Primary Tuesday.

Turn Out and Vote for L. F. KNOWLES.

Next Tuesday will be the Primary Election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention, and we wish to urge the voters of this section to turn out and cast a vote for Attorney L. F. Knowles of Boyne City. This gentleman is Charlevoix County's candidate and we want this county represented in the Convention. Three delegates are to be nominated out of a list of six candidates. Atty Knowles, we believe, stands a better chance of winning than any one of the other delegates. This county will of course support him, but this is not enough. Every man who possibly can do so should cast the vote for Mr. Knowles on that day. Don't be a "stay-at-home," but go to the polls and vote, making the majority as large as possible.

We need some young blood in this convention and Atty L. F. Knowles is the man. A graduate from a literary course, supplemented by a professional course, from the State University, and trained by eight years of active business and professional life since finishing his college course. More than ordinarily successful in both; clean, competent, honorable, and an energetic and painstaking worker, with an active and brilliant mind, thoroughly familiar with professional, business and social affairs, an ardent republican in principle, but unhampered by any past political affiliations. We urge his nomination as a delegate because he is young, educated, energetic, competent, and because he represents this element of the inhabitants of the state from which emanate new thought, fresh energy and good citizenship.

"A Fool Law."

The Washington correspondent of the Grand Rapids Press writing on the change in the Michigan trout fishing law opening the season fifteen days earlier and closing it on August 15 instead of September 1, states that fish experts in Washington the change a "fool law," and the fishermen up in this territory are inclined to agree with the experts in Washington.

By opening the season earlier, the fish are taken right in the middle of the spawning season when they are easily caught and are not desirable as food. In addition to this, in this region, the weather is generally cold and disagreeable in April, the streams are high and there is no pleasure in fishing. But what is more important, by taking fish during the spawning period, the streams are more rapidly depleted.

As for closing the season at the height of vacation time, that is another piece of folly. Judging by this new law, the men who framed it were never guilty of wandering along a stream with a rod and reel. What the idea was in changing the season is not known and probably never will be, but it was somebody's whim and went through.

There was plenty of real work, work that would have done some good, that could have been done on the game laws, but the legislature in its wisdom didn't see fit to do it.

As this is an article on the game fishes of Northern Michigan, we will say nothing about the brilliancy, foresight and judgment in extending the spring killing for wild ducks, but that is as bad as the fish law if not worse.

Famous Play Coming.

Among the famous plays to be seen here this season is the "Two Orphans" which will be played at Loveday Opera House, Tuesday, Aug. 20th, by a new company especially engaged for this revival of the drama by Fred G. Conrad, the owner and manager of a number of successful productions. Mr. Conrad has fortunately been able to secure the services of a number of actors who have made a name for themselves in the celebrated characters of this play and we may expect to see the poor blind girl finely impersonated, as well as her beautiful and devoted sister, the crippled Pierre and the brutal Frochard. Manager Conrad has obtained the only authorized Kate Claxton version of the play, the one used in making the part of the blind girl, herself and the play celebrated throughout this Country. The full beauty and power of this play, one of the most brilliant ever written, can not be imagined from any garbled or unauthorized version. The Conrad Company presents it as the talented writers intended, together with the priceless added details developed by Miss Claxton during her many years of touring in the play. All the "business," all the directions and elaboration by Miss Claxton are followed and a special equipment of scenery is carried.

"Moonshiners."

Following is a true account of the experiences of a certain Chicago official while enjoying (?) his only vacation. David M. Hyland is the official name and for many years he filled the office of chief operator in the fire alarm telegraph in that city. In all those years Mr. Hyland took only one vacation—that was eight years ago, when he went to New York to buy horses. He had such an experience with moonshiners who mistook him and his party for revenue officers that he never cared to leave Chicago again.

When Mr. Hyland went into Kentucky to buy horses, according to one of his friends in the fire alarm office, he learned of a string of thoroughbreds in the mountains. He started over the mountains, but hadn't gone far when he and his party were captured by moonshiners and kept for several days in a cave with little or nothing to eat.

The moonshiners finally accepted the explanation of the Illinois men that they had gone into the wild region to buy horses and released them, but they were allowed to proceed to their destination only under escort of two men, one of whom remained constantly with them. The other mountaineers went on ahead half a day's journey. The party was allowed to look at the horses, but not to take them away. Arrangements were made to deliver them at a town by the mountaineers, and the horses were there at the appointed time.

Often when anyone would drop into the fire alarm office Mr. Hyland would tell the story of the mountain trip and how they got their whiskey by leaving a couple of jugs, with a silver dollar under each of them, about 100 yards out of camp. After a time they would go back and find the jug filled.

A very interesting story has been written dealing with these peculiar people entitled "The Moonshiner's Daughter" which with a carload of special scenery comes to the Loveday Opera House, TONIGHT.

A certain preacher was conducting a revival. "All of you who belong to the Army of the Lord," he said, "stand up." One woman arose in the back of the room. "What church, sister?" the preacher asked. "The Baptist," she replied. "You don't belong to the Army of the Lord," the preacher said; "you belong to the navy."

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies under seal. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftentimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

Clinton S. Dayton

of Leland, Candidate for Nomination as Delegate to the Constitutional Convention.

The many friends of Clinton S. Dayton are pleased to announce that he is a candidate for the nomination as a delegate to the constitutional convention. He was born at Berlin, Ottawa County, Mich., forty years ago. He is a graduate of Hope college, Holland, Mich. After leaving college he taught school one year then studied law in the office of Taggart & Denison of Grand Rapids and later graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in the class of 1892. He came to Leland the same year. Was Prosecuting Attorney of Leelanau County from January 1st, 1895 to the end of the year 1899 and again became Prosecuting Attorney in 1903 and is still holding that office. He is a man of good natural ability, a successful lawyer, possesses a large amount of common sense and thoroughly honest. His ability as a lawyer, and uprightness of character have won him a good business and a host of friends. He is a man with a big heart fully in sympathy with the common people. He is in every way qualified—a well informed lawyer, a man of good business judgment, honest of purpose and who believes in the common people yet without any of the elements of an extremist or crank in his makeup.

THE STATE IN GENERAL

TRUMP CRITICIZES VERDICT ON THE RAILWAY WRECK AT SALEM.
WON'T CHANGE SYSTEM.
Conductor and Engineer Are Out, the Operators Stay, and Trains Will Run Under Same Rules.

Summary of Verdict.
That the collision was the result of the misreading of order No. 3 on the part of Conductor Hamilton, Engineer Rogers, Head Brakeman Briggs and Flagman Becker, of the train crew of No. 71, and that the misreading of the said order was due to the imperfect and improper manner in which the order was prepared by Operator Sayre and delivered by Operator Cassidy.
The jurors find the operating system of the Pere Marquette railroad and the rules and regulations governing the same are defective in that they do not provide that all trains which are running under a special schedule not on the regular time card of the said railroad should be absolutely obliged to stop for orders at all stations which have been indicated by order to other trains as a meeting point.
That the absence of such a rule and regulation from those governing the operation of trains on said Pere Marquette railroad was as equally a direct and proximate cause of and as equally responsible for the said collision as the failure of the said crew of 71 to properly read order No. 3, or the imperfect and improper manner in which the same was prepared and delivered.
General Superintendent Trump said of the jury's finding: "The verdict is a surprise, for it is an undisputed fact that the Pere Marquette system of train dispatching, even to the form of the printed blanks, is the system which has been adopted by the American Railway association, an organization composed of the best railroad operating officers in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and which gave many years of attention to the subject of train dispatching, with the result that a standard code was formulated, which is in use on nearly every railroad in the United States and Canada today. The rules and the regulations of the Pere Marquette on this subject are in the identical language of this standard code, except where we have added some additional precautions. All this was shown to the jury by undisputed testimony.
The verdict, so far as it refers to the system of train dispatching, shows that the jurors did not understand that system, that they entirely overlooked the fundamental basis of the system and did not even understand the facts of the particular case. There was no meeting point arranged between the local freight train, No. 71, and the special passenger train, No. 155. The train dispatcher's order delivered to the conductor and engineer of the local freight directed them to keep entirely out of the way of the special, No. 155, the time of which between all stations was stated in the order itself, and the crew of the local freight admit that they would have kept out of the way of the special passenger train if they had not misread his time at Salem."

In addition to the statement given out, Gen. Supt. Trump said the Pere Marquette would refuse to reinstate Conductor Hamilton and Engineer Rogers, who mistakenly read train order No. 3, and thus ran their train into the excursion special at Washburn's curve. "They are good railroaders, and will no doubt easily find employment on other roads. I would feel as safe in trusting to Conductor Hamilton today as I would in trusting any other conductor. But we are not going to take them back. The brakeman and flagman will be reinstated."
Operators Cassidy and Sayre, who respectively delivered and wrote order No. 3, will be retained in the service."

The "Red" Campaign.
Plans for an extensive Michigan campaign by the Social-Democratic party, which has been working vigorously in Wisconsin the past few years, have been completed, and Detroit will be the storm center of the "Reds" in that state. From Detroit the movement will be extended to Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Lansing, Saginaw, Kalamazoo and other cities in the lower peninsula. The northern portion of the state is already being worked by Socialists from Wisconsin. From October until April a series of lectures on Socialism will be delivered with the hope of gaining converts among the laboring classes for the party. The brightest men and women in the party have been chosen for the work, and during the winter will visit the cities named, speaking once each week.
A romance which has extended over a period of nearly twenty years, was brought to light by the marriage of Miss Mamie Hough, of Marlette, Mich., to Harry C. Humphrey at Burbank, Cal. The courtship began when the couple were schoolmates in Marlette.

Louis Gorrettli, an Italian, was stashed at Lapeer Monday evening by another Italian, with whom he had some words during the day. Gorrettli refuses to tell who stashed him. He was cut with a stiletto and cannot live. The party who stashed him escaped.
The financial end of Bay City's municipal machinery came to a sudden stop when Comptroller C. J. Barnett refused to sign warrants for bills, salaries and contractors' allowances, passed by the council. It is claimed the city has been borrowing money illegally to tide over a deficit of about $25,000.

Lieut. S. C. Young, of the Ninety-sixth Canadian regiment, made a quick trip to Isle Royale in a power boat early Sunday and says he hoisted the union jack on top of the tallest tree he could find. Young declares as the "rich copper island" is north of the forty-ninth parallel of latitude it belongs by right to Canada. The U. S. has held the island for a century and it has been a part of Michigan since the present state boundaries were fixed.
Reports from Ottawa and Washington are that neither government will pay any more attention to Young's act than if he merely had hung his hat on top of a tree.
According to officials of the state department there has never been any question between Canada and this country as to the United States' ownership of the island. This was settled by the treaty of Ghent.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.
Gov. Warner refused to approve a rate of 49 cents per diem for maintaining patients of state asylums and it will be reduced to 48 cents.
Arthur Bryant and Wm. Wright, electricians, charged with larceny, were discovered preparing to burn their way out of Mason jail with an electric wire.
Judge John B. Shipman, aged 76, of Coldwater, has just become a member of the Elks. He is probably the oldest man ever initiated into the order in this state.
Co. J. M. N. G., of Ann Arbor, is to have the third rifle range in the state, according to the promise of Gen. McGurrin. Grand Rapids and Detroit have the other two.
Roy Havens, the 14-year-old son of E. R. Havens, of the state land office, jumped off a street-car backward, and fell, sustaining a serious concussion of the brain.
Charles Bromstra, 37 years old, of Muskegon, while working complained of pain in the region of his heart, said he thought he would die, and at the supper-table suddenly expired.
An Ann Arbor extra freight was wrecked in a cut near the depot at Lucas by a marine engine rolling off a flat car. Nine cars were piled up in a scrap heap. No one was hurt.
A woman witness in the Martin Golden murder case has failed to identify "Alcohol Bill" Schimmel as the man she saw near Golden's store in Denison the night of the crime. Things look good for "Bill."
Mrs. Elizabeth Meydrich, of St. Joseph, pointed her finger at a burglar she found in her house and threatened to shoot him. The man thought she had a revolver and after dropping his booty, fled.
Separated for 23 years and then brought together through a copy of the city directory, David Bechtel, employed by Dibble & Latta, coal merchants, and Mrs. Emma Alice Bechtel, his sister, who recently moved to Flint, have been reunited.
The concurrent resolution of the legislature appropriating $75 to repair the Michigan memorial tablet in the Washington monument at Washington was never enrolled or presented to the governor for his signature. Payment on the resolution has been stopped.
"Look straight up in the air or we will blow out your brains," said two highwaymen to Archie McKillips, of Sault Ste. Marie, who was on his way with $240 in savings to buy real estate. While he was looking at the heavens the men took all he had and when made him walk away still looking at the stars.
The feature of a recent ball game in Lapeer between Goodrich and Lapeer was the errorless game pitched by Rev. P. E. Edwards, for the Goodrich team. The Goodrich boys say his sermons are as forceful as his pitching, the only difference being, he leaves the curves at the door on entering. Score, 9 to 2 in favor of Goodrich.
Robert Featham, 26, a mason contractor of Alpena, died of lockjaw, after an illness of two days. He ran a rusty nail into his foot a week ago. He was unmarried. His father, Lay Featham, died over a year ago from a bullet wound fired during a family dispute by Peter J. Wood, his son-in-law, who is now serving 25 years in Marquette prison.

Fire gutted the store of the Donseraux Dry Goods Co. in Lansing, starting from a rubbish burner in an alley. The flames were fanned by a high wind and swept through the store in a short time. The stores of Mrs. M. A. Sternberg, a milliner, and J. R. Everet, grocer, were damaged. A general alarm was turned in and the firemen succeeded in preventing a further spread of the flames.
Three persons were killed and two injured, one probably fatally, in a collision between an electric car and an automobile in Jackson Friday. The dead are Mrs. Emily Pulver, 69 years; Bernice Oliver, 5 years, grand-daughter of Mrs. Pulver; Mrs. Levi Palmer, 45 years. The injured are R. Adelbert Oliver, in a critical condition, and Mrs. R. A. Oliver, who is slightly hurt, suffering mostly from the shock.
At a meeting of the joint prison boards and allied boards held on Mackinac Island, a resolution was adopted approving of the way Michigan voters have voiced themselves in favor of industrial pursuits in the prisons. Warden Fuller, of Ionia, submitted in his annual report a statement showing a decrease of $60,000 a year in the cost of maintaining the reformatory since 1894, although the number of prisoners has increased 54 per cent.

Lew Brooks was arrested in Flint for the government authorities on a charge of desertion from the United States navy Wednesday afternoon. He gave homesickness as his reason for leaving the federal service without permission.
Mrs. Belle Welch, of Royal Oak, is charged with assault. The Welches are what the neighbors term squatters and the Wilcoxes their nearest neighbors. Family differences in which a Jersey cow and a flock of chickens played the part of trespassers on the Welch domain, led to the brandishing of a gun on the part of Mrs. Welch. It is alleged. She gave bail.

WARD ARRAIGNED IN DETROIT, MANSLAUGHTER BEING THE CHARGE.
TO APPEAR SEPTEMBER 6.
Bail Fixed at Three Thousand Dollars Is Furnished and Ward Is Free Till Date of Hearing.

His Appearance in Court.
Rep. Charles E. Ward, of Bancroft, who didn't look a bit as though he had a poetical soul, was arraigned before Judge Stein in police court Wednesday afternoon charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Edith Presley, the legislative proffreader whose life went out in Hope sanitarium, Detroit, last April, following a criminal operation. He stood mute while State Senator Tuttle, his attorney, did all the talking and asked for an examination. Judge Stein set September 6 as the day.
Bail to the amount of $3,000, with Fred. Postal, of the Griswold house, and Under Sheriff James Singelyn as sureties, was accepted, and Ward walked out of the court room with his attorneys and bondsmen.
"Have you anything to say?" was asked.
"Not a thing," he replied with a faint smile.
"Are you going back to Bancroft?"
"I haven't decided on my plans for the next two or three days."
Mr. Tuttle expects to leave for a European trip in the near future, and may possibly not be back in time for the hearing.
"If I'm delayed," he told Assistant Prosecutor Eaman, "I'll cable."
Ward came to Detroit Wednesday morning and immediately got busy looking for bondsmen. Mr. Postal, who has known both Ward and Tuttle for many years, agreed to act as one. Who the second was to be seemed a question. Someone suggested Singelyn. Ward, Attorney James Murtha, and Singelyn had lunch together and the thing was fixed up.
Just before 2 o'clock, the hour set for the arraignment, Ward hastened to the Oriental hotel, where Senator Tuttle is staying, and together they went in search of Mr. Postal. It was after 3 when the party arrived at police court.

Detective Sergeant Downey was waiting with the warrant.
"Right in here, gentlemen," said Downey, leading the way into an anteroom. It was there that the much discussed manslaughter warrant was served. Ward said nothing and passed the complaint over to Tuttle, who read it and told Judge Stein that a formal reading was not demanded by his client.
The bill of complaint charges Ward specifically with performing the operation which caused Edith Presley's death. This is merely a matter of form. It is identical with the bill of complaint against Dr. Fritch, who is now out on bail under a similar charge.
Ward looked somewhat disconsolate. He is undersized, and a big straw hat, with ill-fitting clothes, made people who hadn't seen him before, marvel that he really wrote those flowery love letters made public at the inquest.
"That operation pulled him down a bit," said one of his friends. "I must admit that Charlie looks badly."

A Defective System.
That part of the Pere Marquette Salem inquest verdict in which the dispatching system was held defective is practically indorsed, and in the strongest terms, by the Railroad Gazette, the leading railroad paper of the country. The system should be done away with entirely and the automatic block substituted, asserts the Gazette.
After a summary of the facts, illustrated with a facsimile of the train order, and the dismissal, because lightning calculator train dispatchers are rare, of the theory that the dispatcher might have prevented the collision, the Gazette says:
"The causes of this collision, have been given in detail; not because it is proposed to discuss the faults in the details and the means of correcting them, but simply as an interesting exhibit of how the time-honored American train dispatching system breaks down. Our train dispatching system is, indeed, time-honored, but it is not worthy of confidence. The non-automatic block system is suitable for roads of the lightest traffic and cannot be reasonably objected to because of its cost. It is not free from chances of error, but it is simplicity itself compared with the dispatching system, and simplicity tends to enhance safety."

Socialists Fined.
Thirteen socialists arrested in Hancock and charged with carrying the red flag of anarchy and creating a disturbance, were found guilty by a jury. Two of the defendants, who carried flags were fined $50 and costs each, others $15 and costs each, for creating a disturbance. The socialists gave bonds and will appeal the case to circuit court.
M. B. Morwood, of Toledo, was arrested in Kalamazoo while cursing the American flag. He is believed to be deranged.
Letters from many railroads to Commissioner Glasgow announce that the roads will have their new schedules ready and put in effect the new two-cent rate, which takes effect September 27. It is understood at the commissioner's office that one or two of the larger roads will test the law.
The department of justice at Washington has ordered a vigorous prosecution of the men who kidnaped Manuel Sarabina, a Mexican, from the jail at Douglas, Ariz., and took him across the line into Mexico while he was awaiting extradition proceedings. He has been returned to the Arizona prison by Mexican authorities.

A National Flower.
About this time expect the annual debate over our national flower. In spite of a general feeling that the country ought to have one, the choice is somehow never made. Just now the columbine, hardy, widely distributed, and highly decorative, seems to be in the lead among candidates. It has, we believe, an organized league at work in its behalf. Indian corn is "mentioned," and as soon as the golden-rod blooms there is sure to be a wave of sentiment in its favor. Corn, by the way, is the favorite son of Indiana, nominated to the first place in the nation by the Hoosier public school scholars. Columbine, for all its national popularity, is the floral emblem of no state at all, while golden-rod, with Alabama, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Nebraska and Pennsylvania already committed to its claims, ought on that score to have exceptional chances. These endorsements, however, are all by vote of the school children. Only two flowers, the sunflower of Kansas and the unrhymable Eschscholtzia of California, have been picked out by the solemn wisdom of state legislatures. If congress has a preference, it would seem to be the carnation, which many members of both parties wear on the birthday of William McKinley.

John Davidson, one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of Wichita, Kan., has never in his life worn a necktie. Every morning in the year he puts on a newly-laundered collar, but never a necktie. He says he does not think he could stand one, and cannot see how any man can be comfortable with one on. Mr. Davidson has never owned a pair of gloves, either. He has worked in all sorts of weather without any covering on his hands.
Rich men often sigh over the burden of wealth, but about the only man who can make this lament literally, and who wants really and actually no more weight of money upon him is the Washington treasury clerk who had his thigh bone broken by a bundle containing over a million dollars in notes falling upon him.
When a member of the Belgian parliament is making a long speech the government furnishes his hearers with brandy so that they may be able to stand the strain. We think our scheme of permitting our statesmen to retire to the cloakrooms while orators are in action is a better one.

The biograph has just shown in Melbourne the ruins of Rome, followed by the ruins of San Francisco, and it is remarkable what a likeness there is between nature's work of 1500 years and that of a day or two, remarks the Imperial Review.
Those people who are looking for the pole may not find it, but they will manage to keep cool even on the warmest days when the thermometer rises as high as 48 degrees below zero

A Strong Man and His Work That Was Well Done.
Following a fall as he stepped from a carriage, Samuel M. Stephenson, congressman and multi-millionaire lumberman, died in Menominee Wednesday. He was a brother of United States Senator Isaac Stephenson, of Marinette, Wis.
The deceased was born in New Brunswick in 1831 in the environment of the lumber industry. When a boy he came to the lumber district of the upper peninsula and worked in lumber camps for years. He was enterprising and thrifty, and from his savings he established a lumber business in a small way. It later became one of the largest in the world and yielded immense profits.
He was a member of the fifty-first, fifty-second, fifty-third and fifty-fourth congresses and as a member of the rivers and harbors committee promoted many improvements of the channels of the great lakes and connecting rivers. Before going to congress he served as state senator and representative and at one time was prominently mentioned for a United States senatorship.
The school-house education that the brothers received was meager, but both were men of striking personality and force who were never known to duck a fight, physically, financially or politically, from the days they began as red-shirted lumber jacks in the districts where they won their fortunes on through their entire careers.
Sam was a man of his word and liked good companionship. Underneath his harsh, uncultured surface his colleagues in congress saw a real diamond and that's why they liked him. After a bitter fight that was carried to the courts he was defeated in 1898 by Carl Sheldon, of Houghton, for nomination for a fifth term. After that he was not active in politics.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE

FEUDS OF ACTORS.

Some Instances of Disagreements Among Theatricals.

During a recent performance of "The Parisian Model," Anna Held, the star, and Charles Bigelow, the leading comedian, quarreled after the second act.

During the last performances that George M. Cohan and Ethel Levey, his wife, gave before she divorced him, each of them was especially careful to preserve an appearance of complete cordiality.

The Astor place riots, some of the bloodiest that ever stained the streets of New York, grew directly out of the troubles which Forrest, the American tragedian, had with Macready, the English actor.

Some of these actor feuds have had serious endings. William Terriss, for instance, that fine actor who gave Henry Irving such fine support, was murdered at the stage door of a London theater by a crazed actor who had brooded so long upon what he conceived to have been unjust treatment received from Terriss that at length his mind gave way and he slew the other player.

Bigelow, who has just figured in the incident with Anna Held, figured also in some incidents at the old Weber & Fields-Music Hall. When Miss Held went to Weber & Fields it was stipulated in her contract that Bigelow should accompany her.

Richard Mansfield, who makes convincing love on the stage, and who, upon occasion, at suppers after the theater, has entertained whole companies for a quarter of an hour merely by repeating the words "I love you" in different languages and with varying expression, has had many severe quarrels with those actresses with whom he has played love scenes.

Clyde Fitch Revives One.

Clyde Fitch, in a kindly letter to a young and unknown playwright, said: "I liked your play; I thought it promising, but in the first act you imitated Ibsen, in the second you imitated Pinero, and in the third and fourth you imitated Barrie. This will never do. Imitation in art is always bad. It suggests the shabby man who, as he sipped a glass of beer, looked in the mirror behind the bar and muttered to himself: 'Here I am wearing a railroad president's shoes, the trousers of a senator, the hat of a millionaire banker, the vest of a Newport society leader, and an ambassador's coat, and in spite of it all, I look like a tramp.'"

MAUDE FEALY SAW LULA.

Conductor Stopped Train But Actress Didn't Want To Get Off.

Because the curiosity of an actress delayed a belated Southern train, there are some conductors south of the Mason and Dixie line who are watching carefully for Miss Maude Fealy, says the Bohemian. Recently Miss Fealy appeared in Memphis, her birthplace, and following her engagement there the company was booked for Greenville, Miss. It seems that a small town named Lula was the home of her father before he became postmaster at Memphis, and Miss Fealy wanted to see it. So, when the train left Memphis, she asked the conductor to let her know when they reached the station; then she settled down to enjoy the panoramic view of the Mississippi.

Shortly before noon the train was suddenly stopped at what looked like a very well conducted farm, but what on closer inspection became a railroad station. Just as Miss Fealy discovered the name of Lula on the door of the depot, the conductor's voice was heard through four or five cars crying out the name. Then the cry was taken up by the brakemen until the length and breadth of the train echoed with the word. But no passenger made any attempt to leave. The conductor's anger became something akin to rage when he saw Miss Fealy calmly surveying the surrounding country and her father's former abode with marked though calm attention.

"Lulu!" cried the conductor, almost in her ear.

"Lulu!" shrieked the brakeman outside her window.

"Yes," said Miss Fealy, "I see the name on the station. How long do we stop here?"

"Stop!" asked the conductor, "we don't stop here. This is only a flag station, and we've stopped five minutes already. How long do you expect us to wait for you to get off?"

"Oh, but I don't want to get off," said Miss Fealy. "I just wanted to see the town in which my father—"

But the conductor did not wait for the rest of the explanation. He pulled the rope to signal the engineer, and added another burning chapter to the report of belated conductors.

Crystal Herne, Star.

Crystal Herne, who is to be starred by Charles Dillingham next season in a new play entitled "The Stepchild," will begin rehearsals early in August, and she will only have a brief vacation of six weeks, which she will spend at her mother's home at Southampton, L. I. Miss Herne's leading man will be Bruce McRae, who has been with Ethel Barrymore for three seasons, and the other members of her company will be Frederic de Belleville, John Findlay, William Sampson, Grace Filkins and Mathilde Cotrelly.

GOSSIP OF THE STAGE.

Miss Grace George is to return to London next spring, under the joint management of Charles Frohman and William A. Brady. Among the plays in which she will be seen is the one Sardou has just finished for Mme. Rejane.

Lionel Barrymore, who was forced by ill health to retire from the stage two years ago, just after he had won a marked success as the young pugilist in Augustus Thomas' comedy, "The Other Girl," is in Paris at present studying art. It is said he is particularly interested in the American Indian and that he hopes to make some studies from life when he returns to this country.

MARMALADE MADE AT HOME.

Housekeeper Gets Excellent Sweet at a Small Cost.

The housekeeper who practices economy from necessity and whose family is fond of orange marmalade as well as of the fresh fruit, has solved the problem of making excellent marmalade at a little less than half the cost of the same bought ready made. She saves the peel, from the oranges eaten by the family, in an airtight box, until she has enough to make, when cut in very fine strips, with all the inner pith removed with a sharp knife, a pint or a little over. The oranges are to be peeled dry, that is, all the peeling removed before the inner skin is broken, and these dry skins will keep in a cool place two weeks without molding. When she has enough, six large navel oranges and three good lemons are purchased. This fresh fruit is cut in two and with a sharp penknife the pulp of the fruit is removed without any of the fine inner skin which divides it into sections. There will be some juice left in the fruit, but this is carefully squeezed out and added to the pulp. From the lemon pulp every seed is taken out and then orange and lemon pulp is placed in a deep dish and covered with three pounds of granulated sugar. The peel of the oranges and lemons is now cut into sections, carefully trimmed of all inner pith, and cut in very thin slices or straws. These are added to the pint of previously prepared slices of orange peel, and the whole placed in a saucepan with sufficient water to just cover them. Then they are boiled gently till the skins are perfectly cooked and so tender that a small straw will pierce them easily. It may be necessary to add a little more water from time to time. There should be just enough water on the peels when they are cooked enough to barely cover them. To this is added the orange and lemon pulp and sugar and the whole is boiled till a little poured on a cold plate will set. The marmalade must be cooked slowly, and great care must be taken to prevent its setting on the bottom of the saucepan. This quantity will fill six ordinary jelly glasses or a little more, and its cost is not more than 42 cents, an average of seven cents a glass. This is quite as good as the marmalade bought in the stores and very much cheaper, with the added advantage of knowing exactly what is in it.

How to Build a Collar Box.

The fashion of wearing the turn-down embroidered linen collar has created a demand for a proper receptacle for them, and this comes in the form of book covers about 15 inches long and six inches wide. These are covered on the outside with cretonne or silk and on the inside with a sheet of perfumed cotton cover which is white linen. Straps of cotton are sewed across the covers about three inches from either end, and through these the ends of the collars are slipped. This keeps them perfectly flat and in a much more convenient form than a collar box. The covers fold together and tie with ribbon, giving a perfectly flat case that may be easily packed.

Blackberry Cordial.

Put the berries in the preserving kettle of a stone jar set in a pot of boiling water and simmer until soft. Strain through cheesecloth wrung out of boiling water. Measure the juice and to each quart allow a pound of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls ground cloves, four of cinnamon, one of mace and two of allspice. Tie the mixture in thin bags. Roll together for 15 minutes, then strain. Add when cold a pint or half pint best brandy for each quart of syrup. Strain out the spices and bottle, sealing tightly. Dose in bowel troubles, from one teaspoonful to a wineglassful.

Canned Beans.

To one peck of beans add a cup of vinegar and one tablespoonful of salt, cover with water and boil for three-quarters of an hour. Put into glass jars and seal. Before using, soak for two hours and cook until tender, pouring off the first water as soon as the beans come to a boil, and boiling till tender in the second water. They are good boiled with ham or beef or cooked alone and dressed with butter, cream, pepper and salt.

Beef Souffle.

Take about two cupfuls of cold chopped meat, one cupful of bread, cut in small dice; one scant cupful of tomatoes. Put a layer of meat in the bottom of the dish; then a layer of the bread and tomato, a pinch of thyme, pepper and salt, and so on till the dish is full. Pour a scant cupful of boiling water over the whole. Cook in a hot oven for half an hour and serve.

Stuffed Beefsteak.

Take a round beefsteak and fill it with dressing. Fold together lengthwise and pin the edges together with toothpicks. Any dressing such as is used for turkeys may be used. Place in a pot with a slice of pickled pork in the bottom, and boil for an hour; then turn all into the dripping pan and brown in the oven. Serve with the pan gravy. Cut across the roll.

Olive Sandwiches.

Cut whole wheat bread into thin slices, spreading the butter on it while it is on the loaf and shaving it as thin as possible with a sharp knife. Bread a day old is best for this. Chop ripe olives fine and place a layer of them between the two sides of the sandwich. If you like highly seasoned food sprinkle the olives with a little paprika or Hungarian red pepper.

NOWHERE IN FAVOR

IMPORTERS PROTEST AGAINST THE GERMAN AGREEMENT.

They Point Out the Mischief That Will Result from Permitting Foreigners to Name Low Export Values and Thereby Escape the Payment of Full Tariff Duties.

Against that portion of the German agreement which compels consuls certifying to the correctness of export invoices and American customs officers who are to pass upon the question of values to accept as "competent evidence" the values placed upon such invoices by local German chambers of commerce the strong protest of the Textile Importers' association is wholly directed. If any doubt as to the grievous error and wrong inflicted by this agreement alike upon the direct importing interests and the wage payers and wage earners of this country remained in the minds of the president of the United States, or the secretary of state who engineered the pernicious dicker, or the secretary of the treasury who acquiesced in its unwholesome provisions, or the newspapers which have accepted the agreement as all right and proper, or any man who would like to see American industry and American business have fair play and a square deal—that doubt upon a reading of the memorial of protest should instantly disappear, and in its place should come a feeling of certainty that on the part of the American negotiators a grossly imprudent and improper thing has been done in permitting foreign manufacturers to fix "export value" and thereby evade in part the payment of tariff duties specified by law.

This is made perfectly evident by the clear and forcible language of the memorial of the Textile Importers' association. The facts and arguments are those of the leading merchants of the United States—men conspicuous the world over for their great business ability, their scrupulous business integrity, and their wide business influence. They are facts and arguments wholly outside of the domain of politics, and they cannot be successfully controverted.

If these men had been consulted and their testimony taken—the identical testimony that is embodied in the grave and dignified protest which is now in the hands of President Roosevelt—fortified by the testimony of our great domestic producing interests, the German agreement could not have been consummated. Secretary Root, obsessed as he was with the delusion that foreign trade is the one great thing to think of, and Secretary Cortelyou, inexperienced and plastic as he was, with less than 50 days of service at the head of the treasury department, would not have dared to disregard such testimony.

President Roosevelt had he known what he now knows after reading the importers' memorial, would have used his "big stick" to smash the dicker. Of this we feel sure. Why, then, was not the testimony of the direct importers and the domestic producers heard on this important matter in advance of the signing of the German agreement.

Why was the report of the commission sent to Germany withheld until after March 4, so that congress could not get hold of it?

Why did the state department, in reply to a resolution of inquiry before the house committee on ways and means, decline to make known any of the provisions of the German agreements?

Why should every American interest have been kept in the dark when the German manufacturing interests were fully advised of what they were going to get?

We cannot answer any of these questions. We do not know for what reason it was thought proper to secretly sacrifice the business of the direct importers, to secretly lower the tariff duties that American labor and industry depended upon for protection, to rob the treasury revenues, and to demoralize the customs administration service by official sanction of dishonesty and fraud.

The great central blunder and injustice of the "export value" provision of the German agreement is made as clear as day in the memorial of the Textile Importers' association. Under its operation the heaviest tariff payers (the direct importing houses) are put out of business, the American manufacturer is subjected to a dishonest competition alike repugnant to the provisions of the tariff law and to good morals; the American wage earner finds his labor undersold through crooked practices, and the American treasury is robbed of no one can tell how many millions of dollars annually. This is what may be gathered from the memorial of protest. And it is absolutely true.

Easily Answered.

The Boston Herald is having some trouble in answering the question, "What is a Republican?" Thus: "Or take the tariff: Is Gov. Cummins, who demands revision in the interest of the consumer, or Senator Allison, who sneers at such an idea as a 'fad,' a true Republican?—Coming to our own state with this paramount issue 'What is a Republican?'—a man who stands for Gov. Gullit and Mr. Foss, or one who sides with Gen. Draper and Col. Clarke?" The process of elimination would aid in solving the riddle: If the Herald strikes out Cummins, Foss and Gullit the answer is easy.

HAS TAKEN UP HARD TASK.

Secretary Cortelyou Apparently Aims to Accomplish the Impossible.

Fortunately Secretary Cortelyou has proved in three government departments that he has the habit of accomplishing what his predecessors pronounced impossible.—N. Y. Mail. His immediate predecessor at the head of the treasury department supplies an illustration. Secretary Shaw pronounced it impossible to collect the revenues to which the government is entitled, to provide the protection to which domestic labor and capital are entitled and to maintain the honesty and efficiency in the customs service to which the people as a whole are entitled, and at the same time open wide the door to frauds on the revenue, to facilitate the underselling of American producers by foreign exporters under the consignment system, and to the encouragement of wholesale graft and rascality among customs officers. Accordingly, Mr. Shaw refused to sanction the German agreement and resigned from the cabinet. Now, as it appears, Secretary Cortelyou is about to accomplish the impossible. He is going to give away and keep the same market; he is going to smash protection and maintain protection; he is going to promote dishonesty and insure rectitude. He will turn out to be indeed a great man if he shall succeed in these endeavors.

MAKING COMMON CAUSE AGAINST A COMMON ENEMY.

From the protest of the Textile Importers' association against the German agreement:

Germany has secured an undue advantage. It is the one for which she has been struggling a long time; it is the one which she has been seeking by every means in her power; it is the one that every American importer who has sought to buy goods in the German market knows that Germany has been working to secure for a number of years; it is the one which Germany has striven for because she is a consigning and not a selling nation. She prefers to consign her goods to this country, enter them at her "export price," and then compete in this market with direct or purchasing importers and American manufacturers. American merchants know that the advantages lie entirely with Germany under the export price feature. As a demonstration, the imports from Germany during 1906 were $185,000,000, largely consisting of a reduction of ten per cent. under the "export price" system would be $18,000,000, a larger percentage, a corresponding increase. Assuming only a ten per cent. reduction, all our advantage as indicated in the statement issued by the state department is wiped out.

Bad Leaders.

Cutting loose from a safe anchorage with minds distorted by a monstrous ambition, discarding and repudiating the declarations of their party and forgetting its wonderful achievements under this wise national policy, there are to-day Republican leaders who would destroy the great work of McKinley and Dingley, and listening to the clamor of the men who plunged this nation into an era of calamity and depression in 1893, would undo the work of Republican statesmen and try again a policy of free trade, which has at every trial hitherto driven prosperity from the United States.

We care not who these men may be nor what great things they may have done, whether the Republican party follows their advice and elects them to power on such a platform, it writes its own epitaph; repudiates its greatest living principles; destroys the foundation upon which it has built the grandest political organization the world has ever known; undoes the work of half a century of efficient political labor and starts the nation down the declivity of depression, stagnation and disaster, to plunge into the mire of free trade and Democracy, which will speedily obliterate every vestige of the prosperity we now enjoy, bringing the country back again to the dark days, similar to those through which it passed at the close of the Buchanan and Cleveland administrations.—Boone (Mo.) Republican.

Tariff Revision by Treaty.

German exporters under this new arrangement are permitted to fix their own values upon goods shipped to the United States. The goods will be appraised at such figures as the Germans may name and American consuls are expected to accept German appraisals. The Germans can well afford to pay the duty when they are permitted to fix their own value on the goods. By well known tricks of undervaluation they will be able to get their goods into this country on a lesser ad valorem duty and will thus save many millions every year. If France, England and other countries exporting to the United States shall be able to make a similar arrangement, the tariff question will lose much of its importance and a tariff for revenue only will have been accomplished by treaty.—Nyaek Star.

WARM DAY Dainties

EXCELLENT FOR SUMMER AFTER-NOON TEAS.

Departure from the Old-Fashioned Meat and Bread Sandwich—Beverages to Take the Place of Iced Tea.

Everyone has tired of the old-fashioned meat and bread sandwiches and something new that will please the palate on hot and sultry afternoons will surely be welcomed. A very economical way of using up fish, and one of the most popular of the new sandwiches is made as follows:

Take the yolks of six hard-boiled eggs and rub them to a paste, and mix it with the same quantity of cold fish that has chilled in the ice box. Spread this mixture on crisp lettuce leaves, add a dash of mayonnaise dressing and spread between thin slices of white bread.

Another sandwich that can be made in a few moments' notice is by chopping two large crisp cucumbers very fine, and add to this a little onion juice, just enough to give it a flavor, and a little bit of cayenne pepper. Mix this with a little mayonnaise dressing and spread on thin slices of white bread.

Instead of the peanut butter that comes prepared in cans and has stood in the shops for months; try this: Take a quart of peanuts, shell and blanch them, and then put them through the coffee mill or very fine chopping machine. Salt this to suit your taste, and add to it enough port wine, sherry, or any home-made wine to make it a soft paste. Spread on buttered white bread.

By now, you may have become tired of the ice tea, and it is too warm for chocolate, and nothing is more refreshing than the following punch served to a friend on a hot afternoon: Put a heaping tablespoonful of good tea in a pitcher, pour over it a quart of boiling water and let it stand for a few moments—covered. Strain this into a bowl or large pitcher, add one pound of sugar, juice of six lemons and two oranges, and a quart of apollinaris. Be liberal with your ice, and it will also add to the flavor to put in a few strawberries or raspberries, and a cucumber peel. This recipe will make ample punch for a dozen people.

Fruit Punches.—Take a pint of fresh raspberries and a quart of currants, wash and then bruise them. Pour over these two quarts of water and a half-pound of sugar (preferably brown). Let this come to a boil very slowly, then remove and strain through a jelly bag. This should be allowed to cool, then set on the ice. It should be served in individual glasses with a large piece of ice.

Another fruit punch is made by first boiling one pint of sugar with one quart of water and the juice of two lemons. Into this grate the rind of three oranges. Let it boil several minutes, then set it aside to cool. Into your punch bowl or extremely large pitcher put plenty of ice, and slice three oranges very thin, cutting the pieces in half. Take six oranges and squeeze only the juice into the pitcher or bowl, and a pineapple cut in very thin, small pieces. Over this pour the syrup that has cooled, and then add any berries you may have.

AT A BRIDAL LUNCHEON.

Some Novel Ideas Added Zest to Entertainment.

At a luncheon given in honor of a bride-to-be the charming idea for the dessert course was pink ices in heart-shaped form, surmounted by a little white satin slipper in which were a few grains of rice covered with crystallized rose petals.

A silver piece in one of the slippers designated the next bride.

Heart-shaped pink cakes were served with the cream. At the conclusion of the luncheon the bride-to-be was showered with the rice in the slippers.

A novel and pretty rosebowl seen there was made from a cabbage. The clever hostess said that she arranged it in this manner:

With a sharp knife she cut out the entire center, making a bowl cavity, holes were punctured in the bottom, then it was set in a shallow glass-dish filled with water.

It was filled with pink roses; at its base feathery asparagus was arranged, completely hiding the dish. The lovely delicate green tints in the cabbage made a charming contrast to the pink of the roses.

Hints for the Cakemaker.

Have a brisk, hot fire for layer cakes; a slow one for fruit cake.

Do not slam oven door or kitchen door when cake is in oven.

If oven gets hot set in can of cold water.

Settling away from the pan are indications cake is ready to leave oven.

When removed set cake on sieve so a free circulation of air is around it.

Never frost the lower side of cake; always turn right side up.

A tin chest or stone jar is best to keep it in.

For cakes or cookies that call for soda if a teaspoonful of baking powder is used with it it will be much nicer.

Green Shades in Nursery.

Discard the white shades and replace with green ones and baby will enjoy a midday nap. The green is much better than the glare of the white for baby's eyes.

For Delegate to Constitutional Convention Election, Sept. 17, 1907.

VOPE FOR
E. F. KNOWLES
ATTORNEY
BOYNE CITY, CHARLEVOIX CO.
FOR DELEGATE
27TH SENATORIAL DISTRICT
PRIMARY ELECTION, AUG. 13TH
1907.

M. E. LOUISELL
Former Prosecuting Attorney of Benzie County a Candidate.

M. E. Louissell, formerly prosecuting attorney of Benzie County and a prominent attorney of Frankfort, Mich., is one of the candidates for the Constitutional Convention.

Mr. Louissell is a product of Northern Michigan. As a boy he was brought up on a farm. He moved from the farm to Manistee and was employed for several years in the lumber and shingle mills. When 18 years of age, being anxious for an education, he left the shingle mills and entered the Manistee high school, from which he was graduated in the spring 1891. In the fall of that year he decided to enter college and matriculated in the literary departments of the University of Michigan. He spent five years there and completed a six year course in that time, receiving his law and literary degrees in June, 1896. Owing to limited means, he was obliged to work his way through college, by canvassing, doing newspaper work, and other odd jobs. He was the first city editor of the paper now known as the Manistee Daily News.

After his graduation, Mr. Louissell was offered a position as tutor of French in the University of Michigan by Prof. E. L. Walters, then head of the department of Romance Languages, which he decided to decline to engage in the practice of the law. Since June, 1896, Mr. Louissell has been in active practice with marked success.

Mr. Louissell has specialized in the constitutional history of the United States and modern states in general, and is well qualified for the office to which he aspires.

He is married, having a wife and two children.

Mr. Louissell believes in the rule of the people; and where he is well known, his word is as good as his bond.—FRANKFORT EXPRESS.

About Work.
Some men work for honor,
Some men work for fame,
But they take the money
They may justly claim
And are glad to get it
Just the same.

Some men labor daily
Urred by gainful lust,
Some because the doctors
Tell them that they must,
Some because they cannot
Buy on trust.

Some men work for others
Who are near and dear,
Some men work for art's sake,
So it would appear,
Some displaying courage,
Some in fear.

Some men labor nobly
For the public good,
Some because the Bible
Tells them that they should,
But if no one had to
No one would.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

Father, Come Home.

Father, dear father, come home with me now.
The clock in the steeple strikes one.
You said you were coming right home from the shop
As soon as your day's work was done.
The fire has gone out, the house is all dark,
And mother's been waiting since tea,
With poor brother Benny so sick in her arms,
And no one to help her but me.

CHORUS.

Come home, come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father, come home.
Father, dear father, come home with me now.
The clock in the steeple strikes two.
The house has grown colder, and Benny is worse.

But he has been calling for you,
Indeed he is worse; ma says he will die,
Perhaps before morning shall dawn,
And this is the message she sent me to bring,
"Come quickly or he will be gone."

Father, dear father, come home with me now.

The clock in the steeple strikes three,
The house is so lonely, the hours are so long,
For poor weeping mother and me,
Yes, we are alone; poor Benny is dead
And gone with the angels of light,
And these are the very last words that he said,
"I want to kiss papa good night."

Life Root in Zoa-Phora

Proof of the Value of This Important Medicinal Agent

FOR WOMEN

Great Physicians Recommend It for the Cure of Women's Ills.

The National Standard Dispensary is a medical work of nearly two thousand pages, acknowledged as standard authority by the medical profession everywhere. It was edited by such world-famed physicians as Robert Emory Hare, M. D., professor of therapeutics and materia medica in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Henry H. Rusby, M. D., of Columbia University, New York, and others of equal prominence.

This great medical authority describes the action and use of the best medicines recognized in the pharmacopoeias of the United States, Great Britain, and Germany, with numerous reference to others. In discussing the properties of Life-Root, this best of authorities explains the wonderful action of this medicine on the delicate menstrual organism of women. "The remedy favors an increased discharge when the menses are too scanty and painful, and regulates the menstrual function when irregular or too profuse. Notice that the effects to regulate and restore normal functions of these organs, no matter whether the trouble be suppressed menstruation, or its opposite, profuse."

This medicinal plant, Life Root, with others of equal value, are found in Zoa-Phora. Your druggist will supply you with this remedy, already prepared, compounded in just the right proportions, and put up in sealed, sterilized, dollar bottles. Ask him for Zoa-Phora—no further explanation will be needed. Each package contains complete and explicit directions for using the medicine, also a copy of "Dr. Pengelly's Advice to Women," a little book of great value, explaining about the various forms of womanly weakness and disease and the proper treatment for their cure.

If you desire more information about Zoa-Phora, the Zoa-Phora Company, Kalamazoo, Mich., will cheerfully answer all inquiries. No higher authority regarding the value and use of a medicine is known than that above mentioned. In addition, and to prove conclusively to the most skeptical, the value of Zoa-Phora, we have the personal experience of Dr. Pengelly, the formulator of Zoa-Phora who used this prescription constantly in his private practice for many years in treating the various diseases and ailments to which the delicate organism of woman is singularly subject.

An Ideal Laxative.
Physics and Cathartics which purge, unload the bowels, and give temporary relief, but irritate, and weaken the digestive and expulsive organs. Laxative Iron-ox Tablets are as different in effect as truth is from falsehood. They nourish the bowel muscles and nerves, giving them strength and vigor to do the work nature intended, thus effecting a permanent cure by perfectly safe and natural means. The best laxative for children. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never grip or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00 at all drug stores.

We Notice
Other Theatres are advancing in the price of admission, claiming a superior service.

We Know
Our service has been as good as can be obtained at any price.

We Think
Our friends will continue to show their appreciation of this fact by their regular attendance.

We Won't
Advance the price of admission or lower the quality of our service so long as we can meet expenses.

We Will
Continue to live up to our oft repeated slogans of "The Most for the Least" and "Always Something Good."

A number of Lady Maccabees of the local hive were guests of Ironton hive Tuesday afternoon and evening, going down on the Hum. An amusing (?) feature of the trip going down was a masculine jackass who demanded that one of the ladies give him back a seat which he had formerly occupied, and which she had unwittingly taken possession of. The lady complied with "its" request, and this Knight of the Nineteenth Century retained "its" coveted chair the balance of the way to Ironton. When we think of the Knights of old and how considerate they were of the gentler sex, and then bump up against a story like this it makes our blood boil.

An Important Approaching Event.

Information of Interest to the Voters of Charlevoix County.

One of the most important elections ever held in our county and state will be the one through which the members of this coming Constitutional Convention are to be selected. The members of this convention will have to do with forming and expressing the foundations of all the laws and legal requirements of our state for many years to come. All the decisions of all the courts of our state from the least to the highest must be based on the privileges and limitations expressed and implied in our state constitution. But preliminary to the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention, September 17, will come the nomination of Republican candidates on Tuesday, August 13.
It is to be expected that each county having a local candidate will cordially support its home representative and it should further be expected that every voter who goes to the polls on Tuesday, August 13, will be desirous of voting for the best qualified and most competent men on the list of candidates. Whatever good words may be said in behalf of the several other worthy candidates it probably will not be questioned in any section of the state that Mr. Eugene F. Sawyer of Cadillac is one of the most competent and best qualified in every way for the efficient performance of the work expected of him. Although just in the prime of his life and his work Mr. Sawyer is the oldest man of the several candidates. His fifty ninth birthday is approaching. He is a pioneer in northern Michigan, having been a resident of Cadillac and a practicing attorney in that city since April, 1874.
Mr. Sawyer is a literary and law graduate of the University of Michigan, and with a single possible exception has a larger Supreme Court practice than any lawyer in the 27th senatorial district. He has reviewed through years the present Constitution of Michigan as a citizen and a business man as well as through his professional relations. In one recent important case Mr. Sawyer represented the people of Michigan as the State's legal representative in opposition to the Attorney General's Department, and was successful in the Supreme Court.
With the opportunity existing to have a man with Mr. Sawyer's experience and equipment included as one of the three delegates whom the district of which this county is a part will send to the constitutional convention it would seem to be the duty as well as the privilege of every voter in Charlevoix county to select Mr. Sawyer as one of the three whom they shall vote at the primary election of Tuesday, August 13.

The CASTLE OF LIES

BY ARTHUR HENRY VESEY
(COPYRIGHT, 1920, BY DAFFLETON & COMPANY)

He attempted to close the door again. Finding that impossible, his presence of mind deserted him. I brushed by him, and had pushed open the door at the head of the staircase before he could come to a decision.

"Wait here!" I said in a tone of command. "I have an appointment with Madame de Varnier. You were coming for me, of course?"

"No," he answered sullenly. "Madame is at her devotions; she is not to be disturbed."

"I am the best judge of that." And added again, "Wait here!"

I found myself in a great barn-like room when I had kicked the door behind me at the head of the staircase. It was lighted dimly by narrow windows placed high against the roof of rafters, and was almost bare of furniture. At the three angles of this room were the three closed doors. So far the crafty knave had told the truth.

But in which of these rooms should I find Madame de Varnier? And in which Captain Forbes?

It availed me little to have penetrated so far into the enemy's stronghold unless I could accomplish still more. At any moment Alphonse might give the alarm, and I wished to take Madame de Varnier by surprise.

I began to make a circuit of the triangular room. I paused at each door and knocked softly. At none of the rooms did I receive any response. I was at once perplexed and dismayed. There was no reason why either Captain Forbes or Madame de Varnier should keep silence.

And then a maddening thought struck me. Perhaps my crafty knave, Jacques, had been more cunning than I had given him the credit of being. What if he had cleverly whetted my curiosity, acting on instructions from Dr. Starva? What if Alphonse had deliberately lured me here? What if I were a prisoner myself?

Dismayed that I should have been so great a fool, I again made the round of each of the doors, not knocking this time, but shaking the handle of each. And as I seized the handle of the third door, it yielded to the touch and swung silently on its hinges.

I stood at the lintel, abashed at my angry intrusion.

It was the oratory of Madame de Varnier.

Little larger than a closet, and in shape a half crescent, the walls were hung with purple velvet. Facing me was an altar. Two tapers flickered on either side of the crucifix.

Before the altar, her eyes bent to the crucifix, knelt Madame de Varnier, the adventuress, absorbed in her devotions. Even my entrance was unnoticed.

But it was not piety of this extraordinary woman that held me petrified in astonishment and speechless. Within arm's reach, as I stood there, was a bier. And on it, his hands crossed on his breast, his pallid face strangely calm, lay the mortal remains of him whom I knew at once to be Sir Mortimer Brett.

It was a terrifying apparition. Terrifying, because it might have been myself lying there, so strikingly similar at first sight was the likeness of myself to the dead minister. But as the candles, which had flickered in the draught made by the open door, burned more steadily and I looked at his face closely I saw that after all the resemblance was but superficial. I recovered my senses. Now at last I was to know the truth.

Twice I opened my lips to call to the woman who knelt there. But I could not bring myself to speak. The holy dead banished passion from this place. Here I could not reproach and threaten her. I stood silently at the threshold, pitying rather than condemning, waiting for her to discover my presence.

Minutes passed before she turned her head.

Our eyes met, myself sternly questioning with a look. Startled she met at my dramatic entrance, but she met my stern look in absolute calm. No terror or shadow of guilt distorted her tragic beauty. I had come to denounce, to demand justice. I found myself rather pitying.

She went to the door of the staircase. "It is locked," she cried, startled. "Yes, I have taken the precaution of seeing that we are not disturbed," I said calmly. "Now, madam, in which of those two rooms is Captain Forbes a prisoner?"

If my knowledge surprised her, she concealed her chagrin cleverly. She gesticulated to the room at the right of the oratory.

"And perhaps the key of the staircase unlocks that door as well?" She shook her head, smiling at me defiantly.

"Has your servant the key?" "No." "Then, where is it?" "Women are supposed not to have pockets. But I can hide a key about my person as well as you. How did you find your way here?"

"I surprised Alphonse opening the door of the staircase behind the tapestry." "Ah, you are clever. I knew it," she cried approvingly.

"This is no time for compliments. Captain Forbes must be released." "And if I refuse?" "I shall insist."

"Very well, I refuse." "I looked my perplexity. Though we cal pain, striking the table with her open palm as she spoke the last words.

"I must bear the burden of Sir Mortimer's dishonor!"

Now that the words were spoken I knew that I had expected them. For this I had come to the chateau. This was my task.

"You will do this—not for me; I am not so mad as to dream that now, I am your enemy in spite of myself. Presently you will despise me and hate me. But you cannot escape from the ordeal. But for that other woman—the woman you have sworn to help—for her you will make the sacrifice."

"You speak in riddles," I said coldly. "Enough of vague menace and warning."

"She will go down on her knees to you. She will offer you any reward, any happiness—in saving the honor of her name, you must stoop to dishonor."

"Never! Honor is not to be purchased in that coin."

"Or what the world calls dishonor," she added in eager haste. "It is the motive that exalts the deed. Is it not always noble to suffer for another? And it is not merely the happiness of one woman I place in your hands. It is the chastity of a thousand women—the appeasing of the hunger of ten thousand children—the destiny of a race."

"You will find that I am not to be moved by these heroics. Tell me how I am to save the honor of Sir Mortimer Brett."

"What in the sight of God is a lie," she continued vehemently, heedless of my impatience, "if it will save the pure soul of a young girl, if it will give back children to their mothers? Say boldly that I am asking you to act a lie? Look, we will no longer fool ourselves. I ask you to do a little evil that much good may come. I ask you to submit to disgrace, not merely for this woman of your own society, but that you may be the savior of a nation. Menstruate, be merciful!"

"The facts!" I insisted.

"First of all, though it may weary you, I wish to tell you a little of myself. My parents were of that most unhappy race, the Macedonian Christians. My father was rich for that country; we were happy. But when I was a child I was awakened one night by the crash of musketry, and the glare of flames. The Turkish butchers had attacked our village. I saw my sister snatched from her mother's arms and stabbed before my eyes. A blow felled my mother. My father was thrown to earth, mangled and trodden upon. I was taken captive."

"My fate would have been even more horrible had I not been the captive of a Turkish officer who was kind to me and adopted me. But he was one of that hated race, and secretly I tolerated his kindness only to be revenged. In some way he offended the Sultan; my protector was banished. We lived in Paris."

"At last the hour of my vengeance came. He had an enemy, one of his own race, I betrayed him. He died a violent death, and that night, I think, I was happy."

"I found myself rich; he had left me everything. I was beautiful and well educated; a life of pleasure lay before me. Well, I have drunk deep of the cup of pleasure. But that I might be happy? No. If I have banqueted with princes, it was to learn their secrets. I have flattered and cajoled enemies that I might betray them. Sometimes I have betrayed my friends. In short, I am consecrated to my country. For her I have made myself an adventuress. If I could not directly further her cause, there were secrets to be bought and sold at a price. The money purchased bread and arms. I have schemed, intrigued, betrayed, tempted—always to bring Macedonia one step nearer her freedom."

"Madame de Varnier," I interrupted, with a brutal directness, "at any other time these personal reminiscences might be interesting enough, but now—"

"You are adamant," she cried despairingly. "It is impossible, it seems, to awaken your sympathy. Then I must appeal to your intelligence. You must understand something of the political situation."

"I know enough of that already. Once more I must beg you to come to the episode of Sir Mortimer Brett."

"How can you know anything of the complexities of the Balkan situation?" she demanded, at once startled and surprised.

"Suffice it that I know this: Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria will invade Turkish Macedonia, and free that territory from the Turkish yoke, if his army is financed by Kuhn, a banker of New York City—but a Macedonian by birth. This banker makes one stipulation: Bulgaria must have England's promise of her moral support; England must promise Bulgaria a free field. Sir Mortimer Brett was to have gained that promise from England. You made Sir Mortimer the victim of your intrigues. How, and to what extent—that is what I wish to know."

"I was sent to Sofia to accomplish that. It seemed a hopeless task. For 15 years he had resisted every entreaty and bribe. He had the absolute confidence of the British Foreign Office. But it was necessary to win him over at any cost. We had secret information to the effect that if he advised England's interference she would interfere."

"You are impatient; I shall not weary you by telling of my efforts. Sir Mortimer was a cold man and extremely difficult of approach. For some time I despaired of influencing him. But I learned at last that beneath his calm exterior was actually a heart that throbbed—for the sufferings of Macedonia."

"How did you learn this?" I demanded, curiously, as she paused.

"You will despise me the more when I tell you," she replied hesitatingly, and her face was scarlet. I stole his diary. It seems atrocious to you that I should so have repaid his kindness; but I have told you that to play the spy—to be the high priestess of cunning, has been my lot. This diary revealed to me Sir Mortimer's true character."

"I have said that he was extremely reserved, a virtue that all diplomats must possess. He was never to be tricked or excited into a rash statement. Every word he spoke with the precision of an automaton, because every spoken word was weighed."

"And he found relief by giving expression to his emotions in his diary?" "Yes; what he had hidden from the world there he revealed; and in the pages of this diary I learned two facts that were of vital importance to me."

"I think I can guess them," I said coldly. "First, that Sir Mortimer loved you; secondly, that he was tempted to put an end to the atrocities in Macedonia by advocating England's support of Bulgaria."

"Since you have taken the first fact for granted, I shall not contradict you. But I told you that Sir Mortimer found relief in his diary for the emotions which he sternly repressed before the world. As to your second guess, it is only partially correct. I learned much more than that. I learned that he was in correspondence with the banker, Otto Kuhn. He had given to this banker a half-promise that he would do his utmost to influence England, provided that Kuhn financed the invasion in a sufficiently liberal manner to insure its success."

"And with the information obtained so treacherously your task was easy."

SPAIN: FAR BEHIND NATIONS.

Illiteracy Prevails There to a Most Amazing Extent.

Of the 20,000,000 people inhabiting Spain, only about 35 per cent. can read and write; another two and one-half per cent. of the population can read without being able to write, but the remaining 62½ per cent. are absolute illiterates. In the south of Spain it is impossible to get a servant who can read and write, and many of the postmen are unable to tell to whom the letters they carry are addressed. They bring a bundle of letters to a house and the owner looks through them and takes those which are (or which he thinks are) addressed to him. The Spanish postmen are not paid by the state; the recipient of the letters have to remunerate them according to the amount of their correspondence, and each letter costs the addressee at least one cent. It is a joke among the easy-going Spaniards that he who treats the postmen best receives the most letters—whether they are intended for him or not.

THE NEW YORK LIFE'S PROGRAM.

Economy, Publicity and the Paramount Interest of Policyholders.

President Kingsley, of the New York Life Insurance Company, says, in an address to the policyholders, that his plan of administration involves these points:

"First: Strict economy; second, the widest, fairest and fullest publicity; third, the continuance of the New York Life as a world-wide institution; fourth, such an amount of new business under the law as we can secure while practicing intelligent economy, and enforcing the idea that the interest of the policyholder is paramount."

Too Much Exposure.

Elsie is a laundress of color. She is well past youth, wears a perennial smile and sports a single front tooth of much prominence. Recently she missed one of her visits to a patron, and when she next put in an appearance she was suffering from a bad cold. When asked how she took such a serious cold she said:

"During the recent festivities our club gave a ball. The gentleman what's paying attention to me is very particular, so I had to go in full evening dress. And I had to leave off a few pieces, and it got me."

Watching the Knife Play.

"There is an awful fascination about seeing people eat with their knives," said he who has just spent a week on the farm for his health, with a retrospective look in his eyes. "A knife is such an unexpected instrument. You never know just where it is going to strike. You can't keep your eyes off. You are afraid to look for fear it might slip and cut the mouth half in two, and you are afraid if you don't look it might happen and you won't get to see it."

Took Exception.

"Remember, brothers!" shouted the orator of the strenuous life, "I haven't any use for mollycoddies." The very old gentleman who was sitting in the last row removed his pipe and retorted:

"Wat, by heck, mister, even if you haven't any use for Molly Coddies you needn't stand thar and talk behind her back, seem' that she is not present to defend herself!"

The Sad Sea.

The thin, pale man, in the large bathing suit, standing knee-deep in the water, sighed.

"Why," we asked, "are you so sad?" "Alas," he answered, "the sea is the grave of my first wife."

Our lips curled superciliously. "But you married again," we murmured.

"Yes," said he, "and my second wife won't go near the water."

BACK TO LONG AGO

OLD-TIME SCENE RECALLED BY MR. PAROKEYAL.

And Understanding, He No Longer Felt Aggrieved That He Had Sacrificed His Evening Smoke—Willing Victim!

"One evening at dinner in the latter part of May," said Mr. Parokeyal, "the wife asked me if I wouldn't like to go to the May services at church that evening—with her, of course. I caught her exchanging a glance across the table with our eldest boy, a tyke of ten, when she made the suggestion to me. Therefore said I to myself right away, it was a put up job."

"But there I was: No way to get out of it. I thought a bit aggrievedly of the comfortable, lolling smokes I'd miss if I went, and I experienced just a teeny touch of rebellion over the rather smooth and serene way I was being chiseled out of 'em. But there was no way out."

"Why, certainly, mother, I'll go glad to," said I, as hearty as I could make it, and then again I caught that significant exchange of glances between the boy and his mother, just as if they'd achieved some kind of a victory or other.

"Well, the boy executed his usual disappearance soon after dinner, and then, allowing me to burn up just one cigar, my wife began to hustle and bustle me around, and presently we were on our way to the May services. I had to grin a bit sheepishly as we drew nigh the portal.

"Fine work for you, little lady," said I to the boy's mother. "Do you know how many years it's been since I attended May evening services?"

"Please don't tell me," said she. "I don't want to hear. And don't ever say anything like that before the children—you know how they notice these chance remarks, and with that we were inside the cool, fragrant church and on our way up the center aisle to the pew."

"Well, well, what a long stretch of years that fragrance took me back across that mingled fragrance of roses and drifting incense. Noticed it the minute I set foot within the church—first the smell of the roses that were heaped up on the main altar and on the side altar, and then, as we got inside, that other aroma of the incense. I declare that those two fused fragrances—and they go mighty well together, if you've ever noticed—just clean picked me up and set me back on the road a good 30 years, and a good bit of that road right hard going at that."

"The wife and I sat down in the pew, and I was listening to some of the old familiar May evening music, full of dim reminiscences, when the mother gave me a slight nudge.

"I turned and looked at her, and her eyes were shining mighty bright, sure enough. And she was nodding in the direction of the altar. I thought that she meant that she wanted me to stop looking around at the decorations and things and to pay attention to what was going on at the altar, and so I followed her gaze.

"Well, then I understood the meaning of that put up job between the boy and his mother.

"For there was the boy on the altar in surplice and cassock, at the right hand of the priest, at that. I understood, all right.

"When I turned to her again her eyes were still shining away like as if they'd—but, when it comes to that, I couldn't see her very well myself, for it all came a-romping back to me in an instant that she looked just exactly, for all the world, like my own little mother had looked, away back yonder over the crazy path of the years, when she'd seen me diked out in cassock and surplice for the first time—for all the world and to the life! Same shining, starry eyes, same trembling around the corner of the mouth, same speaking pride of the features—the joy of the mother-woman when she sees one of her own taking part for the first time in a rite of any kind of shrine!

"That's why she'd got me out of my armchair to attend the May evening services. The conspiracy between her and the boy stood revealed. But I didn't feel aggrieved about those sacrificed smokes any longer!"

New Cure for Baldness.

For his curious theory that baldness is due to lack of upper chest breathing, Dr. Delos M. Parker, of the Detroit College of Medicine, claims verification by thousands of observations during many years. No victim of common baldness was found who breathed properly. The lungs being imperfectly filled and emptied, it is supposed that residual air is left in the upper passages, and develops a soluble poison. This poison specially affects the scalp, where the skin is practically bloodless, and, therefore, of low vitality. Persistent return to correct breathing has been followed by disappearance of dandruff in one week and beginning of a new growth of hair in six weeks and a fresh covering has been developed on a head that had been bald 20 years.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you.

For using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful!

THE PARABLE HE LIKED.

Darky Would Have Had Trouble Picking It from Sacred Book.

An old darky, anxious to be a minister, went to be ordained. He was questioned thus: "Can you write?" "No, sah!" "Read?" "No, sah!" How do you know about the Bible?" "Ma niece reads it to me!" "Know about the Ten commandments?" "No, sah!" "The Twenty-third Psalm?" "Nebber heard of him, sah!" "Know the Beatitudes?" "No, sah!" "Well, what part of the Bible do you like best?" "Parables, sah!" "Can you give us one?" "Deed, yes, sah!" "Let us have it, then." "Once when the queen of Sheba was gwine down to Jerusalem she fell among thieves. Close Confinement.

The new phonograph had just arrived, and in her husband's absence, Mrs. Jones thought she would give her parrot a treat, so she set the machine working on a record of "In Old Madrid," sung by Mr. Jones in his best style.

At the very first, Polly opened her eyes in surprise, and rocked herself to and fro in deep and speechless wonder.

She was evidently thinking deeply, and her excitement was intense. She cocked her head on one side, with an expression that indicated interested conjecture, and irritation at not arriving at a satisfactory conclusion.

As the song finished, an idea dawned upon her.

"Well," said Mrs. Jones with pride, "what do you think of that, Polly?"

Then the bird found words: "Great Scott!" she shrieked. "You've got the old man boxed up this time!"

The Tell Tale Voice.

"If you want to tell whether or not the man you are talking to is telling the truth don't look him in the eyes," said a Denver banker to some friends. "It is the voice, when you don't look at the eyes, that tells you whether the other fellow is lying. We use the system frequently in the bank. A man will come in to tell us some business tale. We look at his feet or his hands or his knees, but never in his eyes. If he's telling the truth his voice will be firm and straightforward, and the absence of your gaze in his eyes will not affect it. But if he's lying he'll be confused by your action, and his voice will tremble; he'll hem and haw, and clear his throat. You may rest assured then that he's stringing you."

Brains are Built

from certain kinds of FOOD

Try Grape-Nuts

"America has become a land of nervous emotionalists, largely owing to our sins against the dietetic health laws of nature."

"Only outdoor exercise in a cold climate would enable vigorous individuals of our species to digest the viands forced upon alimentary organs enfeebled by sedentary occupations," wrote Dr. F. C. Oswald.

Brain workers must have different food than laborers, because brain work uses up parts of the brain and nerve centers, while physical labor uses up other parts of the body.

Grape-Nuts, a food for brain workers, prepared by scientific food makers, is a pure, natural food made from selected parts of field grains known to contain the natural phosphate of potash and other elements required by the system in rebuilding and repairing the brain and nerve centers. This food is skillfully cooked at the factory and is ready to be served instantly with cream. At all first-class grocers and made by the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich. Reunited by a Burglar

By L. AGNES MORLEY COWLES

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Cynthia walked steadily out of the parlor and up the stairs, but when she reached the hall above she stopped and leaned against the banister. The chandeliers were lighted, but somehow she could not see well, and her limbs were trembling. She gathered herself up in a moment, however, and went down the hall to her room.

Harold was waiting for her in the parlor, and she and Harold had quarreled.

That afternoon Cynthia had gathered together all the things that Harold had ever given her—that is, all the things that were left, for if the perished flowers, and the candy, the saucers of ice-cream and the tickets to entertainments could have been collected, there would have been a goodly pile to add to the list.

She rang the bell now, as soon as she entered her room, and to Annie, the maid who answered the summons, she said briefly: "Send William up to get this box, and tell him to deliver it to the address at once." Then, when the maid went, she gathered up the letters and went downstairs.

As she passed through the door a small envelope slipped, unnoticed, from one of the packages of letters and fluttered to the floor. It lay half-coppeled under the edge of the dresser, and it was not until two evenings later that Cynthia discovered it.

She was a pale, hollow-eyed young woman that evening, in spite of all her brave efforts to keep up, and her hand trembled as she picked up the envelope, yellowed by age, and held it to the light. It contained a valentine that Harold had sent her years before, and there was a quiver about her strained mouth, and a mist before her eyes, as she drew it from its covering.

The valentine was a flimsy little lace paper affair, with cupids and pink rosebuds on the face of it, and behind them a verse was cunningly hidden, after the manner of valentines. Cynthia lifted the cupids and the rosebuds, holding the lace like a veil before the printed words, and read:

"You are my sweetheart, dear one, The joy of my life, And sometime, when we're older, You shall be my cherished wife."

The hot blood rushed to her face as she read the words now. When she had received the valentine she had not been surprised or shocked at its daring declaration, for she could not remember the time when she and Harold had not planned to be married when they should be old enough. Now, they had quarreled, and had separated with the understanding that henceforth they were to be to each other only as mere acquaintances.

When the firm of which Harold was junior partner had first offered him this opportunity to go abroad, he had refused, because it would take him so long away from her; but now it did not matter where he went, and when they had offered the opportunity again he had accepted it gladly enough.

It was Cynthia's first thought to send the valentine to Harold's address in England, but she soon decided that such an act would look childish, and as though she were trying to attract his thoughts to her. In all probability he would never look over the returned gifts and letters, and if he should he surely would not miss this little thing.

Her next thought was to burn the valentine, and two days before she might have done so, but to-day, with grief and loneliness at her heart growing every hour more poignant and hard to bear, and Harold far away upon the sea, she could not destroy this last frail relic of their love.

So the cupids and roses, and the crumpled lace, and the sentimental rhyme, all wet with a woman's agonized tears and kisses, were smoothed carefully out and put back in the envelope with its direction in a boyish hand. Then the envelope was laid away in a carved ebony box, with a blue satin lining. The box was put in a drawer in Cynthia's rosewood desk, and the drawer was locked securely with a slender silver key.

A year went by with lagging feet. It was a February night, frosty and still, as Harold Cushman stepped from the midnight train to the station platform and glanced around at the familiar landmarks of his native town, showing distinctly in the moonlight.

It was a full mile from the station to his home up-town, but in spite of the fact that his journey had been long, and that it was already midnight and cold, for some unaccountable reason Harold preferred to walk.

As he neared the finer residence portion of the town, his steps slowed a little, and before a yellow colonial house with white trimmings, he stopped abruptly. It was not his home, for the Cushman house was farther up the street and was built of red brick.

But the young man saw more than another standing by him might have seen. He saw a room inside the house—a long, large, pleasant room, with pretty windows and cozy cushioned window-seats. The gas-light and fire-light shone softly on the polished floor, on the handsome rugs and chairs, the books and vases and choice pictures. He seemed to be standing there by the fireplace alone, with a fierce tumult in his heart, and then he heard the rustle of a skirt upon the stairs, and a woman, young and beautiful and gowned in white, stood before him holding out to him some letters and a ring that sparkled in the light. Her face had been so cold—so cruelly cold and beautiful—his Cynthia's face! Harold stood there a little longer, and then, not seeing very well, he went on up the street.

He had gone only a few rods when his foot struck something lying on the walk. It was square and dark, and picking it up, he discovered that it was a small black box. He started to open it, but hearing footsteps coming rapidly down a side street, he dropped the box into his ulster pocket and strode on to the welcome awaiting him at the red brick house.

It was late when Harold Cushman slept that night, and late when he awakened in his own familiar room the next morning. When he went downstairs he found the family already assembled at the breakfast-table and excitedly discussing a burglary which had taken place in the village between 11 and 12 the previous evening.

The yellow and white colonial house had been entered, and two watches, considerable silver and some money had been stolen. Cynthia's watch had been taken from the dressing-table in her room, and her desk had been broken open. It had been a bold venture for a moonlight night, and the town was stirred over the affair.

As his sister finished reading the account of the burglary, Harold remembered the black box, and hastily excusing himself, he mounted the stairs, three steps at a time. His ulster was hanging over a chair in his room, as he had left it the night before, and diving into one of the capacious pockets he drew out the box which he had found in the street. It was of ebony and exquisitely carved. He lifted the lid, expecting to find the box either empty or containing jewels, but it was not empty and neither did it contain jewels. Against the delicate blue lining lay a little old envelope, and, turning

She Must Look Happy.

"fig it over, the man saw that it was addressed to Cynthia in his own well-remembered hand. There was a strange clutching at his heart when he took out the tear-stained bit of lace paper, with its cupids and its roses, and read again the foolish little verse.

It was two mornings later. Cynthia stood by a window in her room looking listlessly out at the snowy expanse of lawn. Her stolen watch had been recovered the day before, but her ebony box had not been found, and she could not well advertise for a box containing an old valentine.

She had heard that Harold was at home, and looking well and particularly happy, but she had not seen him. She must look happy, too, when they should meet, for she would rather die than have him guess how her heart ached.

The door-bell rang sharply and she heard some one go through the lower hall to answer the ring, but she did not take notice of what was happening until Annie rapped gently at her door. "For you, Miss Cynthia," the maid said, looking on and handing to her mistress a large white paste-board box. Her fingers trembled as she unfastened the cord and lifted the cover. In the white tissue paper lay a great bunch of fragrant violets with their rich green leaves, and, nestled among them was a small white envelope. Opening it, the girl drew out her cherished and lost valentine, and with it a sheet of paper. On the paper, in Harold's strong, manly hand, was written: "When I see you, I will explain to you how I came by this valentine, which I sent you years ago. The fact that you have treasured it has given me hope and courage. We do not now need to wait to be older before the joyous fulfillment of the last line of the valentine's verse shall come to you this evening."

He came, and stood again in that large, pleasant room, waiting for Cynthia. He heard again the rustle of her skirt upon the stair, and looking up, he saw her coming down. She wore a gown of white, as she had done that other night, so filled with pain for both of them, but his violets were in her hair and against her breast, and, unapologetic, the love of him was shining in her eyes.

To Be Dedicated in Buffalo Sept. 8. Former Residents Invited.

The beautiful white marble shaft erected by the state of New York in Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., to the memory of President McKinley, is to be formally dedicated Thursday, Sept. 8, and the event will be the central feature of Buffalo's Old Home Week, Sept. 1 to 7. Former residents of Buffalo and the public at large are cordially invited to attend the dedication.

The McKinley monument was planned and executed under the direction of a commission of prominent men, at a cost of $150,000. Gov. Charles E. Hughes, with his military staff, will take part in the ceremonies and President Roosevelt and former President Grover Cleveland have been invited to attend and speak. Military parades will be a feature of the occasion.

MONDAY-UNIVERSAL WASH DAY.

Recognized as Such Over Almost All the World.

Why does nearly all the civilized world wash clothes on Monday? What has Monday to do with washing? It was originally the moon's day and was sacred to the queen of night. I read in a schoolboy's history that the Pilgrims landed on Monday and the good women immediately set about washing the clothes that had been soiled on the trip over. We might judge from that alleged fact that no washings were done aboard ship; yet the finest place for such necessary work of sanitation and blessedness is out at sea where there is plenty of water and nearly always a drying wind.

The voyage of the little Mayflower lasted 63 days, I believe, and as nearly as we can reckon the landing was made at Plymouth Rock on a Monday, though some historians insist on Friday. It must have been a vile and filthy vessel on arrival, with 102 passengers and crew going over two months without washing their linen. Linen? What did they wear in 1620? Can you realize how big the Mayflower? A miserable little bark of 160 tons (Capt. John Smith) or 180 tons (according to Bradford).

The Advantage of Reading.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the weary hobo as he stood at the farmhouse door, "but might I sleep in your barn to-night? I haven't had a roof over my head for ten days."

"I congratulate you," said the kindly farmer. "That is a splendid thing. I have just read in one of my ten-cent magazines that it is not too much to say that to the delicate, highly-strung, easily-knocked-up individual the advantages of sleeping in the open air are enormous. Pallid cheeks take on a ruddy hue, colds are unknown, nerves are forgotten, and irritability becomes a phase of the past. A small plot and a little perseverance are the only necessities and the result is assured. You are very welcome to the use of my potato patch, and my sky is at your disposal."—Judge.

Long Time to Sweep.

Everything even a magnificent church, must be regarded from the point of view of the beholder. A London paper says that two country girls, who acted as if they might be enjoying a holiday from domestic service, were observed walking down the aisles of St. Paul's Cathedral. Under the great dome one of them stood and gazed around her with an air of such wonder that a spectator might well suppose that she was awestruck by her solemn surroundings. But when she spoke, the idea was dispelled. "Oh, Sarah," she exclaimed, "wouldn't this place take a long time to sweep?"

All in Cold Storage.

An Oregon attorney, representing a client whose title to a certain cold storage plant was under fire, closed an able argument before the Oregon supreme court recently with the following bit of pathos: "Your honor, there is more resting upon your decision than this cold storage plant; a human life is at stake. My client's life's efforts are in this cold storage; his life's blood is in this cold storage; his body and soul are wrapped up in this cold storage."—Law Notes.

Neighbor's Comment in Which There Seems a Strain of Sarcasm.

"Yes," the leader of the amateur brass band was saying, "it's curious to see what an effect learning to play a horn has on some persons. I used to be a pretty good bass singer, but I can't sing worth a cent now."

"Does learning to play a horn spoil the voice?" asked his next-door neighbor.

"It did mine."

"How do you account for it?" "I don't know how to account for it. Strains the vocal chords, perhaps. All I know is that I blew my voice out through the mouthpiece of my cornet."

"Did you have a good voice?"

"Everybody said so."

"Then it's a great pity you ever learned to play a horn," rejoined his neighbor, shaking his head sadly. "I—er—think I should have enjoyed hearing you sing."—Youth's Companion.

FEARFUL BURNING SORES.

Boy in Misery 12 Years—Eczema in Rough Scales, Itching and Inflamed—Cured by Cuticura.

"Cuticura has put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. During the day it would get rough and form-like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable, and gave it up. I decided to give Cuticura a trial. When I had used the first box of Cuticura Ointment there was a great improvement; and by the time I had used the second set of Cuticura Remedies my child was cured. He is now twelve years old, and his skin is as fine and smooth as silk. Michael Steinman, 7 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 16, 1905."

Productivity of the Hen.

"How many eggs is a hen wound up to lay during the term of her natural life, do you suppose?" said the man who has investigated. "No idea, eh? Well, sir, a good, healthy hen does not fulfill her destiny until she has turned out 600 eggs—50 dozen. That's what nature has fitted up a hen to do in the way of eggs, and she gives her eight years to do it in."—Washington Post.

A Boston lawyer, who brought his wit from his native Dublin, while cross-examining the plaintiff in a divorce trial, brought forth the following:

"You wish to divorce this woman because she drinks?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you drink yourself?"

"That's my business!"—angrily.

Whereupon the unmoved lawyer asked:

"Have you any other business?"

Everybody's.

Of Course.

SPOT CASH

FOR SOLDIERS' HOMESTEAD RIGHTS.

All soldiers who served ninety days or more in the federal army or navy between 1861-1865, and who made homestead entries for less than 100 acres on or before June 22, 1874, means that an additional right is due someone and that it can be sold to me for spot cash, no matter whether patent issued or not. If soldier is dead, his heirs are entitled. The right descends as follows: First, to the widow; and second, to the legal heirs, or next of kin. Talk to old soldiers, their widows, children, or next of kin, about this class of additional rights. Get busy right now and find some of your relatives who made homestead entries in early days. It's easy money. For further information address Comrade W. E. Moses, 81 California Building, Denver, Colo.

The NEW Burr McIntosh Monthly.

With the August number of "the most beautiful magazine in the world" the Burr McIntosh Monthly appears in a new size. The pages are a trifle wider than heretofore, which enables the publishers to present their wonderfully attractive photographic reproductions in a more perfect form than was possible in the former shape.

The color work in this August issue is very attractive and suitable to the season. In the department of Painting and Sculpture the life and work of Auguste Rodin, the celebrated French sculptor, is presented in most interesting detail. Among the people of the stage photographed are Lillian Russell, Anna Held, Helen Ware, Florence Reed and Adele Ritchie. An exquisite portrait of the young heir apparent to the throne of the Russias in his first trousers is given. It is a work of art from one of the finest photographers in the world located in St. Petersburg.

The panoramic form contains many beautiful pictures and altogether this midsummer number will more than please an exacting public. The first of a number of covers by well-known painters is a part of the August number, representing an exquisite reproduction in colors from a painting by the celebrated artist, Albert Lynch. I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative and my Book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating the symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, not the Cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for sample and free Book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Warner's Pharmacy.

THEATRE TALK NO. 3

"HOW SHALL WE AMUSE OURSELVES SANELY AND IN GOOD CONSCIENCE?" was a question before a recent meeting of a young men's social organization in Philadelphia. This is a question of public morals that must be considered and settled by the great body of amusement and pleasure loving people.

Says one editorial paragraph: "IF YOU ONCE MAKE A RULE THAT A MAN CANNOT BE GAY AND AT THE SAME TIME GOOD YOU WILL BE MORE APT TO DECREASE GOODNESS THAN TO DESTROY GAYETY."

"MAKE THE PEOPLE HAPPIER AND YOU WILL MAKE THEM BETTER." And one of the conservative religious papers recently said, "LET US NEVER BE AFRAID IN INNOCENT JOY."

We need heartening up, invigorating, diving TO UNLOOSE THE PENT STRENGTH FROM OUR ARMS, THE CAPER FROM OUR HEELS, THE CALL FROM OUR LUNGS AND THE SONG FROM OUR HEARTS. As to the moral character of sports, amusements and pastimes, it is well to remember that they have no character of any kind except that which the individual gives them. IT IS FOR EVERY MAN TO DECIDE WHETHER HIS AMUSEMENTS SHALL BE INNOCENT OR OTHERWISE AS HE DOES WITH HIS TONGUE AND HAND.

ON THE WAY TO THE CITY

How unfortunate that the abuse of good amusements should have been allowed to give them a bad name. BUT MOST UNFORTUNATE IS THE SELFISH INTOLERANCE THAT SO MULTIPLIES "FORBIDDEN THINGS" (one of which some have tried to make the drama) as to make it next to impossible to enjoy life in good conscience.

THE YOUNG AND VIGOROUS WANT RECREATION, THE OLD AND HEAVY LADEN WANT RELAXATION.

This relief comes to both in witnessing a dramatic production of sterling worth such as "THE TWO ORPHANS" which comes to town in the near future. NO PLAY OF THIS TYPE HAS BEEN MORE SUCCESSFUL. It is romantic in nature, full of emotion and human interest and while brisk in motion never loses sight of the sentimental. THE VARIOUS PICTURESQUE CHARACTERS ARE ALL IN THE HANDS OF CAPABLE ACTORS, and a complete scenic production is given. IT IS THE KATE CLAXTON VERSION, (that noted actress having made "the play famous" that will be presented here) and the management says "YOUR MONEY'S WORTH OR YOUR MONEY BACK."

The Best Laxative for Children.
Parents should see to it that their children have a normal, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not do the great wrong of giving them anything too powerful in effect, and literally make their little bodies to pieces, leaving the bowels so weak and unresponsive that they require a Laxative Iron or Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs to healthy activity. Children can easily take, never gripe or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00.

Will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative and my Book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating the symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, not the Cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for sample and free Book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Warner's Pharmacy.
