Commencement Day

Observed at Loveday Opera House Last Friday Evening.

The graduates presented a pretty sight at Loveday Opera House last Friday evening, May thirty first, when the Commencement exercises were held. In the audience which filled the house to the doors were to be seen many happy faces, those of proud parents, sisters, brothers and friends of the graduates. Decorations in the class colors, red and white were to be seen. The motto "We will climb though the Rocks be Rugged" was suspended above the stage. The girls were dressed in white and carried bouquets of American Beauty roses. Near the footlights were numerous bouquets of carnations, packages and parcels, gifts from friends and relatives. The program opened with a musical number, "College Life March" by Webster's orchestra followed by prayer by Rev. Grigsby. Salutatory was given by May Stewart; vocal music, "Ladies"; Quartette; oration, "Our Magnetic Field," Teresa McRae; instrumental solo, Bertha Shier; "History and Prophecy of the class," Marjory Hoyt. This was read by Miss Lucille Smith, Miss Hoyt being sick at the time; essay, "Longfellow," Wilbur Matthews; vocal duet, "The Divine Redeemer," Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Dole; class poem, "Nell Camp; "Our Motto," Harold Turner; the orchestra followed with a selection from the Burgomaster; Address, Principal C. T. Grawn of Mt. Pleasant; instrumental duet, the Misses Violet Grigsby and Madge Nicholas; presentation of diplomas to the eighth grade pupils and graduates by Wm. Malpass, President of School Board. The orchestra closed the program with a selection, "Four Little Blackberries." The exercises were of an interesting character and the participants were complimented by the audience upon the manner in which they filled the parts.

CLASS PROPHECY.

(By Marjory Hoyt.)

Teresa, our favorite, shall from our presence go down to Mt. Pleasant Normal where as an athletic girl she will win much fame and renown. Not only as a basket ball star shall she shine in her new sphere, but also in Ovid, Virgil, Horace and Livy she shall be unexcelled. In oratory also she shall make her mark, and in social functions she will ever be the most popular. And when two years have rolled away she shall go forth from the Normal an accomplished lady and a fitting helpmate for our minister, and if at times he shall not be able to fill the pulpit, Teresa, with her power of oratory shall take his place and move the hearts of many sinners to repentance. And the minister himself will never regret their old High School days when he outbid all others and won Teresa for his own.

A great future is promised for our energetic and over studious minister. By hard work in college he will win his D. D. But it is easily seen that Wilbur has a greater future than that ahead of him. His one great talent is his gracefulness and great power of speech. These accomplishments will be broadened during his years in the ministry and will better fit him for his future career—that of being an actor. At first people will not appreciate his true worth and he will have to find employment as scene shifter, but after a few years of toilsome work the one chance of his lifetime will come. The hero of a play either like King Richard III or St. Plunkard, will be taken sick and Mr. Matthews will naturally take his place. There his name will become famous and it will go down in history as that of the leading actor.

After years of unceasing labor, after long pondering and useless experimenting, the best foot ball player in the class of '07, Harold Arthur Turner, shall discover and expound—What is life? Then the answer to this hitherto unknown question; he will be able to tell what electricity, light and heat are, the world will see a revolution in science as was never before witnessed when the universal law of gravitation was discovered by Newton. And the leader of this new scientific movement, Harold Arthur Turner, shall live immortal in soul and body, but he will never forget those tedious hours he spent in the little laboratory in the little old red school house on the hill.

Mae Stewart, the most learned girl of our number, will make an enviable record for herself making stump speeches on Women's Rights. Nor will her ambition end here. She will become the greatest woman explorer and discoverer ever known and win great renown by making the first successful expedition to the North Pole. Last, but not least, is golden haired Nell, little Dutch girl we call her. Nell's education ended when she lost her Ovid for with that she lost all ambition for classical lore. What she will do is hard to tell; of this only are we sure—she will do something and that well. It may be as a specialist in electric batteries, if it may be housekeeping. Nell's success against odds that would discourage some, proves her mettle.

And now as to your historian and prophet. About her we shall say little. Not that much could not be said, but because it would not look well for me to say the good things and I certainly shall not say the others. My hopes are as big as any, but their realization is in the future, and of the future we are not certain.

In closing let me say—we do not promise to turn the world up side down. In fact it should be right side up. We want to bring honor and credit to our Alma Mater, our teachers parents and friends. We shall try. At the worst we shall not disgrace you.

We trust you will all wish us well.

CLASS POEM

(By Nell Camp.)

Should you ask me whence those students,
Whence these students young and learned,
Whence these boys so wise and thoughtful,
Whence these girls so gay and joyous,
I should answer, I should tell you,
They have come from many places
Many nations have united
In endeavors strong and mighty,
Hence have come such mighty workers
And such brilliancy and might.
Ireland, Isle of green and shamrock,
From her grassy Isle of sorrows,
Hath united with dear Scotland
Isle of hills and mighty warriors
From them comes a brighter lassie
Than their shores before had sheltered,
Teresa, tall and quick and skillful,
Unexcelled in Basket Ball.

From the kings of far off England
Comes another of our number,
She the best of all the Stuarts
Condescends to share our glory.
She has all her comrades beaten
As for pluck and courage dauntless,
For gloe she tolls on, fearless,
Mist the journals and the ledgers,
Undismayed by drafts or check books,
Making every trial—balance,
The rest have all retreated,
Hopeless, 'ere the goal they cited.

There's another one amongst us
Who is known both far and wide,
She is famed as the school mistress,
Learned in the art of beguiling,
Margaret, haughty, grave but winning,
Margaret, pearl, poet of all gems,
She our dignity upholdest,
And for pride she takes the banner.

Think not that we all are carefree
Thoughtless of the time that passes,
We a preacher have amongst us
To consult in all our trials
In our cares and tribulations,
Matthews, grave reserved and quiet.
But we yet have failed to mention
Most renowned of all our number,
Harold, warrior bold in combats,
Winning, with his power of language,
Clear, concise and penetrating.

Now has come the time for leaving,
For the parting from each other,
Tho for years we've clung together,
Patiently enduring working,
Forth to wrestle with life's battles,
Fears to banish, all to vanquish,
But tho gone far, far asunder
To the north and to the southland
Always will we fondly cherish
Thots of our old Alma Mater.
Oft our throts will wander backward
Back to days of graduation.

Judge Mayne's Order to the Common Council.

After the matter had been exhaustively argued in open court before Judge Mayne the Judge made the following decision:

This is a petition for mandamus to compel the Common Council of the village of East Jordan to approve the liquor bond of the Relator—Podleski, the surety on the bond being a surety Company.

Act No. 444 of the Local acts for the year 1903 being an act relative to sureties on the bonds of dealers in intoxicating, malt, brewed or fermented liquors in Charlevoix county reads as follows:

"The People of the state of Michigan enact: 'Sec. 1—The Common Councils and the village boards of trustees of the several cities and villages in Charlevoix county are empowered to require that the sureties on all bonds required for the sale of liquors, by the terms of liquor laws of this state, shall be executed by some surety or guarantee company which is duly authorized to act as surety or guarantor under the insurance laws of this state. Provided that the provisions of this act shall apply only to cities and villages having a population in excess of fifteen hundred inhabitants'—and so forth.

The Common Council of the Village of East Jordan appear to have proceeded under the above act. Several bonds were presented and approved by the Council with this same guarantee company as surety. The bonds thus approved were identical with those in the present proceeding. Under the law the Council have no right to refuse to accept a bond for the purpose of limiting the number of saloons. Neither can they refuse to approve a bond because of the moral character of the applicant.

I believe the law ought to clothe the Common Council with this authority. But the Council must obey the law as it is and it is simple duty of the Court to enforce the legal rights of individuals even though the court may not consider these rights to be in accordance with the best public policy.

Under the showing made the surety company in this case has been approved by the Insurance Commissioner of this state as required by statute. Its financial responsibility has already been determined by the proper authority under the above act. The situation is the same as though the petitioners had presented a bond with two natural persons as sureties whose financial responsibility was admitted.

The authorities are quite clear that under such circumstances the Council must approve the bond.

The writ will issue as prayed.

Sentiment Would Block Progress.

When the project of building a railway to the top of the Matterhorn was first announced, a few months ago, there was considerable opposition to it.

Wing Shooting.

Wing shooting can no more be theoretically taught than can riding, skating, sailing a boat, milking a cow or playing the violin.

A Wholesome Philosophy.

Absolute honesty and a definite will often produce better results without unusual intellectual gifts or opportunity than the keenest intellect can attain without these moral qualities.

Rev. Frederick T. Gates, at one time pastor of a Baptist church which John D. Rockefeller attended, is now almoner for the Standard Oil magnate, and has reduced that gentleman's charities to a system.

Again the Oster theory is put to flight by the accomplishment of the Rev. Dr. Abbott, of Shurtleff college, at Upper Alton, who, with 80 years to his credit, outdistanced five athletic young men in a four-mile walk.

A scheme is on foot to link up, by means of an automobile service, the capital of the state of Guyana with Uruguay, the present terminus of the Magdalena river in the state of Minas.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—The state senate has adopted a concurrent resolution demanding that President Roosevelt be reelected for a second elective term as president of the United States.

Whereas, By his intrepid and advanced leadership the present president of the United States has become prominently identified with the sane and vigorous advancement of the cause of political, social and business reform.

Whereas, The work which he has undertaken and is now carrying forward along the aforesaid lines and of which he is the most advanced and distinguished exponent is as yet unfinished; and

Whereas, A great body of people of the United States without regard to political lines or predilections have implicit confidence in his ability, his militant integrity and unselfish fidelity to his exalted duties; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the senate, the house of representatives concurring, that the best interests of the general government and the successful accomplishment of the great public measures which have been and are being inaugurated by the present national administration demand the nomination and reelection of Theodore Roosevelt for a second elective term in the presidency of the United States.

Mining Law Amended.

By a unanimous vote the senate passed the following amendment to the mining law:

"Every corporation organized and existing under this act shall have power to purchase, hold and convey all such real estate as the purposes of the corporation shall require."

The object of the bill is to permit mining companies to own as much timber land as they desire, and was strongly urged for the reason that timber is becoming scarce in the state, and steps must be taken for reforesting large tracts.

The bill was first presented objection was raised by representatives of the Osceola Mining company, who thought intended to have some bearing upon the pending litigation between these two concerns. However, the iron mines of the state were the sponsors for it, and they convinced Gov. Warner that such action was absolutely necessary for the future success of the iron properties of the state, and had no connection with any litigation between the copper companies.

The governor saw the justice of the position taken and with Representative Abrams, who represents the Osceola interests, urged its passage.

As originally drawn the provision followed the wording of a similar provision in the manufacturers' act, but by mutual agreement the words "personal property" were stricken out, making the bill satisfactory to the Osceola people.

It will probably be taken up in the house and explained by Representative Abrams, to whom credit is due for bringing the upper peninsula interests together on the proposition.

President's Visit To Capital.

The visit of President Roosevelt was the climax of the semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the Michigan Agricultural college.

The president arrived on a special train over the Lake Shore railroad at 9:50 o'clock. He was met at the station by Gov. Warner and a committee from the legislature. Under escort of a regiment of the Michigan national guard, a troop of cavalry and two battalions of the Michigan naval reserve, he proceeded, first to the state capitol.

Instead of making an address in representative hall, as at first planned, the president consented to speak from the front balcony of the capitol. This enabled many who could not gain entrance to representative hall and who could not go to the agricultural college, three miles away, to hear him.

After luncheon at the home of President Snyder, of the college, President Roosevelt made an address on the college campus. State troops patrolled the capitol grounds and the college campus during the president's visit.

Opticians Want Commission.

The opticians of the state are hard at work trying to secure a commission for licensing and regulating the members of that profession, as they do not want to come under the medical act, and they have hopes of making progress before the end of the session.

Lansing Celebration Opens.

The semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the Michigan Agricultural college which had as its climax an address by President Roosevelt on Friday afternoon, opened May 23 with a symposium of addresses on "The College and the State." Simultaneously with the celebration the twenty-first annual convention of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations was in session here. The celebration was one of the most noted in the history of the city.

No Hope for Primary Bill.

The primary bill is dead so far as the present legislature is concerned. It has once been defeated and, aside from the question of whether the lieutenant governor had any right to vote on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill failed to pass there are 16 votes against the measure in its present form.

This is the most potent reason why the administration will fail in any effort made to revive the measure, even in the desire to submit the matter to a vote of the electors. This is only shifting the burden and nothing can be done to prevent the legislature from accepting the responsibility of dealing with the bill as it sees fit.

Opponents of the bill are irrevocably opposed to removing the 40 per cent provision. They are equally insistent that the amendment made by the house, which would prevent state officials and employes from being used as a flying squadron in circulating petitions in favor of certain candidates and to the detriment of others be retained.

Whereas, The bill is absolutely no middle ground on which a compromise can be predicted. The governor and his friends want one kind of a bill while the boxers and their friends want another. Under these circumstances the present law will have to stand the test of the sharpest kind of a campaign so that its merits and defects will be brought clearly to the surface.

For the edification of those who are wondering what has become of the mortgage tax repeal bill, it may be stated that the measure is still in the hands of the senate taxation committee, where opinion is divided as to its merit. Probably the result will be that the bill will be reported out without recommendation and then passed by a close vote. It will then be up to the governor and if he stands by the position he has taken he will veto the measure, which will put an end to it.

Deadlock on Primary Bill.

Efforts have been made to secure a compromise on the primary bill, but they have fallen flat, the boxers deciding to stand pat. Senator Fyfe, who acted as sponsor for the measure in the senate, made a proposition to reduce the percentage required for nominating governor and lieutenant governor from 40 to 30 per cent. After the matter had been considered, he was told that it would not be agreeable. The boxers want one primary day instead of two, as provided in the present law, but the two sides cannot agree on the other amendments. They insist on retaining the 40 per cent provision so that it can be tested, and they also want the clause prohibiting the administration from using state officials and employes as scouts during the campaign. On the other hand, the administration believes that state employes have as much right to dabble in politics as other people.

Consent Is Unnecessary.

Recently the state board of pardons had under consideration the question of transferring a life convict sentenced to Jackson prison, to the Marquette prison. In order to transfer a life prisoner, it is necessary that his sentence be commuted to a period less than life, but in the case in question the convict preferred to remain at Jackson. The question arose whether the governor could commute a sentence without an application from the convict. The attorney general has held that the convict's consent to a commutation of sentence is not necessary, and the governor will commute the life sentence of the prisoner to 99 years, so that the transfer may be made.

Accounting Is Sought.

Representative Morris introduced a bill to compel the board of control of the Soldiers' home to give an annual accounting of the so-called post fund. The inmates of the home are only allowed to keep $12 a month of their pension money, the balance being retained by the board and used as it sees fit. It is claimed that $15,000 was used from this fund to help erect a new building, and further that no accounting is ever rendered.

Planning Another Board.

Representative Lord introduced a bill repealing the law relative to building inspectors for Detroit and creating a commission to be known as the department of building, composed of four persons appointed by the common council on nomination of the mayor. No salary is provided, the idea being to have an honorary commission, the same as the other municipal boards.

L'Esperance Wins Out.

In committee of the whole the house agreed to the L'Esperance medical bill without amendment, and it now goes to third reading. There has been more pulling and hauling over this measure than any other that has come up this session, but the various factions finally got together and an amendment was put in the bill providing that the minimum standard set by the state board of medical registration should never exceed the requirements demanded by the university.

NEWS FROM HOME AND ABROAD

HARRIMAN'S RAILROAD DEALS AND THE GOVERNMENT'S COURSE.

A DIVERGENCE OF VIEWS.

Will the Great Railroad Financier Be Criminally Prosecuted or Escape Scott Free?

The Record Made Up.

A conference of great importance bearing upon the Harriman case will be held in Washington this week. It will then be known whether the administration intends to go after Mr. Harriman, and his railroads through the medium of the Sherman anti-trust act, or intends to let the railroad magnate and his associates continue on their way rejoicing.

President Roosevelt's Indianapolis speech, in its bearing upon the Harriman consolidation, is open to two interpretations. Some people declare that it was conservative in tone; and that the president's assertion that railroads should be permitted in law as well as in practice to acquire the stock or bonds of connecting but not parallel lines, was tantamount to a notice that the government would not proceed against Harriman.

Others are equally emphatic in their statements that the president at Indianapolis showed that he was still on the firing line and that it was his purpose to use the "Big Stick" on Mr. Harriman.

The record in the Harriman case is made up, and at the conference that will be held at the White House a decision will be reached showing the intentions of the administration toward Harriman and the men associated with him. Opinions vary as to what the president will do in this matter, and when Mr. Roosevelt gathered his advisors around him he will find that they are divided on the question as to the advisability of proceeding against Harriman in the courts.

There are members of the interstate commerce commission who are insistent that nothing except criminal prosecution and the imposition of sentences of imprisonment will put an end to such flagrant violations of the anti-trust laws as was disclosed in the inquiry into the operations of the Harriman railroads. Other members of the commission will tell the president that the evidence in hand is not strong enough to justify the administration in embarking upon a project to "smash" Harriman.

GREAT BUSINESS.

The Largest April Business Ever Known in This Country.

The cool weather appears to have had a stimulating effect on the internal commerce of the United States. The department of commerce has just finished casting up the figures for April. They show that month was the biggest April for business the country has ever seen.

The traffic congestion which interfered with business all winter and was the cause of much complaint to the interstate commerce commission has been relieved, especially in that portion of the country tributary to the Great Lakes, the opening of navigation having given marked relief in clearing up the piled-up warehouses and docks. Another indication of the improvement in traffic conditions is found in the fact that the car service associations during the first four months of the year handled 11,458,572 cars, as compared with 10,871,964 for the same period of last year.

In all forms of internal commerce the improvement is equally striking. The receipts of cattle and hogs were nearly 25 per cent greater than during April, 1906, while the grain receipts at the 15 leading primary markets of the interior showed an increase of about 50 per cent over April, 1906, and 75 per cent over April, 1905. Grain shipments from the primary markets were also in excess of those of April, 1906 and 1905. Cotton, coke and pig iron gained from 2 to 7 per cent. Building operations in the 54 leading cities of the country amounted in April, 1907, to $75,947,209, while in April, 1906, they summed up in value to only $72,401,324.

The Haywood Trial.

The jury to try William H. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, on the charge of murdering former Gov. Frank Steunenberg, was completed Monday noon.

The defense used its peremptory challenge on Albert Eoff, aged 62, a Wells-Fargo cashier, who has participated in many wild west hold-ups as defender of his employers' money. He admitted a prejudice against the miners' federation and an opinion in the Haywood case, but said he could give the defendant a fair trial. The court declined to excuse him for bias, so he was challenged. The prosecution had used its last peremptory challenge Friday.

O. V. Soburn, a farmer who lives near Boise, was accepted by both sides in place of Eoff and the jury was complete. The 12 men were then sworn in.

Benton Harbor board of education has decided to fight the $10,000 slander suit brought by Miss Gertrude Wood against Supt. Wright, and the case promises to have many sensational features.

The hull of the old steamer Andrew Johnson, used as a blockade runner in war times, was decorated with flowers Memorial day, by veterans. Since being brought to the lakes the Jackson has been used as a tow barge.

Cleo Moross, youngest son of Joseph Moross, proprietor of the Moross house at Erie, was drowned in Montezuma, Mex.

AT REST.

Funeral of Mrs. William McKinley Was Notable.

The most distinguished men in the nation attended the funeral of Mrs. Ida Saxton McKinley in Canton, Ohio, and stood at the grave side in the cemetery where the body was laid beside the remains of her martyred husband. Simple as was the funeral ceremony, there was much that was impressive for the woman who lay dead and the men and women gathered around her coffin recalled scenes and incidents that have formed the history of the nation for the last decade.

The service was held at the North Market street residence of the McKinnleys. Not since the funeral of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison has so large a number of men eminent in the affairs of the nation been gathered at the funeral of any woman.

Among the number who paid a last tribute to the memory of Mrs. McKinley were President Roosevelt and Vice-President Fairbanks, four members of the cabinet, two of whom also were ministers of the late President McKinley; Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, attorney general in the McKinley cabinet; former Postmaster General Gary; Supreme Court Justice and former Secretary of State W. R. Day; Gov. Harris, of Ohio, Senator Dick, and many other distinguished persons. The cabinet members present were Secretary of State Root, Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, Secretary of the Interior Garfield, and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson.

Husband Was a Woman.

The body of Nicholas de Raylan, whose sex has been the subject of dispute and litigation since last December, was exhumed on the arrival in Phoenix, Ariz., of Baron Schlippenbach, Russian consul in Chicago. The body was in a good state of preservation and the face unchanged. Baron Schlippenbach said:

"This is the body of Nicolai de Raylan, who was for 12 years my secretary."

Later the proof of sex was made, the coroner and a physician who had attended the dead person making affidavits that De Raylan was a female. De Raylan, as a man, was twice married. His "widow" in Chicago denied that De Raylan was a woman and claimed his estate. She cannot get it now as a widow's heritage.

Predicts War.

That in three or five years at the outside there will be a war between Japan and the United States, is the opinion expressed by J. A. Elliott, of Manchester, N. H. The strained feelings between the Japanese and the Americans, he says, cannot be imagined by those who have not seen the two nationalities clash. The Japanese along the Pacific coast, he says, are very aggressive and are going into all kinds of business with success. They are particularly strong in transportation, and now control a large part of the Pacific trade. Their success against the Russians has made them chafing, domineering in fact, and the feeling against them is intense. Americans are hoping that there will be no outbreak till the Panama canal is built.

More Railroad Suits.

Messrs. Todd and Simpson, appointed some months ago by the president to investigate the anthracite and bituminous coal carrying railroads with reference to violations of the Sherman anti-trust act, have reported to Attorney General Bonaparte, and their findings will be submitted to the president.

The department is very reticent concerning the report, but there is reason to believe that action will be begun within the next 10 days against the Pennsylvania, Reading, Chesapeake & Ohio, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Seaboard Air Line and the Beech Creek railway, for violations of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Frozen Out.

Hundreds of old soldiers are leaving Richmond, going home to escape the rigors of searching cold and steady rain unprecedented in that city.

Thousands of delegates to the seventeenth grand camp and reunion of the United Confederate Veterans are lingering, however, to participate with the Sons of Veterans and their sponsors. Maids of Honor, and many friends in the parade and unveiling of the heroic statue of President Davis.

The United Confederate Veterans decided to meet next year in Birmingham, Ala., and elected Gen. Stephen D. Lee, of Georgia, grand commander.

Shaken Up.

Three earth shocks at about 3:20 Saturday morning caused the inhabitants of Guayaquil, Ecuador, to jump from their beds and run, panic-stricken, into the streets. The first and last of the shocks were slight, but the second was heavy and lasted about 40 seconds, causing the bells in the churches to ring and stopping the clocks in the church towers. No news has yet been received from the interior, but it is considered probable that damage was done in the country. Owing to the peculiar construction of the buildings the disturbance did not cause any damage in that city.

The attorney general has ruled that an application from a life convict for a commutation of sentence is not necessary before the governor can commute the sentence. In order to transfer the prisoner from one jail to another.

Dr. James H. Reed, an ex-Confederate, has been made an honorary member of the very regiment he fought against, during the civil war, and he will make a Memorial day address in Climax. In the war Reed's regiment captured the Nineteenth Michigan, which has now adopted him.

After Mutilating His Victim He Started to Commit Suicide But Was Too Cowardly.

Walters' Story.

Because he is cursed with the cowardice of the lowest form of brute creation, which revels in brutality to a helpless victim weaker than himself, but whines and snivels in any pain or suffering inflicted upon himself, David C. Walters, wife slayer, is steadily recovering in a Detroit hospital and probably will be almost well within a short space of time.

When his poor little wife lay in a wetting heap on the floor Walters picked up a bottle of carbolic acid, which he had brought with him, with the purpose of ending his murderous existence. He pressed the bottle to his lips and poured out a mouthful of the fiery liquid. It burned his mouth, he spit it out upon the floor without swallowing a drop, for his throat was not burned.

This was the "desperate" man who had only a few seconds before fairly begged to pieces the body of a frail little woman.

Walters' own story of the crime is a brutal tale of a most detestable crime. The only effort he makes toward a defense is that he knew that his wife loved Kirkpatrick more than she loved him; that she refused to forget Kirkpatrick and go back to live with him. That is all.

The detectives sat around his cot in the hospital, and he told the story of his life, leading up to the crime. He told of waiting in the house for his wife's return. "When she came in I begged her to go back and live with me again," he said. "Mamma, I said to her, 'you must come back to me and live with me and love me.' She refused, and then I said, 'Mamma, you have nearly killed me, and I'm going to kill you now.' Then I grabbed the hammer and struck her over the head with it three times. God! when she fell I saw that she was dead; but I picked up the knife and slashed and slashed at her. Then I tried to kill myself, but I failed."

Horribly Mangled.

Edward Martin was instantly killed by a Pere Marquette train, a short distance north of Muskegon Saturday. He was not identified until a piece of paper, on which his name had been written four times, was found in the lining of his coat by Coroner Balbrine. The body was terribly mangled.

It is thought that Martin had started out on a hobo trip, and while riding on the train fell between the trucks of the baggage car. The body was dragged the entire length of the train. He was unmarried.

Smallest in the State.

What is probably the smallest school in point of attendance in the entire state of Michigan, and one of the smallest in the entire United States, had its ending several weeks ago, when District No. 2 in Muskegon township closed for the season. The two pupils who were under the tutelage of Miss Edith Hale, of Muskegon, left slates, blackboards and arithmetic and romped away to follow plows and pick berries at their home on the farm.

Miss Hale thinks that the number of her pupils compares favorably to any school in Michigan. The pupils were both young and were very orderly. One was a boy and the other a girl. They were both in the same grade in school.

District No. 2 hasn't always been so light in attendance, but early this spring many of the pupils left school to work at home.

The Hermit's Estate.

Archimedes Galbraith, the swamp hermit who passed away in the St. Clair county poor house & supposedly rich man, did not have enough of his estate left to make it worth while probating. The appraisers find that the aged hermit left real estate valued at $1,200, but this being highly mortgaged, there will not be a quarter of the valuation, when a final settlement is made. He left farm implements valued at $45 and held 27,000 shares in seventeen different corporations. The value of the shares is placed at about $2 or less.

Detroit Valuation.

Surprising even to the assessors themselves is the increase of $21,000,000 in the assessed valuation of land and buildings in Detroit, as figured out at the assessors' office. This includes an estimate of the real value of the eleventh ward, which is placed at a little over $8,000,000, and of the recent village of Fairview at $4,000,000.

While working about an old tree Louis Bouffard, aged 56 years, a pioneer farmer of Delta county, was instantly killed by the tree falling on him. He was unmarried.

Fred Johnson, steward of the LaPeer Home for Feeble Minded since the founding of the institution, is near death.

Contrary to the general opinion that the peach crop had been killed by the recent frosts and storms, fruit growers who have inspected the trees say that a fair crop will be yielded if there is no more cold weather.

There will be a family reunion when John Jewell, just sentenced to serve a term at Ionia for stealing a copper sap pan valued at $125, reaches Ionia, as his son Floyd was sent to the same institution in January, 1905, for larceny.

Gold Ring Contest

Electric Theatre.

A $5.00 Gold Ring for the Lady receiving the Most Votes.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, June 10, and 11, each purchaser of a ticket will be entitled to one vote for any lady of their choice as a candidate for the ring. These ballots will be deposited in a ballot box carefully guarded, and on Wednesday morning, June 12, the box will be opened and the ballots counted by a committee of disinterested persons and the five ladies receiving the highest number of votes will be the candidates for the ring. The names of the successful candidates will be posted in our window on Wednesday. Then for the balance of the week you may vote for your choice of the five candidates to receive the ring, the ballots to be deposited and counted as before.

The ring may be seen in the window of Mr. Mack's Jewelry Store and may be exchanged for any ring of equal value in his nice selection. Mr. Mack assures us that the ring is really worth more money but consents to give us a good figure on it for this contest.

Besides the ring a complimentary admission ticket will be given each of the five candidates good at the Electric Theatre for one month. Get your ballots ready. Vote for your choice Monday and Tuesday, and then for one of the five candidates the balance of the week.

A complete change of program three times each week.

One admission and one vote only 5 cents.

The Difference.

Small Boy—Pa, what is the difference between a pessimist and an optimist? Pa—Well, let me see if I can illustrate. You know I am often discouraged, and things don't look to me as if they'd ever go right. Well, at such times I can be said to be a pessimist. But years ago, when I was a young man, everything looked bright and rosy, and I was always hopeful. Then I was an optimist. Now, my son, can you understand the difference between a pessimist and an optimist? Small Boy—Oh, yes; one is married and the other isn't.—Harper's Weekly.

A local union of the American Society of Equity was organized at the South Arm Grange Hall, Thursday. Eleven of our foremost farmers forming the organization with Herbert L. Olney as president; Frank St. John vice president; James Evans, secretary; Ralph Ranney, treasurer. Good prospects for a good union.

The greatest of all last season's melodramatic successes was undoubtedly that of "In a Woman's Power." So far this season it has been repeating its last year's success. The theatres are crowded nightly and the box office receipts again prove the wonderful drawing powers of this great dramatic play. There is something so sensational and yet so realistic about the play that one is held spellbound from the rise until the fall of the curtain. It pleases both sexes and all classes of people for it is an American play, by an American author, and written for the melodramatic loving public. It would require too much space to tell all the good things in "In a Woman's Power." The play is in five acts and the dialogue is bright, witty and full of comedy, and every actor has been especially engaged for his or her respective part. It will be given a perfect production in this city at the Loveday Opera House Wednesday evening, June 12.

Some Odd Whis. One of the oddest documents of the will kind known was that of Queen Austrigilda, consort of King Goutram of Burgundy. The dying princess enjoined upon her husband to slay and bury in the same grave with her the physicians who had attended her. Another will was that of a husband who forbade his wife's marrying on pain of his returning to haunt her. This is quite different from that of a woman who instructed her executor to seek out "some nice, good, pretty girl" who would make an affectionate second wife to her spouse. It is a fact interesting in this connection that the first Napoleon actually bequeathed 10,000 francs to a fellow named Cantillon, who had been tried for attempting the assassination of the Duke of Wellington.

A Problem in Life. They had met in the subway and in the interval of passing a few stations had fallen to talking of a lovely woman friend who had died.

"How did she die? Do you know?" he asked.

"She nursed a little niece through an infectious disease, then took it herself, and died of it," said she.

"A strange Providence!" he mused sadly. "She, lovely, gracious, charming, everything to live for and a blessing to her friends, to die in order that a child might live. A strange and unaccountable Providence!" —New York Press.

Good and Osgood. The subject of ancestors is often an interesting topic of conversation. A lady extremely proud of her mother's family created a sensation and made her listeners wonder a little when she remarked: "My father filled many responsible positions. We all have the greatest respect for him. My father was a good man, but—and a certain stiffening of the shoulders and an added expression of firmness in the good lady's face added importance to her conclusion—"my mother was an Osgood!"

Public Baptism of any children who may be presented for the purpose, will be a part of the program. Parents should give in name and date of birth to the pastor beforehand. The usual session of Sunday School will be omitted. The Y. P. S. C. E. will meet at 6:30. Divine worship in the evening at 7:30.

Joseph Kenny and Miss Maude, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Horace Hipp, were united in marriage Wednesday noon at St. Joseph Catholic church. Rev. P. Kindermann conducted. Following the ceremony a wedding feast was held at the home of the bride's parents. Will Kenny and Miss Maude Hott acted as groomsmen and bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Kenny are popular young people of our community and have a host of friends who wish them utmost happiness in their venture.

Death, the grim reaper, seems particularly busy in our midst the past few weeks and our citizens were again shocked Tuesday evening to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Lucy C. Allen, mother of Atty A. B. Nicholas. Mrs. Allen had been ill for some time past but was feeling quite well just prior to her death. The lady was 71 years of age and was united in marriage to her second husband, Prof. J. B. Allen, about forty years ago. During their entire married life not one harsh word had passed between them. A short funeral service was held Thursday morning conducted by Rev. Grigsby and the remains were taken to Clarkston, Oakland Co., her old home, where the remains were laid beside those of other loved ones, Friday.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

Looked at in this manner the ghastly portent was vividly suggested. The nostrils of the two heads together formed the eyes of the death-mask; the mustache of the father made the eyebrows; and the brow and the nose of the boy prince formed the nose and mouth. And more horrible than the death-mask itself was a wound in the temple, from which flowed a streak of blood.

"This wound," I asked, shuddering, "is it merely a coincidence? The look of agony—the staring eyes—is that meant to be a menace, a threat of a violent death?"

"Can you doubt it?" demanded Locke, replacing the envelope carefully in his pocketbook. "That death-mask is regarded by a large portion of Ferdinand's dissatisfied subjects as a heavenly sign. That little stamp, I venture to say, is a death-knell for Ferdinand—it introduces into Bulgarian politics an awful and solemn note."

"A heavenly sign?" I asked, shuddering again. "But he still lives?"

"Yes, at present he is in Paris. I suppose he is safe there. But when he returns to his capital at Sofia—"

"And the woman—the Countess Sarahoff, is she one of the revolutionaries who regard that stamp as a 'heavenly sign'? You told me that she was supposed to be the friend of Prince Ferdinand."

"I did. But is she? She is a woman of mystery. Is she really in earnest in seeking to entrap Sir Mortimer into influencing England to stand behind Bulgaria in her invasion of Turkish Macedonia? Is she ignorant of the existence or at least the significance of this stamp? Or, posing as a friend of Ferdinand, having ready access to him at any hour, will hers be the dagger plunged into his breast at the fatal hour? Perhaps Sir Mortimer is not the guileless victim we think him to be. Perhaps the king's messenger does not have two sets of dispatches as he presented at his discretion. Perhaps this death-mask is a ghastly accident—and not a menace. Perhaps Countess Sarahoff, alias Sophie de Varnier, is a hunch of intelligence. Perhaps, but my dear chap, don't trust that perhaps."

"I will rise and pulled on his gloves. I stared at him in sudden comprehension."

"I understand now. You had more than my object in coming to see me this morning," I said, soberly.

"He lit a cigarette, looking down at me in deep thought."

"In America the game of politics is a fair game and above board. We show our cards; they are on the table for all the world to see. The very frankness of our methods puzzles the diplomats of Europe. Here in Europe things are managed differently. There are wheels within wheels. No pawn is too insignificant to be made use of. This pawn may be a simple citizen, even a tourist."

"I shook the hand he held toward me, and retained it, bewildered."

"But that is absurd on the face of it. In what possible way could I be of use to this Countess Sarahoff?"

"Locke shrugged his shoulders carelessly, and blew a ring of smoke with precision at the chandelier."

"Nothing is quite absurd," he returned, calmly. "Two days ago I read of an unfortunate accident of a fellow-countryman and an old college acquaintance. Today I am surprised to find this Countess Sarahoff on excellent terms with a woman whom I have never seen before and believe is a dangerous adventuress. I came to see my fellow-countryman, to offer him my sympathy. I remain to warn him."

"But why?" I demanded, still skeptical.

"There are three facts that should make you think, Haddon. First of all, you have made the acquaintance of the mother and the sister of Sir Mortimer Brett. Secondly, Countess Sarahoff has made your acquaintance. Thirdly, contradict me if I am wrong—she has already interested you; more than that, I venture to say that you have made an appointment with her."

"He looked at me keenly. I was silent."

"These, my dear Haddon, are simple facts. Perhaps there is no relation between them. Again I say, 'perhaps.' But don't let the mysterious machinery of intrigue catch you in its meshes; its wheels may crush you. You have had enough trouble; and look out for Countess Sarahoff."

"I shall try to remember your advice," I said, struggling to control my excitement, and placed his visiting-card in my pocket. "Yes; I shall see you again before I leave Chicago."

"Oh, suit yourself about that," said Locke, coldly.

Not until afterwards did it occur to me that I had treated him rather cavalierly—indeed, laid myself open to suspicion by my silence.

CHAPTER XI.

Countess Sarahoff Gives an Invitation. I stood quite still after Locke had left me, lost in thought.

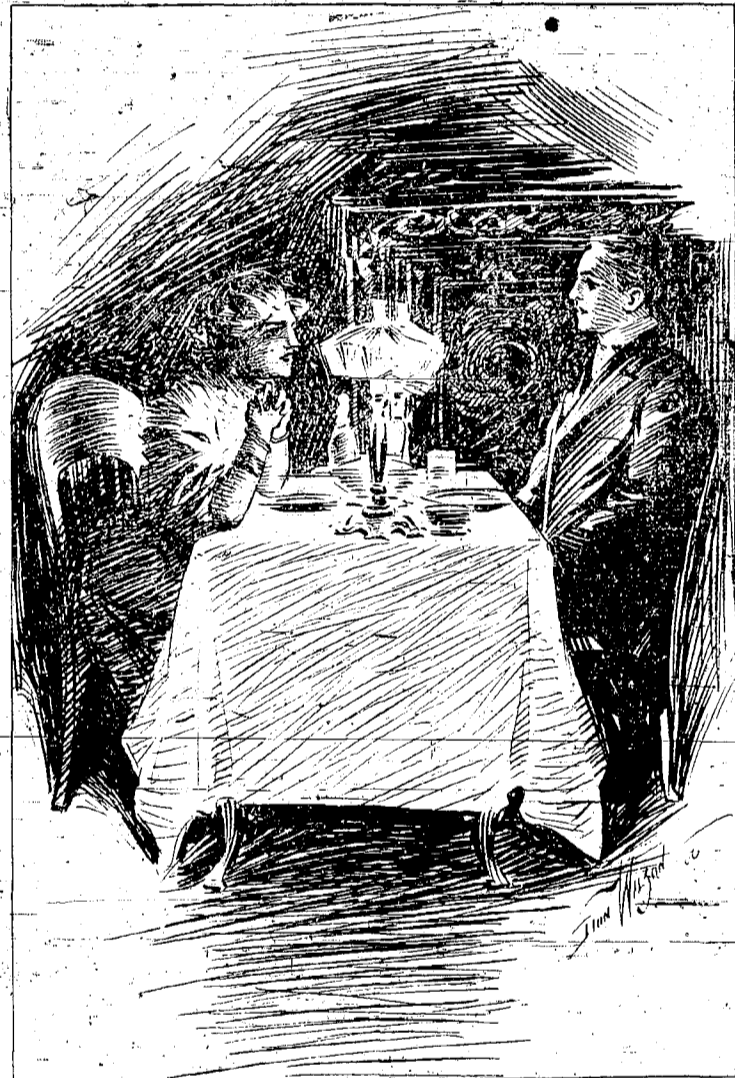

A life for a life, Helena had said. But is not honor sometimes dearer than life itself? At least the honor of a loved brother.

That I could exert any influence over the mind and actions of a man as famous in affairs as Sir Mortimer Brett was absurd. Even had that been possible Helena would have been the last to intrust his honor in my hands. And yet, as Locke had said, what if I were a pawn in the game of Countess Sarahoff?

Then why not be an intelligent pawn, to be moved if you will, carelessly here and there in the game of intrigue, but to be moved with my eyes open?

"No pawn is too insignificant to be made use of," those were Locke's words. He had believed that she would attempt to make use of me. Heaven grant it, I thought, with a thrill of hope. We should then see what we should see. Yes; I would look out for Countess Sarahoff. But scarcely in the manner Locke had suggested.

Early in the afternoon a message came from her, as I had felt confident it would. A cousin was with her; they were to leave Lucerne that evening, en route to a little village in the Bernese Alps, where she had taken a chateau for the summer. She would be charmed if I would dine with them in her apartment at the Hotel Nationale. And would I pardon the absurd hour of 6:30? I was to come in my morning clothes, since neither she nor her cousin expected to dress.

I accepted the invitation with alacrity. That meant privacy—a certain intimacy. A cousin was to be there, it was true, but the presence of the cousin was, of course, a sup carelessly thrown at Mrs. Grandin.

The cousin had not arrived when I presented myself that evening. I struggled against a sense of shame, I was accepting her hospitality, and I had come to spy on her. But I reassured myself with the conviction that it was to be a game of tit-for-tat.

The apartment de luxe into which I was ushered was dimly lighted, and the air was heavy with the perfume of flowers. In the center of the room the white damask and silver of a table set for dinner gleamed under the soft light of candles. In some vague way, this room, one of a hundred others in the hotel, had lost something of its stiff formality. It had charm. Charm! That was the word that best described this mysterious woman. Well, I must steel myself against that charm.

She had been beautiful the evening before; this evening she was radiant. Her eyes burned with a fire that at once disconcerted and excited. She was the incarnation of what one calls the joy of living. Never for an instant was she still. Now it was to glance critically at the admirably set table; now to rearrange the flowers. Presently she moved to the window, and drew back the heavy brocade hanging, looking at me over her shoulder.

"Why does my cousin not come?" she demanded, petulantly. "At 11 to-night we go to Vitznau by the boat."

Before the birds awake to-morrow we must be off—up, up, up the mountains, to my chateau. It will break my heart if we are delayed."

"Your chateau has great attraction for you," I said, smiling.

She came toward me impulsively, her hands clasped.

"Oh, you would like my chateau, monsieur. It is strong and rugged; and so high that to see its towers through the branches of the pine trees, as you climb the hillside, it seems a dream, a fantasy. And below, very far below, there is the noisy little river that rushes around its base, and an adorable village that crouches close to it for protection. And within, there are great shadowy rooms with gleaming bare floors and tapestries. Oh, yes, and there is my beloved piano. When the thunder rolls terribly over the lonely mountains, and the storm beats against the curtained windows, and the fire of huge logs in the hearth does not reach the somber corners—oh, it is then that I live. I am inspired. In the night the passionate soul of Chopin speaks to me. And in the morning when the sun is shining again, and the little river is gay and turbulent, there are my flowers and my books and my poor. And there is peace. My chateau is a Castle of Indolence, and it is a Castle of Happiness."

"That is the castle we are all looking for," I said wistfully.

She moved restlessly to the piano. She struck the opening chords of that prelude of Chopin which is at once a suggestion of a funeral march and a procession in a cathedral. I watched her, fascinated, though I had sworn I would not be fascinated by her.

She stopped abruptly in the midst of a phrase. Her white arms dropped to her lap. She looked over toward me. Then she leaned her elbows on the keys; she nodded to me, half in entreaty, half in command. I stood opposite her, leaning toward her, across the piano.

"But sometimes I am lonely in my

Her lips were trembling, and yet she smiled—a smile mysterious, tragic, pitiful.

"Monsieur, I am not a jeune fille. I am a woman of the world. Fate has called to me. I must follow. I must meet my destiny; sometimes I must walk in the dark places. The world, your world, let it think what it will! Bah, it is not my concern what it thinks of me. Perhaps last night, this morning, I wished you to fall in love with me. Perhaps now I am asking you to give me a little respect, a very little, monsieur. But—what does it matter?"

"I looked at this strange woman in astonishment. It was a curious plea. Perhaps she had wished to make me fall in love with her! She made the frank confession with a childish naïvete. And in the same breath she asked for my respect!"

"You speak in riddles," I exclaimed petulantly. "Tell me your purpose."

She looked up at me swiftly, half in defiance.

"Tell me yours."

"My purpose!" I cried. "I have none."

A moment she scanned my face keenly. Apparently she was satisfied that I spoke the truth. But that she should have even a glimmer of a suspicion was startling.

"Look, my friend, I speak no more in riddles, but very frankly. Come to my chateau because there you can do me a service, a great service. Voila, I have told you everything."

"Not quite everything," I replied quietly. "You have not told me, for instance, the nature of the service that you ask of the first stranger you meet."

"When you are my guest I shall tell you," she promised airily.

She plunged into a stormy mazarika to drown my protestations. I watched her, irritated and yet half yielding, as she played with the brilliancy and élan of a virtuoso. Then I walked to the window.

To reach it I passed a pier-glass paneled in the wall. A man's face was dimly reflected there. Though I did not look, I knew that he must be standing behind a door leading into another apartment. He had been listening, of course.

I did not betray my surprise. I stepped out on the balcony, looking down on the street below.

This incident banished my last shred of reticence. These adventures spied on me; it was equally fair that I play their game. Yes; I determined to meet them with their own weapons.

The music reached a stormy climax. There was silence. I did not go back into the room. I waited, anxiously. Would she again insist? If so, I determined to no longer refuse.

The heavy curtains at the window were parted. She stood beside me. Again I noticed the feverish light in her eyes; her bosom rose and fell tumultuously; her color came and went.

"Then you have no liking for an adventure?" she demanded in a spirit of desperate gaiety. "Even when that adventure is to be shared with a woman—yes, a beautiful woman?"

"Not when adventures are thrust on me," I replied coldly. Her emotion repelled me.

"Ah, you persist in being ungracious. Then say this adventure brings happiness for yourself."

"I should require proof of that."

She saw that I was not to be won over by coquetry. She became serious, almost anxious. Instinctively I felt that she was about to play her last card. Had she known it, I was already decided. But she was ignorant of that, and risked everything to gain her purpose.

"You have set yourself a task. What if I can help you fulfill it?"

"Again, you speak in riddles, madam."

"If I said I were listening last night!"

I frowned on her, furious, but I did not answer.

She felt no shame in making this confession. One hand rested on her hip, with the other she snapped finger and thumb.

"My dear monsieur, you are not attractive when you look like that. Even I have heard the English proverb, 'All is fair in love and in war.'"

"And since this is not love, you wish me to infer that it is war? And you ask the enemy deliberately into the camp?"

"It is neither love nor war. It is a truce. Does that satisfy you?"

"Until you tell me the service I am to do you, it must be an armed truce. I interposed cautiously."

I emphasized the adjective.

"Bien! At Alterhoffen you shall know all. Then it will be for you to decide if we are to allies."

"Very well," I assented briskly. "I will go to your chateau with you. When do we start?"

"Now that I had made my decision she grasped the railing of the balcony, exhausted. Presently I noticed that her lips were moving, and as I looked at her in wonder, I saw her furtively make the sign of the cross. When she spoke again, it was languidly, as with an effort.

"Dr. Starva and myself are to go to-night to Vitznau, a little town on Lake Lucerne, an hour's journey from here. To-morrow morning at the dawn we drive en diligence to Alterhoffen."

"Is it necessary that I go to Vitznau?"

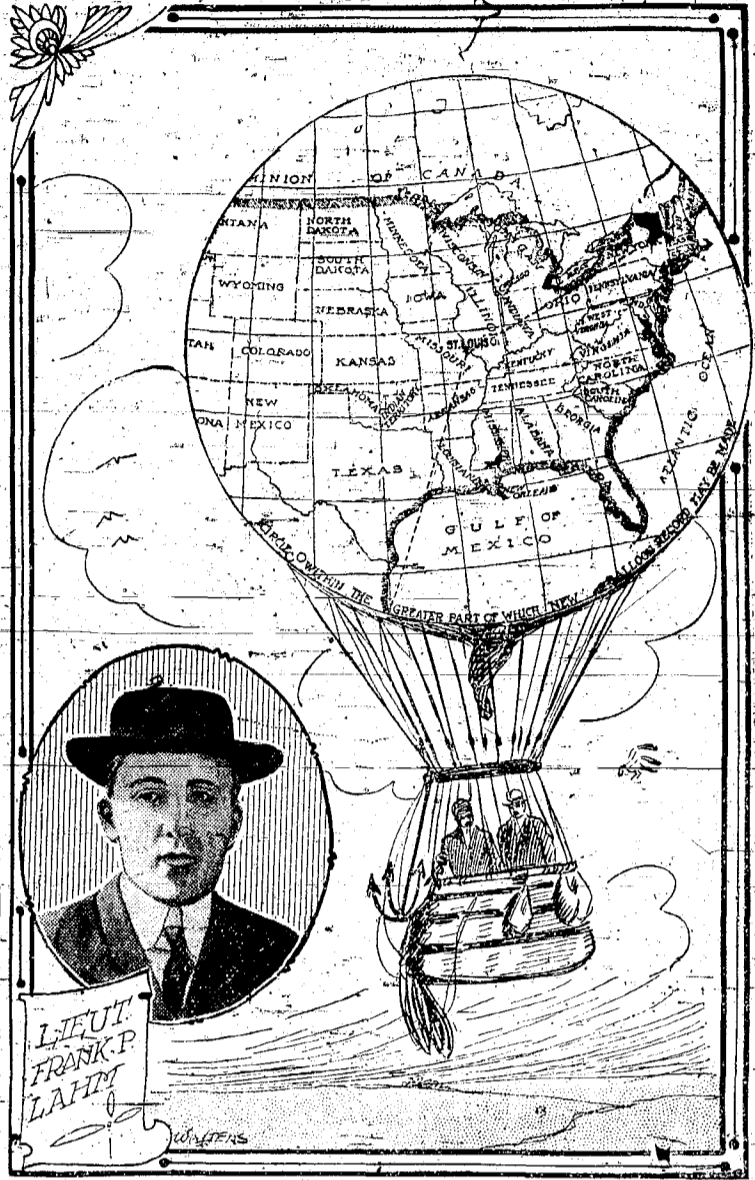

"Yes," she said hesitatingly, averting her eyes. "The last boat leaves Lucerne at 11. Your luggage, can it be ready then?"

I nodded absently.

POSSIBILITIES OF ST. LOUIS BALLOON RACE

It is the ambition of the American aeronauts who will enter the contest at St. Louis next October in the effort to retain the international cup, which Lieut. Lahm won last year in his remarkable flight from Paris to the north of England, to make a new long-distance record. In fact long before the contest for the international cup, which is not to occur until October, ascensions will be made to beat Count de La Vaux's record. St. Louis will be the point from which these ascensions probably will be made, and before the great race it is not at all improbable that a new goal will have been set for foreign aeronauts to attain.

One has but to glance at the maps of Europe and of the United States to see at a glance how much greater is the opportunity for a long flight from St. Louis than from Paris. Whereas a long flight from Paris is not possible unless the wind is blowing approximately from the west, St. Louis is so situated at the heart of the United States that a balloon may fly hundreds of miles before reaching the sea, regardless of the direction of the wind.

In fact, the chance of equalling or exceeding the world's long distance record, which is now held by Count Henry de La Vaux, is just twice as great from St. Louis as from Paris. From the capital of France a balloon must travel within a segment of a circle of only 110 degrees, having a radius equal in length to de La Vaux's record, flight, to avoid being carried out to sea, but from St. Louis the segment of such a circle within which Count de La Vaux's record may be beaten includes 220 degrees.

Lieut. Frank P. Lahm's winning of the international cup last year, with a record of only 402 miles, is an illustration of the difficulty of attaining a considerable distance from Paris, except under favorable conditions. On the day set for the race the wind was blowing almost directly from the south and the balloons were carried to the channel and thence to England. For Lieut. Lahm to have attempted further flight would have been to court almost certain death by being carried past the coast of Norway and into the Arctic ocean.

That Count de La Vaux's flight of 1,250 miles, from Paris to the province of Kieff, in Little Russia, made in 1900, still stands as the world's long distance record. In spite of hundreds of ascents made each season since then and determined and repeated efforts of aeronauts to wrest from him the title of world's champion, is convincing proof of the difficulties in the way of beating that record in Europe.

In America, on the contrary, the door to opportunity is wide open. Until Count de La Vaux's exploit the long distance record had been held in this country for 41 years by the flight of John Wise and three companions from St. Louis to northern New York in 1859, a distance of more than 500 miles. Had Wise's balloon not been caught in a terrific storm and wrecked, it is quite possible that at that time a record would have been made at least equal to that of de La Vaux.

American aeronauts have an added stimulus for establishing a new record through the contest for the Lahm cup, which is to take place some time during the summer. Various conditions are attached to the contest for this trophy, but the main thing is to exceed Lieut. Lahm's record of 402 miles, made last year, when he won the international cup for America.

If the wind is blowing directly from the north or west at the time of the ascension from St. Louis and the upper currents correspond with those close to the earth it will not be possible to exceed Count de La Vaux's record. The balloons will be carried out to sea on the Gulf of Mexico or the Atlantic ocean in such circumstances. But with a wind from any other direction the chance of establishing a new record is exceedingly good.

It is not regarded as probable that a balloon would be carried across the Rockies from St. Louis because of the almost entire absence of east winds in that section of the country, but with a south wind or even a wind from the southwest a balloon could be carried not further than into northern Maine and still establish a new record.

With Canada stretching for hundreds of miles to the north, the opportunities in that direction are virtually without limit, and in spite of the chances of being lost in the wilds of the northland it is there that the eyes of aeronauts are turned most hopefully.

Men who are spending much money and time in making elaborate plans to add the world's record as well as the international cup to America's trophies are cheered by the knowledge that the science of aeronautics has so far advanced that there will be little difficulty in keeping a balloon aloft at least as long as Count de La Vaux's was in the air when he made his record flight.

Wise and his companions had been in the air only 19 hours when he had covered a distance of more than 800 miles in a straight line from St. Louis, and the aeronaut's own record of the voyage described a course covering more than 1,100 miles, while Count de La Vaux was in flight for 36 hours and 45 minutes to cover a distance of 1,250 miles.

If some daring American aeronaut can maintain Wise's speed, and at the same time maintain his balloon in the air as long as did Count de La Vaux, there can be no doubt of beating the record, provided the balloon is carried over the land.

Wise was heading straight toward what would now be the world's record when his balloon was wrecked. He had followed a general east-northeast direction from St. Louis and was heading down the valley of the St. Lawrence, following the north shore of Lake Ontario, when he was suddenly swept inland and his voyage ended.

Foreign aeronauts who have entered for the international cup race are eagerly discussing this chance of establishing a new record. One of the leading writers on aeronautics in Paris recently went so far as to say that the question of making a new record from St. Louis is the feature of the contest of greatest interest to sportsmen.

BETWEEN THE HOURS

BY JOHN F. DILLON

The little Swiss clock struck nine. The cloud on the domestic horizon was in plain view of anyone that cared to look.

"Are you quite through with her-ics?" asked the man. He carefully folded his napkin and leaning with both elbows on the table, sat staring in the face of the woman opposite, a cynical smile on his lips.

The woman bit her lip nervously and endeavored to repress the tears that showed in her gray eyes.

"Allowing for the feminine tendency toward the hysterical," he began, "I believe you have stated our position quite clearly, and I might add, Louise, that it is better we should come to an understanding here and now. Do you follow me?" His voice was cold and even.

"Yes," exclaimed the girl, testat-ingly, a tremor in her voice.

"Now, let us look at our situation squarely," he went on. "Is there any wish you express that remains ungratified?"

"No," she murmured, faintly, "excepting one. You promised to marry me, and—"

"Everyone takes you to be a married woman," he broke in. "Why complain?"

"I am only asking what you promised should be. It's my right. Think of my position before the world," she answered.

He sighed deeply and turned his head away, annoyed. In his agitation he accidentally knocked over the almost empty bottle of wine at his elbow, and it ran in little rivulets over the snowy white cloth, leaving behind a pool that showed blood red on the white, at which he gazed fascinated.

"You will marry me, Billy, won't you?" she pleaded, laying her hand on his arm to arouse him.

"Oh, enough of this!" rudely throwing her aside. "You knew I was a married man since first we met."

"Yes, but later you said you had secured a divorce and would marry me as soon as possible and—"

"I was a little premature, I confess. I expected a divorce, but the courts decided otherwise. So, you see, I cannot marry you, even if I wanted to," he said, looking up.

The girl's breath came and went in short, hoarse gasps, and she stood with white, staring face, seeming unable to comprehend what he said.

"So you lied to me. You were lying all the time?" There was no shrieking, no anger in her voice, just contempt, keen and cutting.

"His face colored perceptibly, but he strove to remain calm and appear indifferent.

"I can't marry you, that's certain, and, besides, I suppose you have made up your mind not to live with me now, but I'll provide for you and the—"

The look on her face frightened him, causing him to stop.

"You'll provide for me! You'll—why, I'd rather beg in the streets than touch a penny of yours."

He tried to speak, but she would not listen. "There is no need of you saying anything more. I wouldn't believe anything you would say. It's plain that all the love you professed for me was nothing but passion. You took advantage of my love and youth, and now—"

He turned to the window and stood looking into the street below.

The sobbing had ceased for some time. When he turned around he found her sitting in an armchair, gazing into the open fire. The agony of mind she had undergone was expressed in the deepened lines about the mouth, and he shrank at the look of pain in her face.

"Annette!" she called, suddenly, in a hoarse, strange voice.

"Oul, madame."

"Fetch my writing materials and get ready to deliver a note."

The ticking of the little Swiss clock could be distinctly heard above the scratching of the pen and the sobs that now and then escaped her. He turned from the window to the sideboard and gulped down a pony of brandy. Crossing to where she sat he stood in front of her and demanded in an angry tone: "To whom are you writing?"

"My brother," she replied, without raising her head.

The silence fell between them again and continued until long after the servant had returned from her errand, and was fast becoming unbearable.

"Look here, Louise," he said, at last. "I'd like to know what you intend to do."

"Do!" she repeated. "Oh, yes, what I intend to do! I'm going to—well, you will find out soon enough what I am going to do. You need not worry about me."

"I'm glad you looked at this matter in a sensible light," he remarked, rubbing his hands with satisfaction. The parting seemed to be coming faster than he had hoped for.

"You see," he continued, when loud angry voices in the hall interrupted him. Evidently some one was trying to forcibly enter in spite of his servant's protests. He raised his eyes to hers in surprise and inquiry.

"My brother!" she said, simply.

"Why did you send for him?" His voice was low, intense.

"Why?" She laughed, hysterically.

"Why? I can see fear creeping into your face, into your eyes. You've led me, laughed at me. You've trained on my love and sacrificed me on the altar of your passion. I've been a plaything for you, a toy, an idle jest. But for all the pain, all the injury you have inflicted on me you are going to pay double. You want to know why I sent for him? I'll tell you why, and she sprang to the door, her nervous fingers inserting the key before she could stop her, and threw it wide open.

"I sent for him to kill you!"

The blood left his face, leaving it almost ghastly in its whiteness. For a moment it seemed the lights had gone out and everything was in darkness.

He was vaguely conscious that her brother had entered the room and that she was pouring forth a recital of her wrongs. Then he suddenly awoke to the danger of his position. He looked at the other man square in the eyes, but found no mercy, and his gaze fell to the revolver that was aimed at his heart. He started forward and there came a sudden flash, a puff of smoke, and he toppled over, his face twisted in agony, and fell to the floor.

"My God, you've killed him!" cried the girl, wrenching the smoking revolver from his grasp and trying to push him through the doorway that led to the street.

"You'll come home to us, now?" he said, stepping in the doorway. "No one knows."

"Later," she interrupted, raising her tear-stained face, the horror of it still in her eyes. "For God's sake, go."

"And you will come?"

"Yes, yes, only go."

"Good-by," he said, simply.

"Good-by," she sobbed.

She heard him cross the landing, descend the stairs and then he was gone.

When the police arrived they found everything in order. The little canary, high up in his castle by the window, was filling the room with melody and the little Swiss clock on the mantel still ticked away merrily. The pool of blood-red wine on the tablecloth had extended to the edge and was slowly dripping to the floor, through the little haze of blue smoke, drop by drop. They found her with her arms about his neck, her lips pressed to his.

"Looks like a double suicide," remarked an officer. "I guess—" he stopped, as a noise from the mantel gave solemn warning, and the men raised their heads and listened.

The clock struck ten.

Oak Tree That Owns Land.

A giant oak tree, which owns itself and eight feet of ground on all sides, is one of the unique attractions in Athens, Ga.

This tree stands on Dearing street in fashionable Cobham, and is within sight of the historical old homes of Benjamin Hill, Henry Grady and Robert Toombs.

Nearly a century ago Col. W. T. Jackson and father of Chief Justice Jackson of the Georgia supreme court, went to the courthouse in that city and had a deed placed on record in which he said: "For and in consideration of the deep love and veneration I have for the oak tree (giving location) and a great desire that the said tree be protected for all time, I convey to said oak tree entire possession on all sides." The land around the tree has been sold at different times and costly buildings surround it, but the wishes of Col. Jackson as expressed in the deed have been sacredly carried out.

Philadelphia's New Cave.

Philadelphia has a new cave. The sinking of a piece of ground in the northeast corner of Washington square, in that city, a few feet from the monument erected to the memory of the revolutionary prisoners of war who died in the jails of Philadelphia, revealed a small cavern of a depth of about six feet. Through this at a short distance from the surface extend the roots of a large tree, whose safety is menaced by the cavity. At the bottom appear to be the remains of some old-time brickyard, of which the exact character cannot readily be determined, but which certain local wiseacres associate with the Walnut street prison. At Washington square was once a potter's field, and as the old prison stood facing the square, the revelations resulting from this cavern may present a subject for Philadelphia antiquarians.

Considerate Juryman.

William Archer was advocating spelling reform at a dinner in New York. "I believe," he said, "that reformed spelling would be unanimously adopted if the public would weigh the matter with an open mind."

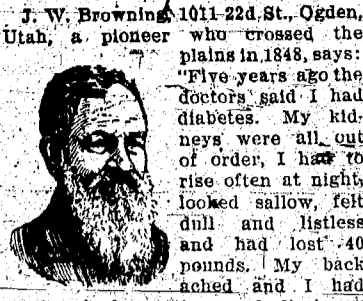

He paused and smiled. "But no," he said, "the public's attitude is such that it brings vividly before me an episode that I once heard related in London by Justice Darling. The justice was the trial of a certain case was about to begin started and said suddenly: 'But there are only 12 jury-men in the box. Where is the twelfth?'"

"The foreman rose and held up his hand with a soothing gesture. 'It's all right, your honor,' he said respectfully. 'The twelfth juryman had to go away on business, but he has left his verdict with me.'"

HER TOKEN OF THE PAST.

Husband Still Here, But Hair Had Long Departed.

A western man, who plumes himself on his fascination for the other sex, was not long ago presented to an attractive New York woman.

In course of their first tete-a-tete the man with winning ways at once took occasion to turn the conversation into his favorite channel. "I observe that you are wearing an especially fine locket," said he. "Tell me, does it contain some token of a past love affair?"

Aware of the westerner's weakness, the handsome New Yorker thought to humor him a bit. "Yes," smiled she, "it does contain a token of the past, a lock of my husband's hair."

"You don't mean to tell me that you're a widow?" exclaimed the westerner in delighted surprise, as he nudged a trifle nearer. "I understood that your husband was alive."

"True," answered the beautiful creature; "but his hair is gone."—Sunday Magazine.

A Sad Mistake.

In my father's native village lives Mr. S., a very dear old man. During the summer months he lets his spare rooms to some of the many pleasure seekers who frequent the place, says a Boston Herald writer, and one day last summer, while Mr. S. was in his garden, a young man of the village, chanced by, and the following conversation took place:

"Good morning, Mr. S."

"Mawlin."

"You've got your house full of boarders this summer?"

Mr. S. was picking potato bugs off from his plants, but he managed to stop long enough to answer, "Yes."

"Some nice-looking young ladies, among them," continued the young man.

Mr. S. stood up and eyed the potato bugs critically, then answered:

"Well, they'd ought to look purty good. I just picked two quarts of bugs off 'em."

Hard to Realize.

"Mother," said a college student who had brought his chum home for the holidays, "permit me to present my friend, Mr. Specknoodle."

His mother, who was a little hard of hearing, placed her hand to her ear, and said: "I'm sorry, George, but I didn't quite catch your friend's name. You'll have to speak a little louder, I'm afraid."

"I say, mother," shouted George, "I want to present Mr. Specknoodle."

"I'm sorry, George, but Mr. — what was the name again?"

"Mr. Specknoodle!" George fairly yelled.

The old lady shook her head sadly. "I'm sorry, George, but I'm afraid it's no use. It sounds just like Specknoodle to me."—Everybody's Magazine.

Identified.

"Your man," said the promoter of a feast, "is a has been."

"And yours," retorted the whipper-in for the rival show, "is a never-was."

Thus, by a chance bit of repartee, was the identity of the stellar attractions made clear enough.

CHILDREN SHOWED IT

Effect of Their Warm Drink in the Morning.

"A year ago I was a wreck from coffee drinking and was on the point of giving up my position in the school room because of nervousness."

"I was telling a friend about it and she said, 'We drink nothing at meal time but Postum Food Coffee, and it is such a comfort to have something we can enjoy drinking with the children.'"

"I was astonished that she would allow the children to drink any kind of coffee, but she said Postum was the most healthful drink in the world for children as well as for older ones, and that the condition of both the children and adults showed that to be a fact."

"My first trial was a failure. The cook boiled it four or five minutes and it tasted so flat that I was in despair but determined to give it one more trial. This time we followed the directions and boiled it fifteen minutes after the boiling began. It was a decided success and I was completely won by its rich delicious flavor. In a short time I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and kept growing better and better month after month, until now I am perfectly healthy, and do my work in the school room with ease and pleasure. I would not return to the nerve-destroying regular coffee for any money."

ALMOST FELT ENVY PANGS.

Great Cricketer's Simple Tribute to His Own Worth.

In 1885 there was a great celebration in London in honor of Dr. Samuel Johnson, and among those in attendance was the Australian "crack" cricketer, Bonner, then at the height of his fame.

As one of the guests, says the compiler of the recently published "Letters" of the late Dr. George Birkbeck Hill, Bonner's health was proposed. His response was noteworthy.

"After seeing the way in which Dr. Johnson's memory is revered," he said, with great simplicity, "I am not sure that I would not rather have been such a man than have gained my own greatest triumphs in cricket."—Youth's Companion.

SORES AS BIG AS PENNIES.

Whole Head and Neck Covered—Hair All Came Out—Cured in Three Weeks by Cuticura.

"After having the measles my whole head and neck were covered with scaly sores about as large as a penny. They were just as thick as they could be. My hair all came out. I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference; and in three weeks it was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. Mrs. Henry Porter, Albion, Neb., Aug. 25, 1906."

The Disadvantages of Schools.

"Why have you taken your son out of school without asking permission?"

Shall We Allow Our Cattle to Be Slaughtered?

In an effort to stamp out Bovine Tuberculosis? Thousands of our best Dairy Cows are being killed in the effort and yet the disease spreads. Recently a booklet issued to all readers free by The Mutual Mercantile Co., Cleveland, O., claims that a few cents worth of Rasawa procured at any Drug Store and fed to the cow will render her absolutely immune to the disease, and it is surely a sensible move in the right way if the claim is true. At any rate it is not worth while to get the booklet free from your druggists and read what they say? It is especially so, when so many thousands of cases of Consumption in the human family are now easily traced direct to the Dairy as the cause.

There is something sublime in calm endurance, something sublime in the resolute, fixed purpose of suffering without complaining, which makes disappointment oftentimes better than success.—Longfellow.

Catarah Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarah Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best medicines known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarah. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. # MOTHERHOOD

The first requisite of a good mother is good health, and the experience of maternity should not be approached without careful physical preparation, as a woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, more successfully than by any other medicine because it gives tone and strength to the entire feminine organism, curing displacements, ulceration and inflammation, and the result is less suffering and more children healthy at birth. For more than thirty years has been the standby of American mothers in preparing for childbirth. Note what Mrs. James Chester of 427 W. 36th St., New York says in this letter:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wish every expectant mother knew about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A neighbor who had learned of its great value at this trying period of a woman's life urged me to try it and I did so, and I cannot say enough in regard to the good it did me. I recovered quickly and am in the best of health now."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certainly a successful remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It has cured almost every form of Female Complaints, Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation, Ulcerations and Organic Diseases of Women and is invaluable in preparing for Childbirth and during the Change of Life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free.

If You Are Sick

It is because some of the organs of the body are not doing their work well. There is a lack of that nervous energy that gives them motion. Consequently you are weak, worn-out, nervous, irritable, cannot sleep; have headache, indigestion, etc. because there is not sufficient nerve force to keep the organs active and allow them to perform their natural functions. Dr. Miles' Nerve restores health because it restores this nervous energy.

"I have been sick for a year, and did not know what was the matter with me. I tried many remedies and none of them proved of any value. I heard of Dr. Miles' Nerve, I procured a bottle, and before I had taken half of it I was better. I would have had nervous prostration if I had not got this medicine when I did. I continued to take it until I was entirely well. I have since recommended it to five of my lady friends, and they have all thanked me for doing so, for it benefited them all."

MRS. ROSA OTTO, 189 S. 3d St., Columbus, Ohio. Dr. Miles' Nerve is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

"In A Woman's Power."

The poet says: "A rose under any other name would smell as sweet," and possibly that powerfully melodramatic play, "In A Woman's Power" under any other title would please as well and pack the theatre nightly. But there is a doubt. And in that doubt lies the safety of the "rose" for it will continue to rank first among the many flowers of the world. This is equally true of "In A Woman's Power." The public saw it for the first time last season and it made a lasting impression. It was as welcome and refreshing as the summer rose—pure in thought, wholesome in dialogue, and presented by a select company of well known artists. No wonder "In A Woman's Power" has become a household word, for it is one of the few melodramatic productions that leave behind a refreshing atmosphere. The amusement loving public will have a chance to pass on the merits of "In A Woman's Power" at the Loveday Opera House next Wednesday evening, June 12. Manager Loveday is so thoroughly convinced of the greatness of this play that he personally endorses it.

DIED A BEGGAR.

The Pathetic Career of John Stow, the English Antiquary.

John Stow, the celebrated English antiquary, was a remarkable man. He was born of poor parents about 1525 and brought up to the tailor's trade. For forty years his life was passed among needles and thread, but in the few leisure hours which his trade allowed him he had always been a fond reader of legends, chronicles, histories and all that told of the times that were past. By such reading he grew to be so attached to old memories that when about forty years of age he threw down his needle, devoted himself to collecting them and followed his new profession with the faith and enthusiasm of an apostle. Short of means he made long journeys afoot to hunt over and ransack colleges and monasteries, and no matter how worn and torn might be the rags of old papers which he found, he kept all, reviewing, connecting, copying, comparing, annotating, with truly wonderful ability and good sense. Arrived at fourscore years and no longer capable of earning a livelihood, he applied to the king, and James I., consenting to his petition, granted to the man who had saved treasures of memoirs for English history the favor of wearing a beggar's garb and asking alms at church doors. In this abject state, forgotten and despised, he died two years later.

Generous to the Church.
Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences tells this story of George Payne, who dropped his worldly means in the quicksands of the turf, but was always untroubled and pleasant in conversation: "Are you not coming to church, Mr. Payne?" was on one occasion the stern interrogation of his hostess, a very great lady, who descended upon him in all the severity of her Sabbath panoply. "No, duchess, I am not," he replied, making swiftly for the door; but, pausing as by a polite afterthought previous to his exit, he exclaimed, with magnificent emphasis, "not that I see any harm in it."

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and needs have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fall, and the stomach and kidneys also, have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to those weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion—strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, will!
