The Finished Product.

If there is one proposition on which the state papers of Michigan are united, it is in their opposition to the big mail order houses of the big cities. Probably 200 separate and distinct attacks are made in the country papers each week on these institutions, which, more than any other one thing, dip deep into the prosperity of Michigan towns without giving anything in the way of return for the good of the community. As a general proposition it is bad enough, but a specific case which is almost unbelievable has come to notice. In a little town in Northern Michigan the village storekeeper is also the postmaster. He does a large credit business. One of his debtors is a fairly thrifty farmer, whose education was neglected, so that he is unable to write. He needed a set of harness. The merchant had harness for sale, but the farmer had contracted the mail order habit and whenever he had the money and needed anything he sent the cash to the mail order house. The farmer had the nerve to ask the merchant-postmaster to write the order out and fill out a money order for the set of harness. Then the merchant-postmaster damned the farmer for a long unpaid bill. The farmer became angry and now he drives 10 miles in another direction to do his credit trading.—Detroit Journal.

Mr. Kimmeler's more or less boastful reference to the fact that the last democrat administration in this state expended more than a million dollars more than it collected or in any way through its own efforts, provided for may be interesting as an instance of one of the many peculiar characteristics of that peculiar administration, but it will create not the least desire in Michigan to have the experiment repeated. From the point of view of the democrat candidate for Governor there may be something objectionable in a surplus, but the taxpayers of Michigan who recall the money-borrowing and interest-paying requirements created by the administration to which Mr. Kimmeler refers will very promptly decide in favor of the surplus.

October Burr McIntosh.

The cover of this superb magazine will first attract attention. It is the reproduction of a photograph of Marie Doro, the embellishments being printed in a number of colors and gold and it is unquestionably the best magazine cover of the month. The inside color work, both in portraiture and scenes, is unusually attractive, while the portrait form has reproductions of such prominent people as Campanari, Plancon, Margaret Dale, Blanche Walsh, Edna McClure, of the stage and such prominent people as Luther Burbank, the plant-wizard of California, J. M. Barrie, the late Mrs. Craigie, the novelist, and Princess Cantacuzine, daughter of Gen. Grant. An exceedingly interesting article on Michaelangelo with reproductions of several of his famous paintings, drawings and sculptures will please those who are interested in the old masters.

Clara Morris contributes one of her imitable stage reminiscences entitled "A Dressing Room Reception" with fine portraits of herself, Wilson Barrett and Madam Mojeska.

The panoramic pages are unusually attractive and in harmony with the season.

A Poem for Today

MAGDALEN

By Annie Campbell Huestis

HERE are you going, weary feet,
Feet that have failed in storm and flood?
"I go to find a flower sweet
— I left, fresh growing, near a wood.
The winds blow pure from many a hill
And hush to tender stillness there.
Shall not this restless heart be still
And grow more innocent and fair?"
"Not so, for sin and bitter pain
Can never find youth's flower again!"

"Where are you going, wistful face,
Face with the mark of shame and tears?"
"I go to find a quiet place
Where no one sees and no one hears.
The beauty and the silence there

Shall thrill me through and still my pain,
Shall touch my hardness into prayer
And give me back my dreams again."
"Not so, for sin has closed the door
On youth's fair dreams forevermore."

"Where are you going, heart of woe, Pitiful heart of fear and shame?"
"A strange and lonely way I go,
Where none shall pity, none shall blame.
Far with my sin and misery
I creep on doubtful feet alone;
No human heart can follow me.
To mark my tears or hear my moan."
"Nay; but the never ceasing sting
The clearness of remembering!"

"What do you see, O changing face,
Alight with strange and tender gleams?"
"I near the hushed and holy place
Of One who gives me back my dreams."
"Where are you daring, eager feet, Feet that so wild a way have trod?"
"O bitter world, no scorn I meet;
Sinful and hurt, I go to God!
On my dark sin forevermore
A sinless hand has closed the door."

Centennial of Discovery of Pike's Peak Is Celebrated

Memory of Gallant Soldier-Explorer Who First Climbed Great Mountain Is Honored

—Story of His Hardships.

Summit of the Peak and Cog Railroad.

Denver.—During the last week in September there was celebrated at Colorado Springs, Col., the discovery of Pike's Peak by Capt. Zebulon Montgomery Pike, the gallant young American soldier, the intrepid explorer. Ten years ago, on the occasion of the nineteenth anniversary of the discovery of the great mountain, the Pike Monument association held a banquet and decided that the centennial anniversary should be celebrated by fitting ceremonies and the unveiling of a monument to the soldier-explorer who blazed the first trail from the Mississippi to the Rockies. As the time approached the interest in the event spread so rapidly that, instead of the celebration being the local affair first planned, it took on national scope. The government officially participated and sent 10,000 regular troops. Congress authorized the coining of 100,000 souvenir medals.

river near the present site of Canon City. His greatest hardships began, however, in making the passage of the Sangre de Cristo mountains. It was then midwinter, the snow was three feet deep, and he and his men were compelled to go as long as four days at a time without food. Nine of his men had their feet frozen, and two of them had to be abandoned temporarily.

The grandeur of the sight of the "great white peak" was sufficient to evoke three cheers from even a party of half-starved and frozen men, and Pike determined to press on. The nearest party came to the peak, however, was on November 27, 1806, when Pike and two of his followers climbed to the top of a mountain 15 miles away. Pike wrote in his diary that the great white mountain seemed to be as high again as the mountain he had climbed, and that it would be into Santa Fe by the Spanish soldiers. Pike was imprisoned first at Santa Fe and afterward conveyed to Chihuahua, where he was brought before the Spanish governor.

At this time his papers and records were seized; but he had been cautious enough to prepare duplicates, and these were saved by being distributed in the barrels of the guns of the party, and from them Pike afterward furnished the government with an accurate account of his expedition. He arrived at Natchitoches July 1, 1807, having been released by the Spaniards, and received the thanks of the government. He was promoted from rank to rank until, in 1813, he was given the rank of brigadier general in the United States army.

In the same year he was selected to command an expedition against York (now Toronto), Canada. After taking one redoubt at the head of the attacking column and preparing to take another redoubt, Gen. Pike, with many of his soldiers, was killed by the explosion of the powder magazine in the fort. Thus ended the career of one of the most daring explorers and soldiers in American history.

Pike's judgment of the future of his country, however, was not up to the measure of his courage in exploration. He pronounced the country through which he traveled westward from St. Louis so devoid of sustenance for human beings that it would serve as a barrier for all time against the expansion of the country toward the west. Now the ground traversed by Pike is covered by railroad in one night's travel with all the luxuries incident to modern railway conveyance. The wide plains that staggered his imagination by their desolation, are now covered by valuable farms.

In Colorado Springs there already has been erected a monument to the memory of Zebulon Montgomery Pike. The remains of the distinguished soldier-explorer lie at Madison barracks, New York, where they were interred with military honors nearly a century ago. A modest stone shaft marks the resting place of Pike and a number of soldiers of the war of 1812 who were killed with him in Canada. On his body were found two sentences, dedicated to his son: "Preserve your honor free from blemish," and "Be always ready to die for your country."

Beautiful Colorado Springs.

For several reasons Colorado Springs is the most charming residence city in America, particularly because of its climate, scenery by which it is surrounded, and the society. Fortunate is he who is able to take advantage of these attractions. The population is composed of two classes—those who are compelled to live in this climate and those who have come here by choice—and it is a city of homes, unique in several respects. There is nothing like it anywhere else. It resembles Simla, the summer capital of India. For scenery no other city can compare with it except, perhaps, Geneva, in Switzerland; and it has sunny, cheerful cottages instead of gloomy, old-fashioned tenements like the Swiss metropolis. As Geneva is the gateway to the Alps, so is Colorado Springs the gateway to the Rockies.

The number of tourists going to Colorado should be ten times as large as it is, and this increased number might be easily accommodated. Since 1897 the passenger associations have kept a record of round-trip tickets to Colorado points, and it is an eye-opener. The largest number in a single year was only 66,155, and that was in 1902, when there were several big conventions held in California and elsewhere in the far west. The total in 1900 was 27,778. In 1903 it was 57,776, and in 1904, 62,912. During the last two years this number has steadily increased, and the number for 1906 will exceed any previous year.

"Brick" Pomeroy's Tunnel.

Among the things of which visitors to the Pike's Peak centennial heard was the resuscitation of the old "Brick" Pomeroy scheme for boring a tunnel through the base of the Rockies for railroad and other purposes. Pomeroy started the scheme 30 years ago, and sold stock all over the lions of bronze and silver, and the nation at large did much to make memorable the anniversary ceremonies. In some unaccountable manner the life of the discoverer of Pike's Peak has escaped the attention of the careful biographer. In the archives of the war department in Washington, however, there is carefully preserved a diary kept by Pike during his western explorations, and there are no government records, which form a more thrilling chapter than these kept by one of its bravest and most devoted soldiers.

When the Louisiana purchase was made the United States realized that to a certain extent it had bought a big in a poke, and a man was sought who could be trusted to explore and report on parts of the Louisiana territory. Lieut. Pike, son of a distinguished soldier who had been a captain in the revolutionary war, was chosen for the work. He left St. Louis in August, 1805, and spent nine months tracing the Mississippi to its source, enduring the most severe hardships and showing the most sterling bravery. Then he turned his course westward in geographical surveys for the government. The Rocky mountains, then known as the Mexican mountains, were his objective point.

Meet Many Hardships.

He left St. Louis on this second expedition July 15, 1806, with a small party composed of a squad of private soldiers, a physician, guides, Indians and with what was believed to be a complete equipment. Pike was a lieutenant when he started, but was promoted to a captaincy the next month without his knowledge. The course of the exploring party carried it through what is now Missouri and Kansas. The Arkansas river was followed to its headwaters near the present site of Leadville, and it was on November 15, 1806, that the Pike party sighted the "Mexican Mountains" from its camp in western Kansas.

The trail of the explorers had been strewn with hardships from the first, but the sufferings of the party were called upon to endure the winter of 1806-07 were among the most severe in the history of American exploration. Pike was compelled to force his way through the granite gorges, 2,500 feet deep, of the Grand canyon or Royal gorge of the Arkansas impossible for a human being to reach the summit.

The snow on the mountain Pike had climbed was "middle deep," and the thermometer registered six degrees below zero at the minimum. The supplies of the party were at low ebb, with no game in sight. The clothing of the men was worn to shreds, most of them being without stockings and wearing moccasins that admitted snow and stones freely. Under such conditions it is but little wonder that the brave young soldier thought that the peak was beyond his prowess. At the present day this mountain, which Pike said no human being could climb is visited annually by not less than 100,000 tourists, who are conveyed to the top by railroad.

Captured by Spaniards.

After noting the peak, Pike returned to the Arkansas river at a point where Pueblo now stands, continuing his journey into the mountains, and thence to New Mexico. Here he invaded the territory of the Spaniards and was captured by them in his blockhouse on the Rio Grande del Norte near the present city of Alamosa. Two of his men had to be abandoned and left to their fate in the hills. They were given a small supply of provisions, with the assurance that they would be rescued if the rest of the party found safety. Pike saw that the promise was kept and the abandoned ones were brought

United States on the installment plan in a colossal company. When his faith and money ran out he went back to New York, abandoning the 2,500 feet of tunnel which he actually bored. Lately the scheme has been put on foot again by eastern capitalists. The plan is to drive a bore under Gray's Peak, thus shortening the overland route from 200 to 300 miles. It is expected that the promoters will strike enough gold in the course of their 25,000-foot borings to repay them the $2,000,000, which it is estimated will be required to complete the work.

MISS LILLIAN RUSSELL IN "BARBARA'S MILLIONS."

WHEN MELBA POSTED BILLS.

She Was 17 Then—It Was in Australia and She Wanted to Give a Concert.

Who would ever imagine that Mme. Melba once went forth armed with a ball of paste in one hand, a paste brush in the other and a roll of bills under her arm?

Such a thing, however, actually happened in the early days of her career, when she was hungering for opportunities to sing in public. White Nellie Mitchell, as she then was, was still a schoolgirl, holiday making at Sorrento, in Victoria, she got up a concert in aid of one of the local charities.

She asked her family to help her eke out her own meager savings, which she intended to devote to the purpose; but her father, in spite of the fact that he was very fond of music—and still has a fine voice which he loves to use—did not care to encourage his daughter in the enterprise. In the hope of stifling her leaning toward a professional career he refused any aid whatever.

This check, however, did not daunt the plucky little songbird in any way. She determined, having pledged herself so far, to carry the matter through, cost what it might, without any assistance. Unfortunately all her own savings had by this time been swallowed up in the preliminary expenses, and there was not a penny left to pay for posting the bills on which she relied to advertise the entertainment.

Having tried various ways of circumventing the difficulty without success, she determined to be her own bill poster. She went straight to the hotel kitchen and persuaded one of the maids to make her a quantity of paste. Then she borrowed a bill poster's brush, and as soon as it was dark set off on her adventurous round, and posted up every one of the bills she had had printed. The result of her enterprise was a big house and a big success.

Cohan's Human Pistol.

"My property man," says George M. Cohan, "is the most conscientious stickler for detail I know of. In a play of mine one of his many duties is to fire a pistol in the wings at a certain time. The revolver was misplaced on one occasion, but 'props' did not discover its loss until it was almost time for him to 'make a noise.' Then you should have seen him. He was simply frantic and, failing to find the revolver as his cue was spoken from the stage, he rushed into the second entrance and in a voice that might have been heard from the Battery to Harlem, shouted 'Bang!'"

"Well, it was the biggest scream with the audience I ever saw, and that property man's attention to detail has won him a job for life."

W. S. Cleveland, known in Chicago, has severed his connection with the new Olympic theater, Clackson, of which he was manager.

HER CROWNING GLORY.

Embarrassment of Actress Made Hit with Audience.

"During my stage career I have been assigned to parts that required either wearing a short-haired wig or cutting my own hair. I chose the latter alternative, and now, while my hair is thick, it scarcely falls below my shoulders," explained Minnie Dupree, who is taking a flier in vaudeville.

"Well, I thought in my present sketch it would look well for the heroine to have some nice long braids, and being unable to grow a pair at short notice, I purchased them and blended and attached them to my own tresses. During my New York engagement I fancied that the braids were really an attractive feature of my make-up.

"On day last week the sketch was going very well up to the moment that the heavy coat comes off. The audience seemed to be right with me in all I said and did, when suddenly there was a shriek of laughter.

"I was astonished. I don't know why, but I felt behind my back. There were no braids. I looked upon the floor, and there were the tresses which had probably been switched off by the coat.

"I was too embarrassed to know just what to do. The laughter was subsiding, and then my leading man came to the rescue. He delivered the lines that were delayed by the audience's laughter.

"Never mind, dear," he cried. "Forget it all. Forget the whole terrible catastrophe."

"If the audience laughed boisterously the first time, I don't know how you would express their merriment at this unhappy speech.

"Hereafter I wear only the hair of Minnie Dupree."

PEOPLE AND PLAYS.

Miss Amelia Bingham is the latest actress to be mentioned as a future star under the Shubert management.

Miss Josie Sadler will play a character comedy role in "The Jungle" when George H. Brennan produces the play early in November.

Mr. Mansfield will restore the Russian play, "Rodion the Student," which he has not presented for a decade, to his repertory this season.

Miss Kate Barry, an English comedienne, has arrived in New York. She will be "featured" in "The Other Locket" with John Slavin this season.

Joseph Coyne has emerged as a star in a piece called "My Lady's Maid."

In "The Rich Mr. Hoggshelmer," Samuel Bernard has opened his season in Atlantic City. Miss Georgia Caine plays the principal feminine role.

Mme. Rejane is said to be negotiating with James Forbes for the French acting rights of his comedy "The Chorus Lady." Miss Rose Stahl is playing it in this country.

Hundreds Are Dead, Island Washed Completely Away—War Vessels and Other Ships Wrecked.

Slowly awakening from the stupor which follows in the wake of one of nature's mighty convulsions, the people of the hurricane-swept sections of the Gulf states are now beginning to realize the magnitude of the disaster which has befallen them.

Mobile is cut off from the outside world and chaos reigns in the city. The loss is $5,000,000. Hattiesburg is practically wiped out with damage of $1,000,000. #### It Was Brutal.

Brutally hazed by upper classmen on the night of his first college day, William Forrester, of Milwaukee, a freshman of the University of Pennsylvania, is lying in the university hospital in a critical condition.

The attack on Forrester occurred in the dormitories while he was attempting to tear down from the wall a proclamation put up by the upper classmen instructing the first year students how to conduct themselves in the university precincts. Before he had finished the work Forrester was set upon by a number of sophomores, and soon got the worst of it, although several other freshmen came to his assistance.

In the attack he was hurled down a flight of stairs, sustaining a fracture of the skull, while a fist blow in his right eye may cost him his sight.

Before he went over the rail, however, Forrester gave a good account of himself and half a dozen of his assailants were also obliged to go to the hospital for treatment. Forrester at once hurried to the hospital and his brother, Dr. Forrester, of the faculty of the medical school, was summoned.

Habit.

"Habit is a tenacious thing, isn't it?" interrogated the man in the hotel lobby the other evening. "Now one of my habits (you see I am a very poor writer, the proverbial chicken marks not beginning to describe my hieroglyphics) is to write at the close of my letters, 'Please excuse poor writing.' Kind of a foolish expression, isn't it? Well, anyway, it just caused me some annoyance. A minute ago I dictated a letter to the stenographer over there," and as he spoke he pointed to the immaculate young woman, who was evidently still trying to hide her amusement about something, "and after I had paid her it suddenly occurred to me that the letter hadn't been finished, and I turned and told her to put at the close, 'Please excuse bad writing.' Habit is a very strange thing, now, isn't it?"—Columbus Dispatch.

The Only Opening.

The story is told of two Trenton men who hired a horse and trap for a little outing. Upon reaching their destination the horse was unharnessed and permitted peacefully to graze while the men fished for an hour or two.

When they were ready to go home a difficulty at once presented itself, inasmuch as neither of the Trentonians knew how to reharness the horse. Every effort in this direction met with dire failure, and the worst problem was properly to adjust the bit. The horse himself seemed to resent the idea of going into harness again.

Finally one of the friends, in great distress, sat down in the road. "There's only one thing we can do," Bill, said he.

"What's that?" asked Bill.
 "Wait for the foolish beast to yawn!"—Harper's Weekly.

FOR BOTH

One disease of thinness, in children is scrofula; in adults, consumption. Both have poor blood; both need more fat. These diseases thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them; cod liver oil makes the best and healthiest fat and is the easiest and most effective form of cod liver oil. Here's a natural order of things that shows why Scott's Emulsion is of so much value in all cases of scrofula and consumption. More fat, more weight, more nourishment, that's why.

A LION STORY.

Tragic Experience With One of the African Man Eaters.

"Many years ago," says a writer, "before the arrival of the railway and the sportsman in east Africa, the natives were decimated by lions. It was impossible in some districts to procure mail carriers. Appalling stories are still related of the fearless ferocity of these beasts. The railway was building at Kin. Several coolies had been carried off by an old lion, and one night Ryall, an English engineer who had seen much service in India, decided to sit up in a railway carriage on the chance of getting a shot. With him were Mr. Huebner, the German consul, and an Italian, Parenti. The night was dark, with but little moon, and after midnight Ryall commented upon the brightness of the fireflies near the carriage and also remarked that he had seen a rat repeatedly cross and recross a spot where the steel rail glistened in the moonlight.

"But the supposed fireflies were the luminous eyes of the lion they waited for, and the rat was the slow movement of his tail. If Ryall had recognized this, his life would have been saved. Tired of their vigil toward the morning, the three watchers went to sleep, Huebner on the upper berth, the two others below. The carriage was the ordinary sleeping carriage familiar to Indian travelers, with a lavatory beyond the couches. An hour had passed, the party was asleep, when the lion jumped into the carriage and seized Ryall, while in a moment Parenti had slipped into the lavatory and closed the door.

"The movements of the lion, or more probably, his weight thrown on one side, caused the door by which he had entered the car to close. Thus Huebner's experience was most terrible. The rifles were below, and on the upper berth he remained while the lion killed Mr. Ryall within three feet of him. After a few awful minutes the great beast jumped out through the window with Ryall's body in its mouth."—Chicago News.

Troubles of a Club.

"Our guide in Jerusalem, Uriel," says the author of "A Levantine Log Book," "belonged to a club, and with great pride he took us to the clubroom and showed us about. 'We are all very proud of our club,' he explained, 'but it has many difficulties.'

"What are they?"
 "The principal difficulty," said Uriel severely, "is that much of the members refuse to fill the offices at the club, and when they do fill them they refuse to perform their performances."

"I don't understand," said the traveler. "To perform?"
 "To transact their acts," explained Uriel. "To make their duties."

"Ah, yes!" interrupted the traveler. "You mean to do their doings?"

"Exactly," agreed Uriel, with gratitude. "They refuse to do their doings."

In a Bad Way.

This old lady was a hypochondriac. Her various diseases interested her, and she talked of nothing else. One day a visitor found her eating heartily and inquired as to her health. The invalid sighed and answered, "I feel very well, ma'am, but I always feel bad when I feel well, because I know I am going to feel worse afterward."

A Hymn for Today

COME, THOU FOUNT

By Rev. Robert Robinson

COME, thou fount of every blessing,
 Tune my heart to sing thy grace;
 Streams of mercy, never ceasing,
 Call for songs of loudest praise.

Teach me some melodious sonnet
 Sung by flaming tongues above;
 Praise the mount; oh, fix me on it,
 Mount of God's unchanging love!

Jesus sought me when a stranger,
 Wand'ring from the fold of God;
 He, to rescue me from danger,
 Interposed His precious blood.

Oh, to grace how great a debtor
 Daily I'm constrained to be!
 Let that grace now, like a fetter,
 Bind my wand'ring heart to thee!

Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it,
 Prone to leave the Lord I love,
 Here's my heart; oh, take and seal it,
 Seal it for thy courts above!

At the South Arm Township Republican Caucus last Saturday to elect delegates to the nonsnating county convention, quite a friendly scrap developed between Atty. A. B. Nicholson and E. N. Clink to secure a delegation to support them for the office of Prosecuting attorney. Mr. Clink won out by a vote of 255 against 162. As there is an understanding that South Arm shall have the prosecuting attorneyship in the Convention, we suppose this clinched the matter for Mr. Clink. Below are the delegates elected: Elisha N. A friend at our elbow suggests that the best way to head off the mail order houses is for the local merchant to advertise liberally and get the trade themselves. It does look reasonable. All of the successful mail order houses are heavy advertisers and if they can make it pay why not the local merchant.

An effort has been made to give all our citizens a chance to be represented in this edition but should any through oversight be overlooked, we shall be pleased to take the matter up with them. A sweet young thing has written a novel. It is a wonderful performance. Take this passage "All of a sudden the beautiful Alicia continued to sit on the sands, gazing out upon the briny deep, on whose heaving bosom the tall ships went merrily by, freighted ah who can tell with how much joy and sorrow and pining lumber and emigrants and hopes and saltfish."

A shocking tragedy was enacted last Saturday, which has cast a cloud of gloom over a large part of the community. Two young boys, Carrol Eink and Willie Baker, were in the woods hunting near the Chemical Co's plant. Carrol warned Willie to "look out" for he was going to shoot, and Willie, in trying to get out of the way, slipped and stumbled directly into the path of the ball, which pierced his brain, causing death in about two hours. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the Methodist church, of which Sabbath school the dead boy was a member. His schoolmates of the fourth grade attended in a body; also the Junior Epworth League and the Anti-Cigarette League.—Boyne Citizen.

Did you ever notice that "talk" doesn't hurt a man much? Perfection isn't looked for in a man, and when some one tries to injure a man by ranting about a few faults he has, the absent one, who is probably attending to his own affairs, is elevated in the hearer's estimation, while the ingormant is lowered accordingly. If a man knocks along, doing fairly well, people realize that while he has some faults, he has more virtues, and they are charitable enough to overlook these faults. But is different with a girl or woman. No matter how good and pure a woman may be, let some one start an infamous lie about and everyone is willing to pass it along, and there is always some one to believe it. That he can never be lived down. It may burn low but gossip lovers are ready with new fuel. Did you ever think how damnably mean some goody good people are in this respect?

The Wellman Handle factory, Wellman Electric Light plant and the Lumberman Tool company at South Boardman, were completely demolished by fire Monday night, loss about $50,000. Preventics dissipate all colds quickly, and taken early when you first feel that a cold is coming, they check and prevent them. Preventics are thoroughly safe for children and as effectual for adults. Sold and recommended in 5 cent and 25 cent boxes by Warnes' Pharmacy.

Petoskey had a bad fire Monday morning, three bazaar stores on Lake street being wiped out, with a damage estimated at $22,000 to $26,000, and insurance $15,000. The brick walls of the Quallins block prevented the fire running further, and as the owners of the ground will have to use brick or stone in the construction if future buildings on the site, Petoskey will be a gainer in the long run, though the present loss may entail some hardship.

Traverse City Record.—The board of public works entered into a contract with John Monroe Wednesday afternoon to spill the mouth of the river, the spill to extend 250 feet on each side. Mr. Monroe's bid was $2.93 a foot and there are 500 feet in all. The contract calls for completion of the work within forty days and Mr. Monroe will begin just as soon as he can get his material here from Leland where he is just completing a 700 foot dock. The spilling will be done in the best possible manner with twenty-foot splices spaced eight feet apart and three laps of sheet piling. He guarantees this to withstand the action of the ice in the bay. The channel will be narrowed to forty feet and this will cause a swift current which will carry the refuse well out into the bay.

Unhappy Lot of American Composers. The musician in America is doubly handicapped. He can hear relatively but little music, and he can have his own work produced not at all. We always have a German sitting upon the safety valve, lest American steam should sizzle out and the imprisoned genius, when once let loose, prove as difficult to manage as the fabled one of the brass bottle in the "Arabian Nights." I say this without disrespect to the admirably qualified foreigners who direct our orchestras and operas, most of our theaters and the majority of our music.—Etude.

SERIAL STORY

A FOOL FOR LOVE

By FRANCIS LYNDE
Author of "The Crafters," Etc.

(Copyright, 1906, by J. P. Lippincott Co.)

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

But Mr. Darrah chatted on, affably non-committal, and after a time Winton began to upbraid himself for suspecting the ulterior motive. By no word or hint did the vice president refer to the struggle pending between the two companies or to the warlike incident of the morning. And when he finally rose to excuse himself on a letter-writing plea, his leave-taking was that of the genial host reluctant to part company with his guest.

"I've enjoyed your conversation, and enjoyed it right much. Most happy to have had the pleasure of your company, Miss Winton. May I hope you will vouch us often while we are neighbors?"

Winton rose, made the proper acknowledgments, and would have crossed the compartment to make his adieu to Mrs. Carteret. But at that moment Virginia, taking advantage of Adams' handshaking with the Rajah, came between.

"You're not going yet, are you, Mr. Winton? Don't hurry. If you are dying to smoke a pipe, as Mr. Adams says you are, we can go out on the platform. It isn't too cold, is it?"

Not the words themselves, but her manner of saying them, warmed him so suddenly that an Arctic winter's night would not have been prohibitory.

"It is clear and frosty, a beautiful night," he hastened to say. "May I help you with your coat?"

She suffered him, but in the height of the heart-warming glow gave him a cold douche in a word to Bessie.

"Won't you come, too, Bessie, dear?" she asked; and Winton set the whole battery of his will at work to fend off the threatened calamity.

Happily, it averted itself. Miss Bessie was quite comfortable as she was and begged to be excused. Mrs. Carteret in her capacity of chaperon looked askance at Virginia, was met by a glance of the resolute brown eyes which she had come to obey without fully understanding, and contented herself with a monitory: "Don't stay out too long, Virginia. It is dreadful cold."

So presently Winton had his heart's desire, which was to be alone with Virginia; alone, we say, though the privacy of the square railed platform was that of the car only. For the gathering-room of the Rosemary, with its lights and eyes, gave directly upon the rear platform through the two full-length windows and the glass door.

Now in whatsoever aspect the mountain skyland presents itself—and its aspects are numberless—that of a starlit winter night, when the heaven-lights burn clear in a black dome for which the mighty peaks themselves are the visible supports, is not the least impressive. So, for a little time, awe challenging awe in these two had much in common, tongue and lip were silent, and when they spoke it was of the immensities.

"Does your profession often open such wide doors to you, Mr. Winton?"

It gave him an exquisite thrill to know that her mood marched so evenly with his own.

"Outside of the office work, which I have always evaded when I could, the doors are all pretty wide. One year I was on the Mexican boundary survey—you can picture those silent nights in the desert. Another time I was with the Geodetic on the coast; since that winter the booming of the surf has been the constant undertone for me in all music."

"Ah, yes, in music. You must love music if you can associate it with this."

"I do, indeed. I would build it the grandest of the temples, though I should be only a mute lay-worshiper in it myself."

She smiled. "That temple must always have two high priests, one who prophesies and one who interprets. I can't play without a sympathetic listener."

"I wish you might play for me sometime. You would have to be very exacting if you could find fault with my appreciation."

"Would I? But we are riding away on my hobby after we had fairly mounted yours."

He laughed. "Mine is only a heavy cart-horse, not fit for riding," he said. "You shouldn't say that. It is a man's work—yours. And he made sure there was a note of regret in her voice when she added: "No woman can ever share it with you, or help you in it."

"I should be sorry to believe that," he rejoined, quickly. "The best part of any man's work may be shared by the woman who wills—and dares."

She gave him a fitting glance of intelligence.

"How strangely chance whips us about from post to pillar. Two evenings ago I was foolish enough to—well, you know what I did. And now we have changed places and you are telling me what a woman may do—if she dare."

"But he would not admit the premises. "If the one were foolish, so is the other. But I can't allow that to stand. I shall always be the better for what you said to me the other evening."

"I don't know why you should; you didn't need it in the least," she protested. "If I had known then what I know now, I should have said something quite different."

"Say it now, if you wish."

"May I? But I have no right. Besides, it would sound like the basest of recantations."

"Would it? Nevertheless, I should like to hear it."

She nerved herself for the plunge—her uncle's plunge—doubting more than ever.

"Your part in the building of this other railroad is purely a business affair, is it not?"

"My personal interest? Quite so; a mere matter of dollars and cents, you may say."

She went on, entirely missing the irony in his reply.

"You did not know the difficulties before you came here?"

"Only in a general way. I knew there was opposition, and—well, I'm not just a novice in this sort of thing, and if I may be allowed to boast a little, I knew my appointment was owing to Mr. Callowell's belief in my ability to carry it through."

"You are not smoking," she said. "Haven't you your pipe?" She was finding it desperately hard to go on.

"If you don't mind," he returned; but when he had pipe and tobacco in hand she plunged again.

"You say your interest in this other railroad—your personal interest—is only that of an employee. If you should have another offer, from some other company—"

He smiled. "Put yourself in my place, Miss Virginia. What would you do?"

She tried to think it out, and in the process the doubt grew and overwhelmed her.

"I—I don't know," she faltered. "If, as you say, it is only a question of so much money to be earned—"

for what you said to me the other evening."

"I have no doubt Adams sent the wire, but he didn't write it. Of, if he did, he also wrote our invitation to dinner. They are in the same hand, you know."

She laughed again. "I think it is quite time we were going in," she averred, and he opened the door for her.

If Mr. John Winton, C. E., stood in need of a moral tonic, as Adams had so delicately intimated to Miss Bessie Carteret, it was administered in quantity sufficient before he slept on the night of dinner-givings.

For a clear-eyed Technologist, free from all heart-trammellings and able to grasp the un sentimental fact, the enemy's new plan of campaign wrote itself quite legibly. With his pick and choice among the time-killing expedients the Rajah could scarcely have found one more to his purpose than the private car Rosemary, including in its passenger list a Miss Virginia Carteret. There would be more dinners and social diversions; other prostrations like this of neglecting to look after the consignment of steel—which, by the way, was not yet to be seen or even definitely heard from; and in the end, defeat.

All of which Adams, substituting friendly frankness for the disciplinary traditions of the service, set forth in good Bostonian English for the benefit and behoof of his chief, and was answered according to his deserts with scowls and deridings.

"I wasn't born yesterday, Morty, and I'm not so desperately astine as you seem to think," was the besotted one's summing up. "I know the Rajah doesn't split hairs in a business fight, but he is hardly unscrupulous enough to use Miss Carteret as a cat's-paw."

But Adams would not be scoffed aside.

"You're off in your estimate of Mr. Darrah, Jack, 'way off. I know the tradition—that a southern gentleman is all chivalry when it comes to a matter touching his womankind, and I don't consider it as a general proposition. But the Rajah has been a fighting western railroad magnate so long that his agent is about the only southern asset he has retained. If I'm any good at guessing, he will stick at nothing to gain his end."

Winton admitted the impeachment without prejudice to his own point of view.

"Perhaps you are right. But forewarning is forearmed. And Miss Virginia is not going to lend herself to any such nefarious scheme."

"Not consciously, perhaps; but you don't know her yet. If she saw a good chance to take the conceit out of you, she'd improve it—without thinking overmuch of the possible consequences to the Utah company."

"Shaw!" said Winton. "That is another of your literary inferences. I've met her only twice, yet I venture to say I know her better than you do. If she cared anything for me—which she doesn't—"

"Oh, go to sleep!" said Adams, who was not minded to argue further with a man besotted; and so the matter went by default for the time.

It was very deftly done, and even Adams, the clear-eyed, could not help admiring the Rajah's skillful finesse. Of formal dinner-givings there might easily have been an end, since the construction camp had nothing to offer in return. But the formalities were studiously ignored, and the two young men were put upon a footing of intimacy and encouraged to come and go as they pleased.

BRYAN ON ISSUES.

TRYING TO FIND SOMETHING SAFER THAN THE TARIFF.

Would Be Glad to Use War on Wealth and Government Ownership of Railroads as Substitutes for the Always Dangerous Advocacy of Free Trade.

One-twelfth of Mr. Bryan's speech in Madison Square garden on the night of August 30 was devoted to the tariff. The other eleven-twelfths were taken up with the effort to frame issues that may override the tariff issue in the campaign of 1908. With the tariff as a paramount issue, the Democrats have not fared well in presidential elections. They would greatly prefer some other issue. Mr. Bryan has been trying to find one. In his search he has uncovered some rather dizzy substitutes for the tariff as an issue. War on "predatory wealth" and "death to plutocracy" is one of them. Railroad rate regulation through United States government ownership of other than trunk lines is another issue which Mr. Bryan hopes may obscure the tariff issue. Both propositions are sufficiently radical to divert attention somewhat from the Democratic party's hopelessly bad tariff record, provided the party can be induced to stand for so radical a departure in the direction of socialism and centralization. But there are unmistakable signs of revolt, especially among the predatory plutocrats and the southern Democrats. Already Mr. Bryan perceives his blunder, and is hastening to give assurance that these revolutionary ideas are his own merely, and not intended for incorporation in the national platform.

So, in time, Mr. Bryan will be compelled to get back to the tariff. There will be little else left to talk about; for the Republican party has shown that railroad rates can be regulated without confiscation or government ownership, and that trust evils can be remedied without disturbing protection to American labor and industry. The Democratic nominee for 1908 promises to consider the tariff question more at length at an early day. Assuredly he will. Being compelled to abandon some of his startling radicalisms lest he frighten away the support that he unanimously has prior to his speech of August 30, he will have no choice but to fall back on the tariff. Here he will be on familiar ground. Always a free trader, always an enemy of the policy of protection, and always certain of a sympathetic hearing on the subject, he can safely launch his rhetorical thunderbolts against any tariff designed to foster domestic industrialism and domestic wage paying. Mr. Bryan's line of procedure on the tariff question was distinctly marked out when in his speech at Madison Square garden he said:

"The tariff question is very closely allied to the trust question, and the reduction of the tariff furnishes an easy means of limiting the extortion which the trusts can practice. While absolute free trade would not necessarily make a trust impossible, still it is probable that very few manufacturing establishments would dare to enter into a trust if the president were empowered to put upon the free list articles competing with those controlled by a trust. While I shall take occasion at an early day to consider the tariff question more at length, I cannot permit this opportunity to pass without expressing the opinion that the principle embodied in the protective tariff has been the fruitful source of a great deal of political corruption as well as the support of many of our most iniquitous trusts."

"It is difficult to condemn the manufacturers for uniting to take advantage of a high tariff schedule when the schedule is framed on the theory that the industries need all the protection given, and it is not likely that the beneficiaries of these schedules will consent to their reduction so long as the public waits for the tariff to be reformed by its friends."

"But one of the worst features of a tariff levied not for revenue, but for the avowed purpose of protection, is that it fosters the idea that men should use their votes to advance their own financial interests."

"The manufacturer has been assured that it is legitimate for him to vote for congressmen who, whatever else their opinions on other subjects may be, will legislate larger dividends into his pockets; sheep growers have been encouraged to believe that they should have no higher aim in voting than to raise the price of wool; and laboring men have been urged to make their wages their only concern. For a generation the tariff has been tried out of the manufacturers by the Republican campaign committee, and then the manufacturers have been reimbursed by legislation."

"With the public conscience educated to believe that this open purchase of legislation was entirely proper, no wonder that insurance companies have used the money of their policy holders to carry elections—no wonder that trusts have hastened to purchase immunity from punishment with liberal donations! How can we draw a moral distinction between the man who sells his vote for five dollars on election day and the manufacturer who sells his political influence for $50,000 or $100,000, payable in dividends? How can we draw a moral line between the senator or representative elected by the trusts to prevent hostile legislation and the sen-

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her periods she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up; you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 13th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes:

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, the blues, nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my courage days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

BRAVED ANGER OF KING.

Lafayette Flaunted Liberty Medal in Face of Louis.

Shortly after Lafayette's return to France from his second sojourn in America, he was at Versailles, where the king was about to review a division of troops. Lafayette was asked to join in the review.

He was dressed in the American uniform, and was standing by the side of the Prince de Condé, when the king, in his tour of conversation with the officers, came to him, and, after speaking on several topics, asked him, some questions about his uniform and the military costume of the United States. The king's attention was attracted by a little medal attached to the general's coat, and he asked what it was.

Lafayette replied that it was a symbol which it was the custom of foreign officers in American service to wear, and that it bore a device.

"And what is the device upon yours?" asked the king.

"My device," said the young general, pointing to his medal, "is a liberty pole standing on a broken crown and scepter."

The king smiled, and with some pleasantry upon the republican propensities of a French Marquis—in American uniform, turned the conversation into other channels. Condé looked grave, but was silent.—The Sunday Magazine.

Stand-Patters Will Be Needed.

There is meat for more than Democrats in what was said about "standing pat" by Cato Sells in his speech as permanent chairman of the Iowa Democratic convention.

"I am a stand-pat Democrat. If I were a Republican, I should be a stand-patter. The man who gets away from the doctrinal principles of his party will either have to get into the other party or become a mongrel. The Methodist who talks the Presbyterian language won't last over night, and the man who out-herods Herod and is a friend of protection and then proceeds to make a free trade speech will not recognize his own party when their convention is held in 1908."

It is not a very far cry to 1908, but it is far enough to give time and opportunity for a very considerable number of people to recall the fact that they are after all Republicans and protectionists, and that the proper place for them is back in the ranks, with the rest of the protectionists. It is a safe prediction that in the red-hot campaign against Bryan and Bryanism that will be raging two years hence "stand-patters" will have ceased to be a term of reproach. Stand-patters will then be in great demand! They will be needed.

Let It Alone.

Possibly some of the schedules of the Dingley tariff carry a higher rate of duty than is needed by the industries which they were designed to protect. That may to a limited extent be true at the present moment. But it may not be true next year. Industrial depression throughout Europe would leave a huge surplus to be marketed abroad at cut prices. In that event the present tariff would not be higher than needed. It might, indeed, prove to be too low. It is at present too low on many articles. But protectionists do not ask for tariff reductions on that account. They realize that tariffs cannot be quickly changed to meet constantly changing conditions. So they say, let the tariff alone. Needless high schedules can do no harm, whereas inadequately low schedules would do a world of harm.

HE OPENED THE DOOR FOR HER.

He started as if she struck him with a whip.

"That is not your argument; it is Mr. Darrah's." Then his voice took a deeper tone that thrilled her till she wanted to cry out. "Don't say you want me to give up; please don't say that. I think I have been putting you on a pedestal these last two days, Miss Carteret. You know well enough what is involved—honor, integrity, good faith, everything a man values, or should value. I was only jesting when I spoke of the day-pay; that is nothing—I can't believe you would ask such a sacrifice of me—of any man."

The brown eyes met his fairly, and it was not Mr. Somerville Darrah's confederate who said: "Indeed, I do not ask it, Mr. Winton. I see now how impossible it would be for you to—" she stopped short, and leaving the sentence in the air, began again. "But it is only fair that you should have your warning, and I'm going to give it to you. My uncle will leave no stone unturned to defeat you."

He was still looking into her eyes, and so had courage to say what came uppermost.

"I don't care. I shall fight him as hard as I can, but I shall always be his debtor for this evening. Do you understand?"

She broke the eye-hold and turned away quickly.

"You must not come again," she said.

"But I shall—as often as I may. And as to the railway tussle, Mr. Darrah may take it out of me as he pleases from sunrise to sunset, if he will only invite me here to dinner now and then."

In a flash her mood changed and she laughed lightly.

"Who would think it of you, Mr. Winton? Of all men I should have said you were the last to care so much for the social diversions. Shall we go in?"

"If we must; but not until I have thanked you for your timely hint of yesterday morning. It saved me no end of trouble."

"The telegram? Mr. Adams sent # ator or representative kept in congress by the manufacturers to secure friendly legislation? The party which justifies the one form of bribery cannot be relied upon to condemn the other.

"There never was a time when tariff reform could be more easily entered upon, for the manufacturers by selling abroad cheaper than at home, as many of them do, have not only shown the ingratitude toward those who built the tariff wall for them, but they have demonstrated their ability to sell in competition with the world. The high tariff has long been a burden to the consumers in the United States, and it is growing more and more a menace to our foreign commerce, because it arouses resentment and provokes retaliation."

The leopard has not changed his spots. The Bryan who helped to frame a free trade tariff bill as a member of the house committee on ways and means in 1904 is the same Free Trade Bryan in 1906. The tariff will be the paramount issue in 1908.

AS A CONTRIBUTORY CAUSE.

Benefits Reaped by Farmer as Result of Protective Tariff.

It is well to mention occasionally, as Speaker Cannon did at Danville, that under the Republican protective policy the United States now produces a third of the world's manufactures and agricultural products. Some Democrats declare that the tariff never helps the farmer. They are rash in making any such assertion. This gives the Republicans a chance to show that the diversification of industries which the tariff has created has raised up a home market for the farmer which has advanced the value of everything which he has to sell, while the competition among the factories has cheapened everything that the farmer has to buy. This is the principal reason why farming is far more profitable now than it was in the Democratic days before the civil war. Farming is far more profitable, likewise, than it was in the Democratic days of 1893-97, when the country had its latest and severest financial panic. In speaking of the country's prosperity from any viewpoint the tariff is sure to present itself as a contributory cause of the good times. "Under Democratic sway, in Buchanan's days, the aggregate of the country's manufactures was slight. This was an agricultural country almost solely at that time. As a consequence the farmer got less for his products than he does now. Our manufactured articles in those days were furnished by England chiefly, and the American farmer and the rest of the American consumers paid more for them than they do now for the home product. The tariff has benefited producer and consumers. There are more wage-workers in proportion to the aggregate population in 1906 than there were in 1860, the last year of Democratic power prior to the civil war. There are more wage-workers than there were in 1896, the last year of the last term of the last Democratic president. The wages in each case have made great advances. Here are some of the reasons why the Republicans in the campaigns of 1906 and 1908 will champion the maintenance of a tariff which will give adequate protection to every American product which needs protection. Speaker Cannon at Danville gave excellent reasons why the American people will, in 1906, elect a Republican congress to continue the magnificent work which is being done by the Republican party.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Now, here is the best yarn of the lot and a good puzzle for the Sunday papers to print," said the man with the alkali in his whiskers, when he had settled down in the hotel lobby after a long day on the rubberneck wagon.

"Several years ago American silver coin in Mexico was on the same basis as Mexican silver was at that time and still is in the states; it passed at half its face value. Drinks in El Paso and in Juarez, the Mexican town across the line, were a bit apiece or 12 1/2 cents, as you easterners would say.

"In those palmy days a citizen of El Paso could go into a drinking-emporium and buy a drink, paying for it with an American quarter. The bartender would hand him back a Mexican quarter, which was, of course, worth 12 1/2 cents in Texas.

"Then with this Mexican quarter in his hand the citizen could cross the bridge to Juarez and there buy another drink, laying his Mexican quarter on the bar.

Women at forty, or thereabouts, have their future in their own hands. There will be a change for the better or worse, for the better if the system is purified by such a tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. D. C. Wedding, of Hartford, Ky., writes as follows concerning the difficulties which afflicted her:

"I was seriously ill and was confined to my bed for six or eight months in all, during two years. I had chills, fever, rheumatism. My stomach seemed at ways too full, my kidneys did not act freely, my liver was inactive, my heart beat was very weak and I had dizziness or swimming in my head and nervous troubles.

"I was under the treatment of several different physicians but they all failed to do me any good. After suffering for two years I learned from an Arkansas friend about the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided that I would try them. The very first box I took made me feel better and when I had taken four boxes more I was entirely well, weighed fifteen pounds more than when I began, resumed my household duties, and have since continued in the best of health.

I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many people on account of what they did for me, and I feel that I cannot praise them too strongly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restored Mrs. Wedding to health because they actually make new blood and when the blood is in full vigor every function of the body is restored, because the blood carries to every organ, every muscle, every nerve, the necessary nourishment. Any woman who is interested in the cure of Mrs. Wedding will want our book, "Plain Talks to Women," which is free on request.

THE UNITED STATES ASSUMES CONTROL IN UNHAPPY CUBA.

TAFT IS NOW GOVERNOR.

Palma Quits as President, Which Forces Immediate Intervention—Hurrying Troops to the Island Now.

The resignation of President Palma, which he refused to recall, the split in the Cuban congress, which body was left without a quorum to act, and the condition of things generally were such that on Saturday Secretary of War Taft issued a proclamation to the people establishing a provisional government, of which he is the official head. One paragraph of the proclamation shows the intent of the United States. It reads:

"The provisional government hereby established will be maintained only long enough to restore order, peace and public confidence by direction of and in the name of the president of the United States, and then to hold such elections as may be necessary to determine on those persons upon whom the permanent government of the republic should be devolved."

Marines were landed from the war vessels in the harbor and Governor Taft immediately asked for troops to be sent to preserve order. The war department received a wireless message from President Roosevelt, who is on board the Mayflower, authorizing it to send the first expedition from Newport News, as planned by the general staff.

The first expedition is to sail from Newport News in about 6 or 7 days, and includes two battalions from each of the following regiments: Fifth, at Fort D. A. Russell; Seventh, Fort McPherson; Twenty-eighth, Fort Snelling; Eleventh Cavalry, Fort Des Moines; Fifteenth, Fort Ethan Allen; Seventeenth and Eighteenth mountain batteries, Vancouver; and two companies of engineers from Washington barracks.

It is now known that Brig-Gen. Frederick Funston, who is already in Cuba, is to be in command of all the troops sent to Cuba. Col. E. D. Crowder, of the judge-advocate general's office, is to be Secretary Taft's legal adviser in the organization of the new government.

Mr. Taft stated that he expected to remain in Cuba only a fortnight and would then return to Washington, as affairs concerning the Philippine islands and the Panama canal demanded his immediate attention. He has requested Secretary Bacon to remain another week to further assist in perfecting an organization necessary to thoroughly install a provisional government. Gov. Taft has nominated Beckman Winthrop, governor of Porto Rico, for the provisional governorship here, recommending to the Cubans Mr. Winthrop's special fitness for the position. Mr. Taft says that as long as the provisional government continues it will be under his supervision as secretary of war.

Everybody is praising the tact of the United States in avoiding the hauling down of the Cuban flag. This is felt to be a distinct act of courtesy and a double assurance that the motives of the United States are not sinister.

A dispatch from Havana says: Secretary of War Taft is in full charge of the Cuban government and ex-President Palma, of Cuba, is a private citizen and preparing to take his departure from the island, never to return, his friends say.

The closing scene in the death of the first independent Cuban republic was simple in the extreme. There was no blare of bugles, no ruffle of drums, no marching troops or thronging spectators when the United States secretary of war took the reins of government that had fallen from the hands of the wavering Palma.

The Cuban flag still flies from government buildings and the only sign outwardly of the great change that has come, is the little island squad of blue-coated marines who guard the treasury with its $25,000,000 in money.

There is no evidence of activity on the white warships that ride at anchor in the harbor. Havana is quiet and peaceful as any city in the world. Of all the events that have occurred today, the one that aroused the most interest was the announcement that 5,000 United States soldiers had been ordered to the island.

There came at once the wondering query if they would ever depart. There is every faith in the good intentions of President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft, but there is always the haunting belief with Cubans that they will not be able to maintain peace without the strong hand of the United States to guide them.

When Havana awoke Saturday morning it was to read in the Official Gazette the proclamation of Secretary Taft announcing himself as official dictator of the island republic. It had been so thoroughly expected that there was not even a ripple of surprise. Then, too, the edict was reassuring in that it declared that the regency would be merely temporary.

There are many flowers yet to bloom, many sunsets yet to admire, many red lips yet to kiss—but it is hard to convince a man with a dejected liver!

Rev. Dr. W. H. Harred, colored, of Atlanta, Ga., speaking before the Michigan A. M. E. conference, declared that southern negroes did not seek social equality, but that they demand a better place to live.

It has just been revealed that Geo. Thompson, a young Port Huron man, who was drowned August 26 at Point Edward, Ont., had been married on June 16, in Windsor, Ont., to Miss Lettische Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus H. Harris. The bride, who is only 19, attended Thompson's funeral, but did not reveal her relationship to the dead man at that time.

CURED OF GRAVEL.

Not a Single Stone Has Formed Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. D. Daughtrey, music publisher, of Suffolk, Va., says: "During two or three years that I had kidney trouble I passed about 2 1/2 pounds of gravel and sandy sediment in the urine. I haven't passed a stone since using Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and that was three years ago. I used to suffer the most acute agony during a gravel attack, and had the other usual symptoms of kidney trouble—lassitude, headache, pain in the back, urinary disorders, rheumatic pain, etc. I have a box containing 14 gravel stones that I passed, but that is not one-quarter of the whole number. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine kidney tonic."

Died in Westminster Abbey. Henry IV. died in Westminster Abbey in 1413. It is claimed that from that time to this no life has ended there, except that of a minister named Shepherd, who dropped dead in the famous old sanctuary, just as he finished a speech, at a meeting recently held under the chairmanship of the Dean of Westminster.

Bird Breeding Islands. During the last year the Audubon Society of Louisiana has rented some 17 bird breeding islands, located in the waters of the gulf. Last year the islands were watched by two wardens, whose wages were paid by the national committee of Audubon societies, and although they were not wholly able to prevent trespassing and egg stealing nevertheless the results attained were well-nigh marvellous. On their own and the neighboring islands of Breton reservation, owned by the federal government, by these simple preventive measures, there were hatched and raised all of 40,000 birds, composed of the following species: Common terns, forsters, terns, royal terns, laughing gulls, black skimmers.—Country Life in America.

BEES CLOSED A MINE. Swarmed in Millions and Men Were Unable to Work.

There are instances in great number where mining operations were temporarily suspended by a shortage of funds or by water flooding the property, but it remained for Mohawk, a small station along the Southern Pacific, to furnish a new cause which is unique in the history of mining. The company affected owns the Red Cross mines in the Mohawk mountains.

Millions of bees, attracted by the water at these mines and forced from their hives in the mountains by the drought, took possession of the water supply, and their numbers were so great that it was found impossible to drive the swarms away. Consequently the mines have been shut down until the rainy season sets in, when it is hoped the bees will return to their mountain homes.—Sacramento Bee.

Doctor Recommends Postum from Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says: "I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to." BABY'S TORTURING HUMOR.

Ears Looked as if They Would Drop Off—Face Mass of Sores—Cured by Cuticura in Two Weeks for 75c.

"I feel it my duty to parents of other poor suffering babies to tell you what Cuticura has done for my little daughter. She broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, they all claimed they could help her, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away; her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars, instead of seventy-five cents. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Colburn St., Akron, Ohio."

QUEER TRICKS OF ANIMALS. Seemed to Find Pleasure in Washing of Odds and Ends.

Beckmann gives a delightful account of a coon which used to amuse itself by washing various odds and ends in a bucket of water. An old pot handle, a snail shell, or anything of the sort would do.

But the thing he loved best of all was an empty bottle. Clapping it in his fore paws he would waddle slowly to the bucket with the bottle clasped close to his breast and then roll it and rinse it in the water. If anyone ventured to disturb him he was furious and threw himself upon his back, clinging so tightly to his beloved bottle that he could be lifted by it.

Groos says that bears will do the same sort of thing. He relates the case of a polar bear which used to roll an old iron pot to and fro in his tank, and then, lifting it out, rub it up and down in a trough of running water. He stood on his hind legs and used his fore paws exactly like a washerwoman washing clothes.

Strange World Tour. A story is told in Paris of a titled painter's pilgrimage. Ten years ago Viscount Jacques de Guirart laid a wager of $60,000 that he and his bride, to be married in the day of departure, could make a tour of the world, living on the earnings of the vicomte's brush. There was no stipulation as to time. The pair have just reached Paris on their return, after successfully accomplishing their undertaking and winning their bet. They have traversed Europe, America, Africa and Australia, living on nothing but the meager profits of the vicomte's brush.

BEGGAR WORE SILK HAT.

Attire of Mendicant Surprised Visitors in London.

The visitors from the country turning from a London railway terminus into the street on Saturday stopped to gaze aghast at a man standing in the gutter. "Look," said one, nudging the other, "even the beggars wear 'toppers' in London!" It was true in this case, at any rate.

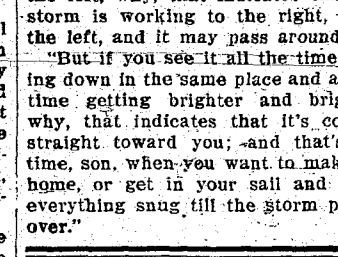

Here was a man of about five and thirty, dressed like a city clerk, in a good morning coat and trousers, round boots, clean starched shirt and collar and a well fixed tie. He was crowned with a silk hat, well brushed and ironed. But there he was in the conventional attitude of the curbstone merchant, one foot on the pavement, the other in the gutter. One hand held out for sale half a dozen boxes of matches, the other invited alms.

Thunderstorms on the Water. "On the water," said a grizzled old bayman, "when you see a thunderstorm rising you want to keep an eye on the lightning. If you see it in the distance striking down further and further to the right from where you first saw it, or further and further to the left, why, that indicates that the storm is working to the right, or to the left, and it may pass around you."

"But if you see it all the time coming down in the same place and all the time getting brighter and brighter, why, that indicates that it's coming straight toward you; and that's the time, son, when you want to make for home, or get in your sail and make everything snug till the storm passes over."

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies: those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the

HOLDING OUT FARES.

A Conductor's Observations on the Street Car Beat.

"Do some passengers make it a practice to hold up fares on us?" repeated a conductor on one of the street car lines. "Indeed, they do, and you wouldn't be running a car a week before you would get on to some of their methods."

"Most conductors have some sort of a system of collecting fares. Some take the faces of the passengers as guides, others take in the general appearance of the passengers, while others go through their cars in certain systematic ways peculiar to the man. I have a system which may seem old, but I have found it a good one, and I very seldom ask the same passenger twice for a fare, as many conductors whose memory is not good are obliged to do, nor do many fares get away from me."

"In collecting fares I always look at a man's cravat. Facial delineations, especially in men with smoothly shaven faces, are frequently nearly alike, so much so that one smoothly shaved stout man looks like the next smoothly shaved stout man, but their neckties will be different. It is also deceiving to attempt to identify men by their head covering, as there will be a dozen men in the car with the same style of straw hat on in summer, and with the same style of stiff hat in winter, but when it comes to neckties you have a dead line on 'em for the reason that you won't find two neckties exactly alike in a car full of men."

"But with lady passengers I go to the hat for identification. While ladies may wear the same general style hat, either down over the face, up from the face or on one side or the other, you will never see two ladies' hats that are trimmed exactly alike."

"You see, it is our duty to collect fares, and when we think a passenger is holding up a ticket it is also our duty to insist that it be surrendered, so our identification should be accurate to save trouble for all concerned. There are some passengers who always have their fares ready to hand to the conductor upon his approach. There are others who never produce a fare until a specific demand is made by the conductor for it, and then the search for the ticket or the cash begins, and not until then. These passengers go upon the rule that it is not moral turpitude to beat the company out of its legal fee for transportation if the fare be not demanded by the company's agent, that the company is under obligation to transport them free of charge if they are overlooked by the conductor, and that they are under no reciprocal obligation to pay for a service rendered them.—Brooklyn Citizen.

A Disgusted Shah.

When a shah of Persia was visiting England he frequently expressed his contempt for the mildness of English law. So he was finally taken to Newgate in order that he might see a gallows. He at once manifested great interest in it and, expressing a desire to see how it worked, asked the governor to hang a man. The governor explained that he had not at the time a man ready for the experiment, whereupon the shah expressed his contempt. But he intimated that that was of no consequence. "Hang one of these," said he, pointing to his suit, each man of which probably trembled in his shoes. And very great indeed was the shah's disgust when he found that he could not prevail upon the governor to do what he wanted.

Testing His Heroism.

He had been courting the girl for a long time. It happened on Sunday night after church. They were sitting on the sofa, and she looked with ineffable tenderness into his noble blue eyes. "Tom," she murmured, with a tremor in her voice, "didn't you tell me once you would be willing to do any act of heroism for my sake?" "Yes, Mary, and I gladly reiterate that statement now," he replied in confident tones. "No noble Roman of old was fired with a loftier ambition, a braver resolution, than I." "Well, Tom, I want you to do something really heroic for me." "Speak, darling! What is it?" "Ask me to be your wife. We've been fooling long enough."

Birds' Calls.

There are many birds of which the male and female have the same call, such as the raven, the rook, the New Zealand parson bird and the gull, and to the highly cultivated musical ear a difference in pitch may be perceived which would escape the ordinary observer. With the true songsters there is little difference in the vocal organs of the two sexes, although the males of most species sing better and more continuously than the females.

For the Stomach Heart and Kidneys

Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a Cause Cure—not a Symptom Cure.

It is a common mistake to take artificial dietaries, stomach troubles or heart ailments for weak heart—or so-called kidney remedies for diseased kidneys. These organs do not act separately or of their own accord—they have no control over themselves—and not once in 800 times is the sickness the fault of the organ. It is the fault of the nerves which control the organ, and only through these nerves can stomach, kidney or heart disorders be cured. Dr. Shoop, of Racine, Wisconsin, learned early in his medical experience that these inside nerves were the power nerves—that through them all the ailments of the system, such as indigestion, nervousness, insomnia, backache, heart weakness, neuritis, and all other affections of the system, are controlled. For all of these ailments, Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the only medicine that can be used. It is a purely vegetable preparation, and is not to be used merely as a symptom cure, but as a cause cure. The remedy which Dr. Shoop prescribed for these ailments is known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It relieves the pain and distress of indigestion, stomach and heart troubles quicker even than those medicines designed simply to give temporary relief. It relieves the pain and distress of indigestion, stomach and heart troubles quicker even than those medicines designed simply to give temporary relief. ## READING ROOM STORIES.

What She Studied In Order to Retain Her Husband's Love.

A man in charge of a department in a large reference library in Philadelphia was asked by a woman caller for a book on geology. She sat and read it all day. The next day she called for a work on botany. For four successive days she read history, astronomy, essays and photography. On the last day she returned the book and confided to the man in charge that she did not know what to read during the next week.

"What is the object of your reading?" he inquired.

"Well, it's this way," said the woman. "I wasn't well educated, and I don't play the piano or sing, and I don't read." She hesitated and looked at him wistfully. Seeing sympathy in his eyes, she proceeded: "I have been afraid for some time that I was losing my husband's love. I know my conversation isn't interesting, and I thought if I could read up on some useful things my talk at the table would hold him, and he might stay in nights."

"What is your husband's business?" asked her listener.

"He has a string of horses at the race track," she said.

On another occasion the same librarian was confronted by a brisk young woman of twenty-four or twenty-five, with a very businesslike way.

"What have you on Buddhism?" she asked.

The attendant brought out several volumes on the subject.

"Oh, dear, those are too large. I have not got time to read those big books. Have you got something shorter—a small book?"

The man showed her the article on Buddhism in the encyclopedia.

"Even that is too long. I have not got time to read that. You see, I'm going over to India as a missionary, and I merely want to get the main points so I can confute their theories."—The Reader.

Ethel's Question.

Ethel is three years old. Her father came home the other afternoon, after working three days and nights under high pressure, with no sleep to speak of, and lay down with the feeling that he might not wake up for a week. Within five minutes the greatest amount of noise would not have aroused him.

Three-quarters of an hour later, from the depths of his dreams, he heard a clear, small voice:

"Father, father, father, father!"

The sleeper stirred and sank deeper.

"Father, father, father!"

He struggled and resisted and floundered, and finally raised his eyelids like a man lifting giant weights. When sight came to him he saw Ethel smiling divinely beside his couch.

"Father, father!"

"What is it, daughter?"

"Father, are you having a nice nap?"—Judge.

A Wet Umbrella.

There was a slightly injured look on Mrs. Compton's face and her husband hoped that her sister, who had been passing the day, had not attempted to give his wife advice about domestic affairs.

"Did you have a good time with Mildred?" he ventured at last.

"Oh, yes, very nice," said Mrs. Compton. "We shopped together this morning and this afternoon we went to the organ recital. It sprinkled when we came out and I had to lend Mildred my umbrella," with a second sigh.

"Well, she'll return it all right," said Mr. Compton, slightly flushed at his wife's tone. "Mildred isn't the forgetful kind."

"It's not that, Henry," said Mrs. Compton. "It's only that it poured before Mildred got home, long before she got home, and it was my new umbrella. You know how a person feels about a new umbrella, Henry?"

His Egotism.

An English barrister named Huddleston, a general favorite at the bar, was the butt of many jokes. A great dandy, he always wore a powdered wig and white kid gloves in court. He was somewhat egotistical, and during a general criticism of him some one said in his defense, "At all events, you never hear him speak ill of anybody."

"No," rejoined Ballantine, a brother barrister, "but the reason is that he never speaks of anybody but himself."

A Hard Job.

During a weekly inspection in an infantry regiment a snop had been accidentally left propped, with the head uppermost, against a spare bed cot. The captain of the company, who was very shortsighted, on entering the room, pointed to the head of the mop and exclaimed in a loud, sharp voice, "Color sergeant, see that that man gets his hair cut."
