Enroll At Spring Election.

If You Wish To Take Part in September Primary.

One of the most important changes made in the new primary law, was that changing the date of party enrollment from just before the primary to the date of the spring election. This change was made so that enrollment would be made some time before the campaign became too warm between the several candidates, experience demonstrating that in order to keep a friend one is tempted to enroll in another party column than he would otherwise. Members of all parties must enroll, the vicious system of the old law, whereby one party could adopt the primary system and another the convention system; which made it possible for members of one party to name the candidates of both parties, being repealed. All parties must nominate under the primary system.

When the people of this county vote as they surely will next Monday April 4th they take upon themselves an added responsibility. The choice of the candidates of their party being put right up to them. Believing as we do, that the people are always right, we urge everybody to drop everything and turn out to the primary next September.

Before that time however, if you wish to take part in naming the officials of your state and county you must enroll at the April election. If you fail to enroll at that time you forfeit your right to take part in what is in reality the real election. Having for so long fought for this right, we can't conceive how any good citizen can neglect his duty to take part in public affairs and surely there is no higher duty than the naming of our public officials. While good officials have been named under the convention system, in a great majority of cases it is also true that men have been placed in high positions, who could never have been nominated under the convention system; and while the small turnouts at the primary has been urged by its opponents, as an argument against it, experience has demonstrated that when a man of that class went before the people, they did turn out, and while too many have neglected to go to the polls and express their choice, the direct nomination system provided them with a check against improper candidates.

To sum up;
Don't fail to enroll April 4th, and vote YES.
Don't fail to vote in September.
Don't fail to remember that the responsibility of making a wise choice is placed upon you, and work to secure a full vote in September.

The Profits of Fruit Raising.

Given good soil, good transportation facilities, a good managing head, with knowledge of varieties, and ample capital, a well planted apple orchard, with cherries and peaches between the rows, will yield in Michigan from $20 to $30 an acre net while the trees are reaching maturity and at least $100 an acre annually for a bearing period of from 40 to 50 years, and possibly twice 100. An average $300 an acre net, when in full bearing is not impossible. Isolated tracts of cherries during the season of 1909 made returns at the rate of $1,800 an acre, and yielded of apples at the rate of from $600 to $900.

East Jordan Wins From Bellaire

Gets Two Basket Ball Victories Last Saturday Evening.

Last Saturday night our first and second teams went to Bellaire on the excursion to meet the fast opposing teams of that place. Bellaire was some what disappointed at the close of the game to find they were again defeated because they had said the preceding week that this would be a victory for them.

Nachazel, East Jordans center in former games, was unable to play that night and Shier was substituted in his place and altho he was unaccustomed to jumping he guarded his opponent firmly, and also got the tip-off in several instances. Hoyt and Burney handled their positions in good shape. Isaman stuck to his man every minute while Bergman showed up well on field work. Much can also be said of East Jordan's team work as a whole, they by far outclassed their opponents along that line as well as others.

Following is a summary of the baskets made: Hoyt, 3 field baskets, 1 foul throw; Burgman 1 field basket, 2 foul throws; Burney, 2 field baskets; Isaman, 1 field basket; Shier, 1 field basket.

Bellaire 5 field baskets, 4 foul throws Final score, 19 to 14 in East Jordan's favor.

In the game between the local second team and Bellaire's second team, East Jordan won out over the opposers by one point. At the end of the first half Bellaire had the lead, the score being 7 to 5, but at the beginning of the second half Frazier and Walstead each raised the score by two points giving the locals 2 scores the better of Bellaire. But in quick succession Bellaire executed two field baskets, giving them the lead once more. Our boys then getting aroused, Malpass basketed a foul throw, and a few seconds later, a field basket, making East Jordan 12 to Bellaire's 11.

Following is a summary of the baskets made: Malpass, 2 field baskets, 2 foul throws; Frazier, 1 field basket, Walstead, 1 field basket. Bellaire, 5 field baskets, 1 foul throw.

KENYON-AINSLEE.

East Jordan Postmaster Takes Charlevoix Bride.

Married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary Ainslee, Saturday night, by Rev. F. Dewey Ebie, Frank A. Kenyon of East Jordan, and Miss Clara Ainslee of Charlevoix. About twenty friends witnessed the ceremony, which was followed by a wedding supper.

After a short trip north Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon will make their home at East Jordan.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon are well known to nearly everybody in the county, Mr. Kenyon having served as register of deeds and, at the present time being postmaster of his home town, while Mrs. Kenyon was for several years the popular deputy register. Both have hosts of friends who unite in wishing them all prosperity and joy.—Charlevoix Courier.

"Daniel Boone" at Loveday's Next Monday Night.

New productions, no more worn-out plays, it is the cry of every city in this country and managers are racking their brains in search of new material to satisfy the great public demand. Manager Robert H. Harris seems to have struck the proper chord in choosing for this season a drama that is new to the public and yet this has, as its theme etc., one of the greatest and best known men, Daniel Boone. "Daniel on the Trail" is one of the thrilling romantic stories that holds the listeners from the first to the drop of the last act and Boone's appeal to the Shawnees and his campaign against them, are but a few of the historical events that take place in this drama and which were taken from the man's life. Simon Girty, known to the Reds as the white Coyote, is one of the greatest men in pioneer times and through him were the hunters turned against Boone and plot to send the great hunter to the happy Hunting Grounds.

Each act shows a beautiful setting with nothing but the wild and rocky glens and mountain trails as its background. The first act closes with the burning of Boone's home by the Indians and Boone swears an oath of vengeance against the red man and with his faithful wife, Elizabeth Zane they take the trail against the Shawnees. The great love between these two famous characters, the wonderful hardships endured go to make "Daniel Boone on the trail" one of the successful dramas in every sense of the word. Manager Harris carries several real Indians and a den of wolves in order to give the play a complete production. Rolling Thunder, a Sioux graduate of Yale, plays the part of Blackfish, the famous Shawnee chief. Rolling Thunder is the only clever Indian actor on the stage today.

Carrying real Indians and real wolves in order to give the play the desired atmosphere, is going the limit. That is what is being done by the manager of the "Daniel Boone on the trail" Co., that comes to the Loveday Opera House on next Monday night. The story of the play is romantic in theme and thrilling situations. The many exciting incidents that occur during the life of the famous pioneer has given the author ample room to elaborate on. The burning of Boone's home by the Indians closed the first act of this famous drama of pioneer days. The second act finds Boone and his brave wife, Elizabeth Zane homeless in the mountains. The many daring escapes and the hardships endured by them makes the story of Daniel Boone strong in sentiment. Each act and scene follows the other showing beautiful stage settings with nothing but the wild Rocky Mountain trail for background. Real Indians and real wolves are also worked into the exciting climax of the different scenes. A screen curtain separates the audience from the stage in the snowstorm scene where Boone has fight for life with wolves. This scene is one of the features of the drama and so much so that when the stage is set the curtain rises on this scene the stage boys invariably climb to the fly gallery and do not come until the wolves have been driven back into the cage. Lovers of the better style of Romantic Melodramatic production will find in "Daniel Boone" a real treat.

Literary Women in Japan

JOSEPHINE CONGER-KANEKO

UTA IMAL, EDITOR
"TWENTIETH CENTURY WOMAN"

With her tiny pigeon toes and her butterfly gown, her painted hair and her soft, timid voice, the Japanese woman hardly suggests the possibility of memorizing thousands of Chinese characters that are necessary in the most ordinary reading, and much less would one believe her capable of evolving ideas and expressing them intelligently.

But she does both. The Japanese woman of the old era was, like her entire nation, a shut-in. She was the pre-eminently exclusive member of an exclusive people. Her powers, her whole life, were wholly at the disposal of her family first, and afterward of her husband—or, more correctly speaking, her lord and master. In a book of the old Samurai is written the law for women: "Firstly, a woman has no lord to serve but her husband. She must obey and honor him as her lord and master. Be cautious. Never despise nor slight his words. A woman's first duty is obedience. She should be careful about the expression of her face and never show anger or excitement in her looks."

Subject to such restrictions, it was impossible for the stranger, in the past, to learn of the real possibilities of the Japanese woman. He could be guided only by the artist's conception of her and gives freshness to the use of an acquired language. Mrs. Iwamoto just became known as a writer through her translations of Proctor's "Sailor Boy" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" into the Japanese language. She also wrote a volume of essays in English. An extract from one of these, "Some Phases of the Japanese Home and Home Life," will give a hint of her style and of the process of her thought:

"Japan, like any other ancient country, has had a unique national life and history. She boasts of a civilization, a code of morals, a form of government and a system of education all peculiar to herself, and she cherishes these as heirlooms expressive of the wisdom and experience handed down through the whole line of her ancestors. . . . You all know that the old-time Japanese woman was trained according to rules of conduct that were most severe in their rigidity. She was assiduously taught to guard her personal virtue and the proud honor of her household. Death was the only alternative in case she swerved from her duties. . . . Place, on the one hand, this type of womanhood, serving in the house of her lord and master with singleness of purpose and with devotion strong in its simplicity and, on the other, an average girl of modern education, with a smattering of western knowledge, it is true, but without discretion and judgment to apply her newly found information, and, of course, the latter will appear at a disadvantage. . . . In the present home, where the old and the new elements combine, contrary streams of thought and action thwart the young wife at her every step, and, in spite of her resolution, many are the tears that she sheds unseen. . . . But she must learn to be just as cautious and deferential in one respect as it is her duty to be prompt and decisive in another. For herein lies the very test of her intrinsic worth and usefulness. . . . We deplore the many evils that have issued and still do issue from the ancient household system in Japan. . . . Yet we cannot help noting that this has been perhaps the most successful system of discipline ever extant—a discipline productive of the utmost diligence, circumspectness and self-reliance. We certainly owe it to this system that indolent, whimsical and selfish women have been set aside and the noble, self-sacrificing type of wives and mothers was preserved for the old-time Japanese homes and handed down as an heirloom to the present day."

Another woman of marked ability as a writer was the Baroness Nakajima. As a child she excelled in her studies and was allowed to go to a boys' school, there being no high schools for girls at that time. Her name as a scholar became known at court and she was appointed as a teacher of learning to the empress. After retiring from this service she toured the country for special study and observation. It was an unusual thing for an unmarried woman to travel alone, giving lectures on political and scientific subjects and at one time the baroness—at that time Yoshiko Kishida—was arrested and imprisoned on the charge of plotting against the government. While in prison she wrote many poems in Chinese, giving vent to her feelings regarding the condition of her country. Later on she married a newspaper man, who was afterward made baron. He was the first president of the house of commons and also a minister to Italy. The young couple never ceased to interest themselves in the political affairs of their land and at one time were banished from the capital city, charged with disloyalty. Mental and physical overwork brought the baron to an early death and the wife, broken hearted, followed him within two years. The Baroness Nakajima was considered a very beautiful woman and the many experiences she underwent as student and reformer gave depth and strength to her character which speak plainly in her written works. Her essays and lectures are numerous and her last work, which is a daily record of her life, is very instructive and interesting. She wrote minutely of passing events and illustrated these details with fine drawings or comic sketches. This work she continued "until" within five days of her death.

Miss Ichiye Higuchi, who died at 23, had already attained fame as a writer of realistic fiction. Being of humble and poor parentage, she was obliged to leave school at ten years of age, a time when most children are merely beginning to learn to read. With her sister she helped to support her widowed mother, but gave all of her spare-time to study and writing. She was forced to live with her family in the outskirts of the city, among the poorest and lowest people and it was there that she got the material for all of her stories, which are pathetic in the extreme. Notwithstanding the fact that her opportunities for learning were limited, her composition is without fault, her style chaste and expressive. It was not until after consumption, bred through poverty and overwork, had taken strong hold on her system that her genius was recognized. For a little time then she knew the luxury of friends and of admiration. "But I have never known what youth free from responsibilities means," she told a friend. The Japanese bow low in reverence to the memory of Miss Higuchi, who might well be styled the tempest Gorky of Japanese literature.

Miss Kaho Miyake, Mrs. Kajita and Mrs. Otsuke are all prominent writers of to-day. Miss Uta Imal is a representative of the ultra modern Japanese woman. Miss Imal is the chief editor of Nijuseikinofujin, or Twentieth Century Woman and is one of the founders of the Hokkaido Women's society. She is working toward that day when the Japanese women will rise as a unit in their declarations along certain lines of emancipation. She is hopeful, buoyant and unswerving in her purpose, and as she belongs to the newest generation of workers she believes she will see great changes in methods and principles before her sun is set.

The daughter of Kashi Iwamoto promises to be a prominent figure in the future literary world of Japan. She has been writing stories and translating from foreign tongues for several years.

The first woman to enter the regular newspaper field was Mrs. Takeyo Takegoshi, who, with her husband, joined the staff of the Kokumin-Shimbun, in Tokyo, some 15 years ago. After four or five years other women became interested in newspaper work and to-day many are employed as special writers, as reporters and as editors of departments for women.

These are but a few of the women writers of Japan. They are sufficient to illustrate, however, the fact that the Japanese woman is a creature of considerable reserve mental force and of intense feeling. Under the new regime only was it possible for her to make these facts known to the outside world, since the old teaching constrained her to keep hidden every feeling, every thought, that she might develop a more Spartan-like character, capable of enduring great sacrifice when sacrifice should come—as it did in the lives of many Japanese women. It was not an accident that the Japanese soldiers repulsed the larger men of the Russian army. They were the sons of mothers whose discipline through thousands of years had well nigh reached perfection, whose endurance was great and whose wits were sharpened by constant contact with domineering husbands and fractious mothers-in-law.

It is an unhappy fact that the Japanese literature loses its artistic beauty and its real strength when translated into foreign languages. This is probably due to the fact that the Japanese student is still struggling in the mazes of the foreign tongues and is not as yet capable of manipulating the new words so as to express the fine shades of meaning that he sees and appreciates in his own literature. The delicacy with which an artist attacks his subject in the Japanese is likely to become clumsy or inane and meaningless when he attempts to employ other languages as a medium of expression. This, perhaps, is the reason that westerners say that Japan "is a country without literature."

JAPAN'S ANCESTRAL GODS

One of the most marvelous manifestations of patriotic and religious enthusiasm in modern Japan was occasioned recently by the transference of the imperial shrines at Ise to their new tabernacle just completed, the London Standard says. This remarkable Shinto festival may be witnessed only every 21 years, when the temples of the ancestral gods are reconstructed and the sacred objects are removed to their new abode. The Ise temples have been thus renewed every score of years since A. D. 690 at least and for how long before that no one knows, the present occasion being the fifty-seventh rebuilding on record.

Such a periodic reconstruction will appear quite necessary when it is recollected that on these shrines no mortal hand is ever permitted to execute repairs. After they are built the gods of the nation take possession of them and thenceforward they are not touched till they go the way of all things.

The work of rebuilding the sacred shrines begins almost as soon as the last reconstruction is complete by the appointment of an imperial commission entrusted with the important enterprise. Every stage is marked by religious ceremonies, from the felling of the trees to the driving of the last nail. The completion is emphasized by a special festival of purification, after which the temples pass from the hands of the commissioners to the priestly custodians of the imperial shrines.

Finally comes the great festival of removing the ancestral gods and the sacred treasures and relics to the new "holy of holies," which took place recently. It is computed that no fewer than 40,000 persons were present on the night of the actual removal. Though the august spectacle takes place at night, the preparation for it appears to go on for two or three days previously, but the ceremonies of the notable day itself are the most interesting. The day opened with the appearance before the new temples of a specially chosen virgin, who went through a peculiar ceremony of burying in the ground before the shrine a jar containing offerings to the god of earth.

Later in the day began a long procession of priests in gorgeous robes of green and gold, chanting weird litany and monotonous strains to the strains of archaic instruments. It is affirmed that the service has in no respect been changed during the last thousand years. With the settling down of darkness came the great function of removal. A detachment of priests, led by a priestly representative of the imperial house, went into the soon to be abandoned shrines to examine the treasures and to measure the sacred fabrics. As the latter are reputed to be more than 330,000 feet in length, this was no small matter.

Traveling Man Got Eyed
A traveling man called on the manager of a large New York concern the other day and sent his card in by the boy at the outside gate. The boy sauntered back lazily and told the traveling man that the manager wouldn't see him.

"Well, you go and ask him for the card I sent in," said the caller. In a few minutes the boy returned with his second trip. "Say," remarked the boy, "the boss told me to tell you that he tore up that card, but he sent a nickel to you to pay for it."

The traveling man was deeply insulted, but he decided to get back as best he could. He opened his card case and drew out another card, handing it to the boy.

"Give this to your boss," he said, "and tell him that I'll keep the money. My cards are two for five. Much obliged."

The manager rushed out of the gate to find the traveling man, but he was too late. The man had left.

Engaged to Three

By DONALD ALLEN

(Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.)

For two years Mr. Enos Jackson had been driving over a certain route in the state of New Jersey and selling sewing machines. He was a widower, over 60 years old, and he had a heart in his bosom. He sold the best machine at the cheapest price; he gave credit, he was pleasant to the wives and sympathetic to the widows. He had a paternal air, and he had venerable whiskers. Everybody liked "Pap Jackson," as he came to be called, and "Pap" liked everybody in turn.

There were three widows on the agent's route, and just how he came to fall in love with the Widow Turner and propose for her hand was a matter not quite clear to him. He thought it over many times, but the ciew always eluded him. However, the fact remained that he was in love, and had proposed and been accepted. Things had gone that far and then stuck. He wanted to marry and meant to marry, but there was no particular hurry about it. Money was rather tight, and it would be wiser to wait until dollar bills could be picked up in the road.

The Widow Turner was a very nice widow. She had a good farm and a comfortable house, and if she was in any hurry to clinch the bargain she was a woman and couldn't say so. That's where her sex is helpless, except now and then. Enos got around once in ten days, and he threw out hints about next month, and six months and next year, and so things went on.

The Widow Turner lived at the southern end of the route. It one day struck "Pap" that he ought to get engaged to a widow at the northern end of the route to sort of balance things. He therefore asked the Widow Shevlin if she would marry him, and she said she would. In her case, also, there was no great hurry about it. She, too, had a farm and was getting along all right. Once in awhile, as the wind toyed with his venerable whiskers while the old horse jogged

Nemesis may be slow, but she is sure. So are some widows. It was the center widow, Mrs. Smithson, who first got a hint of what was going on. She lay low for Pap. On his next call she spiked him right to the floor. This was in the forenoon, and she informed him that he must appear with a minister by five in the afternoon or the engagement would be off and a breach-of-promise suit be on. Enos was rather glad to hear her say so. It seemed to settle things. He promised to be back on time, and when the hour arrived the widow was dressed for the occasion. No Pap and no preacher. She waited one hour and then removed her wedding dress and loaded an old shotgun used to menace hen-hawks. Next day she would go on a quiet hunt for the man with the whiskers.

The widow was saved the trouble. Soon after daylight Enos showed up. He had been to a village seven miles away to get hair and whiskers colored a jet black. The change was tremendous. It was like painting a straw-stalk with jampblack. The venerable whiskers glinted green, blue and black in the morning sun.

"Sit down," commanded the widow, after looking him over.

He sat, and she went to the wash-house, filled a tub of water, handed down a gallon of soft soap, and returning to Enos, she took him by the ear and led him out and said:

"Soap—scrub—rinse—scour!"

It was ten o'clock in the forenoon before the last of the dye had disappeared. When Enos announced the glad news, he was taken by the ear and led to the smokehouse and pushed in and the door locked on him.

"What are you going to do?" he called through the door.

"Keep you safe until I get back!" was the reply.

Then the widow drove three miles and got a preacher and picked up two witnesses on her way back, and Pap was brought from the smokehouse and stood up to become a married man. To the surprise of the widow he didn't flunk. On the contrary, he appeared in the best of spirits and announced that it was a load off his mind. An hour after the preacher had gone and the happy couple had the house to themselves a whirl of dust came up the road and a buggy stopped at the gate. Then the door was opened to the Widow Turner. Her jaw was set. The news of the contemplated marriage had reached her. She stood before the parental Pap with venerable whiskers, her arms akimbo, and she was about to open on him when the bride came forward to say:

"No use—you are too late. You may take the spring calf out in the yard, if you want damages, but you'll get no more. You must be a queer sort of widow to let a man slip through your hands in this way."

The widow was yet in sight down the road when another dust cloud came from the opposite direction, and another widow appeared. It was the Widow Shevlin. She had begun to say things when the bride interrupted with:

"He's mine, and talk won't help things. You had more chances than I did, and if you didn't take advantage of them it's not my fault. I suppose you want damages, and you can pick out six of my Leghorn hens to take back with you."

And when the second widow and the squeaking hens had disappeared up the road off Pap rubbed his hands together and smiled on his bride and said:

"You are really a wonderful woman—wonderful. It's so easy that I wish I'd been engaged to two more!"

Steinmetz the Electrical Wizard.

The greatest expert on practical electricity in this country is the man who is least connected with that science in the popular mind. He is Charles Proteus Steinmetz, who receives $75,000 yearly from the General Electric Company for teaching and directing its force of men. Twenty years ago Steinmetz was walking up Broadway practically a penniless immigrant, although his expulsion from his native country, Germany, had been because he had edited a socialist paper at college too successfully.

In spite of his education he had a long and discouraging search before he got work. He found it as a draftsman in the shops of a great electrical company at Yonkers. In two years he had pushed his way into the experimental staff and a little later was drawing a large salary. Finally his company was absorbed into the larger company, and he with it.

Looking Far Ahead.

"Of course you will learn something about that man's financial circumstances before you consent to marry him?" said the solicitous friend.

"Oh, yes," replied the New York woman. "I shall go further than that and ascertain just what his ideas are about a reasonable alimony allowance."

A Wholesale Worrier.

"I'm worrying about that comet," "Better worry about your rent."

"Never mind the rent. When I borrow trouble, I borrow a good-sized batch."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

His business was to sell sewing machines on the installment plan.

along, Enos fell to wondering how he was going to marry both widows without getting himself into the toils of the law, but he didn't let it worry him. His business was to sell sewing machines on the installment plan. One day, when his whiskers had blown off sideways over a front wheel, he suddenly checked the horse and exclaimed:

"By John, but why not! Of course will!"

It had just occurred to him that as he was engaged to a widow at either end of the route he ought to be engaged to one in the middle of it to preserve the geometrical relation of things. He was then within half a mile of the Widow Smithson's house, and he hastened the gait of his horse.

"Nothing to-day, Pap," said the widow as she opened the door to his knock.

"Oh, but I think there is, widder—I think there is," he replied, as he bustled in. "Widder, I've been liking you a long time."

"I hadn't suspected it."

"But it's the truth, and now I'm going to ask you to marry me. It's rather sudden, but you ain't going to faint away over it."

"Yes, it's rather sudden, but if you are in earnest—"

"Never more so in my life. If you don't say yes I'll go and hang myself."

The widow bit her thumb and blushed, and said she guessed she would, and that settled it. Enos did not press her to name the day. He did not say whether it was to be next month or 40 years hence. He simply kissed her and said "all right," and went out and pursued his way, and she did not see him again for a fortnight.

It is to be supposed that a man engaged to three widows at once would have had some solemn moments, but such was not the case with Enos Jackson. He went right on being happy and trusting to the luck of a sewing machine agent. For six months he kept those widows guessing. Three widows within five miles of each other, and yet none of them heard he was engaged to the other!

NEW CHICAGO SKYSCRAPER

Harris Trust and Savings Bank to Erect 20-Story Building in Monroe Street.

Chicago.—"La Salle street" has for a long time meant the financial district of Chicago, as "Wall street" has meant that of New York. But the term has lost its significance within the last few years, for the big banking concerns of the western metropolis have been moving to Monroe street, one after another, until for several blocks that thoroughfare is occupied almost exclusively by financial institutions.

Several of them have erected skyscrapers, and others have put up handsome buildings for their sole use. The latest of these great bank buildings to be planned is for the Harris Trust and Savings bank, on the south side of Monroe street between Clark and La Salle. It will be 20 stories high, with foundations going down 110 feet to bed rock.

ARIZONA WOMEN WOULD VOTE

Miss Laura Gregg is Moving Spirit in the Southwestern State's Suffrage Crusade.

Phoenix, Ariz.—A few weeks ago when the present session of congress opened, there was no woman suffrage organization in Arizona. The prospects of statehood, however, stirred to activity the women who do not relish the idea of being excluded from citizenship, and there are more than a thousand of them now enrolled under the votes for women banner. The moving spirit behind this campaign is Miss Laura Gregg, well known throughout the west for her advocacy of the woman's cause. It is safe to predict that Miss Gregg and her energetic army will make things lively in the Constitutional convention.

Feminine Dressing of the Hair

The poet Ovid did not think it beneath him to study the art of hair dressing as an aid to feminine beauty, and his advice on the subject, given in elegant verse, is excellent. "Never let your hair be in disorder," he writes. "Nothing pleases us so much as neatness," and yet, he admits, "there are many women whom hair apparently in disorder suits; it might not have been dressed since yesterday; it has been arranged this very minute. Such was the beautiful disorder of Vole when Hercules saw her for the first time in a town taken by assault that he cried 'I love her.'"

University Teachers Farming.

Columbia university has been quick to recognize the general wave of interest in agriculture and is providing courses in scientific and economic farming. It has arranged for a course of 13 lectures on economic agriculture, to be given this winter by prominent men who can speak with authority on various phases of agriculture.

Do farmers eat the proper sort of food?

The farmer of today buys a much larger proportion of the food that goes on the table than he did ten years ago. It's a good thing that this is so because he has a great variety to select from. He should, however, use great care in selecting for the best results in health and strength.

The widespread tendency in the city to increase the amount of Quaker Oats eaten is due very largely to the recent demonstrations by scientific men that the Quaker Oats fed man is the man with greatest physical endurance and greatest mental vigor.

Farmers should give this subject careful thought and should increase the quantity of Quaker Oats eaten by themselves, their children and the farm hands.

Analyzed by Chemists.

Appropos of President Taft and his recent decision about whiskey, Richard Le Gallienne said at a dinner at the St. Regis:

"While I was living in Liverpool there arose a hot whisky discussion. Was pot still whisky the only wholesome one, or was patent still whisky the one non-poisonous drink? Chemical analyses were applied to every whisky going."

"A Liverpudlian entered a public house near the Albert docks one night and said:

"Is yer whisky pure?"

"Well, I should think so, the publican answered. 'It's been paralyzed by three anarchists.'"

Betrayed by the Tipping Habit.

"Your friend, the count, my dear," said the millionaire to his blooming daughter, "has an odd way of extending his hand. Did you notice when we parted to-night that he held his palm upmost?"

His daughter sighed.

"I was in hopes," she murmured, "that if Alphonse was exposed it would be found that he was at least a restaurant waiter—but I'm afraid he was only a shoe shiner in a barber shop."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proposition here is to cure him by curing his blood. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for me—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 44 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others."—Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for fibroid tumor, I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female illness such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Her Usual Line of Talk.
A certain Louisville social leader, whom we will call Mrs. Fayette County, to avoid identifying her, was told by her husband over the telephone that he would bring a number of guests home to dinner. The party was altogether unexpected, and in all the house, which has become noted for the generous and sumptuous dinners spread in it, there was not enough food.
Mrs. County got busy at once and instructed her cook to order certain supplies while she planned the rest of the dinner. A little later Mrs. County happened in the room where the telephone was and was horrified to hear the cook talking ferociously into the telephone, something as follows:
"An' Ah want six dozen sof' shell crabs, an' ef yo' doan get dem up here mighty quick Ah'll skin every one of ye, yo low down— Who is dis? Dis is Mrs. Fayette County, dat's who dis is, and Ah means every word Ah say."
"Mandy," cried the mistress, "what do you mean? You must not."
"Lawdy," returned the cook, "that's all right, Miss Fay, Ah talks to 'um like dat for yo' all de time."—Louisville Times.

Choose Your Words.
A lady who was very plain looking called on a friend. This friend's little girl came into the room, and her mother introduced her.
"But, mamma, isn't she awfully homely?" said the "young hopeful" after the lady's departure.
"Why, Laura, you mustn't say such things. It isn't polite."
"I meant it only as a joke."
"But, dear, how much more of a joke it would have been if you had said, 'How pretty she is!'"

He Thought It Peculiar.
Some years ago Frank A. Munsey, the magazine man, hired a private secretary. Speaker Reed dropped in to call on Mr. Munsey, who was an old friend of his. The secretary said that Mr. Munsey was engaged.
"All right," said Reed, "I'll wait." At the end of half an hour Munsey's door opened, and the publisher appeared, showing his caller out.
Seeing the speaker, he grasped his hand and dragged him into his office. An hour later, when Reed had gone, Mr. Munsey called his secretary.
"Look here, Block," he said, "what do you mean by letting Speaker Reed wait unannounced half an hour?"
"Wa-wa-wah that Mr. Reed?"
"It certainly was."
"Why, I thought it wath the Rev. Dr. John Hall," said the secretary.
"Dr. Hall has been dead two years," answered Munsey severely.
"I know it," replied the secretary. "That's why I thought it wath the very peculiar."

Joined the Rejected.
A murder case had been called in court, and it was extremely difficult to get a jury. A long list of talesmen had been examined with poor results when Mike McGinnis was summoned.
"Mr. McGinnis," asked the judge, "have you formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner at the bar?"
"No, sir," replied Mike.
"Have you any conscientious scruples against capital punishment?"
"Not in this case, your honor," Mike replied.

Staying Power.
Success in life depends upon staying power. The reason for failure in most cases is lack of perseverance. Men get tired and give up.—J. R. Miller.
Had It In For Them.
Harvey Nanigan's mother-in-law was taken sick at his house one night and helped herself to a large dose of rat poison, thinking it was painkiller. They had a frightful time with the old lady. She had consumed sufficient poison, the doctor said, to kill a dozen persons. But she pulled through.
"It was a close shave," said the doctor the next morning. "She took enough to kill the whole family, but the stuff fortunately must have been in stock for some time, and nearly all its strength was gone."
A month later a friend asked Harvey Nanigan to recommend a reliable druggist to him.
"Squills is a good man. I understand," said the friend. "Know anything about him?"
"Well," said Harvey Nanigan slowly, "I wouldn't conscientiously recommend Squills & Co. to you, old man, they double me on some rat poison."—Louisville Times.

Still in Love.
A happily married woman who had enjoyed thirty-three years of wedlock and who was the grandmother of four beautiful little children had an amusing old colored woman for a cook.
One day when a box of especially beautiful flowers was left for the mistress the cook happened to be present, and she said, "Yo' husband send you all the pretty flowers you gits, missy?"
"Certainly my husband, mammy," proudly answered the lady.
"Glory!" exclaimed the cook. "He suttently am holdin' out well!"

Embarrassing.
When the new minister, a handsome and unmarried man, made his first pastoral call on the Foslacks he took little Anna up in his arms and tried to kiss her. But the child refused to be kissed. She struggled loose and ran off into the next room, where her mother was putting a few finishing touches to her adornment before going into the parlor to greet the clergyman.
"Mamma," the little girl whispered, "the man in the parlor wanted me to kiss him."
"Well," replied mamma, "why didn't you let him? I would if I were you."
Thereupon Anna ran back into the parlor, and the minister asked:
"Well, little lady, won't you kiss me now?"
"No, I won't," replied Anna promptly, "but mamma says she will!"

The ice in Pine Lake disappeared first of the week and navigation is now open. However the earliness of the season has caught the boat owners unprepared. Work on the Steamer Hum is being rushed and that boat will be in East Jordan probably not later than the middle of next week. The Northern Michigan Transportation Co's Steamer Missouri will leave Chicago on its first trip next Tuesday April 6th.

Quite a swap-around is taking place in our business realm. R. F. Steffes has moved his cigar shop to the second floor of the Kimball block, recently occupied by the Herald. Cason Bros. laundry is being moved into the Kenny building vacated by Mr. Steffes. Peter Welzhuhn's second-hand store is being moved into the Zitka building vacated by the laundry. Dan Kale has purchased the building occupied by the second hand store and will move his lunch-counter and billiard room into same. As yet the first floor of the Jepson building, occupied by Mr. Kale has not been spoken for.

The South Arm Republican Primary Caucus passed off quietly last Saturday afternoon. Supervisor J. H. Graff, who has served the interests of our township admirably in the past, was re-nominated over J. E. Chew by 64 votes; Clerk W. A. Pickard and Treasurer R. F. Steffes had no opposition; Geo. W. Haynor was nominated highway com'r by 100 majority, his opponent being H. B. Hipp. For Highway Overseer Josiah St. John and George Pringle ran close, the former winning out by one vote. Sam'l McCalmion was nominated Justice of the Peace and John Carson member Board of Review; for Constables, J. F. Chatterton, Wm. Johnson, T. J. Smith and Harry Curkendall were nominated. For township committee the following were elected:—E. L. Lorraine, Harry Curkendall and LeRoy Sherman. We urge every voter in the township to turn out and vote "yes" on the county primary system and also see to it that their names are enrolled for the September primaries.

Opera House Mass of Ruins

Loveday Opera House Totally Destroyed by Fire

The Loveday Opera House was completely destroyed by fire this Saturday morning at a loss of $6,000 with $3,000 insurance.

The fire originated around the stage and was first discovered by Mr. Hilliard about 3:00 a. m. Considerable valuable time was lost in turning in an alarm, "central" not being able to get either fire whistle. Our firemen responded promptly and performed good service in protecting the adjacent buildings.

The building was owned by D. C. Loveday and under the management of W. A. Loveday. The structure was formerly a skating rink but about eleven years ago was remodelled and has for years been known throughout the theatrical sphere as one of the best show-houses in Northern Michigan.

Just what will be done toward rebuilding is at present uncertain. We must have an opera house at once and probably a stock company will be the solution.

STROEBEL BROS.

RECEIVING A BOOK AGENT

Do it as This Man Did and Your Private Sanctum Will Never Be Invaded by the Hot-air Gentry.

Wearing the winning smile of his kind, the book agent slipped into the office of a young attorney in the Williamson building.

This attorney received the book agent most cordially. "I know what you want," he began. "You're a book agent. I can tell by the prospectus done up in olecloth that you've got under your coat. But I'm not in the market—honestly. What you got? Edition de luxe of the 'Arabian Nights,' eh? Now I'll tell you what I'll do. I've been buying so many books that I just naturally mustn't talk to you at all. If you'll promise to run on away and not show me your dummy bindings and sample pages and things I'll put you onto a man that'll just about buy everything you've got. This fellow's crazy about the 'Arabian Nights' especially. Just the other day he was asking me if I knew what was the best edition of 'Arabian Nights' for a person to buy.

"And the beauty of dealing with this man," went on the lawyer, "is that he'd rather buy a book from some one right in his office. He hates to go to the bother of running into a book store. It's often been said of him that he never yet has been known to refuse an audience with a book agent. Book salesmen are a sort of a hobby of his, I guess.

"Now you chase on down and see this chap—Samuel Mather his name is, and a good pal of mine. You won't have any trouble getting to him. If the people in the outer office there don't want to let you in, just tell 'em you want to see Mr. Mather about a book. O, that's all right. Don't bother, thanking me for the tip. Good-buck to you!" And the lawyer turned back to his desk with a suppressed grin.

What Every Woman Reads.

"Well?" suggested the man whose eyes trouble him. "And then?" "That's about all. The president of Venezuela or Veragua, or something, is in a mix-up on account of some letters—very interesting and well written they were, too—he wrote years ago to a dancer up in the Bronx. King Leopold is quite ill and the illness seems to be caused by worry over the Ferrer case. They threatened to kill him, you know. The sugar trust was dissolved up in St. Paul the other day and they're appealing the habeas corpus on a writ of replevin, as near as have been compelled to put on 16 horsepower electric bulbs. Nothing I can remember. The subway people else but the shop advertisements. Shall I read them to you?"

"Don't bother, beloved," said the man. "You have done enough."

The Song of the Radiator.

"Don't talk to me about the old songs," said the warm flat dweller gaily. "There's nothing in the way of songs that appeals to me so forcibly as the song of the radiator. There's something about its dulcet tones that gets right down into the marrow of my bones. The melody of it, the crescendo, the fortissimo, the pianissimo, the staccato, the ascending and descending scale, waxing louder, louder, then diminishing until you can hardly hear it at all. That's the song that appeals to me."

"It's the song that would appeal to me, too," the cold flat dweller signed, "if the janitor would let it, but he won't. That's what he does—grades its music mostly so's you can hardly hear it at all."

A Clergyman in Racing.

It is seldom that a clergyman has official connection with horse racing, but Dr. Noyes, who has just written an account of his chaplaincy in Paris, was for many years the only Englishman on the board under the Societe des Steeplechases de France for adjudicating upon any question that might arise connected with the riders, many of whom are English. Until the date of his departure from Paris he regularly received tickets for the reserved enclosure.

Just Such a Gent.

ENGLISH SPARROW AIDS ORCHARD DURING WINTER

Hungry Little Birds Clean Branch After Branch of Fruit Trees of Large Hemispherical, Reddish Scale.

A Pair of English Sparrows.

The good that birds do an orchard in winter is well worth considering, says Illinois Farmer. There are often quite long periods in winter when all insects are in their hibernating stages, as well as most seeds of weeds and grasses, and sealed down under a coating of snow and ice and the birds that remain with us are put to straits to find a sufficiency of food.

It is at such times that they render the orchardist efficient service in the destruction of the more conspicuous scale insects, as well as of the eggs and pupae of larger species which they search out in crevices of bark, around the next season's blossom buds, and especially, in the crotches of the branches and twigs.

The species most active in this good work are the various woodpeckers, notably the small black and white downy and hairy, the nuthatches and several species of the titmouse family, as well as the blue jay, and to some extent the snowbirds and sparrows.

It is here that even the outlawed English sparrow has been seen absolutely cleaning branch after branch of peach and plum trees of the large hemispherical, reddish terrapin scale, so prevalent now on stone fruit trees.

The cottony maple scale is another conspicuous pest on which this sparrow, as well as several other small birds, feed persistently when no more easily obtained food is available, and in northern climates, where snow and ice prevail, this scale seldom appears in destructive numbers for two consecutive years, mainly owing to the good offices of these hunger-driven birds. The scurfy scale, not large, but very obvious from its white color, also furnishes minute but dainty tidbits for the creepers and other small birds. It is unfortunately true that it cannot be claimed that our allies in our war on insects, render an appreciable aid in the control of the oyster shell bark louse or the still more harmful San Jose species, probably from the fact that these cling so closely to the bark of the trees and simulate the latter in color.

Among the migrating species of birds are also many that have been observed feeding upon the larger scale insects as well as upon aphides and other gregarious forms, especially in early spring when they first return to their nesting places.

In all nearly 60 different species of birds, in the various sections of the country, are known to feed habitually or occasionally upon these small but exceedingly injurious enemies of fruit and shade trees, as well as many more lowly plants, and, though their aid in reducing the numbers of these pests cannot be exactly estimated it is unquestionably of very considerable importance.

Excellent Garden Compost.

The best fertilizer I have ever tried for garden crops is a compost made of two parts stable manure, one part hen manure and one part hardwood ashes. I usually place the compost heap as near the spot to be fertilized as possible, so that the work of distribution can be done at odd times when other work is not pressing, says a writer in Baltimore American. For cabbage in our section no fertilizer equals this, and root crops are equally as good when the compost is well mixed with the soil. The work of composting can be commenced at any time, but the more thoroughly it is mixed the sooner it will become ready to apply to the spot where it is needed.

Setting Hens.

Setting hens should not be fed while on the nest. They need all the exercise they are likely to get. Too constant setting makes them of bad disposition and difficult to manage when they come off with the brood. Eggs will stand a wide range of temperature without injury.

Farm Bookkeeping.

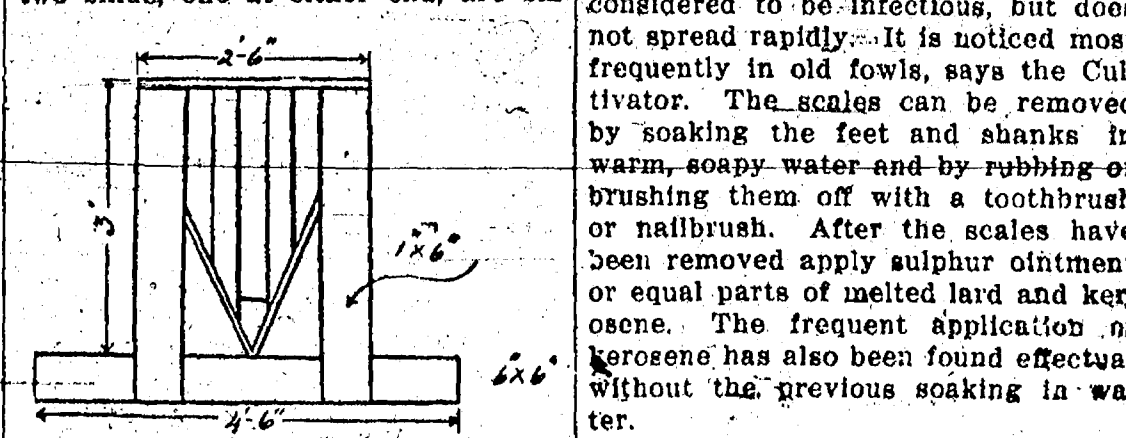

Now is a good time to commence keeping an accurate account of expenses for the year 1910, but comparatively few farmers do this; yet it is an excellent thing for the farmer to keep "tabs" on his receipts and expenses. It will very likely result in some surprises.

GOOD FEED RACK FOR SHEEP

The accompanying illustration will give an idea of a very good plan of feeding rack for about 16 sheep. This is quite easily made and has the advantage of giving the animals a chance to clean up all the fodder placed before them without straining to reach the last of it, as is the case in a wide bottom rack. In this style the fodder settles to the bottom as it is eaten out. The rack has an open top and gives easy access to feed. The two skids, one at either end, are six inches by six inches and on the center of these a V-shaped sill sits with pointed edge down. To these beveled sides the one inch by three inch slats are nailed and as the beveling of this

The calf should not be fed skim milk for two weeks after birth. The horse industry is attracting the attention of the farmer to a greater extent than in any other period.

WANTED TO BE ON SAFE SIDE

Woman, Twice Deserted, Didn't Mean to Take Any Chances on Her Third Hubby.

The officers of the thumb print bureau were just wishing for something interesting to turn up when a telephone message offered timely diversion. "A woman was speaking.

"Do you make prints of anybody's thumbs except criminals?" she asked. "The bureau did.

"Well," said the woman, "if I will come down there right away with a man—will you make a print of his thumbs?"

The bureau would. The man and the woman came.

"We want his thumb prints for identification," said the woman. "We are going to be married to-morrow. He is my third husband. The other two ran away and I had the hardest kind of a time to find them because there was no sure way of identifying them. They say thumb prints can never change and that a man can be tracked by them to the ends of the earth. I hope I shall never have to use them, but it is just as well to be on the safe side. Will you make them?" The bureau did.

HOW A DOCTOR CURED SCALP DISEASE

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. —Miss Jessie E. Buchanan, R. F. D. 3, Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 7, 1909."

Kept with Barnum's Circus

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with my shows for the last three seasons, and I can cheerfully certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

Not Willing to Commit Himself.

The teacher had called upon Freddie Brown to give an illustration of the proper manner in which to compare the adjective "clean."

"Mother is clean," said he flatteringly, "father is—cleaner." Here he paused.

"And," prompted the teacher. Freddie was still silent and very thoughtful.

"Haven't you some other relative?" asked the teacher, smiling.

"Oh, yes," replied Freddie, "there's auntie—but I ain't sure about her!"

CHANGE THE VIBRATION It Makes for Health.

A man tried leaving off meat, potatoes, coffee, and etc., and adopted a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts with cream, some crisp toast and a cup of Postum.

His health began to improve at once for the reason that a meat eater will reach a place once in a while where his system seems to become clogged and the machinery doesn't work smoothly.

A change of this kind puts aside food of low nutritive value and takes up food and drink of the highest value, already partly digested and capable of being quickly changed into good, rich blood and strong tissue.

A most valuable feature of Grape-Nuts is the natural phosphate of potash grown in the grains from which it is made. This is the element which transforms albumen in the body into the soft gray substance which fills brain and nerve centers.

A few days' use of Grape-Nuts will give one a degree of nervous strength well worth the trial.

Look in pkgs for the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Costumes in Fashion

On the left is a long coat of gray cloth, trimmed with darker shade of braid—black velvet toque with gray, green and black algrette. The second is a blue serge tailored suit, with collar and buttons of black satin, large black hat, with blue plumes.

TYPE OF SPRING MILLINERY TIGHT SKIRT NOT GRACEFUL

Hat with High Gathered Crown Most Elaborately and Becomingly Trimmed.

Among the early spring models is a comfortable hat, becoming and well fitting, made with a high gathered crown held out with an inner one of book muslin, and a fluted brim of soft moire. This does not hang around the face, but is made double and has enough thickness to hold it in position.

About the high crown is tied a wide scarf of soft satin ribbon. When black is used for the hat then one of the new light blues is used for the scarf. Silver and gold gauze are also tied around instead of ribbon and end in a fine, careless bow in front.

The expensive models show this hat with a crown of lace moire shot with blue, pink, and green and lined with chiffon or gauze to match the color of the scarf.

COAT FOR MATRON.

This is made in black face cloth, and is a simple sacque shape, a style which matrons always find so useful. The loose bishop sleeves is set to a turn-back cuff of cloth, braided lightly at the edge, the collar being braided to match. Bonnet of black crinoline trimmed with ostrich tips and black satin ribbon. Materials required: Three yards cloth 48 inches wide, 1 dozen yards braid.

Keeping Faucets Bright.

In the bathroom the nickel faucets can be kept bright as new indefinitely if frequently washed and given a brisk rub daily when the room is set in order. A clean cheesecloth dust er does this purpose specially well.

Mistake Made in Carrying the Fashion of the Moment to Undue Length.

A grave protest should be made against the skirt that is narrow at its best and tied in just above the ankles at its worst.

It should be condemned and discarded by every woman who considers personal comfort and a graceful appearance. There is an independent quality of American women that refuses to walk with knees pressed together and a hampered Japanese manner of taking tiny steps.

After all, there is a great artistic delight in a flowing skirt that follows in soft, sinuous lines the motions of the figures.

In Paris and London women have accepted the inhibition of easy, graceful motion, but it is to be hoped that our fair ones will in some usual and clever way attain the best of these suggestions, and at the same time keep the senseless tyranny at arm's length.

Of Craft Cloth.

The portiere may be mere play, and altogether possible to the veriest amateur if some simple idea be carried out.

Make it of arts and crafts cloth in a soft, natural tone, and after it is hemmed with silk to match it work a row of simple trees one above another down the length of the hanging along one of its selvages.

Not in elaborate embroidery, but in the coarsest of cross-stitching done in worsted yarn, and in a combination of dusky green and blue shades, each so dull as to melt into one another.

Again, if a one-toned curtain be desirable, choose an Indian red, dull brown or blue, and using the coarsest worsted yarn, hemstitch a broad hem along a very open line which you have drawn, or overcast the hem in coarse hemming stitches a quarter of an inch in length.

Necessary Gowns.

A modiste claims that three dresses a season are sufficient for the average woman, citing the ever useful tailor-made, a calling gown for afternoon wear and décollete for evening wear. This might do in a case of necessity, but no society woman can get along with one evening dress for an entire season any more than she can get along with one pair of gloves.

A woman moving in a circle of well-dressed women must dress either well or else step down and out. Her dress must be good, stylish and noticeable. Dress does not make the woman, but it most assuredly does make her place in circles where stylish attire is more important than many other things.

Fine Idea.

One embosses one's own letter paper now, the neat raised monogram being pressed into the paper by means of a celluloid tablet and a little roller. Any combination of three letters may be obtained in the celluloid and it is the matter of a few moments to possess a whole quire of writing paper.

THE LAST VOYAGE OF THE DONNA ISABEL

BY RANDALL PARRISH
AUTHOR OF "DOD HANCOCK OF PLACER, ETC."

ILLUSTRATIONS BY DEARBORN PHELPS
COPYRIGHT A.C. CLARK & CO. 1909

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the introduction of John Stephens, adventurer, a Massachusetts man, mentioned by authorities at Valparaiso, Chile. Being interested in mining operations in Bolivia, he was denounced by Chile as an insurrectionist and as a consequence was hiding. At his hotel his attention was attracted by an Englishman and a young woman. Stephens rescued the young woman from a drunken officer. He was then offered her, Admiral of the Peruvian navy, by her. Stephens, told him that war had been declared between Chile and Peru and offered him the office of captain. He desired that that night the Esmeralda, a Chilean vessel, should be captured. Stephens accepted the commission. Stephens met a motley crew, to which he was assigned. He gave them brief instructions. They boarded the vessel, supposed to be the Esmeralda, through strategy. Capt. Stephens gave directions for the departure of the craft. He entered the cabin and discovered the English woman and her maid. Stephens quickly learned the wrong vessel had been captured. It was Lord Darlington's private yacht, the lord's wife and maid being aboard. He explained the situation to her ladyship. Then Tuttle and Dade laid bare the plot, saying that the Sea Queen had been taken in order to go to the Antarctic circle. Tuttle explained that on a former voyage he had learned that the Donna Isabel was lost in 1763. He had found it frozen in a huge case of ice on an island and contained much gold. Stephens consented to be the captain of the expedition.

This unexpected and undesirable information seemed fairly to stun the fellows, their eyes meeting blankly. I heard Bill Anderson swear.

"The question is, how can we best dispose of them? This is no excursion for ladies, no pleasure trip of any kind, we've started on. Shall we hail some passing vessel and transport them, or shall we run in to Juan Fernandez and put them both safely ashore?"

None of the three men ventured to glance toward me, and for a long moment no answering voice spoke. Then Tuttle gave oily utterance to words of compromise.

"Blame it this don't sort o' knock me all out, sir," he acknowledged. "I don't exactly cotton to either of those ideas of yours, an' I don't know what is best. I guess I'll have to talk it over with my mates here first, but you can tell them ladies that we'll get 'em out somehow before we turn south. Anyhow, they don't need to worry none 'bout bein' ill-treated. Then I take it, sir, that you mean to sail with us?"

"There doesn't appear to be anything else I can do."

"You're about right there. Well, let's shake hands on it."

I did so, deliberately ignoring both the others, and feeling my flesh twitch when I touched his flabby palm. Tuttle chewed savagely on the tobacco in his cheek.

"Damn the women!" he commented in sudden anger. "Better give the crew their breakfast, Anderson. Mr. Stephens, I've sent Dade into the cabin to attend things aft. He'll make a good hand at that sort o' job."

We passed out together into the bright sunlight on deck, and I remained in silence for a moment beside the rail, gazing forth across the empty sea. Had I done what was right in all these circumstances? Under God, I was not really certain, yet I could perceive no other action possible.

A slenderly built, stoop-shouldered young fellow, who shuffled about like a waiter ashore, was in the pantry, and I noticed a white cloth spread over the table, which had been lowered from its stanchions and now occupied the center of the main cabin, and a swinging shelf suspended above.

"Ever act in this capacity before, Dade?" I asked, sizing him up in the dim light.

"Oh, yes, sir," a slight lisp to his tongue. "I've done cabin work on the coast liners."

"Then you should surely understand your business. Lay covers for four."

"Four, sir?" in surprise.

"That is what I said, Dade, two ladies, Mr. Tuttle, and myself. That makes four to my figuring. Now step lively, my lad. When will breakfast be ready to serve?"

"In about 15 minutes, sir."

I waited until he became busy with his work, my face agitated with amazement over my revelation, then walked around the end of the piano, and rapped softly at the after-cabin door. Celeste opened the door with a guilty courtesy and a quick uplift of her frightened eyes to my face. She had been crying, and in some way her very manner made me suddenly aware how poorly I stood in the estimation of her mistress and herself. Yet, for the moment, I did not seriously care, stepping quietly within, cap in hand, intent merely on the rapid completion of my visit. Lady Darlington arose instantly from her chair, steadying herself to the roll of the vessel with one hand on the brass rail of the bed, and fronted me silently, the expression of her face expectant but reserved. Gazing upon her, I felt the fully revealed power of her beauty, as the sunlight streaming

"Treasure!" She gasped, "Where do you propose going in search?"

through the open port illumined her hair and outlined the delicate oval of her face. Troubled as she was, surrounded by a terror no less real because she failed thoroughly to comprehend it, facing one she must distrust and secretly fear, her first utterance, friendly and courteous, merely exhibited a heart which beat warmly beneath its slight armor of pride.

"I am exceedingly glad to greet you again, Mr. Stephens," she said, pleasantly, even endeavoring to smile; "you were absent so long we had begun to expect evil news."

"I regret to say, Lady Darlington, that I bring you only very little of any kind," I replied, striving earnestly to imitate her self-possession. "Arrangements on board have not yet assumed definite shape, so that I can make no promise concerning your future. I can merely assure you present safety, and pledge you every comfort the yacht affords while you remain with us."

She continued to gaze at me strangely, her eyes filled with questioning.

"Then you—you refuse to tell us our fate?"

"Merely because I do not know it, as I said before I am only one man pitted against 20."

She pressed her hand over her eyes, as though she would hide from me the sudden horror pictured within their depths.

"What are you?" she exclaimed, suddenly, her lips trembling. "Into whose hands have we fallen? I beg that you answer me honestly—why have you stolen this yacht? What real purpose underlies this terrible outrage?"

I made no effort to disguise the deep sympathy I felt for her, yet there was nothing I could answer but must have sounded both harsh and cruel.

"The motive animating the men in command is similar to that which renders possible most of the desperate deeds of the world—the search after treasure."

"Treasure!" she gasped, thoroughly bewildered. "Where do you propose going to search?"

"Far south, into the Antarctic."

The expression on her face was pitiful, yet I stood helpless to comfort.

"Merciful God! And you actually mean to bear us with you into that forsaken sea of ice? Oh, surely you jest, you seek to frighten; you cannot be earnest in such an act of cruelty. Whom can I believe? What can I hope? You have told me you were the captain of this crew of buccaneers, and yet you say you can accomplish nothing with them to forward our release. Then take me to those who can! Let me beg upon my knees for mercy. Surely, surely we are of no value to you in your search after treasure. We are only weak, helpless women. Think of this! This must mean to me, and be merciful!"

There was no trace of tears in her eyes, but it was the white, agonized face, the unconsciously outspread arms of appeal, that smote me. I felt all my limbs tremble, my lips falter, as I made swift response.

"Lady Darlington, believe me, I have no desire except honestly to serve you. The actual truth is, I have consented to retain what is a purely nominal command of this vessel, with no other purpose except that such outward authority yields me some opportunity to assist and protect you. Otherwise I would spurn the whole affair and defy these outlaws to do their worst. It was a deplorable accident that brought me here and placed me in this situation. Practically I am as much a prisoner on board as yourself. Later, if the opportunity ever be given, I shall relate you my story, and then, perhaps, you will appreciate how perfectly helpless I am to overrule the decision of this vessel's crew. They are mad with the lust of gold, crazed by the prospect of suddenly achieving vast wealth through a single bold stroke. Would the tears of a woman influence them now? would the impotent threat of a single, helpless man? They are armed, organized, determined, desperate."

"The only thing I can do is apparently to yield to them, trusting thus to persuade them into some measure of mercy; and the only thing you can do is patiently to abide my efforts to release you from such companionship. I mean to do my best, even to the sacrifice of my life. The very thought of bearing you with us into the fogs and dangers of that storm-lashed ocean is misery to me. God knows I would do anything possible to spare you such a fate. But I wish you to understand, realize fully, how difficult my own position is. I do not bid you hope; only pray, and, above all, retain your courage. I promise nothing, because I dare venture no pledge. But I beseech you not to break down, not to exhibit open fear. In any event our first effort should be to awaken confidence in the minds of our captors, and arrive at a frank understanding between ourselves. Lady Darlington, will you be guided in this by my judgment?"

"Oh, I wish to believe," she sobbed, only half aloud, "I need some one, some one in whom I feel confidence, in whom I may repose faith. I beg of you not to consider me weak, a nervous creature; but this situation is intolerable. I will endeavor to do what you ask. I will strive to be brave, helpful, appreciative. I—I think you are what you say. See, I give you my hand in promise."

I clasped it. Instantly within both my own, bending low above the white fingers, my lips set in firm resolve. I retained it still when I lifted my head, and our glances met.

"What is it your first desire of me?"

"Breakfast has been prepared, and is now awaiting us in the cabin," I answered, knowing well that some form of action must strengthen her more quickly than any further talk, "and I wish you to join us at the table exactly as though this was an ordinary voyage."

"I know the food will choke me,

Does Celeste sit with us?"

"I believe you would prefer having her in the circumstances. You would not feel quite so much alone."

"I should like it; it was most thoughtful upon your part. Shall—shall we be alone at table?"

"With the exception of the first officer, who is really the leader on board."

It was evident plainly enough that she shrank from the ordeal, the delicate lines hardening about the mouth, the gray eyes eloquent of disinclination. A moment she hesitated, her form swaying as though buffeted by a storm; then she slowly bent her head.

"I am at your service, Mr. Stephens."

In the main cabin we discovered the table already set and waiting, appearing bright and cheery with a brave display of snowy cloth and glittering silver, the swinging shelf above adorned by bottles and gleaming glass.

"Call Mr. Tuttle, Dade," I ordered, quietly. "Then, hurry back and serve."

CHAPTER XII.

In Which I Endeavor to Assert Authority.

I was on deck again at noon, and shot the sun, returning below to work out our position. The Sea Queen still held closely to her course, almost directly west, and, realizing my helplessness, I forebore asking useless questions. Indeed, I was secretly pleased that Tuttle still held to that point of the compass, for we were now in the direct path of Australian commerce, and hence much more likely to raise a sail at any moment than if we veered farther to the southward. If any such vessel appeared I had determined to pit my strength against the crew, even to the point of physical danger.

At one o'clock Dade called the women, and soon the four of us were seated at table again. My lady's manner weighed upon my spirits, which had been none of the lightest before her appearance. I felt profoundly that the faint influence my previous words had inspired within her mind had already evaporated; that she now held me as at one with the remainder of the yacht's crew. I arose as they retired from the table, but received no reward of recognition from her averted eyes. Feeling deserted, almost humiliated, I smoked my pipe alone on deck, under the lee of the cabin. But it was perfectly useless loitering there, with no duties to perform, and the sea all about bare to the far horizon. Besides, some sailor instinct told me a storm was brewing yonder to the northward which might keep me upon the bridge all night, so, in preparation for such a possibility, I went below and lay down in my bunk. I was a long time getting asleep, finally dropping off only to be aroused by the rattling of dishes when Dade arranged the table for the last meal of the day.

De Nova was pacing the bridge and emerged from the companion. I could not see the seaman who hailed, the mist held so thick, and his words seemed like a weak echo.

"Sail, almost directly ahead, sir."

"Wereaway?" asked De Nova, peering anxiously forward. "I can see nothing. Po'st! zee—you see ze ship?"

"Nothin' in sight from here, sir."

The mate stared up into the vapor overhead.

"Ware was it you see it, you fellow on ze foreyard?"

The odd echo of a voice came back out of the sky.

"I only caught her through a hole in the fog, sir, one point off the weather-bow."

With a swift bound I was up the steps to the bridge and beside the second officer, recklessly determined to assume command before he clearly realized my presence. I jangled the bells in the engine room.

"Hold her steady as she's a'go," I said sternly to the fellow grasping the wheel.

De Nova wheeled and faced me, his black eyes full of sudden anger.

"What ze hell you mean?" he exclaimed, so surprised he stuttered. "I was officer of ze deck."

"And I am commanding the yacht, Mr. De Nova," I retorted quickly, pushing back his hand from the signal, "I propose speaking that vessel yonder, and transshipping our passengers. Port a little, my man—no, port, you fool!—now hold her so; steady."

De Nova grasped my arm, his fingers like steel, but I broke away, pressing in between him and the rail.

Ruling Spirit Strong. Instances of the ruling passion strong in death are very common. It is said of Dr. Arne, the great English composer, that he died in the middle of a conversation on some musical matter, trying with his last breath to sing a passage the meaning of which he was too exhausted to explain.

"Now, now, lookyeh, Mars George," he protested, "dat ain't no way ter ac—an' please don't pint dat gun at me dat er way, cunnel, sah." He hastily added, holding up his battered hat as a shield. Do Men Read Beauty Columns?

Your husband madam, will deny it strenuously if you charge him openly across the breakfast cups with reading the columns in the morning paper devoted to the secrets of feminine beauty. But don't be too trustful. If you take The Chicago Record Herald, as every well regulated family should, you know all about Mme. Qui Vive's spicily columns devoted to "The Woman Beautiful". Well just watch the good man's eye and see it wander carelessly down that quarter of the page. Then if he disappears entirely behind the paper and comes out with a smile as innocent as that of the cat after swallowing the canary, you may come to your own conclusion. Of course, if caught in the act he may declare that he only reads the witty epigram which Mme. Qui Vive heads her column every day. But be not deceived. You know very well that Mme. Qui Vive's whole department is as good as the cream at the top. Will the cat that steals the cream from the pitcher suddenly become honest after removing the top layer? No, there is a growing suspicion that a large number of highly respectable men—not all of them married men either—are in the daily habit of reading the beauty columns in The Record Herald. We are naming no names at present, but the suspected parties are being watched.

It's a Good Sound Common Sense Policy

To use medicines only of KNOWN COMPOSITION, and which contain neither alcohol nor habit-forming drugs. It is foolish—often dangerous to do otherwise. The most intelligent people, and many of the most successful, conscientious physicians, follow this judicious course of action. The leading medical authorities, of all schools of medicine, endorse the ingredients composing Dr. Pierce's medicines. These are plainly printed on wrappers and attested under oath. There's no secrecy; an open publicity, square-deal policy is followed by the makers.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

THE ONE REMEDY for woman's ailments, sold by druggists, devised and gotten up by a regularly graduated physician of vast experience in treating woman's peculiar diseases and carefully adapted to work in harmony with her delicate organization, by an experienced and skilled specialist in her maladies.

THE ONE REMEDY for woman's ailments, sold by druggists, which contains neither alcohol (which to most women is the rankest poison) or other injurious or habit-forming drugs.

THE ONE REMEDY for women, the composition of which is so perfect and good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient, in plain English on its outside bottle-wrapper, and attest the correctness of the same under oath.

We have a profound desire to avoid all offense to the most delicate sensitiveness of modest women, for whom we entertain the most sincere respect and admiration. We shall not, therefore, particularize here concerning the symptoms and peculiar ailments incident to the sex for which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has for more than 40 years proven such a boon. We cannot, however, do a better service to the afflicted of the gentler sex than to refer them to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a great family doctor book of 1000 pages, bound in cloth and given away gratis, or sent, post-paid, on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps—to cover cost of mailing only. All the delicate ailments and matters about which every woman, whether young or old, single or married, should know, but which their sense of delicacy makes them hesitate to ask even the family physician about, are made plain in this great book. Write for it.
