Going To Be A Hummer.

The Free Public Auction and Traders' Exchange

At East Jordan Thursday next, Nov. 7th.

Preparations are being completed for one of the most novel and biggest Public Auction Sales ever held in Northern Michigan. Already every department is full of stock and merchandise aggregating between $8,000 and $7,000 worth. Over thirty-five horses are among the stock listed and the end is not yet.

Every effort is being put forth to make this a success in every sense of the word and the different committees are doing their utmost to further the matter.

J. H. Graff has been appointed general superintendent for the day and all having property to sell should see him on the morning of that day relative to the placing of same.

The New Truancy Law.

The truancy law as amended by Act 48 of 1907 requires all children from the time they are seven years old until they become 16 years old to be in regular and consecutive attendance at the public schools unless exempt as provided by statute. The six exemptions to compulsory attendance are as follows, viz:

1. Any child who is being taught in a private or parochial school in the branches usually taught in the public schools, or who upon completion of the work in said school shall present evidence to the commissioner of schools or superintendent of schools that he has completed sufficient work to entitle him to an eighth grade diploma;

2. Any child who has received an eighth grade diploma from the public schools;

3. Any child physically unable to attend school. The truant officer must investigate such cases and he may employ a competent physician to determine the facts, and in such cases the county or district would bear the expense;

4. Children over fourteen years of age whose services are essential to the support of their parents may be excused by the county commissioner or city superintendent on recommendation of the Board of Education;

5. Children under nine years of age who do not reside within two and one half miles of school.

6. Any child twelve to fourteen years of age while in attendance at confirmation classes conducted for a period not to exceed five months in either of said years.

The machinery of the new law is clear and direct and be summed up as follows:

A. The director must furnish the census list.

B. The teacher must compare the census list or enrollment and report to the commissioner.

C. The Commissioner notified the truant officer.

D. The truant officer investigates the case and if children are not exempt serves formal notice.

E. The teacher notifies the truant officer or commissioner of failure to comply with notice;

F. Truant officer within 3 days makes complaint and secures warrant;

G. Settlement in court.

Unlike previous laws the new law does not leave its enforcement to the discretion of the teacher and officers concerned, but states their several duties and requires the performance of those duties.

In case of settlement in court any person convicted of failure to comply with this law is guilty of a misdemeanor and the justice must inflict the penalty of the law, which is a fine of not less than five dollars or more than fifty dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than two nor more than 90 days, or both such fine and imprisonment. It will be noted that this is the amendment, and that justices of the peace have no discretion in case of a conviction. The law says the person shall be fined, or imprisoned. Justices of the peace cannot suspend sentence or in any way interfere with the proper execution of this law.

Art Exhibit Next Week.

For three days and three evenings, during the week commencing November fourth, a collection of carbon photographs and engravings loaned by the Elson Company of Boston, will be on exhibition at the Monroe building. This collection is interesting not only because of its size, but also because the pictures are all reproductions of masterpieces/the originals of which can be seen only by visiting nearly every gallery and country in the world.

The exhibition is especially strong along the lines of Egyptian and Greek art, and Italian painting. Pictures of Egyptian and Greek temples; of the Acropolis and the Forum; of famous Greek and Roman statues; and reproductions of painting by such artists as Botticelli, Michael Angelo, Correggio, and Raphael helps make up the collection.

These masterpieces are of value not only for the pleasure they give but also for their educational power, and exhibitions of this sort should be liberally patronized by all who are interested in things which make for culture and refinement.

Furthermore all money taken in at the door will be spent in buying pictures for the various rooms, and for this reason alone, those who have noticed the bare unadorned walls in the school building ought certainly to interest themselves in the exhibition. The larger the attendance the greater the number of pictures that can be purchased.

Admission will be fifteen cents, to members of the school ten cents. Those who desire to spend more time than they can well spare at one time can purchase non-transferable tickets, for forty cents, which will be good at any time during the three afternoons and evenings. A short program will be given each evening.

Home-Made Mixture Cures Rheumatism.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result. This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after a while. Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Jarvis and Miss Manson, from the Washington school, visited the normal class Monday.

The County Commissioner of Schools, J. H. Milford, visited the class last week.

Miss Himes was absent two days last week on account of sickness. The work was assigned to the class, however, and they did not get so far behind. The sickness of Miss Himes also prevented her from attending the State Teachers' Association, held at Battle Creek.

Monday morning, Dr. Catton gave a very helpful and witty talk to the high school and normal. The class had several very helpful observation lessons with Miss Reed, during the absence of Miss Himes.

The association of automobile manufacturers has agreed to build 37,000 cars next year. Thirty-seven thousand more troubles to dodge.

The Hour For Good Clothes.

WALL STREET is becoming more and more divorced from the people as day follows day. Panics in New York are not panics in East Jordan. Growing things have prospered immeasurably. Farmers are out of debt. Mortgages on farms, implements and stock have been lifted. The tiller of the soil has money in the bank, and he is buying good clothes, pianos, graphophones and luxuries.

Corporations are being regulated. Light, heat and power concerns are reducing their charges. Railroads are squeezing the water out of their stocks and cutting down the rates of transportation. All these counteract the increased cost of living and pave the way to better things for you and us. People can have more of the good things of life than formerly—good clothes like ours, for instance.

More babies are coming into the world—husbands are more generous—wives more hopeful—children brighter and healthier—happiness is on the boom.

Prices of foods and milk and other necessities have gone up, but that's because they are purer—substitutes have been thrown out—we are getting down to an honest basis—merchandise now is worth the money. All over the country things are cleaner, brighter, healthier, happier, honester.

Our courts are virtuous, honesty has had a boost, people are more human and more humane—strikes are less frequent—employers more reasonable, employees better satisfied, murders are not as numerous as they were, general confidence exists everywhere except on Wall street. Who cares for Wall street?

All this means that you can afford to wear better clothes, and less trash, good hand-made clothes, The Kind Of Clothes We Carry, the Best, the Smartest, the most Refined. Try it and see. Prices $5.00, $10.00, $12.00, to $20.00. Sole agents for the Celebrated Schloss Clothes.

A South Dakota town has passed an ordinance forbidding male and female persons to loiter on the steps of any church, public building or doorway of any store for the purpose of visiting, eating candy or peanuts, or in any street, alley, or vacant lot, or other obscure place, for the purpose of flirting in the evening. In other words, says the Houston Post, the South Dakota idea is to get married people divorced and to embarrass as far as possible the efforts of those who desire to become merged.

A New York bank cashier stole $50,000 because a woman told him to do it. It is wonderful how well men obey women sometimes. There are many cases of this kind on record since the day Adam took the apple just to please Eve, but how few are the instances of which we have record where men have wandered back from the paths of sin and pleasure just because a woman told them to! And it is all the more remarkable, too, because that has been woman's chief occupation since she made the acquaintance of man.

Do We Need a United States Constitution

By DR. EDMUND J. JAMES, President of University of Illinois.

IT IS highly demoralizing for an individual, a state or a nation to pretend to live up to a principle and make no attempt to do so; to pretend to observe a law and yet habitually violate it; to pretend to keep within the limits of a written constitution and yet constantly overstep them.

It is equally, if not more, demoralizing to go our own way, do what we please without regard to anything but our own views of expediency and then maintain that all these things are in harmony with our professed principles, our accepted laws and our written constitution, when in order to justify this view, it be necessary to interpret these principles, laws or constitution in such a way as to violate all rules of logic and accepted canons of interpretation.

This is what we are doing in the United States today in respect to our Federal Constitution. So far has this process of construction been carried that the confidence of the average man in the protections and guarantees of the Constitution has been profoundly shaken. It is no uncommon remark that if the Constitution is the only thing which stands in the way of a proposed law, some means can be found of evading that.

The fact is that we have come face to face in our national development with problems of such complexity and such magnitude that they can not be solved without a large co-operation of the Federal Government; and this co-operation can not be extended within the limits of the Constitution as it is—unless, indeed, we are willing to adopt new and enlarged principles of construction which would nullify the most important provision in the Constitution and convert it from an instrument delegating certain limited functions, into an instrument vesting an unlimited and ever-widening authority in a government which, by its very magnitude would become ever more irresistible.

The fact is our present Constitution has been so changed by construction and interpretation that its authors would never recognize it. And if we had not thus changed it our Union would have gone to pieces long ago. It is full of ambiguities even now, though the American people have spent more blood and treasure in giving it a definite meaning than they have spent in all the wars of defense and offense which they have waged in the century and a quarter of their existence.

One of the fundamental purposes of a constitution is to enable a people to pass over easily and quietly from one social and industrial state to another; to enable it to move forward, discarding the useless and worn out, while it holds fast to everything that was good in the old.

Our Constitution is a marvelous instrument, and no one can study its origin and development without being filled with wonder and admiration.

But we must not forget that it proved inadequate to enable the nation to progress peaceably from a state guaranteeing the existence of African slavery to one in which that institution had disappeared.

All the present indications point clearly to the fact that it is inadequate to enable the nation to solve the many pressing problems relating to our society, industry and politics.

Essential Point in Education

By ARCHBISHOP GLENNON, St. Louis.

—that wisdom and knowledge are from God, and that the more we know the better we can serve him.

We are also coming closer together on the matter of how education can be imparted; the "how to teach" is being more and more studied, and the consequence is that the pupils can learn more and can learn with greater facility than in the past. Indeed, there are some who begin to think that we are making education so easy and so inviting as to fail in our purposes; for what is so easily acquired is easily lost, and this "education made easy" sometimes fails to educate.

I don't know whether the theory of the struggle for life—and out of the struggle the survival of those who struggle hardest—would apply in the field of education. Certainly the struggle for education is not today a serious one, and few there are who fail of obtaining what is within their reach of all.

Again, we are all agreed that the schoolrooms should be properly lighted, heated and ventilated; that around the pupil should be thrown as much of joyousness in work and commendation in achievement as it is possible to give. And in this regard, also, great progress has been made within the last century from the dingy charter-house school to the great school of our modern cities.

There is, however, one feature of our modern school life that most deserves consideration. And in going to it we reach the very soul of the educational problem. That point concerns not the methods of teaching, not the question of pedagogues, not "how to teach," but "what to teach."

The child should be taught all truth and the order of the teaching should be proportionate to the importance of the truth to be presented. Quite early in the child's life the great truths of the Fatherhood, the providence of God, should be brought before the pupil, that woven into his daily task should be the question of the whence, why and whither of his life, and in all honesty and faith the answers given as Christ, the great teacher, has left them for our edification. We believe that nothing will give more meaning or form to the child's progress than the frequent recurrence to the eternal truths which lie outside the secular sphere and which deal with the soul of God.

We would lead the child back to where may be touched the "springs of life, the depths of awe and reach the law within the law." And we furthermore hold that these great fundamental truths, wherein is found the essence of religion, are absolutely necessary to any broad, liberal and just education. Deny them a place in the school curriculum, and you destroy the completeness of the truth cycle, you have left only incompleteness and mutilation. Set these primary truths aside, and in the balance of your curriculum is left you only to impart facts without reasons, actions without principles, and duties without sufficient motives.

HUES IN HEADGEAR.

Combinations That Look Pretty in Fall and Winter Hats.

Violet is often combined with white, with gray and with certain blues. One model in white felt had its wide drooping brim bound in violet velvet of a lovely soft shade and was trimmed in three huge knots or choux of velvet in three shades of violet.

Such big velvet choux in contrasting colors or several shades of one color are a trimming much favored for wide brimmed hats of moderately high crown and otherwise without trimming. Well developed, the idea is very effective and the Parisian milliners attain striking and beautiful color schemes in this way.

Great velvet pansies, morning glories, etc., are used as flowers, as they have been upon the summer hats, and one finds the summer fad for dead white flowers and foliage included in velvet flowers whose blossoms and foliage are white. Big roses are still in demand, but feathers of all imaginable—and unimaginable—kinds, wide, soft ribbons of faille, satin, etc., will probably be more generally used than flowers.

Wings come under the comprehensive head of feathers and are shown in forms and colorings even handsomer than those of the spring.

Household Helps.

Egg spoons that are stained should be rubbed with damp salt before polishing.

If a bedstead creaks at each movement of the sleeper, remove the slats and wrap the ends of each in old newspapers.

Have a small horseshoe magnet fastened to the end of a tape of ribbon of sufficient length so that it can be dropped to the floor to pick up scissors and needles.

Turn your coffee mill down very lightly, fill the hopper with granulated sugar, grind it through once or twice, or even three times, and you have an excellent powdered sugar.

To clean a carpet without taking up take a cup half full of cornmeal mixed with salt and sweep well. When spots are left take oxgall or ammonia. Both are very good things to make the carpet as bright as a new one.

Iron rust on stoves which have not been in use this summer can easily be removed by going over the parts with coarse sandpaper, afterward covering the places with hot tallow or any warm grease. The next day wash with hot soapsuds in which there is a liberal supply of kerosene. Fenders, grates and stoves can be cleaned in this manner.

Variety Cakes.

Half a cup of butter, one and one-half cups of sugar, five eggs, half a cup of milk, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, quarter of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, half a cup of chopped raisins, boiled icing. Cream the butter and sugar, put in the yolks of the eggs and beat well; beat in one cup of flour and the baking powder, sifted in it. Reserve two whites of the eggs for the boiled icing; whip the other three well and fold in the butter last. Divide the cake into three parts, add the spices and raisins, well floured; bake one layer of this fruit part and two layers of the plain part. Put boiled icing on all the layers, and put together, with the fruit layer in the middle.—Mrs. C. Vinton Henry.

Quick and Easy Laundry Work.

You can do a morning's work in one hour and a half by following these directions:

Put 8 cents worth of borax, 5 cents worth of salts tartar, 5 cents worth of powdered ammonia, and one package of potash into five quarts of boiling water. Turn one quart of water onto the potash first and let it stand until cool, then add the rest. Let the mixture stand 24 hours, and it is ready to use. This makes enough for 20 washes.

When ready to use, take one coffee cupful of the "Quick and Easy," shave half a cake of soap, and add them to your boilerful of clothes. Boil half an hour. A good rinsing in your bluing water is all that is necessary, unless some collar or wristband is very much soiled.—Harper's Bazar.

Savory Omelet.

Cut tender corn from two or three small ears. Take the seeds from a green sweet pepper. Mince finely half a cup of boiled ham or the same of dried beef which previously has been fried to a crisp; add a pinch of mixed herbs; salt to taste, using not so much salt if ham or dried beef is used. Beat four eggs well and add a pint of sweet milk. Mix all together and fry in oil or butter or lard ten minutes in the oven. A tablespoon of cornstarch dissolved in milk gives body to it.

Needlework Note.

A clever woman has put her knowledge of basketry to good account in the fashioning of a whiskbroom holder. This consists of two disks of basket work similar to those used for the bottom of a fancy basket and caught together at the sides by large fluffy bows of three-inch satin ribbon, the color being a delicate pink in harmony with her room furnishings. A band of ribbons of narrow width, but matching in tone, is used to suspend the holder.

Tinware.

Paste a piece of stiff brown paper across the hole, by means of a cold water paste. Pour hot water into the pan and allow to stand awhile. No amount of scraping will remove it. The pan can be washed in hot or cold water.

QUENTIN HAS FUN WITH SNAKES IN WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON.—Quentin Roosevelt caused chills to chase up and down the spinal columns of Attorney General Bonaparte, Representative Hepburn, and ex-Representative Lacey, of Iowa, the other day when he appeared in the president's office with two live snakes coiled about him.

Quentin is somewhat impetuous, especially when on roller skates, and he skated into the office of his father, who was having a conference with Attorney General Bonaparte. As Quentin approached, the snakes hissed and the attorney general side-stepped with great agility. President Roosevelt suggested to Quentin that he disappear. Quentin hastened into the cabinet room where Representative Hepburn and Mr. Lacey were waiting to see the president. They thought the snakes were harmless wooden affairs and began to admire them. Then the larger snake began to wriggle and wrap itself around the arm of Quentin and the distinguished lawman in their terror made frantic efforts to walk up the walls.

Regaining their composure it occurred to them that Quentin might be in danger, and that they should rush to the rescue, especially when they saw the larger snake, three feet long, gliding up the sleeve of the president's son. In the most gingerly manner they took hold of the collar of the boy's coat and gently removed the garment, taking care to keep out of range of the snake. Disdaining rescue, Quentin seized his coat, and while he toyed with the squirming reptiles skated outside, where a party of women visitors were thrown into hysterics at sight of the snakes.

Quentin brought three snakes from Oyster Bay with him. He found that he could not take care of them properly and turned them over to an animal fancier. But Quentin got lonesome without his snakes, and the fancier loaned him a king snake and a smaller reptile. Quentin went to the executive offices to show his new treasures to his father, who observed that the king snake was about to make a meal of the little one, and warned his son to be careful to prevent such a calamity.

Quentin finally left the White House to the great joy of everybody there. His father remarked to a caller that Quentin's taste was inherited, for he not only liked snakes, but had scotched a few in his time.

MAY USE STREET CARS TO IMPROVE POSTAL SERVICE

EVERY street car in this country may be made a traveling postoffice before long. Such a plan is now under consideration by Second Assistant Postmaster General McCleary, with the object of still further improving the mail service.

Mr. McCleary's idea is that when a person writes a letter the sooner it is on its way the better it suits him. If mail facilities are still further improved the man will write two letters where he now writes one and the government will receive just that much more revenue. Postoffices of street cars, he believes, will place the writing public in close touch with the postal department and the convenience will add materially to the government's income.

The system has been tried on the line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and has proved successful. Every car on that line is equipped with a mail box and the people patronize them liberally. The cars stop to receive a letter, the same as a passenger. If the scheme works well where it has been tested, Mr. McCleary can't see why it will not work well on all street car lines. At first the system may be installed only on the main street car lines of the various cities, but will be extended gradually to take in all the lines.

The cost of the service is to be investigated. Officials at the department are of the opinion the expense will not be great, as the street car companies will no doubt furnish the necessary letter boxes and permit their conductors to handle the mail. In many cities street cars are now used to transfer mail from one postal station to another and the postal authorities believe the system for the collection of mail can be successfully developed.

ARMY OF CATERPILLARS IS DEVOURING FOLIAGE

FOLIAGE on Washington's trees is being devoured wholesale by an army of tussock caterpillars, the larvae of the tussock moth, and apparently nothing can be done to check the ravages of these now doing the damage, though precautions can be taken against a repetition of the pest next year. Aiding and abetting the tussock caterpillars are the cohorts of the "fall web worms," which are by no means so numerous, but which, nevertheless, are doing an immense amount of damage.

For many years the tussock caterpillar has been the most serious of the shade-tree pests in Philadelphia, New York, Brooklyn and Boston, but it was not until 1895 that it appeared in Washington in sufficient numbers to be regarded as a menace to the foliage. In that year also the fall web worm was more abundant in this city than it had been since 1886. In 1901 the pests of both kinds again appeared in great numbers, and now there is another invasion, giving a period of six years between each great attack. Hitherto the chief check upon the insects has been the parasites that come in great numbers in the same years that the caterpillars abound and destroy most of the multitude of eggs laid by the pests. Destruction by man has helped, but has accounted for but a small percentage of the eggs put out of business.

Trees of which the foliage has been injured or even totally destroyed by these marauders may be seen on almost any street of Washington, the caterpillars attacking by preference poplars, soft maples, elms, alders, birches and willows. But other trees by no means escape their depredations, though the ginkgo and tulip are almost immune. Besides destroying the foliage, the caterpillars are offensively intrusive, invading the homes of the residents and otherwise becoming a nuisance.

As usually seen, the tussock caterpillar has two big, hairy protuberances like horns sticking out of where his forehead would be if he had one, and another one—really two close together—projecting like the rudder of an airship. He is excessively hairy, and ugly, and his hairs are stuck in loosely and are apt to fall out on any person upon whom he drops, causing inflammation and swelling. These hairs are finally tangled up in the silk the caterpillar weaves his cocoon and become part of the egg receptacle, leaving the caterpillar a "smooth worm," not a "woolly one," and looking far unlike his original hideous self.

LOVELY SINGER WHO IS TO WED IN GERMANY.

Marie Brodyski, Once a Favorite of the Czar, Driven From Russia, Finds Romance in America.

Boston.—Wooded and won on a sight-seeing automobile away out in Seattle, Washington, Marie Sophia Brodyski has just set sail for this city, bound for the continent. In Dresden, Germany, she will meet the man who carries her heart with him, a heart which now belongs to him because he could sing and sing well. So can she, and their courting was carried on in songs from a famous opera while the announcer on the auto was telling about the points of interest in the northwestern city.

Early in the life of the soon-to-be bride, she thrived and prospered in the mixed atmosphere of convent seclusion and the brilliant gayeties of the Austrian court. Before she had reached her 18th year, she had to flee from her native land and go to Russia because of the emperor's displeasure due to the fact that two of his noblemen had fought a duel over the right to seek her hand in marriage.

Hardly had she entered Russia, however, when her mother, who left Austria with her, fell in love with the Grand Duke Boris. This escapade of the elder Brodyski left the younger woman practically alone, but her charm of manner and excellence of taste and judgment concerning matters of court, soon won her a way into the graces of the elite of the czar's land.

Soon a favorite with the czar, Miss Brodyski was one of the honored guests at the palace. She advanced with the leaders of that mighty court; she listened to words of admiration from the lips of Nicholas; she was petted and flattered above all the others until she aroused the envy and jealousy of the noblemen.

After a somewhat brief career as a leader among the social leaders at St. Petersburg, the attention of the czar shifted to some other favorite and Russia was no longer that home of which she was pleased. She was accused of plotting against the life of the emperor and he listened to her accusers, and to escape deportation to Siberia she fled to London. There, throwing on her own resources she joined a comic opera company, her charming voice winning her great favor.

After singing there for three seasons she came to America, and at last found herself at Seattle whither she had gone in search of friends and that is where her romance began.

The lucky man in the case is Lionel Harrison, or Harry Lyon, as he is better known to the people of Seattle, where he worked as clerk in a leading hotel, and sang when opportunity offered. But no one dreamed that Harrison spent his winters in Germany studying the language and grand opera at Bayreuth, while during the summer prior to this he traveled with light opera companies and saved every penny he could to help defray the expenses incident to his life work on the stage.

He had accepted an engagement this summer with a company at a fair salary, as usual. But the money was not for them evidently, and the "show closed." Lyon settled in Seattle with two cents. He began to look for a job and landed behind a hotel desk, while he hired a room at another and cheaper one and kept his voice flexible by daily work at the parlor piano.

One day he started out to look at Seattle on the big auto. He sat on the back seat. Shortly after a bewitching type of brunette was given a place at his side. She looked curiously at him and finally asked if he did not remember her.

Lyon leaned forward and said: "I am sure that I do remember you! You sang with me in Convent Garden, London, in 'The Bohemian Girl,' did you not?" That settled it. The most voluble notes from the megaphone failed to arouse them. The speaker was disgusted and pronounced them "deaf, dumb and blind!" They saw little of Seattle, but much of each other, and when Lyon left the hotel recently for the east, Marie had preceded him by a week. They will meet in Dresden, Germany.

Golf as a Game for Women

By Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor

Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, who is a Golf Player of Renown as Well as a Leader of Society, Speaks With Authority Upon the Game of Golf and What It Offers to Women as a Healthful and Delightful Pastime—The Daughter of the Late Senator Charles B. Farwell, of Illinois, and the Wife of the Talented Author of "The Crimson Wing" and Other Novels, She is Well Known.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, who is a golf player of renown as well as a leader in society, speaks with authority upon the game of golf and what it offers to women as a healthful and delightful pastime. The daughter of the late Senator Charles B. Farwell, of Illinois, and the wife of the talented author of "The Crimson Wing" and other novels, she is well known.)

When American women took up golf, they did it as a pose; in a short time it became a purpose; it is now merely a pastime.

All this alliteration may seem meaningless, but those who remember the various stages through which golf in this country has passed cannot fail to recognize the truth of it. The pose period was when golf began. Then it was a new fad—the thing to talk about, the thing to do. Women—and likewise men—wore red coats; they flocked to the golf links as they would to afternoon teas, and the professionals were busy from early till late teaching women, regardless of weight, age or previous condition of servitude, to drive gutta-percha balls off little piles of sand. Every woman must take up golf, and take it up she did with a vengeance.

Out of the pose period grew the purpose epoch, when home, husband, children and even best young men were forgotten in the daily chase of that same gutta-percha ball. We dreamed of golf scores, by night and we struggled to lower them by day. Our intimate friends became our hated rivals and our sole object in life was to lower a record or "lift" a cup. One can hardly think of those days without restraining a smile. A woman's popularity was gauged by her success on the green, and she, however so beautiful or attractive, she was forced to give the palm to the local champion. As for the woman who had attained national honors, she was the envied of everything in petticoats, and consequently the detested. During that purpose period of golf the woman who had not reached the first flight still cherished hopes, and the only object in life for the average woman of that day was to bring in a lower score, by fair means, if possible, or—dare I say it?—sometimes by foul.

But in time a feeling of discouragement came over those who, having tried, had failed. They had gone through the posing period, with its red coats and silver scorebooks; they had made of golf the only thing in life, but they had not made good scores and, after two or three seasons of perspiring persistence and graceless gyrations, they dropped out of the game. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," does not apply to golf. Golfers are born, not made, and if you haven't the eye and the suppleness of wrist the game calls for it is wiser to play skittles. It has taken American women years to find this out, but at last those who can't play, and never could play, have become contented wives and mothers once more; and those who can play take golf as one of the many diversions of life and not as its sole object.

The game has now reached what I call the pastime period. We are content to take it as an amusement, and those who have any chance of winning make it a genuine sport. The contestants for championship honors are those who really love the game, and they play to win. If they are beaten they don't scratch their opponents' eyes out, but they go to work to try to "do her up" in the next match. For a number of years there were but two classes in American women's golf: Miss Beatrix Hoyt, and the others. No one else, except Mrs. Butler Duncan, who did not enter tournaments, had the slightest chance of winning the championship, and it was only a question of who would be the runner-up.

For three years Miss Hoyt reigned supreme as queen of golf, but that was the time when golf was a purpose. So that out of the throng of persistent women who crowded the courts from morning till night, getting in the way of the men and making themselves generally obnoxious to the world at large, came a group of first-class players who became the stars. There was little to choose among them, but even they have not things their own way, for young, supple girls are always coming to the front, and in the keen competition of the present day to hold one's own at all becomes a task calling for all the qualities of the sportswoman.

With the development of the game from a fad to a sport the quality of American woman's golf has improved immeasurably, particularly in the long game. One hundred yards used to be a long drive for a woman, and one of that length would bring forth applause from admiring onlookers, but to-day a woman who cannot clear a 180-yard bunker would not even figure among the "also rans" in the published accounts of a match. Putting is the part of the game women learn most readily, and the part in which they excel. Women put as well as or better than men, but they never drive as well because they are handicapped by the element of strength. In the development of the game there has been little improvement in the putting department since the early days. All who had any eye whatever quickly learned to go down in two when on the green, but in reaching the green the women of to-day have advanced wonderfully over those of a few years ago.

The little, delicate, ladylike attempts at driving, or the strange contortions with which women beat the air, are seldom seen on golf courses now. Women swing out like men and put snap into their wrists and the ball goes. The only difference between their driving and that of the men is the actual muscle behind the ball, and that is a handicap nature has made.

The eastern women outclass those of the west, because athletics have a firmer hold in the east. Eastern women are accustomed to riding, shooting, sailing and tennis. They play games from their earliest childhood, so that their muscles are more thoroughly trained, and they are accustomed to competitions. Golf was merely one more game to be learned, and they went about it in the systematic way which comes alone from experience. Golf is the first sport in which western women have indulged to any extent, and consequently they have not the sporting instinct fully developed as yet. The young girls in the west—the ones who have learned the game since golf became a universal craze, and consequently have had the benefit of the best instruction and example—are the only ones who can ever hope to compete upon an equal basis with the best women players of the east.

However, the sporting instinct is growing apace in the west, and golf is, if anything, more on the wane in the east than west of the Alleghenies. Other sports occupy the eastern mind, but in the west we have as yet only developed a taste for golf. New clubs are still being started, and new players are still making futile attempts to dislodge the ball from the tee. This may apply more to the men than to the women, but even the latter are still enthusiastic.

Mixed foursomes are the best possible scheme to keep both men and women interested in the game. In fact, at many of the courses they have proved to be the only club events which called forth a large field. Mixed foursomes may be merely social golf, but they serve the purpose of keeping the golf ball rolling and for that, if for no other reason, they should be encouraged.

There is another point in connection with golf upon which I can never resist giving my views. I mean the practice of professional caddies in matches. It seems to me unsportsmanlike to employ such extraneous aid in matches.

To say the last word I have to say: Golf is a glorious game for women. The exercise is not too violent and it may be indulged in by the young and the old, the lame, halt—I was going to say blind, but one must keep one's eye on the ball. It is a game for all players of games and, if one is content to plod along in one's own class, a game to give pleasure to all. The difficulty in the road to championship honors is the necessity for constant and unremitting practice. Again, to play through a tournament is a terrible strain upon one's nerves and vitality; therefore, don't take golf too seriously, unless you wish to become a subject for a rest cure. Some women do take golf too seriously, and when their whole happiness becomes involved in the winning and losing of matches they become objects for compassion rather than emulation.

Play the game primarily for the sake of the game, not for the fleeting honors it brings. It is pleasant enough to be a champion, but not at the cost of health and happiness, and after all, a champion is only a number of the world's inhabitants. Play the game for the diversion and exercise and play it squarely; if championships result, so much the better, but we can't all be champions, and even those who are sometimes get conceited and are therefore not the pleasantest people in the world to meet.

Golf is a game for women, than which there is none better, but we are to be congratulated upon the fact that it has reached the pastime stage. As a pose it was ridiculous; as a purpose insufferable, but as a game it is glorious—so long may it live!

CORNER FOR THE JUNIORS

AT THE FLAG STATION.

Margaret and Her Faithful Daisy Save the Express.

The Conleys lived so far out of town and used the trains so often that the little flag station at the foot of the hill was a necessity. Margaret was charmed when it was put up; she soon knew the various signals and the family grew to depend upon her, for the very faintest whistle could not escape her sharp ears; she seemed unconsciously to be always on the alert.

Margaret was a queer child, used from babyhood to roaming the country by herself. She knew every foot of the ground, and it was as natural for her to ride a horse, as it was to walk and talk. Her own horse, Daisy, happened to be born on her birthday, a circumstance which delighted Margaret. The Conleys made great holidays of birthdays, and papa not only allowed her to have the naming of the pretty colt, but presented her as a birthday present to his little daughter.

How Margaret learned to ride she never knew. Once on Daisy's back everything seemed easy, and many a canter they had in the summer days down the long stretch of road that led to town. Margaret was never allowed to go to town by herself, though she was 11 years old, and Daisy could have carried her quite safely; but she would often ride for a mile or more down the road "just to pretend." She usually golloped as far as the flag station and turned Daisy loose for a little browse in a certain green pasture nearby while she went inside. Here she looked at the clock hanging just above the door, though she had to get on a bench to see it at all. Then she consulted the schedule nailed upon the wall, and then she waited for the passing of two or three trains, nodding and waving to the conductors and engineers, to whom the child's figure was a familiar landmark. Then she would call Daisy, and would trot back home by the same road, all pretending that they had been to town.

On a certain afternoon there was company expected by the late train for tea, and Margaret and Daisy went ahead of the carriage to welcome the guests. It was just sunset when they reached the flag station and Margaret could see the engine of the train from town poking its nose over the brow of a distant hill. At the top it would commence the down grade with double speed, sidetracking about half a mile from the flag station to let the home-bound express pass by.

As the train from town came nearer Margaret cantered forward to meet it, but to her amazement it did not sidetrack as usual, coming instead straight toward the station. The child's heart stood still; in five minutes time the express would come thundering by, and it never stopped at the flag station unless signaled. It would dash past into the train bearing their friends from town, and Margaret shut her eyes as the dreadful vision came before her, but she was quick to think. She raced with Daisy back to the flag station and snatched the signal, a bit of scarlet flag, from its nail on the wall. It was too late to warn the incoming train, which would not have time to back down to the switch and sidetrack before the express came upon them from the other direction. But she and Daisy would be able to signal the rushing express and check its speed in time. They took the railroad track, the little girl reasonably thinking that the sight of such an unusual obstacle would bring the engine quickly to a halt. Margaret had no thought of her own danger, though Daisy shrank as she felt the ominous rumbling beneath her hoofs.

"Good girl! Good girl!" whispered Margaret. "Steady, steady, there—don't be frightened—" and grasping the bridle firmly with one hand, she waved the signal vigorously with the other, just as the black snorting monster dashed into sight. A surprised shriek and two short whistles answered the signal, and Margaret knew that all was well. Then things began to whirl before her; she had just strength to pull Daisy off the track, when she slipped out of the saddle to the ground, her little white face upturned to the sunset glow. The scarlet signal was still in her tightly clenched hand, and Daisy stood quietly sniffing and neighing, until help arrived.

When Margaret came to herself she lay in her mother's lap, but she could not understand, until she saw the faces of the people all around her and heard the cheer as she opened her eyes.

"Where's Daisy?" she asked, and willing hands led Daisy to her side. Good girl! Good girl!" she whispered, just as she had but a short time before, when the train rumbled over the rails. She reached out and patted her favorite's glossy side.

"Daisy didn't throw me," she said, raising herself, "I fell—I couldn't see—everything got black."

Then mamma bent down and kissed her tenderly. "My little girl, my little girl!" she cried, and held her close. Margaret sighed and smiled and nestled closer still, and shut her eyes once more, for she was tired, and with mamma's arms about her nothing else really mattered.—Washington Star.

THE TOY ARTIST.

A Mechanical Figure Which Displays Great Ingenuity.

The mechanical toy shown in the accompanying illustration is one of the most original and ingenious things of its kind that have recently appeared. Within the base upon which the "artist" and his easel are placed and immediately below the figure, is a small pinion operated by a worm at the end of the crankshaft that is seen projecting through the side of the base. The pinion, which rotates in a horizontal plane, is provided with a couple of pins upon which is played one of the sets of removable cams which accompany the toy. The cams are double, being provided with two separate peripheral edges, and each edge is engaged by the short arm of a pair of levers, as shown in the engraving.

The upper lever attaches at the end of its long arm to a vertical shaft, which passes up through the body of the figure and is pivotally attached to its right arm at the shoulder. By this means, says the Chicago News, the rotation of the cam causes a vertical up and down movement of the arm and the drawing pencil that it carries. The lower cam operates a system of levers, which give a series of right and left movements.

It is evident that, by giving the proper relative contours to the two edges of the cam, the arm, with the pencil that it carries, may be made to trace any desired line upon the paper, either vertical or horizontal, by the action of the first or the second cam, or diagonal or curved, by the joint operation of the two. Each of the double cams, which are provided with the toy, is cut so that its operation will cause the figure to draw some well-known object. The easel is hinged to the base and is pressed against the pencil by means of a coil spring. It is provided with four projecting pins, upon which the sheet of paper is held while the sketch artist is at work.

Place a candle on a table, and on the wall opposite affix a sheet of foolscap for a screen. Between the candle and the screen interpose some opaque body, such as a cardboard calendar or a large volume. Now, how are you going to project your shadows on the screen when it is already dark? Very simply, by means of a mirror fixed at the edge of a table. The reflection of the mirror will be thrown on the wall either in a parallelogram or in an oval, and if your screen is in the suitable position, and you work your pasteboard dolls correctly between them, the mirror and the wall, your audience will see the figures dance without finding out the way it is done.—Magical Experiments.

STARVED ROCK DOOMED.

Famous Pile on the Illinois River Slowly Disintegrating.

Utica, Ill.—Starved Rock, considered by many the most beautiful scenic resort in Illinois, and rich in historical interest, is said to be slowly disintegrating, due to the action of the Illinois river, which flows at its base and which is gradually wearing the rock away, thus forming the composition of the famous pile.

The report that this rock is in danger of extinction recalls to mind the pathetic story which gave it an enduring place in Illinois history and makes it an object of intense interest to the thousands of tourists from all over the United States who annually visit it.

Starved Rock is located in La Salle county, and the surroundings appear like a section of Colorado scenery, dropped by some freak of nature in the prairie lands of Illinois. It is a beautiful varience from the monotonous level plains that, at most other points mark the Illinois soil. Some glacial freak ages ago is supposed to have brought about the strange formation, creating a valley 100 feet lower than the level of Lake Michigan and forming palisades along the Illinois river that have great scenic attractiveness. The rock rises abruptly from the water to a height of 157 feet, and from all sides presents a bold and rugged appearance.

About the year 1770 a series of melancholy incidents occurred in the territory of the Illini tribe of Indians, the memories of which gave to the rock its name. Its beauty is unchanged from that which marked it when it was first seen by white men, Marquette and Joliet, the famous French explorers, in 1673. Here is found in miniature, the wonder work of water and stone. There are hidden, rocky-walled inlets decorated with ferns and lichens; with some lone cedar or pine, standing lofty on an inaccessible, rocky ledge.

Marquette and Joliet landed opposite the rock on the plain upon which the great Indian village of the Illini was situated. In 1681, La Salle, who was given the right to trade with the Indians by Louis XIV, erected a fort upon the rock, calling it Fort St. Louis. This fort was later destroyed. The final tragedy, which gave the rock its name was caused by the murder of Pontiac, the great Pottawatomie chief, by one of the Illini.

Civil Service Applicant Willing to Give Complete Information.

The civil service commission has received something unique in the way of a communication from Buckley Levin, an applicant for the position of janitor of a post office building in an Ohio town.

It seems the blank furnished him to fill out was not explicit enough in its answers for the commission, which sent it back for more information concerning the antecedents of the applicant. Here is Levin's reply:

"I was born in Meigsville, Morgan county Ohio the eighteenth day of April (have forgotten the hour), 1855; am 53 years six months and 16 days old. My father was born on the thirty-first day of December, 1817, in Guernsey county, Ohio. He is 82 years ten months and 14 days old. My grandfather was born at South Acworth, Mass., A. D. 1768; have forgotten the month and day. He had 24 children—15 boys and nine girls. He is dead now.

"His father, my great grandfather, was born in Londonderry, Ireland; don't know the date. He was one of triplets, three boys being born at once. I don't know whether he was first, second or third at that birth, but I think I could find out if necessary."

Pretty Narrow Policy.

On Monday last the Advertising Committee of the Public Auction and Traders' Exchange sent copy for a display adv. to the newspapers in our neighboring towns with a request that they publish same and send in bill. To the surprise of the Committee, as well as our business men in general, the Central Lake Torch sent the following curt note in reply:

Central Lake, Mich., Oct. 29, 1907. Mr. G. A. Lisk, East Jordan, Mich.

Dear Sir: In reply to yours of Oct. 28 would say that the Torch cannot use the ad enclosed.

Yours truly, The Central Lake Pub. Co. All the other papers used the adv. sent, and gave locals in connection. The Torch is owned—if not operated—by several of Central Lake's leading business men and we are loth to believe that the above had their sanction. A few years ago when our neighboring town had a Street Fair the East Jordan papers were asked to give the matter liberal FREE notices which was willingly done. If the Torch editor thinks for an instant that he is serving the best interests of his town by such actions he is greatly mistaken.

The Art of Advertising.

There is no other way now days to keep up with the times than by reading the newspapers and the business man who thinks that the newspaper is a charitable institution and only carries its advertisements in its columns to "help the thing along, because we've got to have a newspaper to be up to date, he's a good fellow, I'd like to see him do well." is the man who is going to come out of the little end of the horn when his competitor begins to use its columns for the results that can be obtained from it. The right up to date merchants realize that the public must read to keep up to date and he is going to be one of those to keep things moving because he derives some benefit from it.

He shows to the public through the columns of the local paper that he is up to date and the public will look upon him as such and what is the result?

Nothing has done more to modernize our country than the newspaper, nothing has done more to popularize our community than the newspaper. When our country fathers wish to their opinions and ideas known to the public they depend upon the newspaper for the desired effects, now if you want your business known advertise it in your local paper. If you have special prices do not try to let the people know it by dobbing some old red paint on a cracker board and hang it up in the rear end of your store, for no one but regular customers will take any notice of it. Put your prices in black and white in your local paper, where it goes to every home in the country and is read by hundreds whom you have never seen.

The art of advertising is becoming one of the deepest studies of the day, colleges are being built for this purpose and a vast amount of money is being spent each year for the purpose of advertising. Just stop and think of the mail order houses that spend millions of dollars every twelve months for advertising, notice the mammoth catalogues which are distributed through our country each season. They must get results or they would not continue to send them year after year at such a great expense. Supposing you try the plan for a few months on a smaller scale of the larger houses, put your prices before the public the same as they and see if you cannot keep some of the money at home; you may think it useless but give it a trial and watch the result.

Fine Attraction Coming.

"The Missouri Girl" is a Comedy Drama that produces more genuine, hearty laughter than anything yet written. In connection with a strong and interesting plot, it contains the most ludicrous situations ever conceived. The company presenting the play this season is composed of some of the best known people in the theatrical profession, who are fully capable of extracting this fun, and doling it out to the people in a most satisfactory manner. Nine of the old favorites remain in the cast, some of them have played their respective roles continuously for eight seasons. This guarantees a first-class performance. The new people added for this season were selected for their peculiar fitness for the roles they are to assume and it is safe to predict that a "better than ever" line can safely be added to the advertising matter. The vaudeville portion of the show has been enlarged and strengthened. The production will be seen at Loveday Opera House this month.

 Half mankind belong to the migratory animals. Home and duty are all right for ten-twelfth of the year, but with the coming of the crispness in the air when the sky begins to look purple through the brown branches; when the birds chatter and chatter and finally circle and soar away after the sunshine—then something happens to the throat and the heart goes flying after the little fluttering feathered clouds and it is "Oh, that I had the wings of a dove!" CAPITAL, $20,000.00. SURPLUS, $7,000.00.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

W. L. French, President John A. Boosinger M. H. Robertson, Vice Pres.
 W. P. Porter Geo. G. Glenn, Cashier.

Hallowe'en passed off quietly in East Jordan there being only a few minor depredations. Several parties were given about the Village, an excursion was run to Charlevoix, and the A. S. of E. gave a fine Calceken-pie supper at their Hall near Murray's Corners.
 The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist church will hold its next meeting on Wednesday November 6th, at the home of Mrs. James Howard, on Fifth St. As is customary with this society a luncheon will be served, for which each guest pays 5c. This custom adds greatly to the social feature as well as nets the society a neat sum during the year.
 Sheriff McWain and Prosecutor Clink last week arrested John Cherry, of Boyne Falls, the father of a nine year old boy, for not sending his son to school. He had been notified several times to comply with the law, which requires that all under the age of 16 must attend school, and if they don't attend the parents are liable to be held before a court of justice. The officers are determined to enforce the law. The parent was fined and hereafter will send his boy to school.—Boyne Citizen.
 Rev. C. Scott Williams of Mexico delivered a missionary address under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening. Rev. Mr. Matthews offered prayer at the commencement and Rev. W. W. Lampert, pastor of the M. E. church, at the end and pronounced the benediction. The pastor introduced the speaker. At the close an offering of nearly ten dollars was received and credited to the C. E. Society. Refreshments were served and a pleasant social time followed at the close of the lecture. Mesdames Hale and Bush sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" most effectively.

The Elson Art Co., which furnishes the exhibit of pictures to be held at the Monroe building, under the auspices of the public schools, has offered to the room selling the largest number of tickets a $5.00 photograph as a prize. This picture may be seen in the window of Gannett's drug store. It is a copy of Bonheur's "The Deer in the Forest." Each room declares they are going to win this prize. This spirited contest explains why you have been approached by ticket sellers.
 Milan Greenman returned Tuesday to his work in East Jordan, after a short visit with his parents.  Mrs. Fred Miner of East Jordan spent Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Muckey.  Miss Edith Labadie was a Belleaire visitor last Thursday and Friday.  Mrs. D. L. Rogers returned Saturday from a short visit with friends in East Jordan.  Mrs. Joe Becker left Tuesday for a few days' visit with her children in East Jordan.—Belleaire Independent.
 If you are in need of a Couch call on WHITTINGTON.
 About one hundred people attended the Equity Chicken-pie supper given at their hall Thursday evening and some $20.00 was realized. The supper was fine and the Equity ladies are deserving much credit. James Murray held the lucky number which drew the quilt. The Potato Grower's Ass'n met the same evening, receiving the resignation of Mr. Hawley as shipping clerk and electing Orin Bartlett to the position. The warehouse proposition is progressing nicely, some $600 already being pledged. Any wishing to take stock in this are requested to call on any of the directors—Martin Bartholomew, John Schroeder, John Hawley, James Howey and Fred Stanke. A special meeting will be called in the near future.

The closed fishing season began at twelve o'clock Thursday night and continues until Dec. 31st. The U. His Second Wedding

By M. Louise Cummins

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Mrs. Jane Splint scratched her nose softly with her knitting needle as she looked over her spectacles after her niece, then her gaze wandered out to the garden and the village street beyond.

"His wife's been dead two years last May," she ruminated, "an' Mrs. Mixer's a mighty sharp woman, but she don't get ahead of Jane Splint!" It was with a satisfied smile that she opened the small gate to admit Dr. Garde into the old-fashioned garden surrounding her house a few hours later.

"Hester's gone to see little Ruth Gilmore," she explained, "but sit right down. You look tired."

Felix Garde dropped into the quaint garden-seat wearily, and holding his hat in his hand, let the cool breeze play across his forehead. His eyes had a sad and somewhat tired look.

"How sweet it is here," he said. Mrs. Splint looked at him keenly. Then she made a bold move.

"I should think you're gettin' about tired of livin' alone," she remarked.

The doctor glanced at her quickly, but she met his gaze without flinching.

"What do you mean?" he asked. "What I say; you'd be happier if you could make up your mind to marry again."

The man sighed. "You knew Madeline, Mrs. Splint," he said at last, "and you know that my heart died with her."

Mrs. Splint gave vent to an internal "Humph!" Aloud she said nothing.

"It would not be right," he said slowly.

"What would not?" Suddenly he faced her.

"Would it be right? You are a woman; tell me, would I be justified in marrying when there is so little I could give in return for any woman's companionship?"

Mrs. Splint looked at him steadily. She wished he could see what was in her mind without her telling him.

He sat very still for a while and Jane Splint, being a wise woman, did not interrupt his thoughts. At length he rose and put his hat firmly on his head.

"I think I will go and bring Hester home," he said.

When Hester Maxwell entered her aunt's sitting-room an hour later there was a glorified look in her eyes which lent a strange beauty to her face.

"Aunt Jane," she said quietly, "I am engaged to be married to Dr. Garde."

"For the land's sake!" Mrs. Splint's knitting dropped in her lap and several stitches slipped. She had not expected this so soon.

"Say you are glad, aunt!"

"Indeed I am," that lady replied truthfully, while she gently stroked her niece's soft hair.

The engagement was a short one. If she missed anything in his manner during their engagement or the early months of their married life, no one, not even the doctor himself, ever knew it. And so the weeks slipped away and winter drew near.

It was late in December. Hester sat alone in her small neat sitting-room with some soft, white stuff on her lap, but she was not sewing. She was thinking of her husband, and of the fact that, though she had been his wife nearly half a year, she had never yet heard the words of love from his lips which should have been uttered before he asked her to share his life.

She rose with an unconscious sigh and went to the front door, for someone had turned in at the gate, and though she tried to greet her visitor cordially, Nettie Mixer's presence just at that time grated on her.

"Come right in and lay off your things," she said.

Nettie stepped into the warm sitting-room, where a large stove gave out a genial glow, her small eyes taking in the details of the room with a quick, envious glance.

"My! but you're gettin' quite fixed up," she remarked tartly.

Hester drew a chair nearer the stove for her visitor, and resumed her own seat by the window.

"You're gettin' ready for summer pretty early, ain't you?" Nettie said presently. "That a lawn waist?"

"No." The color rushed into Hester's face.

"I'm most forgettin' what I come for," her visitor resumed; "mamma wants to know if the doctor could step round and see her to-morrow; she's got that pain under her shoulder again."

"I'm sorry to hear that; I'll tell him," Hester said.

"Oh, say, Miss Hunter was in to see us yesterday, and I most did hearin' her tell maw about Mrs. Splint's tellin' her what a time she had gettin' the doctor up to the scratch."

Hester gave her a puzzled look. The small, dark eyes encountered hers with a vindictive gleam.

"Mrs. Splint said he never'd have got to the proposin' point if she hadn't given him a push, as good as told him, in fact, that he could have you for the askin'." Well, rising leisurely, "I must go. Come round soon, Hester, and bring your sewin'."

turned slowly to her seat near the window and looked out at the bleak, threatening day. The hands holding the garment in her lap trembled until the small, lace frills quivered as if in fear. Many things, she thought, were made clear in the light of what she had just heard. She never for a minute doubted the truth of it.

Her husband's step aroused her with a start. She had a dim recollection that the clock struck six some time ago and that she had forgotten all about supper.

She was standing up when he came in, in the dim glow made by the stove, for otherwise the room was unlighted.

"I was afraid you had gone out when I did not see any light," Felix Garde said in a tone of relief, as he struck a match and put it to the lamp.

Hester stood perfectly still, she had not spoken since he entered. He came towards her now, but she retreated from him with her eyes fixed on his face.

"What is the matter?" he asked quickly.

She did not remove her gaze from his, and when she spoke it was very slowly.

"I want you to answer me a question. What made you first think of marrying me?"

"Think of marrying—" his face was a puzzled page.

"Yes, Felix," she had drawn nearer to him, and her words came with difficulty, "did you ever—ever think of asking me to be your wife until my aunt suggested it to you?"

"No."

She staggered as if he had struck her; then her figure became rigid.

"And acting upon her advice, and, no doubt, thinking that I would make a good housekeeper, you asked me to marry you. I hope," Felix Garde had not known that his wife's soft, blue eyes could flash like polished steel, "that I have filled the position satisfactorily."

With a quick stride he came toward her and took hold of her arms firmly.

"What you have heard is true," he said quietly, "but it is only part of the truth. Hester, will you listen while I tell you the rest?"

Her breast was heaving so that she could not speak, and Felix Garde went on:

"It is a fact that I never thought of marrying again until something your aunt said put it into my head. It is also true that, though your name was not mentioned between us, my thoughts flew at once to you with a sweet thrill which I did not at the time understand. During our short engagement I struggled against the joy which you were bringing into my life, from a morbid feeling that I was being untrue to Madeline. If you had known her, Hester, and knew how childishly jealous she was of every look or word of mine that was not given to her, you would understand this better. Since you have been my wife, it has been impossible to struggle against the divine sweetness of your companionship. Hester, I must tell you—I must, as if throwing off some restraint, and his arms drew her close, "my wife, I did not think such happiness could exist outside of heaven. I did not dream that life could hold such great content as has been mine since you married me!"

Her head had dropped forward until it rested against him, and her tears, falling softly, wetted the little lace frills, which seemed to nestle against her. There was a wonderful light in her eyes when she raised them, and her husband, with perfect understanding, bent forward and kissed her very tenderly.

Presently she rose and leaned against him with a little loving movement.

"After all," she said with a low, happy laugh, "we might never have been married had it not been for the help of Aunt Jane!"

"We would!" he cried radiantly, "though perhaps not quite so soon. Anyway, I have had several added months of happiness through the help of Aunt Jane, God bless her!"

COVER FOR THE BABY.

Will Be Pretty of Blue Silkoline Tied With Pink and Blue.

Materials: Two and a half yards of plain silkoline, three bolts of No. 1 ribbon; one skein of Shetland floss, one bat of fine cotton.

Divide the silkoline into two equal parts, place in a frame and put in layers of cotton between ready for tying.

Tie the ribbons all in tiny bows. Thread the needle with the Shetland floss, using it double. Bring the needle up from the bottom, then down again, taking a stitch through one of the bows. Tie the yarn on the wrong side, with three or four extra needles tied in the knot to make a small tuft.

Continue the knotting in this manner—beginning with two and a half inches from the edges, making the tufts four inches apart. Turn in the edges all around and buttonhole closely with the yarn used singly.

Crochet a row of shells around the quilt, each shell of five double crochet fastened with a single crochet and placed close enough together to make the work lie flat and gulled at the corners.

On the right side, just inside the buttonholing, make a row of feather-stitching with the yarn.

This makes a light, dainty cover for the baby. It is very pretty of blue silkoline tied with white ribbons, or of white silkoline tied with pink and blue.

Fur Fashions.

Sable, mink and sealskin are the three skins which will be made up into the costliest coat, bolero and half-dolman forms, while muskrat, pony skin and mole-dyed squirrel skin will be seen in motor and long cloaks.

Fur trimmed dresses will not be frequently seen, but cloth trimmings on furs, such as the three choice varieties above mentioned, will be. Stitched bands of cloth are to be used to define seams which heretofore were preferably left undefined, and silk braids of a close, fine mesh, will be employed for the same purpose in connection with soutache and lace ornamental fastenings.

Wide revers of sable or fox will be used for the squirrel-lined tweed coats, and these, being usually meant for practical warmth, are provided with big storm collars, also lined with fur. Scotch tweeds for motoring and long cloth pedestrian cloaks will also have fur in this way about the neck.

Take Sewing Easily.

The sewing in many households is left, like the housecleaning, for a general disturbance of happiness, comfort, and health when, if a little system were used, the burden would be lighter. For instance, every house needs napkins, table cloths, pillow cases, washrags and towels. The peaceful method is to secure these long before they are actually needed, and do the sewing at odd times. Cut carefully by the thread, the twelve napkins, folding each one in clean tissue paper. Then when time flags, sew a napkin—ditto tablecloth. In like manner tear from the muslin half a dozen pillow cases. When the hands are idle, overseam the sides and bottom, and baste the hem. This can be done while conversing with a friend. Put in fifteen minutes at the machine finishing them, and you hardly know when you have made your pillow cases or hemmed your linen.—Mrs. Babb.

Handy Contrivance.

One may have dozens of hooks in a closet, yet they will not take the place of one long curtain rod placed well back in the closets where skirts can be hung. The skirt hangers with large hooks must be used and dozens of skirts can be hung on this pole and take up so little room that it is remarkable that the idea is so late in making its arrival. Then if the hooks are placed closely together in the rows, instead of here, there and everywhere, the waists can be placed on neat little paper hangers and hung in orderly rows, and it does not mean hanging several waists on one hook to be overtopped with a petticoat or bolero jacket, all to be taken down when the lower waist is needed. If women learned to properly place hooks in the clothes presses and wardrobes there would be less demand for more dress room.

Home Made Soap.

Put one can of lye or potash in one quart of cold water. When cool add six pounds of clean grease, stirring continually for ten to fifteen minutes, when pour into a box or pan to cool. When the soap becomes a little stiff, cut into bars. The next day remove it from the box or pan and place it on the shelf to dry. This soap is so white and pure that it is used often for toilet purposes.

Buttonholes Won't Tear.

Cut buttonholes the proper size, bar it. Start at the back of the buttonhole, by passing the needle up through the cloth, then forward. Take a small stitch across the front edge of buttonhole, then back to starting point; repeat. Use the regular buttonhole stitch, stitching closely all around.

A Young Composer.

Rachel, aged 12, wrote a composition on wild flowers in which she praised the arbutus, the liverwort, the spring beauty, the blood root, and all of the other blossoms of dell and dale. But she wrote on both sides of her sheet of paper, and when she asked her father, who was an editor, to publish her article, he called her attention to that fact.

"You've written on both sides of your paper," said he.

"Well," was the reply, "and don't you print on both sides of yours?"

ALL THINGS IN PROPORTION.

Invalid's Meal Evidently Had Not Increased Good Humor.

For many weeks the irritable merchant had been riveted to his bed by typhoid fever. Now he was convalescing. He clamored for something to eat, declaring that he was starving.

"To-morrow you may have something to eat," promised the doctor. The merchant realized that there would be a restraint to his appetite, yet he saw, in vision, a modest, steaming meal placed at his bedside.

"Here is your dinner," said the nurse next day, as she gave the glowering patient a spoonful of tapioca pudding, "and the doctor emphasizes that everything you do must be in the same proportion."

Two hours later the nurse heard a frantic call from the bed chamber.

"Nurse," breathed the man heavily, "I want to do some reading, bring me a postage stamp."

HAVE CRAZE FOR FORMULA.

Smokers Follow Fashions in the Use of Tobacco.

"Make me up a package of tobacco according to the formula used by Edwin Booth," said the man with a southern accent. "That is the third man who has asked for that kind of tobacco to-day," said the dealer. "It is strange that people from remote parts of the country as well as New Yorkers make a fad of buying the same brand of tobacco that Booth smoked. And it isn't always the Booth mixture that they want. I have filed away the formulas for mixing the favorite tobacco of many famous persons. Smokers the country over have heard of this collection of recipes and one feature of every man's trip to New York is to try a pipeful of some big man's favorite tobacco. In most cases this special mixture is so strong that the nerves of the average smoker cannot stand it. He has to give up after a few pipefuls and go back to a popular mixture, but he has the satisfaction of having had the experience."—The New York Sun.

She Was Willing.

"Yes," says the husband, "I have consented to accept the nomination."

"I am so glad the party is beginning to recognize your merit," beams the wife.

"Now my dear," the husband continues, "you know that political affairs are not love feasts, by any means. You must expect to see me vilified and attacked in a scandalous manner. No doubt the opposition will try to dig up sensational rumors about me, and all that sort of thing, but you must not—"

"Well," she interrupts, "I am really glad of it. You have always been strangely silent about whether or not you ever were engaged to anyone before you met me."

ods, has not made itself more ridiculous than any comment of ours could make it.

Does Collier's expect to regain any self-inflicted loss of prestige by demonstrating thru suits for damages, that it can be more artful in evading liability for libels than the humble but resentful victims of its defamation, or does it hope for starting a campaign of libel suits to silence the popular indignation, reproach and resentment which it has aroused?

Collier's can not dodge this public controversy by private law suits. It can not postpone the public judgment against it. That great jury, the Public, will hardly blame us for not waiting until we get a petty jury in a court room, before denouncing this practical detractor of institutions founded and fostered either by individuals or by the public itself.

No announcements during our entire business career were ever made claiming "medicinal effects" for either Postum or Grape-Nuts. Medicinal effects are results obtained from the use of medicines.

Thousands of visitors go thru our entire works each month and see for themselves that Grape-Nuts contains absolutely nothing but wheat, barley and a little salt. Postum absolutely nothing but wheat and about ten per cent of New Orleans Molasses. The art of preparing these simple elements in a scientific manner to obtain the best food value and flavor, required some work and experience to acquire.

Now, when any publication goes far enough out of its way to attack us because our advertising is "medicinal," it simply offers a remarkable exhibition of ignorance or worse.

We do claim physiological or bodily results of favorable character following the adoption of our suggestions regarding the discontinuance of coffee and foods which may not be keeping the individual in good health. We have no advice to give the unhealthful person. His or her health is evidence in itself that the beverages and foods used exactly fit that person. Therefore, why change?

But to the man or woman who is ailing, we have something to say as a result of an unusually wide experience in food and the result of proper feeding.

The palpably ignorant attack on us in Collier's appeared this statement: "One widely circulated paragraph labors to induce the impression that Grape-Nuts will obviate the necessity of an operation in appendicitis. This is lying and potentially deadly lying."

In reply to this exhibition of will let the reader name it, the Postum Co. says:

Let it be understood that appendicitis results from long continued disturbance in the intestines, caused primarily by undigested starchy food, such as white bread, potatoes, rice, partly cooked cereals and such.

Starchy food is not digested in the upper stomach but passes on into the duodenum, or lower stomach, and Irtestines, where, in a healthy individual, the transformation of the starch into a form of sugar is completed and then the food absorbed by the blood.

But if the powers of digestion are weakened, a part of the starch food will lie in the warmth and moisture of the body and decay, generating gases and irritating the mucous surfaces until under such conditions the whole lower part of the alimentary canal, including the colon and the appendix, becomes involved. Disease sets up and at times takes the form known as appendicitis.

When the symptoms of the trouble make their appearance, would it not be good, practical, common sense, to discontinue the starchy food which is causing the trouble and take a food in which the starch has been transformed into a form of sugar in the process of manufacture?

This is identically the same form of sugar found in the human body after starch has been perfectly digested.

Now, human food is made up very largely of starch and is required by the body for energy and warmth. Naturally, therefore, its use should be continued, if possible, and for the reasons given above it is made possible in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts.

In connection with this change of food to bring relief from physical disturbances, we have suggested washing out the intestines to get rid of the immediate cause of the disturbance.

Naturally, there are cases where the disease has lain dormant and the abuse continued too long, until apparently only the knife will avail. But it is a well-established fact among the best physicians who are acquainted with the details above recited, that preventative measures are in and away the best.

Are we to be condemned for suggesting a way to prevent disease by following natural methods and for perfecting a food that contains no "medicines" and produces no "medicinal effects" but which has guided literally thousands of persons from sickness to health? We have received during the years past upwards of 25,000 letters from people who have been either helped or made entirely well by following our suggestions, and they are simple.

If coffee disagrees and causes any of the ailments common to some coffee users quit it and take on Postum.

If white bread, potatoes, rice and other starch foods make trouble, quit and use Grape-Nuts food which is largely predigested and will digest, nourish and strengthen, when other forms of food do not. It's just plain old common sense.

"There's a Reason for Postum and Grape-Nuts."

The "Mound City."

St. Louis rejoices in the sobriquet of Mound City from the fact that the original settlers found there many elevations which it is supposed were relics of that strange people who dwelt in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys and are known to modern times only as the Mound Builders. No adequate explanation has yet been found of their strange mode of leaving memorials of their existence. The limestone bluffs on which a part of St. Louis stands furnish a solid foundation for the business buildings.

Held Up.

"Stop!" shouted the man on the country road, holding up a warning hand. Muttering something about rural cops, the automobilist obeyed.

"Turn around and come back to town with me," said the stranger. "You were going at least 35 miles an hour."

"You're a constable, I suppose," said the automobilist, with a covert sneer, when they had reached the village.

"Me?" replied the passenger. "No, I'm a farmer and had to come into town when all the teams was busy. Nice growing weather? Thanks. Good-by."

Belling a Rat.

You have probably read or heard that the best way to rid a house of rats is to catch one and fasten a bell about its neck. A boy in Delaware tried the experiment two months ago. He was badly bitten in making the bell fast, but he turned the rat loose and expected the tinkling of that bell would have great results. It did have. In the first place, the rat who wore it was constantly on the move all night, and the tinkling bell kept the family awake, and in the next the sounds brought scores of new rats to the house. Instead of being afraid of the bell, they were charmed with the music. Had the boy tied a harmonica to another rat's tail, the rodents would have had a dance every night.

Chinese Laundry Ticket Suggested a Bet on "Wing Ting."

Kay Spence, a well-known horseman of Mexico, Mo., won $1,000 at the Louisville, Ky., race meeting a short time ago as the result of a "hunch." Mr. Spence has a large breeding stable of "runners" near Mexico, and attends all the big racing events in the country. Not long since he was in Louisville and entered the betting ring to see what odds were being offered on the various entries. He found that Joaquin was the favorite at even money, and pulled his wallet from his pocket, intending to bet on that horse. His attention was attracted by something that fell from his wallet to the ground, and he stooped and picked it up. It was a Chinese laundry ticket. He looked at the "books" again and found that there was an entry with a Chinese name, Wing Ting, at ten to one. That settled it, for he considered he had received a "hunch" that could not be overlooked. Wing Ting won handily. Needless to say, those who backed the favorite considered Spence the seventh son of the seventh son.—Kansas City Star.

RHEUMATISM RECIPE

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription...

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being a vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism.

The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach.

Inquiry at the drug stores of even the small towns elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists will mix the prescription if asked to.

Mr. Malaprop Just Home from Rome.

A regular Mr. Malaprop recently came home from his first visit to Europe. He grew enthusiastic about Rome.

"It was fine," he declared, "to go into them churches over there and see the old tombs—cigarrophaguses, they call 'em. And then the Sixteen chapel is great, and as for the Vaccination, where the pope lives, well!"

But his stock of compliments give out when he got to the subject of beggars.

"I always refused them pennies," he said, "because, you see, I didn't want to set a bad prestige!"

Cats as Plague Preventive.

An Italian correspondent of the North China Daily News writes: "The newspapers have lately been full of all sorts of suggestions for the stamping out of plague. For instance, never kill rats; if you do the fatal rat flea may be driven to feed on you. Also, compel each householder to keep cats. In fact, let the cult of the cat as it prevailed in ancient Egypt be revived in India. Plenty of cats, no rats."

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED

Eczeema is the most stubborn form of skin disease, but we guarantee a permanent cure.

Wonderful Dream Salve used according to directions kills the disease germ, softens the dry, scabby condition, restores the diseased surface to a healthy condition.

W. D. S. Pills keep the bowels active and doing their work of cleansing the system and purifying the blood.

Settlement: If anyone should desire to know of you the healing power of Wonderful Dream Salve for the cure of eczeema just refer them to me. I have been troubled with eczeema for fourteen years. Have had a spot on my leg between the knee and ankle. All that time, during those fourteen years, have tried hundreds of salves, lotions, washes, mineral baths, X-ray treatments, everything that is known to man, but to no avail. It remained for your Wonderful Dream Salve to accomplish the only permanent cure. I had just expended $20.00 in a skin specialist in trying to effect a cure, without success, when I was told to try your ointment. I laughed at the idea, because every other friend, however, succeeded in my giving it a trial. I have followed directions faithfully, and in less than four weeks the spot had entirely disappeared, using as I did less than one-half of the box. I certainly consider this a remarkable cure, inasmuch as I have spent hundreds of dollars in the fourteen years of annoyance with this trouble some itching, skin ailment. I have since then even more remarkable than mine, which go toward demonstrating the value of Wonderful Dream Salve as a great skin healer.

Mark Twain's Story of His Life.

Mark Twain refuses to let his captivating autobiography be published in book form until after his death, but journalistic enterprise has come to the rescue, and we are so have Mark's masterpiece after all. He has consented to let it appear as a serial. It has been secured at enormous cost by the Sunday Magazine of The Chicago Record Herald, which has a name for capturing big prizes of this sort, such as Conan Doyle's "Sir Nigel" and Kipling's "Songs of Martha".

Thus it falls out that the readers of The Sunday Record Herald are to have a delightful treat without extra cost. For months to come Mark Twain will go on telling in his droll way about the famous people he has met, how he came to create Colonel Sellers and Tom Sawyer, and all the funny that have happened to him. The whole is to be profusely illustrated. The first installment in the issue of Oct. 27 is accompanied by a magnificent portrait of the humorist. Everybody who likes Mark Twain will want to read this great biography.

A Colorado man is reported to have gotten drunk three times a day for a year. Yet it should be remembered to his credit that he also got sober the same number of times.

"There is nothing like sleeping out of doors," says a medical periodical. Still, when rents are so high, the average man wants to get his money's worth out of the flat he has on his hands.

An English novelist is in this country looking for an American who can be utilized as the hero of her next book. Some one ought to introduce her to that man in Denver, Colo., who married his mother-in-law last week.

"When Gladys Vanderbilt went to call Count Szechenyi to breakfast," says an exchange, "it will only be necessary to go to the foot of the stairs and sneeze." During the day, we suppose, the count will keep her busy coughing up.

Once more the deadly cigarette has claimed a victim. At Gulpport, Miss. a colored man tied his fishing line to his neck while he rolled a cigarette, and a huge cat-fish swallowed the bait, got caught on the hook, and jerked the fisherman into the sea, to perish miserably. Truth is indeed stranger than any of Dr. Long's nature stories.

Pain anywhere, pain in the head, neuralgia, toothache, all pains can be promptly stopped by a thoroughly safe little Pink Candy Tablet, known by Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets. Can't Miss It

So many ailments are purely nervous affections, that you can hardly miss it if you try Dr. Miles' Nervine. It restores nervous energy—and through its invigorating influence upon the nervous system, the organs are strengthened. The heart action is better, digestion improved, the sluggish condition overcome, and healthy activity re-established.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine is worth its weight in gold to me. I did not know what ailed me. I had a good physician but got no relief. I could not eat, sleep, work, sit or stand. I was nearly crazy. One day I picked up a paper and the first thing that met my eyes was an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Nervine. I concluded to try it and let the doctor go, and I did so. After taking two bottles I could dress myself. Then I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and now I can work and go out, and have told many the benefit I have received from these remedies and several of them have been cured by it since. I am fifty-nine years old and pretty good yet."

ANNA R. PALMER, Lewistown, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

A Woman's Health

Is a heritage too sacred to be experimented with. For her peculiar and delicate ailments only medicines of known composition and which contain no alcohol, narcotics, or other harmful or habit-forming drugs should be employed. The one medicine which fulfills all these requirements is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy with a record of over forty years of cures to recommend it; a remedy, the makers of which print its formula on every bottle-wraper and attest its completeness and correctness under oath; a remedy devised and adapted to woman's delicate constitution by an educated physician—an experienced specialist in woman's diseases; a remedy, every ingredient of which has received the written endorsement of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar diseases; a remedy which has more bona-fide cures to its credit than any other sold by druggists for woman's special requirements. It is not given away in the form of "trial bottles" to be experimented with, but is sold at a fair price by all dealers in medicines.

Delicate, weak, nervous women should especially shun the use of alcoholic medicines which, from their stimulating and exhilarating effects may seem, for a time, to do good, but which from the inevitable effects of the alcohol in shrinking up the red corpuscles of the blood are sure to do great and lasting harm in the long run. Besides they beget a craving for stimulants which is most deplorable.

Only invigorating and nerve-strengthening effects can follow the use of this famous medicine for women. It can not possibly do harm in any state or condition of the system. It has been carefully adapted to woman's needs by an experienced physician—a specialist in their diseases. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

If a woman has bearing down, or dragging pains, low down in the abdomen, or pelvis, backache, frequent headaches, dizzy or fainting spells, is nervous and easily startled, has gnawing feeling in stomach, sees imaginary floating specks, or spots before her eyes, has melancholia, or "blues," or a weakening disagreeable drain from pelvic organs, she can make no mistake by resorting to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will invigorate and tone up the whole system and especially the pelvic organs.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic, "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For over-worked, "worn-out," run-down, debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

No woman suffering from any of the above symptoms can afford to accept any secret nostrum or medicine of unknown composition, as a substitute for a medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is of known composition and has a record of over forty years of cures and sells more largely to-day than ever before. Its makers withhold no secrets from their patients, believing open publicity to be the very best guaranty of merit.

Dr. Pierce invites all suffering women to consult him by letter free of charge. All letters of consultation are held as strictly private and sacredly confidential and all answers are returned in plain, sealed envelopes. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, "Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute," Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." They are the original Little Liver Pills first put up by old Dr. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. They are tiny sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.
