Sunny South.

J. C. Rockwell's musical comedy success "The Sunny South" that is to appear in Loyeday Opera House, Monday evening, April 15th, is composed of twenty five colored people, selected from the best talent from all parts of the south. It is a musical comedy dealing with life in the land where the sweet magnolias bloom. No section of our country affords better opportunity for a colored musical comedy skit. It is now in its fourth successful season and it has received unstinted praise from the critics everywhere that it has been presented, and it promises to live long in the hearts of American theatre goers than any other picture of Southern life. Anyone wishing to enjoy a good laugh, hear sweet Southern singing, and witness the real darkies in buck and wing dancing, and pastimes of the sunny south, should attend this performance. This organization carries an orchestra of eight soloists, also a high class silver cornet band of twelve which will parade the principal streets at 5.30 p. m. Admission—25c, 35c, and 50 cents. Box seats 15 cents.

 A Chicago woman sued for divorce because her husband told her she resembled one of her aunts. After a look at the aunt, the court awarded the divorce.
 The New York Times has sent a number of letters to Michigan asking as to whether President Roosevelt is as popular and as strong with the voters as he was at the time of his election. It is hardly to be questioned that the answers to the New York paper's query will show that Roosevelt has lost nothing of his popularity with all classes of people of this state. He may have disregarded implied obligations to political friends and disappointed former personal friends, but he has not broken a promise nor has he failed in any of his obligations to duty as he sees it. His disposition may not be angelic and he may over much incline to controversy and contest, but his controversies and contests have been just such as a very large majority of the people could enjoy and cordially approve.
 East west's election should be satisfactory to the republicans of Michigan as the majority for their candidates on the state ticket will be in the vicinity of one hundred thousand. The vote on the amendment to the constitution making it possible to continue the employment of prison labor was evidently largely assisted through desire to remove all hindrances to the proposed binder twine plant so earnestly urged by Governor Warner. In some cities and counties the democrats deserted their state candidates and adopted other organization names in order to assist in the election of local candidates. As the last state contest preliminary to the important presidential election of next year the results of last week's voting was decidedly helpful to Michigan republicans and the purposes their party represents.

MICHIGAN EVENTS NOTED

THE TWO-CENT FARE BILL HAS PASSED THE SENATE SURE

LOWER PASSENGER RATES

All Roads Earning More Than $1,200 Per Mile Are Affected by the New Law.

Now the House Will Act. Gov. Warner won the biggest victory of his career when the senate, after a bitter fight, discarded the triple passenger rate bill reported out by the committee on railroads...

The final vote was 27 to 3, but the real contest was on the adoption of the substitute, which carried 16 to 14. But two senators were absent, Russell, of Grand Rapids, who is looking for a recount on Diekema in the congressional race, and Kane, of Mt. Pleasant, who was absent without leave.

The bill puts all the big roads of the state, including the Pere Marquette, Ann Arbor and Big Four, which were given a two and one-half rate by the committee on a two-cent basis. As a matter of fact, these three roads were the real bones of contention.

Gov. Warner, after adjournment, received the congratulations of his friends. He said: "I think the senate passed a fair and just bill, that will do no harm to the railroads and will be of great benefit to the traveling public."

"I do not believe the interests of the railroads should be considered to the detriment of the people. But it is quite as important that no real injury should be done to railroads or any other private business, merely because of a supposed advantage to the public."

In advocating a bill on the lines of the Wetmore bill its supporters, myself included, have been fully as desirous to do the railroads no injury as we have been to see that the people do not pay more than they should.

The bill will come before the house and though a warm fight may be put up it is thought it will pass as it came from the senate.

ORMA BUCKI

Story of the Heartless Return of the Dead Body is Denied.

It is now said that the first reports regarding the treatment given the body of little Orma Bucki, the boy who was killed by being run down by an interurban car near Monroe, while his foot was caught in a cattle guard, by D. U. R. employees, were unfounded.

SAPHRONIA LAGODNE'S PLIGHT AND CRUEL SUFFERING IN A SWAMP

A RESPECTABLE FARMER

Demented Woman Had Started to Walk to Florida—Story of a Wronged Girl.

Too Cold in Detroit. After a terrible experience during which she had been left to die alone in the freezing atmosphere of a swamp near South Rockwood by the man who had wronged her, Saphronia Lagodne, the demented 32-year-old woman who left Detroit on the 3d inst. to walk to Florida because "it is too cold here," was found early in the morning of the 5th lying on the swamp grass, her bare feet submerged ankle deep in water, and her thin clothing saturated with ooze. Her plight was brought about, it is alleged, by a man who had been regarded as a respectable farmer.

The fact that the woman is in a demented state of mind, and has been since her husband deserted her seven years ago, adds to her pitiable condition. Once she was a bright woman. After a happy girlhood she married a widower with three children. He left her after living with her two months, and since then has not been seen or heard from. She had to labor for a living and her sad matrimonial mistake preyed upon and weakened her mind.

The unfortunate woman left home early in the morning as usual with her lunch box, on her way to her work in a box factory. No sooner had she gotten out of sight of home than one of her attacks of dementia came on and she made up her mind that Detroit was too cold, and that she would walk to Florida. She took the Lake Shore to Trenton and then struck down what is known as the "U. S." turnpike. She frequently retraced her steps to find a dry place to rest. Finally a man drove up and asked her to ride and a short time after overtook a man who was introduced as the driver's brother. The three rode, she says, until she thought she would freeze, and then pulled up at a saloon. One of the men went inside and a little later returned with a whisky bottle and asked her if she did not want to drink. She drank several times until her brain began to whirl, and after more riding they stopped at a shed, where the man unhitched his horse and carried her inside. There they stayed all night.

The next morning, just before noon, the farmer brought out the horse and they started again, he telling her he would take her to his home and give her something to eat and wear. They stopped at some house in which were evidences of children and a woman, but none was seen. She was given nothing to eat. "I almost starved," she kept saying that he would get something pretty soon and "waited," she explains.

The victim was given more whisky, and again became intoxicated, and then put into the wagon and driven toward the lake. Just how long they drove, or where they were, the woman does not know. At last they came to the swamp. They drove in some distance and then the farmer ordered her farther where the horses could not go. She was walking ahead and when she turned around her guide had disappeared.

The unfortunate woman was found by a boy's dog who brought help to rescue her.

Foul Play. The finding of a pair of brass knuckles near the body of John Dell, who was found dead in the weeds near Grayling, has led to the belief that he was murdered. Dell had considerable money when last seen, two years ago, but his pockets were empty when his body was found.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that Dell met death in some unknown manner.

The deceased leaves a son, Marshall Dell, of Flint, and two daughters, one of whom is assistant postmaster here.

Only Intoxicated. That plain, blunt, Anglo-Saxon word, drunk, used for ages to describe a man's condition when he had lapsed too freely, is henceforth tabooed in St. Joseph's city council. In its stead will be used the milder Latin word "intoxicated." The chief of police has used the word drunk in his reports, and Ald. Wilson said the bluntness of the word "rasped harshly against the nerves," so he made a motion that henceforth the word, intoxicated, be used in all reports and in all discussions at the council board.

Soberly Afflicted. A four-year-old son of Charles Williams of Bay City, died from loss of blood, physicians being unable to stop the flow from a wound in the roof of the child's mouth, caused by falling upon a hook. Within a week a 1-year-old son tripped upon a stick while playing on the street and fell.

OUR OLD FOLKS

Michigan's Showing of Old Age Ranging From 79 to 110.

Just when a person leaves off being young and qualifies for entrance into the class of old folks is a question too dangerous for detailed discussion. Some authorities put a separating dash after the age of 65, and perhaps this will answer in the absence of any official ruling. Proceeding on the septuagenarian basis, it is to be remarked that the state of Michigan is rich in ancients; the days of the inhabitants of the Wolverine state are long in the land and Michigan must be a mighty healthful place to live in. The report of the last census shows this very enviable record:

Table with 3 columns: Age Group, Men, Women. Rows: 70 to 80 years old (22,703 Men, 25,490 Women), 80 to 90 (7,130 Men, 6,651 Women), 90 to 100 (487 Men, 538 Women), Over 100 (24 Men, 36 Women).

From which it will be seen there are more very old women than very old men, and more moderately old men than moderately old women. Until another claimant shows, Bernard McNally, of Clinton, must be referred to as Michigan's oldest living resident. Mr. McNally, who celebrated last month his 110th birthday, says he would rather base his claim to fame on his ability as a peddy player than as a centenarian. He is acknowledged to be one of the best players of this diverting game in the section. Recently, he was one of the guests at a peddy party given by Mrs. Mary Sullivan, and the way he polished up the other contestants was sure proof that the faculties do not always depart with the weight of the century mark.

HORRIBLE

Starving Chinese Feed on Bodies of the Buried Dead.

So great is the distress of the famine sufferers in China that the human-crased people are exhuming the bodies of their dead and eating them, according to a dispatch from the North China News to Editor Louis Klopach of the Christian Herald, which Mr. Klopach today forwarded to the state department.

Instances of cannibalism of this character have been authenticated, the cablegram declares, and the people are now approaching the severest pinch from lack of food.

The foreign relief is working effectively, but is able to relieve only a part of the suffering, and an appeal has been sent out for further help to maintain those still alive until the crops can mature and be harvested.

A Washington Rumor. One of the flood of rumors growing from the excitement of the last week because of the sensational charges made at the White House concerning a political conspiracy against the president, is that Elihu Root is to leave the cabinet.

The reason given for his reported retirement is that he is out of harmony with the administration, and that this has been growing more evident as the political plans of the president have developed. The story goes that Secretary Root strongly urged the president not to answer the Harriman letter, but to ignore it. He is also said to have been greatly surprised at the action of the president in giving up the rich men's conspiracy against him, and his policies.

Inasmuch as Judge C. A. Wisner is a member of the building committee of the proposed new Masonic temple in Flint, he says he will not occupy the bench in the suit of the association against Catherine A. McIntyre, for specific enforcement of contract. It is alleged by the Masonic Temple association that the agreement was made for the purchase of the McIntyre property. Mrs. McIntyre claims that she has entered into no such contract.

Borrowing Trouble

Now, the very worst things that might happen, you know. Are the things that don't happen at all. We forget and worry, lamenting and sorry.

For they fly down the past like the leaves on the blast. We settle up, somehow, and why do we bother and fret over what we forget?

The Little Heroine who Saved Mamma

Moutt Holly, N. J.—Many a mother has saved her child from death. Here is a child who has saved her mother from death—death under the grinding wheels of a locomotive tearing along the rails at 60 miles an hour.

The carriage was called and injured Mrs. Johnson was taken home, glad that she had suffered only a broken leg.

But after they got back to the cars the train hardly began to tell stories of old railway men who had forgotten to wave anything red when to do it meant saving lives.

Katie is a slight child with tawny hair, cold steady blue eyes, and clear waxen pink complexion. She has about her an air of one who thinks and acts quickly, and with fearless resolution.

How Accident Occurred. "We all had been to Philadelphia that day," said Mrs. Johnson. "I had with me a little four-year-old boy, Herbert Durand, and Katie. When we got back to Mount Holly I was pretty tired and thought I would walk home the shortest way. This led me over the bridge near the station. The children were ahead of me but a short distance, and were getting over the bridge nicely. We walked on a plank that runs across the middle of the bridge. I was about half way across, I think, when my foot slipped off this plank and caused me to fall, knocking down little Herbert, and nearly rolling him into the creek. After I had put him on his feet I started to get up, and in doing so made a misstep that plunged both my feet and then my body between two ties, until only my head and shoulders were above the bridge.

"I saved myself from dropping into the creek below by spreading out my arms when I felt myself going down. I screamed as I fell and this attracted the attention of Katie, who was a little distance ahead of me. She came running back and taking hold of one arm tried to help me up, but I could not lift myself enough to get out. While I was thinking what to do, whether I should drop into the creek below or try some other means of getting loose, I found Katie had left me and started for the station for help.

Woman Caught Between Ties. "There on the bridge, which the train would have crossed in five seconds more, they found a woman, badly hurt. She had tried to walk across the bridge and had slipped, falling between the ties. There she was tightly wedged. Her head and shoulders protruded above the ties. Any locomotive that crossed would have decapitated her instantly. And she was so tightly stuck in between the ties that had any train passed over, there would have been no chance for escape. It was Katie's mother.

"I fell," she gasped, "while Katie and I were crossing the bridge on the way to town. I was caught fast. Suddenly the train hands and some of the passengers pulled Mrs. Johnson out of her perilous position. Then they found that her left leg had been fractured. She never could have helped herself; she would have been killed instantly.

Katie Not Excited. The women passengers turned to little Katie, who didn't seem to think she had done anything out of the ordinary. There she was, standing on the bridge trying to comfort her mother, who was suffering intense pain from her broken leg. The women covered her with kisses, which Katie didn't seem to relish, because she was excited over feeling that somebody would get a carriage to take her mother home.

"I remember thinking of an accident which I saw several years ago on this very bridge, when an old man was killed, when he sat on the edge of the bridge, and the train came along and he was run over. I remember that his heart had fallen right near where I was standing, and that as I looked at it I could see it beat two or three times. The memory of this night came flashing over me as I waited for the train, and I think for a moment I must have fainted.

Realized Child's Bravery. "I did not open my eyes until I heard Katie's voice at my side and felt the strong arms of the trainmen lifting me and carrying me to the station. And there I wept. I guess hysterically, for I then realized just how brave the child's act was, for I knew that when Katie started up the track waving the muffer, she never intended to get off the track until she had stopped the train."

All that Katie would say about her part in averting a tragedy was: "You see, the engine had to stop, for I had a red signal. You know that always stops a train, and I waved it at the engineer because I didn't know anything else to do to make him stop. I couldn't lift mother out and so I just had to stop the train. I don't think there is anything funny in that."

"No, I wasn't afraid. What should I be afraid of? Didn't I have the red muffer? Don't trains always stop when the man at the flaghouse waves a red flag? Well, then, what should I be afraid of?"

That's the kind of a girl Katie is. She knew no fear. She had absolute confidence that the red flag controlled the motion of the wheels of the ponderous "iron horse" and made her mother's life perfectly safe.

EFFECT OF WOMEN VOTING.

British Writer Tells of Conditions in New Zealand.

New Zealand was the first British colony to adopt women's suffrage—as far back as 1893. Says a writer in the London Chronicle, "The New Zealand woman was given universal adult suffrage. Though she had not sought it, she immediately used it. Out of 140,000 women 109,000 had placed themselves on the register in a few months, and 90,000 voted in the general election of November, 1893. They voted peacefully and in order during the day while the men were at work, and left the booths to the men in the evening. They have voted with similar regularity and orderliness ever since. How do the women use their powers? Very wisely, by all accounts. Roughly, women make very much the same use of the franchise as do men. The result has not produced either a new heaven or a new hell. Men have not been deprived of their rights. There has been no disorder or unseemly behavior—no strange revolution in dress or manners. Enfranchisement has led neither to divided households nor divided skirts. Families, as a matter of fact, generally vote on the same side. But on the other hand, there is a general agreement that family life has become brighter, that husbands and wives have more subjects in common to talk about, and that women are really setting themselves to study and watch public affairs."

"The effects, in fact, have been rather social than political. Women seem to be treated with more real respect—and not merely at election times. There has arisen between the sexes that sense of equality which is perhaps the only permanent and enduring social basis. Speaking generally, they have simply become citizens, whose part in public affairs is not sharply distinguished from that of men. New Zealand women have simply stepped into equality. And 14 years of political life have shown them equal to that equality. Working side by side with man, woman still keeps her place—not like to like, but like in difference."

"The word pictures of which colonists used to have so many given them of domestic discord, of children forgotten, husbands uncared for, dinners uncooked, dress and appearances neglected—have already almost passed from memory. It is the commonest sight to see husband, wife and grown-up children walking or driving cheerfully to the polls together. The head of the family has become a more important factor in politics than of old."

The Horse Doctor. Little Mattie flew into the house last evening very late for nursery tea, and hurried to her mother's chair. "Oh, mother," she cried, "don't scold me, for I've had such a disappointment! A horse fell down in the street and they said they were going to send for a horse doctor, so of course I had to stay. And after I waited and waited he came, and my mother, what do you think, it was only a man!"—Harper's.

Children Should Eat Fat. Fat is essential to the proper growth of the tissues of the nerves and brain, and is peculiarly important to children, as the brain enlarges rapidly during childhood. Next to butter and cream, bacon is one of the most palatable forms in which it can be given. If should not be over-cooked, as then too much of the fat is fried out. Sometimes bread soaked in bacon fat will be eaten with relish.

Ventilation by Columns. Ventilation through iron columns is an interesting feature of a mill at Preston, England. Air is drawn in at ground level, forced by fans through a water spray, heated by coils in the usual way, and then distributed from subducts below the basement level to its different rooms, the iron columns having registers near their tops. Flues in the walls provide for the escape of air from these rooms.

LOOKS LIKE SCARE

TALK OF DIVERTING FOREIGN BLOWS AT OUR TRADE.

If Blows in the Shape of Hostile Tariff Discrimination Shall Be in Fact Struck, Then the United States Should Be Prepared to Return Blow for Blow.

Of direct significance to American producers is the official outlying as to the threatened tariff imbroglio with France. The fact that the announcement was made through the Associated Press sufficiently indicates its authority and origin. There is no mistaking the purpose and the intent of the opening paragraph of the statement.

Washington, March 6.—The executive branch of the government has abandoned all hope of finding any concessions which it can offer the French government to prevent the application of the maximum tariff rates on American products not specifically exempted therefrom by existing arrangements. The situation as to France is therefore similar to that as to Germany, in neither case can this government at present meet the demand for a reciprocal treaty as the price of minimum tariff rates for American goods and products. Through their embassies at Washington the two countries named have been made aware of this fact, and also that it remains for congress to decide whether it cares to divert these blows at the American export trade by approving reciprocity treaties with France and Germany."

If it had been framed by the American Reciprocal Tariff League, this statement could hardly be more suggestive of an intention to tamper with our protective tariff system under the alleged stress of a necessity "to divert these blows at the American export trade."

How are these blows to be averted? Not by the executive branch of the government, for it has abandoned all hope, we are told. By the action of congress, then. But congress has adjourned and will not meet again in regular session until next December.

So congress cannot divert these blows inside of ten months. That is, unless the country can be sufficiently frightened to demand that congress be called together in extraordinary session to meet and avert this fearful danger. Was the official pronouncement through the Associated Press prepared with this end in view? Possibly so.

If the scare produces the desired effect, if the American people can be thrown into a public frenzy because Germany and France have threatened to at some time or other do something awful to our export trade, unless they are permitted to force a downward revision of the American tariff, then, of course, there will be a general demonstration in behalf of prompt action through an extra-session of congress. Is this the object of the scare proclamation of March 6? Is there nothing to be done that will save the situation except the hasty summoning of congress into extra session and the hurried passage of a law authorizing the executive branch of the government to allow foreign nations to "dictate what the American tariff shall be?"

Yes; there is something else that can be done to "divert these blows." The executive branch can assert its dignity and its courage by calmly awaiting the progress of events; by not dodging before a blow is struck; by not squealing until it is hurt; and then, when the threatened blows shall have been dealt, by taking prompt measures of defense and retaliation. If the emergency of actual tariff discrimination shall present itself next June or July, or at any other time between now and the first Monday in December—and we have not the slightest idea that either the German or the French bluffs will be carried into effect before next December, if at all—then congress can be called into extra session.

To do what? Certainly not to "lay down" to Germany and France. To strike back and hit hard by the adoption of a high maximum tariff that will make the exporters of $300,000,000 worth of German and French goods shiver in their boots. If there is to be an extra session of congress to deal with threatened blows at the American export trade, that is what it should be called for, and not to surrender the American tariff system at the dictation of any one or more foreign nations. But meanwhile, as we have said, there is an apparent significance in the Associated Press official pronouncement that the industrial producers will do well to take note of. Direct tariff revision has been postponed until 1909, it is said, but has indirect revision also been postponed?

Revision through reciprocity concessions to Germany and France would be an easy form of revision. It would also prove to be the very worst form that tariff revision could possibly take. We do not assert that such is the true inwardness of the announcement of March 6, but we think it would be wise for those concerned to be on the lookout for developments.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY.

Arrangement May Involve Destruction of Protective System.

As the provisional arrangement with Germany made about a year ago, whereby importations into Germany from the United States received the benefit of the minimum tariff, would have expired next June, with the result of exposing American merchandise to the imposition of a duty and possibly of precipitating a tariff war, it is gratifying to learn that Ambassador von Sternburg has been authorized by his government to renew the existing understanding for a period sufficiently extended to allow of the negotiation of some permanent agreement. The basis of the negotiation is to be furnished by the North commission, which went to Berlin several months ago to confer with the German tariff authorities and which lately returned bringing with it a report whose contents have not yet been publicly disclosed. It is this report which is embodied in the treaty which the senate will be inclined to ratify when congress reassembles.

It must be said that the problem presented is one of extreme difficulty. Germany has adopted a tariff with maximum and minimum schedules. Countries which make concessions to Germany in their customs duties get the benefit of the latter, while to all others the former are applied. The difference between the two is in many respects very considerable. In some things it is so great as to exclude the products of the non-favored country from the German market, and had the discrimination been enforced against the United States trade would have been injuriously affected. Most European countries have qualified for participation in the minimum rates by a reciprocal reduction of duty, but the United States has thus far declined to enter into any such arrangement and the chances that it will agree to do so in the near future are not worth considering.

Reciprocity seems fair and looks easy, but as soon as the attempt is made to apply the principle of it to practice insurmountable difficulties are encountered. We are asked to reduce the tariff rates on certain lines of German production. Why? Obviously in order that the German producer may be enabled to sell his product more largely in the American market. But if he does that it must be at the expense of his American competitor, because such articles as this country does not produce are nearly all on the free list. Thus the proposition is that certain American manufacturers shall be excluded from the benefits of the protective system. But that system must be for all or none, so that the idea of reciprocity legally involves its destruction. The people who were sacrificed would naturally go over to the other side.

Another thing. Concessions made to Germany in return for an abatement in the tariff could hardly be refused to Great Britain, which is our best customer and which on most of our merchandise charges no duty whatever. It will be seen that the subject bristles with thorny points. Philadelphia Inquirer.

ANOTHER SALTON SEA CALAMITY THAT MIGHT HAPPEN.

Tariff Reformer: "And to know I did it with my reform shovel! What happiness is mine!"

Borrowed from Germany. Secretary Root, in setting up the double tariff system as an ideal, simply borrows from German tariff procedure. Germany can have no reasonable ground for complaint if instead of meeting her with special favors we open her for the benefit of a minimum schedule available for all comers—such as she offers to us.

Not Germany, but Great Britain, is the largest buyer in American markets. Great Britain is also a large market for German goods. The British, without a protective tariff, are not in a position to offer special favors. But the fact that entrance to their markets is absolutely free—as free to the foreigner as to the Briton—has caused Germany, we understand, to give the British the benefit of the German minimum rate. Were we to adopt the German tariff system and give Germany the benefit of our minimum schedule we would be under no obligation to impose the maximum schedule on Great Britain. But would that be more satisfactory to Germany than our present course?—Pittsburg Chronicle.

What Was Promised. The Republican party promised in 1896 to restore the reciprocity policy. Philadelphia Record.

But the promise was not of reciprocity in competing products. It was distinctly specified that articles received from other countries under reciprocity arrangements should be "articles which we do not ourselves produce." The Republican party has never promised reciprocity on any other basis. It never will, never can promise reciprocity in competing products until it shall first decide to abandon the policy of protection.

AS ONE'S JOURNEY THROUGH LIFE.

The almighty man, sailing over the steeps. Looks down on the crawling auto people. The man in the foreign car majestically. Looks down on the folks in the car domestic. The man in the auto chuf-chuf-chuf-er. Looks down on the man with the horse buggy. The man who must drive when he wants to travel. Looks down on the man who must trudge the gravel. The man who must walk has a peculiar frown on. There's nobody left that he may look down on. Life.

The Bright Side. "Oh this poverty!" wept the beautiful wife when her shifty-eyed husband came home. "The gas and electric companies have shut off their service because you have not paid their bills." "Well, we can use candles," consoled the husband. "And the telephone company has disconnected our instrument because we owe them two months' rental." "So much the better. If anyone tries to ring us up to spend the evening with us they will think we are not at home."—Judge.

Rest Pluribus. Stubb—Some genius has invented a phonograph that will run night and day without stopping. Would you pay much for music like that? Penn—I should say so. Stubb—Pay for the machine? Penn—No; pay a fine for flicking the man that owned it if he lived within six blocks of my home. Chicago Daily News.

Differentiation. If a woman weighs 300 pounds and— Is worth a million dollars, she has a full figure; Is worth five hundred thousand, she is plump; Is worth a hundred thousand, she is fat; Is worth a thousand only, she is fat—Life.

No Chances. "How is it," asked Mrs. Younglove, "that you never compare my biscuits to those your mother used to make?" "My dear girl," replied her husband, "my mother was the corresponding secretary of a How-to-Make-Home-Happy club. She never had time to make biscuits."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Quite a Difference. He I see by this paper that the foot of a woman should measure one seventh the length of her body. She—Nonsense! Look at my foot. Does that look as if it were one-seventh the length of my body? "That's not your foot I'm looking at, that's your shoe!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Orange Blossoms. "How lovely you look in those rose blossoms, Miss Maud!" said the devoted young man. "Is the rose your favorite flower?" "Oh, yes, I am very fond of roses, replied Miss Maud, "but, do you know I should like to see how I would look in orange blossoms." Hint taken.

A Careful Soul. "Pardon, madam, but you put your hat to a curious use." "Well, you see, my umbrella cost me $15, and naturally I am careful of it—but my hat cost only three dollars."—Detroit Free Press.

His Duty. "I know a man who is responsible for a big jail delivery, and yet has escaped without even question." "He must have a strong pull." "No, he hasn't any. He is merely the carrier on that post."—Baltimore American.

Less Majestic. Ann—You don't tell me that the gem of a cook left Mrs. Dust? Flo—Yes; you see Mrs. Dust refused to change grocers when the cook and the delivery-boy fell out. Puck.

Proof That He Doesn't. "She says her husband doesn't know a thing about poker." "I think she's eminently right." "Why so?" "He never wins anything."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Hopeless. First Burglar—What, back so soon? Second Burglar—Nothing else; we've got to go. There's a reformed player's bill layin' on the table. Royce's.

Nessen Sinks In Two Minutes

First Marine Mishap of the Season.

The Barge-M. J. Nessen cleared East Jordan Wednesday morning with a load of hardwood lumber, and was sunk by the ice near Lake's dock—within this side of Ironton—within an hour. The boat was loaded so that the iron protecting her bow were below the water and she mashed the wood. When it was discovered that she was filling an attempt was made to beach her, which was done in about 30 feet of water.

The M. J. Nessen is owned by J. O. Nessen & Co. of Manistee and was clearing for Chicago. She was built at Lorain in 1880 and was 148 feet long and 37 feet beam. It is worth about $20,000.

The managers lost no time getting here, when informed of the wreck, and the next day a crew were at work making preparations to raise same.

Talk about the three fathers, the Nessen certainly had 'em this trip. In coming up their wheelman was taken ill. While loading lumber the captain, Chris Edwardsou, fell from a lumber pile and was quite badly injured receiving a severe scalp wound and other injuries. The first mate was in charge at the time of the sinking.

CHADDOCK DISTRICT.

Some witty days.
Mrs. B. C. Gundersen has gone to Southern Michigan to care for a sick daughter.

The Grange entertained about fifty guests. Games were played and the young folks enjoyed an hour of dancing and all enjoyed a well loaded table of good things to eat.

Harry Webster has gone to Boyne City; he is employed for the summer with the Longshoremen's Union.

M. J. Rahting is remodeling the interior of his dwelling and making some good improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Loader of Boyne City are visiting this week at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anderson.

The school entertained a party of visitors Friday afternoon with recitations, debate and graphophone.

Miss Eva Heller is teaching school in the Hills district, Wilson township.

Earl Ruiling was a Mancelona visitor—first of the week.

The recent snow storm sent some of the less fortunate farmers haying.

Here Next Monday

America's greatest colored show, J. Rockwell's "New Sunny South" company, will be at Loviday Opera House, Monday evening, April 15th. This organization recently appeared in Kalamazoo, Mich., and the Daily Gazette of that city, of March 4th 1907, speaking of the performance said, "The company of colored folks at the Academy, Saturday, afternoon and evening, under the title of the "Sunny South" was a highly meritorious one. There was only a fair house at the matinee, but the quality of the performance was such as to draw a packed house at night. They are about as clever a bunch of colored folks as has ever been gotten together, and can draw a full house whenever they play Kalamazoo in the future." The high class silver cornet band carried by the organization, will parade the principal streets at 5:30 p. m. Admission 25, 35 and 50 cents. Box seats 75 cents.

A Gallant Highwayman.

A highwayman recently held up a gasoline runabout on the outskirts of Rome. The highwayman stopped the runabout with a shot in the air. Then he ran forth from the bomb that had concealed him—the holdup happened on the Annaplan Way—and found to his surprise only a woman in the little car. "Where, madam, is your husband?" he demanded sternly and suspiciously. "He's under the seat," she answered, flushing.

"Then," said the highwayman, "I will take nothing. It's bad enough to have a husband like that without being robbed into the bargain."

Evolution of Chemistry.

First chemists were the alchemists who for hundreds of years vainly tried to make gold by compounding various chemicals. Chemistry was introduced into Spain by the Moors in 1150, and the Chinese and Egyptians claimed an early acquaintance with it. However, chemistry was not a science until the seventeenth century. Boerhaave was the first to combine the study of chemistry with medicine, and since then its evolution has been rapid.

The Bee-keeper's Meet.

The Northern Michigan Bee-keepers Association met in Old Fellows Hall, over Boosinger Bros. store, Wednesday and Thursday, April 10th and 11th.

While local attendance was not as large as was expected, there was a goodly attendance from out of town and a very interesting session was held.

L. A. Asperwill of Jackson, Mich., of "Non-swarming hive fame" was present, and discussed the many important features of the hive.

Geo. E. Hilton of Fremont, Mich., officer of the National Bee-keepers Association, gave us some very interesting talks. Among others, from out of town that were present were: E. E. Coveyou, Petoskey; S. D. Chapman Mancelona; J. W. Harris, St. Louis; Geo. H. Kirkpatrick, Rapid City; James Martin, Alden; Mrs. G. M. Morrow, Central Lake; E. D. Townsend, Remus; H. E. Brown, Ellsworth; C. E. Smith, Cheboygan; J. S. Barkholder, Mancelona; S. Coulthard, Ypsilanti.

Officers elected for the following year are:

President—E. D. Townsend, Remus
Vice Pres.—C. F. Smith, Cheboygan
Secretary—Treasurer—E. E. Coveyou Petoskey.

Next meeting will be held at Mancelona, 1908. The Annual Picnic will also be held at Mancelona at the time of the Meet of the Association and we expect one of the largest and best meetings ever held by the Association.

The name of "I" is in Hebrew for or Jot, a haud, and the earliest characters representative of the sound closely resemble a hand with but three fingers. Little by little one finger after another dropped off until only the little finger was left, and the letter became the smallest in the alphabet, a jot or tittle, that is, the "I" and its dot being synonymous of the most insignificant things that could be described.

These are the jolly days up north when it snows one day and rains the next and sleets the third, and makes the face of nature as smooth as a looking glass, when a man's feet fly out from under him and refuse to cease their erratic course until requested in writing, when men carry around with them bruises as large as soup plates caused by contact with mother earth without the formality of an introduction, when bumps are found on heads instead of logs and when the firmament is perpetually filled with red, white, blue and green stars that were never photod on an astronomic map.—Miami (Fla.) Rockwell's "Sunny South," given in the Grand opera house Saturday night by a colored troupe was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The colored people proved to be excellent entertainers and kept the audience in a roar of laughter all the time they were before the public. In a nutshell the play was the return of an old darkey to the plantation in which the children, consisting of the entire troupe, celebrated in honor of his return. From that time on it was a merry round of jollification, consisting of solos, the entire company; dancing specialties, new and humorous skits and remarks and some excellent fancy dancing and buck and wing dancing. The specialties introduced were especially pleasing, especially so was the work on roller skates in which the audience laughed until they cried. The skater finally turned out to be an expert who performed some fine work on the toes of the skates as well as doing some fancy "stunts." The Sunny South quartet was especially good, as was the entire production.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

The Modern Woodmen of America which now has about 80 members at this place, will initiate an additional class of fifty new members in the near future. Elaborate preparations are being made for this occasion, which will take place in the city opera house. Many other camps from the neighboring towns will be present to enjoy the good time prepared. The Modern Woodmen, today, is the largest fraternal insurance order, by far, in the world, having a total membership of 845,624—in good standing. The cost in cheapness and marvelous growth cannot help but appeal to any one in carrying insurance. It is managed and governed entirely by the members whose efforts have not only made the largest and strongest body of its kind but have extended a fraternal spirit among its members, elevating and directing their choice among the best citizens of our country. East Jordan Camp will spare no means to make the coming event a grand success, and invite those without this protection, to join the class. One of the late attractions in our city was the country fair, the managers being the Christian Endeavors of the Presbyterian church. April 5th was the date. A large crowd of mortals, some with shined boots, bled shirts, stovepipe hats, the lad with his best girl, the old and young, and the colored gentry were seen passing the gate keeper eager to see the sights. The first to meet their view was display carnations, five cents apiece. Each one drawing a prize. The candy and ice cream booths were attractive with flowers, flags, etc. and were well patronized. The jemo jemo, the pink kind, and popcorn nice, fresh buttered popcorn, were the sounds that greeted the passersby, as also did the Italians with their fruit always fresh. In the rear of the grounds was a part of the midway plaisance of the World's Fair, and one was bewildered by the ringing melodies of the orriers for each attraction. The gipsy fortune teller with her wily ways told the past, present and future to those who visited her. Here we found all class, the hopeless maiden seeking for a streak of luck whereby she might yet be made happy with the thought of not wandering all alone through this vale of tears. The bachelor pleading for some ray of hope, the young lad and lassie with bright expectations yet looking for blighter ones, the small boy and girl drawn in by the mysterious power of the supernatural. Father on the strong man with his wonderful power of endurance and display of athletics. The Indians Hawatha and Minnehaha, still in their wild character, and native dress, beating the tom tom, singing their plaintive songs Hay ay ay, and giving the dances peculiar to themselves, drew crowds of admirers and captivated the small boy and girl. Their tepee was adorned with skins painted and Indian blankets. Space will not admit of all the attractions but the managers were genial and ever ready to help the wanderers through the crowds. All in all it was crowned with success and credit is due the young people for securing such an attraction for our city.—Polinscitta.

XXXIII.

"MY RIGHT EYE OFFENDS ME."

Next day Langdon's stocks wavered, going up a little, going down a little, closing at practically the same figures at which they had opened. Then I sprang my sensation—that Langdon and his particular clique, though they controlled the Textile Trust, did not own so much as one-fiftieth of its voting stock. These "captains of industry" that they were, they made their profits not out of dividends, but out of side schemes, that absorbed about two-thirds of the earnings of the Trust, and out of gambling in its bonds and stocks. I said in conclusion:

"The largest owner of the stock is Walter G. Edmunds, of Chicago—an honest man. Send your voting proxies to him, and he can take the Textile company away from those now plundering it."

As the annual election of the Trust was only six weeks away, Langdon and his clique were in a panic. They rushed into the market and bought frantically, the public bidding against them—Langdon himself went to Chicago to reason with Edmunds—that is, to try to find out at what figure he could be bought. And so on day after day, I faithfully reporting to the public the main occurrences behind the scenes. The Langdon attempt to regain control by purchases of stock failed. He and his allies made what must have been to them appalling sacrifices; but even at the high prices they offered, comparatively little of the stock appeared.

"I've caught them," said I joyfully the first time, and the last, during that campaign that I indulged in a boast.

"If Edmunds sticks to you," replied cautious Joe.

But Edmunds did not. I do not know at what price he sold himself. Probably it was pitifully small; probably usually scratches the instant bait tickles its nose. But I do know that my faith in human nature got its severest shock.

Fortunately, Edmunds had held out, or, rather, Langdon had delayed approaching him, long enough to tag to gain my main point. The impact over the Textile Trust had become so great that the national department of commerce dared not refuse an investigation; and I straightway began to spread out in my own papers the facts of the trust's enormous earnings, and of the shameful sources of those earnings.

In the midst of the admiration of the masses over the triumph of a man that captured an industry and was wanted to me as I fell asleep at night in the midst of all the turmoil, I was often in a great and brooding silence, looking for her, now with the impetuous energy of passion, and now with the sad ache of love. What was she doing? What was she thinking?

Now that Langdon had again placed her false for the old price, with what eyes was she looking into the future? Alva, seated in a West Side apartment not far from the ancestral white elephant, telephoned, asking me to come. I went, because she could and would give me news of Alva. But as I entered her little drawing-room, I said: "It was curiosity that brought me. I wished to see how you were getting on."

"Isn't it nice and snug?" cried she. "Bill and I haven't the slightest difficulty in finding each other—as people often have in the big houses." And it was Billy this and Billy that, and what Billy said and thought and felt—and before they were married, she had called him William, and had deigned "Billy" to be the most offensive combination of letters that ever fell from human lips.

"I needn't ask if you are happy," said I presently, with a dismal failure at looking cheerful. "I can't stay but a moment," I added, and then I had obeyed my feelings. I'd have risen up and taken myself and my pain away from surroundings as hateful to me as a summer sunrise in a beach-chamber.

"Oh," she exclaimed, in some confusion. "Then excuse me." And she hastened from the room.

I thought she had gone to order, or perhaps to bring, the tea. The long minutes dragged away until I had guessed. Hearing a rustling in the hall, I rose, intending to take leave of the instant she appeared. The rustling stopped just outside. I waited a few seconds, cried: "Well, I'm off. Next time I want to be alone, I'll know where to come," and advanced to the door. It was not Alva, hesitating there; it was Anita.

"Beg your pardon," said I, coldly. "If there had been room to pass I should have gone. What devil possessed me? Certainly in all our relations I had found her direct and frank, if a thing, too frank. Doubtless it was the influence of my associations down town, where for so many months I had been dealing with the 'short-card' crowd of high finance, who would hardly play the game straight even when that was the easy way to me. My long, steady stretch in that stealthy and sinuous company had put me in the state of mind in which it is impossible to credit any human being with a motive that is decent or an action that is not a dead-fall. Thus the obvious transformation in her made no impression on me. Her haughtiness, her coldness, were gone; and with them had gone all that had been least like her natural self, most like the repellent conventional pattern to which her mother and her associates had molded her. But I was saying to myself: "A trap! Langdon has gone back to his wife. She turns to me." And I loved her and hated her. "Never," thought I, "has she shown so poor an opinion of me as now."

"My uncle told me day before yesterday that it was not he but you," she said, lifting her eyes to mine. "It is inconceivable to me now that I could have misread their honest story; yet I did."

"I had no idea your uncle's notion of honor was also eccentric," said I, with a satirical smile that made the blood rush to her face.

"That is unjust to him," she replied, earnestly.

"He says he made you no promise of secrecy," and he confessed to me only because he wished to convince me that he had good reason for his high opinion of you."

"Really?" said I, ironically. "And no doubt he found you open wide to conviction now. This a subtlety to me. She came into the room and seated herself. "Won't you stop, please, for a moment longer?" she said. "I hope that, at least, we can part without bitterness. I understand now that everything is over between us: A woman's vanity makes her believe that a man cares for her die hard. I am convinced now—I assure you, I am. I shall trouble you no more about the past. But I have the right to ask you to hear me when I say that Langdon came, and that I myself sent him away; sent him back to his wife!"

"Touching self-sacrifice," said I, ironically.

"No," she replied. "I cannot claim any credit. I sent him away only because you and Alva had taught me how to judge him better. I do not despise him as do you; I know too well what has made him what he is. But I had to send him away."

"My comment was an incredulous look and shrug. 'I must be going,' I said.

"You do not believe me?" she asked.

"In my place, would you believe?" replied I. "You say I have taught you. Well, you have taught me, too—for instance, that the years you've spent on your knees in the dusty temple of conventionality before false gods have made you—fit only for the Langdon sort of thing. You can't learn how to stand erect, and your eyes cannot bear the light."

"I am sorry," she said, slowly, hesitatingly, "that your faith in me died just when I might, perhaps, have justified it. Ours has been a pitiful series of misunderstandings."

"A trap! A trap!" I was warning myself. "You've been a fool long enough, Blacklock." And aloud I said: "Well, Anita, the series is ended now. There is no longer any occasion for our lying or posing to each other. Any arrangements your uncle's lawyers suggest will be made."

I was bowing, to leave without shaking hands with her. But she would not have it so. "Please!" she said, stretching out her long, slender arm and offering me her hand.

What a devil possessed me that day! With every atom of me longing for her, I yet was able to take her hand and say, with a smile, that was, I doubt not, as mocking as my tone: "By all

Thursday—Friday—Saturday. Apparently all was tranquil; apparently the people accepted the Wall Street theory that I was an "exploded sensation." "The Seven" began to preen themselves; the strain upon them to maintain prices, if no less than for three months past, was not notably greater; the crisis would pass, I and my exposures would be forgotten, the routine of reaping the harvest and leaving only the gleanings for the sowers would soon be placidly resumed.

Sunday, Roebuck taken ill as he was passing the basket in the church of which he was the shining light, died at midnight—a beautiful, peaceful death, they say, with his daughter reading the Bible aloud, and his lips moving in prayer. I cannot. I must leave it to your memory or your imagination.

For years the financial leaders, crazed by the excess of power which the people had in ignorance and over-confidence and slyly good nature permitted them to acquire, had been tearing out the hoarse foundations on which alone so vast a structure can hope to rest solid and secure. They had been substituting rotten beams painted to look like stone and iron. The crash had to come; the sooner, the better—when a thing is wrong, each day's delay compounds the cost of righting it. me. She came into the room and seated herself. "Won't you stop, please, for a moment longer?" she said. "I hope that, at least, we can part without bitterness. I understand now that everything is over between us: A woman's vanity makes her believe that a man cares for her die hard. I am convinced now—I assure you, I am. I shall trouble you no more about the past. But I have the right to ask you to hear me when I say that Langdon came, and that I myself sent him away; sent him back to his wife!"

"Touching self-sacrifice," said I, ironically.

"No," she replied. "I cannot claim any credit. I sent him away only because you and Alva had taught me how to judge him better. I do not despise him as do you; I know too well what has made him what he is. But I had to send him away."

"My comment was an incredulous look and shrug. 'I must be going,' I said.

"You do not believe me?" she asked.

"In my place, would you believe?" replied I. "You say I have taught you. Well, you have taught me, too—for instance, that the years you've spent on your knees in the dusty temple of conventionality before false gods have made you—fit only for the Langdon sort of thing. You can't learn how to stand erect, and your eyes cannot bear the light."

"I am sorry," she said, slowly, hesitatingly, "that your faith in me died just when I might, perhaps, have justified it. Ours has been a pitiful series of misunderstandings."

"YOU DO NOT BELIEVE ME?" SHE ASKED.

let her know that I understood why she was seeking me.

"No," she answered, lowering her eyes. "I knew better than he."

"For an instant this spoken in a voice I had long given up hope of ever hearing from her, staggered my cynical conviction. But—"Possibly she thinks she is sincere," reasoned my head with my heart; "except the sincerest woman, brought up as she is, always have the calculator underneath; they deny it, they don't know it often, but there it is; with them, calculation is as involuntary and automatic as their pulse." So, I said to her, mockingly: "Doubtless your opinion of me has been improving steadily ever since you heard that Mrs. Langdon had recovered her husband."

She winced, as if I had struck her. "Oh," she murmured. "If she had been the ordinary woman, who in every crisis with man instinctively resorts to 'weakness,' strongest 'weakness,' I might have a different story to tell. But she fought back the tears in which her eyes were swimming and gathered herself together. "That is brutal," she said, with not a touch of haughtiness, but not humbly, either. "But I deserve it."

"There was a time," I went on, swept in a swift current of cold rage, "there was a time when I would have taken you on almost any terms. A man never makes a complete fool of himself about a woman but once in his life, they say. I have done my stretch—and it is over."

She sighed wearily. "Langdon came to see me soon after I left your house, and went to my uncle," she said. "I will tell you what happened."

"I do not wish to hear," replied I, adding pointedly, "I have been battling ever since you left for news of your plans."

She grew white, and my heart sank means let us be friends. And Langdon you will not think me discourteous if I say that I shall feel safer in one friendship when we are both on neutral ground."

"As I was turning away, her look, my own heart, made me turn again. I caught her by the shoulders. I gazed into her eyes. "If I could only trust you, could you believe you?" I cried.

"You cared for me when I was worth it," she said. "Now that I am more like what you once imagined me to be, do not care."

"In between us rose Langdon's face—cynical, mocking, contemptuous. "Your heart is his! You told me so; don't lie to me!" I exclaimed. And before she could reply, I was gone.

Out from under the spell of her presence, back among the tricksters and assassins, the traps and ambushes of Wall Street, I believed again; believed dimly the promptings of the devil that possessed me. "She would have given you a brief fool's paradise," said that devil. "Then what a hideous awakening!" And I cursed the day when New York's insidious snobishness had tempted my vanity into starting me on that degrading chase after "respectability."

"If she does not move to free herself soon," said I to myself. "I will put my own lawyer to work. My right eye offends me. I will pluck it out."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"WILD WEEK."

"The Seven" made their fatal move on Updegraff's advice, I suspect. But they would not have adopted his suggestion had it not been so exactly congenial to their own temper of arrogance and tyranny and contempt for the people who meekly, year after year, presented themselves for the shearing with fatuous bleats of enthusiasm.

"The Seven," of course, controlled directly or indirectly, all but a few of the newspapers with which I had advertising contracts. They also controlled the main sources through which the press was supplied with news—and often well they had used this control, and surprisingly cautious had they been not to abuse it that the editors and the public would become suspicious. When my war was at its height, when I was beginning to congratulate myself that the huge magazines of "The Seven" were empty almost to the point at which they must sue for peace on my own terms, all in four days 43 of my 67 newspapers—and they the most important— notified me that they would no longer carry out their contracts to publish my daily letter. They gave as their reason, not the real one, fear of "The Seven," but that I would involve them in ruinous libel suits, I who had legal proof for every statement I made; I who was always careful to understate! Next, one press association after another ceased to send out my letter as never though they had been doing so regularly for months. The public had grown tired of the "sensational," they said.

I countered with a telegram to one or more newspapers in every city and large town in the United States:

"The Seven" are trying to cut the wires between the truth and the public. If you wish my daily letter, telegraph me direct and I will send it at my expense."

The response should have warned "The Seven." But it did not. Under their orders the telegraph companies refused to transmit the letter. I got an injunction. It was obeyed in typical, corrupt corporation fashion—they sent my matter, but so garbled that it was unintelligible. I appealed to the courts, in vain.

To me, it was clear as sun in cloudless noonday sky that there could be but one result of this insolent and despotic denial of my rights and the rights of the people, this public confession of the truth of my charges. I turned everything salable or more valuable into cash, locked the cash up in my private vaults, and waited for the cataclysm.

Thursday—Friday—Saturday. Apparently all was tranquil; apparently the people accepted the Wall Street theory that I was an "exploded sensation." "The Seven" began to preen themselves; the strain upon them to maintain prices, if no less than for three months past, was not notably greater; the crisis would pass, I and my exposures would be forgotten, the routine of reaping the harvest and leaving only the gleanings for the sowers would soon be placidly resumed.

CARE OF THE SICK ROOM.

Above All Things the Walls Should Be Kept Dry.

When the bedroom becomes a sick room there is an added reason why extreme precautions should be used to keep the room in a thoroughly sanitary condition.

Above all things, the bedroom should never be damp. It should be nice and dry, always warm and comfortable in winter, cool and airy in summer, and bright and sunny some parts of the day.

If there is any suspicion of dampness in a bedroom it is probably due to the absorption of water by the paper which frequently acts as a blotting paper and holds quantities of water in it. The use of wallpaper on walls is to be deprecated; it means disease, ill health and unhappiness. It is frequently the cause of lung trouble, not only because of its dampness but also because of its power to retain infection of many kinds.

The desired method of treating a bedroom wall is to tint it for the alkaline wall is a perfect wall. It never flakes off, chips or peels. It absorbs moisture and expels it, it opens the pores of the plaster and makes a room livable and breathable.

The floor in the bedroom should be light, cleanable, dainty rugs that can be easily shaken and a floor that is thoroughly oiled or varnished, that will not absorb moisture. The cracks in the floor should be thoroughly filled and covered. Woodwork in the bedroom should be attended to carefully. Window sills should be thoroughly varnished or waxed, and the window casings kept in perfect order. The doors should be wiped off frequently as also should be all the standing woodwork in the bedroom, as the presence of dust on woodwork is a menace to health as well as an evidence of poor housekeeping.

Curious Maps. Maps for military and general field use are produced by Dr. O. H. F. Vollbrecht, of Hagensee, Berlin, as microscopic transparencies, each about one and one-half inch by two inches in size. These form slides for the micro-photoscope, a special instrument having a hand-mirror-shaped frame, to which is attached a slide-holder, with a movable lens over it. The lens slides in two directions, about 70 square miles being shown in each position.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury. Mercury will surely destroy the mucous membrane of the eye, and will completely derange the vision when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such ointments should never be used except on prescription of a reliable physician. The following will do ten fold the good you can possibly derive from them. Hill's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by H. J. Carter & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hill's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. Carpets from Paper. The proprietors of an Australian carpet factory at Maffersdorf have stated to have acquired German patents which embody a method of manufacturing carpets or floor coverings from paper. The raw material can be made in all colors, is washable, and will probably prove itself a rival to linoleum.

TIRED BACKS.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be averted. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Me., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

Queer Idea of Chinese.

The following is a quite modern Chinese conception of the foreigners' treatment of infectious cases: "If an epidemic broke out, two foreigners took the sick away and put them in a little room, washed them with lime water and then locked them up, so that no one could see them, on purpose that they might soon die and not propagate the disease. Wives and children might cry and weep, but the foreigners would not drive them away with sticks, for until dead no one must see those faces again. Better for all of us to jump into the sea than submit to this."—South China Post.

Eczema Covered Whole Body for a Year—No Relief Until Cuticura Remedies Prove a Success.

"For a year I have had what they call eczema. I had an itching all over my body, and when I would retire for the night it would keep me awake half the night, and the more I would scratch, the more it would itch. I tried all kinds of remedies, but could get no relief."

"I used one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, and two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, which cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all, and am very glad I tried them, for I was completely cured." Walter W. Paine, Ch. 207 N. Robey St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 8 and 10, 1906.

Refuges on Mont Blanc.

Losing one's self on Mont Blanc will soon be counted among the vanished industries. In recent years, a number of fine refuges have been built in various parts of the mountain by the Alpine clubs of England, France and other countries and by private individuals. These have made it almost impossible for a man having a bump of locality of average size to be lost, in spite of heavy mists and blinding snowstorms caused by sudden changes of temperature.

Garfield Tea, the Mild Laxative, is a pure, practical household remedy, good for ailing sick old. It is taken for constipation, indigestion, sick headache, colds and fevers arising from impure blood. It clears the complexion.

HONEST MEDICINE.

TRY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR STOMACH TROUBLE.

Convincing Evidence Supported by a Guarantee That Must Convince The Most Skeptical.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a doctor's prescription, used by an eminent practitioner, and for nearly a generation known as a reliable household remedy throughout the United States. Needless to say, no advertised medicine could retain popular favor for so long a period without having great merit and it is the invaluable curative properties of the pills that have made them a standard remedy in every civilized country in the world. Added to this is the absolute guarantee that the pills contain no harmful drug, opiate, narcotic or stimulant. A recent evidence of their efficacy is found in the statement of Mrs. N. B. Whitley, of Boxley, Ark., who says:

"I had suffered for a good many years from stomach trouble. For a long time I was subject to bad spells of faintness and lack of breath accompanied by an indescribable feeling that seemed to start in my stomach. Whenever I was a little run-down or over-tired, these spells would come on. They occurred frequently but did not last very long. I was confined to my bed for ten weeks one time and the doctor pronounced my trouble chronic inflammation of the stomach and bowels. Since that time I have been subject to fainting spells and at other times to fluttering of the heart and a feeling as though I was smothering. My general health was very bad and I was weak and trembling."

"I had seen Dr. Williams' Pink Pills mentioned in the newspapers and decided to try them. When I began taking the pills I was so run-down in strength that I could hardly do any housework. Now I could walk ten miles if necessary. Both my husband and myself think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine made, and we always recommend the pills to our friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and give strength and tone to every part of the body. They have cured many disorders of the blood and nerves, such as rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance and many forms of weakness in either sex. They are sold by all druggists or will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price. 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

APPETIZING HERBS

RECIPES BOTH PALATABLE AND HEALTHFUL.

Dandelions Boiled with Bacon Make an Ideal Simple Dish—Dandelion Wine a Tonic That is of Value.

Dandelions Boiled with Bacon.—Clean thoroughly a half peck dandelions and put over the fire with boiling water to cover. Cook ten minutes, drain, return to the pan and cover barely with fresh boiling water. Add one pound bacon, two onions chopped, a teaspoonful salt and a bit of red pepper. Cover and boil until tender and nearly dry. Take up the dandelions and mound on a hot dish, surrounded with a circle of the bacon sliced thin and serve with boiled potatoes. Dandelions are also tasty cooked with corn beef or tongue.

Dandelion Wine.—This wine is in great repute as a tonic. It is made from the blossoms alone, rejecting the stems, which would make the wine bitter. Put four quarts of the yellow petals in a kettle with a gallon of boiling water, cover and let them stand three days, stirring twice a day. Strain off the clear liquid, place in the kettle, with the thin yellow peel of one lemon and one orange, and the juice of both with three and a half pounds of sugar, and a half ounce ginger root. Place over the fire and boil slowly half an hour. Take off, and when cooled to lukewarm, spread a half cake of compressed yeast on a half slice, toasted bread and add to the mixture. Let this stand in a warm place for two or three days, then put into a demijohn or cask (the wine must fill whatever vessel it is put in), and stand away in a warm place six weeks or more. Fill up occasionally with sweetened water, to make up for that lost in fermentation. When fermentation has stopped, close tightly, leave for three weeks, then bottle.

Watercress for Wit.—"Eat cress and learn wit," say the Greeks; while Pliny asserted that cress vinegar restores sanity. According to analysis, watercress contains iodine, iron, phosphorus and a sulpho-nitrogenous oil—a fine combination of wholesome properties. To be perfect, cress should be freshly gathered, well washed in cold water, shaken thoroughly dry, seasoned with salt and eaten with thin slices of bread and butter. Some prefer a dash of onion juice with cress and a tablespoonful olive oil; but the epicure takes this with salt alone.

How to Hang Pictures.
Oil paintings and water colors should never be hung so as to become intimate companions, but the latter may hobnob with etchings, pastels, drawings, photographs, and even engravings, without losing their dignity. An oil painting of exceptional excellence should be given a special position.

Water colors and pastels in delicate tints and black and whites and soft etchings should be properly placed in wall spaces where the light is strongest. The darker and more heavily shaded pictures should hang farther away from the light. From the family colored pictures in the clearest light, the glance should be involuntary but skillfully led to the deeper-toned pictures farther back in the room.

Sometimes, however, a dark corner that needs brightening may demand a lighter picture or a spot of brilliant coloring may be risked. A pen-and-ink sketch with white mat fills in well in such a case. Harmony must be studied, and the position of a picture well considered before its place is decided. One with broad, white mat should never be hung next to a carbon in a heavy black frame. The eye must be led, not jerked, from one picture to another.

To Starch Lace.

There is a great difference of opinion about the starching of lace, some people objecting to any starch being put in it on the grounds that it makes the lace too stiff and tends to destroy it.

Take some clear starch and thin it down until it feels like slightly thickened water, or for heavy, thick laces, a little thicker; soak the lace well in this, then squeeze out gently with the hands; spread it out between the folds of a towel or handkerchief, beat between the hands or pass it through a wringing machine.

Avoid twisting it. After wringing pull the lace out gently with the fingers and roll it up with the wrong side inside, commencing at the left-hand end and with the points or edges away from you. This will be found the most convenient way to have it when ironing.

Odds and Ends of Hair.

When little scraggly ends of hair hang down over your collar all you need is a good brush, some back combs and a little perseverance to make them stay up with the rest. When arranging your coiffure brush these ends briskly and then place two back combs where they are needed. A few invisible hairpins will also come against widow-locks. A little downy growth of hair on the cheeks should not be tampered with. When genuine bristles develop the electric needle should be used to annihilate them.

Re-Enameling a Bath.

For this you need a proper bath enamel. Sandpaper the bath before applying, and slightly heat the enamel. Heating makes it a little thinner, and it is easier to apply evenly. It will

This is said to be a splendid Spring Blood Tonic and system restorer because of its gentle action in restoring the kidneys to normal activity, forcing them to filter from the blood all impure matter and acids, destroying micro-organisms which produce ill health and sour blood.

Everyone should take something to cleanse the blood at this time of year, and the above simple prescription is the most highly indorsed of the hundreds of home remedies generally used. Mix this yourself; then you will know what you are taking.

WOMAN HAS FINE RECORD.

Keeper of Lighthouse, She Has Saved Eighteen Lives.

Ida Lewis recently celebrated her fiftieth year as keeper of the Lime Island lighthouse in the harbor of Newport, R. T. As a girl and woman Ida Lewis has lived a remarkable life. Her bravery and skill in handling a boat are well known and her fame is secure as the great woman life saver in the world, for she has the credit of having saved no less than 18 lives, most of her rescues having been effected in the face of extreme danger and in winter. As keeper of the Lime Island lighthouse, to which post she was appointed in recognition of her bravery and record as a life saver on the death of her father, Miss Lewis has shown herself as careful and efficient as a man could be. She is one of the few women in such a position.

The New York Medical Journal wisely remarks: "The colon bacillus is usually ranked in the saprophytic group of bacteria rather than placed among the organisms distinctly pathogenic for man; but we know that it is far from being devoid of virulence, and that it is capable under certain conditions of gaining increased powers of invading the organism and of manifesting very definite pathogenic effects."

FIND OUT

The Kind of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a taste for those things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food, etc.

A conservative Mass. woman writes: "I have used Grape-Nuts 5 years for the young and for the aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in a variety of ways as my taste and judgment suggested."

"But its most special personal benefit has been a substitute for meat, and served dry with cream when rheumatic troubles made it important for me to give up the 'coffee habit.'"

"Served in this way with the addition of a cup of hot water and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during which time my health has much improved, nerves have grown steeper, and a gradual decrease in my comfort." Name given by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case of 807 W. 24th St., N. Y. She writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years." This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation. Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women. Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

How to Tell if Your Kidneys Are Diseased.

One of the first symptoms of kidney trouble is a slight pain in the small of the back; also a frequent desire to urinate, especially at night. A simple test of your urine will show if you have other bad symptoms, viz: Place some urine in a glass tumbler and allow it to stand twenty-four hours, if there is disease, you will discover a sediment, or a milky, cloudy appearance, or particles float. If you have any of these symptoms it shows disease and demands treatment at once. Kidney disease must not be trifled with, but can be cured if taken in time by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which removes the cause and stops any further trouble.

Don't Neglect It

It is a serious mistake to neglect a weak heart. It is such a short step to chronic heart disease. When you notice irregularity of action, occasional short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain in chest or difficulty in lying on left side, your heart needs help—a strengthening tonic. There is no better remedy than Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Its strengthening influence is felt almost at once.

"I have used 10 bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and can truthfully say it has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried nearly everything that I know of. The doctor who attended me asked me what I was taking and I told him Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, he said it was not going to do me any good, but it did. I have not taken any for a year now, and while there is occasionally a slight symptom of the old trouble, it is not enough for me to continue the use of the medicine. If I should get worse I would know what to do—take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure as I did before. I consider myself practically cured of my heart trouble."

S. H. DUNNAN, Livingston, Texas.
Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

Ideal Newspaper Fiction.

Stories of newspaper scoops on matters of current news are many, but it is seldom that a newspaper can claim a beat upon a popular novel. Such a triumph in the discovery of a popular novel was recorded recently by the Chicago Record-Herald when it printed serially "The Wings of the Morning," by Louis Tracy. The judgment of the paper has since been verified by the unprecedented sale the book has had both in the United States and England. The Record-Herald's keen judgment in fiction enables its readers to get the best novels often before they reach the book stands, while its policy of giving the right amount daily and Sunday makes it a pleasure to follow its serials.

A radical departure in Sunday journalism was marked by the advent of the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald. It is particularly strong in fiction, both serials and short stories, and it has all the other attractive features of the famous illustrated weeklies and monthlies and challenges comparison with them.

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man. If physicians can find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenious and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No gripping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful illustrated metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

A SOURCE OF DISEASE.

Deny the Man Who Blows Smoke Through His Nostrils.

A popular practice of many smokers consists in discharging the smoke inhaled, especially from cigarettes, through the nostrils. This is even considered by some to be essential to the full enjoyment of the flavor of the tobacco.

The London Lancet, while acknowledging that perhaps under ordinary circumstances no harm is done to the smoker save to his sense of smell, has sounded a note of warning against the habit as a possible disseminator of disease. Hay fever and other annoying complaints have been spread through unsuspecting households by the unthinking visitor who habitually blew smoke through his nose.

The surface traversed by the tobacco smoke before issuing from the nose, it is remarked by the Lancet, is moistened with the natural secretion of the mucous membrane lining it, and this secretion is mingled with the sordid discharged from the conjunctival sac protecting the eyes. It therefore contains numerous micro organisms, which, floating in the air, have become attached to the moist and sticky surface of the conjunctiva, as well as those which pass over the surface of the nasal membrane. As Tyndall long ago showed, germs are completely filtered off from the air inhaled by the extensive and irregular surfaces presented by the turbinate bones. These germs are carried into the air by the man who blows smoke through his nostrils.

A SENSE OF DIRECTION.

The Prime Requisite For Making a True Woodsman.

A sense of direction I should name as the prime requisite for him who would become a true woodsman, depending on himself rather than on guides. The faculty is largely developed of course by much practice, but it must be inborn. Some men possess it; others do not—just as some men have a mathematical bent, while to others figures are always a despair. It is a sort of extra, having nothing to do with criterions of intelligence or mental development, like the repeater movement in a watch. A highly educated, cultured man may lack it; the roughest possess it. Some who have never been in the woods or mountains acquire in the space of a vacation a fair facility at picking a way, and I have met a few who have spent their lives on the prospect trail and who were still and always would be as helpless as the newest city dweller.

It is a gift, a talent. If you have its tiniest germ you can become a traveler of the wide and lonely places. If you have it not you may as well resign yourself to guides.—Stewart Edward White in Outing Magazine.

Science and Morality.

The true student of the professional or technical school becomes heir to a comprehensive and clear understanding of his duties and responsibilities in his relations to his fellow men and to the community. Those duties and responsibilities present themselves to his trained mind in their real proportion. He is neither nondeveloped nor maldeveloped in his judgment of affairs. His university training, especially in the technical school, has taught him accuracy and penetration in the analysis of any proposition confronting him and that truth and knowledge must be sought with the directness of a plumb line. Science yields nothing but confusion to the shifty, devious and dishonest inquirer. The fundamentals of morality are the very stepping stones to technical success or professional attainment.—Scientific American.

The Hellbender.

"There's no reason why the hellbender shouldn't be good to eat," said a scientist. "Its principal food is the crayfish, the same as the principal food for bass. The hellbender belongs to the same family of amphibians as the frog and is very closely related. Both are hatched from the egg, and both pass through the tadpole stage before reaching maturity. The hellbender is a mighty fine fish, as any one can prove to himself if he will conquer his natural aversion." The hellbender is found principally in streams about the foothills of the Alleghany mountains.

The Saddle.

Early Greeks and Romans rode horses bareback. They regarded it as effeminate to ride in a saddle. The modern saddle, with pommel, crupper and stirrups, was unknown to the ancients. Nero gave out fancy coverings to his cavalry, and the bareback riders of the German forests used to laugh at them. Saddles with trees came into use in the fourth century, stirrups three centuries later.

"Yes," assented the other, "and so is the rest of him for a few years."
