Judge Mayne From Missouri

Hence Local Option Still Holds Good in County.

Practically the last stand our saloon friends can make in opposing the will of the voters of Charlevoix County was made at the county capitol Monday and Tuesday.

Through Atty Lisie Shanahan of Charlevoix, Leonard Adams—a saloon keeper of the same place—secured a temporary injunction from Judge Mayne restraining the Board of Supervisors from canvassing the vote on Local Option until the arguments could be heard on the case as to why the injunction should be permanent. This temporary injunction was served on County Clerk Payton.

The case was heard Tuesday. Atty Shanahan appearing for the "wets" and Pros. Atty A. B. Nicholas, assisted by Atty J. M. Harris, representing "The People."

The petition which was filed in Chancery asked for the injunction for the following reasons:

First: Because the vote was against the ordinance of 1878, which annexed the Northwest territory, because it takes a person's property without due process of law.

Second: Because the ballots were not all of the same shade of paper, some being white and others of a yellowish cast.

Third: Because the local option ticket was in a separate ballot, the claim being that it should have been on the same ballot with the Good Roads ticket.

Fourth: Because in some voting precincts separate ballot boxes were used for the local option votes.

After hearing the case, Judge Mayne decided that the arguments were not sufficient to sustain the "wets" position and he therefore dissolved the temporary injunction and the Board of Supervisors went ahead with the canvas.

A Strong Attraction.

That merry, romping, musical farce, "Ma's New Husband," will appear at the Loveday Opera House on next Friday night. From all accounts it is one of the big laugh-makers of the season, and the management has been obliged to promise return dates in nearly every city that it has played in order to satisfy the popular demand. The company has been receiving glowing press notices for clever, rapid-fire work and for the singing and comedy merit of the individual members.

Much of the success of "Ma's New Husband" is said to be due to its plot and to the dexterous handling of a maze of side-splitting situations. The scene of all the mirth and melody is laid in the Chicago home of a rich old-sport bachelor, Culppeper. His cousin, Maria Longfellow, has recently lost her husband. Culppeper had loved her in the old days and writes her to come on from New York and take charge of his home. His letter arrives in the nick of time to save Maria from visions of starvation, as she has just been eaten out of house and home and furniture by a lot of impecunious actors. One of these actors, Herbert Short by name, has captured her heart. They arrange to marry as soon as there is money in sight to tide over the honeymoon. Maria brings Short along to Chicago and as Culppeper has never seen her little boy, Willie, a lad of fourteen, it is agreed that Short will impersonate that youthful darling. It is needless to state that Short is the center of mirth and laughter. His escapades with Dorothy, the housemaid, with Mrs. Dickles, a guest, with Madame Halliday, a vocal teacher, with a venerable tutor and old hump, Mr. Hooker, and indeed with every character in the play afford little time for sanity or straight-faced demeanor. The musical numbers include all the new and popular songs, solos, duets, quartettes, and choruses, together with pleasing dancing numbers.

LANDED BIG CONTRACT

East Jordan Contractors, Wilhelm & Monroe, Have $60,000 Job.

From The Traverse Daily Eagle

One of the largest contracts which has been let to a construction company in this part of the state for some time has been landed by Monroe & Wilhelm, who will have charge of the erection of the Lake Superior Produce company's warehouse at Houghton, U. P. Bert Wilhelm has just returned from Houghton, where he made final arrangements and closed up the contract.

John Monroe who has just completed the piling at the Northern Michigan Transportation company's dock, is the other member of the firm, which is well known throughout this section of the state. The contract calls for the erection of the warehouse and a big dock to be built at a cost of $60,000, the work to be completed in 100 days after June 1, when the work is started.

The warehouse is to be built of brick and concrete, and will be a mammoth affair, capable of taking care of many thousands of bushels of produce. Mr. Monroe will ship his land piler to Houghton as soon as he has completed the job here on the Hannah & Lay company's dock, and will rush the work to completion for the company in the northern city.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the check of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate woman's organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in the red and white complexion. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nerve tonic, adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments. Dr. Pierce may be consulted by letter free of charge. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

During the week there will be high mass and sermon every day at 8:30 a. m. The main sermon will be every evening at 7:30 p. m. Everybody is cordially invited to these sermons, and should also endeavor to come every evening, in order to derive the full benefit of the mission. The Rev. Missionary has during the past years been given missions in all the large cities of this country, and always with great success; the people of East Jordan will therefore be glad to have an opportunity of hearing him. The mission will close Sunday April 25th at 7:30 p. m.

Joshua Franklin Bartholomew.

Joshua Franklin Bartholomew was born in the town of Bradford, Steuben Co., N. Y., April 7th, 1835. Was married to Mary A. Scott, of the same place, on the 23rd day of December, 1861. Of this union six children were born, three boys and three girls—Orson, Thomas, Katie, Scott, Carrie and Ida. Of these three are living, Thomas, Scott and Ida. Joshua Franklin resided with wife and family in their early home until the fall of 1868 when he paid a visit to his brother Martin who had formerly located a homestead in Echo, Mich. While here he also located a homestead. He returned to his family to spend the winter with them but came back in the spring and spent the summer clearing away the forest and building his log house, to which he brought his wife and three children in the spring of 1870, arriving here May 21st. Here he resided on the old homestead until the day of his death which occurred on his seventy-fourth birthday, April 8th, 1909. Joshua Franklin was the son of Jacob and Catherine Bartholomew and one of thirteen children, ten boys and three girls, of whom three are living, Jesse and James Bartholomew and Mrs. Nancy Miller, all of New York. Within the past year four of the brothers have passed away, Joseph and Daniel of New York, Martin and Joshua Franklin of this place.

In his early life he was converted, baptised and united with the Free Will Baptist church of Bradford, N. Y. and before his death he gave full evidence of his hope of blessed immortality.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the Bennett school house. Rev. W. W. Lamport preached the funeral discourse and was followed by Rev. L. S. Matthews and Rev. John Hackett, old-time friends, who spoke especially of the character of the deceased. The large audience in attendance also attested the esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

For the Public Good.

One hears a good deal about the power of the press, but the fact is that no newspaper has very much real power over men or events in these days unless it is known to be standing sanely and steadfastly for the welfare of the whole community and nation. The day of party organs is past. Sensational papers appealing to popular passions cannot move thoughtful men—the men who make history. The only kind of newspaper that really has tremendous power in these days is the independent, reliable, disinterested journal of wide circulation, whose columns are known to stand aloof for the general good—for public honesty and a square deal, whatever happens. An excellent example of this sort of journalism is the Chicago Record-Herald. It has the enormous circulation that deservedly goes with the printing of all the news, but its power lies in its wise, conservative, independent editorial policy, which is shaped with one sole end in view—the public good. Its news and critical columns show the same spirit.

Indigestion Ends.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of a case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will occasionally take a little Diapepsin after eating.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Billiousness, Heartburn, Water-brash, Pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. Each particle will digest all the food you can eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour.

Get a large 50-cent case of Fape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking today and by tomorrow you will actually brag about your healthy, strong stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Greek Letter Societies.

There is an old debate as to whether on the whole colleges and universities of the United States would be better or worse without the Greek letter societies; but participants on both sides of this debate would no doubt agree that as to one of the oldest of these societies—Phi Beta Kappa—there is no ground for controversy.

CALAVERAS BIG TREES NOW SAFE IN NATIONAL FOREST RESERVE.

One of the acts of the closing weeks of President Roosevelt's administration for which he will be remembered by the present and coming generations whose privilege it may be to visit the region of the big trees of California was the signing of the bill creating the Calaveras National forest, California. This act saves for all time the most famous grove of trees in the world.

The people of California, particularly the 500 women of the California club, have been working to interest the government in this wonderful grove of big trees for more than nine years, but not until now has it been possible to arrange a plan satisfactory alike to the owner of the land and to congress.

The land to be acquired under the bill includes about 960 acres in what is known as the North Calaveras grove in Calaveras county, and 3,040 acres in the South Grove in Tuolumne county. The North Grove contains 93 big trees and in the South Grove there are 1,380 of these giant sequoias.

The Calaveras big trees are known the world over. The North Grove contains ten trees each having a diameter of 25 feet or over, and more than 70 having a diameter of 15 to 25 feet.

and various states of the union. "The Father of the Forests," now down, is estimated by Hittel, in his "Resources of California," to have had a height of 450 feet and a diameter at the ground of more than 40 feet when it was standing. "Massachusetts" contains 118,000 board feet of lumber; "Governor Stoneman" contains 108,000 board feet, and the "Mother of the Forest," burned in the terrible forest fire which licked its way into a part of the grove last summer, contained 105,000 board feet.

FAT MAN STOPS FATAL BLAST OF DYNAMITE

IS TAKING NAP WHEN THIRTY POUNDS OF EXPLOSIVE FALL ON HIS STOMACH.

Montgomery, Ala.—Otis Browne, the fattest man in the county, at noon a few days ago prepared for a siesta, unconscious of the fact that he was about to become a candidate for a Carnegie medal by involuntarily saving the lives of 16 companions in the Zuhers rock quarry near here.

Browne is short of stature, but he tips the beam at 280 pounds. It was therefore the most natural thing in the world for him to seek the shadow of a ledge after luncheon and dispose himself for slumber.

Upon this peaceful scene there presently entered a negro. This negro, with strange perversity, was moved to labor during the hour of rest, and he bore upon his shoulder a small package, which he handled with considerable care. He crossed the bottom of the quarry toward the group and struck into a winding path that led up the almost perpendicular face of the rock.

In the course of his ascent the negro reached a point on the path about 30 feet above the group. The resting workmen were first made aware of his presence when he stumbled clumsily among the loose fragments of rock, threatening a small avalanche.

The men had no more than started to their feet when the package that had rested on the negro's shoulder hurtled down from the cliff. Every eye in the group was on it, except those of Otis Browne, which were now veiled in sleep.

JUST LAZY; IN BED TEN YEARS.

Man Opposes Early Rising and Dressing, So He Takes a Constant Rest.

Jerseyville, Ill.—The laziest man in the world is here. He is John Muncra, and he has been in bed ten years because he is unwilling to comply with the rules of the Jersey county farm, which say that every one living there shall rise at five o'clock in the morning.

He was a voluntary applicant for permission to live at the farm. Before he had been at the farm a week he complained that the rising hour was too early. One morning he failed to take his place at the breakfast table. Richard Mourning, superintendent of the farm, went to his room.

"I'm not going to get up at five o'clock for anybody," said John.

"You'll have to," said Mourning. Shaking his finger at the superintendent, Muncra exclaimed: "I'll never get up any more. I might as well stay in bed. It's too much trouble undressing every night, and dressing every morning anyway."

"I am ready to swear that he has kept his word," said Mourning the other day.

The Last Resort.

In answer to the returned summer visitor's question as to the welfare of Mr. Macomber and his whereabouts, Mr. Davis replied that "Jake" was teaching at the little red schoolhouse on Bowen's Hill.

"But I thought—" "Well, he is," admitted Mr. Davis, understandingly, "and he gets more 'n' more muddle-headed all the time. But what else could we do? We had to put him in schoolmaster to keep him off the town."

STARTING AN ORCHARD IN THE RIGHT WAY

Pruning and Cultivating Are Necessary to Secure the Best Results—By Prof. V. H. Davis, Ohio Agricultural College.

The first few years of the life of an orchard is the most critical period of its existence, because neglect is more likely to occur and the injuries done at this time can, in many cases, never be overcome by subsequent good care. In my orchard of some 8,000 apple trees are a few hundred each of pear, plum, cherry and peach, a plan somewhat as follows was pursued in selecting apple, pear, cherry and plum stock:

I took trees not more than two years old from bud or graft. In my judgment, trees of this age will stand transplanting better than older ones, and in the end will make better trees. Peach trees are large enough at one year and should never be older. Trees were ordered in the fall for spring shipment, at which season, in my case, they were set out. I bought from the large nurseries that grow their own stock and deliver direct from their own grounds.

The small nursery in the locality of the orchard is usually preferable for small quantities of plants, but is not available for large orders. I never buy from agents, because I object to paying their commission. The nurseryman who is largely a dealer is also avoided, for every time trees are handled the chance of mixing varieties increases and it becomes more difficult to fix responsibility in case of misrepresentation.

Nurserymen are responding to the popular demand for low-headed trees, but they are not low enough yet. The first branches should be not more than 30 inches from the ground and less would usually be preferable. Shipments should be made as early in the spring as weather conditions will permit and upon arrival the trees should be unpacked and "heeled in" at once. Transplanting should be done just as early as the soil will work readily.

The roots should never be exposed for any length of time to the sun and wind, and should always go into the soil wet. In the morning we take up form the scaffold branches of the future top. These should be situated alternately along the trunk, but never opposite each other, and should be cut back to spurs five to ten inches in length. The others are removed entirely. Each of these spurs will throw out several branches the first season, but the ends of the spurs will usually dry out and begin to decay.

The second pruning is confined almost wholly to the removal of the dead tips of these branches or spurs. These are cut back to the base of the first new branches, and if the wood shows no decay the wound is left to heal. If, however, there are signs of decaying wood, the cut is made at the base of the next branch and so on until solid wood is found. Otherwise the decay will run back into the main branches, or even to the trunk of the tree, and eventually cause its death. Every branch that does not mar the general form of the top is left on the little tree during the second season to bear leaves and manufacture plant about the number of trees that can be planted before noon and prune the roots. These are placed on a sled or wagon and covered at once with straw, carpet or burlap and water thrown over the entire bundle until thoroughly wet. Immediately after transplanting, the trees should be well mulched with hay, straw, manure or any material not too coarse.

This mulching is essential, no matter whether the clean culture or the sod mulch system is to be followed. The mulch not only holds moisture around the roots, but keeps the soil loose and mellow. A good tree well planted and well mulched will make a surprising growth the first year. I have measured as much as five feet in our own orchard in soil considered poor.

Pruning is the one operation of the orchard most neglected or improperly done. As to the roots, they require little pruning, because 50 per cent. or more of the root system is left in the soil, even with the most careful digging. All broken or mangled roots should be cut off smoothly back to solid wood, in order to give the wounds a chance to heal readily. A root much longer than the others may be cut back for the sake of symmetry and ease of transplanting.

After transplanting, the top is cut back to correspond to the loss of roots. Otherwise the evaporation of moisture from the top may be more rapid than the broken roots can absorb it, and the trees suffer, if not die outright. With apple, pear, plum and cherry from three to five branches should be selected from those on the tree as it comes from the nursery, to food. Root growth depends upon the leaves just as much as branch and leaf growth depends upon the roots, and the root system, weakened by transplanting, needs the stimulus of all the plant food possible in order to renew the parts destroyed. This renewed vigor immediately manifests itself in growth of top, and the less the equilibrium between root and top is disturbed the greater will be the tendency to bear fruit so far as the pruning factor alone is concerned. Subsequent pruning should consist largely in thinning out the superfluous branches and wayward growths sufficient to admit proper amounts of air and sunshine. Many branches marked for removal the second or third season may very profitably be left until they have borne fruit for several years.

Mice injuries are prevented by steaming up all rubbish in which they might breed and congregate, keeping the soil around the tree for two or three feet perfectly bare. Frequently a little mound of earth six or eight inches high is piled and tramped solidly around the base of the tree. So far as rabbit injuries are concerned, the removal of all brush, briars, weeds, etc., in which they are most likely to congregate, together with a liberal use of the gun and ferret, have prevented any serious trouble with me so far.

Pasteurizing Milk.—It is generally conceded that pasteurizing milk adds nothing to its wholesomeness. In fact, it is generally believed that pure milk is injured more or less by pasteurization. Milk that has not been produced under sanitary conditions and which may contain disease producing germs, is far more beneficial and wholesome if pasteurized than if used in the raw state. In other words, pasteurization will improve faulty products but will not improve pure products. The best authorities agree that it is better to feed pasteurized milk to children than to feed them the average milk as it is delivered in the cities. We think that all will agree that if they can get pure and wholesome milk pasteurization will not improve it for infant feeding.

Practice of Dehorning.—Dehorning affects the cows but little in the milk flow and fat production and not at all if done three or four weeks before calving. We have seen a great many cows dehorned and as a whole no ill results whatever come from this practice. It is a rather cruel operation when the horn is being removed but after the operation is over the cow suffers but little, if any.

The VANISHING FLEETS

BY ROY NORTON
(COPYRIGHT, 1907 BY THE ASSOCIATED SUNDAY MAGAZINES)

SYNOPSIS.

"Vanishing Fleets," a story of what might have happened, opens in Washington with the United States and Japan near war. Guy Hillier, secretary of the British embassy, and Miss Norma Roberts, chief aide of inventor Robert Bevin, are introduced as lovers. Japan declares war and takes the Philippines. Guy Hillier starts for England. Norman Roberts leaves Washington for the Florida coast. Hawaii is captured by the Japs. All ports are closed. Tokyo learns of missing Japanese fleet and whole world becomes convinced that United States has powerful war agency. England decides to send a fleet to American waters as a Canadian protection against the president's coast. A terrible submarine flotilla. Hillier is sent with a message. Fleet mysteriously disappears. The Kaiser is missing. King Edward of England is confronted by Admiral Bevin of the United States. The Dreadnaught, biggest of England's warships, is discovered at an impassable point in the Panama. The story now goes back to a time many months before the war breaks out, and inventor Robert Bevin visits the president and tells of an exhibiting a metal production. This overcomes friction when electricity is to be applied to vessels. A city for the manufacture of the mysterious discovery is built. The mystery of true levitation is solved. Roberts evolves a great flying machine. The cabinet plans a radioplane war against Japan. The start for the scene of conflict with a large fleet of monster airships is made with Norma in command. The Japanese fleet, believing Nippon supreme, suddenly discerns the radioplane fleet. After maneuvering the airship descent and by use of strong magnets lift the airships, one by one, from the sea. The trip to the west coast of America is then commenced. Because of a partially disabled radioplane, one of the warships is dropped into the sea after the men are transferred to another. The vessels are discovered in a mountain take in the United States to await peace.

"Men," he said, "I take no credit for the result, and I'm big enough so to report to Washington. This battle brought out three heroes. Brockton, Jenkins and above all this little girl, Norma Roberts." His "God bless her!" was lost in the tumult. They were men intoxicated with the wine of victory. They yelled themselves hoarse. They patted one another on the back, hurled their caps into the air, and finally formed escorts of honor to conduct the men and officers of the fleet to their cabins, asking over and over for details of the fight.

And even as those tired fighters went to rest, in a city across the continent newsboys were crying their extras through the streets, and the citizens of a great city were asking one another how the night had worked its miracle. A lounging patrolman in Ravenna park, which bordered on Lake Washington, had sleepily rubbed his eyes as the sun was tinting the everlasting snows of the Olympics, and had come to a sudden stop, leaning against a tree and wondering if he was still asleep; but with his knuckles he could not obliterate the floating vision before him. He convinced himself by a lusty hail: "Hello, out there! What are you doing? Get off that lake!" and back to him there rumbled a storm of objurgations in an unknown tongue. Not until he had called a fellow officer and rowed a boat round these fallen monarchs of the deep did he learn that they were captive to his country, and then, elated with the news, he hastened to impart it.

But this was not the only surprise for Seattle. For some days preceding troops had been pouring into the port, and it had been the general belief that they were being mobilized preparatory to embarkation for the Philippines or Japan. On this morning, however, there was an exodus. Nearly all the troops had disappeared in the night. Likewise there were strange happenings in the telegraph offices. When men went to consign messages they were met with the intelligence that the wires were in charge of military operators, that nothing could be received for any point beyond the borders of the United States, and that all messages without exception would be censored before transmission. The newspapers fumed and roared, until they learned that all incoming news would pass uninterrupted; but that for purposes known only to the government the story of the presence of the Japanese fleet would be closely guarded for the time being. For once the Post-Intelligence, the Times and Star united in attacking the administration.

Polite officers forwarded appeals from the chamber of commerce to Washington; but the government answered that there was no alternative, because if the secret was known throughout the United States the chances for its leakage across the lines would be augmented. All sound traffic stopped, and from the great union depot no departing trains rumbled. Within an hour it was known that a cordon of soldiers surrounded the city, and that all traffic or communication with the outside world was interdicted. Seattle had been isolated.

Thus it was that the presence of the captured fleet and the method of its taking were unknown to the country at large. Seattle extended all consistent courtesies to the vanquished; but it afforded little balm.

The Wires Were in Charge of Military Operators.

And thus it was that for many days, imprisoned, powerless, and lost, with crippled tops, crushed stacks and under the white flag of surrender, the flower of Japanese prowess floated on an inland sea in sullen mourning, while the gasping world shuddered in contemplation of its fate.

CHAPTER XX. What Befell the Emperor.

Like a lonely rock that has withstood the fury of a storm and the battering of the seas to emerge again into sunlight, the president felt his time of justification approaching. His hour of triumph was at hand, and his prayers were being answered; but the task was not yet done.

The unqualified victory over the Japanese fleet made the outcome of the war a certainty; hence it was with patience that the administration waited for the next move in the far east, which must of necessity come China. There was no doubt that she would assist her ally. At first this seemed an imminent action; but several days passed bringing through the secret service no news save that her fleet, huge and well manned, was making preparations to sail. The president, knowing that for the accomplishment of his purpose oriental power must be broken, indulged in the fervent hope that the attack might come soon.

There was less trouble internally, as the people were beginning to have faith in the administration, though they were speculating as to what course of procedure was being followed. It was while affairs were in this condition that the sailing of the British fleet was duly announced through secret channels of information. The coterie saw before it the necessity of either abandoning the hope of teaching China a drastic lesson and announcing its secret to the world or meeting the British squadrons and holding them hostage in the interest of peace. They chose the latter alternative, and thereby was caused the strangest chapter in the history of war.

Like that other sally outward to the western seas, this one was timely. It was made when the British fleet might be met beyond the reach of wireless telegraph communication, and the departure from the key was also under cover of darkness. Again there was a resemblance to the Japanese affair, in that the appearance of the radioplanes created surprise and consternation on the warships. Here, however, the similarity ended. The Anglo-Saxon mind knows no such thing as surrender when once it is stirred to the depths of its stubbornness. It can read only two answers to the riddle of conflict—victory or death—as has been attested by many a hard-fought battle on land and sea.

The armada of Great Britain had sailed with apprehensions, being fully cognizant that it was invading a territory of mystery and danger, and the vigilance of its watch, therefore, was never relaxed. The consternation caused by the first sight of the aerial fleet was immediately followed by a hurried clearing of the decks for action, although defeat in a battle against such overpowering odds was a foregone conclusion. No gun was fired, however, and all stood expectantly awaiting a declaration of intent from the monsters of the air which had come upon them in the full glare of the afternoon sun.

With slow and stately majesty the radioplanes approached, each flying the flag of the United States and beneath it the emblem of truce. The Dreadnaught, answering sluggishly to the swell and hurling great cascades of water from its bow, was in the heart of the formation, and in its ponderous might seemed fearless of anything afloat. Toward it the foremost radioplane directed its course, dropping steadily down until full abreast and on a level with the great fighting tops, while the officers of the battle ship watched with amazement its splendid control. Not till then was there a visible display of life aboard it. A port opened and into the blackness of its frame Bevin emerged, while directly behind him stood the scientist, who had recovered, and was to witness the first full demonstration of the power he had evolved. On the bridge of the battle ship the British admiral stood, surrounded by staff of officers.

"Good afternoon, admiral," the American hailed. "Glad to see you. How do you like the looks of us?"

Across Fields' face flitted a half smile. "We are very well indeed, Admiral Bevin; but can't say we are particularly glad to see you, or sure that we like you until we know more. Clever invention that. Must have been conceived by an Englishman."

Behind the United States officer a withered little figure became imbued with a sudden frenzy of passion that threatened to intercept an unpleasant remark; but Bevin checked him with a laugh and grew serious again.

"Admiral," he said, "my country isn't at war with yours. You understand that."

Fields looked relieved, and lost somewhat of his air of set defiance. At the head of his men he crossed to the end of the bridge where he might be nearer the one addressing him. The nervous strain of the situation was being rapidly diminished. "Frankly, I'm glad to be reassured," he replied. "There are a lot of things we'd rather know."

"And which I shall be glad to explain if you and a dozen of your immediate subordinates will come aboard as my guests."

The invitation was immediately accepted; but it was a trying interview for the Britons. The machine on which they were received was the Roberts, which was the latest production of the plant on the key. It was larger than its predecessors, and had been made the most pretentious. It was elegantly appointed. Amidships it contained a drawing room on which the most careful workmanship had been lavished. The guests gathered round a huge mahogany table, whose polished top reflected the light from the colored ports of the dome, and were served with refreshments before Bevin returned to the object of his visit. He drew from his pocket an official packet and laid it open before him.

"Gentlemen," he began, "of course you are interested in all that you have seen, and in the attitude of the United States. What I shall read to you are my orders. I have come out here to meet you for the purpose, first of all, that you may hear them."

The Roberts had ascended to an altitude above the others of the American fleet, and was resting in mid air. It was very still, the light hum of a small dynamo from behind the partitions being the only disturber of silence. He opened the document and read:

"You are instructed to intercept the British fleet and assure its officers of the good-will of the United States toward his majesty, King Edward VII, and all his subjects. You are to explain to them that the United States is compelled, in pursuance of its adopted policy formulated at the commencement of the war with Japan, to maintain the secret of its power until such time as it is deemed expedient to announce it to the world. You will then endeavor to induce the British fleet to surrender itself into your hands as guests of this country, assuring those in command that all damages accruing will be repaired by the United States. You are to use all due caution to avoid injury to life, property, or pride, and to transport the entire fleet to the waters of Chesapeake bay, after which for a brief period the officers and men of Great Britain will be entertained by the United States."

Bevin stopped and looked into the faces confronting him, which expressed a variety of emotions, ranging from stolidity to wonder, and from compliance to indignation. The British admiral's visage was a frowning one. "Your country asks too much!" he said, almost explosively. "And really it volunteers no explanation of its acts or intentions." Some of his companions nodded their heads in approval. "We can't accept."

Bevin reopened the parchment. "I must then read you the concluding clause," he said, and began:

"It is strongly desired that there be no clash of arms; but in any event you are to return with the fleet."

There was brief silence in the room, which was broken by Fields, who jumped to his feet. Bevin rose, and the other officers did likewise. The situation threatened unhappy conclusions; but Bevin held up a restraining hand and went on:

"Here! Before you underestimate the force of this last clause, let me give you a demonstration of what we can do and how difficult it would be for you to offer any defense or effective resistance whatever."

He turned to a speaking tube, gave a curt order and requested his visitors to look through the transparent ports, which were suddenly opened beneath their feet. The Roberts swept up into the air to such a prodigious height that the internal pressure against her shell became terrific. She was at such an altitude that no mortal being could have withstood the strain, and only her splendid anchorable construction and cohesive qualities kept her from flying apart. The world below was reduced in appearance until its surface was obliterated in a dull haze and the shadows of the sun were marked against its eastern outline.

In great circles she descended, until the water again became visible, then the vessels upon it, and last of all the crests of the waves. Now she swooped lower, and then at a speed of nearly 600 miles an hour whipped a straight line close above the tops of the fighting masts, slowed down, and whirled in and out, about and above the British ships as easily as would a swallow in playful flight. On the decks of the vessels men stared in wide-eyed amazement at this demon of the air, at first fearing that control had been lost and the lives of those aboard were in jeopardy. Then at the splendid exhibition of speed and handling they were dumbfounded. The Roberts then rose in one quick lift until it was above the plane of altitude assumed by the other machines, poised for a moment, and came to a stop. In all this time no one had spoken a word. Now they turned to the American, unloosing their convulsive clutches from the seats and liberated from the spell.

NATURE CHANGED BY BITE OF DOGS

ATTACK OF CANINES COMPLETELY REVERSED DISPOSITION OF ST. LOUIS TAILOR.

ONCE HAPPY AND FULL OF FUN

Now He Is Morose and Melancholy, and Never Sings or Whistles Any More—Wife Sues Owner of Animals.

St. Louis.—That the bites inflicted on him by four dogs completely reversed her husband's disposition and temperament is the contention of Mrs. Augusta Gloeckner. Before he was bitten by the dogs, Karl Gloeckner, according to his wife, was a "justice man," or happy fellow, and was good company at home, a good workman and family provider and had many friends who delighted to associate with him.

But how different now. One evening last July, Gloeckner, who is a tailor, was returning blithely from his work to his home, taking a short cut up an alley when, without warning, four dogs ran out of a yard and attacked him.

He fought them off as well as he could, but before help reached him he was bitten on both legs, the flesh being torn horribly.

He was carried into a bank and a doctor summoned, who hastily cauterized the wounds and hurried him to the city hospital. For weeks Gloeckner lay very ill, and returned home with the wounds on his legs not quite healed.

His wife regarded him with astonishment. He was an utterly changed man. He shrank away from her and would not answer her when she spoke to him.

"It nearly broke my heart when I saw him; he was such a wreck," said Mrs. Gloeckner. "Before he was attacked by the dogs he was such a merry fellow, always laughing and singing around the house. There was no one so joyful all the time as he."

"After he came home he went around the house with downcast head, and with never a smile or a word for anyone. He could not eat much, and he slept little, when he had such a fine appetite for the good things I cooked for him, slept all night like a baby and was up singing and ready for his work early every morning.

"But now he is morose and melancholy. He sits by himself and broods all the time he is at home, and I am told that he does his work silently, and never sings or whistles any more or speaks to his friends in the shop. His whole nature is utterly changed."

"He doesn't complain or seem afraid of the future. Of course, he is still sick and suffering from his terrible experience with the dogs. But it is the change in his disposition that is the strange part of it all. It seems as though the poison from the fangs of the savage dogs had worked some strange spell on him. I am not an educated woman and cannot understand these things, but I do know that when those dogs attacked Karl they robbed me of my good, kind, merry husband and gave me back a sad, morose, silent and uncompanionable man."

Mrs. Gloeckner has brought suit for $10,000 in the circuit court against John P. Collins, an undertaker, back of whose premises her husband was bitten, and who, she says, is the owner of the dogs.

Shows Nerve; Severe Finger.

Mount Carmel, Pa.—To demonstrate to his wife that man can endure without flinching as much suffering as woman, Joseph Rakus of the Exchange, a suburb, cut off the little finger of his right hand.

Rakus, who is 45, has been married many years, and the pair have several children. The argument over suffering began after man and wife had quaffed of something stronger than tea.

Solving an ax, he went to the yard, and with one swipe cut off his little finger at the first joint. Re-entering the house he waved the bloody finger in the air as proof of his nerve. Mrs. Rakus told him to go out again and cut his head off, but the husband declined.

A CONSTIPATION REMEDY FREE

There is no action of your daily life of greater importance than to see that your bowels move. They should move at least once a day naturally, and by that is meant without any help. If they do not move at least once a day you can consider yourself constipated and it is time you did something about it.

You will be glad to know there is a way out of the difficulty. Lemuel Landerdale, an old soldier at Quincy, Ill., Elmer McMillan, of Speed, Mo., Mrs. Monahan, of Stonewall, Miss., and many others were as you are now. But one day they awoke to the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin was curing their friends, so they bought it too and it cured them. To-day they are loud in praise of it.

What Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin did for them it should do for you. Surely your constipation is no worse than theirs, one of whom had it since '61. It only remains for you to realize that salts are of but temporary good, and what you want is a permanent cure; that purgative tablets, cathartic pills and such violent things make a great show of doing something, but do nothing that is lasting. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific preparation, a laxative-tonic, a mild syrup. It holds the contents of the bowels that not only cure the constipation, but tone the intestinal muscles so that they learn again to work without help. A bottle can be bought of any druggist for the small price of 50 cents, and there is a dollar size for families who have already found out its wonderful value in stomach, liver and bowel troubles, in old or young.

Send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you so that you can test it before buying.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

East Jordan Loses Debate.

At Traverse City, last night the annual debate between the East Jordan and Traverse City High Schools resulted in a decision of 2 to 1 in favor of Traverse. Supt. Porter of Cadillac, Supt. Voorhies of Manistow and Principal Hartwell at Petoskey were the judges and the subject was "Resolved That the Interstate Commerce Commission Should Have the Power to Fix Rates on Railroads Doing an Interstate Business"—our team taking the negative.

The East Jordan team was composed of Misses Letta Stewart, Fay Nicholas and Bertha Shier; Traverse City of Andrew Eldred, Alton Bennett and Clare Griffin.

Both teams have now won two contests each and are therefore tied until next year.

Ladies' Equity Notes.

The Local Convention of the M. L. S. of E. met at the home of Mrs. Howey on Tuesday, April 13, although the morning opened with a snowstorm, the wind blowing a slight blizzard and the roads in bad condition. At first all this seemed discouraging but the Equity ladies overcame all difficulties and 33 were seated in convention.

An interesting program was carried out and much work done for the up-building of the society. A unanimous vote was given in favor of organizing a national union. This society of farmers' wives and daughters is taking no backward step, but is pressing forward with determination.

A new work in the society is an obligation and password.

Several committees reported and discussions occupied the time until 6:00 p. m.

Several gentlemen honored the convention with their presence and ideas.

Officers elected for the next three months were: Mrs. Howey, Mrs. Crowell, Mrs. Shepard, Mrs. Thompson. Convention adjourned to meet with Mrs. James Thompson on July 13.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the source of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments. The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, ceases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

AMONG THE STEEPLES.

Services as usual at the Methodist church on Sunday. Everybody invited.

Usual services next Sunday in Presbyterian church. The time for evening services is now Y. P. S. O. E. at 6:30 and divine worship at 7:30 for the summer season, being a half hour later. Sunday School at 11:45, Junior C. E. at 3:00. Prayer Meeting every Thursday at 7:30, meeting for Bible study every Tuesday evening at 8:00.

The Easter sunrise meeting brought together a goodly number of Christian Endeavors and Epworth Leaguers and the services passed off very pleasantly under the leadership of Miss Agnes Porter. The young men however must have been out late the night before or planning to be the night following, for they were sadly in the minority. Really, is it true, as some think, that our girls have the most "git up" to them?

The Easter services held in the Presbyterian church were a success in every way and largely attended. The special exercises of the Sunday School were also very interesting. The thanks of the church and congregation are due to all who helped with voice and training to make the day one to be remembered. The annual offering for foreign missions was taken up as an Easter thank offering. Holy Communion was afterwards administered.

Easter exercises at the Methodist church on Sabbath evening "drew a crowd." Every seat was occupied and nearly all the standing room and many went away unable to find accommodation. But even those who stood during the hour and more were amply paid, for the exercises were of a high order, and for the most part were by the children. Little effort was made at decoration on account of the unfavorable weather, and yet a few lilies and plants were arranged before the platform. The committee were especially indebted to Mr. Gannett for a gift of Easter lilies. A collection amounting to $12.34 was taken for missions. This however included the contents of the Easter eggs brought in by the classes, Miss Ethel Fortune's class having the largest amount.

The Common Council of Manistow got busy Tuesday evening and did many things that brought sorrow to many a man's heart who has been in the habit of using dice and pasteboards to make little five and ten cent pieces change hands. First they asked the saloon men to give a $6,000 surety bond; then they said all games of chance must be abolished, especially dice. Card games were given the same careful consideration. Slot machines were once more put away. Nickle shows were ordered to pay a ten dollar per year license. On this question the council were divided, the president casting the deciding vote.

When a minister, marrying a negro couple, started to ask the woman, "Do you take this man for better or for worse?" the woman startled the clergyman by blurted out: "No, Judge, I want him just as he is. If he gits any better he'll die, and if he gits any wuss I'll kill him myself."

What He Ought to Get.

A popular London millionaire made his vast fortune by his business ability. Thinking that, as he had been so successful in trade and finance, he must also succeed in literature, he did as others have done—wrote a book of travels. Having a proper pride in his own work; he expected to receive a fairly good price from his publisher therefor.

To his intense disgust, instead of offering him a comfortable check for the copyright the publisher demanded that he should pay him for the risk of issuing the book. It was clear to him that this was an attempt to take advantage of his position as a rich man without experience in literature. He happened to be on friendly terms with a well known journalist, and the happy thought occurred to him to send the manuscript to the great litterateur and critic with a businesslike inquiry: "What do you think I should get for this?"

The journalist was equal to the occasion. After reading the manuscript he returned it with the laconic answer written across the top sheet, "Five years!"

20 Years With Heart Trouble

"Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has cured me of heart disease of over 20 years' standing. I was so bad that I could not do my work, and could scarcely draw a full breath without fainting or smothering. The doctor told me he could do no more for me; then I commenced taking the Heart Remedy. I shall never forget that night. I slept better than I had before in months. I kept right on getting better, until I was perfectly well."

MRS. LAURA RUSSELL,
Logan, Iowa.

When the heart action is weak, it fails to pump the blood through the lungs with sufficient rapidity. Then the lungs do not absorb the proper amount of oxygen, although they may be taking in a normal amount of air. The result is shortness of breath, smothering spells, difficult breathing, oppressed feeling in chest. Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy strengthens the heart nerves and muscles, and in this way increases the circulation.

An editor's life is never strewn with roses, but The Herald man's came very near it last Saturday evening when we were waited upon by a delegation of East Jordan ladies who presented us a bouquet of carnations as a token of appreciation for what The Herald did toward making the Local Option fight a success. We appreciate the good will expressed, but as editor of the Charlevoix County Herald we simply did our duty. There come times in all our lives when we must lose sight of the almighty dollar and strive for the betterment of our fellow man—and this local option fight was one of them.

JOYS of the ARMY ROOKIE

by EDWARD B. CLARK.

WASHINGTON.—In the last year or two congress has shown a disposition to be generous to the army. Among the other measures passed with a special view to the decreasing of the number of desertions, was one which increased materially the pay of enlisted men. The non-commissioned officers particularly were well treated by the bill, for it was the intention to make army life so attractive for the sergeants and the corporals that they would be willing to re-enlist. Then again the amount of pay given the "non-coms" was intended to act as an incentive to the privates to behave themselves well and to stay in the service so that in time they might secure promotion.

There is an army post at Fort Myer close to Arlington, the national cemetery just across the Potomac from the capital. A good many old soldiers are stationed at Fort Myer, men who have enlisted and re-enlisted until the sleeves of their dress coats are pretty well covered with the stripes marking their years of service. These old soldiers tell many stories of the old days when the army life was not as pleasant as it is to-day and when the recruit's lot was far from a happy one. In those old days desertions were many and some of the stories which the veteran regulars tell to-day of the time when they were recruits lets one know readily enough why some men under the old conditions did not care to follow the flag.

Here is one story of recruit life in the army 20 years ago that is rewritten with no changes of fact and with only a little change of language from the way that an old soldier told it: "In the winter of 1888 I was stationed at David's island, New York harbor, a recruiting rendezvous of the army. There were about 200 newly enlisted ones stationed there at that time. The island is a little affair lying fairly low in the water and without any protection from the storms which blow in from the east through Long Island sound.

"January and February, 1888, were months of sunshine, and flowers were peeping on the sunny side of things before anyone could guess whether March was to roar in like the lion or to bleat like the lamb. Early in the second week of that March month New York was overwhelmed by a tempest of wind and snow. It was in that storm that Roocco Conkling met with the exposure which caused the illness leading to his death in a few days. It was the worst storm known to the history of the eastern country. The New Yorkers, however, did not experience its full fury, for their buildings gave them shelter.

"It was left for a few recruits of the United States army, the men on guard, to bear the brunt of the blizzard and to face the elements that gave them battle. On the night of March 11 the storm broke. At nine o'clock the sky over the sound was unclouded, and there was not a whisper of wind over the water. Within ten minutes the black clouds had banked up, and in another ten minutes they were shaking out their burden of snow, while the wind which had sprung to its full strength almost without warning, was roaring down the sound from the Atlantic. At midnight there were great drifts of snow against every obstacle which offered the least resistance to the wind. Out of doors speech was impossible for the blasts tore the words from one's lips and smothered them with their howlings.

"On that night I was on guard as corporal of the first relief. The sergeant of the guard a few moments after midnight stepped from the doorway of the guardhouse and was swept from his feet by the wind. He saw what a terrible night was ahead of us, had already come to us in fact, and he sent a man to the quarters of the officer of the day to ask permission to take in the outlying sentinels or to give orders to them to seek such shelter as they could find. The officer of the day's quarters were surrounded with heavy overgreen trees and the officer, looking out, did not comprehend how terrific the storm really was, and so word was passed that the chain of sentinels should not be broken.

"At one o'clock my guard relief was ordered out to relieve the men on post. No man who was on that island that night has in his keeping words strong enough to describe the awful fury of that eastern gale. The combined thunders of 20 mountain storms could not equal the noise of the roaring of the waves as they pounded the shore. The wind added its bellowing to the uproar and its strength almost took away the powers of motion and of speech.

"The relief started from the guardhouse. No man through the darkness brought by night and the tempest could see the outline of his nearest fellow. The whiteness of the snow would have relieved the blackness had not the lashing of the elements blinded the vision. I ordered the men to unfix bayonets because of the danger of cutting one another, and I gave the order passing from one man to the other and fairly bellowing it into their ears. Then the order was given to 'secure arms' and to clasp hands. It was only by the handclasp that one man could tell that he had a companion.

"Into the teeth of the tempest we edged our way. Twice within 50 yards of the guardhouse the little squad was thrown from its feet. All sense of direction was lost and nothing but a collision with one of the low-lying barracks buildings after ten minutes' toiling progress gave the little command knowledge of its whereabouts. A half-frozen sentinel whose post luckily was under the lee of the barracks, was relieved and took his place at the rear of the hand-clasping column.

"The hospital of the garrison stands, or did stand at that time, at the extreme east end of the island. Back of it along the stretch of beach runs a sentry's post. A man walking there and looking straight eastward finds no land upon which his eye may rest. That night the lashing fury of the waves was spent mainly on that lonely sentry beach. The first relief managed to reach the front of the hospital which gave some protection. I ordered all the men except the one who was to relieve the sentry on the beach to huddle under the piazza while I took the relieving recruit to find the man on post.

"We rounded the end of the hospital. The blast threw us down. The wind was tearing down the sound and the salt spray and the snow commingled dashed into our faces. We dragged our rifles and edged our way through a wall of wind. A few feet of progress and the blast again threw our feet from under the said for the entire length of the sentry's beat, but no sentry could we find. I raised my voice and shouted. The man within two feet of me did not know that I had us. Holding snuffer and tore his "Springfield" from his hand.

Then the garbage barrel was removed and the recruit was threatened with death if he made an outcry. He was forced to march at the bayonet's point to the shore of the island and then to run over the ice toward the mainland with his former prisoners at his heels.

When the deserters and their victim arrived near the New Rochelle shore a hole was chipped in the ice by means of the bayonet and the rifle was dropped through into the waters of the sound. Then the recruit was told that if he chose he might return to the garrison. He told his former charges that he preferred to throw in his lot with them, for if he went back he would be certain to get a heavy dose of the guardhouse for neglect of duty in suffering his prisoners to escape, and for the loss of government property in the shape of the Springfield rifle which was now at the bottom of the sound.

The deserters told the recruit that he could uttered a word. Back over the sand we went through the howling and the lashing. We lost our bearings and ran into an obstruction. I traced its outline and knew what it was. It was the hospital morgue, a wooden structure not more than 15 feet square. We crawled around it until we had reached the west side, where the shelter gave us breath; from the doorway of the morgue came a challenge that even the noise of the storm could not smother—"Who comes there?"

"The answer, 'Relief,' was yelled back by two voices in unison, and we crawled into the dead house. There, standing guard in the grewsome place, was a colored lad, only four weeks a soldier, and within touch of his hand, resting on its zinc bier, was the corpse of a man.

"Driven by the storm to seek shelter, that black recruit, rather than leave his post to get the protection afforded by the hospital, had chosen in the blackness of midnight, and with wind and wave raging without, to take up his watch by the dead, because the place where the body lay was on his post, which he was under orders not to desert."

Two army deserters convinced a certain raw recruit that there was something more than words in the saying he had once heard to the effect that republics always are ungrateful. It fell on this wise:

The recruit had marched on guard for the first time. The sergeant in charge turned two prisoners over to him with instructions to guard them while they drove a mule team and collected the garbage from the barrels in the rear of the quarters. It was the dead of winter, and for the first time in years the channel between David's island and the town of New Rochelle was frozen over.

The recruit plodded along after his prisoners, but, being green to such work, he kept close at their heels instead of trailing along at a distance of five paces as he should have done.

Guard and prisoners reached a point near the shore directly in the rear of the commanding officer's quarters. There one of the deserters seized an empty garbage barrel and an opportunity at the same instant. He threw the barrel over the sentinel's head like a candle come with them if he chose, and they started for a saloon in the outskirts of the town, a place known to them, there to wait until it was time to go under cover to the depot to take a train which made no stop for many miles beyond the place of boarding.

About an hour before the train was due the recruit told the deserters that he had "weakened" and that he would go back to the island to "take his medicine." They offered no objection and their companion started for the shore while they took a back road to the depot.

The recruit had soldier-making stuff in him. He had been maturing a plan all the time that he had been in the saloon. The deserters once out of sight, he made for a farm house, told his story hurriedly, secured a horse and rode at a cavalry pace for a hamlet a few miles east of New Rochelle. He was afraid to go to the depot to which the deserters had gone because he feared that they would see him and, suspecting his motive, would take to the woods.

At the little village to which he had gone headlong on his horse, he secured the services of a constable readily enough—for there was a reward for the arrest of deserters—and by telling his story and by threatening the station master with all the penalties possible of infliction by the federal government, the recruit induced him to flag the train.

The deserters were caught, handcuffed and sent back to the island.

The board deliberated long if not wisely, and finally reached the conclusion that the country's treasury could not well bear the burden of the loss of the money represented by the price of one rifle, and so it was decreed that the cost of the weapon should be taken out of the pay of the recruit who had done his duty by the government and had shown pluck and understanding, even if he had lost a rifle.

There was a disgusted young soldier on David's island. He was not made of the stuff of deserters, but desert he did. The channel was still frozen and the morning after he learned of the order stopping his pay, there was one soldier less to answer "Here," at reveille roll call.

Under the Ban of the Law

By J. C. Plummer

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

With the mate pulling him along by the right arm and with the cook alternately hunching and pushing his left arm, Capt. Buzbey kicked against lumps of coal, stumped against railroad ties and dodged lumber piles until Gower's wharf was reached. Then the trio tumbled into a boat tied there to and with lusty strokes the mate and cook pulled towards the brig lying in midstream with her harbor lamps gleaming in the murk.

"I heard him when he fell and I heard 'im gurgle when he goes under," said the cook, his suppressed voice trembling with excitement. "They ailers gurgle when they're drownin'," replied the mate, in the tone of an expert.

The skipper, a human paradox, inasmuch as he sweated on the forehead and shuddered as to his body gasped anxiously, "what in the name of God will become of me?"

"If you're not took afore mornin'," replied the mate, "I think I can work it all right."

"How?" inquired the skipper, with interest.

"We'll hide you aboard the brig and when the officers come we'll say you're not aboard and they can hunt all they've a mind to. When we gets to sea we may meet a vessel bound around the Horn or we can slip you off on one of the West Inly Islands and say you fell overboard."

"The galley locker," screamed the cook.

"What of it; you bloomin' ass?" inquired the mate.

"E can hide in it. Ood'e ever think of lookin' in a galley locker for a man?"

"Bully," cried the mate, "you can lay out in that captain and nobody can find you, and you'll be as comfortable as if you were in a four-poster with a variegated quilt over you."

"Lay in that box?" ejaculated the skipper, miserably.

"Why, it's better than the penitentiary," retorted the mate.

"Or 'angin'," added the cook, "angin's a awful death."

The boarding of the brig was managed diplomatically by the mate. The boat was pulled into the dark shadow of the vessel and he and the cook climbed on deck. There were only two men on the brig, the others of the crew would be put aboard at day-break. One of the men aboard was sleepily keeping anchor watch and him the mate sent into the forecastle on some pretext. Quickly the skipper was brought on board and as the cook in the meantime had taken a variety of tins and dishes out of the locker, Capt. Buzbey stretched himself out in the confined quarters to the marked discomposure of divers cockroaches and one rat which fled madly along the deck and plunged into the forecastle. The cook then piled the tins, etc., on top of the locker. "A blood'ound couldn't find 'im in there," he ejaculated.

"The remainder of the crew came on board just as the east was gleaming with a promise of the sun, but before anchor was ordered up the mate whispered to the cook.

"I'm goin' ashore to find out what's dola."

He came back shortly with an odd expression on his face and with reticence imparted the news that the body had not been found and there was no immediate danger. Anchor was raised and, pulled by the tug, the iris started down bay on her voyage to Antigua.

To the pallid head of a comet bears no proportionate value as compared to its tail. The meeting of Capt. Buzbey and Hawker in Bond's tavern may be likened to the head of a comet—of small importance. The fact that the two skippers quarreled over their cups about some matter, went out on the wharf still bickering and that Skipper Buzbey in a fit of passion struck Skipper Hawker, who fell overboard and was drowned, forms the long and luminous tail to escape the baleful light of which Skipper Buzbey had fled in the darkness and had hidden in a cockroach haunted box. The mate curly told the crew that the skipper was sick and they interpreting the statement to mean that the skipper was drunk, were rather glad of it and got under way with a will. The skipper kept in his box until Cape Henry had been sunk and then crept at nightfall into the cabin.

"There's no danger now?" he said, in a quavering tone.

"Not less they sends a tug arter us," replied the pessimistic mate.

"H'll keep the locker all ready in case you sight a steamer," added the obliging cook.

"Whenever you see the skipper you look like you wanted to laugh," said the cook indignantly to the mate, "hit's no laughin' matter to a man what's tryin' to save 'is neck."

"I'm a sort of a humorist, cook," retorted the mate, "and you ain't."

The nervous system of the skipper remained tense during the voyage, which owing to baffling winds was an unusually long one, and when the brig entered the harbor of St. Johns the master reposed in the galley locker until the cook reported the harbor as containing only an English barque.

The poor skipper, in a vacillating way, debated with the mate as to whether he should remain on the island and try for a berth on an English vessel or—and neither could get beyond that "or," in fact there was no getting beyond it.

The cook came hurriedly from his galley and called down the cabin stairs. "There's a schooner comin' in, skipper, with the American flag a flyin', and I knows that schooner a mile away. She's the John Gray and Cap'n 'Awker was her master."

The skipper sprang to his feet, "the dead man's schooner," he ejaculated. "They have tracked me. What can I do?"

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE

Of Painting Requirements Will Save Much Expense.

When one sees the surface of a house or other building scaling, or peeling, or spotted or blistered, or showing other symptoms of paint "disease," it is evident that a poor painter has been on the job, and that poor paint was used—or possibly that a good painter had been dominated by a property-owner who knew nothing about paint.

It is an easy matter to be informed on paint and painting. A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, either for exterior or interior—specifications for all kinds of painting, and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint material, with directions for using it, may be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York City, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

Then, every houseowner should make it a point to get only well-known reliable brands in buying his materials. Pure white lead is especially important, or the paint will not prove satisfactory. The famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark of National Lead Company, the largest makers of pure white lead, is an absolute guarantee of the purity and quality of the white lead sold under it. That trademark is a safeguard against paint trouble.

HUMOR BURNED AND ITCHED.

Eczema on Hand, Arms, Legs and Face—It Was Something Terrible.

Complete Cure by Cuticura.

"About fifteen or eighteen years ago eczema developed on top of my hand. It burned and itched so much that I was compelled to show it to a doctor. He pronounced it ringworm. After trying his different remedies the disease increased and went up my arms and to my legs and finally on my face. The burning was something terrible. I went to another doctor who had the reputation of being the best in town. He told me it was eczema. His medicine checked the advance of the disease, but no further. I finally concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies and found relief in the first trial. I continued until I was completely cured from the disease, and I have not been troubled since. C. Burkhardt, 23 1/2 W. Market St., Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 19, 1908."

No Kidney Trouble at All Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson, 710 Wee St., Columbia, Mo., says: "I was in misery with kidney trouble, and finally had to undergo an operation. I did not rally well, and began to suffer smothering spells and drowsy. My left side was badly swollen and the action of the kidneys much disordered. My doctors said I would have to be tapped, but I began using Doan's Kidney Pills instead, and the swelling subsided and the kidneys began to act properly. Now my health is fine." Much less would be satisfactory. The general average is above twenty bushels. "All are loud in their praise of the great crops and that wonderful country."—Association of August, 1908.
It is now possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free and another 160 acres at $3.00 per acre. Hundreds have paid the cost of their farms ($2 purchased) and then had a balance of from $10.00 to $12.00 per acre from one crop. Wheat, barley, oats, flax—all do well. Mixed farming is a good success and dairying is highly profitable. Excellent climate, splendid schools and churches, and ways bring most every district within easy reach of market. Nature Tells You.

As Many an East Jordan Reader Knows Too Well.

When the kidneys are sick, Nature tells you all about it. The urine is nature's calendar. Infrequent or too frequent action; Any urinary trouble tells of kidney ills.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills. People in this vicinity testify to Daniel Harrington, 30 Bridge St., Petoskey, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble that had caused me to lose many a day's work. My kidneys were weak and the secretions were unnatural and filled with a heavy sediment. My back pained me intensely, especially when I caught cold and I got so bad that I could not stoop or lift. Often I was laid up in bed, having in addition to the other troubles, severe headaches. After trying various remedies and prescriptions without getting relief I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They promptly disposed of my trouble. I will be glad at any time to personally corroborate every word of this statement, should anyone ask my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills."

"MA'S NEW HUSBAND"

The Bill at Kentucky Tonight a Most Excellent One.

"Ma's New Husband," which is being presented this afternoon at the Kentucky to a fairly large matinee audience, will be presented again this evening. If there are any lovers of clean fun and catchy music who did not attend the matinee this afternoon—and, of course, there were many—they should be present tonight. They will be most thoroughly delighted if they do so.

"Ma's New Husband" is all its name would imply except that it is not only funny but that it is rich, rare and racy in its fun. The whole music score is catchy and excellent at the same time. Then it is presented in a most captivating way in every respect. You get more than your money's worth in the bill.

No company which has visited Paducah this season has come to the city with stronger endorsement from the press and the News-Democrat feels assured in all it says in behalf of the company.

See "Ma's New Husband" tonight without fail.—Paducah, Ky. News Democrat. Will be at East Jordan next Friday night April 28.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES.

Maud Cross substituted for Miss McLanathan at the Lincoln school, on Thursday afternoon of last week.

Misses Grace Papineau, Annie Metcalf and Lottie Withers called on the normal last week.

Margaret Ryan substituted for Miss Sherman in the Central building on Friday last.

The class joined the high school on Friday morning and listened to a very inspiring and elevating talk by Judge Brown, who is Judge of the Juvenile Court in Salt Lake City. Judge Brown is interested in the Boys' City that is to be located on Pine Lake.

The Conscientious Scot.

A commercial traveling man landed at Edinburgh, Scotland, one Saturday night too late to get out of town for Sunday. The next day he found that there was actually no form of amusement in the whole city to assist him in whiling away the day. He went to the proprietor of the hotel to see if he could suggest a way of passing the remainder of the day.

The landlord took pity on the stranger and took him to one of the rooms in the house in which a number of Scotchmen were playing a game called "nap," which is a sort of modification of "seven up." They were playing for a shilling a point, so that the game was a pretty stiff one. The stranger got in the game and played very cautiously, for he was quite sure that the players, or at least some of them, were cheating. One solemn faced Scot, he was especially sure, he caught cheating a number of times. The visitor began whistling a part of some vagrant tune. The Scot who had been cheating arose from the table and threw down the cards.

"What is the matter?" the other players asked.

"I'm gangin' awa'," the Scot answered, glaring at the stranger. "I'll play cards w' no man that whistles on the Sabbath."

The Struggle For Liberty.

What you call liberty I call liberties, and what I call the struggle for liberty is nothing but the constant, living assimilation of the idea of freedom. He who possesses liberty otherwise than as a thing to be striven for possesses it dead and soulless, for the idea of liberty has undoubtedly this characteristic—that it develops steadily during its assimilation. So that a man who stops in the midst of the struggle and says, "Now I have it!" thereby shows that he has lost it.—Henrik Ibsen.

It Worked Both Ways.

Two young merchants, John Bruce and Clint Pease, who occupied adjoining stores in a small town, were intimate friends. When business was dull they visited back and forth from one store to the other. Each was fond of a joke.

One cold, blustery day, when customers were few, Clint sat behind the stove in John's store. A young woman

The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Sloop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Sloop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Sloop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fall then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Sloop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by James Gidley.
