EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1910.

No. 10

'Nother Industry Flowers, Monday

A. M. Haight To Build a Cooperaage.

A. M. Haight has purchased the Farwell Cooperaage Co. plant at Farwell, Mich., and will move same to East Jordan and commence erection of buildings and placing of machinery therein, at once.

The plant is not as large as that of the East Jordan Cooperaage Co., but will nevertheless be a substantial addition to East Jordan's manufacturing interests. The plant will manufacture heading and apple barrels in season.

Just where the plant will be located is at this writing a little uncertain but probably before this paper reaches the public a site will be fixed upon. Mr. Haight asks no bonus, merely a site for a period of ten years. The Board of Trade met Thursday evening and took the matter up, and appointed a necessary committee to take up the matter.

Mr. Haight has been affiliated with East Jordan's manufacturing interests for the past seven years and it is gratifying to know that he will continue with us.

Electric Light Company Under New Control.

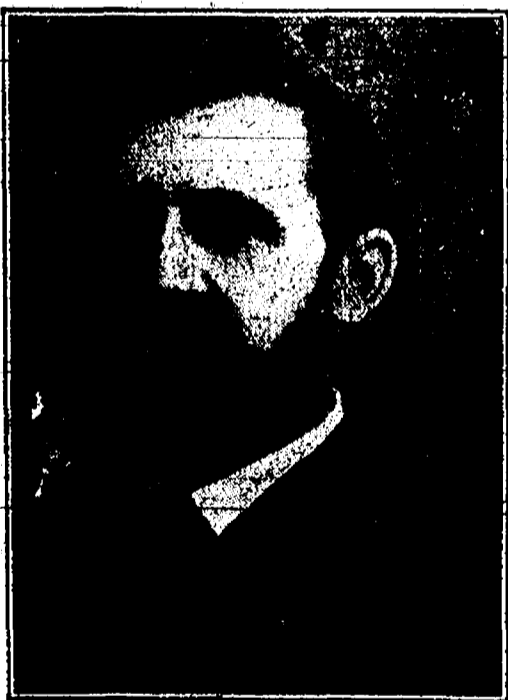

The East Jordan Electric Light & Power Co. was last week sold to Chas. S. Abbott of Detroit who has purchased the stock of the Company. The Company will be reorganized and, we understand, their plans are to increase the power plant in the Village at once, and as soon as practicable, develop the water power on the Jordan river, the site for which is controlled by the Company.

Supt. Plank will continue with the new firm.

Loveday, who has been secretary of the Company for a number of years, has withdrawn and will in the future devote his attention to real estate, insurance, and the opera house.

The Village Ticket.

The Village Caucus of last Saturday evening was a harmonious affair, the entire ticket being nominated by a unanimous vote. As there is only one ticket in the field this year the

WILLIAM P. PORTER

Unanimously Nominated Village President.

Nomination is equivalent to an election. Below are the gentlemen nominated:

President—Wm. P. Porter.
Clerk—Chas. A. Hudson.
Treasurer—R. L. Lorrain.
Assessor—W. A. Pickard.
Trustee—W. P. Sguler.
Trustee—L. A. Hoyt.
Trustee—E. I. Adams.

Chicago will next spring, under a local option law, vote upon the question of the banishment of every saloon within its limits. Last week an enormous petition bearing 75,000 names (14,000 more than necessary) was filed by the anti-saloon forces, and the question is sure to be submitted. This means one-third of the voters of Chicago are now known to be in sympathy with the movement to expel the liquor traffic. Already much more than half the extent of the city territory is "dry" under operation of this same local option law, and almost all of the adjoining suburban cities are also without saloons.

Montville Flowers, Impersonator, at Opera House.

Montville Flowers, Impersonator, will appear at the Loveday Opera House next Monday evening as the fourth number of East Jordan's Musical and Entertainment Course.

Mr. Flowers, who is master of the platform, is too well known to an East Jordan audience to need any introduction and his work is known as far above the ordinary.

The single admission price is fifty cents and all who can should avail themselves of this literary treat.

The ease with which a gifted speaker may appeal to the emotions of an audience, was demonstrated last evening at the Gennett theatre, by Montville Flowers, the noted reader and elocutionist of Cincinnati. His rendering of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," was a most remarkable enactment of its characters. At times his audience was on the verge of tears when moved by the power and pathos in the tones of the voice of the reader, and at other times it was moved to uproarious laughter. Mr. Flowers demonstrated beyond a shadow of doubt that he is the great artist that he is reputed to be, and if able to master his audience with humor, pathos and tragedy, all in one breath.—Evening Item. ### St. Patrick Celebration.

Fr. Burchard, pastor of St. Joseph Catholic church, is arranging for a big celebration on the night of St. Patrick's Day at Loveday opera house. Plans are not fully completed, but Rev. Fr. Oswald T. McGinn of St. Andrews Cathedral, Grand Rapids, will deliver the oration and his subject will probably be "The Shamrock and Columbia."

Tickets are now on sale at 25c each, with a charge of 10c more for reserved seats.

Death of Susie Sheldon.

The death of Susie Sheldon was a sore bereavement to her friends, and they are many; and to the family circle so distressful as to be prostrating. Susie was a sunny, loving spirit, and so pleasing in her ways that one could not know her without being drawn to her. Her slow but steady progress down the dark pathway to the grave has been watched by many with daily anxiety. Hopeful to the last she herself trusted that it was not to be, but the end was inevitable.

She was born at Ironton, Mich., Sept. 16, 1887, and therefore twenty-two years of age at death. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sheldon, moved to this place when she was six years old, and East Jordan has since been her home. Desiring to be a school teacher, she went to the County Normal at Charlevoix, from which institution she received a diploma last spring. But she was never able to use it, being at the time in the relentless grasp of tuberculosis. Susie was from childhood a Christian. It is doubtful if she was ever other than an accepted child of God; but when eight years of age she formally united with the Methodist Episcopal church. She was devoted and helpful in many ways, but especially so in the young people's choir where she did excellent service, often as a soloist. Her voice, tho not strong, was sweet, and her rendition was always creditable.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon have been called to part with ten other children, some in infancy and some in maturity. These sore bereavements left their strong impress upon Susie, especially the death of her twin-brother Bert two years ago. Of late she had expressed at times a longing to be with Bert again, and while we grieve with the family, there is sweetness in the thought that these twin spirits are now united in the better world, in a fellowship that never shall be broken.

The death-angel came somewhat unexpectedly on Sunday evening, Feb. 27, but found her ready. She passed peacefully away at the hour of evening worship while the young people's choir were giving their song service at the church. It is pleasant to think that her disembodied spirit may have poised a moment above the snowy whiteness that wrapped lake and hills and town to listen to the sweet strains of the anthem "In Heavenly Love Abiding." Then as the voices of her young companions died away she passed onward and upward to join the choir invisible.

Brief funeral services were held at the home on Tuesday, Rev. L. S. Matthews assisting the pastor, and both speaking words of comfort to the bereaved.

Comfort them, Father!
For the day is dreary,
And the heart is weary,
With its great grief,
Speak to them tenderly,
Kindly and lovingly,
Give them relief.

Comfort them, Father!
In this hour appalling,
For the night is falling
Round the low bed
Where in a sacred trust,
Back to its native dust,
Gave they their dead.

Comfort them, Father!
In this hour of sorrow
Oh let them borrow
Wisdom and grace,
Let not the mystery
Of this sad history
Hide from thy face.

Comfort them, Father!
In thy love abiding,
Neath thy wing safe-hiding,
Oh let them rest,
Shelter them tenderly,
Gently and lovingly,
Fold to thy breast.

Wash Fabrics. We have Wash Fabrics to please women who begin their new frocks early.

Very frankly we are preaching economy without any sacrifice of appearance. Spring's most becoming styles are shown here.

It is a matter of regret that we cannot show the splendid quality in an advertisement but equally the styles which cannot be shown is also difficult to describe. The best real example of "QUALITY FIRST" is found in all our beautiful new goods.

This is really another White Goods year and we have made our preparations accordingly. Nice smooth soft finish goods in all new kinds from 12c to 75c a yard. What a range of prices and what a splendid line to select from, but to get the best results from your new dress, the corset must be right. The woman who naturally is a good figure may enhance her beauty or detract materially from her appearance and comfort according to the degree of proper or improper corsetings. The Jackson Corset are made in a great variety of styles and we guarantee that the designs are correct to the last detail, allowing free deep breathing, perfect comfort, and control the form to produce that graceful figure at once the delight and pride of our nation. The price of these corsets range from 50c to $3.00 according to the style and quality you may desire.

For Evening Wear

By Julia Bottomley.

THE new coiffures have proved the inspiration of numerous new decorations fitted to the arrangement of the hair in smooth masses. Large jeweled pins of shell have proven the most attractive for evening wear. After their adoption comes the problem of keeping a hat on, or keeping it properly adjusted after it is on. This has brought the evening hat having a bridle under the chin or hair straight to the fore. For the bridle is extremely becoming to youthful faces, and useful in fastening the large picturesque and beautiful hats which are worn for evening.

Hoods of chiffon are preferred to hats on all these occasions when the head needs simply to be protected when one is on the way. These are supported by a wire bonnet frame, such as is used for making children's bonnets. This is covered with chiffon stretched on plain, and forms a foundation for the shirtings and ruffles which are so lavishly and fluffily supported by it. And altogether this sensible little affair for evening wear is as light as an equal bulk of down, and as soft and protecting as a caress.

The new devices for fastening on hats help out immensely where a hat must be worn. They have no other name than hat-fasteners. They fasten the hat more securely than pins, and are steel hair pins in reality, fastened in the head size of the hat by a patent pin. A barb or small diamond-shaped finish at the points prevents them from slipping out. As nothing in the world can so finish and give character to a costume as an elegant hat, this device for keeping hats in place is a boon to the wearers of picturesque millinery. Besides they save "jabbing" the hat by the ordinary pin-point repeatedly, which disfigures and ultimately wears out the fabric of which it is made.

There are innumerable pretty little coiffure decorations, which are worn with the new coiffure, but there are a long story in themselves. They are wonderful in helping out and adding to the finish of the toilette.

SUITED FOR THE AFTERNOON

Visiting Dress That Would Make Up to Perfection in Satin and Spotted Voile.

This is elegantly carried out in satin and spotted voile. The tight-fitting princess part is covered in satin arranged in folds; at the back a wide box-plate is formed, and taken

No feet; this joins the deep band of satin that is sewn to the voile; the upper edge of which is gathered to the princess. Piece lace forms the yoke, which has folds of satin taken over the shoulders at the sides; these are caught down by rosette; a strip of insertion is carried across the front. The upper edge of band of satin at foot is scalloped; a lace applique is sewn at the point of each scallop.

Hat of soft felt trimmed with ostrich feathers.

Materials required: Four yards satin 42 inches wide, three yards voile, one and one-half yards lace, one dozen appliques.

Shawls Coming Back.

It is probable that the beautiful old crepe shawls of thick white, gold or rose silk which were shipped from Canton in the days of our great-grandmothers will soon be unpacked from the paper wrappings in which they have lain so long.

These finely embroidered squares, with their handsome knotted fringes sometimes half a yard long, are being used in Paris for the new swathed gowns and loose draperies.

The once necessary Paisley shawl, or that of Indian make, beloved of Queen Victoria and so often given by her as a wedding gift, is not likely to share the popularity of the silken square. Its make is much too thick and heavy and the coloring does not lend itself to the present mode. The pitfalls of artistic dressing are many, and because one mode of a period is useful it does not follow that others are really acceptable.

Decollete Gown Finish.

One of the prettiest ideas in a finish for the top of a decollete gown is a narrow band of fur sewed to the edge of the bodice and outlining a full tucker of tulle. The style will be generally becoming and is appropriate for gowns developed from every kind of fabric, from chiffon to chiffon cloth, and may be adopted by either maid or matron with equally good results.

Stock and Jabot.

A new stock and jabot combined is made of soft silk and lace trimmed net, with jets as a trimming. The stock comes in a variety of the new colors. Jet, nailheads trim the lattices work of the front of the stock and jet bands are used in decorating the silk balls which dangle over the jabot.

LEOPARD ATTACKS WOMAN TRAINER

BIG CAT SPRINGS FROM PERCH AND TEARS AT HER THROAT.

DRIVEN OFF WITH IRON ROD

Previously Gentle Animal Spoils Plans of Mrs. Pauline Russell to Support Herself and Two Children by a Thrilling Act.

New York.—The special devil that makes jungle cats turn bad in a flash got into Clayton, a fine, big, beautifully marked leopard at Huber's museum recently. He turned suddenly upon Mrs. Pauline Russell, who was driving him and his mates through a rehearsal, knocked her to the floor of the cage with a swing of his forepaw, and tore her throat so badly that she may never live to walk out of Bellevue hospital.

It was the hardest kind of luck for Mrs. Russell, because she had expected to get a new start in the world by exhibiting Clayton and the other leopards, Arnold and Roy. She needed the money sorely. She had been out of work and there were two children down in Virginia to take care of as well as herself. Huber, the museum man, had promised her a three-week engagement beginning January 17.

Her leopards were caged on the top floor of Huber's, and she had been training them there for three months, teaching them all the parlor tricks that can be driven into a leopard's skull. The three were young and absolutely green when she got them, and they had taken to training readily and intelligently.

She dressed for her work in a loose blouse, corduroy trousers, a short skirt, and high boots. Over her blouse she buttoned a short coat heavy with spangles. The boots and trousers were necessary because the big cats are likely to nip and scratch at any time, not necessarily from meanness, but just because their teeth and claws are very long and sharp and catch in things when they get playful.

Harry Hendrickson, her helper, who stands by with a sharp-pointed iron rod, in case he might be needed, was waiting for her when she climbed into the cage. Frenchy, the sweeper, was the other person in the room.

There were certain signs that all trainers of wild animals recognize the minute they put foot in a cage that something was wrong with all the animals.

When she tried to make them jump up to the little platforms fixed around the cage, Clayton balked, backed away, and crouched in a corner of the cage. While she was threatening him with the whip the other leopards got out of hand.

jumped to the floor and crouched flat on their bellies.

She lashed Clayton with the whip until he ran round and round the cage, whining with rage and fear. She forced him into the corner nearest the platform to which she meant to make him jump, and cut him again with the whip. He took the jump, landed on the platform, caught his balance and snarled down on her.

Something caused Mrs. Russell to lose her nerve as the leopard gathered himself together. She ducked her head, turned half way toward the door of the cage, and cried to Hendrickson to hand her the iron spear. That instant Clayton shot off his perch, straight for her head. She tried to throw herself out of his way, but a forepaw clamped her head as she dodged, and the force of the blow sent her to the floor of the cage. The leopard was on top of her in a flash, planting his forepaw on her breast and catching her throat in his teeth.

Frenchy ran screaming out of the room. Hendrickson fired his revolver, but the animal was facing the other way and the blanks did no good. Then he caught up the pointed rod and drove it into Clayton's side again and again.

The animal released Mrs. Russell and threw himself against the bars, reaching for Hendrickson. Badly hurt as she was, the woman had enough strength left to release the catch, slide the door part way open, and let herself drop to the floor of the room. Hendrickson dragged her away from the cage.

ENORMOUS INJURY TO TOBACCO BY INSECTS

Conservative Farmer Estimates that from 30 to 50 Per Cent of Value of Crops Annually Lost by Pest.

(BY Z. P. METCALF.)

Anyone walking through a tobacco field, if he is at all observing, cannot fail to have impressed upon his mind the enormous loss occasioned every year by insects. Hardly a leaf can be found which is not injured in some way by insect pests. Either the leaf is punctured by the flea bug or large, irregular holes are eaten through the leaf by horn worms or the whole top has been shattered by bud worms. True, much of the injury is so slight that it has no effect whatsoever upon the price of the leaf tobacco, but much of the tobacco which ought to sell for first-class wrappers sell for a lower grade because of blemishes due to insects. A conservative tobacco farmer estimates that from 30 to 50 per cent of the money value of his holes depends upon the size of the insect and the strength of its mouth parts. The holes range in size from the minute holes made by flea bugs to the almost complete destruction of the leaf by full-grown horn worms. Bud worms riddle the leaves before they have completely unfolded from the bud. Grasshoppers, crickets, tree crickets and katydids eat larger or smaller holes in the leaf. The spotted melon beetle or corn bud worm often eats small, irregular holes in the leaf and various worms, such as cutworms and cabbage loopers, eat larger or smaller portions of the leaf.

Usually virgin soil is selected for the seedbed and such selection has but very little influence upon the crop of insects found in the seedbed. The usual situation is in the woods and a southeasterly exposure should be se-crop is annually lost through the destructive work of insects. The larger part of this injury is, however, preventable if the farmer will only employ the proper methods.

Commencing with the sowing of seeds in the spring, successive waves of insects pass over the seed bed and over the field of growing tobacco. The plants that are left for seed have their pods devoured by insects and the suckers which grow up in the field after the tobacco is harvested are riddled by insects, the work of which is cut short only when the plants are killed by frost.

Leaves are of course the most important part of the tobacco plant and insects do the most real damage to the leaves. The aim of the tobacco farmer is to grow good, first-class wrappers, as this grade of tobacco brings the best price; but tobacco riddled by flea bugs or with large holes chewed into it by bud worms or horn worms must always be classed with lower and cheaper grades. The number of insects injuring the tobacco leaf is large compared with the numbers that injure other parts of the tobacco plant. The injury caused to leaves by insects is largely due to the fact that these insects are chewing insects and eat holes directly through the leaf. The size of these lect, if possible. The plants will grow much faster if protected in this way from the cold northern winds and in this way the plants will, to a certain extent outgrow the attack of insects in the beds. To this end every care should be taken to see that the bed is well drained, that the soil is full of humus and fertility and that nothing but good, strong plants, which are to a great extent resistant to insects. A good stand of thrifty plants is such an essential thing to the growing of a good tobacco crop that no amount of labor should be spared in the preparation and care of the seed bed. The insects which are destructive in the seedbed are usually easily controlled by spraying. A great deal of spraying may be done on the seedbeds at comparatively small cost, for the area is small and easily accessible and, as most of the insects in the beds follow the plants to the field, there to increase in enormous numbers, it necessarily follows that a reduction of the insects in the bed means a corresponding reduction of the same insects in the field. Then, too, while the plants are young, they may be sprayed in safety with a much stronger solution than could be used in the fields, for a slight burning of the leaves in the beds would in no way injure the salable tobacco.

LATHAM BARRED ROCK HEN

This hen is very close to ideal in shape and type, with clean, straight across-the-feather barring that is well balanced in all sections of the bird. Possibly as narrow or closely barred as can be bred and not lose character of barring by having the bars run together, losing the snap and contrast of the two colors. She is a daughter of first prize hen and champion male at Boston show, 1903.

No breed of sheep does its best if large flocks. The best shepherds generally divide their large flocks into two or more smaller ones.

THE WONDERBERRY OR SUNBERRY

Has Proved a Great Success—Those Who Say It's the Best Thing They Ever Grew.

The Wonderberry or Sunberry, the marvelous garden fruit originated by Luther Burbank, and introduced by John Lewis Childs, the well-known Seedsman of Floral Park, N. Y., has proved a great success all over the country. Thousands of people say it is the best thing they ever grew.

Mr. John Burroughs, the well-known author, Naturalist and bosom friend of Theodore Roosevelt, says it is the most delicious pie berry he ever tasted, and a marvelous cropper.

A Director of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station says it fruits abundantly even in pure sand. In the short season of North-western Canada it is a godsend, and fruits long after frost has killed most garden truck.

D. S. Hall, Wichita, Kan., says thirty people grew it there last season with perfect satisfaction.

K. S. Enoch, Hammond, La., says it yields $250 worth of fruit per acre with him. Mrs. J. H. Powers, 4732 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, raised enough berries on a space 4x10 feet to supply herself and friends.

J. P. Swallow, Kenton, Ohio, says it equal for all purposes does not exist. Rev. H. B. Sheldon, Pacific Grove, Cal., says he likes the berries served in any and every way.

W. T. Davis, Enon, Va., says it is true to description in every way, and fruits in three months from seed.

Judge Morrow, of U. S. Circuit Court, says the Wonderberry is simply delicious raw or cooked.

Mr. Childs exhibited one plant five months old bearing 16,375 berries which measured about eight quarts.

Mrs. Hattie Vincent, Hayden, N. Mexico, says it stands the long, hard droughts of that climate and fruits abundantly all summer.

It is certainly the most satisfactory garden fruit and the greatest novelty ever introduced.

RAW ECZEMA ON HANDS

"I had eczema on my hands for years. I had three good doctors, none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but to get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now.

"My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. She used Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks they were entirely cured. I have used Cuticura for other members of my family and it always proved successful. Mrs. M. E. Fahn, Speers Ferry, Va., Oct. 19, 1906."

Asking Too-Much.

The mother of little six-year-old Mary had told her a number of times not to hitch her sled to passing sleighs, feeling that it was a dangerous practice. It was such a fascinating sport, however, that Mary could not resist it and one day her mother saw her go skimming past the house behind a farmer's "bobs."

When she came in from play she was taken to task, her mother saying severely: "Mary, haven't I told you that you must not hitch onto bobs? Besides, you know, it is against the law."

Mary tossed her head. "Oh," she said, "don't talk to me about the law. It's all I can do to keep the ten commandments!"—Woman's Home Companion.

The Caggy Bachelor.

The woman who wanted the bachelor to come to dinner called him up at six o'clock.

"Hello," she said, adding in the irritating way of women, "do you know who this is?"

The tactful bachelor didn't, but he was too diplomatic to admit it.

"Hello, beautiful lady," he made answer.

For Sprains

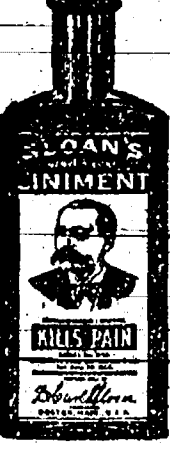

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises. It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. L. ROLAND, Bishop of Scranton, Pa. says:—"On the 7th of this present month, as I was leaving the building at noon for lunch, I slipped and fell, spraining my wrist. I returned in the afternoon, and at four o'clock I could not hold a pencil in my hand. I returned home later and purchased a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I used it five or six times before I went to bed, and the next day I was able to go to work and use my hand as usual."

Buffalo Rapidly Becoming Extinct

HEAD OF AN ADULT BULL

IT IS probable that during the present session of congress there be a renewal of the effort to have the national government establish and maintain a herd of American bison, or buffaloes, as the nucleus for the preservation of this picturesque native animal, which is in such grave danger of extinction. The wanton slaughter of the buffalo during the previous generations has reduced the number of these animals running wild to less than 25, most of which are roaming in Yellowstone park, whereas 25 or 35 years ago there were millions of bison grazing on the plains of the west. Practically all of the bison in existence, estimated at a few more than 1,700, are now owned by private individuals, except those owned by the national park at Banff, the few in Yellowstone park and those in various zoological gardens.

According to the census of living American bison, compiled by William T. Hornaday, director of the New York zoological park and president of the American Bison society, there was on January 1, 1908, a total of 1,722 bison in captivity, of which 1,116 were in the United States, 476 in Canada and 130 in Europe, besides about 300 wild bison in Canada and 25 in the United States. Most of these animals are under the control of 45 private owners in the United States and 19 in Europe. During the five years from 1903 to 1908 there was a total net increase of 603 head, which number has been somewhat augmented during the last two years.

It is conceded, practically by all authorities that, owing to the uncertain-

Baynes of Meriden, N. H., secretary and Clark Williams of New York treasurer.

The purposes of the society are outlined in the following extracts from Baynes of Meriden, N. H., secretary, Ernest Harold Baynes:

"The American Bison society was organized in the strong belief that the people desired to have the buffalo preserved and that they would give their support to a body of men able and willing to work indefatigably for its preservation.

"The five or six million buffalo which less than 35 years ago caused the western plains to tremble beneath their hoofs and which constituted one of the wonders of the world have vanished and there remain to represent them some six or seven hundred head, exclusive of those in the zoological gardens, which do not count when we come to the question of the preservation of the species. Most of these are in a few widely scattered bunches, only two of which, the Corbin herd at Newport, N. H., and the Pablo herd on the Flathead Indian reservation, Montana, contain over 100 head. Of this little remnant of the once mighty hosts not a single animal is safe; every owner in the country is willing and some very anxious to sell and I doubt if there is a herd in the country which would not be sold tomorrow morning if a customer appeared with the money. In the large herds there is another menace to the race—contagious disease, to several forms of which the buffalo is subject, though less so than domestic cattle. If tuberculosis or the hoof and mouth disease should attack one of the three or

THE KENTUCKIAN WAS PLEASED

HE SECURED A GOOD HALF-SECTION IN CENTRAL CANADA.

It is not only from Kentucky, but from thirty-five to forty different States that there comes the expression of satisfaction from those who have taken up lands in Central Canada as a free homestead or have purchased lands.

Mr. E. K. Bell, of Frankfort, Kentucky, writes to a Canadian Government Official, and says: "I have just returned from Alberta, overjoyed with my trip. Your literature was very flattering, but not half what I found it. I bought a half section between Calgary and Edmonton, one mile from railroad, near a good town. This is the best country I ever saw or ever expect to see. I will go in the spring and get to work on my place. I think it is the coming Country of the World." Some of the papers describe the settling of the Canadian West as "becoming a fever with a great many people. The lure of its golden promises is creeping into their hearts and many are they who are answering the call of that unsettled territory." This paper editorially cautions its readers to exercise care and thought before moving to a distant country. This would be a wise precaution, and is exactly what the Canadian officials ask.

The success of the settler who has made Canada his home for years is the best evidence that can be offered. And of the large number of Americans who have made their homes in Canada, very few have returned. All are satisfied.

What the Doctor Did.

Gustave Ulyatt has a little daughter who hasn't been well recently. The other day a physician was called to the Ulyatt home to see her. He examined the child with the aid of a stethoscope. When her father came home that evening he asked what the doctor had said.

"Nothing," replied the little girl. "What did he do?" asked Mr. Ulyatt.

"He just telephoned me all over," was the child's reply.—Denver Post.

Teamster's Punishment Earned.

Apparently it pays not to be cruel to horses out in Chicago. A teamster who admitted abandoning his horses for six hours on a recent stormy day was fined $50 by a magistrate. The humane society prosecuted the case vigorously and promised to report the matter to the driver's employers. Presumably he will lose his job, as he was unable to pay the fine and will have to serve a jail term.

BUFFALO, COW AND CALF

ties of human life and the changes in fortune and in policy among private individuals and private corporations, the buffalo cannot be perpetuated for centuries and preserved from ultimate extinction save under government auspices. At present nearly all the buffaloes in the United States are in private hands and with few exceptions are for sale to anyone offering a reasonable price. Many are sold every year, some for propagating purposes and others to the butcher and taxidermist. Moreover, most of them are in a few comparatively large herds and should contagious disease at any time strike one of these, so great a percentage of the now remaining buffaloes might be wiped out at one blow as to make the perpetuation of the remainder practically an impossibility. The national movement for the preservation of the buffalo began in June, 1894, when Michael Hays, a Bayner went to live on the border of the Corbin game preserve in New Hampshire, which, strange as it may seem to those accustomed to think of the west as the sole habitat of the buffalo, has for many years been the home of one of the largest herds of buffaloes in the world. Mr. Baynes became deeply interested in these splendid creatures and in the fate of their race and soon sought to arouse public interest in the matter. President Roosevelt took immediate and active interest in the subject. As a result the movement took form on December 8, 1905, when the American Bison society was organized in New York City. Hon. Theodore Roosevelt was made honorary president, William T. Hornaday president, Ernest Harold four comparatively large bunches, the fate of the buffalo might be sealed then and there, as even now the number of herds is so small that it will probably require careful management to prevent excessive inbreeding. "But there are good economic reasons why this animal should be saved and allowed to increase in numbers. Shorn of all sentiment and as he stands on his hoofs he is the most valuable native animal in this country; kill him and there is no domestic animal in America whose carcass will bring as much in dollars and cents. The meat is as good as domestic beef and some parts of it rather better, while the hide alone will sell for money enough to purchase three or four good cows. A fine head is worth much more and although the value of heads would probably decrease as buffaloes became more numerous, there would always be a good market for the skins, as for many purposes we have nothing quite so good. "Then the buffalo has wool almost as thick as that of the sheep. Naturally there is much more of it and while it is coarser than sheep's wool it can be woven into very warm and useful garments. "Let every man, woman and child who has love or sympathy for American animals join hands in saving for the country the grandest of them all. Although on the brink of extermination, this rugged and typically American character must be saved; it can be saved and, with the support of the people, the American Bison society is prepared to do the work which will be necessary to save it."

The Teachers Institute.

The State Teachers institute held in Boyne City, Friday and Sat. was certainly one of the best meetings ever held in Charlevoix County.

Over 100 teachers attended together with half that number of students and prospective teachers.

Every township in the county was represented except Norwood and the Islands.

After a delightful song by the eighth grade pupils, devotions were conducted by Rev. Geo. Rea. Hon. J. M. Harris was called away from the city on business and Supt. Butler with a few well chosen words welcomed the teachers to busy Boyne.

The new school building in which the meeting was held was thoroughly inspected by the teachers and many were the exclamations of delight and pleasure uttered by the teachers as they passed through the splendid room and spacious halls of this monument to progress erected by the people of Boyne City.

Prof. Laird of Ypsilanti had charge of the Institute.

We will not attempt to give an outline of the messages that he delivered. He handled the various subjects on the program in a masterly way, proving himself a teacher of teachers and leaving with them many helpful suggestions.

Mr. Laird is an optometrist, takes a cheerful view of a teacher's life, yet with thoughtful and no teacher can listen to him for an afternoon and not feel a greater sense of responsibility. His points on reading spelling, History, Educational Waste, the Model Lesson, the Recitation and Discipline were well taken and practical and not a teacher present but will go to her school better able and more determined to do good work.

The songs given by the lower grade pupils delighted the teachers who called the little people to the platform several times.

Supt. DeVoe of Charlevoix gave the teachers some new ideas as to the Mission of Phonics and I think the teachers will be likely to pay a little more attention to this very important partner of the work in reading.

Supt. Northon gave a very interesting address on Pedagogical Momentum, clearly outlining the necessity of careful and thorough work in the schools and leaving with the teachers many hints that will be helpful.

The real treat of the meeting was at the Bellamy opera house where Dr. Thos. Green held a crowded house for two hours.

Dr. Green has been styled "The Webster of the West" and all who heard his masterful oration on "The Key to the Twentieth Century" was charmed by the personality of the man and with the message he had.

Altogether the meeting was a most valuable and delightful one.

Supt. I. M. DeVoe of Charlevoix was elected president of the Association for the ensuing year. Mrs. Effie Stanford of East Jordan vice president. Miss Maddaugh, Miss Reed, Supt. Northon and Supt. Butler, program committee.

Marry, Come Up.

A middle aged Welsh market woman visited a theater for the first time in her life and was much interested in the piece, which was founded on Kingsley's "Westward Ho!"

"Marry" sat in a front seat. In one scene an actor, representing famous old Admiral John Hawkins, came on the stage and with fine, tested against "cronkers," concluding his speech with the old fashioned epithet: "Marry, come up!"

"No, thank eu, surr," said Marri, rising in her seat and courtesying respectfully. "I will do famous down by here."

The audience roared, and Marri gazed about in wonder. Quiet restored, the actor continued his vigorous tirade against "cronkers," again concluding with, "Marry, speak up, I say!"

"I can see splendid by here, surr; thank eu, surr," protested Marri. "I am 'shamed to go on the platform."

We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else. It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop to the creation of that new very popular stomach remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerve, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. Nearly all civilization is the product of the city, where mind meets mind and each becomes brighter from contact, says New York Weekly. Masses of population may engender great vices, but they also engender great virtues, and if they do not produce, they certainly develop the finest and keenest intelligences that we have. The little town-states of Greece created most of the ancient civilization that is worth having, and after they fell and the dark ages came in it was the little city-republics of Italy that brought light, learning and mercy back to the world. Some of the blackest crimes are committed in the country, Conan Doyle has Sherlock Holmes, in one of his best stories, point out this fact. It was a clever touch and it is true. The country man is not more honest than the city man, although he may lack opportunities. Flaubert and Balzac have drawn grim pictures of sordid meanness in the rural life of France; Tolstol has done as much for Russia, and Sudermann, Ibsen and Hardy have told similar black stories of their own countries. The recent report of the commission on country life showed considerations which left very much to be desired in the way of improvement.

Congressman A. J. Sabath is the man who some time ago announced his belief that the bestowal of great American fortunes upon foreign noblemen by their marriage with American women involved an economic waste which ought not to go unchecked, says New York Evening Sun. He therefore introduced a bill in congress providing for a substantial export tax upon such dowries. By some curious bad luck the bill got mislaid in committee and has not been heard from since. But Congressman Sabath's idea did not get lost. He took it with him, took it out and rubbed it on his sleeve and looked at it in all his spare moments, showed it to his friends and talked about it. Consequently the idea has grown and amplified under consideration, many persons have written letters to him in praise of it, and so, though lost to sight, its memory has been kept very dear and green indeed. The final result is that the congressman has prepared a much broadened bill, which he is going to introduce.

Quartermaster General Aleshre of the United States army declares in his annual report that he could reduce the cost of maintaining the nation's military establishment if he were given more officers and a new system of selection and detail. There is waste in many directions through the inefficiency of civilian employes and enlisted men who receive extra pay for performing certain duties in an indifferent way. Great savings could undoubtedly be achieved through the inauguration of system and the appointment of capable men, as push for preferment tends to lead departments with employes who are chiefly concerned about the drawing of their salaries.

Hubert Latham, having given an acceptance of the invitation of the Marquis de Polignac to join him in a hunt at Geru, France, got out his monoplane, installed his hunting paraphernalia and soared toward the hunting lodge of the president of the committee of aviation, making the distance of 15 miles comfortably within an hour. After hunting for hours and stocking his airship with game, he returned home. This is a novel incident in the development of the air craft. It reads almost matter-of-course, so rapid has been the growth of air-flight custom.

A bank wrecker in Wisconsin has been sent to the penitentiary for ten years. The only way to break up this sort of high finance is to treat its practitioners as common thieves who simply take other people's property without any formality or technicality. When the man who wrecks a bank by juggling its finances is put on a plane with the burglar who blows open its vaults and safes, then there will be a chance for the law to protect the public from all classes of thieves, no matter how their stealing is named.

One of the professors announces that the Pacific coast only. If this is the case a lot of interest in this comet has been unfairly worked up.

Reports from Germany are to the effect that a passenger airship is being built and will ply between different points in Germany. The date of the first excursion is not announced.

The United States navy wants men and though their offers are not munificent, yet such service is surely better than doing nothing at all.

Rural Morals

Much Better Than in Large Cities

By KENYON L. BUTTERFIELD

IT IS almost impossible, from a practical point of view, to weigh or measure standards of moral conduct, except by observing the results—that is, conduct itself. Of course a trained scientist might undertake the elusive problem of studying motives and ideals as they work themselves out respectively in an urban and in a rural environment; and indeed some day men adequately trained will study the rural mind scientifically and develop some principles of rural social psychology, but for the purposes of common judgment and practical conclusions we have to consider simply the results.

There are two prevalent ideas regarding moral conditions in the open country. One is based on the theory that all rural communities are Acadias, that the cities are hotbeds of corruption and that all farmers are honest. The other is a sort of natural challenge to this broad notion and asserts that the country is at least as bad as the city, if not worse than the city.

No thorough studies of the actual conditions have yet been made, but some impressions received from the investigations of the commission on country life have revealed rather interesting opinions held by residents of rural districts themselves, not only farmers, but teachers, clergymen and physicians, etc.

The general feeling seems to be that moral conditions in the open country are a great deal better than they are in the large city, taken as a whole, and far better than in the village. It is admitted that there is a great deal of intemperance and this is put down as perhaps the most serious moral evil in country life (we are speaking of the country as a whole, and not of any one section). It is submitted also that there is a great deal of profanity and vulgarity, but that they seem to be decreasing. There is very little positive crime in the country and political honesty, on the whole, seems to be the rule. The question of social morality is more complex, but the general opinion seems to be that, barring certain sections or localities, the rather open conditions of country life favor purity. There are doubtless plenty of exceptions to this proposition, which apparently applies more fully to mature people—for conditions in some sections among the youth are sad enough.

While it is sheer demagoguery to assert the complete honesty of farmers as such; for they are as human as other folks, it is doubtless true that there is more resentment among farmers than in almost any other class, when they are once aroused, against the violation of public trust. The "up-country vote" can usually be counted on in a political campaign where moral issues are at the front.

It is very doubtful whether a categorical answer is possible to the question, "Are moral standards the same in the country as in the city?" Localities differ. Sections of the country from one another. But in general I should say that the moral conditions of the open country make for the strong individual, morally as well as intellectually; that the rural environment also tends to a weak community life, inasmuch as individual moral standards are in large part the result of community ideals; and that there is likely to be a tendency toward what might be called moral mediocrity in rural communities, a tendency to rest content with old notions and a slow response to new idealism.

Many Ways Leading to Sure Success

By BERTHA STERN

Learn to cast off self-love, self-pity and expecting much from others, or placing a false value on large means. Take this humbleness all day long and at night for sleeplessness, in a glass of trust. To prevent too strong an action, mix with it an occasional teaspoon of resentment, to keep your self-respect and self-confidence. It wards off nervous prostration and nervous exhaustion and the ills which they promote.

Along with this moral dose take pills of resignation, swallow in a cupful of up-and-doing, to wipe the tears of disappointment, making for a cheerfulness which is nerve saving.

Mix these moral doses freely with clean living, moderate dining and decent habits.

In self-control give up smoking anger. One smoke daily of indignant anger is allowable.

Ventilate your soul with kindness. Bathe it in contentment. Exercise it in kind deeds, kind words and cordial laughter, and let it breathe loyally, gratefulness, honesty and gentleness.

Then let your rational being find God by penetrating into the cause of sorrows, pains and trials. In many cases it conceivably that they are builders of moral character. It evidences the purpose of life. This understanding tends to trust in God.

Finding, too, that the moral character acts favorably on the body and the healthy body reverts to the good of mind, we must conclude that the need of a rational religion, serving the health of the mind and the body, cannot be left out of man's life.

Where Hasty Insurance Doctors Fail

By EDWARD S. PRICE

The only reason I don't carry any life insurance is that I was never able to get by the doctors who have from time to time examined me for a policy.

I think I have been rejected 17 times. Twenty-one years ago I made my first application.

I was a healthy man then and am all rectus in curia as to health now. The medico who first took me in tow whacked me with his strong right arm and as a result of such punishment I nearly fainted and he turned in an adverse report.

After that I was turned down in regular rotation by other examining doctors, until about ten years ago I got tired and vowed I'd never apply again.

A close friend of mine who is one of the best surgeons in the west, but who has no connection with an insurance company, made a pretty rigid inspection of me not long since and gave it as his opinion that I'd live to be 80 at the least.

I figure it out, therefore, that I am somewhat ahead of the companies, or at any rate they have lost money by rejecting me.

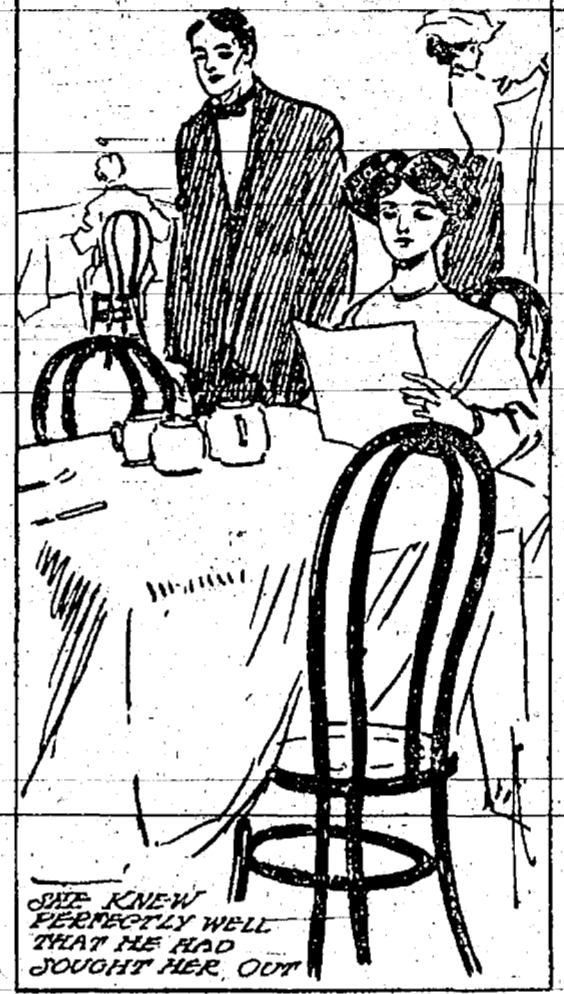

His Successful Demonstration

By JOHN K. ADAMS

Lise pinned on her wide black hat and sat down again limply before the glass. She felt very tired that morning, and her head had started to ache, which meant that it would ache more before the day was over. Such a long day, too, with only one intermission at lunch time, which might come any time between 12 o'clock and 2, according to the amount of business she was doing. She set her chin in her hands and regarded her reflection critically. Yes, her complexion was certainly growing dull, her hair lifeless, her eyes heavy—liver, the doctor would have called it, but Lise knew better. It was work and lack of fun, and living in a hall bedroom that was well enough in winter when she wanted to keep warm, but in weather like this—! Another year of the city would make her a faded, emotionless thing like some of the girls she saw daily. But she had to live and there was nothing in the world she could do just at present but demonstrate Van Hap's Peerless Cocoa.

And then cocoa—she should hate it forevermore. Had she not loathed the very smell of vanilla ever since she had undertaken the demonstration of Arfish's Triple Extract? Already the sight of the chocolate cream nauseated her. It might be, when she had finished the complete list of foods, pure and otherwise, there would be nothing which would smell or taste or look palatable to her, because, forsooth, intimacy with them all had bred contempt. And only 21, with her first sweetheart yet to get! She could have had plenty of admirers, such as they were, but she shuddered at the thought of the average type of masculinity that offends the pretty and unwary shop girl. She had learned one thing while she had been in the city, and that was to let the men who came within her radius severely alone. She would go alone to the end of her days unless she found a man who was at once worthy of her respect and admiration. Yet after all, she did get lonesome sometimes and heart hungry for lights and music and laughter and a dear voice calling her something sweet and the protection of an arm.

It was time to go, and past time! She sprang up, grabbed her gloves and ran out of the narrow room which was all of home the city afforded her. When she reached the street she found her car had just passed and there would not be another for 10 minutes. So it came about that she was late to her work that morning.

Van Hap's peerless cocoa was demonstrated along with sundry other articles, edible and otherwise, in the basement of one of the great department stores.

Lise took off her hat, gave a pat to her hair and went to work. For an hour she had no time to look up. Then came a jill and she leaned upon the counter and looked over to the other side of the room, where Raller's canned products were being demonstrated for the week. All day yesterday she had felt so sorry for the pale young man who had stood there talking for dear life, yet looking positively ill, and she summoned her kindest smile for him now. But the smile stiffened on her face as she saw that he was not there, but, instead, a good-looking young man, seemingly all energy and vim and good nature, with a pair of the kindest, kindest, kindest eyes she had ever seen.

After that she pretended to be even busier than she was, but she could not resist glancing across now and then to the unusual young man, and invariably her glance was accompanied by a blush, for it encountered his. She could hear his voice, deep, pleasant, confidence-inspiring. What a lot of stuff he was selling. He was beating her all to pieces. Lise urged herself to fresh effort.

Her chance for luncheon came sooner than she expected and she hid herself to the restaurant for her sandwiches and tea. As she sat waiting for her order to be brought a man came and sat down opposite to her at the same table. It was the demonstrator of Raller's Bestout canned products. Lise blushed. She knew perfectly well that he has sought her out, and his frank eyes and pleasant smile were not to be resisted. It was a long time since anybody had smiled at her in that way, and she responded in spite of her intention to maintain an air of cold dignity. In a few moments they were talking as if they had always known each other.

"Cramer's sick," he explained, "and I'm taking his place. Oh, it's nothing serious—just jaundice. He'll be out in time to go to his next place, the doctor says."

Lise was glad to hear that Cramer was really not very sick, and she said so. But she was more glad to hear that this new man, who said his name was Travis, was to be in the store again tomorrow.

At the close of their luncheon he ordered cakes and an ice for them both in spite of Lise's protest. He had a humorous way of sweeping away objections as if they did not matter at all. Lise liked that about him. She liked also his gray eyes, his smile, his respectful, gentle manner of speaking to her.

She went back to her work, her head in a whirl. But all that afternoon when she found him looking at her with his genial smile she smiled back. The day had gone all too quickly. With amazement she noted the closing hour. She finished her work with a flourish and put on her hat feeling that she had done well, wasn't so tired as usual and felt quite happy. He crossed over and stood looking down at her.

"Have a good day?" "Fine."

"So have I. Demonstrating is fun." "Yes, it is. It was the first time Lise had ever been able to say that truthfully. They went out together and took the same car and hung on the same strap and smiled at each other and talked as fast as they could. Suddenly she remembered.

"But Mr. Cramer lives in Duane street. You are going right out of your way." "That's so." He laughed. "I'll get off at the next corner and go back." At the corner he said: "Good-by till to-morrow."

"Yes, to-morrow." Lise answered back. The hall bedroom seemed a different place that night. Before she retired Lise did some laundry work that she had been neglecting for two weeks. She took extra pains with her hair and went to her work looking fresher and daintier and happier than she had looked for a long time.

She found a bunch of purple lilies upon her counter waiting for her. When she could get her face out of them she went straight across to him. "I know where they came from," she said.

"You said you were from the country and I thought you would like them," he said. "They are my favorite flowers."

"They're fine, too. Thank you a thousand times over. Do you know these are the first flowers I have ever had given to me in my life?" "But they won't be the last."

"You've made me happy for all day." She had to tell him that. "I shan't be able to think of anything but these flowers, I'm afraid." Her eyes were shining.

"Don't say that." His voice was very low. "I want you to think of me a little." Then she went back and work began. When noon came he was there beside her.

"You are going to lunch with me to-day," he said. "Come!" And she went to such a luncheon as she had never before sat down to. "I'm afraid you are very extravagant," she chided him, gently.

"Well, one can be afford to be on an occasion like this." He took a narrow envelope from his pocket. "Tickets for The Shop Girl. I heard you humming airs from it to-day."

"Oh, but I've never heard it," Lise clasped her hands ecstatically, "and I've been just dying to."

That afternoon went faster than the previous one. As for the evening it fled on waves of light and music. When morning came Lise woke to remember with a pang that this was the last day of the week. She was down-hearted all the morning. Even the bunch of carnations she found upon her counter failed to lift her to the heaven of yesterday. At luncheon he asked abruptly after making a careful study of the far-away look in her eyes: "What's the matter, little girl?" "Nothing," Lise choked. "Every-

This Contractor got results. He knew how to feed his men. Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by. He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Oats fed to the men.

He also boiled Quaker Oats and mixed the thin oatmeal water with their drinking water.

Almost instantly all signs of stomach disorders passed and his men showed a decided improvement in strength and spirits.

This contractor had experienced that taught him the great value of good oatmeal.

All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.—Christian.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. People Realize the Danger. As an indication of the force of the crusade against tuberculosis, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, in a bulletin issued recently points to the fact that while 53.5 per cent. of the expenditures for tuberculosis in 1909 were made from public resources, appropriations made for 1910 indicate that over 75 per cent. of the money to be spent this year will be from federal, state, city and county funds. In 1909, out of the $3,180,621.50 spent for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, $4,362,760.03 was spent from public money, and $3,817,871.47 from funds voluntarily contributed. For the carrying on of state, federal and municipal tuberculosis work in 1910, over $9,000,000 has been appropriated. Of this sum, the state legislatures have granted $4,100,000, the municipal and county bodies, $3,975,500 and the federal government, $1,000,000.

An Exploded Theory. "Do you believe there is anything in mental suggestion?" "Not a thing."

"Don't you think it is possible if one person keeps his mind steadily fixed on a certain thing which he wishes another to do that the other will be influenced so that he will eventually do it?" "No, I don't believe in the theory at all. I've been wishing for a week that you'd pay-me what you owe me without making it necessary for me to ask you for it."—Sunday Magazine of the Cleveland Leader.

The Important Part. Mrs. Blinks—Did you see a lawyer to-day about that boundary line dispute between us and our neighbor? Blinks—Yes.

Mrs. Blinks—What did he say when you explained the matter to him? Blinks—He asked me how much I was worth.

GET POWER. The Supply Comes From Food. If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by use of skillfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire, and a poor fire is not a good steam producer. "From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed."

A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heart-burn, the inflated feeling which gave me such pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 118 lbs., my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts did it."

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food. Look in pkgs. for the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

County Normal Notes.

The county normal class, accompanied by Miss Reed, attended the Institute at Boyne City, Feb. 25 and 26. They drove over Friday morning returning Saturday afternoon.

Margaret Watson did not attend the institute but instead substituted for Miss Jarvis in the north ward school. Isabel Knight also substituted for Miss Jarvis one day last week, as Miss Jarvis has been having trouble with her eyes.

Some very attractive carpet designs have been made recently by the class in connection with their work in carpet problems in arithmetic. The designs are intended to show waste in matching patterns in laying carpet.

The sad news was received of the death of Miss Susie Sheldon, at East Jordan, Feb. 27th. Miss Sheldon was a member of last year's class and was greatly loved by her classmates and by the many friends she made while in Charlevoix.

Emina Rasmussen and Arbutus Nordrum went to Petoskey Thursday night and from there went to Boyne City on Friday to attend the institute.

Vera Cooper, class of '05, who is teaching at Phelps; Pearl Hurst, class of '09, who is teaching the Hopyard school; and Ruth Bowditch, class of '09 who is teaching in Marion township, joined the sleighload of normal students in driving to Boyne City.
