The County Fair.

Best Ever in History of Charlevoix Co.

With the largest attendance ever recorded, with the display as a whole as good as ever and excellent horse races, the Twenty-Second Annual Meet of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society is now a matter of history.

Tuesday was entry day and everything was placed in readiness for the big crowd which attended Wednesday.

Upon entering the grounds the first attraction to greet the eye was the display of the J. I. Case Co. a 74x10 traction engine and 20x50 steel grain separator with wind stacker, and bagger and weigher. The exhibit was in charge of W. H. Lanway, their agent for Northern Michigan.

The next was a Reception Tent of the E. B. Clark Seed Co. in charge of A. E. Cross their local representative. The crowd as a whole did not understand the object of the tents but it sprang into popularity and was appreciated by those who used same. A number were surprised that it should be conducted free of charge, the company only asking the good will of those who patronized it.

Supernaw Bros. came next with a tent and handsome display of buggies, wagons, harness, Shurpee tubular cream separator and McVicker gasoline engine.

Entering the Floral Hall the first exhibit to greet the eye was that of the Musselman Grocery Co. who had a display of groceries that would tempt any man's appetite. They also conducted a tent in which free lunches were served.

D. H. Francis of Boyne City was next with a fine exhibit pianos and organs.

Empay Bros. Furniture Emporium followed with a handsome display of sideboards, chairs, couches, etc.

Malpass Hardware Co. had several of their popular Malleable Steel Ranges on exhibit in the next booth.

Following came Stroebel Bros. with an elaborate display of stoves, blankets, harness, etc.

In the center of the Hall was a nicely equipped display of Furniture with a sign above—Whittington, Nuff Sed.

The Boyne City Clay Products Co. had a nice exhibit of dry pressed and repressed and common brick, together with a number of photos of the business places of their home town.

The Cable Piano Co. had a booth full of Pianos, piano players, Organs and Talking machines. This booth carried the blue card.

The fruit exhibit was excellent perhaps even surpassing that of a year ago. The Grange's was particularly good. Marion Center Grange took first on fruit, Peninsula Grange second, South Arm Grange second, In Canned Fruit, Marion Center Grange took first, South Arm second and Peninsula third premium. The display of grain was plentiful and monstrous pumpkins, beets, potatoes, turnips, cabbage, etc., proved conclusively that Charlevoix soil is productive. The Fancy Work department had a decided falling off this year, the ladies either forgetting the needle or not entering their work. What was on display, however, was par excellent.

Emerging from the Floral Hall the display of buggies, robes, windmill, etc., by J. H. Danway was first to be noticed.

Ward & Ward of Charlevoix had a display of Empire cream separator and gasoline engine and the International Harvester Co. had a gasoline engine in charge of M. B. Hooker. This engine had already been sold to one of our hustling and progressive farmers.

Mr. Cook of Charlevoix had his poultry display near the grand-stand and it was fine.

The display of live stock was a little bit better than ever before, our stock growers showing an inclination to raise a better grade.

Space prevents our going into detail on individual prize winners but we trust in a week or so to compile a list of those receiving prizes and publish the same.

The East Jordan Military Band furnished delightful music during the races and in the evening rendered fine concerts to the crowd which thronged our streets. Loveday Opera House furnished two good attractions and was crowded to S. B. O. each night. Below is the result of the Speed Contests:

EXCITING NOVEL BY OPPENHEIM.

Novel readers everywhere will be glad to have a tip on the brilliant new romance, "The Great Secret," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, author of "A Prince of Sinners," "The Mysterious Mr. Sabin" and other noted books. It is one of the most fascinating tales of mystery and action in recent fiction. If you read the first page you simply can't get away from the magic spell of the story till the mystery is solved in the last chapter.

Suppose you were quietly undressing in your room in a London hotel when suddenly a terrified man rushed in, locked your door, and told you that the men outside were going to kill him. Suppose you liked the man's looks, so that your fighting blood was up to defend him. What would you do when his enemies burst in your door and tried to drag him off without law or warrant? And suppose the man possessed some momentous secret which made him the victim of an international conspiracy, and that a beautiful American girl seemed to be one of the conspirators. Interesting is it not? Well, that is only a hint of the first chapter, and the story carries one along in a whirlwind of mystified excitement to the end.

Mr. Oppenheim is a wizard with the pen. Americans are only beginning to realize he is one of the greatest masters of exciting narratives in this decade. He is an Englishman with an American wife, and characters from both countries figure in his novels. "The Great Secret" is a marvel of its kind. The first installment will appear in the Sunday Magazine of the Chicago Record-Herald, Sept. 30.

Queer Isn't It?

Men are queer. Wouldn't there be a roar when a man went home to his meal this noon if he had to climb up on a high stool in front of a table on which there was no cloth and eat his meal in that fashion.

Yet a majority of men, when they go to a restaurant to eat, will pick out the high stool and the feed board with no cloth on it to a comfortable chair with a cloth covered table. A man will borrow a chew of tobacco and most of them will set their teeth into the plug right over where some other man gnawed out a chew. Offer him a piece of pie at home from which his wife or one of the children have taken a bite and he would holler his head off. At home he will not drink out of a glass from which some one of the family had been drinking. Call into the back stall of a livery barn, pull out a bottle and he will stick the neck of the bottle half way down his throat in order to get a swig, after half a dozen fellows had the neck of the same bottle in their mouths. A man is a queer duck.

The Hawks Nursery Co., Wauwatosa, Wis., write they have a good proposition for any man in this locality. They wish a solicitor to work all or part of the time. The above firm is an old established company and will be found well rated by such agencies as Dunn and Bradstreet, and we believe anyone in shape to do canvassing will profit by writing them.

Lame Horses Are Poor Travellers.

Did you ever try to drive a horse that went lame easily? Or one always afraid he wouldn't hear you say, whoa? Some horses can't travel because they are lame and others won't travel without a lot of urging. They are not the horses to buy. It's just the same with cream separators. Some are always out of fix, and some turn like corn shellers. Such separators don't have the up-to-date features found only in THE SHARPLES TUBULAR.

Buy a Tubular. Have a separator with waist low supply can, simple bowl hung from single, frictionless bearing and driven by wholly enclosed self-oiling gears—a separator a child can care for—one that will last a life-time. Will take a tubular all apart and show you how simple, strong and efficient it is.

The status of the wearer of the army dress is up, and the New York Times thinks that the uniform of the enlisted man, whether in the army or the navy, is the badge of the wearer's subordinate employment in an honorable and useful government service—one of many such and one of the least.

It gives him certain special rights in his garrison or on his ship and deprives him of many individual freedoms there and elsewhere. It operates not at all to increase his merely civic privileges. Off duty and outside his garrison he counts merely as a man. Least of all is his uniform a social passport.

The Indian has played the great game of the world and has lost. The fittest has survived and always will. But that does not mean that a people that nominally perishes has served no good purpose or that it will disappear when it has ceased to be a race, says the Kansas City Journal. The Indian has a past that is splendid in a barbaric sense. He has a future that is splendid in a civilized sense unless we are to concede that barbarism is the ordained state of the race. The Indian will bring much to the great race of which he is to be in time only a part. His contribution to human progress will be infinitely greater than if he retained his tribal entity.

The wasp waist promises to become popular in London. All the talk against tight lacing, and the disquisitions on the beauty of the human female form in its uncompromised state, are powerless to set aside the verdict of those who set the fashions. If they decide that wasps must be squeezed, the ladies will submit to the squeezing, and any suffering they may experience through the process will be more than counterbalanced by the satisfaction they will derive from the consciousness that they have the form decreed by the arbiters of fashion.

EVENTS NOTED

BANK ROBBERS AT WHITE CLOUD WERE NERVOUS AND TOOK BOOTY AWAY.

TWO BANKS—DYNAMITED

Ex-Governor Bliss Died a Poor Man; Made Fortunes and Then Lost Them Again.

Robbers Got $2,000.

The safe of the Newaygo County bank, of St. Cloud, was dynamited early Thursday morning and between $2,000 and $4,000 taken. An attempt was made to rob the R. Gannon private bank in the same manner, but the vaults and safe withstood the blasts of dynamite, and the robbers were scared away.

Eight masked men rode into the village between midnight and 1 o'clock in the morning. They surrounded both banks. The Newaygo County bank was the first entered. Two charges were exploded before the vaults gave way. Several charges were then exploded in the safe of the Gannon bank, but the steel safety deposit could not be broken.

By this time many of the villagers, hearing the noise, were hurrying toward the scene, and the masked men hastily mounted their horses and rode away. It is thought that they went in a southerly direction.

George Rosenberg and family, living above the store next to the Gannon bank, looked out of their windows. They were ordered to take their heads in or they would be shot off. The Rosenberg home was guarded front and rear.

The village is aroused with excitement and terribly wrought up over the affair. It is not definitely known the exact amount of money secured, but the Newaygo County bank is so wrecked that in its condition thorough investigation is practically impossible.

Made Fortunes and Lost Them.

By far the most interesting phase of the late Aaron T. Bliss' many-sided activities was his business career, compassing as it did a range of 30 years of strife, success and adversity alternating like the seasons. Although he engaged in many financial undertakings his fortunes were in the main made and lost in timber. In 1898 Bliss became associated with Gen. Alger in some extensive land transactions which brought him excellent returns, and it is said by his surviving business associates that the close of the century found the governor in probably the most prosperous condition of his life.

Possibly at this time he was worth between $300,000 and $400,000. But in the brief time between 1900 and his death, extending over his gubernatorial terms, he again lost the bulk of his fortune, through business accommodations, unprofitable business ventures and the spreading of his money out over a multitude of undertakings which he was unable to swing. One single loss a few years ago is said to have been $50,000, while his investment in Idahoan irrigation lands required a heavy outlay of money and proved unprofitable.

It is said, though this cannot be certified, that Bliss' estate outside of his life insurance, which is about $300,000, will hardly pay all outstanding mortgages, notes and other obligations. It has also been gossiped that friends during a very recent period have been paying the premiums on part of his life insurance. However this may be, it is certain that his clear estate will be but a fraction of the fortune he at several times possessed, lost, regained and lost again. His widow will have a competence, the remainder of her life, but not much more.

Parker Released.

George W. Parker, slayer of James Moore, his brother-in-law, who was convicted of manslaughter in Detroit, is set at liberty by a decision of the supreme court.

In the opinion, which was by Justice Grant, the circumstances of Parker's trial are recalled, the third jury in the case being discharged by Judge Phelan owing to charges made against the panel, and all the names in the jury box were destroyed by his order. One hundred and fifty new names were ordered put into the box and a new jury was secured which convicted Parker.

The jury was discharged after the people had rested their case and the respondent had entered upon his defense. The judge's investigations into the charges against the jurors were held to be ex parte and they had no chance to defend themselves.

"Under the facts of this case both the accused and the people were entitled to have the case submitted to that jury," says the opinion.

Thirty-Eight Cases of Typhoid Fever.

Secretary Shumway, who has been in Traverse City, reports an epidemic of typhoid fever with 38 cases. He concluded the infection was due to the water supply gained from Traverse bay, into which sewerage is emptied. He says the authorities have the situation well in hand and will take up the subject of installing a sewerage purification plant, which Dr. Shumway suggested.

The supreme court sustained the constitutionality of the law providing for the sale of stocks of goods in bulk which requires five days' advance notice to creditors. The law was designed to protect wholesalers against fraud and was attacked as class legislation.

John Sterling, 5-year-old son of A. Sterling, of Flint, was frightfully scalded with a pall of hot grease which the lad's mother tipped upon him while getting the dinner. The boy's head, face and right side are terribly blistered, and his condition is considered critical.

Smith and Mrs. Swank Given the Third Degree Without Result.

Two Pinkerton detectives and Sheriff Tennant failed to wrest a confession from Smith that he murdered Lloyd A. Dynes, the Gallen telegraph operator, or an admission of guilty knowledge from Mrs. Cordia Swank. Each was "sweated" for two hours in the county jail. Smith's whereabouts on the night of the murder remain a mystery. He is known to have spent the early part of the evening at the home of a cousin. He is said to have been asleep on a lounge in his cousin's house at 10 o'clock. After that hour nothing is known of where he went. His relatives have not assisted him so far in establishing an alibi.

Mrs. Swank did not learn of Dynes' murder until between 7 and 8 o'clock on the morning after the night he was killed. It is denied that she became hysterical. A girl who was with her says that she showed no unusual excitement on hearing of the crime. This girl says that she heard Smith make threats against Clyde Swank, being jealous of Mrs. Swank's husband, Mrs. Swank was on friendly terms with Lloyd Dynes.

Needed the Bath.

Muskegon officers brought a wild man into town. He had been in the woods for several weeks. He was scantily clad, long hair matted and filled with filth fell over his shoulders and he had a beard like Father Noah. He was barefooted and his feet were shaped like a tree-climbing animal. He was arraigned in court and sentenced to 30 days in jail as a vagrant. He was comparatively "tame" through it all, up to the time the jailer announced he must take a bath. Then he went wild sure enough. He raved and stormed and the jailer was compelled to tear his clothes off to disrobe him. The sight of water and a porcelain bath tub nearly caused him to faint. Then the jailer had fainting symptoms. The stench caused that. So he went to a grocery store and bought 1/2 worth of brown sugar, which he burned in the room, while he turned the hose on the wild man and washed the thickest off.

Two Were Killed.

Frank Lunel was killed, another Hungarian was fatally hurt, two others of the same nationality and Frank Buell, an American, are more or less injured as the result of the blowing out of the end of a boiler at the Burt Portland Cement Co.'s plant just before noon Sunday. Lunel's skull was fractured, and every inch of his body was scalded. The injured were burned by the steam. The cause of the accident is unknown.

WANTS NO CHANGE.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT STANDS WITH THE STAND PATTERS.

On the Subjects of Tariff Revision and Tariff and Trusts He Counsels Moderation and Conservatism for the Present as the Wisest Course.

In the form of a letter to Congressman Watson, of Indiana, President Roosevelt makes a strong appeal for the continued control of the house of representatives by the Republican party. The letter, dated from Oyster Bay, August 12, dwells at length upon the work accomplished by the Fifty-ninth congress, and upon the importance of the work yet to be accomplished. Among the unfinished measures which he hopes and believes will be brought to completion at next winter's session he mentions specifically the "bill to lower the duties on imports from the Philippine islands." On the subject of tariff revision and of the relation of the tariff to the trusts, the president says:

"We stand unequivocally for a protective tariff, and we feel that the phenomenal industrial prosperity which we are now enjoying is not lightly to be jeopardized, for it would be to the last degree foolish to secure here and there a small benefit at the cost of general business depression. But whenever a given rate or schedule becomes evidently disadvantageous to the nation because of the changes which go on from year to year in our conditions, and where it is feasible to change this rate or schedule without too much dislocation of the system, it will be done; while a general revision of the rates and schedules will be undertaken whenever it shall appear to the sober business sense of our people that on the whole the benefits to be derived from making such changes will outweigh the disadvantages; that is, when the revision will do more good than harm."

"Let me add one word of caution, however. The question of revising the tariff stands wholly apart from the question of dealing with the so-called 'trusts'—that is, with the control of monopolies, and with the supervision of great wealth in business, especially in corporate form. The only way in which it is possible to deal with these trusts and monopolies and this great corporate wealth is by action along the line of the laws enacted by the present congress and its immediate predecessors. The cry that the problem can be met by any change in the tariff represents, whether consciously or unconsciously, an effort to divert the public attention from the only method of taking effective action."

Sufficiently Radical.

A forecast of the attitude which Mr. Bryan will assume on the tariff appears in a recent issue of the Commoner:

"It was proved repeatedly in the house and senate that American manufacturers were selling goods abroad cheaper than at home and that the high protective tariff provides shelter to the trusts while they prey upon the people. But the Republican congress refused to give the people relief on demand for tariff revision comes as a demand for tariff revision comes as a demand for a considerable portion of the rank and file of the Republican party as it does from members of other parties. Promising in its platforms and through its stump speakers that the tariff would be revised by its friends, the Republican party through its congress insisted upon 'standing pat,' which phrase was coined by representatives of the trust system and being interpreted means that the Republican party will be faithful to the men who provide it with campaign funds."

We think the free trade newspapers of "the enemy's country" have no cause to worry about Mr. Bryan's tariff views. They will be found sufficiently radical to suit the most ardent haters of protection.

TRUSTS AND DEMOCRACY.

Party When in Power Made No Move Against Them.

The Herald is much exercised over the trusts, charges them all to the tariff, even Standard Oil, and closes with a dire threat or prediction that the Republican party, which made the trusts possible, will be hurled from power by the outraged people. Incidentally it delivers a panegyric on Mr. Lincoln, the only trouble being that the great man was obliged to die before any Democrat discovered either greatness or common honesty in the glorified man.

But the writer in the Herald forgot one thing. When the people overthrow the Republican party, into what hands will it commit the destinies of the country? Will it be the Democracy? That is rather a momentous question. Will the 1892 trick be tried again? In that year the Democracy put in its plank a furious arraignment of the Republican party's record, demanded that it should be utterly overthrown, and then the trusts chipped in and elected their president and both houses of congress.

The results were somewhat disappointing. The traditional bull in the china shop was but a sucking-calf by comparison. The country had four years of it, and when it had run a course, had trusts been for sale at two-bits apiece, they would have gone begging; there would no money left in the land to make the purchases. Since then the people have fought a little shy of putting their trust in a party so filled with promises before election, so impotent in performance after election. The Republicans had passed an anti-trust law just prior to the great Democratic victory, but Mr. Cleveland's attorney general could see nothing in it. The trusts were mind readers that year. They knew in advance that no matter who Mr. Cleveland might appoint attorney general, he would be color blind and would see nothing compelling in the law.—Salt Lake City Telegram.

Enemies of protection in 1906 are using precisely the same arguments against the Dingley tariff that were used against the McKinley tariff in 1892. In spite of the splendid work being done for labor and production by the McKinley tariff the cry was raised that prices were too high. That is the cry to-day of free traders, tariff reformers and tariff revisionists. Then, as now, the demand was for free raw materials. Well, the revised tariff of 1894 provided free raw materials, and a large part of the mills and factories that were thus favored either went out of business or went into bankruptcy. The country was given all the advantages of increased foreign competition as a means of breaking down domestic prices and idleness, ruin, disaster and sou-headers were the result. Again the talk of free raw materials and of increased foreign competition through reciprocity and tariff revision down-ward. Thirteen years is not a very long time, but it is long enough to bring forgetfulness to a large number of people who ought to know better than to forget the awful consequences of trying to revise protection out of the tariff. Protectionists should pull themselves together, and use all possible diligence in trying to prevent a recurrence of the awful blunder of 1892.

A Typical Revisionist.

It is gratifying to note that at least one Massachusetts tariff tinker is prepared to furnish a bill of particulars. Congressman Gardner has thought it all out, and has reached the sapient conclusion that revision must be "practicable." So he names free hides and free sole leather. Practicable, surely, from the customary Massachusetts viewpoint. But how about the viewpoint of cattle grazing sections which contribute several million votes to the Republican column? What will they have to say to the selfish and silly proposition that they shall make sacrifices in behalf of the millionaire shoemakers of Massachusetts? Congressman Gardner is absurd.

Many Negroes in Atlanta Beaten to Death and Many Injured.

Saturday evening rioting began in Atlanta, Ga., the negro population being the victims, the alleged cause being the numerous assaults on white women. At midnight Gov. Terrell issued an order calling out eight companies of the Fifth Infantry and one battery of light artillery. The order was not issued until 11 p.m. Negroes had been killed and attacked to hospitals, five of whom will die.

The mob began its work early in the evening, pulling negroes from street cars and beating them with clubs, bricks and stones. Negro men and women, riding to their homes after the work of the day were ruthlessly torn from the cars or attacked on the streets.

In a few cases negroes retaliated during the early part of the night, but after 10 o'clock they were scarce in public places. The fire department was called out to disperse the mob on Decatur street, a street much frequented by negroes, and for a time seemed to hold the crowd at bay.

The police reserves were called out to hold the situation until the troops could be mobilized. The mob seemed to lack leadership and this doubtless prevented more slaughter. The reports gave the number of known dead as fifteen and it was thought that thirty, perhaps more, were either killed outright or so injured that death will follow.

STRANGE RELIGIOUS COMMUNITY ESTABLISHED AT WAUKESHA, WIS.

Colony of "Holy Jumpers" That Depends Solely on Faith for Material Support and Vents Its Fervor in Acrobatics.

Waukesha, Wis.—The most remarkable of all religious colonies that accept the Bible as their only guide has been established here. In the mineral water belt the colonists are known as the "Holy Jumpers," legally they are incorporated—as the "Metropolitan Church association," and for everyday purposes they call themselves members of the "Holiness" band.

The first title was acquired from a scoffing public because the members of the colony, during the services and in the fervor of religious joy, can do a flat-footed, standing jump that would make Ray Ewry look like an amateur, and they can keep it up for minutes at a stretch. Their more dignified legal name was acquired seven years ago when they incorporated in Chicago. The everyday name used by them is an old one. Years ago it was adopted by a band of enthusiasts whose physical demonstrations of religious excitement attracted much attention and much derision from the more staid denominations. The practice of the Waukesha holiness band is the practice of the old holiness bands run riot to such an extent as to make them virtually a new thing in religion.

Duke M. Farson, probably the most extraordinary figure in religion in the country, stands at the head of the "jumpers" by virtue of his energetic work for many years along "holiness" lines. Mr. Farson, started life as a bank clerk and graduated into the hard business in Chicago. He amassed a fortune and built up a business that produced an income equal to the interest income of some millionaires. John Farson, his brother, went into the same business and became a millionaire and an automobile enthusiast.

colony are nor what they are likely to be.

Runs Solely on Faith.
"God will provide and keep it going," is the business principle underlying the science. "His bank never breaks. Our deposits are in faith and there is no question about the future. He will give us all the money we need."

A flimsy foundation, says the world, for the payment of $60,000 indebtedness on the headquarters of the colony and the running expenses for several hundred men, women and children. Still it is the only foundation on which the institution rests and there is not another band of people so happy as these who do not know where the next meal, the next suit of clothes nor the next dollar in money is coming from. So far there has been plenty to eat, plenty to wear and plenty of money to meet the obligations of the colonists. If the supply continues, with no other means of insuring it than "faith," the world of religion will be forced to take seriously the everyday application of the doctrines of the "Jumpers." A more inand noise, and last year it was decided to find a place outside the city which would serve as a recruiting ground and headquarters, and where there need be no soft pedal used during their exercises.

Description of the Services.
Heard and viewed from a little distance, one of the regular Sunday night church services of the Waukesha enthusiasts resembles a cross between a football rush and a red hot political convention. During the summer the services have been held in a huge tent in the field just below the hotel, but this winter the grand dining-room will serve the purpose. In the tent the orchestra consists of an upright piano played by an elderly man, a bass drum played by a large boy, and a snare drum presided over by a small boy. There is also a man who leads the singing until it gets well under way. After that nobody leads. Although there is no arbitrary rule to that effect, the women of the congregation are seated on one side of the tent and the men on the other, after the custom of 50 years ago.

By common consent Mr. Farson presides in an informal way. A crude platform is rigged up on one side of the tent for a pulpit, and in front of the platform is a space about 10 by 30 feet, bedded down with clean straw. This space is for the use of the "mourners" at the altar and those who work with them.

After the services have been opened with song it takes about one minute to develop the demonstrations which have given the colonists the name of "jumpers." It is doubtful if there is an athlete who can perform the physical feats done daily by many of the members of this congregation. No sooner is the fervor of the congregation fired by the singing than the jumping begins. The word jumping is not used figuratively. Dozens and sometimes scores of the worshippers break into a perpendicular dance, which consists of jumping straight up and down with most marvelous rapidity. The jump is not merely the raising of the jumper on his or her toes, but a clean, flat-footed jump with both feet several inches from the ground.

Leaders Fear No Want.
Two weeks ago a check for $1,500 was received from a man who approved the work, and the bills are being paid out of that. Where the next money is to come from the "jumpers" do not know, but they are sublimely confident that it will come in as needed. There are no private purses. If a member of the band needs clothes he or she is provided out of the general fund. The bills due tradesmen and supply dealers are paid first, and if there is anything left it goes into the work, the personal needs of the band being considered last. Besides "trusting in the Lord" for the $60,000 due on the property, the "holiness" band is perfectly satisfied to trust Him for the actual necessities of life as well. So far the table has been well supplied.

Physical persecution of the "Jumpers" in their new colony began August 23, when a band of nearly 100 young men of Waukesha swooped down on the camp meeting tent near the Fountain Spring house. They were supplied with rocks, vegetables and overdue eggs. The tent was surrounded and the congregation attacked with missiles. The "jumpers" made no physical resistance, although several of the men were hit by rocks and many of the women had their garments badly torn.

interesting experiment never has been made.

The Waukesha group had its origin in Chicago. Most of the meetings of the band were held in the old First Methodist church building at Clark and Washington streets, and for two years they ran a camp meeting next to the old Methodist grounds at Des Plaines. The noise from the "holiness" band was so great that it seriously interfered with the meeting over the fence and led to complaint. In the meantime the band grew in numbers uries and extravagances of city life deeper and deeper into religious matters until now he has closed out his lucrative bond business by selling to his brother and is selling all the real estate and other property belonging to him preparatory to following to the letter the scriptural injunction:

"If thou wouldst be perfect, go sell that which thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow Me."—Mat. xxiv. 19.

His sacrifice of all his possessions has been complete and based on what he considers the only proper construction of the New Testament. Having been wealthy and one of the chief figures in his business in Chicago, Mr. Farson's course naturally has been much more conspicuous than the similar course pursued by those associated with him at Waukesha and who had much less to give up for religious conviction than had the broker. Mr. Farson lays no special unction to his soul, however, because it was his "privilege" to give up much where others gave up little.

"Each of us gave up his or her 'all,'" he said, "and the mite of the widow was as much to her as all the worldly goods I had were to me."

The new religious colony at Waukesha is the most colossal experiment in "faith" of modern times. To the colonists it is not an experiment because they are as firmly convinced that their colony is built on a sound principle as is the man that starts a national bank. There is no formal business organization and no one can tell approximately even what the running expenses of the

AARON BURR JURY.

ITS SELECTION WAS A LONG, TEDIOUS PROCESS.

Fate of the Defendant Rested in the Hands of Those Who Were His Avowed Enemies—Chosen by Burr Himself.

Only four of the first panel of 43 talesmen summoned for jury duty had undecided opinions about Burr and only one of those four expressed himself as entirely unprejudiced concerning him. The other 44 were so irreconcilably hostile that the court promptly discharged them and another panel was summoned, says a writer in Harper's Magazine. This second lot, however, was worse than the first and the situation grew more and more serious as the sifting process continued, one candidate after another expressed open hostility and even hatred for the defendant. At last when hope of securing an impartial jury had almost faded a talesman by the name of Morrison took the stand who, it was believed, would prove an exception to the rule. This gentleman had apparently kept an open mind on the subject of the prisoner's innocence or guilt and was willing to serve as a juror—almost too willing it seemed to the defense—and Mr. Botts rose to cross-examine.

"Are you a freeholder?" asked the counsel.

"Yes; I have two patents for land," answered the candidate.

"Are you worth $200?" continued the examiner.

"Yes," snapped the witness. "I have a horse here worth half of it."

"Have you another at home to make up the other half?" jocosely pursued the attorney and the audience laughed.

"Yes, four of them?" retorted the talesman, angrily. "I am surprised there should be so much terror to me," he continued, addressing the audience; "but perhaps my name may be a terror," he added, his voice rising to a shout, "for my name is Hamilton."

This "unprejudiced" candidate was then excused and for 14 days the weary search continued without success. Not one impartial citizen was discovered in the entire second panel; and at this juncture the proceedings were brought to a standstill. After some discussion, however, the defense suggested that it be allowed to select anyone it chose from the last panel and the acceptance of this unique proposition paved the way for one of the most startling moves in this extraordinary trial.

Strictly speaking, not one of the proposed jurors was eligible to a seat in the jury box, but of course some of them were less bitter against the defendant than others and it was natural to suppose that Burr's advisers would take advantage of that fact and choose the best of a bad lot. Nothing so commonplace, however, characterized their plans and to the utter amazement of all outsiders Burr proceeded to nominate the most objectionable talesman of the entire list. Inexplicable as this surprising maneuver must have been to the general public, it was, of course, instantly comprehended by the opposing counsel. Burr and his advisers doubtless reasoned that the safest jurors would be those whose hostility had been most thoroughly exposed. The very fact that he was willing to place his life in the hands of his avowed enemies was, of course, the most eloquent protest of innocence which a prisoner could make.

JAPANESE NATION OF WORKERS.

Everybody Manages to Keep Busy in Land of the Mikado.

Everybody in Japan appears to do work of some kind; it is a country without beggars, without drunkards, and all are polite and good-natured. Nothing is heard or seen of the effect of the recent war. The people neither talk about it nor have they become overbearing or in any manner intoxicated by their great victories, but have quietly gone to work to develop their industries; to increase their commerce and trade, and to get a fair control over the new markets which the success of their armies has opened for them.

A tendency to exclude other nations from these markets does not exist, the uniform and repeated assurance being readily given by Japan's leading statesmen, that the promise of the "open door" in Korea and Manchuria will, as far as Japan is concerned, be strictly carried out.

Korea itself is gradually getting under effective Japanese control and administration, which will be of much benefit to the entirely out-of-date country, the resources of which appear to have been dormant for centuries; these with proper and intelligent administrative methods should promise rich results. The natural resources of Japan itself are probably somewhat limited, but its people are frugal, intelligent and energetic, and the burdens which the late war has imposed do not appear to weigh heavily upon them.—Harper's Weekly.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

LEAVE STAGE FOR FARM.
Andrews Brothers, Swiss Bell Ringers, Retire to Fruit Ranch.

Country born and farm bred as boys, William T. Andrews and Edward Andrews, two of the original members of the once famous Andrews Opera company, are to abandon the stage for farm life. They have bought a fruit ranch near Medford, Ore., and will give personal supervision to its management.

They were brought up on a farm near the village of Oitawa, a few miles north of St. Peter, Minn. Their father was a Methodist minister, and it is doubtful whether any of the five brothers ever received a lesson in music, but all had fine voices. Ed Andrews for years was regarded as an excellent comedian.

The first theatrical venture of the brothers was made by Charles Andrews, associated with him was Henry Moll, of St. Peter, now judge of the probate court of Nicollet county. During the last year of the civil war Andrews wrote a sketch which he called "The Recruiting Officer," he appearing in this role.

Judge Moll took the character of a green German anxious to enlist in the army, but now denies that he ever possessed histrionic ability. One of the partners owned a horse and the other a carriage, and for three years they gave their play at all the school entertainments in Nicollet and Le Sueur counties.

Then Arthur French, a successful farmer near Lake Emily, laid the foundation for the Andrews troupe by organizing the Andrews family of Swiss bell ringers. This aggregation was composed of Will, Oliver, Edward and George Andrews, and in their gaudily painted tallies they traveled over the states of Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin. Oliver Andrews, after leaving the troupe, became a district judge in South Dakota, but he was replaced by Charles Andrews, who gave up the practice of law to return to the states.

For four or five years they appeared as the Swiss bell ringers, and the success they achieved led the brothers to form the Andrews Opera company. It prospered from the outset, and soon the singers owned their private car and were carrying an expensive assortment of stage settings and other theatrical paraphernalia. They visited all parts of the United States, and for more than a quarter of a century their company never missed a season.

Then the decline began, and ill-fortune followed them like a Nemesis. First Charles Andrews was accidentally killed in the railway yards at Elgin, Ill., and a few years later Mrs. Edward Andrews was burned to death in a wreck on the Northern Pacific.

In an effort to recoup the losses following these tragedies they planned a gigantic amusement enterprise. Selecting Waterville as their base, they erected a magnificent hotel and began exploiting Lake Tetonka as a summer resort. Celebrated chautauqua speakers were engaged, and the opera company gave performances in a specially constructed theater, but their fortune was swept away.

Three years ago the Andrews Opera company passed out of existence. Will and George Andrews retired from the stage, and this season Edward followed their example.

PASSING OF THE GREENROOM.
Gathering Place for Actors on the Stage Done Away With.

Greenrooms practically have been out of existence for ten or 15 years, so the younger generation scarcely knows the meaning of the word. The latest instance of a greenroom in Chicago was at the Iroquois, but after that theater was burned the fire ordinance compelled the management to change that part which was devoted to the greenroom to an exit at the present Colonnade. It is a remarkable coincidence that fire also destroyed one of the last existing greenrooms in Chicago—the one in the old Columbia.

The original greenroom was at Drury Lane theater, and was built as a reception room to members of royalty, who could step from their box to the greenroom and meet the actors. Players received other friends there, too, and chatted and talked with fellow players during the performance. Rehearsals also were conducted in the greenrooms, and new plays were read up by the members of the company there by the stage producer. Actors, after making up, would go to the greenroom before the performance, where the stage manager would look them over, and if anything was amiss they were compelled to go back to their dressing rooms and change it. In those days, when the play was apt to be changed every night, a prompter and call boy were essential. The call boy would go to the greenroom and call for the player who was to make the next entrance.

One of the reasons the greenroom has been done away with is the fact that plays have such long runs that an actor is not dependent on a call boy, and by frequent repetition the actor is able to time his entrance exactly. An actor may be lounging in his dressing room until he hears a certain sound on the stage which he uses as a cue, and he will get ready for his entrance.

HOPPER IN A NEW FIELD.
Musical Comedian Will Now Take to Light Plays and Farces.

When DeWolf Hopper began his career as a player some time between the date of the discovery of America and the Sioux war, he appeared in plays of the legitimate order and gave promise of becoming a comedian of much ability. Later Hopper got sidetracked into the operatic field, advanced some distance, and ever afterward stood still. Taking his cue from Lillian Russell, whose appearance in "Barbara's Millions" will mark her first attempt in a comedy unadorned with music, Hopper will, after this season, devote his time and talents entirely to comedy and farce.

Many of Hopper's friends believe he should have taken this step a long time ago, for none of his recent vehicles has carried him very far forward. He will say farewell to song and dance in "Wang" and "Happy Land."

Rehearsals Begun.
Rehearsals of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" has begun at Louis James' country home at Mounmouth Beach, N. J., where recreation and business will be combined. Anna Millward, a young English actress, has been added to the company for the part of Robin.

Entered at the postoffice at East Jordan, Michigan, as second class mail matter.

Get SCOTT'S Emulsion

When you go to a drug store and ask for Scott's Emulsion you know what you want; the man knows you ought to have it. Don't be surprised, though, if you are offered something else. Wines, cordials, extracts, etc., of cod liver oil are plentiful but don't imagine you are getting cod liver oil when you take them. Every year for thirty years we've been increasing the sales of Scott's Emulsion. Why? Because it has always been better than any substitute for it.

The Man in the Moon in Germany.
The German legend tells us that ages ago an old man went one Sunday morning into the forest to cut timber (hew sticks). He cut a bundle of fagots and swung them over his shoulder and began to trudge home.

On the way he met a remarkable looking individual with a face as bright as the sun. "Do you know, old man, that it is Sunday on earth, when all men rest from their labors?" asked the stranger. "Sunday on earth or Monday in hell, it is all the same to me," said the hardened old wretch.

"Then bear your bundle forever," said the stranger as he vanished from sight. A moment later the old sinner and his fagots were deposited on the moon, where they stand to this day, a perpetual warning to all Sabbath breakers.

A Conscientious Patient.

"Medicine won't help you any," the doctor told his patient. "What you need is a complete change of living. Get away to some quiet country place for a month. Go to bed early, eat more roast beef, drink plenty of good, rich milk, and smoke just one cigar a day."

A month later the patient walked into the doctor's office. He looked like a new man, and the doctor told him so.

"Yes, doctor, your advice certainly did the business. I went to bed early and did all the other things you told me. But, say, doctor, that one cigar a day almost killed me at first. It's no joke starting in to smoke at my time of life."—Everybody's Magazine.

Not in the Succession.

The young pastor was examining the Sunday school and asked the class just in front of him if any of them could tell anything about the Apostle Peter. A little girl raised her hand.

"Come up here, my little lady," said the minister. "I am much gratified to see that you have remembered your lesson. Now, tell the school what you know about Peter."

The little girl was quite willing, and commenced, "Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater, had a wife and couldn't keep her, put her in a—"

But they never heard where he put her, on account of the general uproar.—Congregationalist.

A bad fire in the Lalonde Bros' block Friday morning nearly put that building out of commission. In the part occupied by Kelly's restaurant was an oil stove and that became ignited. The fire quickly spread and gained quite a headway before our fire boys could check it. Joseph Lalonde and Bob Dixon were both heavy losers of household goods which were partially insured. Mr. Kelly also lost quite heavily. The building is covered by insurance.

The October bookings at Loveday Opera House promise to be even better than those we have had so far this season—only two shows during the month—"When Women Love," an elaborate scenic comedy-drama—A play of sunshine and shadows, of smiles and tears, which carries with it lessons of brave character and pure love—by far the greatest of Love and Labor Dramas, comes about the middle of the month, and "Triumph of Betty" a high class comedy, later in the month.

One of our well known citizens says during the thunder storm Monday morning he was awakened by water falling on his face. He could not see how the roof should be leaking, as it had only been on a few years, but says he found his better half was so badly scared that she was sprinkling holy water on him to avert danger from the lightning.—Cheboygan Tribune.

The East Jordan high school football team came over last Saturday and played the high school team here a little game. The score of 56 to 0 in favor of the visitors tells how it went. In justice to our boys it should be said that they average much lighter in weight than the visitors. They put up a gamy fight but lost.—Central Lake Torch.

If there is one thing that gives us a pain more than another it's to go to a fire and find individual opinions of the inefficiency of the fire department. Nearly every one (except the fire brigade) knows just what ought to be done Friday morning the Herald man stood across the street from the Lalonde Block and listened for about ten minutes to this kind of tommy-rot. During that time the department had laid and were using three lines of hose, putting the water where it would do the most good. The above not only applies to our own little burg but where ever you go.

We have tried in all possible ways to show our appreciation of the liberal patronage given us since the first day of our coming to this city. In the columns of our paper we have fought for our town to the best of our ability. We would not be egotistical, but believe that by using this paper as a weapon we have been enabled to render some assistance to the enterprise and growth of our little city. If our paper has pleased you we are fully repaid for the hard labor we have given it, and can promise our readers that in the future it will be superior to the past, as we have decided to give more attention and work to the local field, realizing our readers appreciate a spicy local page.

At the Grand Traverse Soldier's Reunion at Boyne City last week the following officers for 1907 were elected: Commander, M. D. Morgan, Traverse City; Sen. Vice Com. John A. Newville, Boyne City; Jr. Vice Com., John Safford, Five Lake; Chaplain E. N. Tracy, Thumb Lake; Executive Com. J. W. Rogers, East Jordan; F. M. Gates, Boyne City; W. C. Ashley, Vanderbilt. Traverse City was decided upon as the meeting place next year.

Fire completely destroyed the Wellman Handle Factory, the Wellman Electric Light plant and the Lumberman's Tool company at South Boardman Monday night. The loss is about $50,000 with small insurance. The fire started about 12 o'clock in the shaving pit of the handle factory and a large force of men were soon on the ground, but as there is no fire protection the bucket brigade was powerless to control the fierce flames. Within a very short time after the fire broke out the three buildings were a smoldering mass of ruins. The Wellman Handle factory and the Wellman Electric Light plant were in the hands of the receivers, the gentlemen being Messrs. Hodge, of Five Lake, Gray, of Kalkaska and Dancer, of Petoskey. It is doubtful if these two plants will be rebuilt.

CHINA AND GLASSWARE

When Broken, Don't Be Too Hasty in Throwing It Away.

Because glassware, china and bric-a-brac get broken is no reason for throwing them away, for unless some of the pieces are lost they can be patched and glued together and made to look like new, if one is careful to fit the edges closely together. They should be practical for use, too, if water or liquid are not left standing in them.

Clear glass is the most difficult of these to mend because it must be done so expertly to prevent the crack from showing.

The best kind of glue for clear glass is made from a solution of two ounces of isinglass and half a pint of gin poured into an open mouthed bottle and set in the sun until it dissolves. It should be shaken well every day and before being used should be strained through a clean lawn cloth.

When ready for the gluing the broken glass pieces should be well washed in hot suds, especially on the edges, dried, and then with a small camel's hair brush the cement should be put on the edges of both pieces and when they are nicely fitted together rubber bands or clean strips of cloth should be bandaged tightly around them to hold the edges well together until the glue dries.

If the cement has been properly made the break should really not be visible when dry, for the reason many cracks look jagged when mended is because the edges have not been well joined and, bubbles of air getting in, reflect the light, making the ragged, broken lines glaringly apparent.

Bric-a-brac that is part metal and glass should not be so difficult to fix over, particularly where the two materials meet, for often a paste of sifted plaster of paris mixed with the beaten white of an egg will make them as strong and good as new. This work must be done quickly, for within five minutes after putting it on the pieces it hardens and holds the metal and glass or china tightly together.

Two metal pieces should be mended with solder. To do this the edges should first be carefully dusted, washed if they are very dirty and rosin brushed over them. Then when fitted well together and tied in place a stick of solder should be laid above the break and a hot iron brought down lightly on it. When the solder cools the melted rosin may be removed with a cloth dipped in alcohol.

THE WORD "FEMALE"

Why Should It Be Contemptuously Turned Out of Doors?

The fortunes of words, indeed, are subject to as many vicissitudes as the fortunes of individuals. But there is perhaps no one term which just now deserves more commiseration for the hard fate which has befallen it than the substantive "female" used as a synonym for "woman." It is turned out of doors by every corrector of the press. It is contemptuously spoken of as a vulgarism. Modern ignorance has sometimes styled it a modern vulgarism.

Both as a substantive and as an adjective "female" goes back to the fourteenth century, but though then occasionally employed as a synonym for "woman" such usage can hardly be called common. Still it is found. The Wycliffe translation of the Bible, for illustration, reads in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew that two women shall be grinding at a quern, the one to be taken, the other left. But in the polemic treatise Wycliffe wrote, expounding this same chapter, the two "women" of the gospel appear as two "females." The word turns up occasionally from that time during the three centuries that follow.

It is clear that the older writers, born and brought up amid the linguistic traditions of the earlier half of the nineteenth century, were not in the slightest degree under the influence now prevalent and that the disrepute into which the word has fallen is mainly the work of the last thirty years. It is hard to tell under what circumstances the feeling of dislike to it arose or what were the main determining agencies that brought about the state of feeling we recognize as existing today. If the remark will not seem invidious, I am inclined to attribute the disfavor in which it is now held to the ill will entertained and expressed toward it by the members of the sex it denotes. It may be said that they ought to have a determining voice in choosing the appellations by which they are designated.—Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's for August.

SERIAL STORY

A FOOL FOR LOVE

By FRANCIS LYNDE
Author of "The Grafters," Etc.

(Copyright, 1905, by J. P. Lipincott Co.)

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"Uncle Somerville, can't we win without calling in these horrid men with their guns?" she began, plunging desperately into the midst of things.

A mere shadow of a grim smile came and went in the Rajah's eyes. "An unprejudiced outsider might say that the horrid men with their guns were on top of that embankment, my dear—ten to one," he remarked. "It was the first time I ever saw Misteh Deerr at show the white feather."

"But I should think we might win in some other way. What is it you want to do?—specifically, I mean. Make me your ally and see if I can't help you."

Mr. Derrah pushed his plate aside and cleared his throat.

"For business reasons which you ah—wouldn't understand we can't let the Utah finish this railroad of theirs into Carbonate this winter."

"So much I have inferred. But Mr. Winton seems to be very determined."

"Mum! I wish Mr. Callowell had favored us with someone else—anyone else. That young fellow is a bawn fight, my dear."

"You mean that another man might make it easier for you?"

"I mean that another man would probably do it—ah—with our help—till the snows come."

Virginia had a bright idea, and she advanced it without examining too closely into its ethical part.

"Mr. Winton is working for wages, isn't he?" she asked.

"Of course; big money, at that. His sawt come high."

"Well, why can't you hire him away from the other people. Mr. Callowell might not be so fortunate next time. And it wouldn't be dishonorable in Mr. Winton to resign and take a better place, would it?"

The Rajah sat back in his chair and regarded her thoughtfully. Then a slow smile twitched the huge mustaches and worked its way up to the fierce eyes.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Nothing, my dear—nothing at all. I was just wondering how a woman's—ah—sense of proportion was put together. But your plan has merit. Do I understand that you will favor me with your help?"

"Why, ye-yes, certainly, if I can," she assented, not without dubiety. "That is, I'll be glad to Mr. Winton, if that is what you mean."

The saying of it cost her a blush and Mr. Derrah remarked it. But he did not give her time to retract.

"That is precisely what I mean, my dear. We'll begin by having him finish to dinner this evening, him and the other young man—what's his name?—Adams."

"But, uncle," she began, in hesitant protest, "what ever will he think?"

"Never mind what he thinks. You favor me, my dear Virginia, by sending him a right pretty invitation. You know how to do those things, and I—why, bless my soul—I've quite forgotten."

Virginia found pen, ink and paper, something doubting—doubting a great deal, if the truth were told—but not knowing how to go about refusing a confederacy which she herself had proposed.

And the upshot of the matter was a dainty note which found its way by the hands of the private car porter to Winton, laboring manfully at his task of repairing the landslide damages; this in the middle of the afternoon, after the sheriff's train had gone back to Carbonate and all opposition seemed to have been withdrawn.

"Mr. Somerville Derrah's compliments to Mr. John Winton and Mr. Morton P. Adams and he will be pleased if they will dine with the party in the car Rosemary at seven o'clock."

Informal.
Wednesday December the Ninth.

CHAPTER VIII.
Adams said "By Jove!" in his most cynical drawl when Winton gave him the dinner-bidding to read; then he laughed.

Winton recovered the dainty note, folding it carefully and putting it in his pocket. He had a handwriting was the same as that of the telegram abstracted from Operator Carter's sending book.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," he objected, in the tone of one who does not mean to see.

"No? You must be in fathoms deep not to be able to multiply such a very evident twice two. First the Rajah sends the sheriff's posse packing without striking a blow, and now he invites us to dinner. What's the inference?"

"Oh, I don't know as there has to be an inference. Let us say he has seen the error of his way and means to come down gracefully."

"Don't you believe it! Beware of the Greeks bringing gifts. You are going to be hit right where you live this time."

Winton growled his disapproval of any such uncharitable hypothesis.

"You make me exceedingly tired at odd moments, Morry. Why can't you give Mr. Derrah the credit of being he really is at bottom a right Virginia gentleman of the old three o'clock this afternoon, and I am sure he hasn't been quite right in his head since."

"Why, how dreadful!" said Bessie, sympathetically. "And I suppose there isn't a doctor to be had anywhere in these terrible mountains."

But upon this point Adams reassured her promptly.

"Oh, yes; there is; Winton has already had his preliminary consultation and is, as you may say, in the way of being prescribed for. And I'll see to it that he takes his medicine before he turns in to-night. You may trust me for that."

Thus Mr. Morton P. Adams, in irony far too subtle for the flaxen-haired Bessie. But Winton's replies were not specially irrelevant when Virginia evoked them. On the contrary, he was finding her sallies keenly provocative of what wit and readiness there was in him.

"I believe your chief delight in life is to catch a man napping," she laughed; when she had succeeded in demonstrating, for the third time in as many minutes, how inadequate a man's wit is to cope with a woman's.

"I do enjoy it," she confessed, with the brown eyes confirming the admission. "What woman does not? Isn't your rian's attitude towards us one of thinly veiled contempt at the very best? For instance: you said just now that while no woman could do without a man, the reverse was true of the man."

"I didn't know I said anything like that. If I did, it was heresy."

"No; it was one of those little lapses into sincerity which a man permits himself on rare occasions, when he isn't flattering. You really believe it, you know you do."

"Do I? It wouldn't be polite to contradict you. But what I said, or tried to say, was that a man could exist, as Adams and I are existing at present, without feminine oversight."

"But what you meant was the other," she insisted—"that we are necessary to you, while you are necessary to us." Then, reverting to the matter of mere existence: "Could you keep it up indefinitely, Mr. Winton?"

"Isn't our being here this evening proof positive to the contrary?"

The dinner was a gastronomical marvel, considering its remoteness from the nearest base of supplies; the Rajah laid aside his mask of fierceness and beamed hospitality; Mrs. Carteret was innocently gracious; Bessie of the flaxen hair and the Reverend William Calvert came in harmoniously on the cheerful refrain; and Virginia—but it was Virginia who filled all horizons for Winton.

Knowing no more than any serious-minded man the latest social niceties of a dinner party, and caring still less for them, he monopolized her shamelessly from the moment of greeting. In the interval of plate laying he maneuvered skillfully to obtain possession of the tete-a-tete chair, and with that convenient piece of furniture for an aid he managed to keep Virginia wholly to himself until dinner was announced.

For another man the informal table gathering might have been easily prohibitive of confidence a deus, even with a Virginia Carteret to help, but Winton was far above the trammellings of time and place. All attempts on the part of his host, Mrs. Martha Adams, or the Reverend Billy to entangle him in the general table talk failed signally. He had eyes and ears only for the sweet-faced, low-voiced young woman beside him, and some of his replies to the others were irrelevant enough to send a smile around the board.

"How very absent-minded Mr. Winton seems to be this evening," murmured Bessie from her niche between Adams and the Reverend Billy at the farther end of the table. "He isn't quite at his best, is he, Mr. Adams?"

"No, indeed," said the technologist, matening her undertone, "very far from it. He has been a jif off all day; touch of mountain fever, I'm afraid."

"But he doesn't look at all ill," objected Miss Bessie. "I should say he is a perfect picture of rude health."

"You can't tell anything about him by his looks," rejoined Adams, glibly. "Absolute mask—that face of his. But between us, don't you know, I think he must be going to have a fever. Struck him all at once about

"MAY I HOPE YOU WILL FAVOR US OFTEN?"

"She smiled approval. "You are doing better—much better. With a little practice—you are sadly out of practice, aren't you?—I do believe you could pay one a pretty compliment."

Winton rose manfully to his opportunity.

"No one could pay you compliments, Miss Virginia. It would be utterly impossible."

"Why?—because my chief delight in life is to catch a man napping?"

"Oh, no. Because the—prettiest things that could be said of you would be only an awkward mirroring of the truth."

"Dear me—how fine!" she applauded. "I am afraid you have been reading 'Lord Chesterfield's Letters to His Son'—very recently. Confess, now; haven't you?"

Winton laughed.

"You do Lord Chesterfield a very great injustice; I cribbed that from 'The Indiscretions of a Marchioness,'" he retorted.

Here was another new experience for Miss Virginia Carteret; to have the trodden worm turn; to be paid back in her own coin. She liked him rather better for it; and, liking him, proceeded to punish him, woman-wise. The coffee was served, and Mrs. Carteret was rising. Whereupon Miss Virginia handed her cup to the technologist, and so had him for her companion in the tete-a-tete chair, leaving Winton to shift for himself.

The shifting process carried him over to the Rajah and the Reverend Billy, to a small table in a corner of the compartment, and the enjoyment of a mild cigar and such desultory racking of the ball of conversation as three men, each more or less intent upon his own concerns, may keep up.

Later, when Calvert had been eliminated by Miss Bessie, Winton looked to see the true inwardness of the dinner-bidding made manifest by his host.

"Mr. Somerville Derrah has an ax to grind in the right-of-way matter he did not doubt; this notwithstanding his word to Adams offensive of the Rajah's probable motive."

PERUNA PRAISED.

MRS. ESTHER M. MILNER.

Box 321, DeGraff, Ohio.
Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—

I was a terrible sufferer from pelvic weakness and had headache continuously. I was unable to do my housework for myself and husband.

I wrote you and described my condition as nearly as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles of it and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine and have recommended it to my friends with the very best of results.

Esther M. Milner.
Very few of the great multitude of women who have been relieved of some pelvic disease or weakness by Peruna ever consent to give a testimonial to be read by the public.

There are, however, a few courageous, self-sacrificing women who will for the sake of their suffering sisters allow their cures to be published.

Mrs. Milner is one of these. In her gratitude for her restoration to health she is willing that the women of the whole world should know it. A chronic invalid brought back to health is no small matter. Words are inadequate to express complete gratitude.

Tortoise Surprised the Cook.

The tortoise is a great sleeper. One was a domestic pet in an English house, and when his time for liberating came he selected a corner of the dim coal cellar for his winter quarters. A new cook was engaged soon after who knew nothing of tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department, the lady of the house found the cook gazing in a wondrous wonder, and exclaiming with unsteady hand she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a winter!"

DOCTOR DESPAIRED

Anæmic Woman Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Recommends the Pills to All Others Who Suffer.

Anæmia is just the doctor's name for bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure anæmia as food cures hunger. They cured Mrs. Thomas J. McGann, of 17 Lincoln Place, Plainfield, N. J., who says:

"In the spring of 1903 I did my usual house cleaning and soon afterward I began to have the most terrible headaches. My heart would beat so irregularly that it was painful and there came a morning when I could not get up. My doctor said I had anæmia and he was surprised that I had continued to live in the condition I was in. I was confined to my bed for nearly two months, the doctor coming every day for the first few weeks, but I did not improve to amount to anything. Altogether I was sick for nearly two years. I was as weak as a rag, had headaches, irregular heart beats, loss of appetite, cramps in the limbs and was unable to get a good night's sleep. My legs and feet were so swollen that I feared they would burst.

Before very long after I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I felt a change for the better. I have taken about twelve boxes and although I was as near the grave as could be, I now feel as if I had a new lease of life. I have no more headaches, the heart beats regularly, my cheeks are pink and I feel ten years younger. I feel that I have been cured very cheaply and I have recommended the pills to lots of my friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

WOMEN AND MEALS

HER HARD TASK IT IS TO FEED THE HUMAN RACE.

Small Wonder That Sometimes the Presiding Genius of the Kitchen Tires of Her Seemingly Never Ending Labors.

When men suppose that dinner goes on whether they are at home or not they labor under a curious misconception. Arthur Pendens, writing about this melancholy fact, declares: "Some one once said that an ordinary woman's favorite dinner is an egg in a drawing room. All women have a passion for something on a tray. To the masculine mind things on a tray are unsatisfying; but to the feminine body they embody the very manna from heaven." It is easy to understand that Arthur Pendens or any other "masculine mind" might have trouble in comprehending the why and wherefore of this debilitated taste; but no woman would be at a loss to explain it. It comes from the fatigue which woman suffers as the result of her colossal task of feeding men. To nourish the human race is the appointed work of woman. At the very inception of life this is her labor, and never can existence be so fine, so free, so heroic or so beautiful that she must not pause three times a day—or more—to bend her mind to the menu that shall please her lord. She has been accused of writing no epics; it is said that she is incapable of composing an oratorio, of designing a cathedral or conceiving an heroic statue or painting a picture of the first quality. The retort is that she might have done something of the kind if the men had not been hungry so frequently and so insistently. To be the nourisher of the human race is an undertaking so prodigious that it is a marvel that the mere exasperation of being chained to the larder has not made fiends or lunatics out of women—and from squaw to contess their sufferings in this regard have points of similarity. Is it any wonder then that with the ever-hungry man out of the way the woman seeks escape from the tyranny of food and "eats strawberries by moonlight on a flowery bank?"—The Reader.

Household Hints.

To use bacon fat clarify the fat by pouring boiling water on it. This will be found to be far better than lard or butter for pastry making.

Certain lamps, irrespective of the amount of care bestowed upon them in the way of cleaning, always seem to burn dimly. This may be remedied by dropping small pieces of camphor into the bowl with the oil.

When velvet becomes crushed from pressure hold the parts over a basin of hot water, with the lining of the garment next the water; then shake well, and the pile of velvet will have risen.

Cake tins, patty pans, etc., are easily cleaned by boiling. Put them in a saucepan with some soap extract and water, boil them for about an hour, and they will be found clean and new-looking. Soap and soda borax may be used instead of soap extract, if preferred.

When washing a new blanket for the first time, begin by soaking it for 12 hours in cold water, then rinse in clear water. This will remove the sulphur used in the bleaching. After this wash the blanket in lukewarm lather made of boiled soap and water. Rinse well in clear water, shake thoroughly and hang out to dry.

Lillian Russell Sandwich.

Miss Lillian Russell is the inventor of one of those between-meal delicacies, which, if the laudatory remarks of her friends are to be depended upon, is both unique and tasty. To make this delicacy—for "delicacy" is the term that is applied to it by all who have eaten it—one must take an equal amount of cold boiled chicken and cold boiled tongue, the meat of a dozen olives and six hard-boiled eggs. Mix all these ingredients together and chop them as fine as possible. When they have attained almost the consistency of a powder they must be worked into a paste by the addition of a mayonnaise dressing, after which the mixture is ready to be spread upon thinly sliced buttered bread.

For a Tough Steak.

To make a tough steak tender spread the steak with olive oil instead of beating it to bruise the fibers, which lets the juice run out into the fire. Let it remain an hour or so before cooking. Broil quickly so that each side will be thoroughly seared, then prop up your broiler so as to be a little farther from the fire, for the slower heating through. That cooks the inside juices without losing them. Melt a small piece of butter in two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and pour it over the steak while hot. This makes an appetizing gravy. Lemon juice can be used instead of vinegar, if preferred.

Rugs from Old Carpeting.

After a house cleaning the housewife is often confronted with a heap of old carpeting. Some may be fairly good, some much worn, some ingrained, and some Brussels, and she is at her wits' ends to know what to do with it. It is a surprise to many to know that this mass of unsightly material can be made into really beautiful rugs. The wavers understand mixing them in such a way that the most unlikely combinations come out very well.

WORST FORM OF ECZEMA.

Black Spots All Over Face—Affected Parts Now Clear as Ever—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black spots—all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of annoyance and suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of my town. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in its worst form. They treated me for the same for the length of one year, but the treatment did me no good. Finally my husband purchased a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and after using the contents of the first bottle of Cuticura Resolvent in connection with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, the breaking out entirely stopped. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every spot was entirely gone and the affected parts were left as clear as ever. The Cuticura Remedies not only cured me of that dreadful disease, eczema, but other complicated troubles as well. Lizzie E. Stedje, 549 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala., Oct. 28, 1905."

JEALOUS OF BOBBIE'S WIFE.

New York Woman's Excuse for Fits of Extravagance.

Women dearly love an excuse for little extravagances, says the New York Globe. Of course, the masculine readers of this column are not expected to endorse this, for, according to the masculine thought, women need no "excuse" for their extravagances—they just have them without rhyme or reason.

An up-town woman has a charming excuse for any extra indulgence in her two-year-old blue-eyed son Bobbie and Bobbie's future wife. In trust for Bobbie is a handsome estate which gives her great concern because she feels that she must save and economize for Bobbie, for Bobbie's college education, his European trip, and, "oh, dear!" she always adds, "Bobbie's wife." Wearying of a continued spell of economy, in a moment of reckless extravagance she'll buy a lot of dear, delightful things, have her fingers manicured, her hair shampooed and take fascinating trips here and there. And then when her conscience will prick she'll say, "Why not? Bobbie's wife will, and he won't care how much it costs." And Bobbie's wife won't, either. She'll spend joyously and gloriously.

GAME THAT BOBBIE KNEW.

Youngster's Revelations Were Interesting to Caller.

A young fellow had called upon a girl with whose charms he was somewhat smitten, and was waiting in the parlor when her small brother came in, weeping bitterly. From either a sense of politic precaution or natural kindness of heart, the young man had been kind to the little fellow on several occasions, and now took him on his lap and asked the cause of the trouble.

"Sis-sister is mean to me," the little fellow sobbed.
"Oh, I guess she didn't intend to be; maybe you worried her when she was busy," the youth said consolingly.
"What was she doing?"
"She was playin' an' wouldn't let me play, too," Bobby said.
"Playing what? The piano? I guess she thought you didn't know how."
"Oh, yes, I know how better'n she does," Bobby asserted. "She was playin' Indian, an' wasn't putting half 'nough paint on her face."

THE WAY OUT.

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School, but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines. "This wretched condition continued until I was twenty-five, when I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being cured by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a box and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts, I am the mistress of a happy home and the old weakness has never returned." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason." School for Policemen. There is a policemen's college in St. Petersburg to train applicants for the force. It consists of a museum combined with the school, where the pupils make themselves familiar with the tools of criminals—jimmies, drills, chisels and contrivances for robbing collection boxes, a special field of Russian thieves. The Russian passport system is studied in detail. The duties of the dvorniks, a sort of assistant police are taught. They keep watch on the residences, report on the habits of tenants, their visitors, examine the papers of new-comers, and direct them to report themselves at the police station.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Burning Off Paint Makes Insurance Void.

It seems that considerable danger to property exists in the practice of burning off old paint before re-painting. The question has long been a subject of debate in the technical journals, and now householders and the newspapers have begun to discuss it. Those of us who, with trembling, have watched the painters blow a fiery blast from their lamps against our houses, and have looked sadly at the size of our painting bill because of the time wasted on this preliminary work, are interested in the investigation by the Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette and Courier, which gives considerable space to the reasons for the practice, questions its necessity and suggests ways to prevent the risk of burning down one's house in order to get the old paint off. It says:

"There is a good deal of discussion among householders as to the desirability, in painting houses, of burning off the old paint, a practice that has grown very common of late in Greenfield and elsewhere. Insurance men are strongly opposed to this method. It makes void insurance policies for fires caused in this manner. Several houses in Greenfield have gotten afire as the result of this method, and in some places houses have burned as a result.

"It is undoubtedly true that when a house has been painted over and over again there comes to be an accumulation of paint in bunches. If new paint is put on top of these accumulations, it is almost sure to blister. To burn it off is the quickest and cheapest and perhaps the surest method of getting rid of this old paint."

The Gazette and Courier quotes certain old patrons to the effect that accumulations of paint are unnecessary. These old-timers lay the blame partly on the painter who fails to brush his paint in well, partly on the custom of painting in damp weather or not allowing sufficient time for drying between coats, and partly to the use of adulterated paints instead of old-fashioned linseed oil and pure white lead. The paper says:

"Many of the old householders say that if care is taken at all these points it is absolutely unnecessary to have paint burned off. They advise that people who have houses painted should buy their own materials, and to have them put on by the day, so as to be sure to get good lead and oil. Of course the burning off of paint greatly increases the cost of the job."

The trouble householders everywhere have with paint is pretty well summed up by our contemporary, and the causes are about the same everywhere. By far the most frequent cause of the necessity for the dangerous practice of burning off old paint is the use of poor material. The oil should be pure linseed and the white lead should be real white lead. The latter is more often tampered with than the oil. Earthy substances, and pulverized rock and quartz, are frequently used as cheapeners, to the great detriment of the paint.

Painters rarely adulterate white lead themselves and they very seldom use ready prepared paints—the most frequent causes of paint trouble. But they do often buy adulterated white lead because the property owner insists on a low price and the painter has to economize somewhere. The suggestion is therefore a good one that the property owner investigate the subject a little, find out the name of some reliable brand of white lead, and see that the keg is marked with that brand.

The linseed oil is more difficult to be sure of, as it is usually sold in bulk when the quantity is small, but reliable makers of linseed oil can be learned on inquiry, and, if your dealer is reliable, you will get what you want. Pure white lead and linseed oil are so necessary to good paint that the little trouble necessary to get them well represents the house owner in dollars and cents saved.

Tired, Nervous Mothers

Make Unhappy Homes—Their Condition Irritates Both Husband and Children—How Thousands of Mothers Have Been Saved From Nervous Prostration and Made Strong and Well.

Mrs. Chester Curry

Mrs. Chas. F. Brown

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly.

The ills of women act like a firebrand upon the nerves, consequently nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the female organism.

Do you experience fits of depression with "restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one minute you laugh, and the next minute you feel like crying?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the abdominal region, and between the shoulders; bearing-down pains; nervous dyspepsia and almost continually cross and snappy?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous prostration than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women can testify to this fact.

The New State of Oklahoma

Bigger than Missouri; as big as Ohio and Indiana combined, with a soil teeming with all the crops that any State raises, OKLAHOMA—the new State—is destined to occupy first rank in a few short years. Here at the present time over a million people are duplicating the life which is going on in Illinois and Indiana. Their houses, their towns and their schools are never but in nothing else do their surroundings differ from those in our States. Their cities and towns are growing and expanding with the impetus of a fertile soil, and a pushing, wide-awake citizenship. Her settlers, mainly from the older States, see the virtues of our country; enterprising of every kind and the needfulness of getting more and better facilities; of getting more hands to develop the country.

In brief, conditions to-day are simply these: OKLAHOMA is in need of nothing save people. More men are needed in the cities and towns; more farmers for the vast areas of unimproved land not now yielding crops of which it is capable. There are openings of all sorts, for farmers and artisans, for mills and manufacturing plants, for small stores of all kinds.

Your Opportunity Now

A Poem for Today

THE TWINS

By Henry S. Leigh

In form and feature, face and limb
I grew so like my brother
That folks got taking me for him
And each for one another.
It puzzled all our kith and kin;
It reached an awful pitch
For one of us was born a twin,
And not a soul knew which.

Our close resemblance turned the tide
Of our domestic life,
For somehow my intended bride
Became my brother's wife.
In short, year after year the same
Always mistaken went on,
And when I died the neighbors came
And buried brother John!

This fatal likeness even dogged
My footsteps when at school,
And I was always getting flogged—
For John turned out a fool.
I put this question hopelessly
To every one I knew:
"What would you do if you were me
To prove that you were you?"

"I had been a sufferer for a number of years with Lumbago and Rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could get from medical works, and also consulted with a number of the best physicians, but found nothing that gave the relief obtained from "DROPS." I shall prescribe it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred diseases."
