Electric Line for East Jordan

Will Connect Manistee, Traverse City, Charlevoix, Petoskey and East Jordan.

Traverse City, Mich., October 23.—Fourteen men began work here to-day surveying for the Northern Michigan Traction Co., which will build an electric line 229 miles in length extending from Manistee to Cheboygan, taking in Traverse City, Charlevoix, and Petoskey, with several branch lines.

The contemplated road will cost $7,000,000, and F. O. Oleson, general manager, announced that there was ample capital behind the scheme and that $3,000 had already been expended.

A surveying gang is also working in this direction from the north. It is proposed to install local systems wherever there is sufficient population to warrant it. The third rail system with the overhead trolley in towns will be used. From this city a branch will run to Old Mission, eighteen miles away, and from Petoskey a branch will run to Wallon Lake, East Jordan and Bellare, connecting with the main line at Elk Rapids.

While Oleson refuses to announce who is back of the project, it is thought that Cleveland interests are financing the proposed road. As soon as the survey is completed, if the weather holds good, grading will begin.

To The Voters of Michigan.

An examination of the state election returns reveals the fact that in "off" years no President is to be elected, a large number of voters stay at home on election day. In some counties over half the electors thus neglect their highest privilege as citizens and their most important duty to the commonwealth. This letter is written for the purpose of appealing to the public conscience upon this question.

Though conscious of many mistakes and shortcomings, yet for a period of nearly two years I have endeavored to faithfully serve the whole people without distinction and without prejudice and with an eye single to the general good and continued prosperity of our beloved state. By practically the unanimous vote of my party at the first state primaries I have been renominated, and now I very much wish to have all of the voters of the state pass judgment upon my administration. If I have succeeded, a small vote would be but little encouragement, and if I have failed, a light vote would not pronounce proper judgment.

This appeal is not to my party friends only, but to all of the voters. We are living in strenuous times. Under the splendid leadership of President Roosevelt we are making mighty strides in advance. Almost every day new issues confront us and new opportunities await us. Never before has history been made so fast and never before has the demand for faithful citizenship been so great. The will of the people is supreme and this will can only be registered at the ballot box. Here, officers, politics and principles are either upheld or defeated, and the loud call of patriotic duty comes to all to abandon on election day every selfish desire and all labor and pleasure long enough to go to the polls and vote.

I, therefore, earnestly appeal to you in behalf of national and state pride and their welfare to express an increasing interest in public affairs and your appreciation of a free ballot, our bulwark of liberty, by voting on Tuesday Nov. 6.

FRED M. WARNER.

Week of Nov. 12th.

When the Mack and Leone Stock Co. come to Loveday Opera House it will be another evidence that we are getting the finest attractions this season that have ever been presented in East Jordan. This company is playing return engagements at almost every city visited and where they have ever been the seats are selling for the entire week in advance—at Petoskey on their second engagement many people had to stand before the week ended. Their repertoire consists of such well known plays as "The Christian," "The Little Minister," "When We Were Twenty-one," as well as many wholesome comedies.

Republicans Active Meetings Held Throughout the County

The Fall Election is only a week from next Tuesday and the campaigning will necessarily be short. The "Independents" and Prohibitionists have so far done nothing toward enlightening the public on their position as far as the County Ticket is concerned and the Republican majority will therefore be large. A number of Republican Meetings have been and are to be held throughout the County for the purpose of interesting those who would probably stay away from the polls on Election Day.

Arrangements are being made for a meeting in the Town Hall, next Tuesday evening, the address to be given by the Hon. John Crandall of Detroit. To this all interested in the welfare of our State and County are urged to attend.

A big Mass Meeting is on at Boyne City this Saturday evening, Hon. Chas. E. Townsend being the orator. The East Jordan Male Quartette are down for some music for this event.

Other meetings in this district held as follows:

Oct. 25—Wilson Town Hall, Hon. J. M. Harris and Atty. E. N. Clink.

Oct. 25—Peninsula Grange Hall, Atty. Leonard F. Knowles.

Oct. 25—South Arm Grange Hall, Atty. E. N. Clink.

Oct. 26—Ironton, Hon. J. M. Harris.

Stray Political Shots.

One bit of information which Mr. Kimmerle possessed himself of, but which he has not yet made public, is that Governor Warner does not travel on railroad passes and that his personal expenses have been less than in the case of any other governor the state has ever had. Mr. Kimmerle it will be recalled, is the democrat candidate for governor, and probably that is why he is not making use of the above information, after securing it through one of his recent list of questions.

Faithful, efficient service deserves recognition and approval. Most of the candidates on the republican state and county tickets are now serving their first terms. Individually they have made records of which their party and the people are proud and unitedly they have provided an administration of affairs never surpassed for excellence in history. The same measure of earnest effort to give best possible service in their important duties by our present officers should be returned to them through the ballot box at the coming election.

One week from next Tuesday, Nov. 6, will be a day that should be kept in mind by every Michigan taxpayer and every Michigan voter. The opportunity to cast a vote that will represent an approval of present industrial conditions and an appeal for their continuance should not be neglected. If partisanship is laid aside and only the best good of our state and every section of our state is first considered by those who take part in the coming election there will be no votes cast against the republican candidates for congress in Michigan, and the republican state ticket will receive unanimous endorsement.

But it passes Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure, as made for 20 years, entirely free. Dr. Shoop all along has bitterly opposed the use of all opiates or narcotics. Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is absolutely safe even for the youngest babe—and it cures, it does not simply suppress. Get a safe and reliable cough cure, by simply insisting on having Dr. Shoop's. ## Gone To Mississippi.

A party of thirty-odd men left Thursday morning over the Detroit & Charlevoix Railway for Bond, Miss., where they are under agreement to work in the saw-mills there this coming winter. The party is in charge of E. R. Kelly, who has a position as cook in one of the camps there. He is accompanied by his wife and child. A number we understand also leave from Mancelona.

We'd like to publish a list of those who come back in about six months from now but that will be the unwritten part. Down in that state work is paid for by the day—an average of about $2.00. This would be a good proposition if full time could be put in, but the rainy season lasts from October to March and naturally a good many days will be lost every month. The cost of board, etc. will go on just the same and it's a safe guess that those seeking a new Eldorado will be greatly disappointed.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kelly, Clayton Glasple, Walter Clark, Lawrence Provost, Harry Parks, Jess Bayless, Archie Kidder, Bert Bennett, Cal Bennett, Ira McMullen, Duncan Ferguson, Richard Freeman, Harvey Hill, Jos. Moore, Duncan McFee, Frank Eaton, E. F. Murray, Wm. Wilcox, Wm. Reno, John Johnson, Nick Vanquist, A. F. Muirhead, Clinton Glasburn, John Sherwood, Jos. Emory, Elmer Jensen, Chas. Barrett, Lester Barlow, Ray Lanway, James Light, Wm. Montroy.

County Normal Notes.

Hessie Straw substituted for Miss Plum in the Lincoln School, all of last week.

During a class period one afternoon last week, the second grade children of the Training School came over to the Normal room and told the story of "Silver Locks and the Three Bears," in a very interesting way. The children are going to make some furniture out of cardboard such as chairs, beds, etc., which the three bears used and the members of the normal class will help the children in this work in manual training.

Anna Ingalls taught in the fifth grade room, in place of Miss Lewis, last Wednesday.

Ruth Ekstrom and Effie Sherman went to Boyne City Friday evening, to stay over Sunday. While there they visited the Beulah Home and were greatly interested in the work as it was explained to them.

Observation work was begun by the normal class in the training room last week. Our aim in this work is to get ideas as to how the different subjects should be taught, and how to keep the school room in good condition, and how to keep the pupils busy.

Some Austrian ladies have this year organized "beauty camps," living for a month in tents in the open air, partaking of plain food and rising and retiring early. The campers do nearly all their own work, and the result is summarized as "robust health, clear complexion, and 20 pounds added to one's weight."

Charles Gibson, of Eufaula, a Creek citizen who has intimate knowledge of tribal customs, asserts that the Creek Indian medicine man with his remedies can stop instantly the flow of blood and that no physician can excel him in curing a gunshot wound. Gibson says that these medicine men never fail to cure a snake bite, the bite of a mad dog and the sting of a centipede or a tarantula.

That there is still available a great deal of land not actually needed for the support of human life is attested by the fact that a tract of more than 1,700,000 acres in New Brunswick, Canada, has been leased by a company in Montreal, an organization including many Americans in its membership. The area will be reserved exclusively for hunting and fishing purposes, and sportsmen expect to find it a paradise for their purpose.

The first anniversary of the signing of the treaty of peace between Russia and Japan was appropriately observed at Portsmouth, N. H., when a tablet commemorative of the momentous event was unveiled and dedicated. The tablet, suitably designed, sets forth that in the building "at the invitation of Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States," was held the conference which culminated in the peace agreement signed at 3:47 p. m. September 5, 1905, which ended the war between the countries.

The report of the geological survey showing that the United States last year produced about 395,000,000 tons of coal places this country far in the lead, and emphasizes the situation when it appears that the increase here over 1904 was actually greater than the entire production in France or any other large nation, with the exceptions of Great Britain, Germany and Austria. Especial impetus was given to mining in the United States by apprehensions concerning a coal strike last spring.

English experts say that nine-tenths of the serious crimes in Great Britain are committed by old hands who have been often imprisoned, whom they class as incorrigible and recommend should be put in a class by themselves. They would have the courts clothed with power, after a certain number of offenses, to pronounce a man as incorrigible and to pass sentence on him putting him permanently in prison, where he can no longer make war on society. The same object would be effective by deportation and they believe it would bring about a very great reduction in crime. If we could remove the small population in Guam elsewhere and send every incorrigible there for life there would be no possibility of their escaping, and the effect here would be greatly beneficial.

London critics are indignant because a manager wants them to wait a week before reviewing a new production. In the case of the average performance it would be a favor to the critic to let him wait a year.

MICHIGAN EVENTS NOTED

ATTORNEY GENERAL WANTS TO KNOW WHERE THE FINES WENT.

TRAMPS' BLOODY FIGHT

Poverty and Honesty, Restoration and Tears—Various Matters of Note About the State.

Disposal of Fines. Upon request of Attorney General Bird the Kalamazoo supervisors have ordered an investigation into the fines that have been collected in that county for the past fifteen years and what the county has spent the money for.

Just the reason for the request is not known. It is not believed that there has been any irregularity in the fine system of the county, but the request of the attorney general causes considerable surprise.

The supervisors ordered the work begun at once and made an appropriation to cover the expense. The fines collected in that county during the period stated will amount to probably hundreds of thousands of dollars and to find out what the amount has been spent for will take months.

Tramps in a Scrap. Covered with blood and with bad wounds about their heads, four tramps, John Kelly, of Buffalo; John Clancy, of Menominee; Frank Limerick, of Cleveland; and Burney Doyle, of Pittsburg, were taken to the station in Jackson Saturday. Kelly was seriously injured, and did not regain consciousness for some time.

They were engaged in a free for all fight in a saloon, in which beer bottles and glasses were used with terrible effect.

There is said to have been bad feeling existing between the men, and when they met in the saloon war broke out.

Limerick had his trousers loaded down with 37 bogus rings.

Retored the Money. The tragedy of poverty was never better illustrated than in the experience of Charles Thomas, of Kalamazoo, a helplessly crippled man who supports himself in a precarious manner by selling lead pencils from a wheel chair which he propels painfully about the streets. On Friday he picked up a purse containing $25 and although that amount was a fortune to him he hastened to police headquarters as quickly as he could and there met Mrs. K. Miller, a poor woman, deserted by her husband and who is supporting three children by days' work. She had come to report the loss of the purse and she wept with joy as it was returned to her.

Thomas was so touched by the woman's emotion and her story of her own struggles that he wept in sympathy and the two left the station together.

Ground Up by Car. "Yes, that's my husband's mustache and nose," said the wife of August Hein, of Detroit, when Undertaker Creedon opened before her eyes a cigarbox full of small portions of the man killed by a car in Michigan avenue, near the city limits, early Thursday morning.

The body was literally cut to pieces, and it was with difficulty that the remains were gathered together and taken to the county morgue. Hein was 44 years old and leaves a widow and six children. He had been working for the Schneider company for some time and lived with his family at the brickyard. He left home Wednesday evening to attend a meeting of a German society, his purpose being to pay an insurance assessment, and was on his way home when run down by a car, supposed to have been a suburban.

Buried Side by Side. The death of Willis Hobbs and of Arthur Lawson, of Jackson, brings out a strange parallel in the lives of these two men. They were born within 24 hours of each other 30 years ago. They played together as children, remained close friends after school days, and when they married settled within a block of each other. Five weeks ago both were taken to their beds. Hobbs with typhoid fever and Lawson with tuberculosis. Hobbs died late Thursday night, and within a few hours Lawson gave up the struggle. Hobbs was buried Saturday. Great was the surprise of the friends of both men when attending Lawson's funeral Sunday they saw that his grave was in an adjoining lot. This was by coincidence, not design.

Three Killed and Many Injured. Passenger train No. 8, of the Wabash railroad, running from Kansas City to Buffalo, N. Y., known as the Buffalo mail, and due in Danville, Ill., at 4:52 a. m., ran into an open switch west of Catlin, Ill., early Wednesday, and crashed into a section of a freight train. The passenger coaches, except one, turned over and burned.

Three persons are known to have been killed. Several others are missing. Thirty-seven injured are being taken care of at Danville hospital.

A. C. McGraw, of Bloomfield Hills, after experiments, says peppermint can be raised successfully in that section.

Louis Wessels, of Flint, while working in a pipe works at Ballard, Wash., was struck and fatally injured in the head by a pipe from a machine. He had been married only a few days.

For the first time in the history of Bay City a woman conducted regular Sunday services. Miss Beattie Fox, daughter of Aid. and Mrs. C. L. Fox, aged 23, and very good looking, occupied the pulpit in the First Congregational church.

Is There a Coal Combine?

Developments during the past few days have raised the question in the minds of some whether the government is not collecting evidence for the purpose of beginning prosecutions against the anthracite coal trust for violation of the anti-trust law; or the railroads for violation of the new rate bill; one or both.

The visits of a mysterious gentleman to several towns in Michigan has raised this question. This man, whose name is said to be Reynolds or Wyeth—the name understood to have gone by both names—has kept his movements a secret. He did not register at any of the hotels in towns where he stopped. But he has quietly been asking questions about the coal business. It would never have been known that any such man was making the rounds had not a man who was formerly in the coal business in one of these cities given it away.

A dealer has admitted that Reynolds, if that is his name, was in Kalamazoo; but it has been impossible to find him or to learn anything about his movements while he was there. He is now said to be in Grand Rapids. Previous to coming to Kalamazoo, he was in Battle Creek.

Some very interesting conditions about the coal business, conditions which indicate that the coal barons of the east practically own the small retailers in cities and dictate the prices at which coal shall be sold to the consumer, have been uncovered. The unanimity of dealers in Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids and Battle Creek in maintaining a fixed price for the commodity aroused the suspicion that local combines exist.

"Blood for Blood." James d'Angelo, of the Detroit Italian colony, has confessed that he killed his brother, whose dead body was found in a stone yard. When told of the confession the mother of the boys said: "I do not believe my boy would murder his brother, but if he did my eyes are closed, I never want to see him again, and he must suffer the death he must be accorded; I call upon the vendetta! Blood for blood!"

The father said: "I cannot believe my boy murdered his own brother, but if he did, let them bring the gallows; off with his head! If they will not kill him in this state, take him to another. Blood for blood!"

Claude Fields, aged 35, of Charlotte, was killed by a train on which he was conductor, at Joliet, Ill.

Mrs. J. Nelson, wife of a Monitor township farmer, drank a mixture of fly poison and died of resultant peritonitis.

Human bones were found by workmen excavating on the former site of a Kalamazoo saloon of unsavory reputation.

The low water in Kalamazoo river causes a fear of a typhoid epidemic. The river bed is filled with refuse from the sewers.

A fall while attending a party about a month ago has resulted in the death of Miss Lucille Read, aged 19, of Kalamazoo.

James Fairbanks, a Holland farmer, aged 67 years, was killed when thrown backwards from his wagon while picking apples.

The 4-year-old daughter of Richard DeWright, of Allegan, backed into a wash boiler of boiling water and was fatally scalded.

With deliberate intention of getting in jail to have a warm place to live, Lizele Alpiro, a Hungarian who has been out of work, smashed a $104 plate glass window in Lansing and got three months.

"Jack the Insultor" is still at work in the vicinity of the Ann Arbor university residence section. A third case where this man has approached a woman with outrageous language has been reported.

John Parrah, aged 35, a woodsman, while skidding logs near Paynesville, was killed by a box of a log which had caught in the roots of a tree and sprang up when suddenly released. Parrah's back was broken.

Miss Grace Driggs, an Adrian society woman, attempted to saddle a horse in her brother's barn when the animal kicked her in the face, causing a compound fracture of both jaws and tearing the right ear nearly off.

Battle Creek business men are much incensed over a report sent out to the effect that a typhoid fever epidemic has struck the city. As a matter of fact there are less than two dozen cases there, nothing remarkable for a city of 30,000 population.

Charles Symonds passed in front of a team pulling a heavily loaded cart in the boiler room of the Chapin mine. The pole broke and the horses lurched forward, the pole striking Symonds in the abdomen and pinning him against a beam. He died in a short time.

Dressed as a little school girl and wearing a gaudily trimmed straw hat, Miss Dredna Joyce, as a part of her initiation into the Kappa Delta Psi high school sorority, wheeled a doll cart through the business part of Battle Creek while the other girls walked on the opposite side of the street and made fun at her expense.

Vincent Czipinski, aged 15, of Bay City, who a month ago stole $230 which his uncle had hidden in his home, returned $290, which he left on his uncle's doorstep, and then ran to his father's home. He refuses to tell where he has been or how he spent the missing $30.

While hunting partridges, Albert Lavigne, of Lake Linden, shot himself Thursday, inflicting a dangerous wound.

All Kalamazoo hard coal dealers are charging $3 a ton for hard coal. It is rumored that there is a government official here looking into an alleged combine.

The supervisors of Calhoun county have restored the county game warden's salary to $2.50 a day, instead of 50 cents, voted a year ago for actual time spent at his work. Without some surveillance hunters became careless and the farmers' live stock and poultry suffered.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

SHOT IN COLD BLOOD

Raymond Kent, Who Fired the Shot, Escapes—The Wounded Officer May Recover From the Serious Wound.

Victim May Survive.

Chief of Police Charles Masten, of Ann Arbor, was shot down in cold blood in a dark hallway in "lower town" by Raymond Kent, aged 23, whom he had gone to arrest. Kent escaped and is now being hunted for at a dozen different points, and Chief Masten is on the brink of death in the University hospital. The charge of shot struck him full in the abdomen, ranging downward, having been fired from the head of a stairway while the chief stood at the bottom.

There were some threats of violence should Kent be captured, but they were only individual outbreaks. Kent had a fight early in the evening with Louis Tukeman, who was "shooting up" a billiard room. Kent left the place with the intention of getting it home. He ran nearly a mile to the house of W. J. Randall and his son, George, and asked to be admitted to borrow a gun and some cartridges.

The Randalls live in the upstairs portion of a half of a double house. Young Randall admitted Kent and gave him the weapon and ammunition and Kent was about to leave when Chief Masten, accompanied by his brother, Frank, and Patrolman Clark, arrived in a buggy, having been warned of Kent's threats to do murder. The officers met Minnie Kent, the fugitive's sister, who was just going home, and she shouted to them not to "beat-up" her brother as he was insane.

Masten entered the hall door which was unlocked and shouted: "Ray come down here; I want to speak to you." "You can't speak to me," came the reply, followed by oaths and vicious names; and then the shot was fired.

Chief Masten's companions carried him to the buggy and his brother drove him to the hospital as rapidly as possible, while Officer Clark remained to guard the house. While he was watching the front, however, George Randall let Kent out the back way and he escaped. Young Randall is in jail as an accomplice in the shooting.

The "lower town," where the shooting occurred, causes the police more trouble than any other section. It is the "old" Ann Arbor and some of its old houses are occupied by negroes and poor whites.

The condition of Chief Masten Monday morning was encouraging. He passed a very comfortable night. The only thing that saved his life is the fact that he wore a heavy overcoat. The charge of duckshot passed through his vest, shirt and underwear. The wound is not a fatal one, as might have been expected; it is described as "pepper-box." If blood poisoning does not set in the chances are that the chief will recover.

Women Who Work. Malcolm J. McLeod, state labor commissioner, told the state federation of women's clubs that there were 38,857 females employed in Michigan factories in 1906 compared with 14,976 only 10 years ago. Including stores, hotels and business offices he estimated that 75,000 women are at work at gainful occupations. Continuing he said:

"How can we remedy these conditions? I am a firm believer in organization, and I believe that every woman's club in Michigan can do much to ameliorate the condition of the women wage-earners, especially in their own vicinity. The Federation of Women's clubs is a still stronger body, capable of leading in almost any beneficent work—the more so in a work so vital to their own sex. Is it not worth a supreme effort?"

Found Dead and Nude. The finding of the almost nude body of Bert Sweet, aged 38, of Ovid, in the woods two miles southwest of Reed City apparently uncovers a rather mysterious murder or a most peculiar suicide. The three boys who came across the corpse while hunting first found portions of his clothing scattered about and his body was covered with bruises. Papers in his clothing show him to have been a member of the Second United States Artillery, Troop A, honorably discharged December 27, 1893. He had applied for a pension, claiming heart trouble induced by army service.

An Ovid dispatch says that Sweet left there to work in the woods at Marion, near Reed City.

Pioneer Gone. News came to Battle Creek Saturday of the sudden death at Dallas, Texas, of Edward H. Pratt, one of Battle Creek's best known pioneers. Before Mr. Pratt went to Texas he celebrated his sixtieth wedding anniversary, at which was exhibited a part of his wedding suit, which was spun for him by his bride, Elizabeth Hathaway. Nine children, most of them belonging to families of prominence, survive, including Mrs. Morgan M. Lewis and Mrs. Carrie Graves, of that city.

George Eby, aged 32, potato dealer, fell in alighting from a G. R. & I. train at Sand Lake and was fatally injured.

A requisition on the governor of Ohio for Earl Fouts was issued by Gov. Warner. Fouts is charged with robbing the jewelry store of William Bugg in Jackson, several months ago. The prisoner is under arrest.

Mrs. Mollie Kemp, who was arrested in Port Huron with her husband for the killing of their infant child, has been discharged on account of lack of evidence to connect her with the crime. Kemp will be bound over to the circuit court for trial.

THE FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FIELD

THE HURRICANE DAMAGE IN CUBA LESS THAN FIRST REPORTED.

TWO CITIES SUFFER MOST

Sweep of the Cyclone Covered Only a Limited Area—Nine Killed in City of Batabano.

Latest Reports.

Reports received by Gov. Magoon from the provincial governors of Cuba show that the hurricane was less destructive in its results than was at first believed. The storm was confined mainly to the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio.

Batabano, 30 miles southeast of Havana, was the only other town except the capital which suffered greatly. The mayor of that place reports that nine persons were killed and that many are missing.

The American steamer Campbell, plying between the Isle of Pines and the coast, and the Sara, went ashore, and many small craft were wrecked. Numerous houses were blown down and hundreds of persons are homeless and destitute. The loss there is estimated at $600,000.

Gov. Magoon has directed Gov. Nuñez, of Havana province, to extend assistance to Batabano, declaring that if the provincial treasury has not sufficient funds he will find other means for relieving distress.

The mayor of San Luis, in the province of Pinar del Rio, and the center of the rich tobacco district, reports great damage to seed tobacco but no loss of life.

At Matanzas, where the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry is encamped, and at Cardenas, where the Fifth United States Infantry is quartered, tents were blown down and considerable damage was done to property. No persons, however, were injured.

All the southern portion of Havana province is flooded, and great damage was done to crops and buildings. The Isle of Pines escaped without damage.

Roving Armed Bands. While tranquility prevails generally in Cuba, reports received in Havana show the existence of roving armed bands at various places.

At Guines armed ex-rebels are hovering in the outskirts of the town and declare that they fear to enter because of alleged threats of persecution by the police.

At San Domingo bands of armed negroes, ex-rebels, dissatisfied with the terms of peace, threaten to commit depredations, but are overawed by the garrison, which consists of 75 United States marines. In the vicinity of Cienfuegos armed bands are reported to be engaged in depredations. A band of 50 mounted negroes, the members of which call themselves insurgents, is roving about the country near Lajas.

A delegation of six liberal members of the provisional council today visited Gov. Magoon and announced that they would attend no further meetings of the council because the moderate members of the body were illegally seated at the last election. Gov. Magoon, however, argued with the disgruntled councilmen and induced all of them to reconsider their decision and agree to continue to serve.

Siliveria's Escape. The steamship Carmelina, with Mangel Siliveria, the Cuban banker, whose recent disappearance from Havana brought about the failure of Ceballos & Co., steamed into Curacao a week ago last Sunday. He was accompanied by his wife and two children. His arrival is reported by the captain and passengers of the Zulia, which has reached New York from Venezuelan ports.

Curacao is an island off the north shore of South America, belonging to Venezuela, for which country it has all along been surmised Siliveria would flee because of his friendship for President Castro, as well as for the reason that no treaty exists between Cuba and Venezuela, thereby making him immune from arrest.

Many Complaints. Many complaints have been made to Gov. Magoon by liberals and moderates that the militia, on the one hand, and the rebels on the other, have not given up all their arms. None of these complaints is substantiated by actual proofs. The liberals also complain against the acts of certain mayors and the police. Gov. Magoon, who is having the complaints investigated by Americans, is surprised that the complaints are not greater than they are. In case charges are proved against the mayors the provincial governors will act. Charges have been made against the governor of Pinar del Rio, and if these prove true Gov. Magoon himself will have to act.

Keweenaw has no inmates in the poor house, but paid $3,618 for supplies, and medical attendance in the various counties the past year.

There is a vacancy in the office of judge of probate in Schoolcraft county and Gov. Warner is receiving letters on behalf of a large number of candidates for the place.

Lansing police put a stop to the initiation of high school girls into a sorority on complaint of a police commissioner, who said that the girls in short dresses or bloomers wheeling others similarly attired through the streets was not at all edifying.

Because of lack of labor the Pioneer Iron Co.'s Carp river charcoal iron furnace was forced to suspend operations and will be idle for probably three weeks, or until work slacks up on the ore docks. Pig iron is selling for $27 per ton, which means a loss of $1,000 for every day the furnace is idle.

Loaded to Kill.

Concealed in a sack of corn in the fernal machine severely injured Fred Hill and his 13-year-old son. The boy's condition is serious. The explosion, was heard for miles around, and excitement in Wheatfield township, where it occurred, runs high.

Hill and his son were out in the field husking corn. When they pulled over the "loaded" sack there was a terrific explosion. Both were knocked insensible. Hill's injuries are painful but not serious. The boy was injured about the head and legs and is in a serious condition. The farm is about eight miles northeast of there.

Officers investigated later. They found that a loaded revolver had been placed so that the movement of the corn shock would pull a string, setting off the trigger and discharging the contents into a box of dynamite. The corn shock was blown to shreds.

Three years ago Hill shot John Hulbert, a neighbor, who had been paying attentions to his wife, but Hulbert recovered. A year ago a thrashing machine at work on Hill's farm was practically destroyed by scrap iron that had been placed in the oats.

Negotiatio Acquired. The surrender by Rear Admiral Nebogotoff of his squadron at the battle of the Sea of Japan is held to be highly favorable to the admiral. It has been shown that the hopelessly disabled condition of his two principal ships, the battleships Orel and the Nicholas I., the lack of ammunition and the exhaustion of the crews at the time of the surrender, are proof of the courage of its officers and crews. The battleship Orel, instead of being almost uninjured, was so damaged that her commander asked Admiral Rojestsvenky for permission to destroy her. She was on the point of sinking the next morning and only had two heavy guns in action.

The sentence of death in the case of the officers who, with Admiral Rojestsvenky, surrendered to the enemy, has been commuted to dismissal from the service and deprivation of certain rights.

Verdict Was "Guilty." After deliberating 22 hours, the jury in the case of the State of Ohio against the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, in Findlay, returned a verdict of "guilty" to the charge of conspiracy against trade in violation of the Valentine anti-trust law. The first ballot of the jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal. Thursday morning, one of the three for acquittal joined the majority. Thursday night another went over and at 4 o'clock Friday morning the last of the three gave way.

The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $5,000 which may be repeated for each day of the offense, or imprisonment of from six to 12 months.

To the state, the suit, the verdict and the ultimate appeal is important particularly because it initiates an entirely new method of proceeding against alleged trade monopolies that is by information and affidavit instead of by grand jury indictment.

Heavily Fined. Judge Holt in the United States circuit court today imposed a fine of $108,000 on the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. for granting rebates to Lowell M. Palmer, who has charge of transportation for the American Sugar Refining Co. There were six counts and a fine of $18,000 was imposed in each.

Frederick L. Pomerooy, assistant traffic manager of the New York Central, was fined $1,000 on each count, a total of $6,000.

The case grew out of a rebate of five cents a hundred allowed Messrs. Earle & Edgar, Detroit merchants, below the published schedule on sugar.

Hurricane Was Destructive. Reports from Cuba indicate great loss of life and property by the hurricane which swept Havana and crossed over to Florida. Fully one hundred houses were blown down in Miami and the city is in a demoralized condition. The handsome churches of the Episcopal and Methodist denominations are both blown down. The concrete jail was leaning, with danger of turning over, and the prisoners had to be released. The car sheds were torn down and the roof blown off the Occidental steamer sheds. A two-story brick, occupied as a saloon, partly collapsed.

Insane Man's Escape. Louis Moquin, of Spaulding, who was adjudged insane last spring and sent to the Newberry asylum, escaped recently and has just turned up at his home, having walked the entire distance of nearly 200 miles. He bore marks of great suffering, and it is believed during the trip is a mystery. He has a mania that a girl is in love with him.

Severed Head From Body. Eddie McGuire, 5-year-old son of Patrick McGuire, of Kichville, with several school companions climbed on a heavily loaded wagon for a ride home. The McGuire boy slipped off and the rear wheel passed over his neck and his head was practically severed from his body. His playmates knew nothing of the accident until looking behind they were horrified to see the body of the crushed lad in the road. He was instantly killed.

Elmer Murphy, 79 years old, works daily in his wagon shop at his trade as a blacksmith in Niles. He was formerly a well-to-do contractor and manufacturer, but lost his fortune.

Farmer Fleischflessen, of Menominee, mourns his 3-year-old son who set fire to his clothes and burned to death during the absence of his parents.

George Kaumbach, of Jackson, was fined $6 with 30 days in jail and 20 additional days if the fine is not paid, for shooting one of the Loomis park squirrels.

Alleging that she was thrown from a car as she was alighting and has been permanently injured, Mrs. Elizabeth Whitmore, of Ann Arbor, has brought suit against the Michigan United Railways Co. for $2,000.

TRUSTS UNIVERSAL.

IN EUROPE AS WELL AS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Remove the Tariff on Trust Products and the Leading American Trusts Would Supply the American Market from Their Manufactories Abroad.

Nearly every great American manufacturing trust has branches and factories in foreign countries. The tariff ripppers may not have considered this fact. If the duty were removed from all trust-made goods, as suggested by Gov. Cummins at Minneapolis four years ago, and by William J. Bryan a few days ago, the result would be the closing of the American factories operated by the trusts and the enlargement of their own foreign factories. And the goods for the American market being then duty free, would be manufactured by the American trusts in their factories where labor is cheaper. The American people would simply have their big mills and factories closed and thousands of Americans thrown out of employment, and the trusts would be in the saddle, making barrels of money in their factories operated by cheap labor in other lands.

Sometimes we think many people refuse to consider these tariff propositions as relating to business and only consider them as relating to politics. The protective tariff is for the purpose of enabling Americans to do their own work and supply their own wants. The politicians who talk in favor of tariff changes "to meet changed conditions" evidently do not fully know what they are talking about. The only "changed condition" which could justify tariff reduction would be the increase of wages abroad to correspond with American wages, and that has not been done. If American workmen were called upon to compete with their equals, in skill and compensation, they would not complain, but tearing down the tariff wall would put them in competition with men in other lands who work for 16 to 18 cents per day, and the American workman is not prepared to thus compete. He is no better prepared now than he was in 1897, when the Dingley tariff was enacted. There has been a slight increase in wages in England, but there has been no increase in Germany, France, Japan, China, India or any other country. We are sometimes tempted to believe that the talk about "lower tariffs" is a blow at American institutions and an attempt to reduce prices to the American "consumer," on the pretext of helping the "consumer" in what he buys without hurting him in what he sells. As we have often said, the tariff was invented to make and keep America prosperous. That end is now accomplished. Then why destroy or even partially destroy the tariff? As Mark Hanna said, "Why not let well enough alone? Why not stand pat?" Why not tell the politicians and office seekers that can have the offices if they will keep their mouths shut on this great business question? —Des Moines Capital.

Canada's Free Trade Farmers. The farmers of Canada have yet to learn the rudimentary facts relating to the policy of protection to domestic labor and industry. In recent session at Toronto, the Farmers' association of Ontario discussed the revision of the Canadian tariff that is to be made next winter. The discussion resulted in the unanimous adoption of a resolution, declaring "protectionism to be a prolific source of political corruption and moral degradation of the national life, as well as unjust to the great masses of the Canadian people," and demanding that "the tariff should be revised in a lowered or downward direction with a view to eliminating wholly the protection principle."

"Clear-cut, plucky talk," the Buffalo Courier calls this. That is what it would be called by Mr. Bryan, who is tremendously oppressed with a sense of the immorality of protection. Foolish talk we should call it. The American farmer sees nothing immoral in getting big prices for the foodstuffs and raw materials which he sells to nearby wage earners and busy factories. The Canadian farmer, blind to these advantages, and forced to sell his products 3,000 miles away, would abolish protection and stamp out Canadian industry. Some day he will learn his mistake. He will discover that his best customers are home wage-earners and home-feeders, who consume of farm products fully double the amount per capita that foreign wage-earners are able to take and pay for.

Control of Monopolies. The indications are that the people of the United States will give more attention and study to the solution of the trust and monopoly problem during the next two years than they have given to any other subject, save the money question, since the time of slavery. It is a common thing to approach this subject through the discussion of the tariff, which is said by some to be the mother of the trusts. Time and again it has been pointed out that, while a removal or decided lowering of the tariff might destroy some of the trusts and injure some of the monopolies, the chances are that in the business wreck that would follow and the disasters of the hard times that would be produced by such a decided change of policy the smaller business interests of the country would be the greatest sufferers. The trouble with attempting to cure the trust evil by such an indirect method is that it not only does damage to the trusts, but hits other interests as well. —Davenport Times.

HARM IN TARIFF CHANGES.

Experience Has Proved It Means Business Demoralization.

As Mr. Roosevelt seems to recognize distinctly in his letter to Congressman Watson, tariff revision is not a simple question of readjusting this or that particular rate or schedule, as economic conditions change. Nobody would oppose this or that reasonable and harmless readjustment if it could be attained without exciting universal and disastrous perturbation. Unfortunately, hitherto in the history of tariff emendation it has proved impracticable to enact two or three amendments agreed upon beforehand without consenting to "innumerable others, some, possibly, innocuous, many mischievous in a high degree. This is why the prospect of any tariff revision inevitably unsettles prices, alarms capital, postpones contracts and paralyzes production. It is the limitless uncertainty that stops the wheels of business. It is, of course, possible in theory to conceive of a tariff revision strictly confined to two or three items which might have no dislocating influence on the nation's industrial machinery. If, for instance, it were practicable for the president to announce that, in his opinion, two or three changes in the Dingley tariff should be made, but that if a bill to that effect should contain any other changes than those specified it would be vetoed by him, not a ripple would be witnessed on the smooth current of the national prosperity. Such a dictatorial announcement, however, would be resented bitterly by the federal legislature, and in practice, therefore, might be out of the question. We infer that, as things are now, and so long as our prosperity endures, President Roosevelt is a stand-patter. —Harper's Weekly.

BLIND LEADING THE BLIND.

Republican Party and the Farmer. In 1862 Lincoln signed a free homes bill which has added millions to the west's farming population. In 1902 Roosevelt put his signature to a national irrigation act which will place other millions of farmers in the new empire which it will create in the arid region. By its protective tariff acts the Republican party has put the United States in the lead of all the nations in the extent and variety of its industrial activities, and has created a home market which has advanced the price of everything that the farmer has to sell, has increased the value of his land and all other sorts of property belonging to him, has reduced the cost of the things which the farmer has to buy, and has made an addition to his comforts and to his general prosperity and social influence undreamed of in the years preceding the foundation of the Republican party.

In the Republican scheme in which the nation has been developed there has been no forgotten man, white, black, red or brown, low or high, and there has been no neglected calling. In a direct and emphatic degree the American farmer has reason to be grateful for the work which has been done for him by the Republican party. —Leslie's Weekly.

Straight Protectionism. "We are opposed to any change whatever which would undermine the cardinal principle of the Republican party—protection to American manufactures and labor."—From the platform of the New Hampshire Republicans, adopted in state convention at Concord, September 13, 1906.

Straightforward and simple! All protectionists can unite on it. When protectionists unite success is assured. It is only when they quarrel among themselves that defeat is possible.

Two days later the following was adopted by the Connecticut Republican state convention at New Haven: "We stand unequivocally for a protective tariff, and we feel that the phenomenal industrial prosperity which we are now enjoying is not to be lightly jeopardized, for it would be to the last degree foolish to secure here and there a small benefit at the cost of general business depression." Equally straightforward and simple; equally sound and sensible. In neither of these tariff planks can be found any evidence of what Judge Taft in his Bath speech said he had discovered—"a growing sentiment" in favor of tariff disturbance and business instability.

Must Show Need of Change. It would, of course, be too sweeping to say that tariffs cannot and never do affect trusts. No protectionist avers that a schedule can never be wisely high. What they do claim is that the noise made by howling free traders is no evidence that a tariff needs revising. We have never had a Republican congress that would not revise the tariff if accurate information and impartial investigation showed that it was needed. —Lebanon (N. H.) Free Press.

Met Horrible Death.

Edgar Gifford, chief engineer of the steamer Mary, met a horrible death in the engine room of the boat on Lake St. Clair, Thursday afternoon. His clothing caught in the machinery and he was hurled round and round, his head and body beating against the floor and beams of the hold.

Gifford had gone into the hold to oil the machinery and soon the second engineer heard a peculiar thumping noise. The engine would shiver a trifle with each revolution and going into the hold to ascertain the trouble the second engineer was horrified to see Gifford's body whirling around. The engine was immediately stopped and the mangled remains were extricated and brought to Detroit.

The unfortunate man was about 50 years of age and resided in Willow, Mich. He leaves a widow and one son.

A Long Launch Trip.

From Holland, Mich., to New Orleans and across the gulf of Mexico to Mobile in a gasoline launch is a trip that might cause many men to hesitate about taking, but that is what is planned by Lloyd G. Doty, Lloyd C. Getman and Harry C. Weatherwax, of Grand Rapids, and Will and Frank Hancock, of Holland. They will start from Holland in a 35-foot launch with a 30-inch draft and a 12-horse power engine. They will cross Lake Michigan and then go down the Illinois and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, then across Lake Pontchartrain to the gulf and up Mobile bay. They will carry special collapsible beds which they have devised and will have a goodly supply of provisions and besides will take firearms to help out the launch. They expect to take from 60 to 80 days for the trip.

COUNTY HUNTS INDIAN'S GOLD.

Fairfield, Ia.—All Jefferson county is now engaged in a mad hunt for the buried gold of old Chief Black Hawk, a clue to which was not long ago discovered in tearing down the ruins of an old log cabin. It was while workmen were engaged in destroying the cabin built in 1838 by Rhodham Bonfield that they found an ink horn, quill case and rusty old pocket-book. The pocketbook contained an 1828 newspaper clipping, a physician's recipe and a letter. This letter, though badly faded, was read with the help of a magnifying glass. It was written at San Francisco, addressed to "William," and signed "J. W."

"You know what I found out from Black Hawk... over from Illinois. I looked, but never thought until I got nearly out here. About that there map, it weren't where the lines cross, but in the middle. Now, don't you tell anyone, but try this here plan (map follows). You see, we always made the mistake of digging at crossing A. That other Indian Jim knowed more than he let on. There must be near $9,000, and maybe more, according to what Black Hawk fetched that time."

The landmarks on the map are remembered by old settlers, and a tree shown in it still remains. It is supposed that Black Hawk received this gold in payment from the government for some consideration. There is an old story about the county that three braves were given the task of finding a hiding place for this money, three being chosen so that, if one or two of them should be killed, the survivors could tell where the treasure was buried. And it happened, all three of these Indians were killed not long after, and this is said to be the reason why the gold was never recovered. Who the writer or recipient of the old letter was none can tell. Neither can it be understood how they could find out anything about the location of the gold. However, Jefferson county people are giving themselves the benefit of the doubt by digging all around the indicated spot.

DIG UP OLD SLAVE PEN.

Philadelphia Tunnel Borers Find Underground Dungeons.

Philadelphia.—Subway workmen, digging for the foundations of the new tunnel station, uncovered, at a depth of 100 feet, what is plainly an old slave prison. The pen is composed of narrow cells in three tiers, with three foot corridors between. Heavy iron bars covered the windows and in each cell were manacle supports. Directly above the prison is the house of the late Stephen Girard, an eccentric rich man, who gave Girard college to Philadelphia. It has long been handed down in local history that Girard drove a brisk slave trade and that the basis of his gigantic fortune came from that source. The estate is now estimated at several millions.

Girard came to Philadelphia in 1774. In the war of 1812 he made his historical loan to finance the country. After that he worked among the yellow fever victims in Philadelphia after nearly every one else had fled the city. The origin of his fortune has always been a mystery.

The old Girard house is within half a block of the Delaware river, from which secret access would have been easy.

John W. Jordan, librarian of the Pennsylvania Historical society, said that he had recently visited slave dungeons under an old house in Elkton, Md., which correspond exactly to those found to-day.

A curious circumstance connected with the discovery is that for years a legend of haunting has hung around old Water street, between Market and Arch. Stories of underground shrieks, chain rattling, blows, and all the other manifestations have been told. Houses near the old Girard place could not be rented because of this.

WOULD SAVE M'KINLEY HOME.

Dwelling Place of Late President's Ancestors Found in Ireland.

Moline, Ill.—An appeal is made to the American people to save the ancestral home of President William McKinley located in Ireland. Two Moline boys, George E. Holt and Lester R. Crout, on a tour round the world as special correspondents made an investigation in Ireland of the origin of the McKinley family.

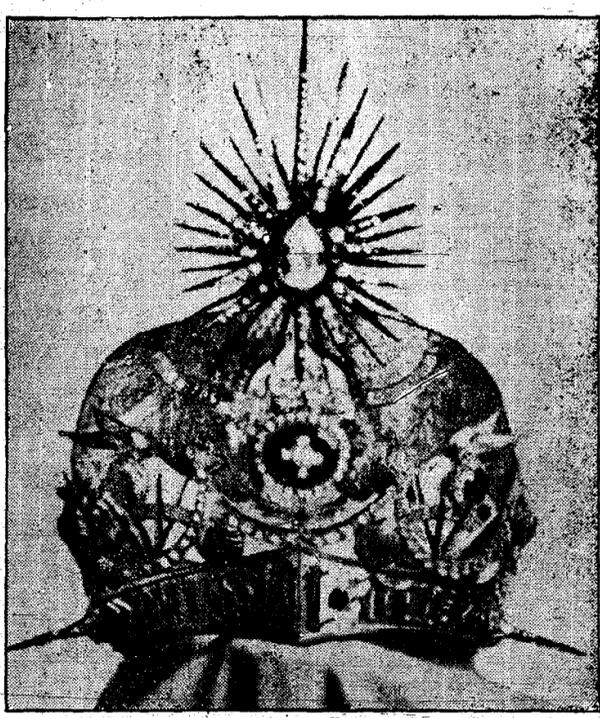

They there came upon a cottage in which the forefathers of the president lived. They likewise found the owner of the land about to tear down the structure. They appealed to him for a respite long enough to allow them to present the matter to the people of the United States and give them time to try and secure a fund for its preservation.

He agreed to three months' delay and gave them an agreement to that effect.

The Art of Oratory.

When Thiers was president of the French republic he was about to issue some important manifesto and submitted the draft to a critical friend. "Yes," said the critic, "the matter is clearly expressed, but I miss the ease and fluency of your usual style." "Ah," replied Thiers, "I have not worked those in yet! The ease will come much labor, and the fluency I shall have to drag in by the hair of its head."

The Missing Crown of St. Michael.

A little while ago the famous crown of St. Michael, which belongs to the abbey of Mont Michel, disappeared in the most mysterious manner. Rumor has suggested that it was not stolen, as is generally believed, but that its priestly owners hid it, fearing that the officials of the French government would take charge of it. The crown, which is said to be worth $90,000, is richly jeweled. It was made in 1877 by the jeweler Mellier, and most of the stones were given by pious persons.

THE JUMPING FLIP BUG.

ARIZONA SOCIETY TORN UP OVER NEW GAME OF CHANCE.

It Was Imported from Mexico—Much in Favor Now by the Women of Yuma—Rules of the Game.

Yuma, Ariz.—The high society of this town is all torn up over the evil effects of the flip bug craze. Not since Billy Baker ran off to Sonora with Boney Swan's wife and Boney's four children has Yuma had such a shake-down of its best social set. It is all due to Mrs. Isaac Steppacher's mother, Senora Chiquita Salvadores y Casablanca, of Magdalena, state of Sonora, Mexico, and the common flip bug of the Mojave desert.

Senora Casablanca is a Mexican of the old Castilian lineage. The flip bug is a species of beetle. Senora Casablanca's chief characteristic is a love for rare forms of gambling. The flip bug's only interesting feature is his peculiar ability to jump about two feet in the air when prodded with a toothpick.

About two months ago Senora Casablanca came up from Magdalena to pay a visit to her daughter and her son-in-law, "Ike" Steppacher, who is the "well-known" and popular night clerk in the Golden Eagle hotel, near the railroad station. About a week after Senora Casablanca arrived Mrs. Steppacher sent out cards to the society folk inviting them to a little afternoon affair. On the bottom of the cards, which were the best specimens of the Weekly Scorpion's fine engraving work, were the words "Flip Bug" in old English type.

On the day of the reception the guests came early. Mrs. Steppacher did not keep them in suspense. After passing around the frappe mesal she introduced the ladies to her mother and then led them into the library. In the middle of the room stood a roulette layout without the wheel. There were chairs around for the guests and a stack of chips in front of the banker's place.

The wondering guests were each asked to buy in, blue chips costing four bits and the reds and whites in proportion. Most of the women had come well heeled; the others wrote out I. O. U's. Then they sat down and Mrs. Steppacher's mother produced a flip bug.

The bug, which is a beetle about as big as a three-months-old cockroach, is a very peculiar insect. When caught in the fingers it will play possum and draw all of its six muscular legs up close to its abdomen. When placed

THIS COW GIVES BIRTH TO FOUR CALVES.

Fayette, O.—Nothing that has happened in recent years has caused more interest in this community than the birth of four calves from one cow, which occurred at the home of H. S. Martin, on what is known as the "Racetrack farm," and hundreds have been seen to see the cow and calves.

At first thoughts, except to a well posted stockman, the occurrence may not seem so wonderful, but the farther one goes into the matter, the more it is to be marveled at. A careful search of books and authorities, and consultation with stockmen and veterinary surgeons, reveal the fact that four calves at one birth has never before been reported, and is so far as can be learned, absolutely unknown. Dr. George E. Cook, veterinarian, asserts that, in his opinion, it has never before happened, while Dr. Perry, the oldest veterinary surgeon in this section, says he has lived 75 years, and not only never saw, but never heard of such a thing before.

As to the possibility of a mistake being made, in that the calves were the product of two cows, instead of one, unknown to Mr. Martin, that is disposed of when it is known that every other cow on the farm, of which there were six, had already had a calf this spring, and this was the last cow left to come in.

The cow is just a fairly good grade Durham cow, nothing out of the ordinary. She will weigh about 900 pounds. The father of the calves was a full blood Durham bull, not registered, weighing about 1,700 pounds, who was sold for beef last spring. Two of the calves are males and two females, three are spotted and one all red. All were apparently as strong as ordinary calves when born, and the smallest one seemed as strong and lively as any of the others.

Frank Geiken has it in for the hobo fraternity, and all because the other night one of these microbes called at the store and ordered some groceries, winding up with a request for a certain brand of coffee which was displayed on a high shelf. When Frank climbed to the top of the store at the risk of his neck the expert railroad tie accountant grabbed the groceries and hiked before the astonished merchant realized the situation. Frank gave chase but could not locate the tramp, and now his nearest friends call one by one to extend their sympathy, incidentally inquiring the price of the coffee.—Pellston Journal.

The passengers on the Los Angeles limited of the Salt Lake Railroad, who arrived in Los Angeles yesterday, tell of a prospector who stopped a train running forty miles an hour in the middle of the Mojave desert by flagging it with his hat to secure water for himself and burro. The train crew supplied the man by the bucketful as quickly as possible and started the limited on its way again. An old Nevada law which allows desert travelers who are in distress to stop trains and demand water and compel train crews to provide the needed refreshments, still holds. The old prospector knew it, so did the engineer.—Evening Press.

A young mother chanced to occupy a seat in front of us on a train last week, when an amusing incident occurred. She was vainly endeavoring to quiet her youngster who was apparently about two years old. The young cherub had gormandized vast quantities of fruits, nuts, etc., and seemed to be in great misery and positively refused to be comforted. Finally an old gentleman who was sitting beside the distressed mother, and whom we took to be her father, remarked: "Jenny, I'd larrup that kid." "Oh, I hate to whip a child on a full stomach," said she. "Looks to me like it'd be an easy matter to turn it over," was the quaint reply.

A FOOL FOR LOVE

By FRANCIS LYNDE
Author of "The Crafters," Etc.

(Copyright, 1925, by J. P. Lippincott Co.)

CHAPTER X—Continued.

Calvert acquiesced eagerly, seating possibilities. But when they were out under the frosty stars he had the good sense to walk her up and down in the healing silence and darkness for five full minutes before he ventured to say what was in his mind.

When he spoke it was earnestly and to the purpose, not without eloquence. He loved her; had always loved her, he thought. Could she not, with time and the will to try, learn to love him?—not as a cousin?

She turned quickly and put both hands on his shoulders.

"Oh Cousin Billy—don't!" she faltered brokenly; and he, seeing at once that he had played the housebreaker where he would have been the welcome guest, took his punishment manfully, drawing her arm in his and walking her yet other turns up and down the long platform until his patience and the silence had wrought their perfect work.

"Does it hurt much?" she asked, softly, after a long time.

"You would have to change places with me to know just how much it hurts," he answered. "And yet you haven't left me quite desolate, Virginia. I still have something left—all I've ever had, I fancy."

"And that is—"

"My love for you, you know. It isn't at all contingent upon your yes or no; or upon possession—it never has been, I think. It has never asked much except the right to be."

She was silent for a moment. Then she said: "Cousin Billy, I do believe that you are the best man that ever lived. And I am ashamed—ashamed!"

"What for?"

"If I have spoiled you, ever so little, for some truer, worthier woman."

"You haven't; you mustn't take that view of it. I am decently in love with my work—a work that not a few wise men have agreed could best be done alone. I don't think there will be any other woman. You see, there is only one Virginia. Shall we go in now?"

She nodded, but when they reached the Rosemary the returning engine was rattling upon the open siding. Virginia drew back.

"I don't want to meet Uncle Somerville just now," she confessed. "Can't we climb up to the observation platform at the other end of the car?"

He said yes, and made the affirmative good by lifting her in his arms over the high railing. Once safely on the car, she bade him leave her.

She was shivering a little in the chill wind sliding down from the snow-peaks, yet she would not go in until she had made sure—in a little time her patience was rewarded. The huge engine came storming up the grade on the new line, pushing its three fat-cars, which were black with clinging men. On the car nearest the locomotive, where the dazzling beam of the headlight pricked him out for her, stood Winton, braced against the lurchings of the train over the uneven track.

"God speed you, my love!" she murmured, softly; and when the gloom of the upper canyon cliff had engulfed man and men and storming engine she turned to go in.

She was groping for the doorknob in the darkness made thicker by the glare of the passing headlight when a voice, disembodied for the moment, said: "Wait a minute, Miss Carteret; I'd like to have a word with you."

She drew back quickly.

"Is it you, Mr. Jastrow? Let me go in, please."

"In one moment. I have something to say to you—something you ought to hear."

"Can't it be said on the other side of the door? I am cold—very cold, Mr. Jastrow."

"It was his saving hint, but he would not take it."

"No, it must be said to you alone. We have at least one thing in common, Miss Carteret—you and I. That is a proper appreciation of the successful realities. I—"

She stepped him with a quick little gesture of impatience.

"Why will you be good enough to stand aside and let me go in?"

It would be tantamount to driving me to extremities."

"If you will tell me how I can do it definitely, I shall be most happy to drive you to extremities, or anywhere else out of my way," she said, frigidly.

"Oh, I think not," he rejoined. "You wouldn't want me to go and tell Mr. Darrah how you have betrayed him to Winton. I had the singular good fortune to overhear your conversation—yours and Winton's, you know; and if Mr. Darrah knew, he would cut you out of his will with very little compunction, don't you think? And, really, you mustn't throw yourself away on that Sentimental Tommy of an engineer, Miss Virginia. He'll never be able to give you the position you're fitted for."

Since French was a dead language to Mr. Arthur Jastrow, he never knew what it was that Miss Carteret named him. But she left him in no doubt as to her immediate purpose.

"If that be the case, we would better go and find my uncle at once," she said in her softest tone; and before he could object she had led the way to the Rajah's working-den stateroom.

Mr. Darrah was deep in one of the cipher telegrams when they entered, and he looked up to glare fiercely at one and then the other of the intruders. Virginia gave her persecutor no time to lodge his accusation.

"Uncle Somerville, Mr. Winton was here an hour ago, as you know, and I told him what you had done—what I had helped you do. Also, I sent him about his business; which is, to win his railroad fight if he can. Mr. Jastrow overheard the conversation, purposely, and as he threatens to turn informer, I am saving him the trouble. Perhaps I ought to add that he offered to hold his peace if I would promise to marry him."

What the unlucky Jastrow might have said in his own behalf is not to be here set down in peaceful black and white. With the final word of Virginia's explanation the fierce old master of men was up and clutching for the secretary's throat, and the working complement of the Rosemary suffered instant loss.

Virginia felt that she ought to be decorously sorry for relationship's sake, but the effort ended in a little paean of joy.

"But Uncle Somerville—what will he do?"

"He is with McGrath on the engine, getting himself—and us—to the front in a hurry, as you perceive."

"Isn't it too late to stop Mr. Winton now?"

"I don't know. From what I could overhear I gathered that the ditched engine is still in the way, that they are trying to roll it over into the creek. Bless me! McGrath is getting terribly reckless!" this as a spiteful lurch of the car flung them both across the compartment.

"Say Uncle Somerville," she amended. "Don't charge it to Mr. McGrath. Can't we go out on the platform?"

"It's as much as your life is worth," he asserted, but he opened the door for her.

The shrieking wheels were tracking around a curve into a scanty widening of the canyon. To the left, on the rails of the new line, the big decapod was heaving and grunting in the midst of an army of workmen swarming thick upon the overturned guard engine.

"Goodness! it's like a battle!" she shuddered. As she spoke the Rosemary stopped with a jerk and McGrath's fireman darted past to set the spur-track switch.

The points were snow-clogged, and the fireman wrestled with the lever, saying words. The delay was measurable in heart-beats, but it sufficed. The big decapod coughed thrice like a mighty giant in a consumption; the clustering workmen scattered like chaff to a ringing shout of "Stand clear!" and the obstructing mass of iron and steel rolled, wallowing and hissing, into the stream.

"Rails to the front! Hammermen!" yelled Winton; and the scattered force rallied instantly.

But now the wrestling fireman had thrown the switch, and at the Rajah's command the Rosemary shot out on

COME OF A NOBLE STOCK.
Pride, Dignity and Beauty of the Modern Spaniards.

You may see to-day in any church portal in Spain the somber dignity of Velasquez; the sinister cast of Gauntance of Philip the Second; the nose and proud bearing of a Roman centurion, says the Nineteenth Century. In the Basque province the dignity and the pride of the peasantry are reflected in the graceful carriage and symmetry of movement for which the mo. of that coast and the girls carry- ing pitchers on their heads are justly celebrated. There is no trace of awkwardness in a Spanish peasant, on whose features is stamped the pride of Rome, who will talk to you with the ease and volubility of a Spanish courtier. It is a noble stock.

Though to-day the glory of Spain has departed and the modern Spanish favor a western "bowler," and the women wear Parisian hats, the national type of Spain persists with all its dignity and characteristics. Living types of Murillo's street urchins may be seen in any Spanish village. A group huddled together in some shady retreat; brown, chubby, curly headed, merry little rascals, lurching off a watermelon on picked up in the market, happy as princes in their hempen rags and with their meager morsel. Or you may see the sunny side of Spain as Goya painted it. A dance in the open square, a bridal feast, a bullfighter's carousal, a brawl, an elopement; the apparel less gaudy to-day, but the sun and the types and the spirit are the same.

That brawny picador with his wide-brimmed sombrero, his swarthy countenance, aquiline nose and raven locks, looks for all the world like a Roman gladiator. The lad at his side, with his finely chiseled features, might have flayed on Poppo. And that young girl in her white lace mantilla and the red roses in her warm black hair, such a one Goya would have delighted to portray as she stands there with her delicate head defiantly thrown back, her lustrous eyes aglow with mischief, that graceful line of figure and those pursed and pouting lips.

Training Dog Police.
The training of the young Newfoundlands that M. Lepine adds to his police staff is one of the sights of Paris, says the Century. It takes place in the headquarters of the agents plongeurs, a small building on the quay-side not far from the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Dogs and men enter into the exercise with zest, and there is usually a crowd of onlookers. Only dummy figures are used, but the "rescue" is, nevertheless, a very realistic affair. The big dogs know perfectly well what the exercise means, and they wait with comic enthusiasm until the dummy is thrown into the water and an agent plongeur rushes out on hearing the splash and the outcry of spectators. While the men are busy with lines and life-buoys, the dog plunges into the water, swims to the dummy, watches with rare intelligence for an opportunity to get an advantageous hold; and then it either swims ashore or waits for its master, who brings to the rescue long poles, cork belts, and the like. The more experienced dogs, however, will easily effect a rescue from first to last without human assistance; and it is an inspiring sight to watch them looking for a foothold on the slippery sides of the river bank, and pulling the heavy dummy into a place of safety.

It takes about four months to train the dogs efficiently. They are also charged with the protection of their masters when attacked by the desperate ruffians who sleep under the arches of the bridge in summer. Thus in Paris also the police dogs are a proved success.

A College in Bokhara.
There lay behind the great arch and the domes and the minarets a retired precinct of ancient trees and shaded walks, a grove, in the midst of the city, colonaded in quadrangle by the pointed arches of the students' cells. Under the trees was a sort of summer house or pavilion. Two or three young men were walking in an avenue against the farther colonnade, and on the stone steps of a wide, shaded pool sat several mullahs on their praying rugs.

We visited a number of the students in their cells—monastic little brick-walled rooms where they live the year round (there are no vacations in Mussulman colleges) and for years on end. It is not unusual for a student, after passing the primary school, to spend as much as 15 or 20 years at his higher studies, though usually in such a long course he will go through several different colleges in the order of advancement.

Appropriate.
The boy's fishing pole was fastened under the root of a tree on the river bank, and he was sitting in the sun playing with a dog.

"Fishing?" inquired a man passing along the road.

"Yep," answered the boy.

"Nice dog you've got there. What's his name?"

"Fish?" That's a queer name for a dog. Why do you call him that?"

"Cause he won't bite."

Then the man proceeded on his way.

His Assets.
"What are your liabilities?" asked the lawyer of the bankrupt press agent.

FOR THE BEDROOM.

PRETTY THINGS ARE OFFERED IN PROFUSION.

Knitted Bed-Spread Is Coming Into Favor—Cover for the Pillows—Bolster Rolls for Furnishings.—of Cretonne.

Various materials for making bed-spreads may be found in the shops in the heavy dimities, cretonnes, denims, art tickings and linen taffetas. Some of the newest spreads are of white taffetas printed with different flowers to harmonize with the furnishings of the room. A spread with a border of cretonne to match the border on the curtains, and even the wall-paper, with a trellis or border of the same design, is very attractive. Hand-embroidered linen spreads are also quite the fashion. They are beautiful as well as durable. There is nothing prettier than a bed covering entirely of white. For those who want their bed to look dressy, many new patterns in lace and net coverings are shown.

With the return of old-fashioned furniture, the knitted bed-spread is also somewhat in favor. As a rule, the work is done in squares that are fastened together and then finished with a border of plain knitting or crocheting. This sort of spread is durable, but it is very heavy to launder.

A small spread for the pillows is just as necessary as the large one. Very often the bed-spread is made long enough to cover the pillows. For those who do not care for the old-style pillow sham, a cover is made of an oblong strip to match the spread. When this sort of covering is used, the pillows should be laid flat on the bed. If one has plenty of room the pillows may be stored through the day, and a bolster roll of pasteboard covered with material to match the spread, can be substituted. These bolster rolls, however, are used rather when the bed is dressed in cretonnes than when in the simple white.

DISHES LIKED BY JAPANESE.

Recipes Worth Trying by the Western Housewife.

Japanese Sushii.—Cook a cup of rice in boiling water. After boiling about ten minutes uncover the kettle and add any salt fish. Cook until done, turn out on a platter and pour over it a mayonnaise.

Japanese Shuriko.—Cook rice in salted water until well done. Form into cake on a platter and pour over it a sauce made of red beans cooked in a syrup of sugar and water.

Japanese Salad.—Put half a cup of well-washed rice in boiling water, cooking rapidly for 25 minutes. Drain and dry. Put half teaspoonful salt, a good dash of pepper and six tablespoonful olive oil into a bowl, and after mixing thoroughly add a tablespoonful fine shredded onion and two tablespoonful vinegar. Pour this dressing over the hot rice, toss and stand aside until cold. When ready to serve, cover a round dish with the Japanese crocne, which you can get in the Chinese quarter, and turn the salad in the center, mound fashion. Around the base of this mound arrange a row of sardines, as though swimming, then garnish with red beads cut in narrow threads like fine noodles. Failing the crocne, use lettuce or cress.

Nut Cocoa Cake.

For an icing mix two tablespoons of butter with half a cup of cocoa, add one cup of confectioner's sugar and a quarter of a cup of thin cream or rich milk. ## UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.
Dyspepsia Is Often Caused By Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and Is Therefore a Remedy For Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available. Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Repertise Worn Hearers.
A good story is told of Frances Lady Waldegrave, who long since paid her debt to nature. She was a woman of quick repertise and many husbands. It was soon after her fourth matrimonial venture with Chichester Fortesque, an Irishman, that she appeared in a Dublin theater with the bridegroom. From the gallery a man shouted down to her: "And which is the four do you like best?" From her box her answer rang out: "The Irishman, of course." And the Irish people house rang with applause.

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.
Badly Affected with Sores and Crusts—Extended Down Behind the Ears—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Did you ever hear of a man falling in love with a woman's intellect?

"You'll spy upon a member of my family, will you, seh!" he stormed.

"Out with you, bag and baggage, before I lose my temper and forget what is due to this young lady you have insulted, seh, with your infamous proposals! Faveh me instantly, while you have a leg to run with! Go!"

Jastrow disappeared; and when the door closed behind him Virginia faced her irate fiancher bravely.

"He was a spy, and he would have been a traitor—for a consideration, Uncle Somerville. But I am little better. What will you do to me?"

"So it was a case of the trapper trapped, was it, my dear? I'm sorry—right sorry. I might have known how it would be; a young man would have known. But you have done no unpardonable mischief. Misteh Winton would have found out for himself in a few hours at furthest, and we are ready for him now."

"Oh, dear!" she said. "Then he will be beaten?"

"Unquestionably. Faveh me by going to bed, my dear. Your roses will suffel sadly for all this excitement. I feah. Good night."

CHAPTER XI.
It seemed to Virginia that she had but just fallen asleep, when she was rudely awakened by the jar and grind of the Rosemary's wheels on snow-covered rails. Drawing the curtain, she found that a new day was come, gray and misty white in the gusty swirl of a mountain snow-squall.

Without disturbing the sleeping Bessie, she dressed quickly and slipped out to see what the early morning change of base portended. The common room was empty when she entered it, but before she could cross to the door the Reverend Billy came in, stamping the snow from his feet.

"What is it?" she asked, eagerly.

"Are we off for California?"

"No, it's some more of the war. Winton has outgeneraled us. During the night he pushed his track up to the spur to be thrust with locked brakes fairly into the breach left defenseless by the ditched engine. With a mob-roar of wrath the infuriated track-layers made a rush for the new obstruction. But Winton was before them.

"Hold on!" he shouted, bearing them back with outflung arms. "Hold on, men, for God's sake! There are women in that car!"

The wrathful wave broke and eddied murmurous while a square-shouldered old man with fierce eyes and huge white mustaches, and with an extinct cigar between his teeth, clambered down from the Rosemary's engine to say:

"Hah! a rather close connection, eh, Misteh Winton? Faveh me with a match, if you please, seh. May I assume that you won't tumble my private car into the ditch?"

Winton was white-hot, but he found a light for the Rajah's cigar, easing his mind only as he might with Virginia looking on.

"I shall be more considerate of the safety of the ladies than you seem to be, Mr. Darrah," he retorted. "You are taking long chances in this game, sir."

The Rajah's laugh rumbled deep in his throat. "Not so vely much longer than you have been taking during the past fortnight, my dear seh. But never mind; all's fair in love or war, and we appear to be having a little of both-up heah in Quatz creek, hah!"

Winton flushed angrily. It was no light thing to be mocked before his men, to say nothing of Miss Carteret standing within arm's reach on the railed platform of the Rosemary.

"Perhaps I shall give you back that word before we are through, Mr. Darrah," he snapped. Then to the eddy-ing mob-wave: "Tools up, boys. We camp here for breakfast. Flanagan, send the 215 down for the cook's outfit."

THEY CURE ANEMIA

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Most Successful Remedy for All Forms of Debility.

Anemia, whether it results from actual loss of blood, from lack of nutrition due to stomach trouble, or whatever its cause, is simply a deficiency of the vital fluid. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well.

"As a girl," says Mrs. Jessie Fink, of 23 East Mill street, Akron, Ohio, "I suffered from nervous indigestion and when I was eighteen years old I was reduced in weight to 93 pounds. I was anemic, nervous, couldn't eat or sleep, was short of breath after the least exertion and had headaches almost constantly. I had a doctor, of course, but I might as well have taken so much water for all the good his medicine did me. Finally my vitality and strength were so reduced that I had to take to my bed for several weeks at a time. I could not digest any solid food and for weeks I did not take any other nourishment than a cup of tea or beef broth.

"While I was sick in bed I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I stopped all other medicine and began to take the pills. Soon my improvement was very noticeable. My strength began to return, my stomach gave me no pain and just as soon as I began to take solid food I gained in weight. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills certainly saved my life. I am now perfectly well, have regained my normal weight of 120 pounds and I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful medicine."

These celebrated pills are recommended for stubborn stomach trouble, for all cases of weakness and debility, such as result from fevers and other acute diseases. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Gasoline and Alcohol.

The greater safety of alcohol, as compared with gasoline for commercial uses, is due to the fact that it will not ignite from pure radiated heat, as gasoline does: that water will extinguish burning alcohol while it will only spread a fire of gasoline, and that the flames of burning alcohol radiates very little heat while that of gasoline radiates heat very rapidly.

Longest and Oldest Tunnel.

The near completion of the Pennsylvania tunnel reminds the American Israelite of the oldest known tunnel in the world, that of Shiloh, near Jerusalem. It was used as an aqueduct. The famous inscription, discovered a few years ago, celebrates the first meeting of the diggers from both sides. Newspapers did not appear in those days, and so the event cannot be exactly dated, but it most probably took place under King Hezekiah, about 700 B. C., and is an interesting testimony to the high state of civilization among the Jews at a time when Europe was inhabited by savages.

The just man made of his a pare All clear without a flaw, Nor summer sun nor winter wind Affected what he saw.

The wise man pondered long and well How best the search to aid, Then taking up the crystal gift Of his a mirror made.

AN UNBILLED PLAY

By MARY WALTER DRUMMOND.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

She had withdrawn to a secluded corner of the lobby and stood tapping her foot impatiently on the tiled floor. It was a fearful night outside. Nothing but the unparalleled success of Mlle. Dupont would have insured such a large house. It was the last performance, so, in spite of the "war of the elements," Mlle. was encouraged by the largest audience of the week. The lobby was rapidly emptying. There was a grand rush for carriages and cars. Her escort had hurried out into the rain, but the carriage was nowhere to be found. He rushed back and telephoned. The carriage had started, they said. Every vehicle was in use, had been the invariable answer to his call at the livery stables. There seemed nothing to do but wait. And yet, August Parker did not know how to wait gracefully.

"I will go find one myself," he said to her. "You wait here; I won't be long and the carriage will probably arrive in the meantime."

She soon became conscious of the casual glances thrown in her direction. She drew her opera cloak closer about her light dress and drew farther back into the shadow.

One man, especially, she noticed watching her. His persistent scrutiny was annoying. And yet there was nothing familiar or offensive in his glance. Suddenly he began to move, but not toward the door; she observed. No—yes—he was coming in her direction. She was too surprised to move. She just stood and waited to see what would happen next.

"May I, dare I, speak to Mlle. Dupont?" The voice was cultured and low. "I have tried so hard to get an introduction. I am a stranger in the city and so my efforts have proved in vain. I have attended every performance since the first. Perhaps Mlle. has seen my card before," he said, with a slight smile, as he handed her the small piece of pasteboard.

She was thinking how handsome his eyes and teeth were, as she let her eyes rest on the card. "John Faircourt" meant nothing to her, but she tried to smile understandingly. He seemed to realize that she did not know him.

"How stupid in me," he broke forth, suddenly. "I forgot how many admirers Mlle. has and how many flowers she receives. I was presumptuous to expect her to remember me among so many."

At the word "flowers" her face brightened.

"Oh, pardon, Monsieur," she cried, in her soft voice, with its fascinating French accent, "how could I be so negligent? The flowers were too beautiful. I thank monsieur very, very much. I never wear my flowers," she continued, with a smile, as she saw him glance involuntarily at her dress. "I cannot wear them all, and I fear to offend my many friends."

"I understand perfectly," he said. "But why does Mlle. stand here?" he asked, abruptly. "I fear she may be cold."

She shrugged her pretty shoulders deprecatingly and answered with a faint smile.

"My carriage failed to come and my friend, Monsieur Parker, has gone to get one for me. He is so impatient," she replied, with a low laugh. "He is all rush and bustle and hurry, all the time. It always makes me excited to think about his funny ways," she said.

She seemed wholly unconscious of John Faircourt's admiring gaze as she rattled on. As for him, he hardly heard what she was saying. He was only conscious of the soft, musical voice, the masses of waving red, gold hair, the snowy skin and red lips, half concealing the small white teeth behind them.

Suddenly she turned toward the door, a quick blush spreading over her cheek.

"I don't understand it," she said, impatiently. "Thomas should be here. He never treated me so before. They will be closing up the theater soon."

"Not while Mlle. is here, surely," answered Faircourt, with attempted gallantry.

"The management does not arrange to keep the theater open to suit Mlle.'s convenience," she said, with a slight sneer. "Mlle. is useful to the theater only so long as she is before the footlights."

Faircourt fancied he detected a note of bitterness in her voice. There was a strange look on her face he could not interpret. He had an inexplicable feeling that she wished to get away from him.

"May I call on Mlle. before she leaves," he ventured, trying to suppress the eagerness he felt in his heart.

"I go to-morrow night," she replied, "but I shall be at home to-morrow afternoon. I am stopping at the 'Continental,' you know."

He had heard that she was staying at the 'Gordon House,' but 'Dame Rumor is uncertain authority.

"In case you forget, I shall write it on your card," she continued with a tone of coquetry. "Perhaps you would like Mlle. Dupont's autograph. I have been told formerly that it was a much valued possession. Your pencil, please."

August Parker rushed in at that moment, dripping with rain, his handsome evening clothes ruined and his temper in not much better condition. "Thomas has at last arrived, Miss Faircourt's presence. After hunting all over town for him, or some other carriage, I met him at the corner, driving leisurely along. He said that Nancy fell down and so he went to the stable for another horse. The scoundrel! to keep you waiting this long, and all alone, too."

Either the girl's slight smile, or the calm ensuing after his storm of words, caused Parker to notice Faircourt for the first time. A slight frown gathered between his brows. But the girl was not to be daunted now.

"Mr. Faircourt, allow me to present Mr. Parker," she said quietly.

Both men acknowledged the introduction somewhat stiffly. The situation was strained.

"We must hurry; the folks will be worried," the girl continued. "Au revoir, Monsieur," she murmured softly. She did not glance at his face as she spoke. His eyes, however, were averted. He seemed not to hear the whispered farewell. But the girl did not soon forget the tall, erect figure, standing motionless in the brightly lighted lobby. She felt her "au revoir" slightly inadequate.

John Faircourt stood as one stunned. He heard the door close after them, he heard the creaking of the ice under their feet and the horses slipping as the carriage started, but all as in a dream.

It was only as a gay group came laughing and talking into the lobby that he fully realized the situation. Five or six men surrounded a flashily dressed actress and banded jokes with her.

"I wager a diamond sunburst, it is so," he heard one exclaim. Another shouted, "Good boy, the governor must have struck it rich in Texas."

"I'll take you up on it," a laughing feminine voice replied. At this, all the men laughed loudly.

"What is the 'fair Dupont's stake'?" asked one.

"A kiss. I'll have a kiss or nothing," cried the one who had made the bet. All the men clapped him on the back and urged him on.

"It's a go," she cried, with a bold glance, "but I'll win." She added, with a laugh in which all the men joined.

These were the parting words that Faircourt heard as the door closed. They sufficed to bring him back to earth with a thud.

The "fair Dupont" of the wager was Mlle. Dupont, the beautiful French actress he had worshiped from afar. He recognized the red gold hair, the fair, painted skin, the curving lips and graceful form. The voice, too, with its slight accent called up the "Camille" of the play.

But all were robbed of the glamor the stage had lent them, all stood out boldly in their artificiality. She was not the woman he had worshiped from afar.

He clenched his fist suddenly and his fingers crushed the card that lay within, forgotten until now—the card that other one had given him. He smoothed out the crumpled pasteboard and read the written words:

"Can you forgive a girl whose love of adventure overpowered her sense of propriety and kindness? I knew you said you were a stranger I knew you had not heard of my strange likeness to Mlle. Dupont, so I yielded to my love of a practical joke. Elizabeth Fairley."

It was written very fine and on both sides of the small card.

Faircourt felt strangely dazed. He turned abruptly and went out into the driving rain. The only ray of hope in the whole confusion was the "au revoir, monsieur," and he determined that, if possible, it should not be "good-by."

His Patience Ended.

Duncan, aged 2½, had been naughty. To punish him, his mother tied him in his high chair and kept him there for one hour by the clock.

His father got home before the hour was quite up, and asked the youngster why he was tied up.

"Father," replied Duncan, pointing an accusing finger at his mother, "I'm completely surprised at that lady."—Youth's Companion.

Women have much to do, so many pains to suffer, so many critical periods to go through, that it is important to keep the kidneys well, and avoid the backache, blearing-down, dizziness, languor and other common signs of weak kidneys.

Mrs. Charles E. Smith, of 22 Boyden St., Woonsocket, R. I., says: "My kidneys were weak from childhood, and for eight or ten years past my back was very painful and I had many annoying symptoms besides. When I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I weighed only 120. To-day I weigh 165, and am in better health than for years. Doan's Kidney Pills have been my only kidney medicine during four years past. They bring me out of every attack."

A brother who was always suggesting amendments moved an amendment that the committee be instructed to procure round white balls and square black balls. Another brother asked him to describe a square ball, which brought the house down and caused the mover of the amendment to ejaculate: "You think you are a smart, don't you?"

Rulers Look for "Rainy Day." Nearly all European kings and queens have money invested in foreign countries. Every year the czar and czarine of Russia intrust a large portion of their private savings to the British and French "national" banks.

King Leopold, of Belgium, has a universal reputation, and not an enviable one, as Leopold & Co., rubber merchants. He founded the Congo Free State and is one of the largest rubber and ivory dealers in the world. He is also one of the cleverest of financiers, and knows his way about all the bourses of Europe. King George of Greece speculates largely in agricultural products, follows carefully all the fluctuations of the financial markets and is assiduous in putting his money into good things.

The sultan of Turkey declines to trust any Turkish bank with his savings, which are nearly all deposited in British banks.

A FOOD CONVERT.

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs—they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an adv. I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved."

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way."

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." # OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from female trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.

Our hospitals are full of women who are there for just such operations! It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Margrite Ryan, Treasurer of St. Andrew's Society, Indianapolis, Ind., writes of her cure as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for the trouble from which I suffered. I knew I could not stand the strain of an operation and made up my mind I would be an invalid for life. Hearing how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had cured so many women, I bought a box and tried it. It did me just what I needed. I am now perfectly well and can do my usual work. I feel as if I should like to tell you how much I owe you for what you have done for me. I am, dear Mrs. Pinkham, your grateful friend, Margrite Ryan.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I have been suffering from female trouble for many years. I have tried many different remedies, but nothing has done me any good. I was told that I must have an operation, but I was so afraid of that I could not go through with it. I saw an advertisement for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I bought a box. I tried it and it did me just what I needed. I am now perfectly well and can do my usual work. I feel as if I should like to tell you how much I owe you for what you have done for me. I am, dear Mrs. Pinkham, your grateful friend, Margret Merkley.

Vegetable Compound had saved other women from serious operations. I decided to try it, and in less than four months I was entirely cured, and words fail to express my thankfulness.

Miss Margret Merkley, of 275 3d Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I have been suffering from female trouble for many years. I have tried many different remedies, but nothing has done me any good. I was told that I must have an operation, but I was so afraid of that I could not go through with it. I saw an advertisement for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I bought a box. I tried it and it did me just what I needed. I am now perfectly well and can do my usual work. I feel as if I should like to tell you how much I owe you for what you have done for me. I am, dear Mrs. Pinkham, your grateful friend, Margret Merkley.

Serious feminine troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints, all functional troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement, weakness, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Schloss Store....

The Home of Good Overcoats.

It stands a man in good stead to ask about quality in the clothes he is asked to buy. There are so many short cuts in clothes-making, practiced by big makers as well as little tailors, that a man must keep his eyes open in his own interests. The commonest deception is "flat-iron-faking," which gives shape to any garment at a great saving of hand sewing.

When we speak of our good overcoats, we mean the kind that are of thoroughly dependable quality, of trustworthy materials, as well as those with style.

You Must Go Farther

Than mere style, color, or pattern in your selection; for none of these things count after you have worn the garment a week or two, unless there is the quality of workmanship also. If all these points appeal to you we will be glad to serve you from the largest assortment of Overcoats, Suits and Furnishings in town.
