letter to the sporting editor of The Journal, Maddock writes: "Utah has not been defeated this fall and Denver is the only team to score on us, when a Denver man ran the length of the field on a kick-off."

"We have won the state championship of Wyoming, Montana and Utah, besides beating the strongest teams in Colorado."

Referring to the Utah Denver game, which Utah won, 24 to 6, the Salt Lake City Herald has this to say:

"When one comes to solve the problem of how it was done, the one word, 'Maddock' is the only solution. The mighty Maddock, whose name will forever be woven in the football history of this state, proved himself all that has been claimed for him—a coach who has no superior in the western country."

"Into a team which is physically inferior in every respect—youngsters, many of whom have never seen a football game outside of their own city—Maddock has instilled the finer arts of the game, and when they faced a giant foe on Cummings field they proved themselves worthy pupils of a great master."

Entertainment Tuesday.

No regular lecture course being planned for East Jordan this season the opera house management proposes to secure a few high class Lyceum entertainments provided the people wish entertainment of this class. As a trial number, the George-Hi Japant Company has been secured for next Tuesday night and prices will be within the reach of all. 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats on sale today.

Res. Rathbone Sisters.

Whereas in view of the loss we have sustained, by the loss of the deceased, our friend and brother Captain George Jepson and the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to him—Therefore be it resolved by East Jordan Temple No. 65 Rathbone Sisters that it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting his removal from our midst, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard. Resolved that we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased on the dispensation with which it has pleased divine providence to afflict them and commended them for consolation to him who orders all things for the best, and whose chastisements are meant to purify.

Resolved, that the heartfelt sympathy of this Temple be extended to his family in their affliction.

Resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Temple and a copy thereof be transmitted to the Charlevoix County Herald for publication.

Fraudulent Lot Platting Schemes.

Auditor General Bradley Sought to Prevent Their Existence Through a Bill Prepared for That Purpose.

The Outing Beach Resort Association in their plat of lands in Grand Traverse county appear to be giving considerable trouble to the board of supervisors, because of its methods of selling lots, and the impossibility of the assessment and collection of taxes. It appears there have been hundreds of acres along the shores of Long Lake and elsewhere in that county platted by Chicago parties into lots twenty-five and thirty feet wide, to the number of ten or eleven thousand lots. These lots were given away, but the person to whom given in a guessing contest or otherwise, was required to pay $1.52 for recording, and $1.30 for abstract and deed, so that the association would receive an amount above thirty thousand dollars in the deal, if the lots are all disposed of. The whole scheme is a fraud, as the lots have no value, and the board of supervisors are up against the proposition of determining the ownership for assessment purposes, at much expense, and the state will be called upon to expend a large amount of money in the sale of these delinquent lots for taxes.

The conditions of these matters before the board of supervisors of Grand Traverse county again direct attention to the failure of the committee of the legislature on amendment and revision of the statutes to give serious consideration to the bill prepared by Auditor General Bradley, and introduced by Representative Higgins, requiring the consent of a common council in cities, a board of trustees in villages, or the township board, before laying out and platting lands to be offered for sale. In Muskegon county, Roscommon county, Mason county, and in probably a dozen other counties in the state, plats have been made such as this of the Outing Beach Resort by outside parties for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining money by the sale of worthless lots to innocent purchasers. Lots have been given away as prizes in guessing contests where the subject is so simple that everybody guesses right, or as gifts with a quarter's worth of soap, and numerous cheap schemes, where the money is secured in a charge for the deed and recording. If Auditor General Bradley's measure had passed the legislature, this sort of thing might be prevented in the future, but as the law now stands there is no thing to prevent the platting of any number of thousands of acres of sand plains into town sites and setting them to gullible people for a song.

The Companion as a Christmas Gift.

Can you think of a gift more certain to be acceptable than a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion? Is there any one, young or old, who, having once had the paper in his hands and looked through it did not wish to possess it for his very own? It is a gift which, far from losing its freshness as Christmas recedes into the past, grows more delightful, more necessary to one's enjoyment week by week.

The boy likes it, for it reflects in its pages every boyish taste and every fine boyish aspiration. The father likes it, not only for its fiction but for its fund of information of the practical sort. The girl likes it for the stories, anecdotes, sketches and editorial articles printed in each number especially for her. The mother likes it for its stories of domestic life and family affection, for its children's page and for its medical article.

On receipt of $1.75, the yearly subscription price, the publishers send to the new subscriber all the remaining issues of The Companion for 1905 and the "Minutemen" Calendar for 1905, lithographed in twelve colors and gold.

Full illustrated Announcement of the new volume for 1906, will be sent with sample copies of the paper to any address free.

Elegant Suits and Overcoats.

You won't know what a good Overcoat or Suit you can buy for from $10 to $18 unless you visit our Men's Clothing Department. At these popular prices we offer values that are considered wholly impossible by concerns that must depend upon the revenue from just a few lines of goods for their existence.

Plain and Fancy Coats—single and double breasted. Every garment is hand tailored. The coats are lined with serge or Venetian cloth with Skinner's guaranteed satin in the sleeves. Extra long Overcoats (52 and 53 inch) with long boxed back and single breasted fly front, made of fine rough finished coating in black or Oxford gray.

Irish-freese Overcoats, medium and extra lengths. Extra linings. Sure to have your size in a style of Overcoat you like best. We are sole agents for the M. M. Stanton celebrated shirts and pants.

We want the trade of the most particular patrons of a clothing store. Such people want good clothes, cut in the best style from exclusive and substantial patterns in cloth. That is why we are making a special hit in our clothing department. Our Clothing embodies all the best features. The best is none too good for our customers. Our clothing must be right and it is. Our prices must be right and they are.

Then we make you just a little better proposition than the other fellow. We must if we hope to interest you and this we promise to do.

Give us a chance to show you, to tell you more about it. If you think it over seriously you will see that we have solved the problem. These things mean a good deal to the dealer and more to the man inside the clothes. The most absolute perfect fitting clothing. The getting down to a fine point in clothing. Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

A PRESIDENT'S CABINET.

SOME SECRETARIES HAVE ATTAINED GREATER FAME THAN THEIR CHIEF.

While Appointments Are Political, the Cabinet is Usually the President's Closest Adviser.

James S. Henry.

According to the old saw "it takes nine tailors to make a man," so in the Government of the United States it takes nine Cabinet officers to make an administration. Primarily American cabinet officers are selected to become the heads of the nine great executive departments of the Government. As one star differeth from another star in glory so one cabinet officer differs from another in opportunity, ability and the power to make a lasting impression upon the history of the country. These nine heads of departments are chosen by the President and although the approval of the Senate of the United States is required to make their appointment legal and constitutional, the preference of the Executive is invariably respected and the nine Cabinet officers represent his personal choice, so far as politics leaves him a free agent.

To be a member of the President's Cabinet has filled the ambition of many statesmen. It is a place only one remove from that to which all native born citizens of the United States have a right to aspire—the Presidency itself. If there have been disappointments and unrealized ambitions on the part of the great men who have been President of the world has not heard of them. The disappointments, the discouragements, the disillusionment, the restrictions that have been experienced by statesmen who had hoped to achieve glory and fame as Cabinet officers can be read in the national records from the foundation of the Government to the present time. Failure to accomplish great plans and to realize hopes of a lasting place in history has sent many Cabinet officers embittered and disappointed back into private life.

May Not be Personal Friends.

While the President of the United States is entitled to choose the nine gentlemen who shall sit about his council table as his Cabinet advisors, the political system in effect in the United States often robs this selection of its personal character. A newly elected President may know of nine men in his circle of business, social and political acquaintances whom he would like to have around him as counsellors and whom he believes would make efficient heads of departments in the administration of Government laws and business. The exigencies of politics, however, usually compel him to choose his Cabinet officers from different sections of the country and in acknowledgement of certain potent influences, sometimes economic, sometimes religious, and often purely political that helped make his election sure. The Chief Executive before deciding upon the composition of his Cabinet inquires carefully into the qualifications, ability and character of the men whom he will invite to sit at his council table, but it often happens that the first time he has come in personal contact with his future advisor is when he meets him to extend the invitation to him to enter the Cabinet.

In the economy of Government and in the social life at the nation's Capital, an American Cabinet officer occupies a commanding position, but in the accomplishment of great deeds of statesmanship and as a power in fashioning the policies of the nation, the Cabinet minister's own personality, his ability and genius can alone make success. There are conspicuous examples in the history of the United States where Cabinet ministers have dominated the Executive and carved their names higher on the pillar of fame than the Presidents with whom they served. The impress made on national affairs by such men as Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun and James G. Blaine, as ministers of state, is greater than that of many Presidents of the United States. It is not necessary to refer to musty history for examples of Cabinet ministers who have won international fame. The late John Hay, Secretary of State under President McKinley and President Roosevelt, seems yet to living actual personality in the affairs of the world. If no other monument had been established by his long public service, the "open door" policy for which he obtained recognition in the Far East would mark his statesmanship for all time. With his colleague, Elihu Root, who is now his successor, he shared the glory of the late President McKinley's administration in which both men were superlative influences.

Sherman's Earlier Fame.

Going back a little further we find the late John Sherman standing as the monument of sound finance and marking the otherwise colorless Hayes administration from 1877 to 1881 as an epoch in the financial history of the country. In the days of the Civil War, Stanton, at the head of the War Department, earned the name of being the greatest Secretary of War the United States ever had and was the mainstay of the immortal Lincoln in the latter's heartbreaking experiences with traitors, politicians and self-seeking army officers. The 130 years of national life of the United States furnished many brilliant examples of what a Cabinet officer can accomplish and the influential part he can play in the achievements of an administration.

It depends largely upon the President of the United States to what extent a Cabinet officer may achieve prominence in national affairs. During the last generation most of the Presidents of the United States have been men of iron will and commanding personality. Most of them, however, have depended upon members of their Cabinet for expert advice on great national and international issues. In the administration of Grant, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt certain of their ministers were pre-eminent in the direction of affairs of state and domestic policies. These Presidents were and are strong men, but ever ready to listen to the advice and appreciate the statesmanship of the strong men they had chosen for their Cabinet.

Different Treatment of Cabinets.

Each President has had his own conception of the functions of a Cab-

LEPERS IN AMERICA.

Three Hundred of Them in Twenty States and Territories.

"Unclean, unclean." This is a cry which has struck terror to the hearts of many people who have journeyed through the Orient and our Asiatic and Pacific possessions, but it has probably never occurred to them, that in the United States proper there are nearly 300 lepers. These are scattered over 20 states and territories, but the states of Louisiana, California, Florida, Minnesota and North Dakota have all but about 50. Over 155 cases are in Louisiana alone; a number of these, however, are among people who have come from Southern Europe. In something like 190 cases the disease was contracted in this country.

For Federal Supervision.

Senator W. M. Crane, who succeeded the late Senator Hoar, at the last session of Congress introduced a bill providing for government supervision. It was passed by the Senate, but when it came up for consideration at the hands of the Representatives, Delegate Rodey of New Mexico, smarting under the sting left by the failure of his statehood plans, charged that the provision in this bill which planned to locate a leper colony on some abandoned military reservation was, in fact, a plan to foist the "unclean" upon New Mexico, as there are several abandoned reservations in that territory.

The bill failed to pass the House. It is believed that Senator Crane proposes to again introduce this bill early in the next session. It will be introduced in a somewhat different manner from the old one. It will provide for a "Lepers Home" instead of "Leprosarium," as this latter term conveyed the impression that the disease was more prevalent in the United States than it really is.

To Search For Cure.

Leprosy was regarded by the Israelites as incurable. In fact the records of ancient times show the great fear in which it has always been held. Medical science has learned little or nothing regarding leprosy. One of the strongest arguments for the care of the "unclean" is, that such an institution would make possible a careful study of the disease and, perhaps, in time result in the discovery of a cure. There is a government institution for the care of lepers in Hawaii, at Meholak, where often a leper is separated from his family by forcible means. Fathers and mothers are taken from their children, a child from its parents, a friend from friend—and all this at a time when the afflicted is to all intents and purposes perfectly well. Government officials state, however, that is not the idea in the establishment of this new institution under the Crane bill, to take any leper from his family by forcible means. The plan will be merely to isolate all cases.

LEPER AT WALLS OF JERUSALEM.

MILADY'S DIAMONDS.

HISTORY OF THE NECKLACE. ITS MANUFACTURE AFFORDS MUCH EMPLOYMENT.

Raw Diamonds as Dug Are Comparatively Cheap—Great Cost Comes From the Polishing, Cutting and Filing.

One morning last spring there appeared in the London papers graphic descriptions of the arrival at Southampton of the "Cullinan," the 3,022 carat (25 oz.) diamond found in the Premier mine, Johannesburg, in January. Details of the appearance of the two agents from South Africa, the black bag carried by the older and said to contain the biggest diamond in the world, the crowd at the docks, the detectives sent from Scotland Yard, filled a column. As a matter of fact, the Cullinan made the trip from Johannesburg to London in an ordinary, inconspicuous package through the registered mail, postage two shillings. It is not impossible that the Southampton romance was conceived and paid for at advertising rates by the owners for underwriters to divert attention, for the diamond was valued at four million and insured for two and a half million dollars.

This necklace took the highest award at the Saint Louis Exposition. Its value is $250,000. It contains French Crown Diamonds presented by Napoleon to Josephine on their divorce, and which later passed through many hands, including the notorious Mme. Humbert. It has always brought disaster to the possessor. It also contains two big stones which served as cuff buttons for "Boss" Tweed of New York; three diamonds from Lady Hope's (May Yoke) collection; Alvin Joslin gem and Maximilian diamonds. Exhibited by Maurice Bower of New York.

Two more large diamonds have since been found in the same mine, one weighing 334 carats and the other 469 carats. One wonders who can afford to buy these stones. It will cost enormously to put them on the market. Most diamonds are sold outright by the miner to the cutter, and one of the biggest South African diamond kings has said that the margin of profit upon which the entire diamond industry is carried on is but little larger than the percentage of gain in any other line of business.

The jewellers of Paris claim that in proportion as the value of the diamonds in a necklace decreases, so does the cost of setting increase. A diamond necklace that sells for $14,000, has cost the jeweller $600 in mounting, while one that sells for $200,000 will require an expenditure of only $300 in the mounting. From the $199,700 remaining in the latter case, still further deductions must be made for the expense of preparing the stones. The figures obtained on a $200,000 necklace in a Paris shop indicated that the diamonds composing it were valued at much less than $89,000 when rough. The woman who buys such an ornament contributes more to the actual prosperity of the working class than many of the so-called social reformers who rave at her extravagance.

How Diamonds are Cut.

So far, Europe has been the center of the diamond-cutting industry. In Amsterdam there are more than 15,000 cutters, in Antwerp 3,000, in the Jura Mountain district 600, in Paris 200 and in London only 150. They are divided into three classes, cleavers, shapers and polishers. The cleaver examines the rough diamond, and if he finds a flaw cuts it into as many perfect gems as the grain of the carbon will permit. For this purpose the rough stone is set in a mold to which it is securely attached with aluminum, and then applied to the cutting tool—a circular saw about 5 inches in diameter, made of soft copper, with a mixture of oil and diamond dust rubbed into the edge. The saw rotates at a tremendous speed, being turned by a leather belt running from an engine. An expert cleaver, if paid so much per diamond cut could make from $60 to $80, and as one cleaver furnishes work for 50 or 60 shapers, would quickly work himself out of a job. Consequently, he prefers to go slowly and receive a monthly wage of $120.

The shapers or "bruteurs" outline the form in which the diamond will ultimately appear. In this operation, the "bruteur" takes two stones of similar size and hardness, fits each into a metal cap, sets one in a machine that resembles a carpenter's lathe, and as it revolves the second stone is pressed against it. The dust caused by the friction is caught in a tiny box. Before the invention of this machine, the "bruteur" held the diamonds between the thumb and forefinger of each hand and rested the little fingers on the sides of the tank, which is made of brass. In time the constant pressure on the brass wore the sides of the box into grooves, while the metal fork which form part of the apparatus, the diamond is held against the revolving disc, and as sometimes a stone less than an eighth of an inch in diameter has 100 facets, great nicety on the part of the workman is required, and the position of the diamond is changed more than 100 times before the requisite lustre and finish are secured. The polisher works always with a magnifying glass, and makes from $3.00 to $4.00 a day.

Three Hundred Diamonds in Necklace

In the $200,000 necklace mentioned there were 300 diamonds. Allowing three days' brutage (rough shaping), and three months' polishing on each, the sum expended for these two items alone amounts to $110,700.

After the stones arrived at the jeweller's, they had, of course, to be mounted. To this end the big shops of Paris employ a staff of designers, goldsmiths, silversmiths, setters and polishers. Usually, the designers are men who have come into the shop in a less important capacity, shown talent, been sent by the firm to an art school and put through a course of instruction. According to his ability, a designer earns from $60 to $160 a month. He may work for months without producing a single sketch that goes to the studios, then in a week he will turn out two or three that meet the difficult taste of the employer. Designs are done in water colors.

In Paris, the real Jeweller is not the owner of the shop, but the craftsman who fashions the gold or platinum into the skeleton that holds the precious stones. In America he is called a gold or silversmith. Each separate clasp or gem-holder, goes first to the polisher. Then to a jeweller who assembles, or joins together, the entire frame for the necklace, tiara, or whatever the design may call for, and again to the polisher.

The setter, as his name indicates, fastens or sets the diamonds into the framework, and sends it on a last visit to the polisher.

Polishers are Women.

The polishers are usually women. As a rule they work in groups of five or six under a patroness, who keeps a little apartment in a narrow street in Montmartre, Gailion, Mail, or some other cheap and crowded quarter of Paris. With good luck the patroness makes from $1,000 to $1,200 a year. The polishers are taken as apprentices at 14 years of age. At 16 they may get forty to sixty cents a day, and at 18 a dollar to a dollar twenty.

The labor of all these craftsmen on the necklace in mind amounted to about $300, which added to $110,700 for preparing the diamonds, and deducted from the selling price of $200,000 left only $89,000 to cover cost of rough stones, incidental expense of handling, etc., could not have left any phenomenal profit for the mine owner who dug and delivered them to the cutter. Such a necklace is said to furnish work enough to support 400 families for a year. Of course, this does not take into consideration the workers in the mines, nor the heavy staff of clerks and officials necessary to carry on the big diamond producing fields. The business of finishing the raw diamond for the final purchase offers the best paid labor to be found in Europe. Owing to the duty on cut gems brought into this country, American dealers are building up a similar industry in the United States, and it is rational to suppose that the craftsmen employed in this country will receive even still higher wages than those paid abroad.

Have Several Lives.

"At this height," said the guide, as they paused on the mountain side to gaze down the valley, far below, "people with weak lungs often die."

"Wonderful country, wonderful climate," murmured the visitor.

"How's that?" said the guide, suspiciously.

"Why I suppose of course you have a way of bringing them to life again for the next dying."

Each one has adopted his own method of Cabinet consultation. President Roosevelt might be said to have a Cabinet of specialists. He has selected men whom he believed peculiarly fitted to administer the affairs of the different departments. At the bi-weekly Cabinet meetings, which are held when the President is in his executive office in Washington, each Cabinet officer presents a short resume of the condition of his department. If there is any matter that has arisen under his jurisdiction that is of a widespread, general character it is reserved for discussion by himself and the President, and perhaps one or two other members of the Cabinet who remain after the formal meeting. Great questions of national and international policy are not matters of general discussion in Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet. They are taken up and debated by the President and those Cabinet officers whom he believes are specially qualified to give expert opinion upon them.

The late President McKinley had an entirely different method and the meetings of his Cabinet were actual state councils. Every matter affecting the nation at large or bearing upon our international relations was brought up at these meetings and each one of the President's advisors was requested to submit his opinion. The Secretary of Agriculture was asked for his views on the advance on Pekin, while the opinion of the Secretary of State on the type of battleships to be adopted by the Navy was welcomed. Mr. McKinley believed in this way that he secured the best results and it also gave his cabinet officers an opportunity to exhibit whatever of talent or genius of statesmanship they possessed.

To Remove a Tight Ring.

A very simple way of removing a very tight ring from the finger is to take a piece of small cord or wrapping thread and push one end of it under the ring. Then, taking hold of the other end of the string, begin winding around the finger from close up against the ring to the very tip of the finger. Then, to remove the ring, take hold of the end of the cord that was slipped under the ring and unwind the cord. As the unwinding progresses the ring will be carried along with it and removed without difficulty.

OLD DESERT JOURNEYS.

MODERN CIVILIZATION, THRIFT AND ABUNDANCE IN SAGE BRUSH COUNTRY.

Where Sunshine and Fertile Soil Await the Coming of Canal-Borne Water to Laugh Abundant Harvests.

C. J. Blanchard.

EL PASO, Tex. (Special).—On the Southeast border of the Great American Desert, where our sister republic Mexico touches the commonwealth of Texas on the East and the progressive old-young territory of New Mexico on the North, stands the "largest city in the largest Congressional district of the largest State of the greatest Nation on the earth."

To the Easterner who first visits this charming city and enjoys the hospitality which its citizens know so well how to extend, the question is uppermost, what makes a city here? After journeying more than 500 miles across Western Kansas and the Panhandle of Texas, the short grass country, where it is all one vast cattle range, down into the adobe hills and sage brush wastes of eastern New Mexico, there is a reason for asking this question. You naturally want to know from whence comes all this hustle and bustle with all these evidences of progress and substantial growth. All your no-

RUINS OF OLD SPANISH CHURCH. Tions long held and regretfully let go of, are that this sunny land of the border is the land of mañana, of tomorrow; that its day of awakening is not yet come. Well, wake up! Life is just as real, just as earnest and as strenuous in El Paso as in New York or Chicago, and when you rub up in business against the El Pasoan you need all your shrewdness and business acumen.

The Old and The New.

El Paso is old—very old, and El Paso is new, too—very new. This delightful paradox is full of surprises and charms. Right up against the old Spanish dwelling of adobe with long, low windows, heavily barred, and its patio in the center, you are likely to find a modern office building with elevators and electric lights. Something of a feeling of living in the past comes over you when you enter one of the old churches, down here—churches erected more than 300 years ago. The solemn silence of these shadowy halls has been broken by the prisms of countless thousands and softly intoned arias were echoing here long before the eyes of the Anglo-

Site for the Great Rio Grande Dam.

A New Mexican Irrigation Scene.

Saxon had looked upon Plymouth Rock. In the first half of the Sixteenth Century the Spanish Conquistadores seeking new fields of conquest for the glory of Spain, swept up the Rio Grande Valley. They found pastoral settlements of Pueblo Indians practicing agriculture through the aid of irrigation, carrying the precious waters of the Rio Grande out upon the desert and reaping harvests from fields which had been in cultivation beyond the traditions of the oldest members of the tribe. Spanish settlements followed the conquerors. With the ready adaptability of the early explorers they utilized the old irrigation systems.

Thresh by Trampling of Goats. The unprogressiveness of the Spaniard is no where more strikingly revealed than in the Rio Grande Valley, where the descendants of the early Spanish explorers are to-day engaged in agriculture in just the same manner as their forefathers practiced it, and indeed with methods strangely like those in the days of Abraham. You can see them reap with the sickle and thresh by the trampling of goats.

Progressive Americans settling in the upper reaches of the Rio Grande in later years, showed small regard for the settlers in the lower valley. Soon their long lines of broad canals began to make sad inroads in the water supply which was needed for the old canals, Mexico, Texas and New Mexico were arrayed against Colorado which robbed them of their priceless heritage and threatened to transform thousands of acres of fruitage and bloom into its original state—that of the desert. As the water grew scarce there sprang up hostilities between the citizens of the whole Rio Grande Valley. Neighbor began to be arrayed against neighbor; there were even family rows over the water. For years these conditions prevailed. Mexico made respectful protest against the use of the waters of the Rio Grande in Colorado which deprived the ancient canals of the Republic of their rights long established. The Comity of Nations was threatened.

To Build a Huge Dam.

It was the passage of the National Irrigation act which wrought a wondrous change in the conditions and knit together in one brotherhood all the citizens of the lower valley, imbuing them with a spirit of co-operation and enthusiasm. The Reclamation Service took hold of the project and worked out a plan to store the vast Rio Grande floods which were annually a source of much loss to the valley and which were wholly unutilized. This plan the people have accepted as a salvation.

One hundred miles above El Paso the Rio Grande flows through a deep narrow canyon. A dam 255 feet high across its lower end will create the largest artificial reservoir in this country. It will make a lake 40 miles long, 1 1/2 miles wide and from 100 to 175 feet deep. It will contain water enough to cover 2,000,000 acres a foot deep.

Into this vast reservoir the greatest flood the Rio Grande has ever known will quickly disappear and later when needed by 200,000 thirsty acres in the valley below will be released and led through a net work of canals and ditches through New Mexico into Texas, clear down into Old Mexico.

The Settlers Pay the Cost.

It will cost millions to do this work. $7,000,000 is the figure, but what of that? The settlers will gladly pay for it. Under the magic of irrigation—Mesilla, La Palomas and El Paso valleys, now only dotted here and there with green verdure, will spring into full fruitage, producing harvests unrivalled in quality and quantity. Ten thousand new homes will cover the desert plain, and El Paso, the central point for transportation and the greatest market in the valley, will wax into a city of 100,000 souls. Twenty thousand acres of irrigated land support a splendid city now. What shall it be when 200,000 acres are added to the crop producing area of El Paso territory?

THE INTELLIGENCE OF ANIMALS.

An English Naturalist Believes That It May Be Far Greater Than Imagined.

Sir John Lubbock has brought more popular attention to the subject of the mental capacity of animals than any other writer. He has conducted many careful investigations on the senses, instincts and intelligence of animals and insects. An interesting query propounded by the English scientist relates to the existence of other organs of sense than ours.

"We find," he says, "in animals complex organs of sense, richly supplied with nerves, but the function of which we are as yet powerless to explain. There may be fifty other senses as different from ours as sound is from sight, and even within the boundaries of our own senses there may be end-

COMMERCIAL DISHONESTY.

AN UNACKNOWLEDGED TRAIT OF JAPANESE MERCHANTS.

They Have No Regard For a Contract—Striking Contrast With Chinese Traders.

With the treaty of peace, Japan has seen the accomplishment of a task that has been the ambition of the empire—to hold front rank in the family of nations. This has been brought about through such military achievements as have evoked the admiration of the civilized powers, but now it seems that Japan has still before her a problem which means harder work and a greater task than that which she had before the commencement of the Russo-Japanese war.

That task, is to redeem the commercial reputation of her traders, a reputation which is not enviable. Joseph Walton, a member of the English parliament, a man who has spent much time in travel and knows the people of the East thoroughly, says in his book on the Orient:

"Japanese traders are not specially distinguished for honesty, particularly in their business relations with foreigners. We have in this a most striking proof that the character of the people is largely formed by the nature of their surroundings. For hundreds of years the trading class in Japan has occupied a very low place in the social scale. In the last thirty years, since the feudal system has been abolished, the position of the traders has greatly changed, and now some of those who were nobles are engaged in trade; and I am told there is reason to hope that shortly business affairs in Japan will be conducted on more honest lines."

Peculiar Business Dishonesty.

The progress which the Japanese have made in the past fifty years shows them to be a people self-reliant and determined to keep on advancing towards the highest plane attainable, yet travelers in the East have been surprised that the traders of the Occident are so notoriously dishonest, for while the Japanese are far superior to the Chinese as regards achievement of national strength and perseverance, yet the reverse is true in the matter of commercial honesty.

It appears that the Japanese merchants have no regard for a contract. It is said that the most prosperous commercial houses of Japan are managed not by Japanese but by Chinese. The average Chinese merchant is highly esteemed the world over for his honesty; in fact a president of one of the largest corporations of the United States once said that he would not be afraid to ship a barrel of gold coin to a Chinese merchant with instructions to make use of it in trade, but at the end of the year he would receive a detailed statement of where every coin went, but if this were done to a Japanese merchant, he would consider himself lucky to get back the empty barrel.

It is believed that the hard task accomplished by the Japanese in the war just happily brought to an end will be a beginning to bring out the genius for which the Japanese have been noted in war to a utilization of peace and commercialism.

THE MEERSCHAUM PIPE.

Almost Impossible to Select a Genuine One.

A story is told of a smoker who spent eight of the best years of his life trying to color a meerschaum pipe, keeping it enclosed most of the time in a case so as to prevent it getting scratched and its finish being dulled by the oil and moisture from his hands, only to find at the end of that period that he had been tenderly nursing an imitation instead of the genuine "ecume de mer." The best imitation is composed of the parings of genuine meerschaum, combined with a mineral clay. These compositions can usually be determined from the genuine meerschaum by their greater weight, but there is no absolutely certain test for distinguishing the counterfeit. One method of test is to look for slight imperfections. Composition bowls never exhibit these slight blemishes, which result from the presence of foreign bodies in the natural meerschaum; however, as the blemishes do not usually manifest themselves until after the bowl has been used for some time, the test is not of much value in buying new pipes. Meerschaum is a silicate of magnesia, and preparatory to carving it is soaked in a composition of wax and oil. The wax and oil absorbed by the meerschaum are the cause of the coloring of the pipe due to smoking, and in connection with the further absorption of nicotine. Where meerschaums have been smoked for some time without having acquired a good color, they can frequently be improved by rubbing, when warm, with beeswax.

Weakness of English Colonies.

The new commonwealth of Australia does not seem to be getting on very well. The population in the ten years ending with 1901 was 3,771,715, the increase being 697,462. The whole island continent has less population than the city of Greater New York. Long a dependent upon England, it has not developed internally. "Were Australian ports," says the Sydney Bulletin, "shut by hostile warships to-morrow, the commonwealth would be without guns or cartridges for its troops, without ships or the means of making them, without fabrics for clothing, without machinery for mine or railway, without even paper on which to print its journals. Australia would have to beseech the grace of some master, crawl to the hand of whatever power was for the time most strong, or lapse into savagery."

GOSSIP OF THE DIPLOMATS.

Foreign and Washington Notes.

The Sultan of Turkey, some short time since, granted an audience to Senator Bacon, of Georgia, and was so much charmed with that genial American gentleman that he conferred upon him the grand cordon of the Chefeak, and presented Mrs. Bacon with a lot of porcelain manufactured in the Imperial potteries. It remains to be seen whether the Georgian Senator will ask permission from Congress to be permitted to accept the order of the Sultan.

Dr. Wallason, the Czar's American dentist, lives in St. Petersburg in a palace in a quarter reserved for Grand Dukes and Ambassadors. It is furnished with such exquisite things that each room represents a fortune in itself. Wherever the Czar or Czarina or the Grand Dukes are, they always send for Dr. Wallason, and he is kept busy traveling from one end of the big Russian empire to the other.

In the same way, Dr. Thomas, an American dentist at Vienna, has been for many years an intimate friend of the Emperor, and has never betrayed the Emperor's confidence by a single indiscreet utterance.

The German Emperor's American dentist not such a very long time since committed suicide.

Each Earl of Orford, at his burial, is driven in his hearse three times round the church before his remains are finally laid to rest. The origin of this queer custom, according to family and local tradition, is that Horatio, second earl of Orford, destroyed the tomb of the Scalmer's former possessors of Mannington Hall, in Norfolkshire, and one of the unhappy ladies of this family, finding no rest, still haunts the churchyard, always searching for the remains of her relations. It is to mollify her spirit that this weird drive of the hearse round the churchyard takes place on the occasion of the obsequies of every Earl of Orford. The present Lord Orford, whose wife is Louise Corbin, daughter of D. C. Corbin, and niece of the great railroad magnate of that name, is at present traveling in this country. van Calava.

Cheerful During Trouble.

Mamma had told Dorothy that she could not go out again. The little maiden made one more plea. "Please, mamma, it isn't very wet, and I won't go on the grass." "No, you cannot, Dorothy," said mamma, smiling at the little one's persistency. "Well, anyway, mamma, it seems to me that you're very cheerful about it."

AN ENGLISHMAN WITH HUMOR.

How He Held His First Job and Mercifully Got a Raise in Wages.

Herbert Kecey, one of the leading actors of the present time, is an Englishman, but, unlike the usual type from the Island has a deep sense of humor. In speaking of his first visit to this country, he describes his experience something like this:

"Yes, I was a bit green when I came over to this country, and I had to tike hastythink in the w'y of a job. I got started in a department store on 6th avenue, and the floorwalker s'ys to me, s'ys 'e:

"Now, 'Arry, we'll give you three trials, and if you let three people get away without selling them, we'll ave to bounce you."

"Well, I came down jolly early on Monday, took my p'ice behind the counter and w'ited for customers. Pretty soon a l'idy walked up and asked me where she should t'ike the ham for New Rochelle. I didn't know, and she went aw'y. I looked at the floorwalker and the floorwalker 'e looked at me. That m'ide one," holding up a lean forefinger. "Then a man came along and stopped to ask me where 'e could buy a 'at. I told 'im where the 'at counter was, and 'e went aw'y. That m'ide two. Jolly good luck, wasn't it now? I looked at the floorwalker, and that floorwalker looked at me like 'ell, but what could I do? Then another l'idy came along as 'ad a large piece of goods to match, and she wanted another yard of the same. I took it and pulled out heverythink on the shelves, but there was no more of it left. I was in a bit of a funk then, for if I let 'er go without making a sale I would lose my job, so I sez:

"Write a bit, l'idy; I'll see if we ave any upstairs." I went up, and seeing there was no more there, either, I just cut a yard off her own goods and brought the two pieces down, rolled them up, took the money, and she went aw'y. I 'ad plenty of customers after that, but I didn't feel just comfortable, don't you know."

"The same afternoon she came back and asked for the floorwalker. "Er," sez she, "I brought five yards of goods 'ere to match this morning and bought a yard more, but when I got home I found only four yards in my own piece. Can you explain that, please?"

"I 'emmed an 'awed and tried to measure the goods and h'attemted to tell the l'idy that she must be mistaken about 'er own piece, but she only glared at me, and in a jiffy she was hup to the floorwalker expl'nin' the condition of affairs. 'Er tone indicated that she was mad, and I said to myself, "'Arry, you're a dead 'un."

"The floorwalker called me hout, and I 'ad to tell 'im all about it, 'ow the first party wanted a tram-car, and the next a 'at, and this one wanted more goods, when we 'adn't my job so I give 'er a bit from 'er own piece. The floorwalker looked so bloom'n' mad for a bit that I thought my time was come for sure, but then 'e started to laff, and 'e laffed till I thought 'e'd bust. Then 'e sez, "'Arry, sez e' I guess we'll 'ave to keep you, and raise your wages.' And 'e did."

UNRAVELLING A Tangled Skein

RICHARD CAMDEN. Author of "A DUEL OF HEARTS"

She was sitting astern, in a pretty frock of blue and white, and a big hat shading her eyes from the sun. She was reading a book while waiting for the boat to start. The Spray, a small pleasure steamer, tugged at her mooring ropes off Brighton pier.

The Honorable Geoffrey Mannering watched, from the deck of the West Pier, this fragile figure of a girl. There was something more than admiration in his gaze.

"I've been candid enough," he muttered. "The girl is scarcely more than a stranger to me. The loss of an umbrella in a soaking downpour made us acquainted. I should not have presumed upon such a triviality, but—but"—he broke off as the strain of the Spray shrieked impatiently—"but I fell in love with her upon the spot," he added, "and that's the plain, sweet, maddening truth."

A band commenced to play softly under the bridge of the boat. Verna Moore glanced up at the sound, and Geoffrey turned away swiftly, moving off with long strides.

"I must not go; I must not, really," he told himself. Heaven forbid that I should win her heart!

Verna had seen Geoffrey as he turned away. A glow of color swam into her cheeks, followed by a look of disappointment.

Verna Moore was a governess. She had been sent to Brighton to recover from the effects of an illness. She had met Geoffrey Mannering there for the first time.

"Yes, I'm in love; but, having made the confession to myself, I must forget it, drop this affair like a hot coal," Geoffrey told himself. "It is just madness, and Claire coming down to Brighton to-day!"

Madness, it was. For the Hon. Geoffrey Mannering was engaged to be married to Claire Ashberry, a baronet's daughter, and an heiress. It had been an early attachment; it had gradually developed into an engagement; partly because everyone expected that it would, and Society insisted upon it. Yet now, Geoffrey remembered certain ished. Mannering's resolution had broken down at the last moment. He would make the trip to Worthing after all.

"Put your hands higher up, Verna, nearer to my neck. We are safe, if you keep still."

The swimmer rose on the crest of a long green swell, travelling shoreward. A terrible explosion had occurred in the engine room of the Spray. She had sunk in less than fifteen minutes, with her return journey but half accomplished. There had been no panic, but her two boats were filled to the very gunwales with their human freight. Six men were venturing to swim to meet the boats, putting off from the shore. Geoffrey Mannering was one of them. He had assured Verna of his ability to save her if she would trust herself to him rather than to the overladen boats.

Verna kept perfectly still. Her feet trailing in the water gave her a terrifying sensation as of floating upon infinite depth.

The strong frame of the swimmer supporting her moved forward with its steady strokes. How calm he seemed; how confident! At that moment she loved him most; yet at that moment she knew that she might never be his.

On the return journey to Brighton, Geoffrey had told her all; had made his confession. He had said: "I love you; loved you from the day that we met. That is all my defence."

There had been a long and dreadful pause, while she wrestled with her pain, with her temptation. Then she had answered: "We must say good-bye. We must never meet again. When we land, we must shake hands for the last time. You could not help loving me any more than I could help loving you. Yes, I love you; but this is a barrier which we cannot overcome."

And then, almost immediately afterwards, the accident had occurred. The sea was very cold; the warm suns of summer had not yet penetrated its chilly bosom. He was becoming stiff

"Again!" growled Molyneux. "I seem unable to give that brute the slip." Through the open window he heard the roar of a motor-car. It ceased as it drew near to the building. Up and down paced the fugitive, fuming and fretting.

Suddenly he turned swiftly. The door was open, and he heard the voice of Geoffrey's servant: "No, he will not be long, madam; and if you will wait—ah, I had forgotten."

A well-dressed and beautiful figure entered the room. Seeing Molyneux, she uttered a cry of astonishment. Molyneux, whose feelings never betrayed him, turned to the servant and dismissed him with a couple of words. Then he faced the newcomer; he took her hands; he looked long and ardently into her face, which paled, then burned with crimson.

"Claire! You here? After all these years!"

The woman trembled. In a moment the deeps of a passion she believed she had sealed forever, broke forth. She clung, almost fainting, to his broad shoulders. Richard Molyneux it was whom she had loved in the past. He exercised an extraordinary fascination over Claire Ashberry.

"I came to see Geoffrey," she explained hurriedly. "I am staying at Hastings. He expected me at Brighton to-day. I came over to tell him that I must defer my visit. That is all. And you—you—what are you doing here, in this room? Geoffrey's room?"

"Didn't you know that he was a friend of mine?"

"A friend—to you?" Claire disengaged herself from those strong arms.

"I met him two hours back. He promised to hide me."

"To hide you?" The voice rang out in alarm.

Molyneux laughed bitterly. "Come here," said he, drawing her to the window. "You see that man—ah, there are three of them. Trapped!"

Forgetful of everything save his danger, Claire Ashberry clung to Molyneux's arm. "Who are they, Richard? Who are those men?" she demanded imperiously.

"Police officers. Let me go, dear one. Yes, the old game. State papers; a secret, sold. You'd better let me go. I must escape."

"You must escape; you shall!" cried Claire, wildly.

"How? The thing's impossible. If I had a fast car—"

"You have! There is mine; it is waiting for me. Come—oh, come quickly!" she implored.

For an instant Molyneux stood irresolute; then he said quite calmly: "I will. And you?"

"I go with you," said Claire steadily. "I shall strike northward into the Dover road, if possible, and quit England to-night," he answered.

"Where you go, I go also," said Claire.

They ran from the room. The car waited at the rear of the hotel. A minute later they were flying like a gale down the King's Road.

"You mean to tell me, Clarkson, seriously, that I have been in bed three days?"

"Three days, sir," answered Geoffrey's servant.

"A queer yarn, this, that you tell me about those two visitors," went on Geoffrey, thoughtfully. "They went off together, you say? Geoffrey broke the seal of the letter which had just arrived, and which bore a foreign postmark. He sat as if stunned, while his eyes read again and again one passage in the communication:

"Call my conduct madness, or by whatever term you will. I cannot fight against fate. I have married Richard Molyneux. We shall live abroad. He has promised me many things. Forgive me, Geoffrey; or if you cannot forgive, forget me."

Geoffrey rose after a long silence. He turned his steps toward the Old Steyne, but he had not covered a hundred yards before he saw her—Verna—sitting on a chair on the Brunswick lawns. She was looking out to sea. A gorgeous sunset had purpled the waters of the channel.

Geoffrey went up to her, softly, slowly, so that she did not hear his approach. And, leaning over her chair, suddenly, he whispered in her ear: "Verna, it was not good-bye—after all!"

Experience of an Old-Timer in the Wilds of Idaho.

"In the winter of '07," said an old miner, now in Uncle Sam's service, at Washington, "I was living in a cabin by myself in the mountains of Idaho, about seven miles from Idaho City, my nearest and only neighbor the postmaster, an Irishman and bachelor, who kept the toll house between Idaho City and the adjoining mountain towns."

"My cabin was about two miles to the East, directly among the mountains. The snow which had been falling at intervals for several months, lay about 10 feet on a level around my cabin, and my only method of travel was by snow shoes."

"I had made my tri-weekly run to see if the stage had brought any letters to the toll house for me; and while adjusting my snow shoes, preparatory to starting back, I heard a bellowing and pawing. A Texas steer, which had separated himself from the herd which had lately passed toward the town, was angrily shaking his head at me about 100 feet distant. He had run past the house from the road up the little straight path which Pat had kept open to his spring, and after drinking and turning around, had become bewildered, the snow being at least eight feet deep on either side of the path."

"This was my direct route home, and although, if I had kept on top of the snow, he could not have pursued me, the spirit of my school-boy days revived, and I removed my snow shoes and immediately made two little icy snow balls. At right angles with the path to the spring another and a similar path had been cleared to a cabin about the same distance from the toll house. As I fired the two balls in rapid succession, striking him with one in his eye, and with the other on his forehead, the steer again bellowed with rage, and lowering his head, made a rush for me. Of course I could have simply turned and gone in the toll house, but I thought to prolong the excitement, and so made a dash for the cabin. As I neared it, I saw with dismay that it was unoccupied and fastened with chain and padlock on the outside. The path ended at the cabin with ten feet of snow piled at my left and in front, the walls as smooth and perpendicular as a house.

"One thinks quickly at such moments, and the ridge pole which usually extends from miners' cabins a foot or more beyond the main building on which to hang meat and game proved my salvation. I do not know how high a jump I made to grasp it, but I am sure that I never equalled it before or since."

"As I swung my body over the pole the horns of the infuriated animal ripped off the lower part of my outside woollen shirt, and while I smiled down serenely from my point of vantage, I most devoutly thanked the good Lord that He never fails to keep good watch over drunken men and fools."

WHEN LOST IN THE WOODS.

If You Have an Axe, You May Not Have a Bad Time.

To get lost in the woods is not an uncommon occurrence, and what to do under the circumstances is so well told by Horace Kephart in "Field and Stream" that readers fond of camping and woodcraft will be interested:

"The first thing that one should do when he realizes that he has lost his bearings in a wild country is to stop and sit down. Don't take one more step until you have recovered your wits so that you can trace on the ground with a stick your probable course since leaving the camp, and mark on it the estimated location of such water-courses and other landmarks as you have passed. Then make up your mind that if you must stay out all night, alone in the woods, it is no killing matter, but likely an interesting adventure. Having recovered your mental balance, take note of the lay of the land around you, the direction of its drainage, the character of its vegetation, and the hospilities that it offers to a night-bound traveler, in the way of drinking-water, sound down wood, natural shelter and browse. Then blaze a tree on four sides—make big blazes that can be seen from any direction. Do this even though there be several hours of daylight ahead, and although you have no present intention of staying here; for you do know that this spot is only so many hours from camp by back trail, and that you may have good reason to return to it."

"Now try to get an outlook over the surrounding country. In flat woods this will be difficult. If you can risk climbing a tall tree do so. Select one that you can climb, and having gained your outlook, note the compass direction of water-courses and other landmarks, mapping them on a bit of paper, for a lost man's memory is treacherous. The courses of small streams show where the main valley lies. Decide where to go, take the compass direction, note how the sun strikes it, and descend."

"Now, as you travel, make bush-marks by making blazes on trees or breaking a shrub here and there along the trail, so you will easily follow your way back should you have to pass the night in the woods."

Americans Going to Mexico.

During the last two years over 1,500 immigrants from Oklahoma and other parts of the Southwest have located in the single State of Tamaulipas, Mexico. They have made a settlement known as the Blaylock Colony, just west of Escandon on the Gulf Railway, and have built churches, school houses and stores, and enjoy the fullest liberty of action. So it seems that Americans are crossing the southern boundary as they are the northern one to Canada.

Flight of Balloons.

On his recent visit at Ostend, the Shah of Persia had a whole lot of fun when he cut a string holding 100 toy balloons which a woman was offering for sale. He laughed heartily at her distress, but later paid her amply for his joke.

"IT WAS NOT GOOD-BYE—AFTER ALL!"

words which Claire Ashberry once spoke to him.

"I have always liked you," she had said, "and am willing to become your wife; yet I must tell you that another—you need not know his name—awoke a feeling deeper than liking, and claimed my heart. But there were obstacles in the way; my parents came between us, and he went abroad, promising never to see me again."

Again the Spray shrieked for more passengers for her trip to Worthing. She would start in five minutes. Geoffrey hesitated.

A hand was laid upon his shoulder, and a voice said, speaking in a low tone:

"Why, Mannering, is it you?"

Geoffrey turned. He was face to face with an exceedingly handsome man.

"Molyneux—you!"

"Hush! for heaven's sake!" expostulated the other, turning pale.

"Ah! You are watched—as usual? Still playing your deep and perilous games?"

"Yes, yes, I'm in a bad fix, a tight corner, I must hide for a spell."

"What—in England? In Brighton? I could understand it in Vienna—where we met last six years back. A political spy who steals a secret from the Austrians might as well be in Vesuvius as on Austrian soil, and—"

"No, you are wrong, I'm wanted in England. Certain papers I obliged the German Government with; you understand?"

Geoffrey drew back, his face flushed with anger. "What! Is exclaimed, you stooped so low as that?"

"A fortune was in it."

"You traitor!"

"Curse it! Speak quietly, I belong to no nationality. I serve all who ask me. You know that. Come, hide me somewhere! For old times' sake!"

A bell clanged at his card case, scribbling a line. "There," he said, "go to the Hotel O—, give my man that card. He'll look after you until I come."

"A thousand thanks, Geoffrey. If ever—"

The sentence was left unfinished. Mannering's resolution had broken down at the last moment. He would make the trip to Worthing after all.

"Put your hands higher up, Verna, nearer to my neck. We are safe, if you keep still."

The swimmer rose on the crest of a long green swell, travelling shoreward. A terrible explosion had occurred in the engine room of the Spray. She had sunk in less than fifteen minutes, with her return journey but half accomplished. There had been no panic, but her two boats were filled to the very gunwales with their human freight. Six men were venturing to swim to meet the boats, putting off from the shore. Geoffrey Mannering was one of them. He had assured Verna of his ability to save her if she would trust herself to him rather than to the overladen boats.

Verna kept perfectly still. Her feet trailing in the water gave her a terrifying sensation as of floating upon infinite depth.

The strong frame of the swimmer supporting her moved forward with its steady strokes. How calm he seemed; how confident! At that moment she loved him most; yet at that moment she knew that she might never be his.

On the return journey to Brighton, Geoffrey had told her all; had made his confession. He had said: "I love you; loved you from the day that we met. That is all my defence."

There had been a long and dreadful pause, while she wrestled with her pain, with her temptation. Then she had answered: "We must say good-bye. We must never meet again. LION AGAINST TIGER.

Greater Bravery Shown by the Smaller Animal.

The owner of a one-ring circus traveling through the West this summer found himself in sore straits through the death of a much advertised lion which was the star attraction of the show. With a fertile horn of necessity he advertised in the nearby papers for a "brave man." A good, strapping Irishman applied for the position.

"My pet lion has just died," said the showman. "And I will give you $5 a day if you will robe yourself in his skin and go through his tricks. All you have is two performances a day; cash money." The Irishman readily assented to the proposition and being of bright wit and intelligence soon learned all that was required of him. The first afternoon of the show he went through the paces well, enclosed in a large iron cage and occasionally emitting a roar to startle the gulleus countrymen. In the evening the manager thought he would cap the climax by announcing to the audience that he would place the lion in the tiger's cage. On hearing this the son of Erin was terrified beyond comprehension. However, with trembling steps he went into the tiger's cage, but at once crept up into a corner, praying to himself: "Faith, God help me in this terrible trouble," he moaned. "Kape away from me the scratches of the big cat."

"Q'wan," replied the tiger, "phwat yer snaking up there like that, ain't meself too a wearer of the green?"

THE PICTURESQUE DAIRIES OF EUROPE.

Government Investigation Shows Them Below the American Standard.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

We often hear of the model dairies of Europe, co-operative dairies into which a speck of dirt is never allowed to lodge, of Danish butter that is in truth a dream and brings a fabulous price, of eggs guaranteed fresh and country-like, and other reports of the way they do things on the fine old farms of Europe until one begins to think that one can not be more than half living in this country. But how much of this sort of thing will bear investigation and close analysis?

The Dairy Division of the United States Department of Agriculture is a progressive and useful institution and has done several things to destroy prevailing fallacies and incidentally establish the fact that American methods as a whole, in at least some phases of agriculture, are as far if not farther advanced than those of any other country.

Not the least interesting of such information gathered was that collected by the late Henry E. Alvord, for many years the chief of the Dairy Division, in a tour of the countries of Europe conditions do exist abroad—where the cow is taken in as a member of the family—as they do in no place in the United States, but they are the exception. Stables which in summer are converted into conservatories and rooms for weaving and cheese curing are the unusual and show places. The construction of cow stables generally in the dairy countries of the Old World is of a substantial nature, with little regard paid to light and ventilation, conveniences of arrangement or ease in cleaning. While much attention is paid to cleaning cow stables, it is apparently more from an appreciation of the value of the manure than from an effort to have sanitary conditions in the dairy.

Foreigners Provide Good Feed. There is one thing where Europeans may be ahead of Americans. They seem to be better versed in the feeding of cattle. Even the poorest peasants do not hesitate to purchase concentrated cattle foods where necessary, yet it appears that the only reason the natives can give for this practice is the ple room for improvement in our country, the only foreign country from which the United States has possibly learn anything is Denmark. There the best crammers are models of cleanliness, good order, and systematic management. But all these details are accomplished only through a lavish expenditure of labor which would appal an American creamery manager. It is not an uncommon thing for six or eight persons to be constantly employed for six or eight hours a day, turning out a quantity of butter which is ordinarily made in this country by a man and a boy who have all the work finished daily at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Major Alvord found it impossible to draw any comparisons between the methods of cheese-making and the results in this country and those abroad. It is believed that the American factory system, common to the United States and Canada, is superior to anything elsewhere. In variety and fancy cheese this continent can not yet at-large scale. The ordinary big green cucumber pickles are usually quite free from older vinegar. The only way to make them edible is to soak the pickles in strong brine, to extract the acid, then to soak them in water to get out the brine, and finally pickle them in real vinegar.

Pure vinegar can be made as well from other fruits as from apples. Grapes, plums, and other fruits which contain a considerable proportion of sugar, which is converted into alcohol and then into acetic acid, make good vinegar.

The Department of Agriculture has in press a short bulletin on vinegars, which can be had upon application to members of Congress. It is known as Farmers' Bulletin No. 233 and is compiled from the work of the various agricultural experiment stations on this subject.

SELLING MILK IN DENMARK

for the purpose of looking into the dairy industry of the continent.

Major Alvord stated first, upon his return home, that while the United States has never evolved a strictly dairy cow of its own, it has now nothing to gain through the importation of new blood from Great Britain, the Channel Islands, the Netherlands, Denmark or France. There are many picturesque and useful breeds of milch cattle in these countries, but they do not compare, he stated, with the adapted American breeds. For instance,

Holland Cheese Market.

Danish Prize Winners.

Brittany, in the north of France, has within its borders pretty, active little black-and-white cattle with marked dairy characteristics, producing often an astounding quantity of milk for their size, but they are believed to be useful in the United States only as playthings.

American Cow Stables Up to Average

In the stabling and general care of dairy cows no foreign country shows, in general practice, any methods or conditions better than our own. While the average conditions throughout the country are undoubtedly far from what they should be, the United States farmer and dairyman are making as rapid strides forward as can be found anywhere.

Major Alvord found comparatively few places in Holland and Switzerland where there is such close relationship between the dairy cows and families as the occupancy of connecting apartments, so often described in poetic fancy by European travelers. These stereotyped answer—"My father did so." The American farmer, Major Alvord thought, has undoubtedly a much more intelligent knowledge of the principles of feeding, but there is probably more carelessness and waste in feeding animals of all kinds in America than anywhere else in the world.

The most astonishing feature of Europe in the care of milk on the farm is the entire absence of refrigeration in France, and the general ignoring of the value of cold in dairying. In the matter of dairy appliances and equipment, the United States is surpassed by no other country, although Denmark and parts of Great Britain stand about as well.

In most big cities of Europe there are a few well-conducted milk delivery establishments, such as are usually found in our smallest cities, while in some localities dairy animals are driven through the streets and milked at customers' doors. Milch cows are managed in the same way even in the best streets of Paris and of Rome. Paris probably has the poorest milk service of any of the large cities. During the Exposition at Paris in July, 1900, a special show of perishable dairy products was held as an annex to that exposition.

Paris Milk Exhibit Very Poor.

While the French producers had every opportunity of exhibiting their goods in the best possible shape, the only samples of natural milk and cream, absolutely free from chemical preservatives and uncooked, which were sweet and palatable after noon of the exhibition day, were from the dairies in New York and New Jersey, then eighteen days from the cow! The American products had been preserved solely by cleanliness and cold. Major Alvord made the statement on his return from Europe that no milk-supply company in Europe could duplicate this performance. In butter-making, while there is am-tempt to compete with the Old World. In order to learn the bottom facts about making any of the famous specialties in cheese, it is necessary to go to the locality where they originate.

Making Dairy Work Popular. Americans find novelty in Europe in the "fairs" and "markets" where products of the dairy are sold to the highest bidder. In Normandy the wives and daughters of farmers and peasants assemble by the hundred in the parks or along the streets, selling their "mottes" of butter. The cheese fairs of Frome, England, and Kilmarnock, Scotland, and the street markets of Alkmaar, Hoorn, and Utrecht, Holland, also present lively and interesting spectacles in connection with the sale of dairy products.

Major Alvord's observations show that while too much can not be said of the industry, frugality and thrift of Europe's dairymen, a close comparison leads one to feel that the conditions of the industry in the United States are decidedly more satisfactory in almost every particular.

Wholesome Cider Vinegar.

In an ordinary cheap restaurant the safest thing to do if you wish to use some vinegar on your food is to try and get half a lemon. Then you will know that you are not eating out the lining of your stomach with caustic chemicals. Vast quantities of "pure cider vinegar" are quite innocent of the meaning of apples and are distinctly injurious, being purchased by the retail dealer in barrels, at seven to ten cents a gallon, which every apple grower knows is a prohibitive price for cider vinegar. However, real cider vinegar is a good condiment. The reason it can not be sold for the prices at which chemical vinegar is offered is that it takes from one to three years to make properly.

The cider first must go through the process of alcoholization, and then be changed into acetic acid. There are methods of artificially hastening this process, but the product is not first class, and it can only be done on a

The officers of the Board of Trade met Thursday evening at Empey Bros.' store. It was decided to take up the matter of advertising for industries and also to look up wood-working manufacturers.

If you are thinking of buying a Watch for Christmas go to Mack's Jewelry Store, and pick out the one you want and have it laid away. He has an elegant assortment and he guarantees everyone. His prices are exceptionally low.

The marriage of William A. Lanway to Miss Mary A. Anderson took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rogers Tuesday evening, Oct. 31st. Rev. G. E. Allen, pastor of the M. E. church officiating. The groom is son of W. E. Lanway and the bride is a Belleaire girl.

The football game of Saturday last resulted in a score of 12 to 6 in favor of the Petoskey team. The work of our own team shows that they have been practicing of late. The report that one of the Petoskey boys was injured in the game is untrue. The young fellow referred to was sick before he went into the game, and afterward became faint.

Miss Grace Nowland is at home sick with the jaundice.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Todd made a trip to Petoskey one day last week.

Miss Mabel Shephard has been spending the past week at her home in this place.

Gilbert Farmer has gone to Horton's Bay to visit his brother, Charles Farmer, of that place.

Miss Jessie Metz of South Arm tw. was a guest at Fred Holland's a short time recently.

Mrs. Arthur Graves has been visiting relatives in the south the past two weeks.

Charles Church of Mitchell visited his sister, Mrs. Loren Frost, the first of the week.

Mrs. Wm. Nowland, of Charlevoix, is spending a week with relatives and friends in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jones of Boyne City were guests at Chas. Hudkin's on Mynday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Liscom and Louis Isaman of South Arm Grange were visitors at Wilson Grange Saturday evening.

Wilson Grange met in regular session last Saturday evening. After a short business meeting the doors were opened to the children and other relatives of the members. A short program was rendered by the members, after which the entire company enjoyed the game supper prepared by the ladies. Tables were set 3 times before all were served, as the hall was well filled. The star of which Chas. Hudkins was Captain was declared victorious in the hunt. Another hunt was proposed about Thanksgiving time. Further particulars will be given later.

Dr. H. Belmer, dentist, of Kalkaska, will locate in our city this coming week. He comes highly recommended and has been practicing at Kaska a number of years. His office will be over Sherman's Market in the suite of rooms recently occupied by Dr. S. B. Foster.

About twenty-five invited guests assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Raino last Tuesday evening to help their host and hostess celebrate their twelfth wedding anniversary. Cards, a nice lunch and a jolly good time was indulged in. Mr. and Mrs. Raino were the recipient of several handsome presents.

"I had the pleasure of hearing Miss Marton Hillabrant, the lady harpist, play and she is certainly a most gifted young lady.—Anna B. Sutherland." (Miss Sutherland is a shining star on the American Stage and one of the greatest actresses who ever visited East Jordan—she will be remembered by some who saw her in Du Barry about two years ago.)

County Clerk Darwin F. Meech was in our city first of the week granting deer licenses to a number of local hunters. Among those planning for a hunting trip are: Ernest O. Coy, W. L. French, Dr. H. W. Dicken, Dr. C. A. Sweet, John Mollard, Horace Hipp, Ira D. Bartlett, Wm. Bennett, Henry Bennett, Clayton Shapton, Fred Palmer, Nelson Muma, George G. Glenn, Jacob H. Graff, I. W. Bartlett and Herman Dane. Ozark and Seoney will be the destination of most of them.

We have received the official program for the 45th annual convention of the Michigan State Sunday School Association to be held in the City Opera House of Traverser on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, Nov. 14, 15 and 16. In addition to many well-known Sunday school workers in Michigan there are on the program the names of numerous speakers of prominence from the large cities and no doubt the sessions will all be interesting and profitable.

Washington, D. C.—To whom it may concern; Miss Edna George has been, with me at two of my Chautauquas, as reader. She has given absolute satisfaction. There is a refreshing naturalness about her work, and she is thoroughly unlike most professional readers in this respect. She is especially attractive in the monologue reading of the "Adventure of Lady Ursula." The characters are all splendidly portrayed, and the story itself is of fascinating interest.—Wilber L. Davidson, D. D., Manager National Chautauqua Bureau, At Loveday Opera House Tuesday night—next.

Neuralgia And Other Pain.

All pain in any disease is nerve pain, the result of a turbulent condition of the nerves. The stabbing, lacerating, darting, burning, agonizing pain that comes from the prominent nerve branches, or sensory nerves, is neuralgia, and is the "big brother" of all the other pains.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills rarely ever fail to relieve these pains by soothing these larger nerves, and restoring their tranquility.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills leave no bad after-effects, and are a reliable remedy for every kind of pain, such as headache, backache, stomachache, sciatica, rheumatism and neuralgia.

They also relieve Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Car-Sickness, and Distress after eating.

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia and headache, and have never been able to obtain any relief from various headache powders and capsules, until I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They always cure my headache in five minutes time." FRED B. STUBBS, Cashier 1st Nat. Bank, Atkinson, Neb.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

E. J. Band Talks Turkey

The East Jordan Military Band used nearly a column in last week's Herald to notify the public that the organization is about to disband, and incidentally took advantage of the occasion to read the riot act to the business men and the village officials for their indifference and lack of material support of the band. During the past two years and a half the article claims, not enough has been realized over actual expenses to buy a postage stamp. The claim is made that neighboring towns use public money to assist in paying their band instructors, and for the street concerts which the various bands give.

The Journal believes that East Jordan has a good band, one that is a credit to the place, and if it is so we doubt very much whether our sister village will let it disband for lack of support. If the members are doing their share the citizens can afford to do the rest.—The Boyne City Journal

Money to Gamble But None to Pay a Death Claim.

The world-at-large has little sympathy for W. W. Allis, the millionaire and social leader who played roulette in Milwaukee the other night and lost $41,000. He can afford to lose it just as "Reggie" Vanderbilt could afford to lose $450,000 in Cardiff's gambling house in New York two years ago.

Mr. Allis is one of the principal owners of the Allis-Chalmers company. That this company might have the open prairies to light labor organizations in, it moved its plant from Chicago to the country north of the city. It employs labor at the least possible scale. Every member of the firm is an unalterable, cannon-shooting enemy of union workshops.

In all large industries laborers get crippled, crushed, killed. This means widows, orphans, poverty, hunger, wretchedness. It would seem that justice should require that accidents should be charged up to business. Especially should this be so when a laborer gets killed in the discharge of his duties and when he has not contributed toward negligence.

Something over a year ago one Joseph Malinowski was crushed while drawing straw from Mr. Allis. He died leaving a widow, poor, shrinking, hungry and crying, appealed to Mr. Allis for help. There was nothing he could do. She saw a lawyer.

This man asked that she be given something without going to the courts. She could not wait long enough for a suit to be tried. She would starve. And it was then Mr. Allis' concern offered to settle for $200. That was all the human life was worth according to their system of bookkeeping. But for playing cards—ah, that's another matter. And he did so. He must be a "dead game sport" all right.—Exchange.

We are glad of one of the new reforms. It is directed against opening the coffin at funerals. If there was ever anything that is indecent and distressing, it is the opening of a casket at a funeral and permitting every one to go by and stare at the dead.

The new theory of leading physicians, that typhoid fever is contagious, is very important if true. It will necessitate a complete revolution in the treatment of typhoid patients to prevent them from coming into contact with the public or with the members of their family.

Backache is never known to these persons who take an occasional dose of Pineules. The value of the resin obtained from the Pine tree has long been recognized in the treatment of diseases of the bladder and kidneys. One dose of Pineules will give relief, and one bottle will cure. VARICOCELE NERVOUS DEBILITY CURED

If you have transgressed against the laws of nature, you must suffer. Youthful ignorance, later excesses and nervous diseases have wrecked thousands of promising lives. Treat with scientific physicians and be cured. Avoid quacks, E. A. Sidney, or Toledo, says: "At an early age I was the victim of youthful ignorance. I treated myself with a dozen doctors, who all promised to cure me. They got my money and I still had the disease. I had given up hope when a friend advised me to consult Drs. K. & K., who had cured him. Without any confidence I called on them, and Dr. Kennedy agreed to cure me or no pay. After taking the New Method Treatment for six weeks I felt like a new man. The weakness ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair stopped falling out, urine became clear and my physical system vitalized. I was entirely cured by Dr. Kennedy and recommend him from the bottom of my heart."

WHEN YOU CATCH COLD

Do not take chances on it wearing away or experiment with some unknown preparation which may leave the bronchial tubes and lungs weakened and susceptible to attack from the germs of Pneumonia or Consumption.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

not only stops the cough but heats and strengthens the lungs and prevents serious results from a cold. Contains no opiates.

It Saved His Life After the Doctor Said He Had Consumption.

W. R. Davis, Vissalia, California, writes: "There is no doubt but what Foley's Honey and Tar saved my life. I had an awful cough on my lungs and the doctor told me I had consumption. I commenced taking Foley's Honey and Tar and found relief from the first and three bottles cured me completely."

A Policeman's Testimony.

J. N. Patterson, night policeman, of Nashua, Iowa, writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least a half-dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two-thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world."

Three sizes—25c, 50c and $1.00. The 50-cent size contains two and one-half times as much as the small size and the $1.00 bottle almost six times as much. Beware Substitutes.
