TILLMAN BREAKS OUT AGAIN IN A PIERCE ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT.

CANAL CONTRACTS OPEN.

How the Contractor Proposes to Get Laborers for the Great Work and Rush to Completion.

Race Prejudice.

Senator Benjamin R. Tillman's bitter speech Saturday attacking President Roosevelt for his ruling on the Brownsville affair, drew a reply from Senator Patterson, of Colorado, and a lively exchange of verbal pyrotechnics in the senate chamber. Senator Tillman was heckled into hotly repudiating the northern democratic party, branding them as "a lot of dirty, low creatures." Senator Tillman in his speech, accused President Roosevelt of illegal action and race prejudice in punishing the 23d regiment of Negroes for the action of a few of its members in creating a riot in Brownsville, Tex.; declared the president guilty of fomenting race feeling by arguing for social equality of Negroes and whites; said the nation was on the brink of a bloody struggle for race supremacy, and declared his personal readiness to do battle beside his fellow southerners for this principle.

The Canal Work.

The opening of construction bids by the Panama Canal Commission today revealed the fact that the president's canal plans have not gone awry and that the canal will be constructed in the shortest possible time if it takes every southern Negro who can be induced to go to Panama to do it. J. Oliver, of Knoxville, Tenn., is the man who about a month ago was negotiating with the president relative to the contract, and who proposed to the president that if other labor failed he would build the canal with American Negroes. Oliver, who, with his partner, Bangs, of Soo canal construction fame, is the low bidder, is expected to get the contract.

Oliver's plan as outlined by himself is this: If he finds that he has to use southern Negroes, he will draft them by armies, and in taking them to the isthmus, he will follow the same method which he has followed in all the large contracts he has carried out in the south and allow them to take along their women. Also, he will permit them to gamble and have the amusements necessary to keep them contented and at work.

Trains Are Snow Bound.

As yet there is no relief in sight for the western railroads. Continued snowstorms and heavy winds are piling the tracks in North Dakota and Montana with such drifts that it is almost impossible to get trains through. Drifts are ten feet high on each side, and the snow accumulates faster than it can be shoveled away. All of the roads have special crews and snow plows working night and day to clear the tracks, but as high winds continue, it is at present impossible to get the tracks clear.

Considerable anxiety is expressed in St. Paul for the passengers on trains which have been stalled two or three days in North Dakota. Food and provisions are being provided by the neighboring villages and also by relief trains. There has been no report of suffering.

After Bailey.

Twenty-eight members of the Texas legislature signed a resolution calling for a sweeping investigation into the conduct of U. S. Senator Bailey, whose term expires on March 4. The charges recite that while a representative of congress and a candidate for the senate, he accepted many favors from the Waters-Pierce Oil Co., a branch of the Standard Oil Co., in return for his political influence in securing the readmission of said company to do business in Texas, after its charter had been taken away.

Kaiser's Threat.

It is reported in court circles that the kaiser threatens to boycott Berlin and take up his residence at Potsdam if the Social Democrats carry the district in which the kaiser lives. The Socialists are making a hot fight to carry the district because they want to flout the kaiser and it is the only district in Berlin which they do not control.

Won't Disarm.

The declaration of the French premier, M. Clemenceau, regarding the necessity that France be prepared for instant war is considered by the German government as sufficient reason for Germans to refuse to join in any movement for disarmament. The question is one that can scarcely be discussed by responsible German statesmen without impatience.

Premier Stolypin and Minister of Justice Chtcheglovitch have been appointed members of the council of the empire of Russia. They retain their present posts, however.

At Tchalry, near Monastir, Turkish troops have destroyed a Bulgarian band consisting of eight men.

An Italian named Davis was killed in Buckingham palace, Buenos Ayres, while "looping the loop." Davis had challenged Mephisto, who performs the act nightly and fell to his death while attempting the feat.

The boundary dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay has been submitted to the president of Argentina for arbitration. The president is to demarcate the territory under dispute and the status quo will be maintained until the matter is definitely settled.

LABOR OPPOSES WAR

A move for a general arbitration treaty, a periodic world assembly, impartial investigation of all difficulties before hostilities are engaged in by nations, and the immunity of private property at sea in time of war was initiated by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, at Logansport, Ind.

In pursuance of a resolution adopted at the Minneapolis convention of the federation, the matter was submitted to the delegates to the Wash. Valley Labor association and endorsed. The association will communicate with the Indiana congressmen and senators on the subject.

"The trade union movement from its inception," declares President Gompers "has been opposed to war, its brunt falling upon the working people. While it may not be practical to ask immediate disarmament of all countries, the time demands that the extraordinary increase in armed naval and military forces be restricted."

And They Shook Hands.

The hearty shaking of hands amid the applause of the members of the house of representatives was the closing incident in the threatened fight between Rep. Gaines, of Tennessee, and Rep. Mahon, of Pennsylvania.

The row started during the discussion over the bill to dock members for being absent from the house. While speaking in favor of the bill Mr. Gaines pointed out Mr. Mahon as a member who was absent from his seat 95 per cent of the time.

Mr. Mahon was on his feet in an instant. "Any man who charges me with being away from this house 95 per cent of the time tells an untruth."

Mr. Gaines started down the aisle from his seat. "No man can tell me I lie," exclaimed the Tennessean.

The men were prevented by friends from coming to a clinch. They were surrounded and an effort made to bring about a reconciliation, which was successful.

Mr. Mahon rose to a question of personal privilege. He said that he did not desire to impugn the motives which prompted Mr. Gaines to utter what was an untruth about his absence from the house, but he desired to say that his informant was incorrect.

Not to be outdone in chivalry, Mr. Gaines immediately arose, and, showing deep feeling, said that the gentleman from Pennsylvania had always been his friend, but that he had been goaded beyond endurance, not only today, but on a former occasion. He regretted extremely the turn affairs had taken.

"Are you satisfied with that?" he asked, pointing to Mr. Mahon.

The Terra Cotta Wreck.

The coroner's inquest in Washington over the Terra Cotta wreck of Sunday night, December 30, in which 53 people were either killed or injured, held for the action of the grand jury Harry H. Hildebrand, engineer of the "dead" train 2,120; Frank F. Hoffmeyer, conductor of that train; P. F. Dent, night train dispatcher at Baltimore; William E. McCauley, division operator of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad; B. L. Vermillion, engineer of local train No. 66, into which 2,120 crashed; George W. Nagle, conductor of train No. 66; J. W. Kelly, Jr., trainmaster of the Baltimore & Ohio, and William M. Dutrow, the telegraph operator at Silver Spring. All the men have been arrested. Operator Dutrow is held most to blame, but the others are held as responsible in a lesser degree for the deaths.

The New Shah.

The enthronement of the new shah of Persia, Mohammed Ali Mirza, has been fixed for the Chadir festival, the festival of the lake, which will be celebrated on February 2. The selection of this date is regarded as very auspicious, it being the anniversary of the day upon which the prophet, standing at the side of the lake, proclaimed that Mohammed Ali Mirza was his own flesh and blood.

The Army Bill.

By a vote of 27 to 50, the house, in committee of the whole, having the army bill under consideration, refused to strike out an item of $1,000,000 for the purpose of paying the expenses of regiments, battalions, squadrons and batteries of the organized militia to participate in such brigade or division encampments as may be established for the field instruction of the troops of the regular army.

Cut It Out.

As reported to the senate the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill does not contain a provision for an increase of the salaries of the vice-president, the speaker and members of the cabinet. The house increased the salaries of each of these officials to $12,000 a year, but the senate committee on appropriations has eliminated the provision.

Out of Coal.

Unless the coal situation is relieved San Francisco will suffer seriously. There is at present in the city little more than seven days' supply of fuel. There is talk of a movement to ask the Southern Pacific Co. to sell half of its reserve supply of coal to relieve the situation. The railroad company has stored away somewhere about 200,000 tons.

Gen. Magglolo, commandant of artillery, is dead in Algiers.

Antonio Montes, one of the foremost matadors of Spain, was fatally gored by a bull in a fight yesterday. Montes was about to place the sword, when the bull caught him.

The coming visit of Secretary of State Root to Earl Gray, governor-general of Canada, elicits favorable comment by officials and in the British press. The opinion expressed is that the visit foreshadows better relations between the United States and Canada.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Isabel Irving

This clever and popular young actress appears as the "play actress" in "The Toast of the Town," in which she has made a hit.

LEADING MAN WAS ENVIOUS.

He Permitted the Heroine to Faint Without Falling.

When Rose Stahl, who is now appearing in New York in James Forbes' comedy, "The Chorus Lady," was playing a round of parts with a stock company in a western city her success aroused the envy of the leading man, who, prior to her arrival, had occupied the position of first favorite with the public. Because of her popularity the management decided to revive "Camille" with the actress in the title role. Rehearsals progressed satisfactorily. The leading man had apparently discarded his attitude of unfriendliness and was the acme of courtesy and good will.

The opening night arrived and the performance went beautifully until the fourth act, when Armande angrily hurls money upon Camille, who, according to all stage traditions, is supposed to be overcome and fall fainting upon the floor. The leading man, who was a temperamental and somewhat hysterical individual, achieved this climax in a perfect whirlwind of passion, but at the conclusion, to the great surprise of his fellow players, he toppled over upon the floor.

Miss Stahl had already closed her eyes and begun to make an effective stage faint, when she heard a resounding whack at her feet. She cautiously opened one eye and awoke to the situation, the leading man had stolen her "business" and left her wavering in midair. There was nothing for her to do—and she did it. So the curtain rang down.

The following day the papers commenting on the performance took Miss Stahl to task for defying tradition and queried concerning her authority for "fainting on her feet."

High Salaries in Vaudeville.

High salaries for vaudeville performers do not prevail alone in the United States, although here the average is thought to be higher than anywhere else. Mrs. Langtry is credited with receiving $3,000 per week from American managers and Lillian Russell is quoted at $2,500. But there are performers abroad whose names are unknown on this side of the water who receive far greater than a presidential salary. Harry Lander, the Scotch comedian, declined all American offers on the ground that he can earn $1,500 per week at home and he is booked ahead until 1912. There are a dozen other English vaudeville artists who play almost continuously in London and are so well repaid for their efforts that nothing can tempt them to leave home.

Scheff Will Stay Hitched.

Fritz Scheff doesn't want any more of grand opera. A Berlin impresario, during the prima donna's trip abroad, last summer, tried to engage her for a between seasons' continental tour.

"No more grand opera for me," replied the singer; "there's nothing like singing in comic opera, especially in America. Comic opera audiences laugh so—why, it's like telling a funny story to some one who owes you money!"

QUIT EVEN WITH MANAGER.

Doctor Got No Tickets, Yet Would Gladly Tender Services.

A New York physician who has for 15 years been one of the doctors of the actors' fund, and who has attended hundreds of actors with no compensation whatever, wrote recently to a prominent manager and asked for some theater tickets. His request was refused, the manager asking what the doctor had ever done that he should be entitled to receive theater tickets gratis.

The physician immediately replied. His letter contained a brief recital of his services to theatrical people. In conclusion he said:

"Despite my services, as named above, I should not have thought of asking you for tickets had it not been that upon the occasion of the death of Mr. Blank you assured me that if you could ever serve me in any way whatever you would consider it a favor if I would call upon you. However, I bear you no ill will on account of your present action. I was very glad to attend Mr. Blank when he died in your box office and I should be happy to do as much for you at any time."

BRIDAL COUPLE SHOCKED.

One Small Error Causes Consternation and Considerable Amusement.

J. Hayden-Clarendon, who plays the part of Lord Shrimpton in Henry W. Savage's "Prince of Pilsen" company, has had quite a little experience in newspaper work.

While a reporter an accident occurred which Clarendon frequently relates with great relish.

"I was sent out," he observes, "to do a society wedding. The bridegroom owned an old-fashioned house, of which he was particularly proud. He told me particularly to mention that after the honeymoon he and his bride would go to live in the 'Old Mansie,' as the house in question was named.

"Imagine my horror when, next morning, I was called up before the city editor. The compositor had set up my carefully written sentence to read: 'The happy pair will reside at the Old Man's.'"

ABOUT THE STAGE.

Aubrey Boucicault, the actor, and Ruth Holt, the actress, who last played in "The Marriage of William Ashe," have been married.

Daniel Frohman will produce "The Spoilers" in Washington. Desmond Kelly, who has been leading woman with Joseph Wheelock, Jr., in "Just Out of College," has been engaged to play the part of duchess.

Louis Mann and Clara Lipman have arrived back in New York after the failure at the Waldorf theater, London, of Miss Lipman's comedy, "Julie Bonbon."

Virginia Earl is about to depart musical comedy and appear in vaudeville in a new one act comedy without music, entitled "The Man from Worcester," which has just been written for her by W. M. Cressy. It will be recalled that some years ago Miss Earl played Ariel in "The Tempest" with Ada Rehan.

SPEAKS FOR TARIFF

Writing from Protectionist Standpoint Miss Laughlin Discovers Many Flaws in Miss Tarbell's Argument.

There are two types of historians: (1) Those who ferret out and present impartially all the facts and then draw their conclusions from the facts; and (2), those who start with a theory and who select and use facts calculated to support that theory, omitting or slurring over such facts as would tend to discredit their preconceived theory.

If Miss Ida Tarbell's history of the tariff is to be classed as a history at all, rather than an argument in support of a theory, then Miss Tarbell must be regarded as belonging to the latter of the two types of historians, at least so far as the first installment of her history is concerned. Here is no impartial marshalling of facts. Such facts as are presented are used as evidence for a theory advanced rather than as a basis upon which to found a theory.

At the beginning of her article Miss Tarbell informs us that "if there was any public question on which the minds of the people of the United States were made up 50 years ago, it was that of the tariff," and then, after referring to the lowering of duties in 1857, she says:

"Not only was the mind of the country satisfied with lower duties and an increasing list of free goods, but it had accepted the idea that a Christian nation should establish as rapidly as possible reciprocal trade relations with its neighbors."

"The mind of the country"—that is, the country had but one mind on the subject—every one was agreed; there was no dissenting voice. This is what Miss Tarbell plainly indicates. Yet, on the very next page, she informs us that

"Mr. Merrill was one of the whigs who had not been satisfied to see duties lowered in 1857, and who strenuously objected to letting in raw products free of duty. He wanted Vermont marble protected. He was one of the few New England representatives who had spoken as well as voted against the bill in 1857, and his speech at that time had been very able. Indeed, it made him the acknowledged head of the active protectionist sentiment left in the country."

There was a protectionist sentiment, then, even according to Miss Tarbell; a sentiment voiced by able and patriotic leaders. Obviously the country had two minds instead of one, and one of these minds was not "satisfied with lower duties," but was strenuously in favor of protection.

Miss Tarbell lets drop another fact which would indicate that the people were hardly settled in favor of a free trade policy as she intimates—viz.: the fact that a large majority of the house of representatives which met in 1859 were in favor of protection. The members taking their seats in 1859 had been elected in 1858. Just one year, therefore, after the time when, according to Miss Tarbell, the united "mind of the country" had been "satisfied with lower duties" and ready to embrace free trade at the earliest possible moment, that same country voted, by a large majority, for representatives in congress who stood for protection. Apparently that mind was not so firmly made up as Miss Tarbell would have us believe.

There have been two or three times in our history when the people have temporarily broken away from their historic policy of protection, and have wandered after the strange gods of free trade, only to turn sharply back to protection when their toying with free trade has brought the logical result of industrial panic. The period of 1846-1857 was one of these times. So was 1890-1893. Each free trade period was followed by a panic, and the panic by a return to protection and prosperity.—Gail Laughlin.

Canada's "Intermediate" Tariff.

Canada's industrial interests have begun to take alarm at the "intermediate" tariff in the new schedules. They are wondering how they will ever know what their tariff protection is going to be when by the stroke of a ministerial pen the lower "intermediate" rate of duties can be put into effect on competitive manufacturers. They are certain to discover the monstrous injustice and the injury to industrial production that are involved in the set of schedules arranged for "reciprocity" purposes. The British preferential, based upon patriotic considerations, is bad enough, but when it comes to doing business under a dicker tariff that for trading purposes may be cut even lower than the British preferential they will learn how utterly pernicious and inexcusable the scheme of tariff hocus pocus for "reciprocity" really is.

Go Slow and Think.

It will be very unwise if congress, responding to the clamor of a few, or of the politicians who are thinking more of their party than of their country, should rush into the matter of tinkering with the tariff. Not many interests are suffering to any extent, and some of the arguments used by those who are noisily demanding a change, are trifles light as air. Nothing will be lost by going slow and thinking, a great deal may be lost by pursuing an opposite policy.—Knoxville (Tenn.) Tribune.

HAS ITS ADVANTAGES.

Selling Abroad Cheaper Than at Home.

The grange, at a meeting in Denver, adopted resolutions against a tariff which allows a manufacturer to sell goods at home at higher rates than he can get abroad for his wares. This resolution, while apparently reasonable, is not logical. There will, of course, always be room for honest differences of opinion in regard to a tariff question. Yet a tariff, which allows a manufacturer to sell at home at a certain price and sell abroad at a less price, has its advantages.

A manufacturer of hats, for instance, might turn out a product and sell it in this country at a fair margin of profit. The tariff protects him and allows him to make a profit. But for the tariff he would be unable to compete with the cheaper labor of other countries.

Now, in supplying the home market he gives work to a certain number of men, and no more. Without extra markets he cannot employ extra men.

In a foreign country the price on his product, due to lower wages paid in a foreign land, is lower than he gets here. He cannot send hats to that country and sell them at the prices prevalent there. He cannot make a profit, because of the high wages he pays, by selling them for less.

But he can sell them in a foreign land at, for example, the very best rock cost price. This competes with foreign manufacturers in lands where no tariff protects them.

By selling over there at cost, he gets an added market. He must produce more hats. He must hire more men. And so, though making little or no profit out of the venture, he is acting as a middleman between foreign hat buyers and local hat buyers, and is giving employment to Americans that they could not have otherwise secured, bringing money into American circulation that would not otherwise have been brought here.

He makes his living off the products that he sells at home at a reasonable profit. He makes the living for the laboring man by selling surplus products abroad at foreign prices, which help keep the wheels of his factory going, though not bringing in a profit, to speak of, for the institution.—Norfolk (Neb.) News.

The Seller's Option.

After a reference to our foreign trade for October, the New York Times says:

"The significance of these figures to our foreign friends lies in the fact that while we have almost doubled our excess of exports of merchandise, we have exercised the sellers' option to take our balance in gold, and with something over to show that we were merely taking our own. This year shows an excess of imports of gold of $96,158,018."

Is it not time for the economist of the New York Journal of Commerce to sit up and take notice? He does not, or at least until the American Economist showed him the fallacy of his views did not, think gold is used to settle balances of trade.

It is not to be doubted that our ability to demand nearly $100,000,000 in gold, in payment for merchandise exported, is the cause of the present difficulty in the London money market, a difficulty which would be intensified by a continued demand. Nor will any one claim that the present demand for productive labor is not in part due to the presence of that gold which our favorable balance of trade enables us to obtain.

Free trade, however, will snarl that part of this favorable balance of trade is due to our selling to foreigners at a less price than American consumers are charged. As if we could sell anything to foreigners without employing American labor.

Does Not Exist.

"The people of the United States have declared many times and with great emphasis for the protective policy. No more plebiscites are needed on this main question of policy. But the details of the tariff schedules, depending on varying conditions and complex circumstances, might very well be left to a non-partisan commission of experts."—Minneapolis Journal.

Non-partisanship on the tariff question does not exist outside of insane hospitals or institutions for the feeble-minded. To be a non-partisan on the tariff is to be wholly without views one way or the other, and a man who in this enlightened age has no views on the tariff question can hardly be considered as intellectually equipped for usefulness on a tariff commission.

One Year of a Tariff Let Alone.

There is no argument for tariff revision downward in the foreign trade statistics. During the 12 months ending with November we imported articles to the value of $1,287,178,924, or $100,000,000 more than for the corresponding period last year. In the same 12 months our exports totaled $1,807,432,075, this being $200,000,000 more than we exported in the preceding 12 months. The excess of exports over imports amounts to $520,253,151, a gain of more than $123,000,000 over the previous year. Perhaps some ardent tariff revisionist will explain how this splendid showing could have been improved by downward revision.

Tariff revision business may look as innocent as the "unloaded gun," and yet prove a veritable Pandora's box when opened.—Scranton Tribune.

SUGAR MAKING.

The Hindus Probably Learned the Art From the Chinese.

The Chinese, who invented almost everything before anybody else heard of it, claim to be the original discoverers of the process of sugar making, and it is said that sugar was used in China as long ago as 3,000 years. This is misty, but the fact is well established that it was manufactured in China under the Tsin dynasty 200 years at least before the Christian era began.

India has put forward a claim for priority of invention, but the probability is that the Hindus learned the art of sugar making from the Chinese and that through them the knowledge finally spread to the western nations. Neahelus, when sent by Alexander on an exploring voyage on the Indus, brought back reports of "honey" which was made by the Asiatics from cane without the help of bees.

At this time neither the Greeks nor the Jews nor the Babylonians had any knowledge of sugar, but later the art of making the artificial "honey" became known and practiced, though its progress and development were exceedingly slow. It was prescribed as a medicine by Galen in A. D. 150, and up to the seventeenth century it had become nothing more than a costly luxury, to be used only on special occasions. Even as late as the beginning of the eighteenth century the annual consumption of sugar in Great Britain had reached only 20,000,000 pounds, whereas it is now more than 2,000,000,000 pounds.

Refined sugar was not made in England till 1650. The art of refining was learned by a Venetian merchant from the Saracens, who sold the secret to him for 100,000 crowns.

A Church Without Services.

There is in London, within a few yards of the beautiful marble arch in Hyde park, a church in which no services are ever held. This Church of the Ascension, as it is called, was built by Mrs. Russell Gurney as a memorial to her husband, and she expressly stated that the edifice was to be used for prayer, rest and meditation solely. A handsome building it is, with its tessellated floor and its numerous fine paintings. Over the door is posted this notice, explaining the true object of the church: "Passengers through the busy streets of London, enter this sanctuary for rest and silence and prayer. Let the pictured walls within speak of the past yet ever continuing ways of God with man."

They Wouldn't Lay.

A bashful young woman from a backwoods county in Virginia went into a local store carrying three chickens. She inquired the price of chickens and at the same time put them on the counter.

"Will they lay there?" asked the clerk, who did not know that the chickens' legs were tied.

She bit her handkerchief in embarrassment a moment and said:

"No, sir; they are roosters."—Lippincott's.

There Were Others.

"That cornet player on the third floor has remarkable endurance," remarked the casual visitor.

"He has," agreed the regular boarder, "but it's nothing compared to the other boarders."—Toledo Blade.

The Best Laxative for Children.

Parents should see to it that their children have natural, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not dose the child with castor or griping pills. They are too powerful in effect, and literally tear the little insides to pieces, leaving the bowels irritable and less able to act naturally than before. Laxative Iron-ox Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs of the entire system. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never grip or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00.

One beauty of a moving picture entertainment and greatly in its favor, is the fact that "nerves" are never tried by rasping, voices, badly placed modulations, wrong inflections, mispronunciations and a thousand and one mannerisms that often mar an otherwise meritorious play, especially when a conceited novice gets into the lime light. That's one reason why the Herald square Moving Pictures have become so popular. This entertainment was booked from Boston last August and has just commenced to play its Michigan time.

Some men think they are turning over a new leaf when they try a different kind of plug tobacco.

Nine-tenths of the unhappy marriages are the result of green human calves being allowed to run at large in the society pastures without any yokes on them. They marry and have children before they do moustaches, they are the father of twins before they are proprietor of two pairs of pants, and the little girls they marry are old women before they are twenty years old. Occasionally one of these gossing marriages turns out all right but it is a clear case of luck. If there was a law against young galoots sparkling and marvling before they have cut all their teeth we suppose the illnesses would evade it somehow, but there ought to be a sentiment against it. It is time enough for these bantams to think of buying a pullet when they have raised money enough to buy a handle of laths to build a hen house. But they see a girl who looks cunning, and they are afraid there is not going to be girls enough to go around, and then they begin to get in their work real spry; and before they are aware of the sanctity of the marriage relation they are hitched for life and before they own a cook stove or a balstead, they have got to get up in the night and go after a doctor, so frightened that they run themselves out of breath and abuse the doctor because he does n't run too, and when the doctor gets there, there isn't linen enough in the house to wrap up a doll baby.

The public seems a little less enthusiastic than formerly for a train that can run so fast it will meet itself coming back.

He is a croaker, a knocker and a calamity howler whose inane drivel could be taken as a joke were it not that strangers to Central Lake and Antrim county who read his vapourings, might believe them. This correspondent goes up and down the highway of country journalism bellowing like a stampeded steer, and upon reaching the bars at the end of the lane snorts out that "this season will be the end of all hopes of ever doing anything at the potato business." Now everyone knows that ne-potatoes are finer than those grown in this locality, and none find reader sale or bring a higher price. When markets are dull and values low as is the case at present, Central Lakers suffer in common with agriculturalists elsewhere. But the best farmers in this section are planning on a large potato acreage this year, and they never allow one season's unfavorable market to interfere with the next season's planting. The potato crop will continue to be one of the most staple and profitable crops that our farmers can grow. They will not abandon it because some hare-brained irreconcilable maverick, having abandoned every variety of culture himself, even to the mental variety, throws his nose in the air, and with blood-shot eyes and distracted bellowings tries to lead a stampede. Holy Island
A Zion Colony?
Newspaper dispatches from Chicago on Monday state that "Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to John Alexander Dowie, is preparing to establish a new Zion on Mormon Island near East Jordan, Mich.
This is not the first time this spot has come into prominence as the home of a new faith. Joseph Smith's followers had a colony there in the early '40s. It is not known whether the site of the new Zion will be on this island or on properties located on the mainland.
Mormon Island while not as large as the present Zion City, would amply accommodate the followers of Voliva and would secure for them all the seclusion from the world they desired. Boat communication with all lake ports via Charlevoix, Mich. is possible, and the spot is regarded as ideal for Voliva's purpose."
Up to this writing Real Estate Agent Loveday who has the selling of the Island has heard nothing whatever of the project beyond the newspaper dispatches.
Gaylor, Mich., Jan. 16—A dispatch from Chicago saying that Wilbur Glenn Voliva, the manager of the Dowie institutions is going to buy the Norman island in Pine Lake is perhaps a little premature. He had not arrived at Boyne City to-day but it is claimed that there has been some one looking over not only the island but large vacant tracts along Pine Lake. It is claimed W. H. White of the White Lumber Co. and manager of the B. C. G. & A. left for Chicago today. It is thought for the purpose of making some progress in the deal. The White Lumber Co. practically control all lands surrounding Pine Lake.—Exchange.

"They're mamma's friends," Anita as answering. "Oldish and tiresome. When you leave I shall go straight on to bed."

"I'd like to—to see your room—here you live," said I, more to myself than to her.

"I sleep in a bare little box," she replied with a laugh. "It's like a cell, friend of ours, who has the anti-germ d insisted on it. But my sitting-room isn't so bad."

"Langdon has the anti-germ fad," she said.

"Yes," after a pause, id in such a strained voice that I oked at her. A flush was just dying it of her face. "He was the friend I oke of," she went on.

"You know him very well?" I asked. "We've known him—always," said she. "I think he's one of my earliest collections. His father's summer ace and ours adjoin. And once—I ees it's the first time I remember eing him—he was a freshman at arvard, and he came along on a orse past the pony cart in which a room was driving me. And I—l as very little then—I begged him to ke me up, and he did. I thought he as the greatest, most wonderful man at ever lived." She laughed queerly. When I say my prayers, I used to agine a god that looked like him to ay them to."

I echoed her laugh heartily. The ea of Mowbray Langdon as a god truck me as peculiarly funny, though atural enough, too.

"Absurd, wasn't it?" said she. But er face was grave, and she let her igarette die out.

"I guess you know him better than at now?"

"Yes—better," she answered, slowly d absently. "He's—anything but a od!"

"And the more fascinating on that ount," said I. "I wonder why omen like best the really bad, danerous sort of man, who hasn't any epect for them, or for anything."

I said this that she might protest, t least for herself. But her answer as a vague, musing, "I wonder—I onder."

"I'm sure you wouldn't," I protested arnestly, for her.

"Can I never convince you that I'm ust a woman?" said she mockingly. "Just a woman, and one man with our ideas of women would fly from."

"I wish you were!" I exclaimed. "Then—I'd find it so—so impossible to give you up."

She rose and made a slow tour of he room, halting on the rug before he closed fireplace a few feet from e. I sat looking at her.

"I am going to give you up," I said at last.

Her eyes, staring into vacancy, grew arger and intenser with each long, eep breath she took.

"I didn't intend to say what I'm bout to say—at least, not this evenng," I went on, and to me it seemed to be some other than myself who as speaking. "Certain things happened own town to-day that have set me to hinking. And—I shall do whatever I can for your brother and your father. But you—you are free!"

She went to the table, stood there in profile to me, straight and slender as a sunflower stalk. She traced the silver chasings in the lid of the cigarette box with her forefinger; then she took a cigarette and began rolling it slowly and absently.

"Please don't scent and stain your ngers with that filthy tobacco," said I rather harshly.

"And only this afternoon you were saying you had become reconciled to my vice—that you had canonized it along with me—wasn't that your phrase?" This indifferently, without turning toward me, and as if she were thinking of something else.

"So I have," I retorted. "But my mood—please oblige me this once."

She let the cigarette fall into the box, closed the lid gently, leaned against the table, folded her arms upon her bosom and looked full at me. I was as acutely conscious of her eyes' movement, of the very coming and going of the breath at her nostrils, as a man on the operating table is conscious of the slightest gesture of the surgeon.

"You are—suffering!" she said, and her voice was like the flow of oil upon a burn. "I have never seen you like this. I didn't believe you capable of—of much feeling."

I could not trust myself to speak. If Bob Corey could have looked in on that scene, could have understood it, how amazed he would have been!

"What happened down town to-day?" she went on. "Tell me, if I may know."

"I'll tell you what I didn't think, ten minutes ago, I'd tell any human being," said I. "They've got me strapped down in the press. At ten o'clock in the morning—precisely at ten—they're going to put on the screws," I laughed. "I guess they'll have me squeezed pretty dry before noon."

She shivered.

"So you see," I continued, "I don't deserve any credit for giving you up. I only anticipate you by about twenty-four hours. Mine's death-bed repentance."

"I'd thought of that," said she reflectively. Presently she added: "Then, it is true." And I knew Sammy had given her some hint that prepared her for my confession.

"Yes—I can't go blustering through the matrimonial market," replied I. "I've been thrown out. I'm a beggar at the gates."

"A beggar at the gates," she murmured.

I got up and stood looking down at her.

"Don't pity me!" I said. "My remark was a figure of speech. I want no alms. I wouldn't take even you as alms. They'll probably get me down, and stamp the life out of me—nearly. But not quite—don't you lose sight of that. They can't kill me, and they can't tame me. I'll recover, and I'll strew the street with their blood and broken bones."

She drew in her breath sharply.

"And a minute ago I was almost liking you!" she exclaimed.

I retreated to my chair and gave her a smile that must have been grim.

"I don't care a damn, since I'm to lose you," said I. "It'll be a godsend to have a hard row to hoe the next few months or years."

She went back to leaning against the table, her arms folded as before. I saw she was thinking out something. Finally she said:

"I have decided not to accept your release."

I sprang to my feet.

"Anita!" I cried, my arms stretched toward her.

But she only looked coldly at me, folded her arms the more tightly and said:

"Do not misunderstand me. The bargain is the same as before. If you want me on those terms, I must—give myself."

"Why?" I asked.

A faint smile, with no mirth in it, drifted round the corners of her mouth.

"An impulse," she said. "I don't quite understand it myself. An impulse from—from—" Her eyes and her thoughts were far away, and her expression was the one that made it hardest for me to believe she was a child of those parents of hers. "An impulse from a sense of justice—of decency. I am the cause of your trouble, and I aren't a coward and a cheat." She repeated the last words.

"A coward—a cheat! We—I have taken much from you, more than you know. It must be repaid. If you still wish, I will—will keep to my bargain."

"It's true, I'd not have got into the mess," said I, "if I'd been attending to business instead of dangling after you. But you're not responsible for that folly."

She tried to speak several times, before she finally succeeded in saying:

"It's my fault. I mustn't shirk."

I studied her, but I couldn't puzzle her out.

"I've been thinking all along that you were simple and transparent," I said. "Now, I see you are a mystery. What are you hiding from me?"

Her smile was almost coquettish as she replied:

I took her hand—almost timidly.

"Anita," I said, "do you still—dislike me?"

"I do not—and shall not—love you," she answered. "But you are—"

"More endurable?" I suggested, as she hesitated.

"Less unendurable," she said with raillery. Then she added, "Less unendurable than profiting by a—creeping up in the dark."

"Yes—Langdon," I replied. "But I've no quarrel with him. My reverse is nothing but the fortune of war. I assure you, when I see him again, I'll be as friendly as ever—only a bit less of a trusting ass, I fancy. We're a lot of free lances down in the street. We change sides whenever it's expedient; and under the code it's not necessary to give warning. To-day, before I knew he was the assassin, I had made my plans to try to save myself at his expense, though I believed him to be the best friend I had down town. No doubt he's got some good reason for creeping up on me in the dark."

"You are sure it was he?" she repeated.

"He, and nobody else," replied I. "He decided to do me up—and I guess he'll succeed. He's not the man to lift his gun unless he's sure the bird will fall."

"Do you really not care any more than you show?" she asked. "Or is your manner only bravado—to show off before me?"

"I don't care a damn, since I'm to lose you," said I. "It'll be a godsend to have a hard row to hoe the next few months or years."

She went back to leaning against the table, her arms folded as before. I saw she was thinking out something. Finally she said:

"Less unendurable," she said with raillery. Then she added, "Less unendurable than profiting by a—creeping up in the dark."

I thought I understood her better than she understood herself. And suddenly my passion melted in a tenderness I would have said was so foreign to me as rain to a desert. I noticed that she had a haggard look. "You are very tired, child," said I. "Good night. I am a different man from what I was when I came in here."

"And I a different woman," said she, a beauty shining from her that was as far beyond her physical beauty as—love is beyond passion.

She snatched it away.

"If you only knew!" she cried. "It seems to me, as I realize what sort of woman I am, that—I am almost worthy of you!" And she blazed a look at me that left me rooted there, astounded.

But I went down the avenue with a light heart. "Just like a woman," I was saying to myself cheerfully, "not to know her own mind."

A few blocks, and I stopped and laughed outright—at Langdon's treachery, at my own credulity. "What an ass I've been making of myself!" said I to myself. And I could see myself as I really had been during those months of social struggling—an ass, braying and gamboling in a lion's skin—to impress the ladies!

But not wholly to no purpose," I reflected, again all in a glow at thought of Anita.

XVIII. A WINDFALL FROM "GENTLEMAN" JOE.

I went to my rooms, purposing to go straight to bed, and get a good sleep. I did make a start toward undressing; then I realized that I should only lie awake with my brain wearing me out, spinning crazy thoughts and schemes hour after hour—for my imagination rarely lets it do any effective thinking after the lights are out and the limitations of material things are wiped away by the darkness.

I dressed myself again and went out—went up to Joe Healey's gambling place in Forty-fourth street. Most of the well-known gamblers up town, as well as their "respectable" down town fellow members of the fraternity, were old acquaintances of mine; Joe Healey was as close a friend as I had. He had great fame for squareness—and, in a sense, deserved it. With his fellow gamblers he was as straight as a string at all times—to be otherwise would have meant that when he went broke he would stay broke, because none of the fraternity would "stake" him. But with his patrons—being regarded by them as a pariah, he acted toward them like a pariah—g prudent pariah. He fooled them with a frank show of gentleness, of honesty to his own hurt; under that cover he fleeced them well, but always judiciously.

That night, I recall, Joe's guests were several young fellows of the fashionable set, rich men's sons and their parasites; a few of the big down town operators who hadn't yet got hipped on "respectability"—they playing poker in a private room—and a couple of flush-faced, flush-pursed chaps from out of town, for whom one of Joe's men was dealing faro from what looked to my experienced and accurate eye like a "brace" box.

Joe, very elegant; too elegant in fact, in evening dress, was showing a new piece of statuary to the oldest son of Melville, of the National Industrial bank. Joe knew a little something about art—he was much like the art dealers who, as a matter of business, learn the difference between good things and bad, but in their hearts wonder and laugh at people willing to part with large sums of money for a little paint or marble or the like.

As soon as Joe thought he had sufficiently impressed young Melville, he drifted him to a roulette table, left him there and joined me.

"Come to my office," said he. "I want to see you."

He led the way down the richly carpeted marble stairway as far as the landing at the turn. There, on a sort of mezzanine, he had a gorgeous little suit. The principal object in the sitting-room or office was a huge safe. He closed and locked the outside door behind us.

"Take a seat," said he. "You'll like the cigars in the second box on my desk—the long one." And he began turning the combination lock. "You haven't dropped in on us for the past three or four months," he went on.

"No," said I, getting a great deal of pleasure out of seeing again, and thus intimately, his round, ruddy face—like a yachtman's, not like a drinker's—and his shifty, laughing brown eyes.

"The game down town has given me enough excitement. I haven't had to continue it up town to keep my hand in."

"I've noticed that you are getting too swell to patronize us fellows," said he, his shrewd smile showing that my polite excuse had not fooled him. "Well, Matt, you're right—you always did have good sound sense and a steady eye for the main chance. I used to think the women'd ruin you, they were so crazy about that handsome mug and figure of yours. But when I saw you knew exactly when to let go, I knew nothing could stop you."

By this time he had the safe open, disclosing several compartments and a small, inside safe. He worked away at the second combination lock, and presently exposed the interior of the little safe. It was filled with a great roll of bills. He pried this out, brought it over to the desk and began wrapping it up. "I want you to take this with you when you go," said he. "I've made several big killings lately, and I'm going to get you to invest the proceeds."

THE PASSENGER WAS ON TIME

Distinction Won by a Florida Cracker.

"A few days ago," said a man, "I read a good little newspaper story of how one of the largest Atlantic liners was held a moment at her pier in New York for a baby's kiss."

"The father, who was to sail for Europe, saw the child's outstretched arms, rushed down the gang plank, gave the little one a hug and a kiss and would have missed getting aboard if the men at the tackles had not held the plank suspended for him while you could count ten. The story," continued the man, smiling, "reminded me of the holding of a steamship for three-quarters of an hour for one steerage passenger."

It was about the time of the Charleston earthquake. In those days you went to Charleston from New York by the vessels of the old Charleston line, and from there to Jacksonville, Fla., and landings on the St. John's river as far up as Palatka by a trim little steamship, the City of Palatka. Capt. Leo Vogel was her master.

"He was at sea with his vessel off Charleston when that city was partly wrecked by earthquake. At that season of the year, when some of the regular boats were laid off for their summer repairs, the City of Palatka made the entire trip to New York, calling at Charleston each way. When he arrived at New York just after the earthquake Capt. Vogel gave a reporter an interesting story of how the earthquake affected his vessel at sea."

"The City of Palatka, by the way, was perhaps the only steamship of her time that made part of her regular trip through four or five feet of mud. This she did every time she crossed the bar in the narrows of the St. John's river just below Palatka."

"She was sold eventually for use on the Pacific side, went around the Horn and was burned a few years later at some port, I think, on Puget Sound. Capt. Vogel afterward was with the Clyde line as pilot for all their Florida steamships over the dangerous St. John's river bar at Mayport. By hustling back by rail from Charleston to Jacksonville and vice versa he managed to pilot every steamship in the service in those days across the bar going in and coming out."

"Well, to get back to my story, one afternoon when the City of Palatka, bound up the river, came along to the Green Cove Spring landing, forty-five miles north of Palatka a typical Cracker from back in the pine woods, carrying a black oilcloth satchel, started to board the vessel. On being asked where he was going he allowed he was bound for 'York.'

"He had been told, he said, that the ship would not make the Green Cove Spring landing on coming down the next morning and he reckoned he had better get aboard now."

"Capt. Vogel overheard the talk and said to the Cracker:

"The City of Palatka will be at this landing on her way to New York at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning. Be here then, and you will get aboard all right."

"But maybe you'll get here and go on before that, and I won't get to 'York,'" said the Cracker.

"You be here at 8 o'clock," said the captain, "and you won't get left."

The next morning at about 7 o'clock the City of Palatka rounded the channel beacon off Green Cove Spring, and in fifteen minutes was alongside the landing. The Cracker passenger was not among those waiting on the pier.

"He had not shown up when everybody and everything else that was going north was aboard. Then began a roaring of the ship's steam gong that resounded through the pine woods and woke up the owls in the water paks along shore."

"For forty-five minutes the steamship lay at the pier and kept her gong sounding. The passengers, many of them well to do Northerners—bound up from their winter homes, began to talk as to the cause of the delay."

"One explanation had it that Pierre Lorillard had telegraphed from down the river, offering a large sum to have the vessel held till he could come up in his steam yacht and take passage for New York."

"At about three minutes before 8 o'clock there was seen coming leisurely down the pier a two wheeled cart drawn by a gray mule. On the bottom boards of the cart, with her back toward the mule, sat a Cracker woman in a calico gown and a checkered gingham sunbonnet, and with her feet hanging over the rear of the cart."

"In the cart was a black oilcloth satchel and astride the gray mule was a Cracker man. At the head of the pier he leisurely alighted, took the satchel from the cart and said, 'Good-by, Mandy,' to his wife."

"As he was going up the gangplank with his big silver watch in his hand he spied Capt. Vogel, who had been walking the bridge for more than half an hour with an untranslatable look in his face, and hailed him with:

"Mornin', Cap. Jest 8 o'clock. Maybe you reckoned I'd disappoint you, but here I am, right on time. Let her go."

"Yes," said Vogel, "you're on the minute."

"Throughout the voyage to New York the Cracker was known and pointed out down in the steerage as the man who held the steamship three-quarters of an hour, and the distinction seemed to please him."

Will Open Up Immense Area of Free Homestead Lands.

The railway facilities of Western Canada have been taxed to the utmost in recent years to transfer the surplus grain crop to the eastern markets and the seaboard. The large influx of settlers and the additional area put under crop have added largely to the grain product, and notwithstanding the increased railway facilities that have been placed at the disposal of the public, the question of transportation has proved to be a serious one.

It will, therefore, be good news to everyone interested in Western Canada to know that an authoritative statement has been given out by C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, that that railway will do its share towards moving the crop of 1907 from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to tide water, and thus assist in removing a serious obstacle which has faced the settlers during recent years. Mr. Hays, who has just completed a trip from Portage la Prairie to Edmonton in a prairie schooner, a distance of 735 miles, which was covered in eighteen days, is enthusiastic about the country.

This will be gratifying to settlers in the Canadian West, even if Mr. Hays declines to be bound by a time limit with the exactitude of a stop-watch. The Grand Trunk Pacific road will be in a position to take part in the transportation of the crop of 1907, and that will be satisfactory to the settlers in that country when the harvest is garnered.

The wheat crop of 1906 in Western Canada was about 90,000,000 bushels, and, with the increased acreage which is confidently expected to be put under crop next year, it is safely calculated that fully 125,000,000 bushels will be harvested in 1907. The necessity for increased transportation facilities are, therefore, apparent, and the statement made by Mr. Hays will bring encouragement to the farmers of the Canadian West, new and old. The opening up of additional thousands of free homesteads is thus assured by the agent of the Canadian Government, whose address appears elsewhere.

SCALY ERUPTION ON BODY.

"When I was about nine years old small sores appeared on each of my lower limbs. I scratched them with a brass pin and shortly afterwards both of those limbs became so sore that I could scarcely walk. When I had been suffering for about a month the sores began to heal, but small scaly eruptions appeared where the sores had been. From that time onward I was troubled by such severe itching that, until I became accustomed to it, I would scratch the sores until the blood began to flow. This would stop the itching for a few days, but scaly places would appear again and the itching would accompany them. After I suffered about ten years I made a renewed effort to effect a cure. The eruptions by this time had appeared on every part of my body except my face and hands. The best doctors in my native country advised me to use arsenic in small doses and a salve. I then used to bathe the sores in a mixture which gave almost intolerable pain. In addition I used other remedies, such as iodine, sulphur, zinc salve, —'s Salve, — Ointment, and in fact I was continually giving some remedy a fair trial, never using less than one or two boxes of bottles. All this was fruitless. Finally my hair began to fall out and I was rapidly becoming bald. I used —'s —, but it did no good. A few months after, having used almost everything else, I thought I would try Cuticura Ointment, having previously used Cuticura Soap and being pleased with it. After using three boxes I was completely cured, and my hair was restored, after fourteen years of suffering and an expenditure of at least $50 or $60 in vainly endeavoring to find a cure. I shall be glad to write to any one who may be interested in my cure. B. Hiram Mattingly, Ven. million, S. Dak., Aug. 18, 1906."

Origin of Starch. The art of starching was not introduced into England until the ingenuity of Dutch women in starching ruffs induced Queen Elizabeth to turn to them when she took to wearing cambric and linen cuffs. In 1564 Mistress Dingheyn von den Plasse, the refugee daughter of a Flemish knight, came with her husband to London, according to an old writer, and set up an establishment for starching, where she not only plied her trade, but instructed English classes in her art.

SEIZED BY A LION

By a Lion Hunter.

"Once on the Orange river, in the Hottentot country, I had a close call for my life, with no one at hand to aid me in distracting the attention of the lion. I had only one white man with me, and he was ill of fever. We had dug a pit on a path frequented by lions coming down to drink, but were much annoyed by other animals falling into it.

"On the first night we caught two hyenas; on the second, a panther; on the third, a wild hog. Those would have been prizes had we not been after lions, and lions alone." On the fourth night I stationed a couple of natives in a tree near the path to frighten off all game but lions. They were hunters, and knew the tread of a lion from that of any other beast.

"When going down to drink the lion generally sniffs the air, probably to find what game is abroad. On a rough path his tread is as heavy as a man's and no one who has hunted him need be afraid of making a mistake.

"On this night, after the natives had driven several worthless animals away, a large lion and lioness came down the path. When first discovered the lion was ahead, but he got the scent of the men in the tree, and stopped short to growl and sniff, while the lioness, who was, perhaps, very thirsty, advanced slowly and went down into the pit.

"The pit was two miles from our camp, and we heard nothing of the row which took place when the lion discovered the trick played upon his mate. He tore around for a spell like mad, and then lay down at the foot of the tree and besieged the men. As soon as it was daylight I left camp on horseback to ride over and see what luck I rode straight for the place, and when within 40 rods called to the men.

"They answered at once, and though I could not make out what they said, I knew that they were excited over something. I was riding around a clump of trees onto an open space, when my horse suddenly started. Next instant I was on the ground and a lion standing over me, while I could hear the horse tearing away through the scrub like mad. The lion had pulled me down, nearly tearing the back out of my jacket, but not drawing blood with his claws.

"As in a previous case, I was not frightened, because it had occurred so suddenly that I had not had time to lose my nerve. I was on my left side, bareheaded, and the lion stood for a moment with his right paw on my shoulder, looking at the horse.

"The natives saw the fleeing horse, knew very well what had happened to me, and at once descended the tree and made for camp. I did not blame them any and perhaps that very action saved my life. I had time to collect my thoughts in that single instant, and as I had routed one lion by barking like a dog, I decided to follow the same plan in this case.

"But, as I said before, lions are as unlike as men. At my first bark this fellow growled savagely, and gave me a terrible bite on the hip. Had I cried out at this, or made any struggle, he would have finished me at once. I repressed my feelings and played dead. I had a revolver strapped to my back, but it would not do to reach for it.

"After biting me the lion watched and waited for signs of life, and when he could detect none he seized my right shoulder in his teeth, gave me a shake and a twist and next moment I was being carried off on his back. His teeth did not touch my flesh, and as I lay across him on my side my hand struck the butt of the revolver. I had it out of the holster in a second, and then felt that I had a show. Whether the beast felt any movement or not, he growled at intervals, and his breath came back on me so strong that I was nauseated. I intended to fire into him as he was carrying me along, but he was swaying about so that I did not dare to risk it.

"After carrying me half a mile through the scrub and over-broken ground, the lion halted at the head of a ravine, in which he doubtless had his lair. He turned about as if to see if pursuit had been made, and the muzzle of the revolver came against his left hip. I fired at once, and next instant was flung on the earth, while the lion uttered a scream of pain.

"I was on my knees in a flash, but the beast was ten feet away, going around in circles and biting at the wound. He did not notice me in the least, and I sent another bullet into him just back of the shoulder. He uttered another scream, and instead of rushing at me, as I fully expected, made a leap into the ravine, where I could hear him running for some distance.

"I was badly shaken up, but I lost no time in getting out of the neighborhood, and in the course of an hour reached camp. Nearly everybody was out looking for me.

"Now see how inconsistently that lion acted. He came out into the open ground and charged the party of over 20 men, although they had not disturbed him. He had run from me in his surprise. He knocked over a native as he charged, but was then riddled with bullets and gave up the ghost."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

UTTERLY WORN OUT.

Vitality Sapped by Years of Suffering with Kidney Trouble.

Capt. J. W. Hogun, former postmaster of Indianola, now living at Austin, Tex., writes: "I was afflicted for years with pains across the loins and in the hips and shoulders. I had headache also and neuralgia. My right eye, from pain, was of little use to me for years. The constant flow of urine kept my system depleted, causing nervous chills and night sweats. After trying seven different climates and using all kinds of medicine I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy has cured me. I am as well to-day as I was twenty years ago, and my eyesight is perfect."

Always to Be Depended Upon.
When a person gets up in the morning with a dull headache and a tired, stretchy feeling, it's an almost certain indication that the liver, or bowels, or both, are decidedly out of order. At such times Nature, the wisest and best of doctors, takes this means to give warning that she needs the help and gentle assistance which can best be obtained from that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, which has been in use for over a century. They are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used when doctors were few and far between, and when people had to have a remedy that could absolutely be depended upon. Brandreth's Pills can be depended upon, and are sold in every drug and medicine store, plain or sugar-coated.

HEADS SHAPED TO ORDER.

German Doctor Explains Causes of Various Formations.

At a recent convention of German naturalists and doctors—Dr. Walcher, of Stuttgart, in an instructive paper put forth a sensational theory to explain the formation of the shape of the head of infants. He maintained that the head of a child could be molded artificially. He found by experience that when a medium-shaped head is placed in a soft cushion the child turns on its back, or rests on the back of its head, in order to free mouth, nose and face. In this manner the head rests smoothly, and a short head is developed. But if the medium-shaped head of a child is placed on a hard under-rest, like a hair mattress or rolled carpet, the child's head turns aside, as it cannot stand any more on its head than an egg, for the muscle of the back is weakened. Therefore, with continued resting on the side a long head is developed. To prove his assertions the lecturer presented a child whose mother and sister are short-headed. The child at its birth had a short head, now after 18 months it is long skulled. If the child had been placed on its back, according to other experiences its head would have been short-shaped. Dr. Walcher did not deny that the shape of the head was inherited, but asserted that it could be greatly influenced by the way the child rested.

COSTLY PRESSURE.

Heart and Nerves Fail on Coffee.

A resident of a great western state puts the case regarding stimulants with a comprehensive brevity that is admirable. He says: "I am 56 years old and have had considerable experience with stimulants. They are all alike—a mortgage on reserved energy at ruinous interest. As the whip stimulates but does not strengthen the horse, so do stimulants act upon the human system. Feeling this way, I gave up coffee and all other stimulants and began the use of Postum Food coffee some months ago. The beneficial results have been apparent from the first. The rheumatism that I used to suffer from has left me. I sleep sounder, my nerves are steadier and my brain clearer. And I bear testimony also to the food value of Postum—something that is lacking in coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason. Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.
Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the inflamed and mucous surface of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co., Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

American Idealism.
Since my first arrival in America I have held that the real spirit is idealistic and that the average individual American is controlled by idealistic impulses. Those who may contradict me can not have sounded the depths of the philosophy of Ralph Waldo Emerson, or studied the life and read the speeches of Abraham Lincoln, and considered their far-reaching effect on the American people. In Lincoln's great character nothing can be more striking than the way in which he combined reality and the loftiest ideal, with a thoroughly practical capacity to achieve that ideal by practical methods. This faculty seemed to give him a far-sighted, almost superhuman vision, which enabled him to pierce the clouds obscuring the sight of the keenest statesmen and thinkers of his age—Baron Speck von Sternburg, in Forum.

THE DISCOVERER

Of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

No other medicine for woman's ills in the world has received such wide spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female illnesses or such hosts of grateful friends as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been curing all forms of Female Complaints, Inflammation and Ulceration, and consequent Spinal Weakness. It has cured more cases of Backache and Local Weakness than any other remedy. It dissolves and expels tumors in an early stage of development. Irregularities and periodical pains, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yield to it also deranged organs, causing pain, dragging sensations and backache. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the female system. It removes that wearing feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, dizziness, faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues". These are indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the organs which this medicine cures as well as Chronic Kidney Complaints and Backache, of either sex. Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

PAINT

There's more in paint than the mixing of colors, lead and oil. Best results can be had only from best ingredients, accurate balance of their proportions, and the best method of mixing or assimilation. But most important of all is the grinding process. Of Rheumatism Calls for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills if You Would Be Easily Cured.

Mr. Frank Little, a well known citizen of Portland, Iowa Co., Mich., was cured of a severe case of rheumatism by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In speaking about it recently, he said: "My body was run down and in no condition to withstand disease and about five years ago I began to feel rheumatic pains in my arms and across my back. My arms and legs grew numb and the rheumatism seemed to settle in every joint so that I could hardly move, while my arms were useless at times. I was unable to sleep or rest well and my heart pained me so terribly I could hardly stand it. My stomach became sour and bloated after eating and this grew so bad that I had inflammation of the stomach. I was extremely nervous and could not bear the least noise or excitement. One whole side of my body became paralyzed. "As I said before, I had been suffering about five years and seemed to be able to get no relief from my doctors, when a friend here in Portland told me how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured him of neuralgia in the face, even after the pain had drawn it to one side. I decided to try the pills and began to see some improvement soon after using them. This encouraged me to keep on until I was entirely cured. I have never had a return of the rheumatism or of the paralysis. The pills are for sale by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y."

Difficult Breathing

Short breath, fluttering, palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the worn-out particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I am glad to say that I am so much improved in health. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me when several doctors failed. I think no other medicine could do for me what Heart Cure has done. My case was bad, bad as it could be at times. I had difficulty in getting my breath, my heart beat so fast at times that I thought it impossible to live without relief. The pain was very severe in my left side, and my nerves were all unstrung. I had almost given up all hope of being cured, and I am sure I would not, if I had not taken the Heart Cure. I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Miles' remedies to all who suffer with heart disease."

The Power of Pictures.

If any questions the power of pictures let him pause for a moment to reflect before giving expression to his misgivings.

Think of the fabulous sums which are paid for the products of the masters. On the other hand, just see how the cartoons and comic sections of the Sunday periodicals are fairly devoured by the public. If a mute picture or set of cartoons holds such sway, how much greater is the attraction of Moving Picture Comedy or Drama. Here we have carefully trained artists in pantomime, interpreting their action exactly as they would before a selected company of critics, every movement studiously exact, so that it is understood by all nationalities, whether able to converse together or not.

The entire audience is moved to laughter, to tears or shudders and vice versa, without a word being spoken, as if by magic.

Where is the author who can claim such results for his play?

Where is the dramatic operatic production today that can keep an audience convulsed with laughter or swayed with emotion as is being done everywhere by the Herald Square Moving Pictures?

If you would enjoy a genuine treat, forget your dignity and be happy with real laughter for two solid hours, why just secure a seat for the Herald Moving Pictures at the Loveday Opera House Wednesday evening, Feb. 6th.

Resolution of Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society.

Whereas in view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of our friend and associate, Mrs. Jennie Glenn and the still heavier loss sustained by those nearest and dearest to her, therefore be it resolved that it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed, to say that in regretting her removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard. Resolved that we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased on the dispensation which it has pleased divine providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best and whose chastisements are meant in mercy. Resolved that this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy be forwarded to the family of our departed friend.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, above brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend.
