STOP TALKING

PINE BARRENS.

Too Much Good Land Yet Uncultivated in This Locality.

Something having been said about moving the headquarters of the Western Michigan Development Bureau from Traverse City to Baldwin the Charlevoix Sentinel enters a vigorous protest against it while the Petoskey News does not care a rap where it is. To the Journal it seems that it ought to, and does make a difference. Traverse City is in the midst of a prosperous and rapidly growing community while Baldwin is in a reverse position. It is located on the pine plains, a very uninviting place to say the least. Now, speaking of the pine plains, it is about time the Development Bureau cut loose from the "Pine barrens" idea and quit making so many excuses for the belt of unproductive territory which cuts Northern Michigan off from the southern part. As long as there is good, first class productive soil in Northern Michigan to be had for five and six dollars an acre it is idle to try to steer settlers on "pine barrens," as they are called. There are thousands of acres of the best land in the state now being thrown on the market in this locality because the timber is being removed. Why should a man attempt to eke out an existence on pine land when he can as easily secure a good productive farm in a better location. When the good land is gone will be time enough to take up the poor territory. When the Development Bureau quits talking "pine barrens" and shows the people our good land they will have made a big start in the right direction. So much being said and written about "pine barrens" leads people to believe that Northern Michigan has nothing better.—Boyo Journal.

Politics Warming up Again.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 13.—Active political matters, as far as the governorship has been concerned, have been held in abeyance for several weeks, but they have again burst forth and in a far more pronounced way than many of the friends of the rival candidates expected. Chase S. Osborne, the upper peninsula candidate has started in by questioning Chief Justice Robert M. Montgomery's right to be a candidate and still hold his office and calls upon the justice to withdraw his candidacy or quit the bench. Justice Montgomery evidently has no such intentions if the part rejoinder hurled at the upper peninsula candidate is a standard for judgment. However, there are two other candidates and it is a safe bet that both of them will not stand idly by and let these two take up all the free advertising space. Both of them want just a few more votes than the others and the people are promised a royal fight over the office before primary election time.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Mayme Scroggie, class of '08, and Miss Katherine LePeer, class of '09, visited the normal class Wednesday, January 5. Miss Scroggie is teaching at Wailoon Lake, and Miss LePeer is teaching near Vanderbilt. Commissioner J. H. Faust Makes Hit.

"Faust" as presented by the Dougherty Bros. Co. last night was well worth the price of admission. No one was expecting to see a $1.50 production of Goethe's wonderful German drama, neither were they expecting to see what was enacted by the Doughertys and their support. The stage settings were good and the acting first class. Mattie Dougherty as Marguerite wept real tears, and laughed whole-souled hearty laughter as the occasion demanded, and throughout the performance her acting could not be criticized. In witnessing the part of the Mephisto as played by Jim Dougherty, those who are best acquainted with the "second Adam" were so far deceived as to think they were looking at the original character. With the aid of lime light and fire works a very vivid picture of Hades was painted which sent cold creeps up many a vertebra, and as a whole it was an excellent production.—From Eau Claire Daily Leader.

Traveler Had Journeyed Far, But Evidently There Were Things He Had Not Heard Of.

Shakespeare's dictum: "Home-keeping youths have ever homely wits," seems to be qualified by the appended story, quoted from a writer in the Richmond News-Leader:

"Echoes," remarked the great traveler, "are queer things. They're queer for two reasons—their cause, and the vast difference in their sounds. Science has explained why there are echoes, but it can't tell why one should reverberate with bass tones in response to a shrill tenor yell, while another reverses this, or responds naturally."

"I reckon you've heard a number of echoes?" hazarded the young man, whose farthest trip from home was a distance of 39 1/2 miles.

"Rather! I recall one in Switzerland; the echo rolled for just four seconds—no more, no less. Then there's one in the Pyrenees that jumps six times; first loud and harsh, then low and soft, then loud again and so on. There's one in the western part of Germany that holds a full sentence of seven words before releasing a sound, thus rivaling a certain echo in Afghanistan, which doesn't repeat until a minute and a half have elapsed."

"I'd like to hear a few of them," said the homesteading chap, with a fine show of wistfulness.

"Of course you would," responded the traveler, encouragingly. "There are few things in the world more interesting than a good echo."

"You're right," said the other thoughtfully. "I ain't ever been but a few miles from home, but I've heard one of the strangest echoes that ever was, anywhere."

"Up in the little range o' hills 20 miles yonder is a ravine. If you stand at one end of it an' yell: 'Jones,' the echo comes back: 'Jones? Jones? What Jones?'"

The great traveler looked mustily into space and was silent.

Testing of a Mountain Gun.

I was chatting at the club with some service men one day last week when the question of trials with new guns cropped up. One of my friends had had to do with the ordnance committee some years ago. He told us of a small light gun which had been submitted to the war office. The inventor claimed that it could not only be carried intact upon a mule, but that it could be fired from the animal's back. A day for the demonstration was appointed, and the committee attended. A mule, with the gun on him, was led up in the line of targets. The committee stood round, the gun was loaded and would have been discharged had not some one suggested that it was safer to fire it, for first time, with a time fuse. This suggestion was adopted and a 15-second fuse attached to the gun. The gun was pointed toward the butts and they all stood away. Left to his own devices, the mule appeared more interested in some thistles than in the trial, and slowly turned itself round, with the muzzle pointing at the lookers-on. There was a yell of horror, and the committee flung themselves flat on the ground. No one ever knew where the shot went, but the recoil roared the unsuspecting mule flat on its back—London Telegraph.

Daughter's Room.

Every mother should, where it is possible, permit her daughters to furnish their rooms according to their own taste. Only in this way a girl can find an opportunity to express her own individuality.

Even where it is not convenient to allow the daughter to do the furnishing mothers can encourage the selection of good photographs and ornaments with which to decorate. Some of the pleasantest rooms in many homes are those in which the daughters of the house have been allowed to show their individual taste. The care and arrangement of such apartments have proved sources of continual pleasure and development to the girls.

Keep Them Employed.

Always keep the children employed if you want to keep them out of mischief. If you don't find them something to do, he it ever so trifling, they will probably find an occupation for themselves, very likely the one thing you don't want them to do.

No matter what is being done it should be done to the best of the child's ability, and neatness and care should always be praised and encouraged. Children love to be employed, and next to an occupation they await immediate recognition for the work done and praise for successful effort. Encouragement will not hurt the normal child.

Cotton Crop Worth Much Money.

Last year's American cotton crop was valued at $63,000,000, and if the value of the seed be added, the aggregate revenue from the crop was very close up to $80,000,000. If the present prices for the staple hold, the value of this year's cotton crop including the seed will mount up very near to $1,000,000,000, at any rate to more than $900,000,000.—New York Commercial.

Business Qualities

Girls that Lack Staying Power

By G. WELLESLEY BRABBIT

LOTS of girls have brilliant qualities—they know a good deal, and so they work well up to a certain point, but they lack staying power.

They can't stand by a proposition and see it through to the finish. They work well when things go smoothly, but they are fair-weather sailors. The least storm arising paralyzes their energies.

In the same office there were two girls who started work the same week. The first one was enthusiastically referred to by her employer as "a find." She was eager-eyed, buoyant and as quick to strive under approval as quicksilver to rise with a flap below it.

The click-click of the machines seemed to act as a stimulant to her. How novel and inspiring it all was—this great, new game of business! More absorbing than any drama. When others were around to tell her what to do and watch her she put through her work with zest and ability.

But one day the boss staid away; there was no one to approve and commend her, and the work simply didn't get done. Neglected tasks piled up—as they have a way of doing. Then along came a crowded rush week when the whole office was asked to stay overtime. But Miss Quicksilver had other plans and could not think of breaking them.

The other girl, who took up her work and finished it that night, was just a quiet, little mouse. The manager had barely noticed her before that occasion. She did her work quietly and with no effervescence of brilliancy, but with a certain bulldog persistency. When her work was finally done and the report in the manager's hands he was looking at her with a new interest. For he had learned that among all his girls there was one who wasn't a wonder, but who had staying power.

That girl is now his private secretary, handling the most important correspondence. Miss Quicksilver is still copying form letters in the outer office at $8 a week and likely to stay at that figure. She wonders why at times and speaks bitterly of "pull," but she will never recognize herself if she reads this, and nobody is likely to tell her.

Faults of Our Technical Training Schools

By JAMES T. SMITH

Citing as a fact that many of the foremen of our New England mills and factories are of European training, it is asked, "What is wrong with American technical training, and what are its most serious defects?" The condition is mainly due to the fact that until the Lowell textile school was established and developed there was no provision here for complete, scientific technical training for the superintendencies of our mills.

An act authorizing the incorporation of the trustees of the Lowell textile school was secured and the school opened to pupils February 1, 1897. The corps of instructors was drawn mainly from the graduates of our higher polytechnic schools—largely from the Massachusetts institute—and these were familiar with instruction methods which we could hardly expect to improve upon. With these were associated some experts from the mills and shops. The school is a business school and not an eleemosynary institute.

These great institutions should have more liberal annual provision from the state treasury for maintenance. A boarding house or hotel could not depend for its menu on the supplies sent in by its friends. Grants to such institutions should be regarded as investments, to be returned many fold to the commonwealth, and not as expenditures.

Little Tots Sent to School Too Soon

By DR. LEONARD B. NILAND

Instead of sending little tots of six years to school, as is the custom all over this country, it were far better to never let them darken the door of a place of learning until the age of eight.

The child at six is entirely too young to undertake the systematic curriculum of the public schools; it matters not how short the hours of attendance.

I have been studying this matter for years and have come to what I deem the sure conclusion that if the beginning of scholastic life is delayed until the boy or girl has reached eight years the results are far better. When they are started at such a tender age there is bound to be physical harm done, nor is there enough intellectual gain to warrant the other course.

A bright boy who does not begin school until he is eight, by the time he is 10 will be fully the mental equal of the comrade who made his start at six, while in point of health the one whose schooling was deferred should be far in the lead.

Loath to Think Them Thieves

By CAPT. THOMAS R. BRACKEN
Chicago Detective

Of all baffling things in the world thefts committed in a household where no outsider could have entered take the lead.

I have often been summoned in such cases and they present big difficulties. First and foremost, the one who has had his property purloined is loath to suspect that his own son or brother or other near relative might have taken it, and usually the loser is ready to fight the detective who insinuates such a solution.

I have more than once had the unpleasant duty of proving to such people that those near to them by blood ties were indeed the culprits. A man whose brother-in-law robbed him of $1,500 could not be convinced until the thief was made to confess his rascality.

Such affairs are more numerous than one would imagine, but the pride of the party despoiled usually operates to prevent notoriety and a prosecution in the courts.

FOR THE PUBLIC

New Formula Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Hoarseness in Five Hours.

Much is being done in these days to stop the ravages of consumption, but probably nothing has been so effective as teaching the public how to break up a cold and cure coughs, bronchitis, tonsillitis, etc., with simple home-mixed medicine. A laxative cough syrup, free from whiskey is the prime need. A cough indicates inflammation and congestion and these in turn are due to an excess of waste and poisons in the system. A tonic laxative cough syrup rids the system of congestion, while relieving the painful coughing. Get the following and mix at home: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less, according to age. Cut this out and save it for some friend.

SORE EYES CURED.

Eye-Balls and Lids Became Terribly Inflamed—Was Unable to Go About—All Other Treatments Failed, But Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About two years ago my eyes got in such a condition that I was unable to go about. They were terribly inflamed, both the balls and lids. I tried home remedies without relief. Then I decided to go to our family physician, but he didn't help them. Then I tried two more of our most prominent physicians, but my eyes grew continually worse. At this time a friend of mine advised me to try Cuticura Ointment, and after using it about one week my eyes were considerably improved, and in two weeks they were almost well. They have never given me any trouble since and I am now sixty-five years old. I shall always praise Cuticura. G. B. Halsey, Mouth of Wilson, Va., Apr. 4, 1908." Potter Drug & Chem. Pathos Out of Place in Schools.

In an address at a teacher's institute Miss Martha Sherwood said that sad and pathetic stories should have no place in the public schools. She declared the pupils' great need is humorous stories and the kind that make children roll on the ground with laughter. "Anything to make them laugh, and laugh loudly," she said. "It makes them grow, puts sunshine into their lives and develops contented men and women."

Song has wielded a strange power in human history; it seduces men from their homes to the field, it consoles those they leave behind, it voices the moods of the lover, the cynic, the drunkard, the puritan, the maiden, and the grandam; cowherds and scholars, hussars and children, all, all. There are songs about nearly every imaginable thing on earth, except the writing and the reading of articles.—Rupert Hughes, in Smith's.

ADAPTABILITY OF PEACH TO SOIL AND CLIMATE

For Years Propagation Was Almost Monopoly of State of New Jersey—Fruit Is Considered Luxury of Season.

Peach Pits for Planting.

The peach, which is supposed to be a native of Persia and China, was brought from Persia into Italy by the Romans, and soon found its way into Britain and France, and is supposed to have been brought to this country about 1680 by the settlers.

In its adaptability to the soil and climate of this country the peach has as wide a range as any other fruit and the fruit is considered the greatest luxury of its season, writes E. S. Black in Rural New Yorker. New Jersey had the distinction for years of being one of the greatest peach-growing states in the country, and old men have told me of the immense crops that they have seen grown on the then virgin soil, and which often had to be made into peach brandy, as the markets were glutted with the fruit and transportation facilities were few and far to reach. Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, New York, California and all the western states looked to New Jersey for a supply of peach trees. Nurserymen in other states soon found it profitable to grow the trees, and many budding from New Jersey found profitable employment among them, so that now the growing of peach trees, as with other nursery stock, is not confined to any section, and a tree grown in one section is just as good as that grown in another, if it was started from as good a seed grown in healthy, clean soil and conditions, and budded with a healthy bud, and labeled true to name.

In the illustration Fig. 1 shows seed washed out of shell; these would sprout in a few days; 2, coming through shell; 3, roots started out; 4, Atcomac county seed; 5, North Carolina-Tennessee seed; 7, twin seed. In the south the seed was sown thickly in nursery rows in the fall, and the following spring came up more or less irregularly, and was budded in August and September. Trees grown in this way in the south, when taken up to plant in the orchard, were as a rule devoid of fibrous roots, and only a straight or fan root, with one or two coarse side roots, which made them unpopular with the planters.

Fall planting and leaving them undisturbed in the nursery row was the reason assigned for the lack of fibrous or lateral roots.

The New Jersey nurserymen thought that the winters of this section were too severe; or the constant freezing and thawing would heave the pits out of the nursery row, and to avoid the poor root system in particular of the fall-planted seed, avoided the fall system of planting altogether, and adopted the bedding system—putting the pits into a bed about four feet wide and extending it according to quantity of seed bedded.

The seed was put in the beds from five to eight inches deep, and some sand or soil mixed with them, then covered over about four inches deep with sand or soil and left until they sprouted in the spring.

Incubators and Brooders.

Incubators and brooders cost something; it pays to put them away when no longer needed. They should be put away clean and in a dry, clean place; then, when needed, they will be ready for use and more apt to give good results. Disease germs lurk in the brooder that is put away without a thorough cleansing and disinfecting. Some of the new brooders are so constructed they can be easily taken apart to clean or put away.

Examine the Harness.

If it is a good plan to examine the harness every time the team is hitched up, a horse can be hurt and the use of him lost for several days or even months by working him in an ill-fitting harness. Less danger from run-aways, too.

HOW TO SELL GOOD VEGETABLES

Prepare Product with Same Care that Fruits Receive—Farmer Will Soon Have Trade No One Can Take Away.

The following good advice to market gardeners is taken from the Minnesota Horticulturist:

"If you are located near a city where you can market produce from the wagon, you will find that if you prepare vegetables with the same care that you do fruits, and be honest all the way down to the bottom of the basket, you will have a trade that no one can take from you, and your produce will bring a premium over the average market. The same rule holds true if you are shipping to other markets. A packet rightly packed is half sold, and is an invitation to buy another. It is always advisable, before planting your crop, to know to some extent where and how you will dispose of it. Make all preparation before the time of harvest. What might be serious losses are often avoided by looking ahead.

"To some, a good outlet for some vegetables is found in the canning factories. While prices paid by these factories are not nearly so inviting as those received from other sources, yet there is some advantage in growing crops for them. If the factories are near at hand not much care will be needed in packing or handling the crop. The main point being to produce the greatest bulk at the least expense. Very little is needed in the way of packages, and many items of expense are saved. To be profitable the acreage should be as large as possible, so that when the gathering comes it will require steady hauling to the factories. In this way the extra help can be fully employed. There will be no loss of time or crops in having to stop and hunt for help when needed, or take chances on getting them just when wanted."

Autos for Hauling Milk.

At a recent western dairymen's convention, according to a newspaper report, producers were present from five states tributary to the Elgin and Wisconsin creamery districts. Of those attending 112 were asked as to the use of automobiles; 30 of these owned automobiles and used them constantly in business, mainly in marketing cream. Several farmers said they utilized the power to operate separators.

HANDY FOWL CATCHING DEVICE

A handy fowl catcher has been devised by a Georgia poultryman, by which a long piece of heavy wire is fastened to a broom handle with screws or by binding with a finer wire. A long hook is bent on the extended end of the heavy wire, allowing only a small space on the hook part. The fowl is caught by the leg. This device can be used where fowls are in a yard or coop that is too large to make it possible to reach them with the hand.

Have a place for the hand tools, The saw, axe, hammer, screw driver, wrench, etc., should be well kept to give best service. "A place for every thing and everything in its place," that is the motto to tie to.

Ladies' Equity Notes.

The local convention of the Ladies' Society convened on Tuesday at the pleasant home of Mrs. John Schroeder when the beautiful rooms were thrown open for the reception of the Equity ladies, of which a good number were out. A fine dinner was served and convention called to order at 1:00 p.m. Officers of the day were: Mrs. Howey, Pres.; Miss Elsie Mathews, Sec'y; Mrs. Thompson, Treas. Committee reported, and committees to report on different lines of work at the next local convention were named. New business taken up and plans laid for a flower carnival by the society. Some reports were given on plans for halls for the locals.

Communications were received from the president and secretary of the Michigan Women's Federation of Clubs, requesting the L. S. of Detroit to join their club. There are in this club 195 society. This plan was looked on as a good move and was referred to the locals to be voted on and reported at next convention. On motion the next convention will be held at Mrs. John Murphy's on the second Tuesday in April.

A GOOD REASON,

East Jordan People Can Tell You Why It Is So.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure the cause of disease, and that is why the cures are always lasting. This remedy strengthens and tones up the kidneys, helping them to drive out of the body the liquid poisons that cause backache, headache and distressing kidney and urinary complaints. East Jordan people testify to permanent cures. Anton Walstead, Garfield and Fourth St., East Jordan, Mich., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as they have been of greater benefit to me than any other kidney medicine I have ever taken. A few years ago I was laid up for about a month with kidney trouble and a lame back. The kidney secretions were very unnatural and contained a sediment. The contents of four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Gannett Co.'s drug store, completely cured me and I have had no symptoms of kidney trouble since. Other members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar difficulties and in each case, the best of results have been received."

There is no Quinine, nothing harsh or sickening in Preventics. These little Candy-Cold Cure Tablets act as by magic. A few hours—and your threatening Cold is broken. Candy-like in taste. Preventics please the children—and they break the feverishness, always. And least of all is the economy. A large box—48 Preventics—25 cents. Ask your druggist. He knows! Sold by James Gidley.

Probably the greatest coffee substitute yet produced is that now known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. It actually goes a third farther than all others, and besides it is "made in a minute." No tedious boiling is at all necessary. Pure, toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc. have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderfully satisfying, true genuine coffee flavor and taste. And not a grain of real coffee is used, 100 cups, 25c. Sold by G. L. Sherman & Son.

Saving Himself.
An Irishman who was repairing a chimney on a housetop fell from the roof and luckily hit several clotheslines that broke his fall until he landed uninjured on a wire about twenty feet from the ground. After he had struggled there for a few moments the man deliberately let go and fell with a heavy bump on the ground. Another workman ran and picked him up and asked, "That the devil did ye let go for, you bluntherin' blockhead?"
"Faith," was the reply, "I was afraid the down'd wire would break."

The Game of Life.
This is a game of whist. From unseen sources the cards are shuffled and the hands are dealt.
Blind are our efforts to control the forces. That, though unseen, are no less strongly felt.
I do not like the way the cards are shuffled. But yet I like the game and want to play.
And through the long, long night will I, unruffled, play what I get until the break of day.
—Eugene F. Ware.

One Enough.
A Chinese missionary, a lady, was taking tea with a mandarin's eight wives. The Chinese ladies examined her clothing, her hair, her teeth, and so on, but her feet especially amazed them.
"Why," one cried, "you can walk and run as well as a man!"
"Yes, to be sure!" said the missionary.
"Can you ride a horse and swim too?"
"Yes."
"Then you must be as strong as a man!"
"I am."
"And you wouldn't let a man beat you, not even if he was your husband, would you?"
"Indeed, I wouldn't!" said the missionary.
The mandarin's eight wives looked at one another, nodding their heads. Then the oldest said softly:
"Now I understand why the foreign devil never has more than one wife. He is afraid."

Wonderful.
A German university doctor, desiring to see a bird catcher exercise his employment, accompanied him to the field. As soon as he saw the birds he hallowed in Latin:
"There they are!"
The birds took the alarm. The sportsman, indignant at the absurdity of the professor, told him of it in very plain terms.
"My good friend," exclaimed the doctor in great astonishment, "who would have imagined that birds would understand Latin?"

QUICK TO LEARN.

The Timid Young Bride Coached by Her Husband.
A young bride who belonged to a charity club and sometimes had to go out alone after dark was very much afraid of being stopped and robbed. Her husband disliked to provide her with a revolver, but he bought a punching bag and showed her how to use her fists and where to place the most telling blow in case of molestation.
"Below the belt, mind you," he advised her—"below the belt. Such a blow if properly planted will make a man sorry quicker than anything. If any one steps out in front of you your course will be easy. If he comes up behind you swing round suddenly and strike out hard. The robber will repent of his evil ways in a hurry."
That night was the bride's late evening, and she happened to be coming up the street just in front of her husband when he saw her, and the spirit of mischief took possession of him.
"Wonder if she'd really do as I told her or if her little fists would hurt any one?" he pondered.
Two seconds later he found out. Working up behind his wife, he laid a heavy hand upon her shoulder. He had no time in which to say anything, and she made no effort in that direction. She simply obeyed his instructions to the letter, swinging round with a suddenness which completely disconcerted him, and delivered a blow that made all the rest of his predictions come true.
Then she fled home with the speed and energy of a frightened deer, not even waiting to cast a single glance at the discomfited man who had, as she supposed, endeavored to rob her. She passed the remainder of the evening in alternately weeping out her nervousness upon her husband's shoulder and wondering why he looked so pale.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.
Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.
The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.
IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.
The many and varied symptoms of woman's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. The installing of the new officers of Stevens Post G. A. R. and the Women's Relief Corps on Saturday last, was a successful and pleasant day spent. The officers of the Post were installed by L. C. Madison, past commander. Then came the dinner when thirty-five did justice to an excellent menu served in the dining room. Again the sound of the gavel was heard and the work of installing the officers of the Corps by past president Lasira Kenyon. The officers' drill which is a pretty feature of the work was the first followed by singing. "Marching Through Georgia," Miss Ottilie Warden, newly elected musician, at the organ. Then the officers were installed and seated in their respective places. The president for the year 1910, Mrs. Eliza Swafford, took charge, making a short but enthusiastic and encouraging speech which was heartily applauded. For the good of the order a collection was taken for the benefit of the women's annex at the Soldiers' Home, Grand Rapids, to help pay for a piano for the pleasure of the inmates, and to use for the many entertainments given by the city's local talent. A birthday league of Post and Corps was then organized. It is to be a social affair and meets once in three months. The day's pleasure closed with games.

THE DIPLOMATS' BUSIEST DAY

By WALDON FAYCETT

MARQUIS DE VILLALOBAR, THE NEW SPANISH MINISTER

THE first day of the year is decidedly the busiest day of the twelvemonth for the foreign diplomats stationed in America. The odd part of it is that the manifold duties which make January 1st the most crowded interval on the calendar are almost wholly in the nature of social obligations rather than business tasks. Moreover, the responsibilities of this busy day rest equally heavy upon the envoys of the various foreign powers—that is, the ambassadors and ministers—and upon the secretaries, counselors and attaches who make up the official staffs of those dignitaries. Even the women of the official foreign colony—the wives and daughters of the diplomats of high and low degree—share in the feverish activity of the dawning year. Indeed, their participation begins weeks in advance with frequent visits to the dressmakers, for, one and all, these fair foreigners must have striking new gowns for the momentous occasion.

The explanation of this display of energy on the part of a class of people who ordinarily lead the most leisurely existence imaginable is found in the fact that New Year's day of each year marks the opening of the official social season at Washington. It is a day of receiving and calling and dining (all in the most formal way), for everybody in national official circles from the president down to the least important public official, but the social merry-go-round spins at a more lively gait for the diplomats than for any of the other participants in Uncle Sam's great annual dress parade. Not only do they have to go more different places in carrying out the day's program, but they have to do more dressing than any of the other celebrities, not even excepting the high officers of the United States army and navy, who don their full dress uniforms for this occasion.

Indeed, it is the chore of getting logged out in their gaudiest raiment that compels the diplomats to arise somewhat earlier than usual on New Year morning. Official etiquette prescribes that each foreign representative shall appear in full diplomatic uniform or court dress on this significant occasion. Now he it known, it is no slight undertaking to put on such garb. The average diplomat, accustomed as he is to fastidious dressing, finds it pretty nearly as formidable a job as the average American workman or farmer regards the donning of a dress suit. The diplomat's viewpoint will be better appreciated when it is explained that not a few of these costly broadcloth uniforms are so heavily encrusted with gold lace and other ornaments that they are well nigh stiff enough to stand alone. It is a twentieth century coat of armor, so to speak. In many instances high boots are an item of the court dress and usually a heavy helmet or fur turban and a long cloak that reaches to the feet are included in the costume. Finally, the diplomat, of any standing, covers the entire front of his coat with the glittering insignia of royal orders and jeweled decorations—each several times as large as the ordinary badge and adding in the aggregate, considerable weight to the trappings of state.

With the time-consuming parade of dressing out of the way, the diplomats, more vigorously garbed than any operative chorus, are ready for the first formal function of the day. This is the president's reception at the White House. The foreigners, all of whom have carriages or automobiles (rented for this busy day, if they do not already possess them), must leave home for the presidential mansion about 10:30 o'clock, for they are to have the honor of being the first persons received by the president after he has greeted his cabinet, and they must be in their duly assigned places in the waiting line of the presidential party at 11 o'clock sharp, descends the grand stairway and takes station in the Blue parlor for the reception. Hard and fast rules must be observed as to the order in which the diplomats file past the president. There are two divisions. First the ambassadors, each accompanied by all the members of his staff and their wives, and then the ministers, each similarly attended. Places in each division are assigned in accordance with the length of time each envoy has represented his government at Washington. That is, statesmen who have been here for years take precedence over the newcomers.

At the head of the line walks the ambassador who by virtue of the most lengthy service in Washington is the dean of the diplomatic corps. This post of prestige is now held by Baron Mayor des Planches of Italy. The foreigners are introduced to the president by the secretary of state, who has the best of his cabinet colleagues in that he is thus temporarily in the limelight. After the White House reception the diplomats return home for a few minutes' rest, and then a little before 12 o'clock they set out for the residence of the secretary of state. Here, at noon, an elaborate repast is served. The average American citizen would declare it a luncheon, but in social-diplomatic usage it is a breakfast. Considerably more than 200 persons are expected at this breakfast, so that it can be seen that it taxes the house-keeping arrangements even in a mansion such as the $150,000 dwelling of Philander Knox. Then, too, the same importance attaches as at the White House, to who goes first, so that servants have to be carefully drilled and the utmost care exercised lest some lesser diplomat receive more honor than is his due while some greater luminary is correspondingly slighted. The entire afternoon of New Year's day the diplomats devote to making ceremonial calls. Almost all the prominent hostesses in Washington, except the wife of the president, hold receptions on this eventful afternoon. Most of the diplomats go first to the home of the vice-president, then "down the line" of cabinet homes in the order of their official standing; after which they pay their respects at the residence of the speaker of the house of representatives, and then follows indiscriminate calling upon the wives of senators, representatives, army and navy officers and other official hostesses who are keeping open house. Everywhere they meet other diplomats and public officials of all grades, for calling is general at the seat of government on the first day of the year. In accordance with the Yankee idea, only the men of the American households go calling on New Year's afternoon, but the diplomats are in almost every instance accompanied by the ladies of their households. It is past sundown when this round of calling is concluded, but that does not end the day for the tired diplomats. Most of them have been invited to the ceremonial dinners that, in great numbers, close the day in Washington, hence they must hurry home and change to evening attire in order to greet yet another hostess before 8 o'clock.

A RUSKIN STORY

In 1858, when Ruskin was in his fortieth year, he was asked by a friend to give some lessons in drawing to a child named Rose La Touche—whose name indeed was French, but whose family were Irish. There sprang up between Ruskin and this young girl a very charming friendship, which, of course, at the time could be nothing but a friendship. They wrote each other letters and exchanged drawings and then for awhile they did not meet. Ten years passed by before they saw each other. Meanwhile the child whom he had remembered as a blue-eyed, saucy, clever little blonde with ripe, red lips and hair like fine spun gold, had become a very lovely young

BARON MAJOR DES PLANCHES, DEAN OF THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS CITY OF 4000 B. C. FOUND

The vestiges of a city 6,000 years old have been found in Babylonia by the French expedition which has been at work for several years on the site of the Roman Susa, the Shushan of the Bible and later the capital of the Emperors Darius and Artaxerxes.

According to details furnished to the Jewish World, a mound marking the site of the city has been excavated by M. de Morgan and was found to mark the site of the ancient Elamite acropolis of the city. The excavations have produced most astonishing results. Here the explorer found superimposed, one above the other, the remains of three cities, the oldest dating back to B. C. 4000, and below these the signs of older settlements of prehistoric ages.

The recent discoveries show that far more than a thousand years prior to B. C. 1800 the city was occupied by the Babylonians, and that most of the kings of that country set up their monuments in it. When the powerful Semitic dynasty of Babylonian kings contemporary with the age of Abraham was overthrown, the Elamites regained their independence and retained it until B. C. 619, when the city was sacked by Assyrian king of Assyria, who destroyed the palaces and temples.

Explorations show that the chief feature of the ancient city, as of all those of the ancient east, was the temple of the city god, in this case the god Susinak, which stood upon the acropolis. An exploration of the foundations revealed the records of Gudea, king of Chaldea, B. C. 2800. Fortunately, considerable information as to the nature of the sacred edifice and its precincts is preserved by an interesting monument, which was discovered in the ruins.

In the center of the model are the figures of two nude men, one holding a water jar. These, no doubt, are the king and priest performing the ceremonies of lustration, or ceremonial purification, which are a great feature of the oriental temples and frequently mentioned in the religious inscriptions.

Primitive Mills in Brazil. Vice-Consul De Young, writing from Santos, calls attention to the small corn grinding machines in Brazil. In the interior of Brazil a primitive method of producing meal by pounding instead of grinding is practiced. The instrument known as a "mojollo" works automatically, and consists of a tree trunk balanced on the bank of a stream, one end of the trunk being hollowed out to form a large cup, while the other end is in the form of a pestle. Water filling the cup depresses that end of the log, whereupon the water runs out and the other end falls back to its original position, the pestle striking the corn. Some modern corn grinders have recently been introduced, but there is a good field for a very small and inexpensive grinder to take the place of the "mojollo" in the interior, where flour mills are rare and each family grinds its own corn.

There's a divorce. There's a divorce. 'Tis a very sad affair. An onion is at the bottom of it. Of yore hubby was fond of onions. He ate, and ate, and wife stood it. Then he fell in love with a festive maiden. No more onions for him, much to his wife's surprise. The more she thought of it, the more she wondered at the change. Not only did he desert the odorous onions—presently he deserted altogether.

How Minnie Shadowed H. Sylvester Jones

By MARY E. HOLLAND

(Copyright, 1920, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A quiet, unobtrusive looking automobile drew up before a third-floor detective agency on a certain side street of downtown New York. A heavily veiled woman descended, spoke a few whispered words to the chauffeur, and made her way to the grimed door, on whose glass panels appeared the legend: "Sharp & Son, Private Detective Agency."

"Do you handle divorce cases?" she inquired, bluntly.

The brisk, nervous man before her swept his eyes over her quietly gowned figure.

"That depends upon the character of the case," he rejoined, cautiously.

The veiled woman took a quick step toward him. "I wish evidence that will procure me separation from my husband. Can you furnish it?"

The brisk man pondered. "Have you reason to believe that your husband is unfaithful?"

"On the contrary, I have every reason to believe that he is not."

The brisk man pondered again. "You are getting us a difficult problem, my dear woman. Such cases, you must know, involve heavy expenditure. I may say a very heavy expenditure."

He paused as he darted another shrewd glance toward the veiled client before him.

"Will you name an estimate of that expense?" she asked, quietly.

"Certainly; we could not conduct a case under $5,000."

The woman drew a pensive purse

"I WANT YOU TO GET ACCQUAINTED TO H. SYLVESTER JONES"

from her cloak and counted out ten yellow-backed bills.

"Here is $1,000. If you will bring me evidence that will secure a divorce, I will increase it to $10,000."

The brisk man smoothed the bills caressingly. "And who is your husband, madam?"

The veiled woman hesitated and then pronounced a name that brought a low, involuntary whistle from the other's lips. It was that of one of the best known men of Wall street.

The detective gazed after the departing figure of his client, with puckered brows. But he did not realize until a week's "shadowing" of H. Sylvester Jones had proved ineffectual, just how difficult was the problem she had left him. To all intents and purposes, H. Sylvester Jones was a model husband in the eyes of the law. On the eighth day a bright idea came to the head of "Sharp & Son." For a moment he sat with a broad grin on his face. Then he pushed a bell and a young woman in a plain dress and with a careworn face, entered from an inner room.

The man spoke a dozen curt sentences, straight to the point.

"I want you to get acquainted, Minnie, with H. Sylvester Jones."

Minnie opened her tired eyes very wide.

"I fancy that your best method of approaching him is at the theater," continued her employer, briskly. "I happen to know that he is a continuous, not to say an enthusiastic patron of the drama."

"You mean the show girls?"

"Not he. That is where I need your services. At the psychological moment, we will secure you a seat. That will be directly next to our distinguished gentleman. You will occupy it for the better part of three hours. Do you catch the point? If you will manage your cards right, when you leave the theater, you will be acquainted with him, very well acquainted. After that point you will make your own plans. What Mrs. H. Sylvester Jones wants is an affidavit of infidelity."

The detective paused.

Minnie stiffened her shoulders and a quick flush sprang into her pale cheeks. A keen observer might have seen that under certain conditions she might be beautiful. Gradually the tired eyes dropped and the bent shoulders relaxed. Minnie had conquered herself. She was thinking of sick mother and little sister.

"And what do I get?" she asked.

The detective held up the ten yellow-backed bills. "These are yours for the affidavit. You know where to go for the clothes. I will telephone you if we make arrangements for tonight. If not, we'll try for to-morrow night. We are bound to succeed some time—and then it is up to you."

As it happened, on the third evening H. Sylvester Jones stepped out of his automobile and entered the Fifth avenue theater. Five minutes later a stylishly dressed young woman followed him down the aisle and slipped into the next seat. It was Minnie—but a very different Minnie in evening dress and rouge, an altogether charming and fascinating Minnie. Two minutes before the orchestra began, she dropped her handkerchief. H. Sylvester Jones extended it to her politely. She smiled and he looked at her again. She was a girl to notice.

Before the close of the first act, he had made a hesitating remark, and she had answered it, and he had made another, and before the close of the second act, they were chatting gaily. When the final curtain descended, they left the theater together.

An agent of "Sharp & Son," loitering in the corner, noticed the circumstance and reported it to his chief.

The latter smiled broadly and the next morning eagerly awaited Minnie's arrival. When noon came and she did not appear, he looked worried. When evening came without her, he sent for his agent and the two conferred together. The next day he received a note. It was a remarkable note, and under it was the scrawling signature of Minnie:

"I do not want your $1,000, and I hereby resign my position."

The detective swore and called for his agent again. The latter looked glum and started on a search for the missing girl. He found her the next week at a fashionable suite of apartments, with two servants, a pearl necklace and an array of diamond rings that dazzled him.

"The chief wants your affidavit," he began, curtly.

"He can't have it, and I don't want him to bother me any more."

The detective bounded from his chair and Minnie tossed her head. "Mr. Jones has asked me to become his wife and I have accepted his offer!"

The statement was true. The scheme of "Sharp & Son" had indeed proven a boomerang. The millionaire had fallen in love with the girl who had been sent to trap him, and had tendered her not only his wealth but his name. The fortunes of the detective agency, however, were only under a temporary cloud. H. Sylvester Jones bluntly told his wife that either he or she could go to South Dakota and return single. Mrs. Jones took the western trip and a few weeks ago the decree of divorce was granted.

H. Sylvester Jones married Minnie, and everybody is satisfied, with the exception of "Sharp & Sons." They haven't got their remaining $9,000 yet, and there doesn't seem to be any reasonable prospect of their ever being called to receipt the bill.

Too Much Idealism in China.

Reviewing "China," by Mortimer Menpes and Sir Henry Arthur Blake, a writer says: "The root fallacy of the Chinese political idea, which alone is responsible for the low place to which the country has sunk in the scale of nations, is the disunity of the soldier. The gradations of the social fabric are: (1) The literati, for mind is superior to matter; (2) the agriculturist, for he produces from the soil; (3) the artisan, for he is a creator from the raw material; (4) the merchant, for he is a distributor; (5) the soldier, for he is but a destroyer. So China is a sad example of what excessive idealism may do for the nation. Her armies have been, for the most part, mere hordes of undisciplined men, sometimes commanded by robbers repleated for that purpose on account of their supposed courage. Yet a 10 per cent. levy on the population of China would furnish an army of forty millions."

Furlous Fun in English Society.

Now for the game the most popular at country houses this autumn. You may call it a variation on the old game of consequences. Each guest has a strip of paper and pencil. Each writes:

"Why is —" (choosing the name of some well known person, or a friend or acquaintance known to the general company), and then turns down his strip of paper and passes it to the next guest.

Now each writes: "Like a —" (choosing what similes he will). Again the strips are passed on. The third time each guest writes the answer: "Because he or she —" Thus: "Why is Winston Churchill like a piano organ? Because he flies from pillar to post."—The Gentlewoman.

Fog.

Admiral Seymour, discussing fog at one of the Hudson-Fulton banquets said, with a laugh:

"Off the Newfoundland Banks, you know, the fog is often so thick that the captain has to get out and lead the ship."

Two Pretty Styles.

One phase of the moyen age princess is demonstrated in our first illustration, the style being suited to either house or street wear. As illustrated, the dress is made of pale gray cloth, with a yoke of moire in the same tone, and a yoke of fancy net. The cuffs are also of the moire, but the buttons and piping used are of gray velvety in a slightly deeper tone. For theater or other evening use this gown could be of white, or cream, or pale blue, or dull rose cloth, or serge. The evening serges are very handsome and within the means of most home sewers. For street wear, serge or cheviot would be good choices, and with these the yoke and cuffs could be of the same with a braided finish.

For a medium figure 5 1/2 yards of double width serge is enough for this gown.

The second model gives one of the evening dress aspects of the moyen age. It is made of all-over and bordered fancy net. Any bordering sufficiently wide, however, to cut the top of the garment could be used for it, as well as a pretty figured silk, Swiss, or dotted or checked muslin, with all of which materials the lace-entre-deux and ribbons here employed go charmingly.

With a thin white material, such as net, lace or Swiss or barred muslin over a tinted slip and with ribbons in the same color, this gown would be charming for any of the holiday functions soon to come. If a low effect is desired, the line of the neck could be made round and the gimpes left off, in which case the line at the bottom of the bodice, and those of the sleeves, should be cut plain.

For the medium misses' figure four yards of all-over net, and six yards of bordering would be required for this dress.

TURBANS GIVEN NEW NAMES

Milliners Work Hard Thinking Up Designations for That Form of Headgear.

Evidently the turban is to take on as many kinks and curls as the milliner can devise. And with each new kink comes a new name.

We have had Turkish, Uhlan, Russian, Cossack, Sultan; now we are to have Rembrandt, Henry III, Hussar, De Stael, Drum Major and Napoleon.

Some of the fads of which they are made are of the ultra-fashionable ring-tail; also ermine and sealskin, Australian opossum and moleskin. The drum major turban is trimmed with a circlet of antique gold and bronze set with jewels.

The latter are very new and smart and will not stir the wrath of the Audubon society. A thick quill is used; then the long, coarse fur of the monkey is put in it at each side. It is amazing what influence the Audubonists are having on millinery and these fur quills are one outcome of it.

Bronze lace is widely used for trimming and ermine and sealskin without trimming are among the most distinguished turbans of the season.

Another model that has startling distinction is of moleskin trimmed with an heroic pansy made of blue and violet bugles with a gold center.

OF CLOTH OF GOLD.

A beautiful but costly turban for evening wear or formal afternoon occasions is made from cloth of gold. It is artistically and beautifully draped and has for its sole decoration a gorgeous paradise aigrette in natural coloring.

PROPER LENGTH OF SKIRTS

Fashion's Decree Makes Distinct Variations in Dimensions of the Garment.

There is confusion in the minds of many concerning skirts. There is so much talk about smart gowns being five inches from the floor for evening and nearly six inches for morning, that women wonder if there is any hour in which the long, graceful skirt is worn.

The strict decree of fashion is this: Skirts five or six inches from the ground for street wear; skirts that sweep the floor in a round train for the afternoon, and skirts five inches from the floor for the evening.

This is the decree! Everyone does not have to abide by it, but numbers of women will accept it in part, if not in whole. They may not have every evening gown made short, or every afternoon frock made long, but they will assuredly have one of each kind to show that they know what is being done in the world of fashion.

Possibilities.

There are some women who are constantly utilizing old material, and then, again, others who discard a shirtwaist, skirt or dress merely because it is somewhat old style or torn in a few places.

A white linen shirtwaist, which was in very good condition, save for a few holes at the neckband and waist line (caused by constant pinning), was saved from extinction by one of the cautious, who converted it into stock collars and belts. The ends of the stocks were square, and on one collar five tiny clovers were embroidered.

There is a satisfaction in knowing that good material is never wasted. The half-worn linen skirt has countless possibilities.

Brocade Hats.

Brocade is much favored for bridesmaids' hats. Perhaps it solves the color problem as well, for it is always possible to secure just the right shade of blue or pink at the silk counter when the felt hats offer no assistance to eager buyers.

Large shapes are popular, and plumes of the same color or contrasting tones are used. The design of the brocade seems especially ornamental and suitable for festive occasions. After the great event these silk hats are lovely for evening wear.

Black Fishnet.

Black fishnet in coarse, heavy silk mesh is used for the all-black blouse and trimmed with black grosgrain ribbon of several widths, advancing from a quarter to an inch. The dullness of the ribbon and the extreme plainness of these little models proclaim them correct mourning for the younger woman. They are lined with lusterless black silk, except their collars and wristbands, which are left transparent.

"Yes," she replied frankly. "I am worth $1,250,000."

"And I am poor."

"Will you marry me?"

"No."

"I thought you wouldn't."

"Then why did you ask me?"

A Remnant of the Dark.

A colored man died without medical attendance, and the coroner went to investigate.

"Did Samuel Williams live here?" he asked the weeping woman who opened the door.

"Yassuh," she replied between sobs.

"I want to see the remains."

"I is de remains," she answered, proudly.—Everybody's Magazine.
