School Entertainments.

To Be Given for Benefit of Library and Laboratory Fund.

The East Jordan High School students desire to make addition to both their library and laboratory and to do this have decided to conduct a series of entertainments, the course ticket to cost only one dollar.

The Literature Class have shown great interest in the story of "Merchant of Venice," and on Friday evening, February 16th, they will present the trial scene, in costume, at Loveday Opera House, and a series of tableaux, readings, and musical selections will constitute the program for this evening.

During the week of March 12th a series of entertainments will be given which for quality have never been excelled in our city. Montaville Flowers of Cincinnati will be heard in a series of interpretive monologues from masterpieces. Mr. Flowers has only one rival for first place as an interpreter on the American platform. His regular lecture fee is too large to be afforded—but by taking three nights in succession, after the regular season closes we are enabled to have the series. Mr. Flowers comes direct from a tour of the Pacific coast where he is the principal attraction of the big courses in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, etc. His last date before East Jordan is Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Mr. Flowers will be heard in a series of three monologues. He has a repertoire of five, as follows: "Ben Hur, a Tale of the Christ"; "A Christmas Carol"; "The Merchant of Venice"; "Les Miserables"; and "The Little Minister."

Montaville Flowers presents a story involving many characters of widely differing manners and voices, and conflicting purposes and deeds; sometimes a wrathful patriot, an impulsive Jew, a love-sick maid, a fierce warrior, a manly youth, an avaricious Scrooge, a drunken roisterer; an undertaking in itself obviously difficult. Unless well given, a monologue of such complications and elaborateness is apt to descend into a farce, and the speaker into a caricature to be laughed at. He must be natural; he must not overdo; he must not become monotonous; he should not allow the auditor to become drowsy and uninterested. He must be dramatic, but subdued; he must read with proper and fitting tones, but he must not really act in a theatrical sense. Mr. Flowers meets every demand, and meets them all pleasingly. He is an impersonator of great versatility and wide resource. He succinctly tells the story in dialogue, called from the original; happy in his choice of passages, because, keeping in mind that the dramatic quality is the indispensable essential to prevent monotony. Thus he has a story full of spirit, and one that in itself holds an audience. He develops it with evenness, and throughout it wears the language of the author. Mr. Flowers' work, as presented in the series of recitals here, is something to be proud of.—The Louisville Courier-Journal. (Aroni, Critic.)

Popular Cartoons.

The art of newspaper illustration in its present form is a development of recent years. Newspaper cartoons have become a most popular feature of up-to-date metro politan daily papers. The unique and catchy drawing now appearing daily on the front page of The Chicago Record-Herald is one of the many special features of the great paper. The Record-Herald has been fortunate in securing one of the best young artists in the country to carry out its popular policy of presenting each day a humorous and good-natured cartoon. Mr. Ralph Wilder is one of the coming men in newspaper work. His success has been as pronounced as it has been rapid. He shows all of the good-natured humor and the brighter side of everyday common life which has carried his work to a very popular success. His drawings are on all of the various subjects of popular interest, political and otherwise. Current events are vividly portrayed in a way that pleases, yet often giving just criticism in a way that does not offend. Through his excellent work on eastern magazines Mr. Wilder first attracted universal attention. The Record-Herald recognized in him at once a cartoonist of unusual promise, and congratulates its readers on having been fortunate enough to engage him.

Successful Lecture.

A good-sized crowd assembled at Loveday Opera House Friday evening last to listen to the lecture of Rev. George E. Allan, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, entitled "Jean Valjean, or a Flight With Fate." Had the evening been anything but stormy it is safe to say the house would have been packed. As it was, a number who had bought tickets were unable to attend for this reason. J. B. Palmer gave a little introductory talk and then introduced the speaker of the evening. Mr. Allan's lecture was confined to the one character whom Victor Hugo made famous in the French classic—Les Miserables, and his interpretation of this character, proved the lecturer's literary ability. In fact at the close of the hour and a quarter when Mr. Allan had finished, it seemed that it had been only half that time, so close had he held his audience's attention. Mr. Allan doesn't finess words, neither does he go around Robin Hood's barn to tell what he believes. That there is a bright future on the lecture platform for this popular pastor—should he take up this work—there can be no doubt.

Rev. Allan Explains.

THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD: SIR: Will you please do me the favor to grant a little space in your paper for the following note of explanation. Some of my friends whom I esteem most highly have undoubtedly misunderstood, at least, one point in my lecture which I gave at the Opera House last Friday night. They gathered from my remarks that I did not believe in the punishment of those who break the law. Is this impression correct? I will answer in the following manner.

If you or I should break a law of nature in any form whatsoever, nature would mete out its punishment for the same regardless of what we might believe. Nature knows no mercy. It never fails. At the same time I believe that its punishments are of such a nature that when we have gotten over them, we shall be better, wiser than before, and more inclined to respect the law.

Again: A man breaks into the Post Office and takes that which is not his, but that which belongs to the United States; or into the Bank and steals that which belongs to the various depositors; or does that which is against the moral standard. I am asked if I believe and teach that offenders of this class should go unpunished. I believe no such thing. Of course they should be punished, and it would be a sad sad world if there were no law against such. Now comes the point I made. Jean Valjean went into the prison sobbing; he came out hard and stern. Therefore I say as I said in the case of nature. Can not punishment be given to the offender, severe, and yet in such a way, that when a man comes out of prison he will ever after be inclined to respect the law. Also is it not necessary that punishment for that offence shall be ended when he shall have left the prison. This involves a change in moral sentiment. I believe in the punishment of the wrong-doer as much as does any other man—not in the taking of life in any form—but I hope the day will come when punishment will be of such a nature that the same offender will not require it a second time.

Now is the time to guard the health and strength of the lungs. The best remedy to use for coughs and colds is Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar. The only cough syrup that does not constipate the bowels, but which on the other hand, expels all cold from the system by acting as a pleasant laxative. Best for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, etc. Sold by Warne's Pharmacy.

February Delineator.

For the woman of fashion, the February Delineator, with its display of Spring styles, is a most attractive number. Beside the fashions there is much of interest for the general reader, and the departments concerning the practical householder have been abundantly contributed to. There are short stories by Zona Gale and Margaret Beauchamp, with an interesting travel sketch entitled "In Cairo with a Camera," by Horace Wyndham. Miss Winslow's story of club life, "The President of Quex" is continued gaining much in interest. The "Collector's Manual" is concluded with an article on "Old Time Lights." For the children there is a delightful girl's serial "Sunlight and Shadow," one of Alice Brown's "Gradual Fairy Tales," and amusing games by Lina Beard. Mothers will find Dr. Murray's paper on "Exercise and Physical Culture" particularly helpful, and the numerous pages devoted to matters of housewifely interest, such as cookery, gardening, house furnishing, etc., will prove to be of equal interest to the young housewife.

A great fall and still no one has been hurt, excepting Empey Bros., who are slaughtering children's Cutters and Sleighs. All at cost.

Neuralgia And Other Pain.

All pain in any disease is nerve pain, the result of a turbulent condition of the nerves.

The stabbing, lacerating, darting, burning, agonizing pain that comes from the prominent nerve branches, or sensory nerves, is neuralgia, and is the "big brother" of all the other pains.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills rarely ever fail to relieve these pains by soothing these larger nerves, and restoring their tranquility.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills leave no bad after-effects, and are a reliable remedy for every kind of pain, such as headache, backache, stomachache, sciatica, rheumatism and neuralgia. They also relieve Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Car-Sickness, and Distress after eating.

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from neuralgia and headache, and have never been able to obtain any relief from various headache powders and capsules, until I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They always cure my headache in five minutes time." FRED R. SWINGLEY, Cashier 1st Nat. Bank, Atkinson, Neb.

CHILDREN OF OFFICIALS.

THEY FORM ATTRACTIVE GROUP OF JUVENILE SOCIETY AT NATION'S CAPITAL.

Sons of Many Public Men Earn Good Salaries and Acquire Prominence by Acting as Private and Confidential Secretaries.

There is much truth in the oft-repeated observation that the real rulers at Washington are the children who constitute the sunlight in the homes of many of the nation's highest officials and of the foreign diplomats resident in the United States as Uncle Sam's alien guests. Moreover, there has probably never been a time when the private secretaries to their fathers. A son of Vice-President Fairbanks is associated in this capacity with the presiding officer of the United States Senate, while Jasper Wilson, son of the Secretary of Agriculture, has served his father in such a capacity for years past. Likewise, Senator Foraker and many members of both houses of Congress have installed their sons as their confidential assistants.

SPAIN'S KING TO WED.

THE YOUTHFUL PRINCESS OF ENGLAND IS TO BECOME THE SPANISH QUEEN.

She is the niece of this country's recent Guest, Prince Louis of Battenberg—Princess Ena the Royal Beauty of England.

All eyes will be turned toward Spain next May when the young King Alfonso XIII will take the most beautiful and popular princess of England to be his queen.

The young girl who has at last been selected to share the throne with Alfonso is the Princess Ena of Battenberg, only daughter of Princess Henry, the youngest sister of King Edward.

Ever since Alfonso became King of Spain, and even when his mother acted as Queen Regent, his picturesque personality has been the talk of two continents. Long before he reached the marriageable age, even for a king, a new bride was picked out for him every day, and to members of his suite he would often say:

"Whom am I to marry to-day? The newspapers surely have found me another wife!"

But now that question no longer agitates Alfonso's court, for the beautiful Princess Ena has been chosen after a search which led the young monarch all over Europe. Country after country was visited, but the fastidious young king was often confronted by more fastidious young princesses, and after he had been out on his search for a while he found that royal princesses were not so anxious to become Queen of Spain as he had thought back in his luxurious palace.

When Alfonso visited England a few months ago there were dozens of young noblewomen paraded for his inspection, but his eyes flew to the young Princess Ena, and Alfonso, the unim-pressionable, was conquered.

Few monarchs have had the meteoric career of this young King of Spain, and if the Princess who is to become his consort follows out the rules which have always governed her happy young life Alfonso will have at last found someone to keep him in the way he should go—an achievement which has never heretofore been accomplished.

He has frequently ridden out of the palace disguised as a soldier, a guard or even a peasant, and has gone for miles horseback riding or to attend some little fête which has come to his notice. Days have elapsed during which the queen mother and the entire court have searched high and low for the boy king without avail, but before the incident could be made public the young monarch would come riding back the way he had gone, happier for his boyish prank and checking remonstrance with the assurance that "I am the king."

The Princess Ena is regarded as the beauty of the royal household. She is but eighteen years old, and is the only girl in the family. Her three brothers adore her and are constantly giving her a "ripping" good time. Her elder brother, Prince Alexander, was recently in this country as a "middy" with the fleet of Prince Louis of Battenberg, his uncle.

This charming young woman made her debut last February at Buckingham Palace and created a furore. She is the favorite godchild and likely to become the principal heiress of Empress Eugenie.

Princess Ena is an enthusiastic sailor and motorist, and is the constant companion of her mother on numerous little trips in their yacht and through the beautiful country for which their home, the Isle of Wight, is noted. She is especially gifted with dramatic ability, and in a recent amateur production given in Kensington Palace she played the part of a vivandiere with marked success. She sings and dances exceptionally well.

FORESTRY A NECESSITY.

A BROAD, NATIONAL SYSTEM OF PRESERVATION NOT A FAD NOR A FANCY.

The Editor of the American Lumberman Urges Irrigation and Forestry Legislation—Quotes Some Noted Authorities.

(From the "American Lumberman" of Dec. 2, 1905.)

By request, the American Lumberman reprints in this issue a part of the speech of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association, delivered before the American Forestry Congress at Washington, D. C., in the early part of January, 1905. This address has much to commend it to the business men of the country. It was termed the sensational address of the congress, and perhaps deservedly so called because it sets forth in illuminated words the necessity of inaugurating a systematic movement looking toward the rehabilitation of forest lands and the planting of treeless areas.

The gentleman who delivered this able talk on forestry spoke from experience and close observation. He did not dilapidate around with the usual commonplace platitudes about the importance of forestry, but by illustration showed for what purposes the forests were intended and the commercial value of their importance as compared with the recognized bulwarks of the nation. While he conceded the necessity of an army and navy to guard invasion and to protect and uphold the rights of the people in foreign countries he called particular attention to the desirability of maintaining an adequate forested area in order that the commercial interests of the United States might in like manner be preserved.

Mr. Maxwell's arraignment of the national lawmakers and his comments on the shortsightedness of those in charge of business interests were timely. While not subscribing fully and unreservedly to the views expressed the American Lumberman believes that his severe condemnation of past and present methods and practices will bring forth good results and that its republication will again turn public attention to the necessity of adopting laws which will correct evils in the future and provide a system of a juster administration of the public land laws.

The attitude of the public toward forestry and irrigation is a peculiar one. Men evidently fail to recognize any personal interests in such questions. Some are totally indifferent, others admit the desirability of establishing reserves but want to leave it to those who are more directly concerned. Still others are lukewarm and, while readily admitting the benefits of forestry and irrigation projects, content themselves with waiting until there is more visible likelihood of the movement being successful. Still another faction is made up of those who are openly opposed to all forestry schemes, many national irrigation projects, and government intervention in such matters.

Until within recent years the forests of the country as a whole have been controlled by private owners. The

in the central states the forests get place to farms, in some instances not even a woodlot being spared. The people of this country unquestionably have abused the privilege of doing as they please with their own property for their immediate financial betterment, with the prospect of such practices resulting disastrously in the future.

Much of the land denuded of timber is absolute forest land, it is no purpose except possibly grazing and not of the best character even for that use. Nature will require years to replace this protection so that a new forest may be brought forth, and this change may be possible unless the woods are small growth which nature uses as a basis of the cover shall be protected.

It is impossible to secure the adoption of laws looking toward the establishment of a new custom of nation scope without a widespread public demand for the change believed by its supporters to be an improvement over existing customs. Few if any have the effrontery openly to take the field against the forestry movement as a fair minded people realize the necessity of keeping a part of the country protected by a forest cover. The claim of science that forests are necessary to protect the rainfall as an aid to this regulation generally is admitted.

GEORGE H. MAXWELL, Executive Chairman, the National Irrigation Association.

On the subject of the attitude of the people as a whole is this: "Yes, forestry is a mighty good thing, but I am too busy with my little affairs to take any personal interest in it. If I then I would not be directly benefited in any way. Let the other fellow who is going to get some advantage from it fight for it." It is about time for the public to wake up and begin to take notice. Mr. Maxwell's speech strikes a high note and should create sufficient noise thoroughly to awake the sleepers.

FORESTS SHOULD BE PROTECTED

An Address Before the American Forestry Congress.

In the American Lumberman's exhaustive report of the proceedings of the American Forestry Congress, held in Washington, D. C., in January last in the installment presented March 2 was given the address of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association. In view of the early meeting of congress Mr. Maxwell's recommendations, which follow, are timely and valuable.

I think the mistake we make today and always have made is in looking upon this question of forestry as in any sense a sectional question. It is essentially as much a national question as is the maintenance of an army or the construction of a navy. (Applause.)

When I had the power by some telepathic process of grasping upon the mind of every man present the picture that is in my own mind as I stand here.

I crossed the Mississippi river on my way to the west a little over two years ago on a ferryboat on which was loaded a train of overland passenger cars; and as we crossed that great river opposite the city of New Orleans during one of the greatest floods in years, the water was almost up to the tops of the levees on both sides of the river. It was a serious question whether the city of New Orleans was not in danger; and as we landed on the west side of the river we looked down over the bank and saw the plantation areas, the levees below the level of the water and exposed to destruction any moment that artificial barrier might break. Before we had gone twenty-four hours the great levee did break and on one of the great crevasses was formed and it practically destroyed the crop for that season over a large area; though other localities and the city of New Orleans were saved by the diminished pressure of the flood on the adjacent levees.

ever-changing roster of households which go to make up the official circles at the American capital has included so many junior members as at present.

At the head of the list, of course, stand the young people of the White House household. Of the half dozen young folks of the Roosevelt clan, Theodore, Jr., who is attending Harvard, and Kermit, the second son, who is away at school, now spend comparatively little time at the White House save at holiday seasons; but Miss Alice, the flaxen-haired Miss Ethel and the younger boys, Archibald and Quentin, are much in evidence at the Presidential mansion; and one and all engage in riding, driving and the other strenuous athletic pursuits in which their parents take such delight. Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks have a family of sons and daughters which, though widely scattered most of the time, is reunited several times each season in Washington.

During many administrations the President's official family has been made up of men well advanced in years, whose households included few young people, but in this respect the present Cabinet is an exception, for in a majority of the Cabinet homes young America is well represented. Secretary of State Root has two many sons and a daughter, Miss Edith; who is a chum of Miss Alice Roosevelt. Secretary of War Taft has two lively children—a daughter, who is a playmate of Ethel Roosevelt, and a son yet younger, who has the reputation of being a phenomenally bright lad—a prestige night. Therefore, I say if you would keep your best beam limit your hugs." This is an unqualified commendation given by Mrs. S. M. Cory, of the Society for Political Study of Dr. T. S. Hanrahan's rules for courtship. The doctor, rector of the Sacred Heart church of West Fitchburg, Mass., outlined his ideas of the curtailment of tenderness in a sermon to young women.

"Lights in the parlor," he said, "should not be turned down too low. Don't be stingy with the gas. The final hug should be at 10 o'clock sharp. Young men should not stay later than this hour."

"I thoroughly agree," declared Mrs. Cory, "with the 10 o'clock theory on stay-at-home nights. I am a firm believer in no chaperons, and I think the young man should take his girl out and entertain her during the period of courtship if anything in that line is to be expected of him as a husband. If he is content to sit about the house all the time it is a bad sign."

"The matter of turning the lights low is largely dependent on how pretty the girl is. If she answers the description of certainly plain, I should suggest that a little softening of the illumination might be a good thing."

"A mother and a father cannot too thoroughly investigate the character of the man their daughter is to marry. And right here I should like to explode the theory that a good son makes a good husband. I think, on the contrary, the good son is so wrapped up in the virtues of 'mother' that it frequently blinds him to those of his wife."

"A long engagement is bound to be bad. Warmth of sentiment is much like warmed-over potatoes—flat and tasteless. The fire and spirit go out of the love-making, and there you are." Despite this opinion Mrs. Cory laughs at Dr. Hanrahan's statement that he cannot see what people find to talk about when they go together for years.

"Love-making, which makes the lovers such a nuisance to others," she explained, "is so all-absorbing that it supplies all conversational needs, as anybody who has ever been in love can testify."

It Was Only a Counterfeit.

Jacob Riis, the sociologist, in an address to a workingmen's club, praised generosity.

"I see a handful of children here," he said. "May they grow up generous. May none of them grow up into such a man as an old banker whom I know."

"He is a millionaire banker, and he lives in a palace, but his heart is as hard as steel and as cold as ice." "One of his men, completed, the other day, his twenty-fifth year of service. For twenty-five years this honest man had worked for the banker faithfully. He and his chief were both poor at the beginning, but where, in the quarter century, the banker has accumulated millions, the faithful, middle-aged bookkeeper has accumulated only a few hundreds. His salary, you see, was only $25 a week."

"He didn't think the banker would remember the twenty-fifth anniversary of his engagement, but the old man did. That morning he handed the bookkeeper a sealed envelope."

"George," he said, "to-day ends the twenty-fifth year of your work for me, and you have worked steadily and well. In this envelope is a memento of the occasion." "The bookkeeper opened the envelope, trembling and eager. Within lay his employer's photograph. That was all." "In the face of a disappointment so bitter the poor fellow could say nothing. 'Well,' asked the banker, 'what do you think of it?'" "It's just like you," said the bookkeeper simply.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE.

This English Actress Would Refuse Divorce to Couples Who Have Children.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the distinguished English actress who is now producing in this country a new society drama, "The Labyrinth," speaks with intense conviction against divorce to families in which children have been born to the marriage. When the production of the play was first broached to Miss Nethersole she was more than willing to produce it not alone for the excellent opportunities afforded her for dramatic inspiration, but she found that it had a serious purpose in teaching humanity an object lesson. In fact most of the plays which Miss Nethersole has produced have hidden somewhere lessons to be taught the founders of homes. "Hervieu," she said in an interview, "has shown in his drama, 'The Labyrinth,' the indissoluble bond the child makes between husband and wife and the terrible consequences of a disruption of such a union."

What does marriage mean," she asked, "if not parentage? The relationship and responsibilities, not of husband and wife, but of father and mother, are those which should be accepted when a man and woman are joined in marriage. To tear apart by law the tie which binds a couple together, after they have brought children into the world, is to destroy the home and to rob those children of all the influences which develop them into good citizens. Divorce is an injustice to the offspring of marriage; it places a barrier between them and one of their parents—often times both; it warps their development; it embitters their souls. No such desecration of the home should be permitted by law." "But what of the many cases in which repeated cruelty makes it impossible for a wife to live with her husband?" was asked.

"Such domestic tragedies occur, it is true, and occur with sad frequency," Miss Nethersole replied. "But even then there should be no absolute disruption of the marriage tie. Separation solves the question. Let them live apart, although still married, and perhaps a reconciliation will take place, and happiness come out of misery in the end. Then the children will still have a father and mother, although they may spend most of the time with one of their parents. There will at least be no possibilities of placing them under the care of another mother or another father, by a second marriage. A spiritual nucleus, about which the home again might unite, would still exist."

"Uniformity is the first step that is needed in the formation of the divorce laws of the United States. There are different codes in almost every State, and one may be a criminal in one and not in another. Then the divorces are easily granted on too many grounds. In England there are three causes for which divorce may be secured—infidelity, cruelty and desertion. In this country there seem to be half a dozen or more, but America is ahead of France at least in one respect. There people who may have been divorced may not remarry each other. Such a law is a sin, for in the reunion of the pair lies the only hope for the salvation of the home."

The Most Satisfactory Light.

The Angle Lamp is not the only method of lighting your home but taken all in all, it is the most satisfactory.

For while it floods your room with the finest, softest and most restful light, making your home more cozy and inviting, it requires almost as little attention as gas or electric light, is as simple and convenient to operate as either and actually costs less to burn than the ordinary troublesome old style lamp.

And just free on request our plain book on this new principle applied to burning common kerosene has so completely done away with all the smoke, odor and bother of ordinary lamps that such people as Mrs. Cleveland, the Rockefellers, Carnegies, Cookes, etc., who wouldn't think of using ordinary lamps, have chosen for lighting their homes and estates in preference to any other method of lighting.

This catalog tells how the special Angle burner and the shape of the glass globe (see above illustration) give combustion so perfect that the Angle Lamp never smokes or smells whether burned at full height or turned low; why the lamp is lighted and extinguished like gas; the advantage of having the under-shadows of other lamps done away with completely; also why the Angle Lamp burns 2 1/2 to 3 less oil than any other for the same amount of light. And then offers you a

ADVISES LIMIT OF HUGS.

Woman Speaker Tells Girls How to Keep Best Man.

"If a man is obliged to stop in the midst of an ecstasy he is likely to come back again. Whereas, if he is sated he is likely to hug another girl the next night. Therefore, I say if you would keep your best beau limit your hugs."

This is unqualified commendation given by Mrs. S. M. Cory, of the Society for Political Study of Dr. T. S. Hamrahan's rules for courtship.

SPAIN'S KING TO WED.

THE YOUTHFUL PRINCESS OF ENGLAND IS TO BECOME THE SPANISH QUEEN.

She is the niece of this country's recent Guest, Prince Louis of Battenberg—Princess Ena the Royal Beauty of England.

All eyes will be turned toward Spain next May when the young King Alfonso XIII. will take the most beautiful and popular princess of England to be his queen.

The young girl who has at last been selected to share the throne with Alfonso is the Princess Ena of Battenberg, only daughter of Princess Henry, the youngest sister of King Edward.

Ever since Alfonso became King of Spain, and even when his mother acted as Queen Regent, his picturesque personality has been the talk of two continents. Long before he reached the marriageable age, even for a king, a new bride was picked out for him every day, and to members of his suite he would often say: "Whom am I to marry to-day? The newspapers surely have found me another wife!"

But now that question no longer agitates Alfonso's court, for the beautiful Princess Ena has been chosen after a search which led the young monarch all over Europe.

Princess Ena is an enthusiastic sailor and motorist, and is the constant companion of her mother on numerous little trips in their yacht and through the beautiful country for which their home, the Isle of Wight, is noted.

pressionable, was conquered. Few monarchs have had the meteoric career of this young King of Spain, and if the Princess who is to become his consort follows out the rules which have always governed her happy young life Alfonso will have at last found someone to keep him in the way he should go—an achievement which has never hitherto been accomplished.

He has frequently ridden out of the palace disguised as a soldier, a guard or even a peasant, and has gone for miles horseback riding or to attend some little fete which has come to his notice. Days have elapsed during which the queen mother and the entire court have searched high and low for the boy king without avail, but before the incident could be made public the young monarch would come riding back the way he had gone, happier for his boyish prank and checking remonstrance with the assurance that "I am the king."

The Princess Ena is regarded as the beauty of the royal household. She is but eighteen years old, and is the only girl in the family. Her three brothers adore her and are constantly giving her a "ripping" good time. Her elder brother, Prince Alexander, was recently in this country as a "middy" with the fleet of Prince Louis of Battenberg, his uncle.

This charming young woman made her debut last February at Buckingham Palace and created a furore. She is the favorite godchild and likely to become the principal mistress of Empress Eugenie.

Princess Ena is an enthusiastic sailor and motorist, and is the constant companion of her mother on numerous little trips in their yacht and through the beautiful country for which their home, the Isle of Wight, is noted.

FORESTRY A NECESSITY.

A BROAD, NATIONAL SYSTEM OF PRESERVATION NOT A FAD NOR A FANCY.

The Editor of the American Lumberman Urges Irrigation and Forestry Legislation—Quotes Some Noted Authorities.

(From the "American Lumberman" of Dec. 2, 1905.)

By request the American Lumberman reprints in this issue a part of the speech of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association, delivered before the American Forest Congress at Washington, D. C., in the early part of January, 1905.

The gentleman who delivered this able talk on forestry spoke from experience and close observation. He did not dilatory around with the usual commonplace platitudes about the importance of forestry, but by illustration showed for what purposes the forests were intended and the commercial value of their importance as compared with the recognized bulwarks of the nation.

Mr. Maxwell's arraignment of the national lawmakers and his comments on the shortsightedness of those in charge of business interests were timely. While not subscribing fully and unreservedly to the views expressed the American Lumberman believes that his severe condemnation of past and present methods and practices will bring forth good results and that its republication will again turn public attention to the necessity of adopting laws which will correct evils in the future and provide a system of a juster administration of the public land laws.

The attitude of the public toward forestry and irrigation is a peculiar one. Men evidently fail to recognize any personal interest in such questions. Some are totally indifferent.

Others admit the desirability of establishing reserves but want to leave it to those who are more directly concerned. Still others are lukewarm and, while readily admitting the benefits of forestry and irrigation projects, content themselves with waiting until there is more visible likelihood of the movement being successful.

Still another faction is made up of those who are openly opposed to all forestry schemes, many national irrigation projects, and government intervention in such matters.

Until within recent years the forests of the country as a whole have been controlled by private owners. The preponderance of the country covered with forests had deluded the people into a belief that they were of minor importance as forests and of primary importance as manufacturing materials.

in the central states the forests give place to farms, in some instances not even a woodlot being spared. The people of this country unquestionably have abused the privilege of doing as they please with their own property for their immediate financial betterment, with the prospect of such practices resulting disastrously in the future.

Much of the land denuded of timber is absolute forest-land, fit for no purpose except possibly grazing and not of the best character even if that use. Nature will require years to replace the forest's protection so that a new forest may be brought forth, and this character will be possible unless the woods are small growth which nature uses as a basis of the cover shall be protected.

GEORGE H. MAXWELL, Executive Chairman, the National Irrigation Association.

On the subject of the attitude of the people as a whole is this: "Yes, forestry is a mighty good thing, but I am too busy with my little affairs to take any personal interest in it and then I would not be directly benefited in any way. Let the other fellow who is going to get some advantage from it fight for it."

It is about time for the public to wake up and begin to take notice. Mr. Maxwell's speech strikes a high note and should create sufficient noise thoroughly to awake the sleepers.

FORESTS SHOULD BE PROTECTED An Address Before the American Forest Congress.

In the American Lumberman's exhaustive report of the proceedings of the American Forest Congress, held at Washington, D. C., in January last in the installment presented March 24 was given the address of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association.

I think the mistake we make today and always have made is in looking upon this question of forestry as in any sense a sectional question. It is not a sectional question, it is a national question as is the maintenance of an army or the construction of a navy. (Applause.)

I crossed the Mississippi river on my way to the west a little over two years ago on a ferryboat on which was loaded a train of overland passenger cars; and as we crossed that great river opposite the city of New Orleans, during one of the greatest floods in the history of the world, the water was almost up to the tops of the levees on both sides of the river. It was a serious question whether the city of New Orleans was not in danger; and as we landed on the west side of the river we looked down upon the bank and saw the plantations away down below the level of the water and exposed to overflow and destruction any moment that artificial barrier might break. Before we had gone twenty miles from the city the levee did break and one of those great crevasses was formed and it practically destroyed the crop for that season over a large area; though other localities and the city of New Orleans were saved by the diminished pressure of the flood on the adjacent levees.

THE COURTSHIP OF WESLEY

By Lottie Wells Smith

As Wesley plodded down the main road he glanced guiltily back over the green fields where straight rows of tobacco spread their broad leaves ripe for cutting. There was deeper guilt in his heart, too, when he thought of the project upon which he was bent. Never before had he done anything that he would have been ashamed to tell out in class-meeting at the little cross roads chapel where he was one of the younger leaders. The tall, gawky shadow he cast along the white road seemed a sort of premonitory figure of that better self that would follow him the rest of his life like an accusing angel. And it was all on account of a woman; not that she was soft to blame, except for the fact that she had soft white skin and fair hair, and the finest of feet that made his own seem monstrous, and the daintiest little figure, the kind that a big muscular fellow like Wesley yearns to hold in his arms.

Wesley had never been a ladies' man until the school teacher came into the neighborhood but he had been captured from the evening he drove to the station and she had sat beside him in the little spring wagon during the five miles they had to go in the September twilight. The scent of her gauzy handkerchief played about his senses for a week afterward; it was different from any perfume that had entered his nostrils, before accustomed to the odors of "sweet basil," marjoram, and a generous sprinkling of musk in the closely packed little chapel of Sunday mornings.

Propinquity, that strong promoter of the tender passions, sealed his doom, for the school teacher boarded in his own house and came to bear upon him all the varied and wonderful charms of a woman.

He felt himself the most highly favored man in the universe to be able to live under the same roof with her, and to keep the little box behind the sheet-iron stove filled with wood-saved and split to a nicety, to handle a refractory boy behind the school house—as an example to all others who should dare to defy the teacher's authority, and a hundred other offices that a big, strong man can perform for a young and fragile member of his household, that brought him unspeakable joy.

So far, however, from believing these offices were gaining for him the desired favor, Wesley would have dispensed

Silas was seated on a high chair behind the counter, regarding himself with the latest postal card news that had come in. "Howdy, Wes," he greeted, reluctantly placing the cards in their respective pigeon holes as the visitor came behind the counter. "Air ye through cuttin'?"

"Well, I-I ain't clean through," was the embarrassed answer—"but I lef off for a little spell, as I got a matter I want fixed up, an' I thought this would be the best time of day to ketch you."

"Well, ef it's that little loan, I reckon—"

"No, I ain't after pesterin' you 'bout that, Si," Wesley interrupted, to the other's relief, and tattooing awkwardly on the desk, he blurted out:

"Si, I've come down here to git you to do sump'n I can't do myself, an' that's to write a letter fer me!"

"Oh, that's it, is it?" Silas asked, with a grin, noticing the other's embarrassment. "Well, I reckon I kin 'commodeate you," he added, taking his pen from behind his ear. "Who's the lady?" eyeing Wesley suspiciously.

"I reckon you know," was the answer, with a responsive grin to hide his embarrassed flush.

Then as Silas began to draw the school teacher's name, writing it at the same time with many flourishes at the top of the sheet he had spread before him, Wesley grinned broader, and confessed with more blushes that that was the young lady in question.

"Now about the beginning?" was Silas' next question with his most professional air, making ready to start. "You kin make it a little stronger by adding some words on the next line." Silas indicated with his pen the line below the one upon which the lady's name was inscribed, for the benefit of the uninitiated Wesley—"but that's accordin' to your instructions to the young lady." He paused for Wesley to intimate.

"Then you might make it a little stronger," the other suggested sheepishly after a pause.

"To the young lady that has my heart, how is that?" Silas poised his pen inquiringly.

Wesley nodded approvingly. "That's it," he said, and as Silas waited for further instructions he squirmed awkwardly in his seat and began to wipe the perspiration off his face.

"It's kinder hard to know what to say when you ain't exactly certain 'bout the

with half of his muscular power to replace a deficiency that he feared would be an unsurmountable barrier between him and the young school marm.

It was a common enough falling in the neighborhood in which Wesley lived, and six months before, the fact that he could not write his own name, would not have embarrassed him a great deal. Since the school teacher had come into his life, however, it had become a real thorn in the flesh. Vainly he struggled with the little loops of the alphabet in his room by candle light when all the other members of the household were wrapped in slumber; but the goal of his ambition, measured a distance that was beyond the feverish impatience that possessed him.

Wesley had been trembling on the verge of a proposal many times and would have committed himself long ago but for this barrier. For the idea of addressing the school teacher in writing seemed to have fixed itself in his mind as being the only method of procedure through which he could hope for a reciprocation. So it was an overwhelming desire to settle his fate, coupled with a hopelessness of attaining the educational qualification of being able to pen his own epistle, that led him to procure the agency of another party, upon which errand he was bound this afternoon.

The party he had decided to utilize was one Silas Mansur, postmaster and general groceryman combined, and as Silas was under obligation to him for a small loan, Wesley thought he might be glad to have it canceled in this way. He had chosen a time of the day when he would run the least chance of encountering loungers about the store, and sure enough, the coast was clear and young lady's feelin's," he stammered, "but I like that beginnin' an' I reckon you kin put it more fancy like; but I want you to be sure to say 'I'm waitin' for her answer very patient, an' ef she'll say yes, I'll be the happiest man in Chitankin' Hundred; an' ef she says no, I'll drive me to do what it will hurt her. Tell her I'm able to take care of her, that I'm workin' the place on sheers this year, but pa, he's promised to deed me a strip of lan' down by the fur gate, an' ef she ain't a mind to live with the old folks I'll build her a house on my own lan', an' say I'll make her a sober, industrious husband, an' I'll treat her like the apple of my eye, which she is, an' ever will be, even if she don't reciprocate my affections, an' then you kin win 'up, Si," he finished, taking the first breath, "only as I'm particular 'bout folks signin' other folk's name, suppose you jes say good-bye, my angel, till I hear from you, an' that'll do."

It seemed an age before Wesley had converted all this in a sure enough letter, even taking into consideration the beautiful flourishes with which it was embellished, and he had it in his coat pocket on his way to deliver into the hands of the school teacher. Then it seemed another age after he had entrusted it to the care of one of the school children and watched through the open window to be sure it was laid on the teacher's desk, before school was let out, though at last when he saw the children pouring out the door, the pretty school marm bringing up the rear, a real stage fright possessed him.

The idea of flight presented itself, but he dismissed it with a manly determination to stand his ground. When the teacher came up by him he could not look her in the face, but began to walk at her side, forgetting to offer to take her books as usual, until they had gone some distance and he made an awkward attempt to relieve her, dropping half of them on the ground in his confusion.

As he stopped to gather them up the fateful letter rolled out from between the pages of one of the books, and there was nothing for him to do but to pick it up and hand it to her. A shamed, side-long glance at her face told him that his doom was to be settled. He walked along, waiting for the verdict like a hero.

"Did you tell Jack Crawford to put that letter on my desk?" the school teacher asked, at last.

"Yes, Miss Elmira," was all he could say.

"Then I presume that you want my answer?" was the next question delivered in a suppressed tone.

"I-I—come here to git it," Wesley stammered.

"Then I'll give it to you now, and it's just no!" she said bluntly, not slackening her pace and looking straight ahead of her.

It came like a thunderbolt, even though he was in a measure prepared.

"Miss Elmira, I'm sorry, but—"

"I hate Silas Mansur, and he had no business writing that letter," she interrupted.

Wesley hung his head, his face flushed to the roots of his hair.

"I didn't know you'd be able to tell by the writin' 'deed I didn't; I reckon it warn't actin' square, but Silas kin write an'—"

"I don't care if he can write," she interrupted again. "Do you suppose I'm going to marry a man just because he can write; and after all, I'd rather marry the man I loved if he couldn't write his own name than one I don't care a straw about, even if you are so anxious to make the match for Silas Mansur. And I thought you'd be the last one to—"

She broke off with a sob, turning to dash away the tears that sprang to her eyes.

Wesley felt the earth slipping under his feet, the sky seemed a dazzling, crimson vortex whirling above him through the dark tree tops.

"Miss Elmira!" he cried at last, "did you think that was Silas' own letter? for it warn't, 'deed it warn't!" he panted. "It was my letter, Miss Elmira, every word of it, only I got Silas to write it fer me, 'cause—'cause, well, I ain't shamed fer you to know now, I can't write my own name."

Wild Geese Killed in Flight.

The southern migration of wild fowl this winter was unusually late and resulted in many disasters. The wild geese are reported from the northwest to have been especially severe sufferers.

The large black-headed goose is a strong, hardy bird, generally remaining on its own native water until the ice forms firmly. In the South it is only a visitor for the winter months. Born on some lake beyond the northern watershed, or perhaps on some inlet in Hudson Bay or the Arctic Ocean, its heart is ever loyal to the land of its birth.

Sometimes, when the cold weather sets in late up North, as in all probability it has this year, the wild geese suffer from their devotion to their native place. They may at this late season fly right into a streak of real winter, with driving snow to blind their vision and bitter frost to halt their flight.

If there is storm, their way leads right through it, until the leader's eyes are closed by the freezing of the snow about its head or its feathers become too heavy weighted. When the sight has gone and the birds are wearied, it is easy to see how misleading is much of the talk about the leadings of an extra sense. Like a ship without a rudder, the V-shaped flock will make for any low places.

Once a flock came tumbling into the street of an Eastern township's village, where the half-blinded things became the easy prey of the boys and the dogs.

In another place a farmer chanced one spring to find the frozen carcasses of more than thirty fine geese in a drift in one of the fence corners. The birds had evidently come to earth in some blinding storm, and, imagining they were nesting water, found instead the hard, snow-covered ground.

There are several instances recorded of flocks of geese in a storm running full tilt into the ends or sides of farm buildings. A large brood flew at full speed against the rigging of the whaling steamer Dart this month off the Newfoundland coast. A damp, snow-laden wind was blowing at the time, and eleven dead or dying geese fluttered on to the deck, the others alighting in a half-dead condition upon the waves.

A more pleasing story is of domestic geese in a large, well-appointed farmyard hailing with their hearty honks, a short time ago, a passing drove of twenty-two black bills. The strangers came down and followed their tame relations into the stable, where they have since stayed.

Re-Using Old Shoes.

Janitors collect the shoes cast away by tenants and send them to auction rooms, where they are sorted into piles marked "Men," "Women," "Children."

In a recent sale in one of the big cities, says the "Shoe Retailer," several poor people made fair bids, but the auctioneer did not seem eager to sell. Finally, a red-faced man pushed his way through the crowd and offered ten cents apiece for the whole lot. His bid was successful.

"I was killing time with talk waiting for that fellow," said the auctioneer afterward. "He always pays high for these shoes and he does not want them for wearing, either. He wants to beat them out for the leather in them. He gets what material there is, puts it through a process and makes stamped frames, bags, pocketbooks, penknife holders, and even chair backs and seats. He finds a ready sale for these novelties and gets a good price for them."

There is a oberry stone at the Salem, Massachusetts, Museum which contains the fac-similes of one dozen silver spoons. They are so small that their shape and finish can only be distinguished by the microscope.

Mrs. Theodosia Beacham, of Michigan, Entrepreneurial Railroad Contractor.

There are few fields of endeavor in which woman has not acquired a foothold. She is conspicuous in the arts, sciences and professions and she makes her presence felt in trade. Yet it is believed that one of the few of her sex to essay and succeed in railroad contracting and construction is a Michigan woman—Mrs. Theodosia Beacham. She is not notable for home-staying or house-keeping qualities, for her business calls for her presence in many parts of the United States and she has to deal with vast engineering problems—filling forests, tunneling mountains, bridging gorges, cutting through hills, filling gulches, setting and tamping ties and laying rails. The work demands that she be a skillful manager of men. She knows man as few women do—she directs their energies, gets out of them the most work possible, pays their wages, employs or discharges them. Men, mules, steam shovels and dynamite are her obedient slaves. Necessary to her is a financier, talks and figures in the hundred thousands and the millions as readily as most men talk of dollars. In the parlance of the street she long ago made her stake and today is accounted the richest woman in Michigan and one of the very rich women of the world.

She has made estimates and carried out contracts on some of the longest and heaviest pieces of railroad construction in the country. Though her occupation is strenuous it would do Mrs. Beacham rank injustice to say that it has roughened her. There is a certain set of determination and firmness about her features, but her manner is feminine, and so are her tastes. She is such a good judge of men that she rarely has any trouble with them and it is not often that an employee is so genuinely popular with employees as Mrs. Beacham.

Mrs. Beacham has been making and executing railroad contracts for twenty years. She has two sons, Claud and Erwin and her husband, though living is an invalid.

Much of this remarkable woman's work has been done in the southern states where railroad building has gone forward with Titanic strides in the last two decades and where a vast amount of building is now under way. On one contract with the Tennessee Central railroad, Mrs. Beacham's profit was $80,000, and it is calculated that her average annual earnings are about $50,000. The contract which she is now engaged in executing is the construction of five miles of railroad from Kirby Station, Virginia, westward. It is part of a contract for one hundred miles of the coal mine to sea railroad which was secured by Sands and Oliver of Richmond. These contractors sublet a short stretch of the work to Mrs. Beacham.

At present she is employing only about one hundred and fifty men but the proper control of this force and the purchase of the necessary supplies calls for the exercise of no little executive ability.

Royal Quarrels Over Chess.

King Edward, we are told, is developing an enthusiasm for chess. In that case, according to a writer in Tid-Bits, he is only following in the steps of many of his predecessors on the throne, including his namesake, the first Edward. Says the writer:

Whether or not players were more irascible in those old days than now, it is a curious fact that chess was often more stimulating to the royal tempers than is golf in these latter days, and many a game peacefully begun ended in broken heads. When Prince Henry—afterward Henry V—once paid a visit to the court of France, he was so much at chess with Louis, the king's eldest son, as he, growing into cholera, called him (a naughty name) and threw the chess in his face. Henry takes up the chessboard, and strike Louis with that force as drew blood, and had killed him had not his brother Robert come in the meantime and interposed himself, whereupon they suddenly took horse and got away."

King John in his younger days had a similar experience; for a game of chess in which his opponent was one Fulk Warine ended in a royal row, during which Fulk gave the prince "so grievous a blow as almost to slay him on the spot." John never forgot the blow nor forgave his fractious opponent, and punished him, when later he came to the throne, by withholding his heritage—Whittington castle—from him.

William the Conqueror more than once lost his temper over the game, and on at least one occasion with serious consequences. He was playing with the son of the king of France when a dispute led to hot words, and culminated in William bringing down the board so heavily on his opponent's head as to render him unconscious.

Louis XIII of France was so infatuated with the game that wherever he went he was accompanied by his chessboard and men and invariably played it in his coach when he took drives abroad. Charles I found it so fascinating that he almost literally played it to the foot of the scaffold; and when once his game was interrupted by news that the Scots had decided to sell him to the parliament he proceeded with his

TEA RAISING IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Department of Agriculture Presents American Tea in Tablet Form.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

The Department of Agriculture has been making some experiments, which from present results seem to promise a revolution in the method of packing and preparing tea. The usual method adopted by tea raisers heretofore has been quite crude in that the dried tea leaves were merely stowed in a loose and bulky package. The effort of the Department of Agriculture is to furnish pure tea in a most convenient form and in a manner to protect the leaves from losing any of their strength through exposure to the air. This has resulted in a method of compressing the leaves into tablets, each of sufficient size to make a delicious cup of tea. What would ordinarily make a big package of tea can by this unique method be placed in a space about the size of a safety match box. Another significant feature of the experiment is that the tea used done. Towards the close of the century Dr. Charles U. Shepard, at his own expense renewed this plantation and later received the general assistance of the Department of Agriculture. This is the Pinehurst tea nursery of to-day.

The American Tea Garden.

The Pinehurst gardens embrace at present about 90 acres of tea plants in various stages of advancement and produce from a considerable variety of seed over 10,000 pounds of dry tea annually. The original seed for the Pinehurst tea gardens was procured through the offices of the United States Department of State and the Chinese Government from the celebrated Dragon's Pool estate near Hangchow, China, whose output commands too high a local price to admit of its exportation.

Picking tea at Pinehurst is done by a carefully trained and well supervised corps of colored children who show great aptitude in this direction. In places where greenleaf wherens the average in the Orient hardly exceeds 20 to 30 pounds. Experiments at the Pinehurst gardens show that tea from all modern climates could be made as productive here as at their source, a change in climate and the difference in cultivation and manufacture having a tendency to affect the quality of tea when prepared for the table. This is the reason assigned for the difference in the American grown tea from that of imported. The Pinehurst early season tea is considered more delicate and milder than that of cooler climates. The autumn season tea is stronger in color and taste and resembles the product from the more southern regions of the Orient.

The Secretary of Agriculture believes that there is an excellent field in the United States for a home tea industry for we consume approximately 75,000,000 pounds of tea annually or a little less than one pound per capita. Our people, he says, pay at retail about $40,000,000 a year for tea as against $150,000,000 for coffee and $1,200,000,000 for alcoholic beverages. It has been calculated that the American people drink 400,000,000 gallons of tea annually. We are primarily a nation of coffee drinkers; in proportion to our population we consume only about one-sixth as much tea as the Britains, whether at home or in the colonies. While the United States does not import the cheapest kind of tea, nevertheless our importations are chiefly of inferior qualities. The first demand of the American consumer is cheapness, and often-times he will purchase tea of poor quality on account of accompanying allurements of crockery

The Bulk of Loose Leaves is Equal to One Box of Tablets.

In these tablets is not imported, but on the other hand, is grown at the experimental tea gardens of the Department of Agriculture at Summerville, S. C. A few weeks ago Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry received a large box of sample packages from Summerville.

Each box of compressed tea contains twenty tablets about the size of a cent, but probably twice as thick. The various kinds of tea such as Oolong, American-Breakfast, black and green, etc., are all prepared in tablet form ranging from sepi to dark green in color. The tablets as heretofore stated are made from tea grown at the Pinehurst tea gardens Summerville, S. C. and contain the purest of leaves thought to be unsurpassed by any imported tea. The tablet form is accomplished by compression with machinery. The directions furnished for using the tablets are as follows:

"Drop one tablet in teapot for each cup of tea desired. Pour in freshly boiled water, and after allowing it to stand four minutes, stir gently, strain and serve. If made in the cup, use one tablet. Tea will immediately settle to the bottom of the cup, then strain the liquor into another cup, and sugar and cream as desired."

While it is explained by officials of the Department that this new form of tablet does not improve the flavor or taste of the tea, the chief value lies in the fact that the product occupies less space. A pound package of ordinary tea, it is stated, would occupy about twenty-five times as much room as one of these little packages of twenty tea tablets prepared by the Agricultural Department.

Tea Handled by Machinery.

The effort of the Department of Agriculture for sometime has been to find means for providing food for the Army and Navy which could be prepared in such a way as to save space. Tablet form naturally suggested itself to them and it is now believed by the government officials that the tea tablets will fill the requirements not only of the general government but those of general merchandise and family use. An important feature in connection with compression of tea into tablet form which should be considered of prime importance is that modern machinery takes the place of the ancient manual operations of the Chinese. Of course, a great advantage of the machine in the tea industry is reduction in the price of labor, but a more important item is the elimination, as far as possible, of human contact. By testimony of travelers in the Orient it is stated that the tea factories of that section are as a rule anything but cleanly, the result of the herding together of so many people—not very clean or healthy people—in cramped and often very hot workshops. The tea tablets as prepared by the Department of Agriculture, are made from the tea after it has been dried and rolled. It is then put through a boiling process after which it is placed in small moulds about the size of a cent, where by means of great force, it is compressed into small tablets. The operation of the machinery is so perfect and so rapid that the leaves can be water power, against the unique and unnecessarily elaborate functions of the Chinese manipulator. On the up-to-date British tea estate almost the whole process of the plucked leaf from the gardens to the factory to the final boxing of the finished product is performed by machinery. With all this machinery, however, it is necessary that two processes must be performed by human hands—the plucking of the leaf from the bushes and the cutting out of inferior leaf or accidental admixtures such as stems, straws, etc., from the finished product.

The intense activity in the tea industry of other lands awakened a like interest in the United States. A hundred years ago the first tea plant was introduced at Middleton Barony on the Ashley River near Charleston, S. C. Mr. Junius Smith in the forties made experiments in tea culture at Greenville, S. C. and in the fifties the United States Government collected in Asia and distributed tea seed by the Patent Office through the South Atlantic and Gulf states, which later gave rise to many thrifty little gardens capable of supplying all domestic wants. While these experiments prove the adaptability of the tea plant to the United States they did not prove the possibility of a lucrative industrial undertaking. The United States Department of Agriculture, however, in the last quarter of the 19th century undertook an investigation along this latand other gifts. Nevertheless comparatively small consignments of better grades are imported for those who are willing to pay for them.

Malt Coffee as Food.

A Russian army doctor attached to the 2d Turkestan Rifle Battalion has been making some interesting experiments in the matter of nourishing soldiers. Dr. Cyrilus Koliago administered to ten men for ten days malt coffee as their sole beverage, with the result that their weight increased during the time to the extent of 832 grammes a man. A like experiment was made by giving tea to the same number of men of similar constitutions and for the same number of days, and in their case the doctor certified a decrease of weight per man to the extent of 520 grammes. He then put the twenty men together back on to tea, and those whose weight had been so signally increased by the malt coffee had within ten days lost 660 grammes a head. The doctor now states what is very important to note, namely, that his experiments have led him to believe that it is not merely the nourishing attributes of the malt coffee which mark this increase, but that its effect is mainly to increase the action of the digestive organs, enabling them to draw from all other food taken the utmost quantity of nourishment each may contain.

An Insult to the Horse.

"Would you mind walking the other way and not passing the horse?" said a London cabman, with exaggerated politeness, to the fat lady who had just paid the minimum fare. "Why?" she inquired. "Because if 'e sees wot 'e's been carrying for a shilling 'e'll 'ave a fit," was the freezing answer.

Philippine Cities.

There are four towns in the Philippines with a population exceeding 10,000 each, and thirty-five with a population exceeding 5,000. Manila is the only incorporated city in the islands, and its inhabitants number 344,783.

The Docking of Horses.

Agitation is promised to urge the passage of laws against docking horses, and owners of horses are being petitioned to join in the crusade. Dealers never dock horses, except at the request of a buyer. To offer a horse for sale with a bob-tail is to create the suspicion that it is "second hand," one that has seen service before in the city, instead of being fresh from green pastures. Yet the dealers rarely sign such petitions. They declare that the operation of docking is not excessively painful and is atoned for by the easy life it leads to. To have the tail shortened is the initiation the rough horse pays to gain the comfort and light duties of a private stable.

Fashion is not the only reason to attract the buyers in having their horses docked, but it is the principal one. A few say that the shortening of the tail makes for cleanliness, as the tail does not become dragged with mud and dust

He Had Had Experience.

As the fearless white man entered the kraal of the native king, a salute was sounded on a drum of serpent skin, and six warriors with necklaces of human teeth, rattling about their throats, led him before a rough ivory chair, on which sat a majestic and formidable figure. "Hail," said the white man. And without loss of time, he took out one of his brass watches, wound it up, and showed its works to the dusky monarch. "This marvel," he said, "I will give you my majesty, making you the envy of all men, and in return for only six tusks of seventy pounds weight each. The king took the watch, produced a monocle from a pouch hidden in his shield, and, after a moment's study of the brass trinket, returned it with a languid smile. "Last year," he added, "in London, I exchanged an old wooden war club for a bushel of these things, and, by Jove, don't you know, there wasn't one of them that ran above a week."

when docked, and another set maintains that it is really a comfort to a horse to remove the heavy useless mass of hair. City horses do not graze in pasture, so the argument that the switching of the long tail keeps away mosquitoes and flies has no value in this argument; but a decided objection may be voiced against the nuisance switching tails would be to a horse or pair in heavy harness. All style and grace in front action, a pair with hanging tails would look as untidy otherwise as a woman in bedraggled skirts. So said a coaching amateur, and he had plenty to add to the plea for docking. "Essentially docking is not a painful operation," continued this driving man. "We do not feed the horse on the morning of the operation, and when it is brought into the operating stall the horse at once begins to munch eagerly on the oats in the manger. A canvas hammock is hung under its belly and the horse is hoisted to its tiptoes by pulleys, when a gate is stuck across the stall close to its heels and the tail pulled over the flat top rail making an operating table. A stout twine is tied tight about the tail at the point to be severed. The hair is turned back and bound, exposing the bare skin.

"A few short jabs with a surgeon's knife and the tail is severed. Meanwhile, a cauterizing iron has been brought to a white heat in a charcoal hand fire, and the next act is to sear the cut with the iron. The horse winces, but it does not take the tenth part of a second to seal up the wound. As soon as the iron is taken off the horse will resume its munching of oats, and except while the cauterizing iron is applied it feeds without a check throughout the entire operation.

No one knows what the horses think about it. That docking is cruel may be granted, but the gains to the horse seem to counterbalance the hurts. All of which sounds a good deal like an argument made by an interested party as an excuse for a continuance of a practice almost universally condemned.

A Perfect Example.

A lawyer whose mouth was extraordinarily large, had on the witness stand a Southern backwoodsman. The witness had replied to a question that "It was a non-possibility." Quoth the lawyer: "A non-possibility? Now will you tell this court and jury just what you mean by a non-possibility? Give us an example." "Well," said the witness, "I think it 'ud be a non-possibility to make your mouf any bigger widout settin' your years furder back."

Was a Proper Judge.

When the last Cleveland baby was born, Mr. Cleveland was asked about the weight, which he gave at twelve pounds. Dr. Bryant, who was present, interrupted the ex-President to say that the nurse had reported the young hopeful to be an eight-pounder. "Nothing of the kind," said Mr. Cleveland. "I weighed him with the same scales that I use when I go fishing."

Death.

(G. E. M.)
I am a microbe of vast and fearful power.
My name is Death, where e'er I'm found.
I float through the air and sink into the vitals of the sons of men:
The youth in joyous spring of life;
The man, mature in years and strength;
The new-born babe and she
Who watches tenderly his breath of life.
The cawing chicken, and the sage
Of tettering maids and silver locks;
All alike grow faint and listless,
Weak and wan, and sink at last
To their eternal rest, beneath my glance.
Quietly at first I work, mid jest and laughter,
But not more surely does the sun sink low behind my shroud.
The western hills
Than I make felt my power
Through every limb and fibre of my victim.
'Tis said that he laughs best who laugheth last;
And I laugh last, yea many a million time
As I perceive my victim gaze with hollow, vacant stare,
And note his breath come short and gasp and cease.
Hail! Hail! Another triumph of my prowess!
And now I float away to murder once again—
To snatch some maiden from her lover's
Ceaseless my work, I know not pity.
Greedy am I, and each one whom I slay
So do I live and reap my harvest day by day of Death.

 It is not necessary for the voters of Michigan to familiarize themselves with all the details of our state's new primary election law in order to intelligently take advantage of its several privileges and requirements as they present themselves. The first requirement of the law is that all voters who desire to take part in making party nominations shall be enrolled as members of their respective parties on the first Monday in April.
 There is nothing to be done until this April enrollment takes place and only the simple act of giving to the election inspectors such information as their blanks call for is necessary at that time. The other requirements and privileges of the law follow at stated intervals and are equally definite and direct. Party enrollment on the first Monday of April. That is the requirement part to be attended to and the only one that need now be kept in mind.
 Some few weeks ago our local Real Estate Agent, W. A. Loveday, received a call from a Detroit gentleman who had been attracted this way by the summer resort possibilities along the South Arm of Pine Lake. After looking over the Houghton property at Munroe Creek he seemed satisfied that its location was favorable, and soon after his return to Detroit, he closed a deal for this property of about 65 acres, with 80 rods lake frontage.
 Since then plans have been moving along until now after being assured of the co-operation of R. R. Companies in advertising just as soon as accommodations for people are shown, he desires to know if local people are interested enough in this project, for the sake of the extra business it will bring to the town for a few months in the year, and for the additional market for farm produce, etc., to go ahead with him and build a few cottages to get the enterprise moving.
 With some encouragement in this way, he is willing to go ahead, lay out streets; plat the grounds, build a good dock, and make other expenditures.
 It should prove a good investment for our people in more ways than one. It is more than probable that any cottages built, could soon be sold at enough above cost to pay for investment, and until sold, would rent at good prices. Here's your chance business men and farmers—its a good thing.
 There is not the slightest reason to doubt the truth of the statement made at the recent conference of democrat leaders and party spokesmen, that they are sorely disappointed with Michigan's primary election law. The fact that such a law exists is the real cause of their complaint. They hoped that a primary law would not be passed by the republican legislature.
 Perhaps they believed it would not.
 They had made the statement at every opportunity that no such privilege would be provided in Michigan. And now to find themselves confronted with a practical, workable direct voting law—a better law than Wisconsin or Minnesota or any other northern state possesses—is surely cause for democrat disappointment and complaint. It is not half so much the details of the present primary election law that the democrat leaders of Michigan object to as the fact that any such law is in existence.

County Farm a Model.

At the last meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Grand Traverse County it was decided that their present system of caring for the poor inadequate and a committee was appointed to investigate the matter of instituting a county poor farm. As a result a committee—consisting of Supt. of Poor O. P. Carver, and Supervisors
 H. K. Beecham, O. E. Ladd and W.
 F. Harsha—came to East Jordan
 Thursday and went over the Charlevoix County Farm with Supt. Madison.
 The gentlemen commended highly the accommodations provided our poor, stating they were far superior to other places they had visited. Charlevoix County citizens may well feel proud of our model farm.

On Friday p. m. and Saturday,
 February 2-3, a Teacher's and Patron's meeting will be held in the High School Building.
 On Friday p. m. the subject of Reading will be discussed.
 The subject will be taken up in its various relations to the pupil, the teacher and the citizen.
 On Friday evening Prof. W. D.
 Henderson of the U. of M. will deliver a lecture. Subject: "The Evolution of the Boy."
 Prof. Henderson is one of the ablest teachers in the middle west today, and no one who is interested in educational matters can afford to miss this chance to hear him.
 On Saturday the subject of arithmetic will be taken up.
 Prof. Henderson will also give an address in the forenoon.
 The Truancy law will also be taken up during the day.
 The superintendent of the High Schools of the County will be in attendance and we hope that the patrons will not miss this opportunity to become acquainted with the teachers to whom their children are entrusted during the school year.
 Won't "YOU" encourage us by your presence?
 Programs will be out Saturday.

 When a man loses his position, he has as many explanations as a girl when her engagement is broken.
 Is there a man living who is bright enough to know his own clothes? If a woman lost a common plain handkerchief six years ago last Monday, she can tell it when she sees it again. A man wouldn't know his own laundry marks if they were made to match his birthmark, and the only reason he puts into his own clothes is that his says them out for him.
 We are discarding plank floors and boards in sidewalks and use wooden troughs—and King caught onto the utility ability of cement stable blocks. Already these desirable blocks have been in stock farms and are so satisfactory that the use of concrete will soon become general. Those who have made the attempt have succeeded beyond expectations, saying it is no trick at all to get proper proportions if the mixer is able to count eight shovels full of gravel and one of cement.

A Poet in our Midst.

Original Rhyme written for the East Jordan Literary Club by the President, Miss Anna Keale. It includes the members' names.

In our town we have a Club Composed of ladies many. Of talents we have quite a few, Of faults we have not any. We're able to do many things I'll tell you if I have the time. A Palmer will read all our hands, And tell of future deeds sublime. If now a sidewalk you may wish We'll furnish you with blankets. I'm sure I cannot find a thing To rhyme with that but rank. But if you want to build a block The Stone we will provide. Our Smith will furnish all the locks And much we need besides. Hand me My Kee, for don't you see We'll have to put our A-I in For if we leave her out the sun Might Brown her pretty cheeks and chin.

We'll pick our music from our Bush And sail upon our Hudson, And if we have an accident We'll call on our good Brotherton. Now if it should be very cold, We'll burn our own Greenwood. To collect bad debts we have just one Who'll Dinham as she should. Of men we have a very few— A Wiesman and a Crossman— And with two men how can we be A ladies lit society.

Besides what do you think of these, They surely are male genders; Our Robertson, our little Dick En may the Gods defend her.

Suppose we'd like to have a feast We'll roast a Haire or two at least. We go to Shermans for a steak A Porter house is what we'll take. Perhaps the day has been too hot We ask and look Lorraine; And when we want the sun, great Scott, Its coming out again.

If now a concert we would give We do not need Bell ringers, And would you ask the reason why? We have our own 300-singers. If you are tired of my rhyme And think it is quite trashy, Please tell me what on earth you'd do,

With such a name as Ashley, A thousand pounds from Whittington We'll take, if she don't care; I'll help us when we come to build, Our castle in the air.

From Macmillan, we'd like the mill, As we're apt to find, Its quite convenient when we have The proverbial axle grind. Or love we have not said a word And yet I'm sure we may; We may not all love very much, But then we all Love-day.

For our hostess we surely feel That we may kindly Foster Sincere regards as who can tell What this affair has cost her.

In olden times a Matthew sat Right on the seat of custom Our Churchill shall never fail If only man will trust him.

Of Burdette you have often heard It grows in many places And is a very bitter dish; My goodness, goodness, gracious. Oh many parties we have had And drew so many prizes We can Cro-well I'm nearly mad My inspiration rises.

Oh Hoyt-y toit! Excuse the slang We kneale to ask your pardon We go to Empeys there to find We're sure to get a bargain.

We'll take the bitter with the Sweet As is so often quoted Now don't you think this rhyme most neat

I'm sure I should be noted.

ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup

Pleasant to take and does not gripe or nauseate Cures Chronic Constipation, Stomach and Liver Trouble

Stimulation Without Irritation. ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup is a new laxative syrup combined with the delicious flavor of fruits, and is very pleasant to take. It will not gripe or sicken. It is much more pleasant and effective than Pills, Tablets and Saline Waters, as it does not derange the Stomach, or irritate the Kidneys, Liver or Bowels.

Why ORINO is different. ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup is the only preparation that really acts upon all of the digestive organs. Other preparations act upon the lower bowel only and do not touch the Liver. It can very readily be seen that a preparation that does not act upon all of the digestive organs can not cure Chronic Constipation, Torpid Liver, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, etc.

For Billiousness and Sick Headache. Take ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup. It sweetens the stomach, aids digestion and acts as a gentle stimulant on the liver and bowels without irritating these organs.

Clears the Complexion. ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup stimulates the liver and thoroughly cleanses the system and clears the complexion of pimples and blotches. It is the best laxative for women and children as it is mild and pleasant, and does not gripe or sicken. Refuse substitutes.

OUR GUARANTEE Take ORINO Laxative Fruit Syrup and if you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Prepared only by FOLEY & CO., Chicago, Ill. SOLD AND RECOMMENDED BY WARNE'S PHARMACY

BLOOD DISEASED MEN

If you ever contracted any blood disease you are never safe unless the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. Have you any of the following symptoms? Sore throat, ulcers on the tongue or in the mouth, hair falling out, itching pains, itching of the scalp, nose or blotches on the body, eyes red and smart, dry, peptic stomach, sexual weakness—indications of the secondary stage. Don't ruin your system with the old foggy treatment—mercury and potash—which only suppresses the symptoms for a time only to break out again when happy in domestic life. Don't let quacks experiment on you. Our New Method Treatment is guaranteed to cure you. Our guarantees are back ed by bank bonds, that the disease will never return. Thousands of patients have been already cured by our New Method Treatment for over 20 years. No names used without written consent. Mr. E. A. C. writes: "Your remedies have done me more good than Hot Springs and all the doctors and medicines I had previously tried. I have not felt any of those pains or seen any ulcers or blotches for over seven years and the outward symptoms of the loathsome disease have entirely disappeared. My hair has grown in fully again and I am married and happy." CONSULTATION FREE. BOOKS FREE. WRITE FOR QUESTION BLANK FOR HOME TREATMENT. CURE GUARANTEED OR NO PAY. 25 YEARS IN DETROIT.

You can sell these for One Dollar, and this will furnish you capital to buy more at the wholesale price. You can work up a list of permanent customers who will buy a copy every month, and this will give you spending money all the time—money that you will enjoy more because you made it in business for yourself. In addition to a liberal profit on each copy sold, we give Cash Prizes and Premiums, such as Watches, Cameras, Boxing Gloves and dozens of other things dear to the heart of a boy. Send your request for the 10 free copies to THE SUCCESS BOY DEPARTMENT WASHINGTON SQUARE, NEW YORK. A postal card will do.
