The Seabird.

WARREN W. LAMPORN.

It was late in the autumn season,
It was late in the autumn day,
As the Seabird loosed her moorings
And sailed from the harbor away.

And a maiden sat at her window
A-watching with anxious eyes,
For the wind was steadily rising
And the storm-rack covered the skies.

And she watched till the shades of evening
Fell over the land and sea
And hid from her sight the Seabird
And the keeper of Skilligalee.

All night in her lonely chamber,
As she toiled in her troubled sleep,
The maiden lay dreaming of danger
And death on the stormy deep.

She saw the storm-rack and the wave-foam
As closer together they drew,
And heard the loud roar of the tempest
As wilder and wilder it grew.

She saw the rent sails of vessels
Adrift in the murky gloom;
And the worn, pallid faces of sailors
As they sank to a sailor's doom.

And once on the tossing billow
With the little Seabird in tow,
She fancied all grim and ghostly
She saw the dread phantom ship go.

And sometimes, awaked from her dreaming,
She shuddered to hear the loud roar
Of the tempest about her cottage,
And the boom of the waves on the shore.

Yet there's never a night so dreary
But will have its succeeding day,
And there's never a tempest so angry
But its fury will pass away.

And the morn brought back the sunshine
To the dark and troubled sea,
And the sea brought back to the maiden
The keeper of Skilligalee.

Yet the morn nor the sea brought gladness,
But bitterest woe instead;
For lo! at the feet of the maiden
The keeper lay cold and dead.

Must Help Protect Forests.

Game and Forest Warden Pierce recently received a report from Deputy W. O. Frost giving details in regard to the fire which destroyed about 40,000 cords of four-foot wood in Alger county.

The report shows that during the time the fire was raging, a Finlander, who was ordered to assist the fire fighters, refused, and as a result was arrested under the law requiring every available man to assist when called upon. The law has been in effect about two years, but this is the first time its provisions have been carried out. The Finlander was found guilty and sent to the workhouse for 90 days. It is expected complaints will be made against two other men who ran away when called upon to help.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.
Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound. It is sent by letter, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

New Poor Commissioner.

At a meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Poor held at Charlevoix last Monday, the resignation of E. L. Stanford of Boyne City was accepted and Judge Harris appointed Frank L. Pierson of Boyne Falls to fill the vacancy. Mr. Pierson was later elected secretary of the organization. J. W. Rogers of this place is president of the Board and Fred Smith of Charlevoix is the third member. Mr. Stanford was recently appointed game warden for this section and could not conveniently handle the two offices.

Good Fire Protection, Now.

The new 200,000-gallon water tank recently constructed, on the hill north of town, has been put into commission and is giving a good pressure. The new trunk line from the pumping station to the tank is practically completed, and workmen are now busy with the West Side extension.

Jackson Prison Twine.

Michigan farmers are to be congratulated upon the prospects for the success of the Michigan twine plant at the Jackson prison. The plant has been a potent factor in reducing the cost of twine to the farmers. It has encountered opposition from the start from the twine trust. Over two million pounds of twine have already been shipped from the prison. Last week's shipments were the largest in the history of the plant and there is every reason to believe that the entire output will be contracted for before the close of the season. Farmers who have not yet placed their orders should take the earliest opportunity to do so.

Butter worth 30 cents per pound is made from the same milk that greases worth 4 cents a pound is made. It takes as much milk to make the one as the other. The one is the result of ignorance, the other of intelligence. The one goes begging in the market and brings poverty upon the producer, the other is everywhere in demand and brings wealth and honor to the maker. The one honors the cow the other disgraces her! The one builds hovels and sheds, the other builds mansions and costly barns! The one covers the farm with mortgages, the other removes them! The one brings ignorance to the children, the other knowledge and respectability. In no way are ignorance and knowledge more plainly brought in contrast than in the manufacture of butter. Ignorance sits in poverty and is clothed in want and disgrace, while knowledge is clothed in plenty and respectability! In the last ten years knowledge has struck a terrible blow right square on the head of ignorance, cracked its skull and laid it up for repairs. This knowledge had its birth in the West, and the creamery is its legitimate offspring.

FEEDING AMERICAN BLUEJACKETS

By WALDON FAWCETT

FOR various reasons, not the least of which are the influence for content and the encouragement of enlistment, it has long been the ambition of the authorities to have the enlisted men of the American navy take rank as the "best paid and best fed" sailors in the world. The former has been merely a matter of inducing congress to make liberal expenditure, but the latter has involved no end of thought and work. Gradually, however, the matter of supplying the best possible food in the most appetizing form to large numbers of blue-jackets afloat and ashore has been reduced to a fine science.

To be sure, the public does hear, now and then more or less strenuous complaints from naval fans on the score of the fare provided aboard ship, but these protests are nowhere near as frequent as they once were, or as they are in the navies of other nations. Moreover, such "growls" when investigated are usually found to emanate from chronic "seaboards." In the comparative, untried number of cases where the complaints are made by the men likely to be affected by poor cooking, rather than poor food, for what is commonly known as "sea sickness" there is a great deal to be said in favor of the present system.

It is an often-asked question, "What is the character of the food provided for the men who go down to the sea in Uncle Sam's ships there may be given a sample menu. The bill of fare is changed every day but a representative day's meal program is found in the following. For breakfast, baked pork and beans, bread, butter, coffee. For dinner, roast veal or roast beef and gravy, stewed tomatoes, mashed potatoes, bread, butter and coffee. For supper, bologna sausage, cheese, potato salad, bread, butter and tea. The fresh fruit and other delicacies are often included in the upper bill, and a 40-watt power ice cream freezer is, during the summer months, one of the most frequently used features of the equipment of the galley or kitchen of the average battleship. In this connection it may be added, that the presence of a "sawboard" of a mechanically operated ice cream freezer but calls attention to the fact that the average floating fortress flying the Stars and Stripes is equipped with almost every culinary appliance known to the art of twentieth century cookery. There are potato-mashing machines, potato washing apparatus, meat grinders, an electric dough mixer, dish washers and other innovations.

To realize how well Uncle Sam's blue-jackets fare with reference to the cravings of the fancy, it is only necessary to compare an average day's meals with the items of food provided by the British government for the fighting men aboard his majesty's armoured ships. For breakfast your Britisher has one pint of porridge and dry biscuit. At dinner he has salt pork and pea soup, but no vegetables. Late in the afternoon, in lieu of supper, he has tea when his meal consists of one pint of tea and more dry biscuit. Think of that for a final meal of the day as compared with a Yankee naval menu that includes not only bread, butter and tea, but also fresh meat pie, fruit, potatoes, etc., to say nothing of the 200 quarts of ice cream that are consumed on a first-class American battleship on many a warm evening. No wonder the American men

On board ship, where the facilities of the galley or ship's kitchen are necessarily somewhat restricted and the food obviously cannot have quite the same variety obtainable on shore, it is of the highest importance that the best possible results be obtained in the cooking. To that end each ship is given a liberal allowance of cooks and bakers, judiciously selected, and to aid them in the discharge of their duties Uncle Sam has prepared a neat cook book having recipes for the stand-bys as well as the frills of naval menus.

WEATHER BY WIRELESS.

Travelling around the world by wireless telegraphy, with its attendant storms and other disturbances of the elements is one of the latest international projects. Still another of perhaps little importance is the proposal to equip the vessels of all nations with uniform storm signals.

These were the leading problems thrashed out at a conference of distinguished meteorologists of the principal nations in London. The conference is the outgrowth of a meeting of the leading meteorologists of the world in Europe several years ago. The United States was represented by Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau.

A concerted movement was inaugurated to induce the principal governments to adopt a uniform system of wireless telegraphy marine weather reports and to reach an men in charge must bend every energy to see to it that meals are timed to the minute and are placed on the tables piping hot. All preparations are made at the tables before the messmen set out agreement so that all nations shall display a uniform marine storm signal. In effecting an international agreement it is believed that it will be a great factor in saving life and property on sea and land and at the same time be highly important in weather predictions.

These subjects were dealt with by two committees, one on maritime weather signals and the other on weather marine telegraphy. The first committee was composed of Dr. W. N. Shaw, director of the British meteorological office; Prof. A. Angot, director of the Central French meteorological service; Rev. L. Froe, director of the Zi-Ka Wei observatory at Shanghai, China; Rear Admiral Hinz, director of the Deutsche Seewarte at Hamburg, Germany; Prof. M. Mohr, director Norwegian Meteorological Institute; Prof. Willis L. Moore and K. Nakamura, director of the meteorological service of Japan. In addition to Messrs. Angot, Hinz and Moore, the other committee was composed of Lieut. Gen. Rykatcheff, director of the Central Physical observatory of St. Petersburg, Russia.

The general menu on a warship, comprising practically all of the enlisted men of the navy and marine corps is divided into messes of about 20 men each, and a messman is detailed for each mess, to receive the food from the cooks at the galley, and serve it at the mess table. Tipping is not only unnecessary, but it is forbidden. When men are landed from a warship in large numbers, either for going into camp or for an expedition, a commissary corps, including cooks, bakers and messmen is sent with them, to see to it that they have good food and plenty of it.

There is a popular misconception regarding the manner in which Uncle Sam provides table board for the occupants of his floating fortresses. In addition to the pay provided for enlisted men, the government undertakes to subsidize them, and this is done at whatever expense may be necessary. The fixed value of commutation for one ration is, by law, 30 cents, but the commutation of rations is a privilege, not a right, and there is error in the idea that can become prevalent in some quarters that each enlisted man is entitled to receive just 20 cents' worth of food each day or 30 cents in money.

"One of the principal problems taken up by the conference," said Prof. Moore, "was the question of international agreement as to the taking of wireless marine weather reports. The scheme was to obtain the adoption by all of the leading nations of a uniform method of taking and transmitting wireless meteorological observations so that each observation, no matter by what nation taken, will be comparable with the observations taken by any other nation. There is now no uniform system of receiving and transmitting marine wireless weather reports and exactly the same things are not observed."

"Observations received by a ship would be transmitted to other ships, so that by relaying from one vessel to another observations from the entire ocean would then within a few minutes reach the land and the central meteorological offices in the United States, France, England and Germany and other interested nations would be able to complete these observations each in its proper geographic position, and thus to determine the location of storms and forecast their future direction. Such forecasts could be distributed to the vessels in the same manner in which the observations on which the forecasts were based were collected."

YOUR BACKACHE WILL YIELD

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rockland, Maine.—"I was troubled for a long time with pains in my back and side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged, and thought I should never get well. I read a testimonial about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and thought I would try it. After taking three bottles I was cured, and never felt so well in all my life. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my friends."—Mrs. WILL YOUNG, 6 Columbia Avenue, Rockland, Me.

Backache is a symptom of female weakness or derangement. If you have backache, don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so safely and surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Cure the cause of these distressing aches and pains and you will become well and strong.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has restored health to thousands of women.

Sees Final Victory Over Tuberculosis. Dr. William Osler says: "Whether tuberculosis will be finally eradicated is an open question. It is a foe that is very deeply entrenched in the human race. Very hard it will be to eradicate completely, but when we think of what has been done in one generation, how the mortality in many places has been reduced more than 50 per cent.—indeed, in some places 100 per cent.—it is a battle of hope, and so long as we are fighting with hope, the victory is in sight."

Dodging Responsibility. "Why should a man pay rent when he can own his own home?" said the thrifty citizen.

"I don't know," answered Mr. Meekton, "unless it's because you'd rather have your wife speak her mind to the landlord than to you when the place gets run down."

Precocious. Small Girl—Why doesn't baby talk, father?

Father—He can't talk yet, dear. Young babies never do.

Small Girl—Oh, yes they do. Job did. Nurse read to me out of the Bible how Job cursed the day he was born.—Tit-Bits.

A Diplomat from Chicago

By CAROLINE LOCKHART

(Copyright, 1905, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Something was wrong with Lily; she was not happy, and it crept out in the sorrowful tone of her letters. So mother came on from Chicago to see about it. When mother started out to "see" about anything, something was bound to happen.

Mother was a majestic lady, with a high white pompadour and impressive embonpoint. She had great executive ability and prided herself upon her will power. Lily was the apple of her eye, and Lily was unhappy, she meant to know the reason why—and promptly, too.

Whipple, who was small and nervous, to his own great disgust, always found himself cowed by the cold, penetrating eyes and bland voice of his mother-in-law. Therefore he was not crazed with joy when the telegram announcing her coming reached him; but he met her at the station and kissed her on the cheek that she offered him with all the warmth that he could muster.

Mother, after laying aside her wraps and without stopping to unpack her capacious trunk, made a tour of the house from garret to cellar.

She was not long in arriving at a conclusion. Whipple was growing stingy—in fact, he was stingy. The sheets were patched, the stockings were darned oftener than should be, Lily needed new clothes, and there was nothing in her purse but small change. For these and other reasons she was convinced that her surmise was correct.

She confronted Lily with the evidence she had secured, but Lily, like a dutiful wife, insisted that "poor, dear Gaspard had a struggle to get along."

"On $5,000 a year," replied mother, with a haughty sniff.

Mother probed like a congressional investigating committee, and under cross-examination Lily finally broke down and confessed that Gaspard's generosity had been chiefly confined to the days of their engagement, and that his natural parsimony increased, rather than diminished, with his prosperity.

She Was Not Long in Arriving at a Conclusion.

"He doesn't know that he is mean," wept Lily; "he thinks he is generous, and I always try to keep up appearances, so he does not realize what a little he gives me."

"He will realize it before I'm through with him," said mother, grimly.

"Oh! Don't say anything to him, please don't," pleaded Lily.

"Do not worry, my love. Your mother never committed a faux pas of that sort."

"The telephone bell rang, and Whipple at the other end announced that Sterling would dine with them that evening. Sterling was the junior member of the rich firm that employed Gaspard.

"Get up a nice dinner and have things look nice," said Whipple, as he rang off.

"Now, my love," said mother, "just let me take this right off your hands. You are worn out, so put on your things and go out somewhere. I'll arrange with Mary about the dinner, and dress the children myself. Don't let it trouble you in the least. You can trust your own mother, can't you, dear?"

So Lily, with a sigh of relief, obeyed. She went to a matinee with money furnished by her mother, and enjoyed herself for the first time in months.

"Now, Mary," said mother, bustling about, after Lily had gone, "we will have fresh green-turtle soup, Penobscot river salmon, diamond-back terrapin and a few hot-house luxuries. But there! I'll make out a list and you can go to the market where Mrs. Whipple has her account and get these things for dinner."

Mary's eyes were staring. "She don't have no 'count, mum. Mr. Whipple don't like her to run up bills, so she pays for things."

"Ah," said mother with a significance that meant trouble for Whipple, "no money and no account. What is in the house, Mary?"

"There's a soup-bone with some meat on it and some petaters and some turnips and some onions," replied Mary, tabulating them off on her fingers.

"So much as that?" asked mother sarcastically.

"Yes, mum, we're pretty well stocked up now," replied Mary innocently.

Lily arrived only a few minutes before Gaspard and Sterling. The fleeting glimpses she caught of the dining room table was most satisfactory. All the wedding silver was displayed to the greatest advantage, and the ferns made a pretty center piece. Mother, in her black satin and point lace, was a credit to any daughter. The children were up in the nursery, said mother.

Whipple looked forward to showing off his house to Sterling, who was unmarried.

"Nothing like it," he was often heard to remark. "A man can live so much better and have so many more comforts in a home of his own than when knocking around in hotels by himself," and he invariably added, "It doesn't cost so much."

Whipple, like many others, desired to make a good appearance and enjoy every comfort, while begrudging the money it took to pay for it.

The comforts that he talked of were due to Lily's ingenuity, thrift and self-sacrifice, and not to his liberality, as he so fondly imagined.

"Sit here, Mr. Sterling," said Lily, when dinner was announced.

As Sterling seated himself he felt the chair sway under him. Something was evidently wrong with its underpinning. By slyly experimenting, he discovered that the chair was liable to collapse with any sudden movement, so he sat stiff and erect, scarcely daring to reach for his napkin.

The napkin had a hole in it, through which he put his hand and regarded it contemplatively. Whipple had one in as bad condition; if not worse; so had mother and Lily. They quickly dropped them from sight and began to talk with embarrassed haste, all except mother; she was as serene as a day in June.

Mary brought on the soup. Whipple passed the crackers, and discovered that the cracker jar concealed a large patch on the tablecloth.

The cut-glass carafe stood over a hole, and Whipple dared not move the butter dish for fear of what he might expose.

Mary removed the soup plates and brought in the covered vegetable dishes.

"I tell you, Sterling, nothing like home cooking," said Whipple in his boastful voice, pleasantly anticipating the piece of resistance for which Mary had gone to the kitchen.

The corners of mother's mouth twitched, and Sterling remarked politely that "he supposed not."

Mary came in bearing a platter upon which rolled, like so many marbles, six hard balls of chopped meat, the soup meat in disguise.

"What's this we have?" inquired Whipple blankly.

"Meat balls," replied mother in her sweetest and suavest tones.

Sterling pinched himself under the table to keep back the fiendish desire he had to yell when Whipple, after pursuing one of the little hard balls around and around the platter with a spoon, finally captured it on the side and tried to mash it. It flew from under the spoon like quicksilver, and another exciting chase ensued before he finally got it on Sterling's plate.

In the covered dishes were boiled turnips, onions and potatoes.

The conversation during the meal was forced, except by mother. It was hard to be gay on turnips, but mother bubbled over with good humor, and Whipple's silent prayer was that the meat ball would choke her to death.

Every time Sterling thought of the "comforts of home" he had a fit of coughing that made his chair sway to and fro till the chills crept up and down his spine.

"Pass the coffee, Mary," said Lily, with a sigh of relief that the end was in sight. A hectic flush had risen on Whipple's cheek bones. As he raised the after-dinner cup to his lips, looking fearfully about, as if wondering if there was anything more that could happen, the cup dropped off the handle. Lily gave a cry and Whipple executed a waltz-dance as the scalding coffee burned him. Sterling started violently as he heard the crash. His chair collapsed and he fell in a heap, striking his head against the sideboard with a force that made him see stars.

Mother rushed around to see if he had "hurt his spine," while Lily wiped coffee from the wrathful Whipple's waistcoat.

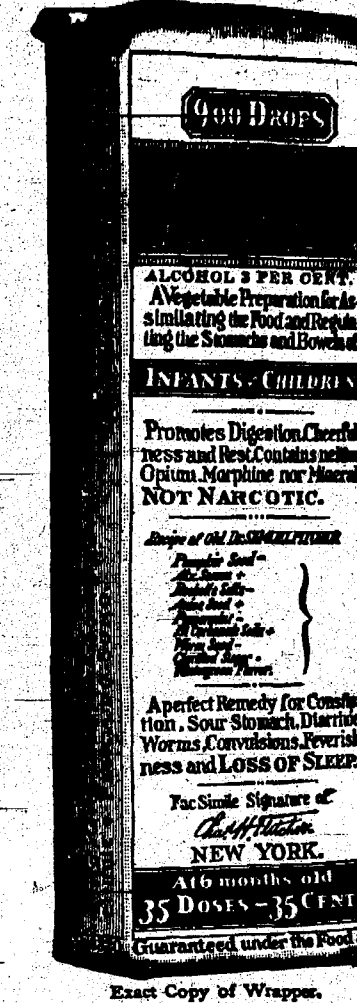

"Why, that must have been the cup that I noticed had the handle glued on," said mother innocently, and Whipple glared at her with dark suspicion.

That night, while Sterling was wending his way to his hotel, pondering upon the "whiteness of the whiteness" of some people, and of Whipple in particular, that person was searching his pockets for greenbacks, which he turned over to Lily with an air of righteous indignation and the emphatic remark that if she didn't open an account with the butcher and baker and buy some new table-linon, dishes, and chairs, and whatever she needed, they'd shut up the whole "shooting-match" and board.

Lily, who was a wise woman, said nothing, but slipped upstairs later and hugged her mother.

Not in That Line. "That young photographer has proposed to Nell again. He won't talk 'no' for an answer."

"That's odd, since he's so used to taking negatives."

SEEMED APPROPRIATE TO HER

Wife of Sick Man Thought She Had Reason for Appealing to Locomotive Works.

One day last winter a feeble Irish woman called upon us for aid. The case sounded urgent, so I went with her at once. Everything was just as she had stated. Her husband was very ill, she was too old and feeble to work, their children were dead, there was no fire and their only food was bread which their neighbors, almost as poor as they, had given them. I asked her why she had not come to us before and she replied that she had appealed to the church and to several individuals without success.

"Thin," she went on, "O! want to the 'big place' round the strate." The only "big place" near was a plant for the manufacture of steam engines, and I wondered.

"But what made you go to the locomotive works?" I asked.

"Well, ma'am, shure-an' ain't me old man got locomotive taxes?"—New York Telegram.

And Then All Symptoms of Kidney Trouble Vanished.

C. J. Hammonds, 617 S. Hill St., Fort Scott, Kansas, says: "I was operated on for stone in the kidney but not cured and some time after was feeling so bad that I knew there must be another stone that would have to be cut out. I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and the kidney action improved right away. Large quantities of sediment and stony particles passed from me, and finally the stone itself, part dissolved, but still as big as a pea. With it disappeared all symptoms of dizziness, rheumatism and headaches. I have gained about 50 pounds since and feel well and hearty."

"I was not told the whole truth"—William Jennings Bryan

In a speech made in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas in December last, Hon. William Jennings Bryan said—

"The trip through your fertile valley has been a succession of surprises to me and the only fault I can find is that I was not told the whole truth. The development surpasses the reports which I had heard. I am pleased with the soil and the climate, and besides having natural advantages you have the advantage of irrigation.

"You are creating wealth and what you make you are entitled to. You are earning legitimate fortunes."

Yes and liberal fortunes too, for money is made quickly and easily in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas. Profits of from $300 to $1000 an acre are the rule, not the exception.

Why don't you do the same—you don't need much capital. You can buy the few acres you need on easy terms and the first crop, if properly cared for, should more than pay for the land.

Q. Riggs, Mercedes, Texas, bought ten acres last fall. Including clearing, plowing, etc., it cost $2040. He has shipped enough beans from the land to pay for it in less than six months and can raise another crop before the year is out.

Very low excursion fares via Rock, Island-Frisco Lines twice a month. It will pay you to see for yourself.

William McFarland of Charlevoix shot and killed himself with a revolver while attending a dance at Bay Shore last Friday evening. Jealousy of a girl with whom he was in love is the only reason known for the deed. He was a young man 23 years of age.

Well, the carnival was in town a whole week and left Sunday for Petoskey. The general opinion of the people and the week's experience remind's one of the Kansas editor's remarks over the birth of a baby in his household, "wouldn't take a million dollars for it nor give a cent for another."—Mancelona Herald.

Rev. J. G. Campbell, a minister of the United Presbyterian church, with his bride, are guests of Mrs. W. P. Porter. He will preach in the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening.

Prof. S. P. Stewart, who has been here the past fortnight guest of his mother, Mrs. Jas. Howe, left Thursday on his return to the Philippine Islands. It will require six weeks traveling to reach his school in the city of Cebu. A pleasant farewell party was given him on Tuesday evening, over fifty of his friends being present to enjoy themselves and say good-bye.

Last Friday evening the patrons of Curkendall's Cigar and Billiard Room had one grand spontaneous outburst of jollification. It started when a sky-rocket came through the display window and nestled down among about a hundred dollar's worth of its kinspeople. The company, consisting of about twenty-five of our business men, started a masterly retreat and all would have gone well had not two "Bills" tried to pass through the rear door at the same moment. There was a congestion, a riot, and the Bull-run retreat with Waterloo combined was child's play compared to the melee. In the darkness of the rear room, with every conceivable joy-producer for Young America going off in the front of the store, it is alleged that two men tried to climb the inner wall and that several tumbled out of a window and took refuge behind the trees in the Hugh W. Dicken Memorial Park. Loss about $100 insured.

NO DOUBT HE WAS RIGHT

All Mystery as to Disappearance of Strawberries Solved in Unique Manner.

Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture, was discussing, apropos of Decoration day, the work to which the soldier turned at the end of the civil war.

"Many soldiers," he said, "turned to farming. Some of our best fruit farms were started by old soldiers, who, finding their business gone at the war's end, adopted a country-life performance."

"They made ingenious farmers. Here is an example. An Iowa man employed a boy to guard his strawberry patch from birds. The berries—fancy fruit as big as peaches—kept disappearing and the man suspected the boy of eating them.

"So one morning he came down to the patch, looked it over, and then said:

"I know you don't touch these berries, my lad, but Zeke says you do. To-day I'll test you—just to convince Zeke."

"He took out a little lump of chalk, and pretended to chalk the boy's lips; but really it was only his finger that he rubbed over them.

"Now," he said, "when I come down here this afternoon, we'll see who's right about you, Zeke, or I."

"And with pretended carelessness he tossed the chalk on the ground.

"On his return, some hours later, it was plain who was right. The boy's lips were chalked with a white, stiff layer half an inch thick."

For Hospital Use.

Some young girls not long ago devised a pleasant and useful way of using their old magazines. They lived in a family where there were many weekly and monthly magazines, too many to attempt to save the greater part of them, which were always sent to hospitals and homes after they were read. These girls took the magazines apart and made them up into little pamphlets, one story or article in each pamphlet. They fastened them together, sometimes with the metal fasteners that come to hold papers together, sometimes with bright-colored cord or ribbon. The leaves may also be sewed or pasted together into little books. They proved most acceptable. Oftentimes convalescents are too weak or ill to hold a book or a whole magazine, when they would greatly enjoy reading if there were no labor attached. These little leaflets are so light that the weakest person could hold them, and they are also in homeopathic doses, as it were, so that there is no temptation to the invalids to go on reading, several stories at a time, and so overdo their strength.

Fared Their Women.

Gaston Boissier of the French academy has been making a study of the suffrage movement, and tells, in "Cicero and His Friends," how much afraid the Romans were that women, who had such great influence in the home, would begin to exert as much influence in the state. Cato was especially bitter against women, and Livy makes him say: "Remember all these regulations our ancestors made to subject wives to their husbands. Shackled as they are, you have trouble to manage them. What will happen if you give them their liberty, if you allow them to enjoy the same rights as yourselves? Do you think you will then be their masters? The day they become your equals they will become your superiors."

Learn to Walk Erect.

If you are walking along the street and wake up to the fact that you are carrying yourself poorly, take the mental attitude of standing erect, as well as the physical one.

Look at the men you meet and imagine that each one of them owes you a dollar; put even a suggestion into your position.

Hold your head well back; look people squarely in the face.

This will not only give the impression to others that you possess the power you want, but it will actually tend to bring that power.

Keep the neck against the collar.

If constantly persisted in an erect carriage will soon become very natural and there will be no need of thinking of it.

Tea Grown in Oregon.

A citizen of Hubbard, Peter Loer, has demonstrated the fact that the finest quality of Japan tea can be successfully grown in Hubbard and in all parts of Oregon. He has a large patch of land planted to tea, which is growing nicely and is very thrifty. He raised a small quantity of tea last year, which he readily disposed of to Portland merchants at four dollars a pound. The merchants offer to pay that price for good tea raised in Oregon.

America's Largest Cities.

In this country there are 158 cities with populations exceeding 30,000. Of these fifteen have over 300,000 inhabitants, twenty-seven have between 100,000 and 300,000, forty-eight have between 50,000 and 100,000, and sixty-eight have less than 50,000.

Asking Father

Stock Subject for Jest

By HELEN OLDFIELD

THE world is full of a number of things that are much more amusing to some folks than to others. From time immemorial "asking father" has been a stock subject for jest, yet to the man who faces the ordeal it by no means is a laughing matter.

True, paternitas is far from being the autocrat he was of yore, and the modern maiden makes her lover's path much more easy for him than by any possibility the girl of the past, however much that way disposed, could do. The modern parent knows his limitations better than to attempt to interfere when his daughter has made up her mind to exercise her legal right to choose her own husband, with papa's consent if it be forthcoming, but quite cheerfully without it be withheld.

But what the modern father has suppressed in drastic exercise of authority has made for an access of paternal interest, in his daughter's future, and of worldly wisdom in his treatment of the prospective son-in-law. Practical enough to realize that he does not hold the situation in the hollow of his hand, as did the paternal parent of yore, he is ready to admit that with the girl of to-day to deal with he cannot enshrine her far from ineligible suitors, nor should a man fall in love with her, can he compel her to say him nay simply because he does not approve of him.

The doctrine of individuality has been too well learned by the modern daughter to permit of treatment of the old-fashioned bread-and-water and locked-up-in-her-bedroom order. Side by side with the precept, "Children, obey your parents," she places its fellow: "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."

All the same, however, the well-brought-up father of this period loves his daughter not a whit less than did the father of the past, and though he may conceal his feeling he is just as suspicious as ever. Thus he is apt to make the wooing of the gay swain a trying affair. Even if a man takes the proper view of the matter, and with due humility confesses that neither he nor any other man (which latter admission comes easier) is good enough for the girl of his choice, he naturally is nervous at asking for so great a boon.

Parents who value their daughter do right to exercise due forethought before intrusting her to a comparative stranger. Moreover, too great willingness to be rid of her on the part of a woman's family scarcely augurs well for the happiness of the man who marries her.

Parents often are placed in great difficulties by reason of their daughter's love affairs. They may refuse to countenance an engagement, but they cannot change the minds of the young people. On the contrary, violent opposition frequently brings a sense of martyrdom which serves to strengthen the misplaced affection, when, with judicious indifference, it might have died a natural death. It comes to a question whether the affair shall go on in secret, virtually ignored by them, or whether they shall so far countenance it as to leave no excuse for deception.

In the hands of John Doe or of Richard Roe any mutilated note of legal tender in the United States is redeemable at its face value, provided a clear three-fifths of its physical surface be presented at the redemption window of the United States treasury department.

Doe or Roe may have to submit to a little questioning, perhaps, as to how he got it or how the accident happened, lopping off that other two-fifths. But if he doesn't stammer and choke, or attempt a clean cut for it, he'll get the full value of the mutilated bill.

By inference, then, neither Roe nor Doe may expect anything doing if he shall present less than the prescribed three-fifths of the piece of currency. But the national government, still liberally disposed toward Doe and Roe, will accept a fragment that may be less than three-fifths, but clearly more than two-fifths of the original note, paying just half the value of the original bill, however, as penalty for the accident.

In the case of James Brown Smith, Esq., known and respected in his home city, he may recover the full value of his note that is under two-fifths measure, provided he will appear before an officer of the law qualified to administer oaths and make affidavit as to time, manner, and place in which the mutilation was accomplished. This affidavit will be attested by the official seal of the officer, who also must be prepared to attest in like manner the good character of the affiant. Except in the above instances, insufficient portions of a note or notes are returned to the persons presenting them for redemption. Paper currency which has been destroyed, totally, is not redeemable under any circumstances.

At a recent official inquiry into factory conditions in England the evidence showed some queer instances of petty tyranny upon the part of employers.

In a cotton mill, should a weaver do the most trifling injury to a piece of cloth he has to pay for the whole piece. This may swallow his entire week's wages; but there is this to be said: He gets the cloth, and at wholesale price, and may cut it up and sell it to his neighbors.

It is pieceworkers, especially those employed in the hosiery and tailoring trades, who suffer most severely from the fine system. Workers are in many cases forced to purchase all work which does not exactly comply with the directions given.

A collar-maker made a slight error in the stitching of 12 dozen collars. The unfortunate woman was forced to buy them all at a cost of over $5.

The question of the living rooms of shop assistants was also gone into, and here again was disclosed a system of fines of the most cruel description. In a large number of cases the food and accommodations are poor, the wages low, and the code of rules and fines most strict and exacting.

To give a few examples of shop law. No pictures are allowed on the walls; all bedrooms must be cleared by 8 a. m.; no flowers may be put in water glasses; all lights must be out by 11 o'clock; no matches or candles are allowed. For not turning out the gas in a bedroom the fine is 25 cents.

In one drapery house a mistake in a bill entails a fine of 12 pence; talking to a girl in another department is punished by a similar fine. In one factory, it was said, girls are actually fined for sneezing.

BAND OF CHIMPANZEES ROUT SAILORS ON SHIP

ATTACK CHINESE COOK WHEN HE SPILLS CAN OF HOT SOUP OVER THEIR LEADER.

New York.—Six chimpanzees, part of a consignment of 600 members of the Sirian tribe, were responsible for wounds and scars exhibited by the crew of the German steamship Tannenfels, which arrived from Calcutta and Colombo, and docked at South Brooklyn.

The monkeys were consigned to a local animal dealer, but at the earnest solicitation of Capt. Lubke were landed at Boston, where the vessel put in last week, and such as are wanted in this city will be shipped overland.

The trouble was precipitated one night in midocean, and was due to the enmity of the six chimpanzees for

"Wong Foo Ran for the Fo'castle, Yelling Like Mad."

Wong Foo, the cook, because he spilled a can of hot soup on the big leader.

"It was about 7:30 o'clock, just after supper," said Engineer Newman, "when we heard a scream, followed by a flow of Chinese language. Crouched in the raft lines of the fore-rigging was a monkey tugging at the end of the Chinaman's queue. The cook was swinging clear of the deck, kicking at the other five chimpanzees, which were attacking his legs. The crew rushed to the rescue; the chimpanzee let go the Chinaman's pigtail and made aft toward the midship house.

"Wong Foo ran for the fo'castle, yelling like mad, chased by the five chimpanzees, which were followed in turn by the seamen. Joined, by two of my firemen, Hubert Hansen and Hans Fels, we rushed for a big fellow, which had taken refuge in the bos'n's locker. When we got inside we were suddenly attacked by the infuriated animal, and in the semi-darkness were completely at his mercy.

"He had seized a marlin spike, and as I reached out to take it from him I got this dig in the right wrist. We were all glad to give him a free passage out. He dashed through the door and leaped into the sea.

"Meanwhile the ship's crew captured the others. They had escaped by tearing away a slat."

DEAD MAN'S FACE ON PANE.

Remarkable Illusion Affects Widow and Daughter—Others Fail to See Image.

Reading, Pa.—The widow and one of the daughters of the late Oscar D. Angstadt of this city, who died last October, are much excited over the appearance, clear to their vision, of the picture of the dead man on a window pane in the room where he died. It first appeared to them on a recent Sunday and they called in some of the neighbors to look at it, but none but the widow and her daughter could see it.

Insistent that the face was plainly depicted on the pane, Mrs. Angstadt and her daughter the other day got Police Sergeant Cressman to examine the window, but he was obliged to admit that he could see nothing.

The women have washed the pane several times, but declared that the face is still visible there. They state that Mr. Angstadt, for several weeks before he died, used to lie in his bed and look through that window, and they believe that his face in some way became photographed there. They describe the image as resembling the negative of a photograph.

Hen Will Not Hatch Hawk Egg. Bloomington, Ind.—A hen will not hatch an egg laid by a hawk, according to Chris Summit of Stineville, this county. He tried the experiment, he says, and failed.

One day Mr. Summit was out shooting crows on his farm, and while returning home saw a hawk sitting on her nest. He shot it and also dislodged the nest, with an egg in it almost ready to hatch.

Mrs. Summit placed the egg under a setting hen. In a short time she heard the hen shouting notes of warning to her brood, and at the same time pecking at something in the nest.

TURKEY POULTS NEED MUCH CARE AND NURSING

Dark, Damp Quarters and Vermin Responsible for Much Disease and Death Among the Young Ones.

—By Anna Galigher.

(Copyright, 1908.)

A Prize Winning Turkey Tom.

Turkey hens begin laying early in the spring, and as they usually make their nests on the ground, it is not advisable to let them hatch the first lot of eggs, unless one can get them to sit in some sheltered place.

If the hen sits in a cold, damp nest the eggs will not hatch well. This is often the cause of weak, sickly poults.

While turkey hens make the best mothers, it is a good plan to hatch the first clutch of eggs with chicken hens; then by the time the turkey hens have finished the second laying the weather is somewhat warmer and they may be allowed to sit.

See that the hens have good nests and are kept free of lice. If the hens are allowed to sit in old nest-boxes they will soon become regular louse incubators. Then when the little turkeys come out your trouble will begin in earnest.

It doesn't take many lice to kill a young turkey. A young turkey cannot endure these life-sapping creatures as long as a chick can.

If the feed is all right, and still they do not seem to thrive, the chances are that they have vermin of some sort. Spread the wings out and examine well on both the inside and outside. The latter is a favorite hiding place, and it sometimes happens that no lice can be found anywhere else. However, it is not uncommon to find the large lice wherever there are pin-feathers. Head lice attack little turkeys almost as soon as they are hatched.

Last year we pinned our faith to a so-called "house-killer," and before we knew it our turkeys and chickens were literally alive with lice. Whether it has lost its strength or was bogus we are not prepared to say; but every time it was applied the little fowls became so sick that some of them came near dying.

It had a worse effect upon the turkeys and chickens than it did upon the lice. Then we began to use lard, as we used to do years ago, before "house-killers" came into general use.

Up to this time we had lost 15 turkeys and twice that number of chickens, all because the "house-killer" failed to kill lice. No more turkeys or chicks died, but thousands of lice did. Great care must be exercised lest a little too much is applied. Just a little is enough, and it must be put on where it will reach the lice.

Take a little on the end of the finger and apply wherever the lice are found. Olive oil may be used instead of lard. Lice cannot live long in either, and both are harmless to the little fowls unless too much is used.

The grease should not touch the bare spot under the wings if it can be avoided, and the head should not be greased unless one is certain that either lice or mites are present.

A young turkey needs sunshine. Some people make a practice of shutting their turkeys up in close, dark coops for the first week or two after they are hatched.

These are the people whose turkeys die "without any cause."

GET RIGHT KIND OF BROOD SOW

Scrubs Never Prove to be Money Getters.

Few things are more displeasing than to see a lot of heterogenous pigs following a scrub sow. They are unsatisfactory to the feed lot and unprofitable to the farmer.

There is no good excuse for keeping scrub sows. The brood sow should be large, roomy and stand well on her toes. The shoulders should be smooth and deep, back wide and slightly arched. There should be ample room for heart and lungs, provided by a wide and deep chest, well-sprung ribs and straight, deep sides. A good depth of chest and abdomen are especially important in a sow.

If possible the sow should be selected from a large litter. This is apt to insure fecundity. Each sow should have at least 12 well-developed teats, thus providing proper nourishment for large litters.

The sow should show quality, but not at the expense of constitution and vigor. When a sow has shown herself to be a prolific breeder she should be retained as long as her reproductive powers are maintained.

Treatment for Roup.—Roup is a contagious catarrh and will, unless immediately checked, go through the entire flock. Every affected bird should be separated from the rest at once. The swelling on the head should be opened with a sharp instrument and the wound treated with an antiseptic, such as iodoform, or one part carbolic acid to twenty parts water. A five per cent. solution of sulphate of copper injected into the nostrils, the cleft of the palate, the eyes and the wounds made by opening the swellings is said to be very good.

Sometimes roup takes the form of diphtheria and is more violent than ordinary roup. Sometimes children take it from poultry. It is very difficult to cure, and if this disease got into my own flock I would kill every affected bird and burn its body. You will save time and probably a part of your flock by killing all the diseased birds and burning them.

Put the rest of the flock in warm, dry quarters, and before putting them in burn a little sulphur in the building, first closing all the openings. Do not put the birds into the building for at least five hours after the burning of the sulphur, during which time it should be thoroughly ventilated.

Pointers on Pea Raising.—It is difficult to secure exhibition peas without thinning the clusters. A pole, with a notch in one end is used, which enables the operator to twist them off rapidly. Usually, if the clusters were reduced one-half or more, the crop would be more valuable. Nature does some of this thinning, but not enough. If half the blossoms drop without setting fruit, the orchardist will do well to cut out half of those that remain.

Japanese Cherries.—The Japanese cultivate the cherry tree mainly for its blossom, and have parks and avenues of these trees. When the blossoms are at the height of beauty everybody goes to see the trees, and the mikado gives a garden party to Japanese and European officials for the enjoyment of the sight.

Feeding Calves.—Don't feed the calves too much milk. Don't feed sour milk. Don't feed the young calves cold milk or the digestion of the calf will be in danger, and lack of thrift, scours and so-called calf cholera will follow.

Relieving Choking Cow.—One who has successfully tried it says that a choked cow may be relieved by tying a stick in her mouth to hold it open for a while. Her effort to dislodge it will start the obstruction in the throat.

Alfalfa Adulterations.—The most common adulterations of alfalfa seed are burr clover, yellow, trefol and sweet clover. Crab grass, rib grass and green and yellow foxtail are also found.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer "which Miss Lesile, an American heiress, Lord Winthrop, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunk stupor. Blake, shunned on the boat because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Lesile. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrop wasted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scolded by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish. The trio started a ten-mile hike for higher land. Thirst attacked them. Blake was compelled to carry Miss Lesile on account of weariness. He taunted Winthrop. They entered the jungle.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

"You'd find those thorns a whole lot worse," muttered Blake.

"To be sure; and Miss Lesile fully appreciates your kindness," interposed Winthrop.

"I do indeed, Mr. Blake! I'm sure I never could go through here without your coat."

"That's all right. Got the handkerchief?"

"I put it in one of the pockets."

"It'll do to tie up your hair."

Miss Lesile took the suggestion, knotting the big square of linen over her fluffy brown hair.

Blake waited only for her to draw out the kerchief before he began to force a way through the jungle. Now and then he beat at the tangled vegetation with his club. Though he held the thick, yet all his efforts failed to open an easy passage for the others. Many of the thorny branches sprang back into place behind him, and as Miss Lesile, who was the first to follow, sought to thrust them aside the thorns pierced her delicate skin until her nod was covered with blood. Nor did Winthrop, stumbling and hobbling behind her, fare any better. Twice he tripped headlong into the brush, scratching his arms and face.

Blake took his own punishment as a matter of course, though his tougher and thicker skin made his injuries less painful. He advanced steadily along the line of bent and broken twigs that marked his outward passage, until the thicket opened on a strip of grassy ground beneath a wild fig-tree.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Winthrop.

"A banyan!"

"Banyan? Well, if that's British for a daisy, you've hit it," responded Blake.

"Just take a squint up here. How's that for a roost?"

Winthrop and Miss Lesile stared up dubiously at the edge of a bed of reeds gathered in the hollow of one of the huge flattened branches at its junction with the main trunk of the banyan, 20 feet above them.

"Will not the mosquitoes pester us here among the trees?" objected Winthrop.

"Storm must have blown 'em away. I haven't seen any yet."

"There will be millions after sunset."

"Maybe; but I bet they keep below our roost."

"But how are we to get up so high?" inquired Miss Lesile.

"I can swarm this drop root, and I've a creeper ready for you two," explained Blake.

Snuffing action to words, he climbed up the small trunk of the air root and swung over into the hollow where he had piled the reeds. Across the broad limb dangled a rope-like creeper, one end of which he had fastened to a branch higher up. He flung down the free end to Winthrop.

"Look lively, Pat," he called. "The sun's most gone, and twilight don't last all night in these parts. Get the line around Miss Lesile, and do what you can on a boost."

"I see; but, you know, the vine is too stiff to tie."

Blake stifled an oath and jerked the end of the creeper up into his hand. When he threw it down again it was looped around and fastened in a bow-line knot.

"Now, Miss Lesile, get aboard and we'll have you up in a jiffy," he said.

"Are you sure you can lift me?" asked the girl, as Winthrop slipped the loop over her shoulders.

Blake laughed down at them. "Well, I guess yes! Once hoisted a fellow out of a 50-foot prospect hole—big fat Dutchman at that. You don't weigh over 120."

He had stretched out across the broadest part of the branch. As Miss Lesile seated herself in the loop he reached down and began to haul up on the creeper, hand over hand. Though frightened by the novel manner of ascent the girl clung tightly to the line above her head, and Blake had no difficulty in raising her until she swung directly beneath him. Here, however, he found himself in a quandary. The girl seemed as helpless as a child, and he was lying flat. How could he lift her above the level of the branch?

"Take hold the other line," he said. The girl hesitated. "Do you hear? Grab it quick, and pull up hard if you don't want a tumble!"

The girl seized the part of the creeper which was fastened above and drew herself up with convulsive energy. Instantly Blake rose to his knees, and grasping the taut creeper with one hand reached down with the other to swing the girl up beside him on the branch.

"It's Only a Beast That's Killed Something Down Below."

"All right, Miss Jenny," he reassured her as he felt her tremble. "Sorry to scare you, but I couldn't have made it without. Now, if you'll just hold down my legs we'll soon hoist his ludship."

He had seated her in the broadest part of the shallow hollow, where the branch joined the main trunk of the fig. Heaped with the reeds which he had gathered during the afternoon it made such a cozy shelter that she at once forgot her dizziness and fright. Nestling among the reeds, she leaned over and pressed down on his ankles with all her strength.

The loose end of the creeper had fallen to the ground when Blake lifted her upon the branch and Winthrop was already slipping into the loop. Blake ordered him to take it off and send up the club. As the creeper was again flung down a black shadow swept over the jungle.

"Hello! Sunset!" called Blake.

"Look sharp, there!"

"All ready," responded Winthrop.

Blake drew in a full breath, and began to hoist. The position was an awkward one, and Winthrop weighed 30 or 40 pounds more than Miss Lesile. But as the Englishman came within reach of the descending loop he grasped it and did what he could to ease Blake's efforts. A few moments found him as high above the ground as Blake could raise him. Without waiting for orders, he swung himself upon the upper part of the creeper and climbed the last few feet unaided. Blake grunted with satisfaction as he pulled him in upon the branch.

"You may do, after all," he said. "At any rate, we're all aboard for the night; and none too soon. Hear that?"

"What?"

"Lion, I guess—Not that yelping. Listen!"

The brief twilight was already fading into the darkness of a moonless night, and as the three crouched together in their shallow nest they were soon made audibly aware of the savage nature of their surroundings. With the gathering night the jungle awakened into full life. From all sides came the harsh squawking of birds, the weird cries of monkeys and other small creatures, the crash of heavy animals moving through the jungle, and above all the yelp and howl and roar of beasts of prey.

After some contention with Winthrop, Blake conceded that the roars of his lion might be nothing worse than the snorting of the hippopotami as they came out to browse for the night. In this, however, there was small comfort, since Winthrop presently reassured his belief in the climbing ability of leopards, and expressed his opinion that, whether or not there were lions in the neighborhood, certain of the barking roars they could hear came from the throats of the spotted climbers. Even Blake's hair bristled as his imagination pictured one of the great cats creeping upon them in the darkness from the far end of their nest limb, or leaping down out of the upper branches.

The nerves of all three were at their highest tension when a dark form swept past through the air within a yard of their faces. Miss Lesile uttered a stifled scream and Blake brandished his club. But Winthrop, who had caught a glimpse of the creature's shape, broke into a nervous laugh.

"It's only a fruit bat," he explained. "They feed on the banyan figs, you know."

In the reaction from this false alarm, both men relaxed and began to yield to the effects of the tramp across the mud-flats. Arranging the reeds as best they could they stretched out on either side of Miss Lesile and fell asleep in the middle of an argument on how the prospective leopard was mostly likely to attack.

Miss Lesile remained awake for two or three hours longer. Naturally she was more nervous than her companions, and she had been refreshed by her afternoon's nap. Her nervousness was not entirely due to the wild beasts. Though Blake had taken pains to secure himself and his companions in loops of the creeper, fastened to the branch above, Winthrop moved about so restlessly in his sleep that the girl feared he would roll from the hollow.

At last her limbs became so cramped that she was compelled to change her position. She leaned back upon her elbow, determined to rise again and maintain her watch the moment she was rested. But sleep was close upon her. There was a lull in the louder noises of the jungle. Her eyes closed, and her head sank lower. In a little time it was lying upon Winthrop's shoulder and she was fast asleep.

As Blake had asserted, the mosquitoes had either been blown away by the cyclone or did not fly to such a height. None came to trouble the exhausted sleepers.

CHAPTER VI.

Man and Gentleman.

NIGHT had almost passed, and all three, soothed by the refreshing coolness which preceded the dawn, were sleeping their soundest, when a sudden fierce roar followed instantly by a piercing squeal caused even Blake to start up in panic. Miss Lesile, too terrified to scream, clung to Winthrop, who crouched on his haunches, little less overcome.

Blake was the first to recover and puzzle out the meaning of the crashing in the jungle and the ferocious growls directly beneath them.

"Lie still," he whispered. "We're all right. It's only a beast that killed something down below us."

All sat listening, and as the noise of the animals in the thicket died away they could hear the beast beneath them tear at the body of its victim.

"The air feels like dawn," whispered Winthrop. "We'll soon be able to see the brute."

"And he us," rejoined Blake. During the brief false dawn they were puzzled by the odd appearance of the ground. The sudden flood of full daylight found them staring down into a dense white fog.

"So they have that here!" muttered Blake—"fever-fog!"

"Beastly shame!" echoed Winthrop. "I'm sure the creature has gone off."

This assertion was met by an outburst of snarls and yells that made all start back and crouch down again in their sheltering hollow. As before Blake was the first to recover.

"Bet you're right," he said. "The big one has gone off, and a pack of these African coyotes are having a scrap over the bones."

"You mean jackals. It sounds like the nasty beasts."

"If it wasn't for that fog I'd go down and get our share of the game."

"Would it not be very dangerous, Mr. Blake?" asked Miss Lesile. "What a fearful noise!"

"I've chased coyotes off a calf with a rope; but that's not the proposition. You don't find me fooling around in that sewer gas of a fog. We'll roost right where we are till the sun does for it. We've got enough malaria in us already."

"Will it be long, Blake?" asked Winthrop.

"Huh? Getting hungry this quick? Wait till you've tramped around a week, with nothing to eat but your shoes."

"Surely, Mr. Blake, it will not be so bad!" protested Miss Lesile.

"Sorry, Miss Jenny; but coconut palms don't blow over every day, and when those nuts are gone what are we going to do for the next meal?"

"Could we not make bows?" suggested Winthrop. "There seems to be no end of game about."

"Bows—and arrows without points! Neither of us could hit a barn door, anyway."

"We could practice."

"Sure—six weeks' training on air pudding. I can do better with a handful of stones."

"Then we should go at once to the cliffs," said Miss Lesile.

"Now you're talking—and it's Pike Peak or bust for ours. Here's one night to the good; but we won't last many more if we don't get fire. It's flints we're after now."

"Could we not make fire by rubbing sticks?" said Winthrop, recalling his suggestion of the previous morning. "I've heard that natives have no trouble."

"So've I, and what's more, I've seen 'em do it. Never could make a go of it myself, though."

"But if you remember how it is done we have at least some chance."

"Give you ten to one odds! No; we'll scratch around for a flint good and plenty before we waste time that way."

"The mist is going," observed Miss Lesile.

"That's no lie. Now for our coyotes. Where's my club?"

"They've all left," said Winthrop, peering down. "I can see the ground clearly, and there is not a sign of the beasts."

"There are the bones—what's left of them," added Blake. "It's a small deer, I suppose. Well, here goes."

He threw down his club and dropped the loose end of the creeper after it. As the line straightened he twisted the upper part around his leg and was about to slide to the ground when he remembered Miss Lesile.

"Think you can make it alone?" he asked.

The girl held up her hands, sore and swollen from the lacerations of the thorns. Blake looked at them, frowned, and turned to Winthrop.

"Um! you got it, too, and in the face," he grunted. "How's your ankle?"

Winthrop wriggled his foot about and felt the injured ankle.

"I fancy it is much better," he answered. "There seems to be no swelling, and there is no pain now."

"That's lucky; though it will tune up later. Take a slide, now. We've got to hustle our breakfast and find a way to get over the river."

Sounds Which Carry at Sea.

Examinations by naval experts in wireless telephony as to the sound which will carry the greatest distance at sea develops that a siren under 72 pounds of steam pressure will emit a blast which may be heard 40 miles. Next comes the steam whistle, the sound of which is carried 20 miles. Among the softest sounds which carry a considerable distance is the whistling buoy installed by the lighthouse board, which has frequently been heard a distance of 15 miles.

DOG IN LONELY VIGIL ON MOUNT

MINERS SAY ANIMAL GUARDS SPOT WHERE MASTER LIES BURIED.

INSTANCE OF GREAT DEVOTION

Mysterious Volley of Shots Precedes Appearance of Beast, and Then Blizzard Covers the Scene with Heavy Snows.

Spokane, Wash.—Where the chill winds sweep and the snow-drifts form great overhanging ledges will break into slides with the approach of warm weather, a dog maintains its lonely vigil on the summit of a mountain in the Coeur d'Alene country near here.

Parties have searched the hills, but no one has solved the mystery of the animal's faithful watch. Enough is known, however, to justify the belief that the spot was the scene of a tragedy and that when the snow melts under the July sun an instance of a dog's devotion to its master, even unto death, will be recorded.

Frank Hathaway, a linotype operator employed at Wallace, Idaho, crossed the trail over the St. Joe divide returning from a hunting trip last fall, before the first snow. Passing through a heavy timber growth below the divide he heard a shotgun fired as fast as it could be loaded. Then a rifle chimed in. Forty shots were fired in rapid succession. Hathaway saw no one in the wild region, but spoke of the incident to M. Livingston, a prospector, living in a cabin several miles down the trail.

Livingston says he heard the plaintive howling of a dog coming from far up on the mountain that night. Again on the succeeding night the dog howled, and on the fourth night after the shooting a strange dog was seen skulking about Livingston's cabin in search of food. He fled at the prospector's approach, but meat left outside the shack disappeared during the night. Every night since the dog has been fed.

A few weeks after the shooting the first blizzard of the winter swept over the mountain, and after three days of storm the ground was left covered with six feet of snow. Still the lone ly dog made trips to the cabin, each time returning to the mountain top.

When snow had succeeded snow and the cold, clear weather of later January came, Livingston climbed the mountain to find the dog's hiding place. The animal's frequent trips made a trail which was plainly visible, and after trailing a mile above the cabin the dog was found lying in the shelter of a bush, making its bed in the snow. The animal fled at Livingston's approach, but returned when he departed.

Four months have elapsed since the dog began its vigil. It has remained at this one spot, sleeping in snow and ice and traveling down the steep mountainside for its food. Every man in Wallace believes that when July's sun clears away the snow covering the bleak height, the body of the dog's master will be uncovered.

Pig That Barks Like a Dog.

Saco, Me.—Fred M. Thim of this city, a well-known electrician and railroad man, has at his home in lower Beach street a pig that barks like a dog.

The black and white markings of the pig are much like a hound. Its ears also much resemble those of a hound in their size, shape and the way they hang.

Mr. Thim has had many visitors to see the animal and hear it bark. All say it is startling to hear such sounds come from a pig, and there is an impulse to jump.

Rattlesnake Guards House.

Winsted, Conn.—Instead of a bulldog in his front yard chained to a tree to keep away tramps and other unwelcome guests, Ed Harris of Seacock keeps a big, live rattlesnake in a box. The reptile has ten rattles and a "button." When any one approaches the house the snake rattles a warning. Harris catches rattlers alive.

LOOKED A LITTLE UNSTABLE

Body Servant of Gen. Mahone Doubtful of the Qualities of His Master's "Props."

Gen. Adalbert R. Buffington, at a dinner in Madison, N. J., told a number of civil war stories.

"Gen. Mahone," he said, "was very thin. One cold and windy December morning in '64 he was taking a nap in his tent when his old colored servant, 'Uncle Davy,' tiptoed in, and, stumbling in the darkness, knocked down the general's folding cot and spilled him out on the frozen ground.

"Gen. Mahone jumped up furiously, seized a scabbard and made for Davy. Davy ran. The general gave chase.

"Uncle Davy tore up hill and down dale till he was pretty well out of breath; then he looked back over his shoulder at his master, who bounded after him on slender limbs, blue and thin, his long, white night shirt fluttering in the chill morning.

"'Fo' de lan's sake, Mars' William,' the exhausted Davy yelled, desperately, 'yo' hain't trustin' yo'self in dis wind on dem legs, is yo'?"

AGONIZING ITCHING.

Eczema for a Year—Got No Relief Even at Skin Hospital—In Despair

Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I was troubled with a severe itching and dry, scurfy skin on my ankles, feet, arms and scalp. Scratching made it worse. Thousands of small red pimples formed and these caused intense itching. I was advised to go to the hospital for diseases of the skin. I did so, the chief surgeon saying: 'I never saw such a bad case of eczema.' But I got little or no relief. Then I tried many so-called remedies, but I became so bad that I almost gave up in despair. After suffering agonies for twelve months, I was relieved of the almost unbearable itching after two or three applications of Cuticura Ointment. I continued its use, combined with Cuticura Soap and Pills, and I was completely cured. Henry Searle, Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 and 10, 1907." Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

WOMAN'S WORTH.

Wife—I see by this paper that a man in America sold his wife for a shilling.

Hubby—Well, if she was a good one she was worth it.

Ate a Chick with Big Eyes.

A trainman is telling an incident that occurred on a Mohawk & Malone train up in the woods the other day. The train was standing on a siding waiting the arrival and passing of another train when an Italian walked through the coach, his hands crossed on his stomach and his head wagging from side to side in a doleful manner. "What's the matter, John?" some one inquired.

"Oh, me sick—me sick as dev," replied the man, rolling his head still more distressingly and continuing the rubbing of his stomach.

"Sick? Well, what you been eating?" asked the sympathetic passenger.

"Eata de chick with de big eyes," responded John, as his groans increased.

John had killed an owl the night before and it didn't agree with him.—Utica Observer.

PRESSED HARD

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in one of the southern states says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was on inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me; and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Whipped His Friends.

Once when Daniel O'Connell was visiting Tipperary the mob wanted to take the horses from O'Connell's carriage and draw him themselves upon his way. "This will never do," he said to his daughter-in-law. "Their intentions are excellent, but they'll get so excited that we'll find ourselves in the ditch presently."

Bursting open the carriage door, in a moment he was out among these gigantic Tipperary men, just as big as any one of them. "Now, boys, be reasonable," he said. "Leave the horses under the carriage."

"But shure we'd rather pull you along ourselves, sir," was the reply as the preparations for so doing went gallantly forward.

"All right! On your own heads be it!" cried O'Connell good humoredly. And, throwing off his coat, he set to with pugilistic intent, boxing them right and left until he got them to desist. Their amusement and delight knew no bounds, and when on regaining the carriage he doubled up his hand and shook it at them, with a beautiful smile and a twinkling eye, the air was rent with enthusiastic shouting, and he drove off even a greater hero than when he had come.
