Successful Meet.

The Teachers' and Patrons' Association which was held in East Jordan Feb. 15-16 was a very successful meeting. About 65 teachers were present, including almost the entire teaching force from Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Charlevoix and a majority of rural teachers who were within a reasonable distance.

The meeting was called to order at 2:30 p. m. Friday by Supt. Fuller who is chairman of the C. C. T. A. The H. S. assembly room being crowded at that time.

The Rev. Bretz conducted the devotional exercises.

The first number on the program was an address by Rev. Griesby. His subject was: Books That Have Helped Me. He spoke of such authors as Shakespeare, DeQuincy, Ruskin, Coleridge and others, showing very clearly the advantages that teachers may gain by acquainting themselves with the works of such writers.

Supt. Fuller outlined a course for those who teach reading. The teaching of this generally poor taught, though very important subject was discussed to quite an extent by the teachers in general. Mr. Fuller handled the subject of reading in a very excellent manner and the many points that were brought out during the discussion cannot but be helpful to the teaching force of the county.

Miss Lou A. Rice gave a very interesting address, having for her subject: Social Problems in School Work. Her work is the presentation which Miss Rice seemed to think would cure many of the ills now existing in rural districts and, that to secure the cooperation of the patrons, which, strange to relate, some teachers do not have and without which no teacher can be successful, requires tact as well as other branches of school work.

The evening session which was held in the Loveday Opera House, was well attended. Prof. Masselink of Big Rapids was the first speaker introduced. He gave a very interesting talk of thirty minutes, outlining and discussing the various stages in the life of that very interesting animal, generally known as the future citizen of America.

This was followed by the debate between the Traverse City and East Jordan debating teams. The debate was very interesting. As Prof. Masselink very neatly put it, "One was, after hearing an address on one side, thoroughly convinced that Pres. Roosevelt was right in the attitude he has taken regarding the schooling of the Japs in California, but after hearing a speaker on the other side of the question was as thoroughly convinced that the President had no right to interfere."

The speakers all proved to be conversant with this very unpleasant situation. The East Jordan team won the decision.

Supt Fuller opened the Saturday morning session by giving some readings which all present enjoyed. Prin. Nye, of the Traverse City High School read a paper, having for his subject, "Boys," and we are of the opinion that those who listened to the paper carried away many new ideas regarding that very interesting piece of machinery, the boy.

The writer was thoroughly convinced that many of us could do more for the boy than we do if we would take the trouble to make ourselves a little more familiar with his individual peculiarities.

Miss Lucile Smith read a very interesting paper relating to the English work in the 7th and 8th grades. A very interesting discussion followed the reading of this paper. Teachers generally seem to realize that this work is, in many cases, not well done, though it perhaps receives more attention than any other branch of the school work.

Very naturally, the discussion turned to methods. Many helpful suggestions were offered. To just what extent we should teach technical grammar brought out quite a heated discussion and while ideas differed to quite an extent on this point, yet all seemed to agree that the practical education in English was the thing to be sought.

Prof. Masselink gave a thirty minute address during the morning session. He made it very clear to all of us that untiring effort on the part of the teacher was about the only thing that would be sure to bring about the desired results in teaching any branch.

A number of excellent musical selections were rendered during the various sessions and that they were enjoyed was evidenced by the hearty encores. Arrangements were made to hold a similar meeting in Boyne City about March 15 and 16, and one in Charlevoix about the first of May.

While we appreciate the fact that a good many patrons were present, yet we hope that more of them will be able to attend such meetings in the future.

The committee in charge of the meeting wish, in behalf of the visitors, to thank those who so kindly entertained teachers during the meeting.

The officers of the association are pleased that so many of the teachers braved the elements and helped to make the meeting a success.

Very Respectfully,
J. H. MILFORD, Sec.

Southern Folks.

Everything is progressing wonderfully well for the production of Southern Folks which will be produced at the Loveday Opera House Monday evening for the Knights of Pythias under the direction of Mr. Will H. Griffin and everyone who attends the performance will surely feel that they have gotten their money's worth several times over. If they are looking for something to make them laugh they need look no further and if they want to see a clever well written story that never failed to please, everyone they can surely see that. The entire cast have been working some ten days on the production and will take place without a hitch. Mr. Griffin is laud in his praise of the entire cast as everyone seems to be so interested and have worked so hard that an unequalled success is bound to be the result.

The leading character will be in the hands of Mr. Griffin, Frank Popham an old timer will be played by Vernon Payton, Old Bob Travis, a gambler of the old school will be played by Frank Kenyon, Willard Graham the villain of the plot is in the hands of Otto Moyer, Matilda Siddomb, one of the known will be ably portrayed by Miss Beatrice Callahan, Uncle Ben a servant and Pedro a Mexican will not suffer at all in the hands of Harry Horton, Annie Dennison the gambler's wife will be played by Miss Vera Herrick and Leona, Diamond the gambler's daughter by Miss Mary Hunter.

The cast is fine, the play is great, and the cause for which it will be given is surely a good one, so there is not a citizen of East Jordan who can afford to stay away if they at all care for a fine play well produced. The prices will be only 25, 35 and 50 cents. The seats are now on sale at Mack's Jewelry Store. Get them early as every member of the Lodge is hustling with tickets, and chances are that the house will be packed.

"You scoundrel!" she hissed, her whole body shivering and her carefully-cultivated appearance of the gracious evening of youth swallowed up in a black cyclone of hate. "You gutter-plant! God will punish you for the shame you have brought upon us!"

I opened the door and bowed, without a word, without even the desire to return insult for insult—had not Anita evidently again and finally rejected them—and chosen me? As they passed into the private hall I rang for Sanders to come and let them out. When I turned back into the drawing-room, Anita was seated, reading a book. I waited until I saw she was not going to speak. Then I said: "What time will you have dinner?" But my face must have been expressing some of the joy and gratitude that filled me. "She has chosen!" I was saying to myself over and over.

"Whenever you usually have it," she replied, without looking up.

"At seven o'clock, then. You had better tell Sanders."

I rang for him and went into my little smoking-room. She had resisted her parents' final appeal to her to return to them. She had cast in her lot with me. "The rest can be left to time," said I to myself. And, reviewing all that had happened, I let a wild hope send tenacious roots deep into me. How often ignorance is a blessing, how often knowledge would make the step falter and the heart quail!

XXIII.

BLACKLOCK ATTENDS FAMILY PRAYERS.

During dinner I bore the whole burden of conversation—though burden I did not find it. Like most close-mouthed men, I am extremely talkative. Silence sets people to wondering and prying; he hides his secrets best who hides them at the bottom of a river of words. If my spirits are high, I often talk aloud to myself when there is no one convenient. And how could my spirits be anything but high, with her sitting there opposite me, mine for better or for worse, through good and evil report—my wife!

She was only formally responsive, reluctant and brief in answers, volunteering nothing. The servants waiting on us no doubt laid her manner to shyness; I understood it, for thought I did—but I was not troubled. It is as natural for me to hope as to breathe, and with my knowledge of character, how could I take seriously the moods and impulses of one whom I regarded as a child-like girl, trained to false pride and false ideals? "She has chosen to stay with me," said I to myself. "Actions count, not words or manner—A few days or weeks, and she will be herself, and mine." And I went gaily on with my efforts to interest her, to make her smile and forget the role she had commanded herself to play. Nor was I wholly unsuccessful. Again and again I thought I saw a gleam of interest in her eyes or the beginnings of a smile about that sweet mouth of hers. I was careful not to eyerdo my part.

As soon as we finished dessert I said: "You loathe cigar smoke, so I'll hide myself in my den. Sanders will bring you the cigarettes." I had myself telephoned for a supply of her kind early in the day.

She made a polite protest for the benefit of the servants, but I was firm, and left her free to think things over alone in the drawing-room—"your sitting-room," I called it. I had not finished a small cigar when there came a timid knock at my door. I threw away the cigar and opened. "I thought it was you," said I. "I'm familiar with the knocks of all the others. And this was new—like a summer wind tapping with a flower for admission at a closed window." And I laughed with a little raffishy, and she smiled, colored, tried to seem cold and hostile again.

"Shall I go with you to your sitting-room?" I went on. "Perhaps the cigar smoke here—"

"No, no," she interrupted; "I don't really mind cigars—and the windows are wide open. Besides, I came for only a moment—just to say—"

As she cast about for words to carry her on, I drew up a chair for her. She looked at it uncertainly, seated herself. "When mamma was here—this afternoon," she went on, "she was urging me to do what she wished. And after she had used several arguments, she said something I—I've been thinking it over, and it seemed I ought in fairness to tell you."

I waited.

"She said: 'In a few days more he—that meant you—he will be ruined. He imagines the worst is over for him when in fact they've only begun.'"

"They?" I repeated. "Who are they?"

"I think so," she replied with an effort. "She did not say—I've told later, the difference between boasting and simple statement of fact. You will learn that I do not boast. What I said is no more a boast than for a man with legs to say, 'I can walk.' Because you have known only legless men, you exaggerate the difficulty of walking. It's as easy for me to make money as it is for some people to spend it."

It is hardly necessary for me to say I was not insinuating anything against her people. But she was just then supersensitive on the subject, though I did not suspect it. She flushed hotly. "You will not have any cause to sneer at my people on that account hereafter," she said. "I settled that to-day."

"I was not sneering at them," I protested. "I wasn't even thinking of them. And you must know that it's a favor to me for anybody to ask me to do anything that will please you—Anita!"

She made a gesture of impatience. "I see I'd better tell you why I did not go with them to-day. I insisted that they give back all they have taken from you. And when they refused, I refused to go."

"I don't care why you refused, or imagined you refused," said I. "I am content with the fact that you are here."

"But you misunderstand it," she answered coldly.

"I don't understand it, I don't misunderstand it," was my reply. "I accept it."

She turned away from the window, lifted out of the room—you, who love or at least have loved, can imagine how it made me feel to see her moving about in those rooms of mine. While the surface of my mind was taken up with her, I must have been thinking underfoot of the waiting she had brought for, perhaps half or three-quarters of an hour after she left. I was suddenly whirled out of my reverie at the window by a thought like a pistol-thrust into my face. "What if they should include Roebuck!" And just as a man begins to defend himself from a sudden danger before he clearly sees what the danger is, so I began to act before I even questioned whether my suspicion was plausible or absurd. I went into the hall, rang the bell, slipped a light-weight coat over my evening dress and put on a hat. When Sanders appeared, I said: "I'm going out for a few minutes—perhaps an hour—if any one should ask." A moment later I was in a hansom and on the way to Roebuck's.

The door of Roebuck's house was opened for me by a maid—a man-servant would have been a "sinful" luxury, a man-servant might be the hireling of plotters against his life. I may add that she looked the cheap maid-of-all-work, and her manners were of the free and fresh sort that indicates a feeling that as high, or higher, wages, and less to do could be got elsewhere.

"I don't think you can see Mr. Roebuck," she said.

"Take my card to him," I ordered, "and I'll wait in the parlor."

"Parlor's in use," she retorted with a sarcastic grin, which I was soon to understand.

So I stood by the old-fashioned coat and hat rack while she went in at the hall door of the back parlor. Soon Roebuck himself came out, his glasses on his nose, a family Bible under his arm. "Glad to see you, Matthew," said he with sapient hindness, giving me a friendly hand. "We are just about to offer up our evening prayer. Come right in."

I followed him into the back parlor. Both it and the front parlor were lighted; in a sort of circle extending manded. It has always been, and always shall be, my method to fight in the open. This, not from principle, but from expediency. Some men fight best in the brush. I don't. So I always begin battle by shelling the woods.

"No," he said, amazing me by his instant frankness. "The announcement has been postponed."

Why did he not lie to me? Why did he not put me off the scent, as he might easily have done, with some shrewd evasion? I suspected I owed it to my luck in catching him at family prayers.

"When will the reorganization be announced?" I asked.

"I can not say," he answered. "Some difficulties—chiefly labor difficulties—have arisen. Until they are settled, nothing can be done. Come to me to-morrow, and we'll talk about it."

"That's all I wished to know," said I, with a friendly, easy smile. "Good night."

It was his turn to be astonished—and he showed it, where I had given not a sign. "What was the report you heard?" he asked, to detain me.

"That you and Mowbray Langdon had conspired to ruin me," said I, laughing.

He echoed my laugh rather hollowly. "It was hardly necessary for you to come to me about such a statement."

"Hardly," I answered dryly. "Hardly, indeed! For I was seeing now all that I had been hiding from myself since I became infatuated with Anita and made marrying her my only real business in life."

We faced each other, each measuring the other. And as his glance quailed before mine, I turned away to conceal my exultation in a comparison of resources, this man who had plotted to crush me was to me as giant to midget. But I had the joy of realizing that man to man, I was the stronger.

XXIV.

"MY WIFE MUST!"

As I drove away, I was proud of myself. I had listened to my death sentence with a face so smiling that he must almost have believed me un-conscious; and also, it had not even entered my head as I listened to beg for mercy. Not that there would have been the least use in begging, as well try to pray a statue into life, as try to soften that set will and purpose. Still, many a man would have weakened—and I had not weakened. But when I was once more in my apartment in our apartment—perhaps I did show that there was a weak streak through me. I fought against the impulse to see her once more that night, but I fought in vain. I knocked at the door of her sitting-room—a timid knock for me. No answer. I knocked again, more loudly—then a third time, still more loudly. The door opened and she stood there, like one of the angels that guarded the gates of Eden after the fall. Only, instead of a flaming sword, hers was of ice. She was in a dressing-gown or tea gown, white and clinging and full of intoxicating hints and glimpses of all the beauties of her figure. Her face softened as she continued to look at me, and I entered.

"No—please don't turn on any more lights," I said, as she moved toward the electric buttons. "I just came in to see if I could do anything for you." In fact, I had come, longing for her to do something for me, to show in look or tone or act some sympathy for me in my loneliness and trouble.

"No, thank you," she said. Her voice seemed that of a stranger who wished to remain a stranger. And she was evidently waiting for me to go. You will see what a mood I was in when I say I felt as I had not since I, a very small boy indeed, ran away from home; I came back through the chilly night to take one last glimpse of the family that would soon be realizing how foolishly and wickedly unappreciative they had been of such a treasure as I; and when I saw them sitting about the big fire in the lamp-light, heartlessly comfortable and unconcerned, it was all I could do to keep back the tears of strong self-pity—and I never saw them again.

"I've seen Roebuck," said I to Anita, because I must say something, if I was to stay on.

"Roebuck?" she inquired. Her tone reminded me that his name conveyed nothing to her.

"He and I are in an enterprise together," I explained. "He is the one man who could seriously cripple me."

"Oh," she said, and her indifference forced though I thought it, wounded.

"Well," said I, "your mother was right."

She turned full toward me, and even in the dimness I saw her quick sympathy—an impulsive flash instantly gone. But it had been there!

"I came in here," I went on, "to say that—Anita, it doesn't in the least matter. No one in this world, no one and nothing could hurt me—except through you. So long as I have you, they—the rest—all of them together—can't touch me."

We were both silent for several minutes. Then she said, and her voice was like the smooth surface of the river where the boiling rapids run deep: "But you haven't me—and never shall have. I've told you that. I warned you long ago. No doubt you will pretend, and people will say that I left you because you lost your money. But it won't be so."

I was beside her instantly, was looking into her face. "What do you mean?" I asked, and I did not speak gently.

MICHIGAN EVENTS NOTED

REIMOLD'S BODY FOUND FROZEN IN THE ICE OF HURON RIVER.

THE HOLLAND MYSTERY

The Canteen of a Detroit Military Co. Starts a Law Suit—Various Matters of Note.

The Reimold Mystery.

What boys thought to be the body of a muskrat frozen in the ice in Huron river proved to be a human head lying against a large log.

After the ice was chopped away so the body could be extricated, a fire was built and the ice thawed, the gruesome find was identified as the body of Frederick Reimold, of Ann Arbor. He was 41 years of age and disappeared four weeks ago. On his last day, he went to work in lower town, leaving a friend's house at 9 o'clock in the evening. It was a stormy night and Reimold either lost his footing and stumbled into the river or jumped off the bridge in a fit of despondency. The man's friends did not think there was any cause for alarm, as Reimold was unmarried, and they came to the conclusion that he had left the city. Reimold was formerly a farm hand in Freedom township. He moved to Ann Arbor a year ago, bringing with him a bank book calling for $2,000. Reimold leaves a brother in Bridgewater and a sister living in Indiana.

The Lankhorst Case.

The Lankhorst mystery which has baffled the Holland police for over a year, is believed to be solved in the arrest of Charles Woodruff, J. W. Streeter, an intimate friend of Woodruff, was placed in the sweat box, having been under suspicion. He divulged information of a most startling character. Streeter's story fastens upon Woodruff the crime of assaulting Lankhorst and makes him the author of the several anonymous letters threatening the life of Lankhorst and imploring Mrs. Lankhorst to leave her husband. Streeter claims that during the last three years Woodruff has been in love with Mrs. Lankhorst, who was a former wife of Charles Woodruff's brother.

A Canteen Fight.

Efforts of the prosecuting attorney to effect an amicable settlement of the row between Capt. Frederick C. Shipman and the directors of the Detroit Light Infantry corporation having failed, Capt. Shipman swore out warrants in Justice Sellers's court for the arrest of eight members of the board on a charge of selling liquor without a tax. This is the latest move in the battle of which Capt. Shipman is the Carrie Nation and the board the upholders of the canteen maintained in the Detroit Light Infantry armory, which Capt. Shipman avers is ruining young men who are serving in the militia.

Electric to Chicago.

The largest mortgage ever filed in Jackson county was filed Thursday with the register of deeds. It is for $4,000,000, running from the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Electric line to the Security Trust Co. of Detroit.

The property belongs to the Michigan United Co., between Kalamazoo and Detroit, including the old Jackson & Battle Creek and Kalamazoo & Battle Creek and Ypsilanti, Detroit & Jackson lines. The name has been changed to the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Electric line.

It is the plan to extend direct from Detroit to Chicago, via Kalamazoo.

Cement Industry.

As an evidence of the enormous business transacted in the manufacture of Portland cement, the labor bureau gives out figures, showing that the output for 1906 was 4,032,418 barrels, an increase of 1,527,108 barrels over 1905. Capitalists have invested in the Michigan product alone $8,300,000, and seventeen factories have been erected. Inasmuch as there is enough coal in sight to run for at least 100 years, every plant will increase its output. Fully 2,087 men are employed in making Portland cement and $1,397,000 is paid out annually in wages.

Died to Save Dog.

Affection for his faithful old dog caused the death of Mathias Van Tasell, aged 60 years, near Kalamazoo, Wednesday afternoon. The aged man had gone to a patch of woods to cut down trees. Just as he had one ready to topple over he noticed his dog lying directly in the path of the falling tree, asleep in the sun. Van Tasell jumped and kicked, saving the dog, but was caught and crushed. A widow and six children survive him.

Will Lose Her Feet.

J. Haas's horse in Inverness township, burned Wednesday night. The wife and two children were alone. A girl, aged 7 years, ran barefooted, clad only in her night dress, a mile to a neighbor's and froze her hands and feet. Amputation probably will have to be resorted to.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a Specific For Anemia and a Safe Family Medicine.

When the body becomes run down, either as a result of overwork, worry or a severe illness, an examination of the blood would show it to be weak and watery. This condition is called anæmic, which is the medical term for "bloodless." The common symptoms are paleness of the lips, gums and cheeks, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart after the slightest exertion, dull eyes and loss of appetite.

Mr. Louis L. Clark, a painter, of 19 Lincoln Place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Last May I was obliged to undergo an operation for appendicitis, and while the operation in itself was successful, I did not recover my strength and health. I was confined to my bed for over a month and was under the doctor's care. When I was able to get up my legs were so weak and unsteady that I could only walk with a cane with difficulty."

"I was getting no better and could not think of going back to work. I was discouraged, when a neighbor told me that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her and advised me to try them. I began taking them about the middle of June and soon felt so much better that I kept on and was cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured rheumatism, chlorosis, after-effects of the grip and fever, and, as the health of the nerves depends upon the purity of the blood, they are invaluable in neuralgia, nervous debility, sleeplessness, dizziness and even locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

EVELINE

Miss Alice Holt and Miss Vina Owsen are visiting parents in Eveline for a few days; they have been working in Boyne City.

Miss Celia and Emma Healey are visiting friends and relatives in Mt. Bliss.

Miss Edna Turcott of Eveline was united in marriage to Mr. Howard of Bay Springs, recently. Miss Turcott is a well known young lady, daughter of a soldier, and she has the kind wishes of her many friends through her long wedded life.

Wilbert Sandel and Bertha Jones went to Bay Springs and Boyne City last Sunday, having a very pleasant and enjoyable ride.

The boys who went up North to work after Xmas have all returned home. George Staley was injured quite badly.

A party of young people met at the home of Benj. Healey Thursday night. It was a surprise party. Refreshments were midnight supper and a taffy pull.

Mrs. Edwin Spence is quite sick at present with grip.

Miss Nina Healey is staying at home now, having finished work at Mr. Steele's.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Omas Healey and family, were guests of Benj. Healey Sunday.

A party of twenty six surprised Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Healey Saturday night all having a very enjoyable time. Supper was served and also a taffy pull.

Dave Gaunt, wife and child were visitors of Geo. Zimmermen's Sunday. Clarence Johnston attended Grange a couple of days last week.

Mrs. James McKee visited Mrs. Tillison last week.

A carpet rag bee was held at Lewis Henry's Tuesday. A large crowd attended.

The Best Laxative for Children: Parents should see to it that their children have natural, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not dose the child with salts or gripping pills, they are too powerful in effect, and literally tear their little insides to pieces, leaving the bowels weakened and less able to act naturally than before. Laxative Fruit or Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs to healthy activity. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never gripe or nauseate. 10c, 25c and 50c.

BOUGHT BIG SAFES.

The Way Jay Gould Brought an Express Company to Terms.

Recalling early days in the express business, an officer of one of the largest companies told this story of Jay Gould: "Gould and Fisk then had hold of the Erie," he said, "and the United States Express company had all the express business on the road. The contract was about to expire, and Gould wanted an arrangement more profitable to the Erie. 'The Erie's doing all the work and you're making all the money,' Gould said to the express people. You ought to do some of the work and give the railroad a chance at the money."

"The express company officials demurred. Their profit, they insisted, was no more than they were entitled to, and they refused to shade the contract a penny. Gould insisted on a decrease, but they remained obdurate and eventually let the Erie president understand what he very well knew—that no other company would compete against the United States for the Erie business. All the companies at that time were in an agreement to maintain rates."

"All right," said Gould at the conclusion of the interview, "you've no objection. I guess, to my going into the express business for myself. It looks better than railroading."

"The express people replied that Gould could organize all the companies he wanted to. They thought it was all bluff, but things that came to their attention soon weakened their faith in this idea. Gould was going around among his associates talking up an express company scheme, officials of other roads were told that a new company would be in the field to bid for their business, and the papers began to talk about the new Gould express company."

"The express officials, however, saw none of Gould's money going into the enterprise and stood pat. Presently it was reported that he had bought twenty-four big express safes. Was this talk or was it business? The express men asked themselves: They set to work investigating, and they discovered that the report was true. Gould had actually bought and paid for the safes—safes cost money in those days, too—and he was negotiating for all the other equipment required."

"Now, thoroughly convinced of Gould's sincerity, the express company came to terms. Gould got the best contract from a railroad standpoint that had been known up to that time. The clause in the contract that the United States Express company considered most valuable to itself was one stipulating the abandonment of Gould's express plans."

"It was all a bluff on Gould's part except buying the safes. For that matter the purchase was, of course, part of the bluff, but Gould had actually bought and paid for them unconditionally. Nevertheless he lost nothing on the deal, for as soon as friendly relations were established with the express officials he persuaded them they could use the safes in their business and sold them at a little better than cost."—Washington Post.

Precedence in New York Society. A philanthropic society of New York recently arranged a benefit performance in one of the theaters. A large number of prominent women were to act as patronesses. When the time came to have the announcement cards engraved the president of the society was in a quandary. In what order should he arrange the names? He had never given the matter of social precedence a thought. He referred his troubles to one of the women, and she said decisively:

"They must be arranged alphabetically or you will be in hot water at once."

"But some of these ladies are wives of scientific men who are world renowned and some are simply rich. Some are wives of army and navy officers."

"It makes no difference. In New York society the order of precedence is alphabetical, and there is no other rule."—New York Sun.

Generous to the Church. Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences tells this story of George Payne, who dropped his worldly means in the quicksands of the turf, but was always unruined and pleasant in conversation: "Are you not coming to church, Mr. Payne? Was on one occasion the stern interrogation of his hostess, a very great lady, who descended upon him in all the severity of her Sabbath panoply. 'No, duchess, I am not,' he replied, making swiftly for the door; but, pausing as by a polite afterthought previous to his exit, he exclaimed, with magnificent emphasis, 'not that I see any harm in it.'"

Early Beds. The beds of the ancients were piles of skins. The first beds resembling those used in modern times were made of rushes and later of straw. The use of feathers in making beds has been attributed to the Romans, and Elagabalus (Heliogabalus) is said to have used an air cushion for a pillow in 218. Air beds were frequently used during the sixteenth century. Feather beds were largely used during the reign of Henry VIII. of England.

Pleasant. "Oh, George, I'm so glad you've come!" exclaimed the girl. "Father is so excited and disturbed. Do go in and calm him." "Very well," replied George, "what's the matter with him?" "Why—er—I just told him you wanted to marry me."

Fuller celebrated the saint's day with entertaining the high school teachers and seniors. The rooms were artistically decorated with red and white hearts. The refreshments were of the same shades. Games form the amusement.

An invitation from Mrs. A. W. Brown, about twelve miles in the country was accepted by the Honey-Ya last Saturday evening and never a more enjoyable time was passed. We reached Mrs. Brown's home about 10:30 and by going quietly we surprised our little Sis Hopkins who had already retired. We were given an excellent supper and were royally entertained. Martha having her usual appetite. We were sitting very quietly when suddenly we heard music. We at once formed a set and Sis with her little red slippers took the leading part. After finishing our dancing, we thought we would locate the music and to our surprise found our missing member, Marie, enjoying a peaceful slumber while her snoring was the cause of our music. We were all looking forward to Alice, who was going to make a speech, whether she made it or not we have not been able to learn. Francis showed her usual kindness in caring for Lillian, who was ill but upon seeing the fudge suddenly became better. Somewhere in the small hours our driver began to yawn and Samantha who believes in small hours thought we had better start home. We left Mrs. Brown and Sis feeling very badly but wishing that we would arrive home safe, which we did as our driver only went to sleep three times. (From one who always behaves the best.)

The firm of Boosinger Bros. was re-established first of the week. John withdrew from the firm about a year ago on account of his health, but has now regained same and, knowing that East Jordan was a good town to tie to, resumed the partnership relation with his brother Fred E. Boosinger Bros. are known throughout this district as a couple of hustlers and they will continue to give our citizens a first class Gen'l Merchandise store.

The Maccabee hall was the scene of festivities Tuesday evening when the Six Knights entertained the Bees and a number of friends. A program of music was a prominent feature, rendered by Wm. Webster, Mildred Sweet, Miss McCalmon, with their violins, assisted by Berntha Shier. They were enthusiastically applauded after each number. Miss Leida. Barrie, vocal solo, accompanied by Miss Blair, granted an encore. "Thirty Years with a Show," was recited by Mrs. W. J. Smith, and met with hearty approval. She responded with another selection. Short speeches by Com-magder Squier, Sir Kt. McMillan and others followed, after which all sat down to a fine spread, the menu being oysters with their accessories. Sweet strains of music filled the room and get your partners for a waltz, and thus ended a very enjoyable annual function.

There are two kinds of girls in the world, the girl who works and the girl who gads. Commend us to the former. Work lends dignity to a pretty girl, is an added charm to her. The girl who works, God bless her, combines the useful and the ornamental. She might gad about, roll on sofas, gossip and read story books, but she prefers to be of some account in the world and goes out stenographer, teacher, sales-lady or housekeeper bravely makes her own way. Such are the salt of the earth and of such is the kingdom of heaven.

They will surely check the cold and please you. Sold by Warner's Pharmacy.

We wonder how many of our boys realize that land is going fast—boys brought up to think that in America land can never be scarce, that when they have played out at everything else they can somewhere get a piece of land for nothing and the next day be a prosperous farmer, can with difficulty be made to see it. In 1865 there was but little over 81,000,000 acres under cultivation in the United States. Today the cultivated acres number 286,000,000 and these acres are not only our best, but they are fast going up in value beyond the reach of men of small means. Keen-scented corporations snuffing the inevitable battle from afar are turning their attention to land, and greedily buying whole counties with no idea of ever letting an acre go, but the boy who thinks he is made for something higher looks calmly on thinking there will be plenty left for him should he ever have to stop to it. The sons of half starved teachers, lawyers, traders and others, who are unsuccessful in their overcrowded callings, are turning to our cheaper lands, sure to find there what they nor their parents have known never before—truly independent homes.

MT. VERNON AS IT IS TO-DAY

Mount Vernon as It Now Appears.

To come upon Mount Vernon when the sunlight floods the long-tiled gallery, and the guards lazily stretch their legs and yawn at your approach; to watch the blue smoke curling from the chimneys, and see the barn-yard fowls cluck noisily about and then flap their wings and run, is almost to see the old place as when Washington met his friends half way down the drive, or saluted them from afar. This is as you find it when you are set down like a duck in a puddle, right on the edge of the most historic spot in America.

You pass along in the shadow of the squat brick wall, topped off with ornamental pickets, past the higher red brick wall mottled with patches of whitewash and topped off with its moss-grown coping, that winds along up the hill like a huge snake, over which the red roofs show in utter defiance of its great landlord's effort to hide their every-day existence and homely suggestions. While you ponder why Washington's back door was convivial cheer that went around the festive board through the medium of the ponderous punch bowl, or the quaintly cut champagne glasses. Many a trifle that tells of the love of feminine finery fills another case—rare bits of lace, miniatures, silver and china—a delicious bit of feminine folly woven indelibly into the meshes of all time.

It does seem a bit ghastly to turn in with the ghosts of the great, upon the bed where Washington died, but it has been done; and, too, where Lafayette rested. On the quaint little dressing case, where reposed his august cue, now, each springtime, lies a riotous mass of modern hairpins and feminine furbelows. The sitting room of Nellie Custis, that of Martha Washington, the family dining room and the library, each with its wealth of heirlooms, tells of the painstaking care and research of many years. In these rooms the Regents sleep, and work, and live, and impale themselves with the spirit of the Washingtons.

The attendants, for the most part, are more replete with new uniforms than historical information, but there is reason for knowing that it was in the dear old library that Washington received the official announcement of his election as president of the United States. There are 17 closets in three sides of this room—curious little closets within closets, none perceptible his front door, and prepare to salute the shades of his greatness, a man with a camera and a "taking" expression whirls into view, and before you know it yours is one of the strange faces that looks out from the gallery, all wondering, even though knowing, what he is going to do. But it's of no use to fret. Like trouble, he is ever with you, thicker than dandelions on a summer green. If he divides the honors with any one, it's with the woman who wants a souvenir of General Washington.

Here—in the banquet room, on the spot where Lafayette, Rochambeau, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, and the Artists—Houghton, Peale and Trumbull, besides many great revolutionary generals, dined, the women hold their executive sessions. The beautiful silver mounted mirror that adorned Washington's banquet board is removed, and upon the table they write of the progress that saved the old house from ruin. To the Regents of the Mount Vernon association, who come once each springtime, and actually live, eat, and drink, and sleep under the famous old roof, does the place owe its air of homelike comfort, as well as its preservation.

It is the banquet room that was prepared for the first time by the hands of Lafayette and a company of French noblemen, who chanced to be house guests. The story runs that a ball was to be given, and the imported paper had arrived, but no paperhangers. Mrs. Washington mourned, but the chivalrous Lafayette always ready to do or die, consoled her—he was equal to the emergency, and he and his friends hung the paper, assisted by the general and his household. In this historic room, the women are literally surrounded by the priceless treasures that they have collected from the fading past for the benefit of future generations. The Washington that Rembrandt Peale pictures, facing the difficulties of Yorktown, glories the side of the room, while from a mahogany cabinet comes a substantial suggestion of the to the passing traveler, but cleverly concealed as a part of the walls and woodwork.

You must wade knee deep through cherry tokens to reach the old conservatory, with the quaint, rambling servants' quarters tucked away under the eaves on each side, while sloping roofs and whitewashed walls remind one somehow of Bobbie Burns.

It is curious how the American traveler prefers to pilfer his historic treasures rather than to pay a trifle, for them. The old gardener, thinks this is the case, and it is only by the greatest vigilance that he has for 50 many years preserved the historic outline of the garden as originally planted and laid off by Washington. Again, Mrs. Leister's generosity and fine judgment are shown, for she is chairman of the committee on grounds and shrubs, as well as interested in the garden and greenhouse. Many a rare plant finds its way to Mount Vernon through her efforts. The gardens are maintained at an expense of over $2,000, but between $500 and $700 of this amount is realized from the sale of plants. Mrs. Phoebe Hearst is a model farmer, and spends her money and talent freely. She has preserved and beautified the wharf at an expense of more than $10,000. She directs the superintendent as to the vegetable garden that supplies the table maintained for the attendants, advises about the deer park that hangs on the hill's edge over the Potomac, and otherwise acts as a beneficent power all about the premises. She took a practical view of the herd of Jersey cattle that browsed around, and when they failed to keep the old-fashioned milkhouse as well supplied as necessary she had them sold and a pretty herd of Guernseys driven in.

In the spacious old kitchen where things run riot, the traveler buys either a glass of milk or a picture to carry away as a souvenir. Somehow, one can't help but feel that even the kith belonged to Washington, because they browse on his plantation.

PROPER SERVING MEANS MUCH.

Dishes Are More Palatable When Made Attractive.

A plain lettuce salad assumes a different aspect when served in ruddy tomato cup, or shining green pepper cases, and a rosy ring of tomato jelly may inclose a plain celery or endive salad. Salads can be decorated with chopped green herbs, hard-boiled eggs, radishes, cut to represent little tulips, olives and nasturtium leaves and blossoms.

Potatoes can be most decorative. Mashed potatoes are pressed in the form of tiny pyramids with flat tops. These are dipped in the white of an egg, then in fine minced parsley, giving the effect of small green pyramids, through which the white of the potatoes gleams temptingly. These may be used with small pyramids cut from stale bread and fried a delicate brown in hot butter. They are arranged about a dish alternately with stars or cubes of lemon between.

Curries, ragouts or fricassees are more ornamental if served in a border of rice or mashed potatoes. These are molded in pretty fluted forms and decorated by brushing the rims and raised points with the white of a raw egg, and then sprinkling with chopped parsley. Small baskets about the size of a teacup are made of mashed potatoes to hold creamed chicken, fish or oysters. The potato is forced in a rotary motion through a pastry bag, brushed over with egg white, and placed in a cool oven to dry. Handles are emulated by sprigs of parsley arched to meet above, and green stars are given with chopped parsley.

FOR A SIMPLE MENU.

Best Dishes to Serve at Ordinary Afternoon Affair.

When a menu is limited to three articles, and it is for an afternoon affair it should include one substantial article, one sweet, and sandwiches. A salad like green peppers scooped out and filled with all kinds of vegetables cut up and dressed with mayonnaise is popular, and with this sardine sandwiches. As a sweet, fruit jelly with whipped cream.

A pretty idea for the jelly is to use orange, apple, and banana skins and serve the jelly in these, having the dish when passed look like a dish of fruit. Have the whipped cream sauce passed with the jelly.

If you do not wish the salad you could have a hot dish, like scalloped crab or lobster, served in individual dishes; or you could have jellied chicken sandwiches. The chicken is neatly made in individual molds, using hard-boiled eggs in the molds so that the slices of egg are on top when the mold is turned out.

When entertaining eight guests in the evening a good repast would be bouillon or consommé served in cups; creamed sweetbreads in little individual dishes; salad and jellied chicken or thin slices of ham; dessert, ice cream or ices or a rich chocolate cake with chocolate sauce and whipped cream. If you have trouble in procuring fish you can use canned lobster with success.

Danish Dumplings.

One cupful of suet, chopped fine, one cupful bread crumbs, one cupful flour, one-half cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful baking powder, little nutmeg, pinch of salt, two eggs and one pint of milk. Sift together powder and flour, add the beaten eggs, grated crumbs, sugar, suet and milk. Make into a smooth batter and drop by spoonfuls into a pint of boiling milk, three or four at a time. When cooked pour over them the milk they were cooked in.

Here is one more recipe: Beat until light the yolks of three eggs and one teaspoonful of sugar; add one-half cupful of suet, chopped fine, one-half cupful of currants, one cupful sifted flour, into which has been sifted one heaping teaspoonful baking powder and a little nutmeg and salt, and, lastly, the egg whites, well beaten. Flour the hands and make into balls the size of an egg. Boil in separate cloths for an hour or so and serve with a rich sauce. Wine sauce is great.

Two Table Suggestions.

Aspic jelly is a valuable aid in garnishing salads, cold meats, game pies and so on. It is refreshing to the eye, always, and may be made to assume any form or color. Cubes of pale aspic laid in rings or green peppers have an exceedingly pretty effect, or the aspic is chopped to present a rough surface.

Slices of bread cut in fancy shapes, rings, stars, diamonds—and so on, browned in butter, make a simple and pretty decoration. They can be tipped with parsley or decorated, alternately with chopped parsley and grated egg yolk.

To "Try" a Cake.

One of the best plans for ascertaining whether a cake has been cooked enough is to very lightly insert in the center one of the common wooden awl-knives that butchers use for meat. If this comes out clean and dry the cake is done; if the skewer is sticky the cake needs a little more cooking. This is a much better test than the common one of inserting a broom straw, as the latter is so small it is not always easy to judge properly of its condition.

Coffee Caramels.

Take one pound of brown sugar, one cupful of strong coffee, one-half cupful of cream and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook until brittle when dropped in cold water, then pour into buttered tins, and when nearly cold mark into squares.

PERMANENTLY-CURED

Of Kidney Disease by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. C. M. Bartholomew, of Kalkaska, Mich., was a sufferer in 1886 with what all, including physicians, called Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Doctors said there was no help for him. As a last resort he used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. The symptoms disappeared and he was permanently cured by this great remedy. His case was a remarkable one and attracted great attention. Now, in 1906 (20 years after) Mr. Bartholomew writes that he confirms all that he said in favor of Favorite Remedy in 1886, and again endorses its use. Not a "patent" medicine.

EARLY-NORTHWEST VOYAGES.

Some Account of the Arctic Trips That Have Been Made.

Beginning with the American discoveries of John Cabot in 1497, the search for the northwest passage was for many years the object of rival expeditions, from Denmark, England, France and Portugal, says A. W. Greely, in the Century. It was Frobenius, however, who in 1576-78 first gave a distinct national character to the quest. John Davis of Davis' strait, followed in three voyages, 1585-88, and then, in 1612, came the illustrious and hapless Henry Hudson, whose motto was that explorers should "achieve what they had undertaken or else give reasons wherefore it will not be."

The search for the Atlantic side closed for two centuries with the voyage of a great seaman, William Baffin, who, in a tiny boat of 55 tons, with a miserable equipment, but an undaunted heart, attained, in 1616, the highest north in the western hemisphere, 77 degrees 45 minutes N., and discovered three radiating sounds, Jones, Smith and Lancaster, the last being the eastern entrance to the long-sought passage.

HOME-MADE CATARRH CURE.

Sufferers Should Make This Up and Try It Anyway.

Any one can mix right at home the best remedy of its kind known. The name "Cycione" is given to the following prescription, it is supposed, because of its promptness in driving from the blood and system every vestige of catarrhal poison, relieving this foul and dread disease, no matter where located. To prepare the mixture: Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce fluid extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Karkoa and three ounces Compound Stry Sarsaparilla. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This is a harmless, inexpensive mixture, which has a peculiar action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, assisting them to filter and strain from the blood and system all catarrhal poisons, which, if not eradicated, are absorbed by the mucous membrane, and an open sore or catarrh is the result.

Prepare some and try it, as it is the prescription of an eminent catarrh specialist of national reputation.

The "Thunderer."

Judge Rentoul's reference on the bench to the Times as the "Thunderer" reminds us how remarkably this nickname has persisted. The Morning Post is no longer "Jeames," the Standard has not been "Mrs. Gamp" since the decease of the Morning Herald—the "Mrs. Harris" to whom it would allude as an independent authority, and the two represented the same proprietor. But the Times is still the "Thunderer." It owes that name to Captain Edward Sterling, who is said to have begun a Times article with the words: "We thundered forth the other day an article on the subject of social and political reform."—London Chronicle.

The revelations regarding fraudulent paint materials which have been made by the Agricultural Experiment Station of Fargo, N. D., and published by Prof. E. F. Ladd, state commissioner, have occasioned almost as much of a sensation as the exposure of adulteration in food products did when the latter first began to appear. It has been shown that kegs marked "Pure White Lead" often contain other substances such as chalk, barytes, silica, etc., and that oft-supposed to be linseed often contains petroleum adulterants, to say nothing of water in large proportions. Sometimes, so-called "White Leads" contain not an iota of genuine White Lead.

The farmer is a large user of paint. No one is more interested than he is, that the label should enable him to get what he supposes he is paying for. There should be a law in every state requiring that all paint packages be labeled exactly according to their contents. That would enable every paint-buyer to buy intelligently.

"Is your husband up yet?" asked the sour-faced woman at the door. "I expect he is," was the reply. "I'd like to see him for a few minutes." "So would I. He hasn't come home yet."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Double Yield of GULF COAST EXCEL

Two Crops Per Year!

That's the program in the Texas Gulf Coast Country. It's easy there, because the land works and produces every month in the twelve!

Think of it: $500 per acre in cabbage—$600 per acre in onions—$3.30 a bushel for new potatoes—cucumbers bring $3.00 a bushel in May at the Eastern markets. These and many actual, every-day results in fruit culture also, can be proved to you. I can give you names and addresses of the people who are doing these things while you are reading this advertisement and the snow and cold weather are keeping you idle.

The WARM, DRY CLIMATE of the Texas Gulf Coast is the healthiest in the country. The irrigated land which you can buy now at $25 per acre—is the richest in productiveness.

The railroad facilities will place your products in the markets ahead of every other section of the country. You get fancy prices—you save in freight rates—you make money and enjoy good health.

Let me send you a 75-page illustrated book full of actual facts about that wonderful country. Read it. Let me send you names of people who own some of this land and are doing these things. Write to them. Buy a round-trip investigator's ticket to any point on the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry.—go down and look the country over. Rate is but $25.00 from Chicago, $20.00 from St. Louis, for the round trip, on first and third Tuesdays monthly. Sixteen carloads of people went down on our excursion of January 15th!

Do not let the arguments sound reasonable? Wouldn't you like to learn more about the country? Then write me this today. Address

The Old-Fashioned Way

By W. J. Robinson

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A youth was walking on a high bluff that overlooked the sea. A maid was also walking on the high cliff and there the youth first met the maid. They became acquainted and talked and laughed together. The youth did not know that he loved the maid. Therefore his love did not exist. It was latent.

The youth liked to row and fish and roam about the woods and read. The maid loved all these things, and they enjoyed their pleasures in company, which was much more pleasant than being alone.

It was not until the fourth day of this newly formed friendship that this narrative begins. The first few days were days of evolution. The embryo man and woman were in the process of formation, and were all unconsciously undergoing slight but continual changes. To be sure there were outward signs of change. The collar of the youth disappeared; his face and arms grew brown and strong. The hat of the maid disappeared and also her sunshade.

On the fifth day the woman dropped her handkerchief. The man returned it to her with more than ordinary pleasure, all unconscious of change as yet. And the next day, when he stepped into his canoe she gave him his paddle. This was a subtle sign of change. And for many days to come they served each other in little ways. And later she bound his bruised finger with her own handkerchief, and he disentangled her hair when it was wound about a twig. It was wonderful that they experienced no change. Conventional lines were rapidly disappearing. But they were blind.

Later they sat for hours in a drifting canoe motionless and silent, or they lay quietly upon the river bank or near the sea, and they took long strolls together in the moonlight summer evenings. When she was from his sight his heart was distressed by the sudden snapping of a twig and she became breathless if a fish splashed suddenly in the quiet water. They unconsciously sought each other.

When they opened their lunch basket in the quiet woods the things that she cooked were always best, and she wondered why unheaven and collarless he looked better than the groomed effects of culture and civilization whom she had left in town. Unconsciously each was glad that there were no others to share their companionship. He was glad when her hair became unpinned so that he might fasten it back again and she was glad when evening came because he never forgot to unroll her sleeves which he rolled lightly about her elbows in the morning. There were dimples on her cheeks but he has never noticed that even to this day, which fact proves that truth is stranger than fiction.

One bright day in the very heart of summer, they had paddled to a place far up the river where the trees formed a dark low hanging archway and wild grape vines hung almost to the surface of the water. On that particular day they were talking. They had discussed death, then life, then the soul, and then the train of thought drifted to friendship and last of all to love. Both admitted that they had never been in love, that is, since they were children and thought they were in love and went about greeting their affinities with the pleasant name of "Smarty." Each felt relieved by the confession of the other.

Everything came about so unconsciously. He would lean forward to pick a leaf or twig from her hair or a piece of river grass from her fingers and her hand would be resting in his or she would be resting on his shoulder. And sometimes she would lean forward to pluck a fly from the water and vice versa. He was as dear to her as a brother and he had no sisters of his own. Day by day the conventional arrangement of things disappeared. Once he found himself carrying her across a stream, but he did not quite awaken. And the dimples on her elbow rested against his neck.

They always ate their lunch together now. They were sad when apart and happy when together. The summer was waning. It was she who first awakened, and this is how it happened. She found him with his head lying in her lap and she was wiping a stain from his forehead where a dusty vine had struck him and moistening the handkerchief with her lips. Upon awakening her first act was to gasp for breath. Then with her free hand she gently stroked his hair from his forehead. She loved him. He longed to her. No one could take him from her. But he should not know, at least not yet.

All that day she seemed preoccupied and indifferent, her voice was distant, her eyes evasive. But she was thinking fast. How could she awaken him. "He is too friendly," she said to herself. As her indifference increased his solicitation grew. But he thought of her welfare only, not of his own. This pleased and annoyed her at the same time.

The next morning he received a formal note from Miss Brown. She regretted that a "slight indisposition" prevented her from spending the day with him as planned. He was lonely and as the day wore on his loneliness increased. He thought of all the pleasant days of summer and many little episodes came to him that he had almost forgotten. In the evening he called again, but she remained in her room and he did not see her. He returned home by the path over the cliffs his thoughts filled with visions of a woman's hair and laughing eyes and a sweet voice and brown arms with dimples at the elbows. When he reached the place of their first meeting he had fully awakened.

She remained in her room, and they forgot to mention the fact that he had called. She dreamed of a strong face and broad shoulders, of muscular arms and a low musical laugh. The next morning all was changed in their little world. The man was chafed by the deep humidity of love. The woman mistook this for indifference.

The woman was fearful of incurring the man's displeasure and of the thought of losing him. They were in the toils of love, swayed by petty misunderstandings, self-conscious, and groping blindly in the dark, one one fearing to offend the other.

Thus the days wore on and summer was drawing to a close. Dame Conventionality had resumed her sway. Hats appeared, hair was no longer tied in a careless knot. They became formal and distant. And the man could not speak of love to her when even his attempts at friendship were apparently not acceptable.

The vacations of both had come to a close but each dreaded to go. It was the woman who first decided to return home. They met one evening and the hearts of both were heavy as they thought, "this will be the last time."

He was conventionally formal. Suddenly her woman's intuition saw it all in a flash. She prepared to go. He took her hand. In a moment he found her in his arms. He never knew how it happened.

"Dear one," he was saying. "Dear one, I did not know until now how I love you."

She did not reply. But he felt that he was happier than ever in his life before.

SHE HAD IRONING TO DO.

Drug Store Audience Hears Why She Couldn't Meet the Youth.

He was very much excited when he went into the drug store. The druggist noticed it, and called an old patron's attention to the fact with a nod and a wink.

"Crossed in love," said the druggist in a whisper.

"How do you know?" asked the old patron.

"Comes in here every morning to telephone," replied the drug man. "Wait a minute, and you'll hear him; it's a treat."

The agitated one entered a booth and carefully closed the door after him. He failed to observe that a broken pane of glass in the back of the booth had never been replaced, so the druggist and the old patron overheard this:

"Hello! (Pause.) Hello, Central? Hello! Hello, Central!"

(A muttered something as he hunted for a nickel to put in the slot.) "Central, give me 16—Quick, please, I'm in a hurry."

"He always is," murmured the druggist. "Then the agitated one got his number. The change in his voice was remarkable."

"Is that you, dear?" he purred.

"Shall I see you to-day?"

"Why not?"

"Oh, that's tough." (His voice began to change in tone here.)

"You can't help it? Yes you can help it. You know you can help it. I've waited for three days to see you."

"Saw her day before yesterday," muttered the druggist.

"Tell her you're going to call on your cousin," continued the agitated one.

"You've got too much to do? What have you got to do? Iron half a dozen pocket handkerchiefs. My heavens, girl! What do you think I'm made of—ice water and cheese cloth?"

"Half a dozen handkerchiefs! Why, I'd go half way around the world for you. You don't like me any more; that's what's the matter with you. I'm sorry I called up. It must have put you to a lot of trouble to answer the phone. I'm not going to—Hello! hello! Are you there?"

There was a pause. Then the ardent one hung up the receiver and spoke aloud. The druggist and the old patron agreed later that his remarks as an exhibition of sustained invective were worth hearing. After a few minutes, with his mind relieved, he emerged from the booth mopping his brow with his handkerchief. He walked slowly to the door and paused, with the knob in his hand.

"Say," he observed dramatically, "if you had waited for days to see a girl, and she told you she couldn't see you because she had to iron half a dozen handkerchiefs, what would you do?"

He waited a second for a reply, and when none was forthcoming, shook his head sadly and went out into the main.

"Sad case," remarked the old patron with a sigh.

"Oh, don't worry about him," answered the druggist. "To-morrow morning he'll be back just as usual."

BABY TORTURED BY ITCHING.

Rash Covered Face and Feet—Would Cry Until Tired Out—Speedy Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby was about nine months old when she had rash on her face and feet. Her feet seemed to irritate her most, especially nights. They would cause her to be broken in her rest, and sometimes she would cry until she was tired out. I had always used Cuticura Soap myself and had heard of so many cures by the Cuticura Remedies that I thought I would give them a trial. The improvement was noticeable in a few hours, and before I had used one box of the Cuticura Ointment her feet were well and have never troubled her since. I also used it to remove what is known as "cradle cap" from her head, and it worked like a charm, as it cleansed and healed the scalp at the same time. Now I keep Cuticura Ointment on hand in case of any little rash or insect bites, as it takes out the inflammation at once. Perhaps this may be the means of helping other suffering babies. Mrs. Hattie Currier, Thomaston, Me., June 9, 1906."

ONE WAY OUT OF DIFFICULTY.

Match Twins with Twins, Was the Fond Mother's Idea.

A little woman entered a drug store and asked the proprietor if he had "another picture."

"What kind of a picture do you mean?" the druggist asked.

"One like this," said the woman, holding up an attractive advertising print.

"I may have one or two of them left," the proprietor said, "but I haven't many of them."

The woman said she only wanted one, and her tone indicated that she was anxious for that one. She explained that the one she had with her had been given to one of her children.

Another child, she stated, was sick, and was crying for a picture such as his brother had.

"That's a bad way to bring up your children," ventured a woman customer in the store. "Do you try to give a child everything he cries for just because his brother is more fortunate?"

"But," said the mother of the children, "you don't know. The children are twins and what one has the other wants."

"Suppose," objected the moralist, "when your children get older, they fall in love with the same girl, what will they do?"

But the mother was ready. She promptly replied:

"Find twins and fall in love with them."

DREADED TO EAT.

A Quaker Couple's Experience.

"How many persons dread to eat their meals, although actually hungry nearly all the time!"

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest.

But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we eat the wrong kind of food or eat too much, and there you are—indigestion and its accompanying miseries.

A Phila. lady said, the other day:

"My husband and I have been sick and nervous for 15 or 20 years from drinking coffee—feverish, indigestion, totally unfit, a good part of the time, for work or pleasure. We actually dreaded to eat our meals."

"We tried doctors and patent medicines that counted up into hundreds of dollars, without getting any benefit."

Accidentally, a small package of Postum came into my hands. I made some according to directions, with surprising results. We both liked it and have not used any coffee since."

"The dull feeling after meals has left us and we feel better every way. We are so well satisfied with Postum that we recommend it to our friends who have been made sick and nervous and miserable by coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

DON'T DESPAIR.

Read the Experience of a Minnesota Woman and Take Heart.

If your back aches, and you feel sick, languid, weak and miserable day after day—don't worry. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women in the same condition.

Mrs. A. Heiman of Stillwater, Minn., says: "But for Doan's Kidney Pills I would not be living now. They cured me in 1894 and I've been well since. I used to have such pain in my back that once I lifted. The kidney secretions were much disordered, and I was so far gone that I was thought to be at death's door. Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me I feel as if I had been pulled back from the tomb."

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is acknowledged to be the most successful remedy in the country for those painful ailments peculiar to women.

For more than 30 years it has been curing Female Complaints, such as Inflammation, and Ulceration, Falling and Displacements, and consequent Spinal Weakness, Backache, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.

Records show that it has cured more cases of Female Pills than any other one remedy known.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage of development. Dragging Sensations causing pain, weight, and headache are relieved and permanently cured by its use.

It corrects Irregularities or Painful Functions, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility; also, Dizziness, Faintness, Extreme Lassitude. "Don't care" Platulency, Melancholia or the "Blues." These are sure indications of female weakness or some organic derangement.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a most excellent remedy.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses, only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the approval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

An Ideal All-Round Newspaper.

Probably no other newspaper in the United States can show so brilliant an array of special features suited to the tastes and needs of every member of the family as the Chicago Record-Herald. Its regular daily and Sunday features include the letters of William E. Curtis and Walter Wellman, besides the special dispatches from the great centers. Next in importance comes the Record-Herald's unparalleled foreign news service, embracing its own special cables and those of the New York Herald, World, Journal of Commerce and Associated Press. Its pages devoted to commercial and financial news of all kinds are unsurpassed in scope and accuracy. Among other noteworthy features are its popular sporting page, its sound editorials, Kaiser's humorous "Alternating Currents," the lively "Stories of the Street and Town," the railroad and business columns, music and drama, society and clubs, daily reviews of the latest books, the continued story, the "Woman Beautiful" department, the daily fashion article, "Dials for a Day," news of the lakes, etc., besides a complete array of local and domestic news—all uniting to give the people of Chicago and the Northwest a complete and interesting all-round newspaper. The Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald is an artistic and literary triumph. Famous authors and illustrators, the paper and presswork combine to make it the rival of the great independent periodicals and a distinct departure in Sunday journalism.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Possibly, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cavalier, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this mental, palpitating, aching, beating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

A SOURCE OF DISEASE.

Beware the Man Who Blows Smoke Through His Nostrils.

A popular practice of many smokers consists in discharging the smoke inhaled, especially from cigarettes, through the nostrils. This is even considered by some to be essential to the full enjoyment of the flavor of the tobacco.

The London Lancet, while acknowledging that perhaps under ordinary circumstances no harm is done to the smoker save to his sense of smell, has sounded a note of warning against the habit as a possible disseminator of disease. Hay fever and other annoying complaints have been spread through unsuspecting households by the unwitting visitor who habitually blew smoke through his nose.

The surface traversed by the tobacco smoke, before issuing from the nose, is remarkable by the Lancet, is moistened with the natural secretion of the mucous membrane lining it, and this secretion is mingled with the fluid discharged from the conjunctival sac protecting the eyes. It therefore contains numerous micro organisms which, floating in the air, have become attached to the moist and sticky surface of the conjunctiva, as well as those which pass over the surface of the nasal membrane. As Tyndall long ago showed, germs are completely filtered off from the air inhaled by the extensive and irregular surfaces presented by the turbinate bones. These germs are carried into the air by the man who blows smoke through his nostrils.

A SENSE OF DIRECTION.

The Prime Requisite For Making a True Woodsman.

A sense of direction I should name as the prime requisite for him who would become a true woodsman, depending on himself rather than on guides. The faculty is largely developed of course by much practice, but it must be inborn. Some men possess it, others do not—just as some men have a mathematical bent, while others figures are always a despair. It is a sort of extra, having nothing to do with criterions of intelligence or mental development. Like the repeater movement in a watch. A highly educated, cultured man may lack it; the roughest possess it. Some who have never been in the woods or mountains acquire in the space of a vacation a fair facility at picking a way, and I have met a few who have spent their lives on the prospect trail and who were still and travelers would be as helpless as the poorest city dweller.

It is a gift, a talent. If you have it, the tiniest germ you can become a traveler of the wide and lonely places. If you have it not you may as well resign yourself to guides. Stewart Edward White in Outing Magazine.

Science and Morality.

The true student of the professional or technical school becomes heir to a comprehensive and clear understanding of his duties and responsibilities in his relations to his fellow men and to the community. Those duties and responsibilities present themselves to his trained mind in their real proportion. He is neither undeveloped nor undeveloped in his judgment of affairs. His university training, especially in the technical school, has taught him accuracy and penetration in the analysis of any proposition confronting him and that truth and knowledge must be sought with the directness of a plumb line. Science yields nothing but confusion to the shift, devious and dishonest inquirer. The fundamentals of morality are the very stepping stones to technical success or professional attainment. Scientific American.

The Hellbender.

"There's no reason why the hellbender shouldn't be good to eat," said a scientist. "Its principal food is the crayfish, the same as the principal food for bass. The hellbender belongs to the same family of amphibians as the frog and is very closely related. Both are hatched from the egg, and both pass through the tadpole stage before reaching maturity. The hellbender is a mighty fine fish, as any one can prove to himself if he will conquer his natural aversion." The hellbender is found principally in streams about the foothills of the Alleghany mountains.

The Saddle.

Early Greeks and Romans rode horses bareback. They regarded it as effeminate to ride in a saddle. The modern saddle, with pommel, crupper and stirrups, was unknown to the ancients. Nero gave out fancy coverings to his cavalry, and the bareback riders of the Roman forests used to laugh at them. Saddles with trees came into use in the fourth century, stirrups three centuries later.

Standing and Sitting.

David Showman—I shall bring you back those dark trousers to be resented, Mr. Sulp. You know I sit a good deal. Mr. Sulp (tailor)—All right, and if you'll bring the bill I sent you six months ago I will be pleased to receipt that also. You know I've stood a good deal.—London Tit-Bits.

Properly Stinted.

"They may say what they like against him," said the convicted one's defender, "but his heart is in the right place."

"Yes," assented the other, "and so is the rest of him for a few years."

Practical.

"What did she say when she heard he was dead in love with her?"

"She said 'I wish it were true.'"
