Schools Open

Over Six Hundred Pupils In Attendance.

Schools opened in East Jordan Monday with over 600 pupils in attendance, and the year's work is now in full progress and running smoothly. Supt. Northon has favored us with the following list showing how the pupils are classified; report from the Jordan River school has not been filed hence these figures do not include that school.

Public School Enrollment.

Grade	East Side	West Side
Kindergarten	48	20
First	28	7
Second	32	13
Third	39	19
Fourth	35	12
Fifth	30	14
Sixth	28	13
Seventh	19	10
Eighth	35	9
Ninth	46	9
Tenth	18	10
Eleventh	9	9
Twelfth	18	9
Total primary grades	251	158
grammar grades	158	89
high school	498

As will be seen by above there are sixteen pupils who have entered the twelfth grade, viz.—Anthony Burney, Reta Carr, Julia Cedersten, Euhel Crowell, Hazel Cummins, Hazel Goodman, Agnes Green, Mary Gunstius, Harriet Gunstius, Irwin Hilliard, Carroll Hoyt, Olive Huntsberger, Arlene Jones, Florence McKee, Flora Simmons, Edna Tompkins.

The Catholic School.

The new Catholic school opened Monday with three teachers in charge and with eighty pupils. Only the eight grades are being taught this year, and a part of the curriculum is music and drawing, sewing, and elocution. Next year the full twelve grades will probably be taught. The pupils are classified as follows: Eighth Grade, 11 pupils; Seventh, 6; Sixth, 10; Fifth, 7; Fourth, 11; Third, 6; Second, 10; First, 19.

Boozers Not Welcome.

The Central Lake Torch has the following editorial comments in its last issue relative to the saloon business in that town:

"In the arrest and conviction of drunks from Charlevoix and Petoskey, citizens of those towns may read that the limit of endurance has been reached at Central Lake. The drouth in their own county has driven this way a crowd of disreputables, who are not entitled to consideration at home and should not be given any here. Central Lake welcomes any man or woman who comes here on bona fide business and behaves as he or she should; but the large class, who have acquired an idea that this is a booze town, and inclined to view with lenient eyes their escapades are much mistaken, and should, 'take heed lest they fall.' Any man or woman who cannot observe the common decencies, whether resident or not, should be severely dealt with and I am informed that the officials are determined to put an abrupt stop to some of the objectionable features recently enacted here. The Torch will, after this week publish the name, residence and offense of every person convicted in justice court, and urges the vigilance of local police officers in suppressing such exhibitions of depravity as have been recently witnessed on the part of a certain element coming from dry territory in search of refreshment. As long as a person behaves properly Central Lake will not be inhospitable, but it must be understood that this village will no longer submit to imposition at the hands of the off-scourings of larger cities in contiguous dry territory. It is an unmitigated nuisance, and the limit of endurance in this respect has been reached."

S'more Wheat Crop.

Several have laid claim to bumper crops in wheat, and now comes one Ira D. Bartlett who deposes and says that he was guest of John Cooper, who resides down the lake about eight miles, last Sabbath. And that Mr. Cooper informed him and had material evidence to substantiate his story, that from 34 acres he garnered a little over 150 bushels.

Button, Button.

Great Excitement Promised for Prize Day at the Charlevoix County Fair.

Of all the pleasure and whirlwind excitement that visitors to the Charlevoix County Fair will enjoy—the pleasing, happy, laughing, roaring, delightful and profitable "Button, Button, Who's got the Button" game will create the greatest furore of them all.

Here's the story in a nut shell: September 30th will be Prize Day at the great Charlevoix County Fair. Every purchaser of a ticket of admission to the Fair on that day will receive a beautiful souvenir of the occasion.

Now for the fun. These souvenirs will have a commercial value. They will each be numbered—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and on up to two thousand. Twenty of these will be numbered in duplicate. If John Dinklesmeyer from Honnouth Junction gets button No. 244, he will immediately start to find the person wearing the duplicate of his button. It is just possible that Prue Skinner from Lambertville will be wearing another button the number 244. If John finds Prue both of them will be entitled to a prize. Whenever two people meet wearing buttons of the same number, they will both receive a handsome prize upon calling at the secretary's office on the fair grounds.

A list of prizes will be announced in the papers later. The numbers, will, of course, be kept secret. The Secretary has spoken to some of the merchants regarding Prize Day, and they all seem to bave the fever. Frank Gannett says he is going to give a $5.00 bottle of perfume to the lady with the number corresponding to the one in his window. The East Jordan Lumber Co. will give $5.00 worth of groceries to the person with the number the same as in their window. Stroebel Bros., C. C. Mack and others of our prominent merchants will adopt it in one way or another.

We don't know it to be a fact, but we have heard that Mrs. Jepson, our popular steam-boat lady is going to give an annual pass to the person delivering to her the badge bearing the number nearest to the number of passengers carried to the Fair from Charlevoix on Prize Day. Premium lists have been thoroughly distributed the past week; in case you haven't one, call at Sec'y Nicholas' office or The Herald and one will be cheerfully handed you.

WE WANT YOUR APPLES.

We have commenced packing and shipping apples and respectfully solicit the patronage of the farmers in this locality, assuring them of the highest market price. Call us up by phone—No. 206—for prices or call at our Warehouse.

or to "Coffee" with us because we know that when you once sample these matchless brands you will be a life-long customer for both. The strength and flavor of both account for their popularity among Tea and Coffee critics. And it does not take so large a quantity of either in order to produce a most satisfactory and cheering cup of Tea or Coffee.

East Jordan Furnishes More Teachers Than Any Other Town.

That East Jordan furnishes more school-teachers than any other town of like size is a rather broad statement out we herewith furnish the evidence. We are indebted to Com'r Milford for the list, and it does not include several who are outside of this section.

"A Royal Slave."

Among the many good plays which have appeared at the Loveday Opera House this season, none have been better than "A Royal Slave" which was the attraction last Saturday night. Walter Hubbell in the leading role—"Aquila"—proved himself an actor of no mean repute and he was supported by an able company. "A Royal Slave" has appeared here a number of times and is one of the few plays which theatre-goers do not tire of.

Yes, C. H. Whittington has the finest selection of Wall Paper to be found anywhere.

Think Carefully Decide Wisely Act Promptly

Values here have been touched with a live wire. Do not skip a word we have to say or you may skip a dollar.

Here are a few of the things that cannot help but interest the most fastidious dressers:

In Ladies' Wear we are sole agents for the well-known Jackson Corset Co.'s corsets.

A $1.50 Corset that hasn't an equal at the price

The J. C. C. Perfection.

For all-round corset quality, we know of no model that can compete with this at the price.

It is built on the very latest lines; moderately low bust, prettily rounded waist and shaped to give the now fashionable hipless figure.

The several lines of transverse goring run toward the center steel and accomplish the desired hip reduction.

All the materials embodied in this number are the best of their class. The supporters are strong and well made with clips that can't slip or tear the stockings.

USELESS PRESENTS FOR POPE

Embarrassing Gifts Made to the Vatican, Along with Many That Are of Great Value.

The occupant of the see of St. Peter is frequently the recipient of strange gifts.

Some time ago a present of lions arrived. These are fortunate animals, and the pope at considerable expense has had them secured in large dens, in which they can ramble at will. All they can desire is free run of the gardens.

Another remarkable gift, according to a Paris contemporary, was a colossal group in iron of St. X. driving back Attila from the city of Z. The names are purposely omitted because our contemporary does not wish to identify the diocese which in an inopportune moment of generosity forced upon his holiness this damnosa hereditas, which now reposes, covered with rust, in vatican gardens.

Such gifts innumerable are constantly arriving from all part of the world, and no place can be found for them among the marbles, the antiques and the paintings of Michael Angelo, Raphael and Pinturicchio in the palace of Bramante. Possibly the motor car will find a place beside the nameless saint, who turned back—the scourge of God from the unnamed city.

Arab Horses Live Longest.

A remarkable contrast in the working life of horses is called to mind by the international show now in progress at Olympia. An English thoroughbred seldom lives to a ripe old age; 23, however, is not an exceptional age for an Arab steed.

Although he cannot compete with the English or American thoroughbred for speed, there is no horse in the world like the Arab for endurance and all-round fitness. Lord Roberts rode the same Arab through all his campaigns, covering in 22 years a distance of some 50,000 miles.

For the last 3,000 years horses in Arabia have been inured to hardy usage and very scanty feeding, from earliest youth. Now they represent a splendid example of nature's hard rule—the survival of the fittest.

Breadth. Breadth is for the present a masculine quality, though at any moment the word may be flashed out from Paris that the styles have changed. What is a broad man, then? Briefly, a man who goes out of his way to agree with us, as distinguished from the bigot who goes out of his way to disagree with our neighbor; our neighbor being one of those fellows who believe a great many things which are not only not so, but are furthermore at variance with the best scientific thought.

Blessed are the broad, for they shall be a credit to themselves and a solace to us.

His Sons All Police Officers.

Mr. Joseph Smith, a Westmoreland (Eng.) farmer, whose death is announced, leaves six sons and two daughters. All the six sons are in the police force and are all over six feet high. One son—the tallest, six feet 3/4 inches—is the chief constable of Kendal, another an inspector at Millom, a third a subinspector in the Liverpool city force and the remaining three are constables at York, Liverpool and Langwathby (Cumberland).

Value of X-Ray Pictures.

From a medico-legal viewpoint X-ray pictures are now considered indispensable evidence in damage suits for bone and joint injuries. Of great value, undoubtedly, but they lack the certitude attributed to them by the legal profession and the laity. X-ray pictures (radiograms) can now be instantaneously snap-shotted in the hundredth part of a second with extremely powerful streams of X-rays.—New York Press.

Cap Denotes Matrimony.

In some parts of Germany the badge of a married woman consists of a little cap or hood, of which they are very proud, and "donning the cap" is a feature of the wedding day among the peasants of certain localities.

Heaviest Ship Afloat.

The heaviest ship afloat is the Rotterdam, a new Holland-American liner. Her gross tonnage is 25,000; she has 11 decks, and can accommodate 4,015 persons, passengers and crew. Her speed is 17 knots.

Few Rose to Prohibition.

Of the 25,000 women who have qualified for the law in the United States, less than forty have become advocates in the Federal Supreme court.

Giant Halibut.

A halibut weighing 400 pounds has been received by a Billingsgate (Eng.) firm.

Rich Chinese in Syndicate. Canton (China) merchants at home and abroad have formed a navigation association with $4,000,000 capital, to run steamers, open a bank and an insurance company.

Increase in World's Gold. The world's stock of gold money is practically 75 per cent. more than a decade ago.

Strong Anti-Tobacco League. The Salvation Army of Europe has an anti-tobacco league of 55,000 persons.

Savings Delight

Business Girl Reaps Benefit of Pennies

By ELIZABETH McCULLEN

HE START may be a small one, only 50 cents a week. But it is a start. And it is worth making. Perhaps the next year a dollar a week can be put away. And so in the course of time, though it is slow, up-hill work, $500 can be accumulated. With this for a foundation a girl can do something.

One girl when she had saved $600 built her own home. A small lot was secured in a suburb, a building and loan mortgage put up the house and to-day the house is hers almost clear. In a few years now she will have paid for it entirely. The monthly amount she paid the building and loan association is far less than she would have paid as rent for such a house. She has had the joy of living in her own home and fixing it as it suited her fancy and she now has a good investment.

Many a girl could do the same. Every city is surrounded with pretty suburban places. By a careful study of them, of their train and trolley facilities, by a comparison of valuations she can find a desirable lot at modest cost. A building and loan association will furnish the major part of the money for building the house. This girl had but $300 in cash to pay on the house. One should go carefully to make sure of a desirable location and of a house that will either rent or sell if the need comes, for one wants her money invested where she can get an adequate return for it.

Another business woman who had saved a few hundred and wanted to get more than the small per cent. the bank paid bought an inexpensive seashore lot and put up a simple little house. She gets her vacation there quite inexpensively and most enjoyably. And so far she has always been able to rent it for two or three months during the season at a profitable rate. She takes jolly little week-end parties down in the spring and fall and altogether gets quite as much pleasure as she does financial profit out of her venture.

To work for some special object puts a lot more zest in one's work. To see one's savings materialize makes saving a far more pleasant task than merely to hand so many dollars into a bank each week and have nothing more attractive to show for them than some figures in a bank book. This, of course, is the necessary start, and figures are enjoyable things to think about when one is sick and no salary coming in. But nothing quite equals the delight of treading the floors of your own home, which you have paid for from your savings or which you are paying for while you live in it and which you plan to make more beautiful as the months go by.

The first essential is to make the start. Make the start if it is only 25 or 50 cents a week.

Having had an unusually wide and varied experience in teaching foreigners, I wish the public to know what my experience has been relative to the Chinese. During the last year my pupils have numbered some 300 and I have had representatives of at least 20 different nationalities and of the white, yellow and black races. I can honestly say that none have been more satisfactory as to their deportment and application to studies than the Chinese. They are not brilliant, but patient and plodding, working hours to prepare any lessons assigned to them and never satisfied unless the result is perfect. They are quiet, attentive and orderly, never giving indication that they have any thought of us save as their teachers. They show appreciation of truly good work, frequently saying: "This is a good lesson," or "I like this lesson."

Chinese Patient, Plodding, Diligent

By MARIE GORMAN

I classify my pupils whenever possible, regardless of nationality, grading them according to their knowledge or lack of knowledge of English. They are given lessons to prepare and unless they really desire to learn the English language they very soon drop out, as they find we are there to teach them and for nothing else.

I never use individual work save when absolutely necessary, as it occasionally is with pupils who are working and who come to school at irregular hours. I do not believe the results are nearly as quick or as good as when the work is done in classes. But the teachers in the missions are very few of them trained teachers and have little knowledge of the science of teaching.

I do not believe any Chinese intelligent enough to desire to learn the English language will make advances to his teacher unless given considerable encouragement by her, as they are altogether too conservative and cautious. They have been taught from childhood to treat their teachers with every possible respect, as they have a theory that the teachers do much for their country, in that they educate the young and that well-taught boys will strengthen the nation.

Proper Wages for Mother

By J. J. McGRATH

How infrequently mother's devotion is unrecognized. Her incessant work is taken too often as a matter of course; it may be excusable in young people, but even husbands sometimes act in the same way. Mother notices this indifference, unintentional as it may be, and it makes her wonder why she should be so lightly valued. How is she paid in actual money? She receives a certain sum weekly or monthly and that is expected to cover all the supplies for the home, all repairs and renewals and frequently enough her own clothes and those of the smaller children.

She has no set sum for her own; father and the earning children expect to retain a proportion of their earnings for pocket money, but mother has to satisfy all demands and take what is left.

That this is a true picture will be admitted by those who ponder the home conditions of many families, and among those who doubt it there will be many who in after years will look back and say that perhaps they, even they, did not appreciate mother at her true worth.

Unselfish mothers are apt to make their children selfish by being too attentive to them. In their own interests the children should be made to pay mother's wages, pay them to her in money and affectionate service. The laborer is worthy of her hire, even mother! Father and the boys and girls should see to it that her position is not too hard and that she has a tidy fund of money that belongs to her. She usually does more work than any other member of the family.

BOY AERONAUT IN FOG STRANDED IN SWAMP

STRUGGLES THREE HOURS TO ESCAPE DROWNING AND DISCARDS MOST OF CLOTHING.

New York—Sailing through the air enveloped in an impenetrable fog so dense that he completely lost his bearings, Frank W. Goodale, the Toledo boy aeronaut, was stranded on the Jersey meadows the other afternoon and almost drowned in a marshy spot near Kingsland, where he and his machine landed.

Discarding his clothing and dismantling his machine, that progress might be easier, Goodale, though absolutely ignorant of his whereabouts, did heroic work for three hours and by sheer grit and energy managed to propel his flying machine several miles over marshlands and streams, until he eventually reached Kingsland, where he collapsed and was attended by a physician.

Goodale has been exhibiting at an amusement park for several weeks, and his engagement ended there on the day of his adventure. He was told to appear the next day at Hillside park, near Belleville, on the outskirts of Newark. Goodale determined to fly the eight miles between the two parks. He got away from the amusement park about 4:30 o'clock.

After five minutes of flight Goodale ran into a dense fog, and in the gloom lost his way. He directed his machine close to the earth, and found himself near Homestead, N. J., where he inquired of several men the direction of Newark. They shouted to him that he was headed in the right direction. He encountered dense gloom again and rightly determined that he was passing over the Jersey meadows.

The fog and dampness deflated the gas of Goodale's machine, and it began to sink. Then, without warning, the engine stopped and Goodale and his airship descended violently on the marsh land.

Goodale said afterwards that he sank in the mud and water up to his waist, and only by the exercise of all his strength was he able to save himself from drowning. He drew himself up on the airship, cast off his leggings, shoes and clothing until he was all but disrobed.

WHALE SWIMS OFF WITH BOAT

Newly Married Couple Are Rescued After Exciting Chase of Twenty Miles.

Seattle, Wash.—Mrs. and Mr. John Greenleaf, who has been spending their honeymoon living in a houseboat, were given a fast ride of 20 miles behind a young fin-back whale near Port Angeles.

The houseboat was erected on a float-made of eight logs, each 80 feet long and fully a foot thick. The boat was securely anchored in a little cove by two heavy cables. To prevent its breaking away in case of storm, chains were hung from the logs to anchors buried in the sandy beach.

It is believed the whale was playing at night in the cove and, coming up under the float, became tangled in the loose anchor chains. Unable to free himself, the big fish set the heavy float careening until the cables parted.

A little after sunrise fishermen saw the float and the houseboat swaying as if it were by an earthquake. Then the raft and all started for the ocean. The fishermen were unaware the boat was occupied until they saw the frightened groom and his bride clinging desperately to the sides of the house. They cried out for help and the fishermen headed their launch toward the rapidly disappearing float and followed at full speed.

About twenty miles out in the strait of Juan de Fuca the float came to a standstill. The fishermen soon came up and rescued Greenleaf and his wife.

The whale, barely thirty feet long, had become pinched between two logs and was dead.

IMPORTANCE OF CATTLE INDUSTRY IN ARGENTINA

Great Opportunities Offered for Enterprising Americans Who Have Sufficient Capital—By Herbert W. Mumford.

Generally speaking but few citizens of the United States appreciate the importance of Argentina as a cattle-raising country. It is not to be wondered at that North Americans, with vast areas of fertile soil only partially occupied and developed, have failed to study conditions in the southern republic, and consequently have almost universally lost sight of the great opportunities which have been presented there for beef production.

The ranches, or "estancias," as they are called, are extensive. Some idea can be gathered from the fact that in the province of Santa Fe 64 per cent.

of the area is owned in tracts of 12,500 acres or more.

Twenty to forty thousand acres owned by one man is by no means unusual. This, of course, means that cattle production is carried on an extensive scale.

All parts of Argentina are, of course, not equally well adapted to cattle raising, both on account of temperature and products of the land. It may be said, however, that there is no grain feeding of cattle in Argentina, even among ranchmen who produce well-bred cattle intended for the export trade. The native grasses, together with alfalfa, are the mainstay of the beef producer.

The best cattle country is located on the best arable land in the part of Argentina located in the temperate zone. This includes the province of Buenos Ayres, the southern half of Santa Fe and Cordoba and all of the provinces of Corrientes and Entre Rios.

The southern part of the republic, more frequently spoken of as Patagonia, is for the most part a dry, cold country, in many parts of which the soil is far from fertile, while the northern end of Argentina lies in the tropics and the climate is too hot for the successful rearing of well-bred cattle. Toward the west the country is mountainous and areas suitable for either agriculture or cattle raising are not large.

The number of beef cattle in Argentina at the present time is variously estimated at twenty-five to thirty million, while the sheep population is from seventy to a hundred million. The entire area of the Argentine republic is about one-third of the area of the United States, exclusive of Alaska. The cattle live out of doors throughout the year and are strangers to barns or even open sheds.

ADVENT OF THE SPINELESS CACTUS

Twenty-Five Varieties Collected and Introduced, Some of Which Are Quite Promising.

Those who have been eagerly awaiting the advent of the spineless cactus will be interested to know that it is already here, and that, too, without breeding or selection. The United States bureau of plant industry, reports David Griffiths in a recent bulletin of the department of agriculture, has been studying the matter since 1907, and has collected and introduced about twenty-five spineless species or varieties, ten or twelve of which are promising. It is preparing to send out free for experiment 7,000 to 9,000 cuttings, but only to growers who dwell in the area where the plant will live. It must be borne in mind also that a spineless cactus will not necessarily remain spineless. Unfavorable conditions, such as alkaline soil, heat or drought, may be expected to develop the tiny spines that most of them possess. Further:

"It is essential to remember that these plants cannot be put out to shift for themselves; they must be farmed like any other crop, though, owing to their resistance, they permit more latitude in their treatment than most other plants. The prickly pear still predominates.

There are in Argentina approximately 240,000,000 acres of arable land, three-fourths of which is a vast plain, a very large part of which is very fertile. There are ten or eleven million acres in the Argentine republic which are capable of irrigation. Some very extensive irrigation plants are already in operation.

The small population of Argentina, being only 5,500,000, and the very large production of beef and mutton, make it necessary to give considerable attention to the export trade. The mutton is all exported in a frozen state, while the beef goes as either chilled or frozen beef.

plants as they now exist are adapted to a region having considerable rainfall, but too irregularly distributed for ordinary crops. They are the camels of the vegetable world. They must have water, but they can get along for long periods without it. What is most needed in the spineless prickly pears to-day is greater hardiness, but this quality cannot be bred into them in two or three years. It might be possible by careful breeding and selection, in a decade or more to increase the hardiness of the rapid growing prickly pears so as to push the limit of their cultivation to the northward materially. But this will take much patient toil and many years of experimentation."

Keeping Away Flies. To keep flies from tormenting horses it is recommended to take two or three small handfuls of green walnut leaves upon which pour two or three quarts of soft, cold water, and allow it to stand over night. The next morning pour the whole in a kettle and boil for 15 minutes. When cold it will be fit for use. No more is required than to wet a sponge, and before a horse goes out of the stable let those parts which are most irritated be smeared over with the liquid.

Better burn all the old berry crates. Fruit in nice, clean boxes will bring a price enough better to pay for the loss of the old crates.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Tom Winthrop, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor. Blake, shunned on the boat because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was ailing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrop wasted his last match on a cigarette for which he was scored by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish. The trio started a ten mile hike for higher land. They attacked them. Blake was compelled to carry Miss Leslie on account of weariness. He taunted Winthrop. They entered the jungle. That night was passed roosting high in a tree. The next morning they descended to the open again. All three constructed huts to shield themselves from the sun. They then feasted on coconuts, the only procurable food. Miss Leslie showed a liking for Blake, but detected his roughness. Led by Blake they established a home in some cliffs. Blake found a fresh water spring. Miss Leslie faced an unpleasant situation. They planned their campaign. Blake recovered his surveyor's magnifying glass, thus insuring fire. He started a jungle fire, killing a large leopard and smothering several epus. In the leopard's cavern they built a small home. They gained the cliffs by burning the bottom of a tree until it fell against the heights. The trio secured eggs from the cliffs. Miss Leslie's white skirt was decorated upon as a signal. Miss Leslie made a dress from the leopard skin. Blake's efforts to kill antelopes failed.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

The one difficulty was to reach the lower branches. She could hardly touch them with her fingertips. But her barbaric costume must have inspired her. She listened for a moment, and hearing no sound to indicate the return of the men, clasped the upper side of the trunk with her hands and knees, and made an energetic attempt to climb. The posture was far from dignified, but the girl's eyes sparkled with satisfaction as she found herself slowly mounting.

When, flushed and breathless, she gained a foothold among the branches, she looked down at the ground, and permitted herself a merry little giggle such as she had not indulged in since leaving boarding-school. She had actually climbed a tree! She would show Mr. Blake that she was not so helpless as he fancied.

At the thought, she clambered on up, finding that the branches made convenient steps. She did not look back, and the screen of treetops beneath saved her from any sense of giddiness. As her head came above the level of the cliff, she peered through the foliage, and saw the signal-flag far over near the end of the headland. The big piece of white duck stood out bravely against the blue sky, all the more conspicuous for the flocks of frightened seafoam which wheeled above and around it.

Surprised that she did not see the men, Miss Leslie started to draw herself up over the cliff edge. She heard Winthrop's voice a few yards away to her left. A sudden realization that the Englishman might consider her exploit ill-bred caused her to sink back out of sight.

She was hesitating, whether to descend or to climb on up, when Winthrop's peevish whine was cut short by a loud and angry retort from Blake. Every word came to the girl's ears with the force of a blow.

"You do you? Well, I'd like to know where in hell you come in. She's not your sister, nor your mother, nor your aunt, and if she's your sweet heart, you've both been damned close-mouthed over it."

There was an irritable, rasping murmur from Winthrop, and again came Blake's loud retort. "Look here, young man, don't you forget you called me a cad once before. I can stand a good deal from a sick man; but I'll give it to you straight, you'd better cut that out. Call me a brute or a savage, if that'll let off your steam; but, understand, I'm none of your English bluffs."

Again Winthrop spoke, this time in a fretful whine.

Blake replied with less anger: "That's so; and I'm going to show you that I'm the real thing when it comes to being a sport. Give you my word, I'll make no move till you're through the fever and on your legs again. What I'll do then depends on my own sweet will, and don't you forget it. I'm not after her fortune. It's the lady herself that takes my fancy. Remember what I said to you when you called me a cad the other time. You had your turn aboard ship. Now I can do as I please; and that's what I'm going to do, if I have to kick you over the cliff end first, to shut off your pesky interference."

The girl crouched back into the withered foliage, dazed with terror. Again she heard Blake speak. He had dropped into a bitter sneer.

"No chance? It's no nerve, you mean. You could brain me, easy enough, any night—just walk up with a club when I'm asleep. Trouble is, you're like most other under dogs—there'd be no soup bones. So I guess I'm slated to stay boss of this colony—grand Poo Bah and Mikado, all in one. Understand? You mind your own business, and don't go to interfering with me any more!"

"Now, Don't Get Mad. Worst Thing in the World for Malaria."

Now, if you've stared enough at the lady's skirt—

The threat of discovery stung the girl to instant action. With almost frantic haste, she scrambled down to the lower branches, and sprang to the ground. She had never ventured such a leap even in childhood. She struck lightly but without proper balance, and pitched over sideways. Her hands chanced to alight upon the remnants of leopard skin. Great as was her fear, she stopped to gather all together in the edge of her skirt before darting up the cliff.

At the baobab she turned and gazed back along the cliff edge. Before she had time to draw a second breath, she caught a glimpse of Blake's palm-leaf hat, near the crown of the ladder tree. "O-o-h!—he didn't see me!" she murmured. Her frantic strength vanished, and a deathly sickness came upon her. She felt herself going, and sought to kneel to ease the fall.

She was roused from the swoon by Blake's resonant shout: "Hey, Miss Jenny! where are you? We've got your laundry on the pole in the shape!"

The girl's flaccid limbs grew tense, and her body quivered with a shudder of dread and loathing. Yet she set her little white teeth, and forced herself to rise and go out to face the men. Both met her look with a blank stare of consternation.

"What is it, Miss Genevieve?" cried Winthrop. "You're white as chalk!" "It's the fever!" growled Blake. "She's in the cold stage. Get a pot on. We'll—"

"No, no; it's not that! It's only—I've been frightened!"

"Frightened?"

"By a—a dreadful beast!"

"Beast!" repeated Blake, and his pale eyes flashed as he sprang across to where his bow and arrows and his club leaned against the baobab. "I'll have no beast nosing around my doorway! Must be that skulking lion I heard last night. I'll show him!" He caught up his weapons and stalked off down the cliff.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Winthrop; "the man really must be mad. Call him back, Miss Genevieve. If anything should happen to him—"

"If only there might!" gasped the girl.

"Why, what do you mean?"

She burst into a hysterical laugh. "Oh! oh! It's such a joke—such a joke! At least he's not a hyena—oh, no, a brave beast! Hear him shout! And he actually thinks it's a lion! But it isn't—it's himself! Oh, dear! oh, dear! what shall I do?"

"Miss Genevieve, what do you mean? Be calm, pray, be calm!"

"Calm!—when I heard what he said? Yes; I heard every word! In the top of the tree—"

"In the tree? Heavens! Miss—er—Miss Genevieve!" stammered Winthrop, his face paling. "Did you—did you hear all?"

"Everything—everything he said! What shall I do? I am so frightened! What shall I do?"

"Everything he said?" echoed Winthrop.

"You spoke too low for me to hear; but I'm sure you faced him like a gentleman—I must believe it of you—"

Winthrop drew in a deep breath. "Ah, yes; I did, Miss Genevieve—I assure you. The beast! Yet you see, the plight I am in. It is a nasty muddle—indeed it is! But what can I do? He is strong as a gorilla. Really, there is only one way—no doubt you heard him taunt me over it. I assure you I should not be afraid—but it would be so horrid—so cold-blooded. As a gentleman, you know—"

"No; it is not that!" broke in the girl. "He is right. Neither of us has the courage—even when he is asleep."

"My dear Miss Genevieve, this beast instinct to kill—"

"Yes; but think of him. If he is a beast, he is at least a brave one. While we—while we haven't the courage of rabbits. I thought you called yourself an English gentleman. Are you going to stand by, and not lift a finger?"

"Really, now, Miss Genevieve, to murder a man—"

"Self-defense is not a crime—self-preservation. If you have a spark of manhood—"

"My dear—"

"Poy Heaven's sake, if you can't do anything, at least keep still! Oh, I'm sure I shall go mad! If only I had been drowned!"

"Ah, yes, to be sure. But really now, what you ask is a good deal for a man to risk. The fellow might wake up and murder me! Should I take the risk, might I—er—expect some manifestation of your gratitude, Miss Genevieve?"

"Of course! of course! I should always—"

"I—ah—refer to the—the—bestowal of your hand."

"My hand? I— Would you bargain for my esteem? I thought you a gentleman!"

"To be sure—to be sure! Who says I am not? But all is fair in love and war, you know. Your choice is quite free. I take it, you will not consider his—er—proposals. But if you do not wish my aid, you have another way of escape—that is—at least other women have done it."

The girl gazed at him, her eyes dilating with horror as she realized his meaning.

"No, no; not that!" she gasped. "I want to live—I've a right to live! Why, I'm only just 22—"

"Hush!" cautioned Winthrop. "He's coming back. Be calm! There will be time until I get over this vile malaria. It may be that he himself will have the fever."

"He will not have the fever," replied the girl, in a hopeless tone, and she leaned back listlessly against the baobab, as Blake swung himself up, frowning and sullen, and flung his weapons from him.

"Bah!" he grumbled. "I told you that brute was a sneak. I've chased clean down to the pool and into the open, and not a smell of him. Must have hiked off into the tall grass the minute he heard me."

"If only he had gone off for good!" murmured Miss Leslie.

"Maybe he has; though you never can count on a sneak. Even you might be able to shoot him off next time; but, like as not, he'd come along when we were all out calling, and clean out our commissary. Guess I'll set to and run up a barricade down there where the gully is narrowest. There're shoals of dead thorn-bush to the right of the pool."

"Ah, yes; I fancy the vultures will be so vexed when they find your hedge in the way," remarked Winthrop.

"My! how smart we're getting!" retorted Blake. "Don't worry, though. We'll stow the stuff in Miss Jenny's boudoir, and I guess the birds'll be polite enough to keep out."

"I must say, Blake, I do not see why you should wish to drag us away from here."

"There's lots of things you don't see, Win, my b'y—jokes, for instance. But what could you expect?—you're English. Now, don't get mad. Worst thing in the world for malaria."

"One would fancy you could see that I am not angry. I've a splitting headache, and my back hurts. I am ill."

Blake looked him over critically, and nodded. "That's no lie, old man. You're entitled to a hospital check all right. Miss Jenny, we'll appoint you chief nurse. Make him comfortable as you can, and give him hot broth whenever he'll take it. You can do your sewing on the side. Whenever you need help, call on me. I'm going to begin that barricade."

CHAPTER XIV.

Fever and Fire and Fear.

By nightfall Winthrop was tossing and groaning on the bed of leaves which Miss Leslie had heaped beneath his canopy. Though not delirious, his high temperature, coupled with the pains which racked every nerve and bone in his body, rendered him light-headed. He would catch himself up in the midst of some rambling nonsense to inquire anxiously whether he had said anything silly or strange. On being reassured upon this, he would relax again, and, as likely as not, break into a babyish wail over his aches and pains.

Blake shook his head when he learned that the attack had not been preceded by a chill.

"Guess he's in for a hot time," he said. "There is more'n one kind of malarial fever. Some are a whole lot like typhus."

"Typhus? What is that?" asked Miss Leslie.

"Sort of rapid fire, double action typhoid. Not that I think Win's got it—only malaria. What gets me is that we've only been here these few days, and yet it looks like he's got the continuous, no-chill kind."

"Then you think he will be very ill?"

"Well, I guess he'll think so. It ought to run out in a week or ten days, though. We've had good water, and it usually takes time for malaria to soak in deep. Now, don't worry, Miss-Jenny. It'll do him no good, and you a lot of harm. Take things easy as you can, for you've got to keep up your strength. If you don't, you'll be down yourself before Win is up."

"I'll while he is helpless and unable— Oh, no; that cannot be! I must not give way to the fever until—"

"Don't worry. You'll likely stave it off for a couple of weeks or so. You're lively yet, and that's a good sign. I knew Win was in for it when he began to groan and loaf and do the baby act. I haven't much use for dudes in general, and English dudes in particular; but I'll admit that, while Win's soft enough in spots, he's not all mush and milk."

"Thank you, Mr. Blake."

"You're welcome. I couldn't say less, seeing that Win can't speak for himself. Now you tumble in and get a good sleep. I'll go on as night-nurse, and work at the barricade same time. You're not going to do any night-nursing. I can gather the thorn-bush in the afternoons, and pile it up at night."

In the morning Miss Leslie found that Blake had built a substantial canopy over the invalid, in place of the first ramshackle structure.

"It's best for him to be out in the air," he explained; "so I fixed this up to keep off the dew. But whenever it rains, we'll have to tote him inside."

"Ah, yes; to be sure. How is he?" murmured the girl.

"He's about the same this morning. But he got a little sleep. Keep him dosed with all the hot broth he'll take. And say, rouse me out at noon. I've had my breakfast. Now—I'll have a snooze. So long!"

He nodded, and crawled under the shade of the nearest bush, too drowsy to observe her look of dismay.

TROUBLE IN ROYAL PALACE.

Tidings Borne by Amateur Actor Sufficient to Lead Hearers to Expect the Worst.

The Shakespeare club of New Orleans used to give amateur theatrical performances that were distinguished for the local prominence of the actors. Once a social celebrity, with a gorgeous costume, as one of the lords in waiting had only four words to say: "The queen has swooned." As he stepped forward his friends applauded vociferously. Bowing his thanks, he faced the king and said, in a high-pitched voice: "The swoon has queened."

There was a roar of laughter; but he waited patiently, and made another attempt:

"The swoon has queened."

Again the walls trembled and the stage manager said in a voice which could be heard all over the house: "Come off, you doggoned fool!"

But the ambitious amateur refused to surrender, and in a rasping falsetto, as he was assisted off the stage, he screamed: "The con has swooned."—Success Magazine.

Had Strange Idea of Fun.

Two strangers alighting from a train were injured in Washington, Pa., in a panic which ensued when a large brindle dog ran through the streets with flecks of foam flying from his wide-open mouth. The canine made its appearance in a residence section of town and, pursued by a howling mob, hurling stones and clubs, ran clear through the business section. As it passed the station, where a train was pulling in, two men stepping from a car were caught in the mad whirl and hurled to the ground and trampled. As soon as they could escape the men again boarded the train. The dog was pursued by the mob two miles, when it took refuge under a porch. George Eagleson secured a long pole and went after it, and it was not long until he discovered that the supposed mad dog was merely a harmless brute which had been lathered about the mouth with soap suds. The perpetrators of the practical joke have so far escaped.

A Realist.
"I am a great believer in realism," remarked the poet.

"Yes?" queried with a rising inflection, thereby giving him the desired opening.

"I sometimes carry my ideas of realism to a ridiculous extreme," continued the poet.

"Indeed!" we exclaimed inane, somewhat impatient to reach the point of his witicism.

"Yes," continued the poet, "the other day I wrote a sonnet to the gas company and purposely made the meter defective."

At this point we fainted.

He Needed It.

This happened on the Lake Shore flyer not long ago. A man ruffled in from the car behind, evidently in great agitation, and said: "Has anybody in the car any whisky? A woman in the car behind has fainted. Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork and put the bottle to his lips. With a long satisfied sigh, he handed it back and remarked: "That did me a lot of good. I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint."—ATRONAUT.

Prepared for the Worst.
"How long had your wife's first husband been dead when you married her?"

"About eight months."

"Only eight months? Don't you think she was in a good deal of a hurry?"

"Oh, I don't know. We had been engaged for nearly two years."

DISCOURAGED WOMEN.

A Word of Hope for Despairing Ones.

Kidney trouble makes weak, weary, worn women. Backache, hip pains, dizziness, headaches, nervousness, languor, urinary troubles make women suffer untold misery. Ailing kidneys are the cause. Cure them, Mrs. S. D. Ellison, N. Broadway, Lamar, Mo., says: "Kidney trouble wore me down till I had to take to bed. I had terrible pains in my body and limbs and the urine was annoying and full of sediment. I got worse and doctors failed to help. I was discouraged. Doan's Kidney Pills brought quick relief and a final cure and now I am in the best of health."

Aid Fight Against Tuberculosis.
At the recent meeting of the National Association of Bill Posters, held in Atlanta, Ga., it was decided to donate to the campaign against tuberculosis $1,200,000 worth of publicity. The bill posters in all parts of the United States and Canada will fill the vacant spaces on their 3,500 bill boards with large posters illustrating the ways to prevent and cure consumption. The Poster Printers' association has also granted $200,000 worth of printing and paper for this work. This entire campaign of billboard publicity will be conducted under the direction of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in co-operation with the National Bill Posters' association.

Of North Star Tent No. 130, K. O. M. M.

Whereas:—It has pleased the Almighty to remove from our tent, our brother Sir Kt., John L. Crawford, one of the charter members and first officers of our tent; a member who paid many assessments for the protection of the widows, orphans, and dependents, in keeping with his obligation, taken many years ago. Therefore be it

Resolved:—That we drape the charter of our Tent, which our departed brother has lived up to and served so faithfully for so many years, and that we keep it draped for sixty days, Be it further.

Resolved:—That this tent does deeply and sincerely sympathize with the widow and family of the deceased brother, and that we shall ever endeavor to keep fresh in our minds that portion of our obligation which binds us to protect and care for the widows and orphans. Be it further

Resolved:—That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Tent and also a copy of the same sent to the family of the deceased.

ANSWERS EVERY CALL.

East Jordan People Have Found That This Is True.

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench. A little cause may hurt the kidneys. Spells of backache often follow. Or some irregularity of the urine. A certain remedy for such attacks. A medicine that answers every call. Is Doan's Kidney Pills; a true specific.

Many East Jordan People rely on it. Here is East Jordan proof.

Mortimer Tyner, Main St., East Mich., says: "I know from personal experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are a remedy of merit. My back troubled me for some time, and there was a dull, heavy pain across my loins. I believe that the constant standing on my feet was the cause of my trouble. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice, I procured a box from Gannett Co.'s drug store and I found them to be just as represented. They removed my aches and pains and did away with the kidney difficulty. I consider this remedy worthy of my endorsement."

ON THE MAP

Where Western Michigan Development Bureau Would Place This Region.

AIMS TO UNITE WESTERN MICHIGAN IN BIG CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT.

The development of the resources of Western Michigan is, broadly, the object of an organization recently formed and includes within its proposed field of especial activity that portion of Western Michigan lying in the counties of Muskegon, Newaygo, Oceana, Lake, Mason, Manistee, Wexford, Benzie, Lelanau, Grand Traverse, Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmett.

This organization has been named the Western Michigan Development Bureau.

It is organized for the purpose of thoroughly advertising the resources of this section to the land-hungry people of the whole country, and by united effort to induce the settlement of the unoccupied lands, to build up the towns and cities, and last but not least to awaken the dwellers in this region to the wonderful opportunities of the country in which they live. Co-operation is the keynote of the Development Bureau.

In point of co-operative effort the Western Michigan Development Bureau takes pattern after the work of similar organizations in the far west. For instance, the Oregon Development League includes 82 separate organizations, all using the same letter-heads, all working toward one end. The result has been an intense enthusiasm on the part of the people in that region. They have a real affection for the community in which they live—a power which has made itself felt in the most remote corners of the United States.

One of the best evidences of this enthusiasm is that in many instances communities having a population of from 500 to 10,000 have raised at a single meeting from $500 to $12,000 to support the Oregon Development League. On several occasions more than $8,000 have been subscribed, payable in monthly amounts, enabling those communities to employ skilled advertisers, who had no other business than to do the executive work and attend to the advertising of the commercial bodies.

It is hardly too much to say that the most valuable result of these trained advertisers has manifested itself in the optimistic spirit, the local patriotism and intense enthusiasm of the people of Oregon for their state. There has been created among the people of that region a confidence in their natural resources such that no visitor fails to catch their contagious spirit of belief in Oregon and its opportunities.

This is the first object of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. To awaken in the people of western Michigan a realization of the wonderful opportunities which exist in this part of the state. The Development Bureau has the avowed intention of reminding the people that western Michigan was famous as a fruit region before Oregon was ever heard of; it will call to the attention of people living here the fact, which hustling westerners have made the public forget, namely that Western Michigan has at its very doors the markets to reach which Oregon must ship thousands of miles. It will point out that land can be bought in Western Michigan for one-tenth the cost of the same acreage in the far west, and that it will produce a far greater return on the investment than the western land. In short, that the people of Oregon, Washington, California, and other western states have made the people of this region believe that the west has something better to offer than is to be found in Michigan even when a moment's consideration suffices to convince of larger opportunities prevailing here. To correct popular delusion in the minds of our own people, to awaken them to their wonderful opportunity is the primary object of the Western Michigan Development Bureau.

It will make it its object to run homeseekers' excursions and otherwise colonize this part of the state. This increase in population will benefit alike city and country regions.

First of all, this will result in an increased valuation of real estate. This will of course be a direct profit to the present holders. Next it will result in a lowered rate of taxation. For it is a uniform experience that taxes are lower in well-settled and highly developed regions. Next increased population will result in improved transportation facilities. It is an obvious fact that with an increase of traffic there will be an improved service by the railroads and boat lines now traversing western Michigan. Besides other transportation companies will be inevitably attracted to this field by the greater volume of business.

For example, there is at present but one electric interurban railroad in the thirteen counties united in the Western Michigan Development Bureau. With the present population it is hardly likely that more could profitably exist, but with the growth in the number of inhabitants there is no question but other interurban lines will be attracted here.

The resort interests will also be stimulated by the Western Michigan Development Bureau. Owing to its favorable location along the shore of the lake western Michigan may rightfully look to become a big summer playground for the superheated regions of the middle west and south. This profitable business is hardly more than in its infancy and can be only brought to its true importance by a co-operative effort such as is planned by the Development Bureau.

Let Himself Out. Luigi Lablache, the singer, was a giant in size. "One of his boots," says a biographer, "would make a good portmanteau. One of his gloves would clothe an infant." There is a humorous exaggeration in the statement, but the fact remains that he was certainly an enormous man. It is recorded of him that he was very generous and also a lover of jokes. At one time he was staying in Paris at the same hotel with Tom Thumb. An English tourist, who had been making strenuous efforts to meet the latter, one day burst into the great basso's apartment. Seeing the giant before him, he hesitated and apologized. "I was looking," he said, "for Tom Thumb."

"I am he," answered Lablache in his deepest tones. The Englishman was taken aback. He must have been a trusting soul.

"But," said he, "you were very tiny when I saw you yesterday."

"Yes," said Lablache. "That is how I have to appear, but when I get home to my rooms I let myself out and enjoy myself."

The Englishman fled.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics. Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, tonight. Heroin probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 1c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion; or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

WEST MICHIGAN STATE FAIR'S GREAT CATTLE SHOW.

Noted for its cattle shows ever since its organization, the West Michigan State Fair of 1909, to be held in Grand Rapids, Sept. 13 to 17, will excel all past exhibitions on the Comstock park fair grounds. The premium list, augmented last year to $4,800, helped to attract the highest class of entries, and the special awards offered by the Holstein-Friesian Breeders' and the American Shorthorn Breeders' associations still further enhanced the attractiveness of exhibits in this department.

The special dairy tests, which have been features of the past three West Michigan State Fairs, will be repeated this year. These will be conducted under the supervision of the state dairy and food department. For the purpose of encouraging economical production and business methods $75 is offered, in four prizes of $30, $20, $15 and $10. The tests will be conducted during the entire period of the fair. Special rates on all railroads will be offered to patrons of the fair.

FROM SAVAGERY to MINIONS of the LAW

BY WILL P. SHAFTER

THE mutiny of 30 members of the Philippine constabulary at Davao has brought to notice that splendid organization, founded on the remnants of Aguinaldo's insurrectionary army in the early days of the American occupation. For the last eight years, they have given to the islands a season of law and order and to various tribes of our newer domain a respect for the majesty of the great nation of whose army they form, though indirectly, an important part.

PART OF COMPANY A, 2ND DIST.—ONE YEAR IN SERVICE

The mutiny, in itself, amounted to little. One American planter was killed by the bullets of the mutineers, and there were two or three men wounded. Then the loyal members of the constabulary, with the backing of small detachments of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, chased the would-be revolutionaries back into the fastnesses of the Davao hills and, within 48 hours of the first notice of the difficulty, reached headquarters the first internal serious trouble since the organization of the corps was at an end.

SAME RECRUITS ON DAY OF ENLISTMENT

The Philippine constabulary was organized just nine years ago. At the conclusion of the insurrection of 1899-1900 the military governor of the Philippines, Gen. Arthur MacArthur, issued the following order:

"In order to encourage among the people the idea of self-protection against robbers and roving bands of criminals, with which the country abounds, department commanders are authorized to arm the local police in towns where such action, in their judgment, would be prudent and expedient. For this purpose requisitions may be submitted to the division headquarters for caliber .45 Colt's revolvers and an adequate supply of ammunition. This arm will be replaced at an early date by a more suitable weapon.

"For the better performance of the duties contemplated it is desired that the organization of police be systematized and, if possible, the scope of action extended so as to make these constabulary bodies, by means of mounted detachments, conservators of the peace and safety of districts, instead of confining their operations to areas limited by the boundaries of towns and barracks.

"Department commanders are empowered to enforce the provisions of this order by appropriate instructions."

By the autumn of 1900 some organization of the constabulary had been effected and in February, 1901, the Philippine government had, in addition to the army and the native scouts then on duty, an embryo of the present efficient constabulary force numbering 2,571 men.

The newly organized body had an amusing complexity of personnel and diversity of armament. It included every race and every color, every language and every degree of civilization, from cultured Castilians of the Malacoa drive to the dusky savage of Mindanao and Negros. The catalogue of their weapons was fully as mixed as their racial affiliations.

The organization grew in numbers and in popularity. At first the ill-disposed were prone to take chances with the little "coppers." They had seen them as soldiers of the army of Aguinaldo driven from point to point by the husky soldiers of the United States until they had become imbued with the idea that running was their chief and only accomplishment. It took but a few brushes with them to show that they had gained something of Uncle Sam's determination to do things in his own way and when the way of the preserver of order and the native disorganizer ran counter something had to drop, and drop hard. Gradually the good work of the constabulary became understood and with the spread of their reputation for keeping things straight, the minor disorders of the urban and agricultural communities became fewer and fewer.

When at the last pacification of the civilized and semi-civilized portions of the islands became an established fact the constabulary took up the work of teaching the hill tribes, the head-hunters and professional ladrones that the plying of their various forms of nefarious business or pleasure anywhere near a constabulary post was a highly unwholesome pastime. When the illmen and others got enough of going out on trouble hunts the constabulary organized little trips on their own account and went back into the woods to drag out the real bad men and teach them the art of behaving themselves even under their own vines and banana trees.

One of the most remarkable things about the organization of the constabulary has been their extreme amenability to discipline and their readiness to assimilate western ideas of conduct and deportment by the members of the force. In the illustrations will be noticed photographs of a detachment of Moro and Subano recruits. These pictures of the same group of men were taken only four months apart. In the first the barefoot, disheveled, turbaned band had just entered the service as the veriest of rookies. In the second picture, straight, trim, clean, well-drilled and set up fit to make even a regular look to his laurels, they are presented again. In a third of a year they have been converted from semi-savagery and are representative members of one of the best disciplined bodies of troops in the world.

The Philippines have been divided into districts by the constabulary and each of these districts—there are five in all—contains about a thousand of these soldier policemen. The force numbers, in addition to the sub-district of Palawan and the Constabulary school at Intramuros, Manila, something over 5,000.

They are under the command of Brig.-Gen. Henry H. Bandholtz, who holds the title of director. There is an assistant director, two inspectors and a staff of about a dozen officers attached to the headquarters at Manila. There is a director for each of the general districts of the archipelago and these districts in turn are divided into subdistricts and minor stations, some of the smaller stations having only half a dozen policemen in charge.

In the early days of the force the officers of commissioned rank were all Americans. A large percentage, a majority, in fact, are still natives of the States, but there is always opportunity for the ambitious and educated Filipino to reach a promotion if by diligence, fidelity and good hard work he desires to accomplish it.

The force at first appeared in a great variety of uniforms, everything from the cast-off blue and white drill of their former conquerors, the Spaniards, to the rusty blue flannel shirts and khaki breeches of the American volunteers, who put Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo out of business. To-day they are all uniformed alike and their appearance is distinctly natty. Khaki for service and general wear, with shoulder cords and facings of artillery red, caps or campaign hats, in accordance with the season, wool puttees and comfortable canvas shoes complete the rig.

For dress occasions the officers wear snowy duck and the enlisted men are privileged to provide themselves with a similar costume for fiesta days and Sundays if they so desire. The Mahometan members of the organization wear the tarboosh or fez instead of the cap, as may be seen in the picture of the Moro detachment, which is known officially as Company A, Fifth district constabulary. The fez is of crimson felt and the tassel which hangs to the eyebrows is of yellow silk.

A portion of the force is mounted. It is the hope of the Philippine government that, as the islands become more and more orderly and the necessity for the retention of regular cavalry has passed, they will be able to make nearly the whole constabulary a mounted organization. Horses or the little Philippine ponies have been used most of the time, one of the pictures shows what the men have been put to at times of flood, the carabo, the unique Philippine beast of burden, having been used as a cavalry horse on more than one occasion. When on land his progress is perhaps a trifle slow, but he is a mud horse of high degree, a splendid wader and an even better swimmer. Some of the Americans who have had occasion to use the carabo as a means of locomotion say that they would be almost willing to attempt the crossing of the Pacific astride his bony shoulders.

CURIOSITIES OF BIRD-NESTING

An authority says: "It is not at all an uncommon thing to find the first and sometimes second egg of a young bird abnormally small, but I came across a case some few years ago which was quite unique. In April, 1901, I was hunting for a few clutches of the carrion crow in some small woods, which were their favorite nesting places in that district. I walked right through the first wood without success, but on leaving it I saw, perched on a tree some distance away, two crows. Guessing that I had disturbed them and that they were watching me, I walked on for some distance, still keeping my eye on them. Sure enough, as soon as they were satisfied that I was leaving, one of them made off straight for a large oak tree at the extreme end of the wood I had just left. On returning I discovered the nest and the reason I had missed it. It was insular government can use as it will and when or wherever it is needed the Philippine constabulary stand comparable to any irregular force in the world. They have much in common with the Indian police maintained for much similar purposes by the viceregal government of British India, but they are more the soldier than even that famous body of conservers of the law. Their discipline has improved with rapid strides and has kept pace with their efficiency and usefulness.

The constabulary maintains the finest military band in the islands. It was their band which participated in the inauguration of President Taft and which later toured the United States, giving concerts.

Could She?
"When women get to voting," said the man, "they will have a great many more calls than they now have to put their hands in their pockets and give money to further important causes."
The woman looked thoughtful. "I'm always willing, of course," she said, "to give money for a good cause, but as for putting my hand in my pocket—"

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA.
Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Bleeding, Torturing Humor—Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.
In Despair; Cured by Cuticura.

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings. "In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

A Tale of Man's Deceit.
"Were you out gambling last night?" she sternly demanded.
"I will tell you the truth," he said. "I was at a seance. We sat around the table, holding hands."
"He did not think it necessary to explain they were poker hands."
"Did the spirits come?" she asked, in breathless awe.
"The spirits were there," he replied gravely.
"Which were there."
"Did they give low cries?" she whispered.
"No," he replied. "I should describe them more as high howls."

And Ma Fainted.
"Why did she refuse you?" she asked her son, with fine scorn.
"Well," the boy replied between his sobs, "she objects to our family. She says pa's a loafer, that you're too fat and that everybody laughs at Dayse Mayme because she's a fool and talks about nothing but the greatness of her family." (Chauncey threw water in his mother's face, but at three o'clock this afternoon she was still in a swoon, with four doctors working on her.)—Atchison (Kan.) Globe

A Financial Epigram.
"H. H. Rogers," said a New York broker, "always advised young men to get hold of capital. He used to point out to them that without capital a man could do nothing, nothing. He used to pack this truth into a very neat epigram.
"Fortune," he used to say, can't knock at the door of a man who has no house."

BAD DREAMS
Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.
"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and were drinking Postum, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions.
"I was astonished at the flavor and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could wear every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug—ordinary coffee.
"People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of it would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned.
"A young lady friend of ours had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit coffee and began the use of Postum and is now perfectly well. Yours for health."

WESTERN MICHIGAN DEVELOPMENT BUREAU TO PUSH PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The people of eleven counties in Michigan are pinning their faith to the Western Michigan Development Bureau. They expect it to do great things for the northwestern part of the lower peninsula. It must be understood, however, that the bureau has strong competitors, that other regions in other states are aggressively reaching out after new settlers and new industries. An article appearing in a recent issue of the Advertiser's Almanack will give an idea of just how strong is that competition. The article in question is in part as follows:

"Hardly any part of our country has escaped the contagious public spirit which aims to make 'welcome to our city' mean something really substantial. New England, the South, the Southwest, the Pacific Coast, the Northwest and the inland Empire have used publicity in magazines and newspapers successfully to call attention to their individual advantages.

"This inland Empire is mentioned last, as would be natural with us eastern folk; but it is strictly a case of the last being first, after all.

"Spokane, Washington, is the capital and source of energy of the inland Empire. They call it the best exploited inland city in the United States, and it has now set out to potholize the empire as a whole. This latter comprises about 150,000 square miles of eastern Washington, northern Idaho, western Montana, and north-eastern Oregon, and reaches over a little mite, as New Englanders would say, into southeastern British Columbia. The publicity work has been done with the support of the Chamber of Commerce and the 150,000 Club. About $60,000 were spent in 1908. They had 35,000 inquiries, placed about 25,000 settlers in the empire, and added sixty new manufacturing plants to the district. Bank clearings increased $6,372,460; manufacturing output increased 10 per cent, in spite of bad times; 100,000 acres of land were added to the irrigated belts; 500 miles of railroad were built, and in developing one distinct industry of the empire, apple raising, 7,000,000 trees were set out. Further to emphasize this apple industry, the National Apple Show was incorporated with $100,000 capital, and the first show, last December, was most successful. The inland Empire is expected to spend $100,000 in advertising itself this year.

"In Idaho, twenty-one cities and towns have associated themselves in the League of Southern Idaho Commercial Clubs, with headquarters at Boise, and are conducting an extensive campaign.

"In the Northwest coast country, Seattle and Portland are advertising extensively. Seattle issued building permits, representing a value of $13,777,329 in 1908, being between 30 per cent and 40 per cent better than in 1907. In Portland, the Oregon Development League has its headquarters. It is made up of 82 separate municipal organizations, with paid secretaries in fifteen cities. Skilled advertisers are employed, and a highly constructed campaign is being followed out. Mr. Tom Richardson, the manager of the Portland Commercial Club, said that through advertising customers had been attracted to the state of Oregon who had increased the sale of dairy products—to name one item only—from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 in the past five years. In 1908 Portland's building permits represented a value of $10,441,951, giving it rank as the eighth American city in building in that year.

"Reaching up into Canada, perhaps the most notable success in city advertising is found. Winnipeg, through its Development and Industrial Bureau, has conducted an advertising campaign for two years. In that time the bureau used 32,772 lines of advertising, much of it in magazines. They report 10,771 incoming communications, 2,374 actual requests for information from manufacturers; 33 manufacturing establishments brought to Winnipeg, and 151 industrial and commercial companies incorporated with total capital of $28,616,000. Winnipeg's bank clearings increased more rapidly than those of any Canadian city.

"Vancouver Island, B. C., also got the spirit, and spent $4,000 for publicity with such results that in 1909 it will spend $12,000.

"Coming back to our own country, we find the following:

"The South has been an energetic advertiser. It has been said that 'more people have been advertised in Texas' in the last few years than in any other state in the Union, beginning with the famous campaign of Dallas. They received 22,000 inquiries in nine months, secured eleven strong industries the first year, sold $2,000,000 worth of farms within a radius of twenty-five miles of Dallas, and twenty-five or thirty outside business concerns, attracted by the advertising, opened branch houses in the city. Manufacturers are still being found for Dallas every little while. Houston, Texas, has a campaign now running in magazines and newspapers. The Matagorda water district in Texas is also being advertised. Other Texas cities which are using publicity are Fort Worth, San Antonio and Galveston.

"The state of Maine, seeing the advantages of its wonderful coast line and its bountiful harvests of potatoes and apples, has also taken notice of the power of publicity and in its legislature a bill was introduced a few days ago, calling for a Commissioner of Publicity at $1,800 a year, and $10,000 a year for 'advertisements to be placed in standard publications of national circulation,' and 'to collect and disseminate all possible information about the state and its resources.'

"In England, too, the municipal public spirit is abroad in the land. A bill was presented in parliament not long ago, permitting certain English towns to advertise to a designated extent. A larger step has now been suggested, which is for the English government to advertise along imperial lines, and try to push British products in every part of the world."

For the Western Michigan Development Bureau to compete successfully in this great game of development it must have the united support of every citizen. The local region has as fair opportunities as any of the places enumerated by the Almanack, but it certainly will take aggressive support to herald the advantages of western Michigan to the world.

WHY WE SHOULD DEVELOP AGRICULTURALLY.

Frank Smith, who has a fruit farm on the Peninsula near Mapleton, has been doing a little figuring so as to discover if possible what profits, if any, there are in systematic and thorough fruit farming, says the Traverse City Eagle. The past season he kept track of the expense of cultivating, trimming, spraying and picking 13 Crawford peach trees. His records show that this cost was $16. The fruit from these 13 trees sold for $71.50, which makes the net profit for the 13 trees $55.45. This is a profit of $4.24 a tree. As these trees are set so that there would be 109 to the acre the net profits from an acre of such trees would be $473.06. Mr. Smith is of the opinion that these figures prove that there are much larger profits in peach growing than potato raising.

Three crab apple trees on Mr. Smith's farm gave ten barrels of apples which were sold for $39. The expenses of getting the crop grown, harvested and marketed are given by Mr. Smith as follows:

Cultivating	$.75
Spraying75
Picking	5.00
Barrels	3.00
Cartage	1.50
Commission	2.30

Total

The difference between the selling price and the expenses is $21.10. This is a net profit of $7.03 a tree.

A single Alexander tree on Mr. Smith's farm produced 12 barrels of apples at a total cost as shown below:

Cultivating and spraying	$ 1.00
Picking	1.50
Barrels	4.20
Packing	1.00
Cartage	1.50
Commission	4.20

Total

These apples sold for $3.50 a barrel, or a total of $42, continues the Eagle. The clear profit on this tree was, therefore, $28.30. Allowing for 50 apple trees to the acre, the profits, had Mr. Smith had an acre set to Alexander trees and each tree had done as well as the one for which the record is given, would have been $1,415.

Surely these figures prove, if they prove anything, that there is about as much money in fruit raising in the Grand Traverse region as in operating a bank. A net return of $1,415 an acre a year, ought to be good enough for anybody. Suppose a man had 40 acres of such Alexander trees! His net profits for the season would have been $56,600.

The moral to all this is that there is big money to be made in intelligent fruit growing in the Grand Traverse region, concludes the Eagle, and the quicker that we get our lands to producing fancy fruit the quicker Traverse City will become the commercial center for one of the most prosperous and progressive sections of the entire state.

Every thoughtful man in western Michigan knows that the conclusions of The Eagle about the Grand Traverse region are equally applicable to the entire portion of the state. In the big world outside a contrary impression has grown up, and to correct this error and to spread abroad a knowledge of the real opportunities to be found here is the object of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. The bureau deserves the support of every man who wishes to see western Michigan grow.

A wise man once showed his boys the strength of a bundle of sticks tied together and their weakness when separated, meaning thereby that his sons were powerful just so long as they worked together in harmony. Similarly the counties of Western Michigan united in such an organization as the Western Michigan Development Bureau can produce results impossible to all of the counties working separately.

The Portland Chamber of Commerce stands at the head of the Oregon Development League which is a union of individual organizations in the various cities of that state. Similarly the Western Michigan Development Bureau would unite the efforts and promote the co-operation of the various towns of Western Michigan.

Boards of Trade and similar organizations must unite their efforts, in order to produce the largest results. The Western Michigan Development Bureau is a unification of the individuals and the organizations that wish to promote the varied advantages and develop the manifold resources of Western Michigan.

The owners of real estate will be the greatest single beneficiaries of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. It is only fair therefore that the owners of real estate should support the organization by a regular sum spread on the tax roll.

Nobody connected with the Western Michigan Development Bureau gets one cent of salary.

He Had Another Day.

Pat McGuire was an inveterate drinker. For many years he had been addicted to the use of liquor, and, although he signed numerous pledges, he was unable to break himself from the habit. Finally, after being arrested several times for being drunk and disorderly, Pat told the magistrate of his unsuccessful fight against liquor and asked the magistrate to help him keep sober.

The magistrate was interested and promised to aid him all he could.

"Pat," said he, "I shall help you as much as I can. So the next time you become intoxicated I want you to report to me on the following day."

Pat promised.

About two weeks later Pat staggered into the magistrate's office with a load he should have made two trips for.

"Morning, magistrate," said he.

"Wash drunk yesterday."

"Drunk yesterday!" roared the magistrate. "Why, you loafer, you're drunk now!"

"Thash ahrl," said Pat, "but I don't have to report thish drunk until tomorrow."

Fate.

The sky is clouded, the rocks are bare. The spray of the tempest is white in the air. The winds are out with the waves at play. And I shall not tempt the sea today.

The trail is narrow, the wood is dim. The mather clings to the arling limb. And the lion's whelps are abroad at play. And I shall not join in the chase today.

But the ship sailed safely over the sea, And the hunters came from the chase in glee. And the town that was built upon a rock Was swallowed up in the earthquake shock.

—Dret Harte.

The Policeman's Reason.

"Is it true that many of these Mormons have half a dozen wives each?" asked a visitor to Salt Lake City of a policeman who was stationed near the temple, says the Saturday Evening Post.

"Sure," said the policeman.

"Well, will you kindly tell me why on earth a man wants to marry half a dozen wives?"

"I dunno," said the policeman, "unless he thinks that maybe he can get a good one out of the bunch."
