Deficit Nearly Paid.

Calamity howlers and others who laid so much stress on the fact that Michigan was "broke" because ex-State Treasurer Glazier devoted public funds to his personal use and could not make good, will soon be shown up in their true light. The present prospect is that the state will receive every dollar of its funds which were on deposit in Glazier's Chelsea bank at the time the bank was forced to close.

With what will be realized from the bank and bonds furnished by the deposit, approximately $685,000 will be repaid to the state, according to state officers who are in a position to know the conditions.

The outlook for the state in this matter is very bright and as a result those who were plating that the state would lose practically every cent which was on deposit in the bank will have to get up another excuse upon which to wall.

When in need of Wall Paper don't forget to look over C. H. Whittington's line.

WANTED—Lathe, milling machine and drill press men. Assemblers, rough and varnish rubbers and painters. Good wages and steady work. Apply immediately, RHO MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Lansing, Mich.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Resolutions passed at the big Meeting and Banquet in Traverse City, Friday, April 1, 1910.

Resolved, That this meeting of the Board of Trade of Traverse City and railroad officials of Michigan hereby endorse the Western Michigan Development Bureau as being a practical union of the constructive and development forces of western Michigan. We approve the broad and comprehensive plans to educate our own people to the value of the advantages they possess and to hasten the development of our whole section so that western Michigan may quickly come into her own; and we recommend to the commercial organizations, to the railroads, to real estate dealers, to land owners and to all public spirited citizens that they become members of the bureau, and by so doing help the good work along and keep in touch with a live organization whose work has already been felt and which, if properly supported, will soon become a stirring power in the regeneration of western Michigan.

A Wonderful News Service.

Have you ever paused to think what a wonderful organization must be necessary to lay before you each day an accurate account of the happenings of yesterday in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, Australia, the islands of the sea and the whole expanse of our own continent, all in a single newspaper? The intricate network of cables and telegraph lines, the complicated chain of news-gathering agencies stretching across continents and oceans, the innumerable reporters working daily for you under tropic suns and over arctic snows—have you ever felt the romantic thrill of it all in reading a great modern newspaper such as the Chicago Record-Herald? We mention this paper especially because of the completeness of its domestic and foreign news service. It has a correspondent in every town or city of importance in the United States, a veritable army of them in all. In addition it has the benefit of the foreign news service of the New York Herald, famous for its world-wide cable system and for the reliability of its foreign news; also that of the New York World and the New York Journal of Commerce, besides that of the great co-operative news-gathering organization, the Associated Press. With such a vast and complete news service it is not strange that The Record-Herald is easily holds its own as one of the great newspapers of the world.

ORAMEL B. FULLER,
Auditor General.

Ladies' Equity Notes.

Goldenrod local, L. S. of E., has been entertaining the first bride of the local, Miss Laura Mayville, for the past week. A miscellaneous shower given by the local on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Howey, was well attended and a very pleasant time enjoyed. Many fine gifts testified to the good wishes of the givers. On Saturday evening a tin shower was given by Lillian Mayville at her home. This was greatly enjoyed by the young people.

Come in and look over our dandy line of Shoes. You will be surprised at the quality, styles and prices.—W. Sherman's Market.

Michigan Beats Oregon.

H. H. Eaton in writing from Portland, Oregon, to the editor of the Petoskey Record says: "These stretches (eastern plains of Oregon) are sun-scorched and wind-swept desert land. The government is spending $10,000,000 trying to reclaim 500,000 acres, and little good it will do a poor man * * * Suppose you want to homestead 10 acres. You have to pay $60 per acre to the government for five years, $1.75 an acre maintenance fee and three of these payments must be plunked down in advance. * * * It would cost you from $10 to $20 to clear off sage brush and level the sand hills so you could irrigate."

"It figures out that before your ten acres could be made to produce anything, counting your time and all your expenses, it would cost you about $5,000, or $500 per acre. You can beat this in many of the states. * * * Nothing but stunted sage brush, coyotes and jack rabbits, and they are almost all diseased as there is no water except alkali water and it never rains in summer."

"Stop where you are and enjoy health while you have it with your friends around you."

Good cleared land can be had in Western Michigan for from $50 to $100 an acre. Furthermore the weather bureau guarantees free of maintenance expense from 26 to 34 inches of rain fall a year. Still further Western Michigan is well supplied with transportation facilities, rural mail routes, telephone lines, good schools, churches and granges.

BERMUDA—the HOME OF THE EASTER LILY

By WALDON FAWCETT

PHOTOS COPYRIGHT BY WALDON FAWCETT

OW that American tourists, in search of the novel and picturesque, have taken to journeying in great numbers to all parts of the West Indies and other islands off our Atlantic coast, beautiful Bermuda is rightfully coming in for a greater share of attention. The only wonder is that these dream islands, where frost and snow are unknown have not been the mecca in the past of a greater proportion of Yankee pleasure lovers who each winter and spring seek more kindly climes than are to be found in the northern and western portions of the United States. A hospitable domain, where the temperature never goes below 60 degrees or above 75 degrees and which is only 48 hours' sail from New York, may naturally be expected to claim no meager share of attention from travel loving Americans—particularly that large portion of us who enjoy a complete change of scene and manners and customs, even though we cannot (by reason of time and expense) journey far to find them.

These coral islands in mid-ocean may be very delightful at almost any season of the year, but the particularly auspicious season in which to visit Bermuda is in the lily season, just as Japan may be seen at its best in cherry blossom time. Bermuda's chief claims before the world are as the home of the Easter lily and the onion and right royally does she merit prestige in both directions. However, the reader need conjure up no mind picture of an atmosphere laden with the odors of the strong-scented vegetable. In Bermuda, in lily time, at least, the delicious, pungent odor exhaled by millions of the white, bell-shaped flowers dominates every nook and corner of the land. The only rivals of the lilies in floral splendor are the oleanders, which grow in hedges to twice the height of a man, and while the flaming tints of these latter flowers challenge the eye they have no fragrance and so leave the lilies undisputed in their pre-eminence.

The lilies are not the only contributors to the spectacular features of life in Bermuda. The island community is a British colony and military post and the periodical parades of red-coated soldiers add a touch of the bizarre to life in a restricted little community. Likewise are the dusky natives speaking a cockney dialect a source of amusement and the quaint little white houses attract every person with the slightest trace of home-love in his make-up, but, after all, it is the lilies which constitute the omnipresent, ever-satisfying attraction. The lily fields are easily and comfortably reached, thanks to a network of hard and perfect shell roads. In most instances the lily tracts are surrounded by walls, but visitors are usually welcomed. Some idea of the beautiful spectacle afforded by these vast masses of gleaming white blossoms, gently swaying in the breeze, may be formed from the fact that there are a number of lily fields in Bermuda each of which are 25 acres in extent and there are some lily farms where from 30 to 40 acres of bloom may be seen in a single field. Many of the stalks are literally laden down with the precious posies. Indeed Bermuda holds the record for the production of the greatest number of lilies on a stalk, as high as 145 perfect flowers having been in bloom on a single plant at one time. A large proportion of the sweeter rivals of the Bermuda onion which overspread the islands in the spring are shipped to the United States for Easter. The employment of fast steamships and the comparative nearness of Bermuda makes it possible to get whole cargoes of cut Easter lilies to the large cities on the Atlantic coast promptly and in perfect condition. In the average Bermuda landscape it seems as though every detail had been arranged with a view of maintaining harmony with the billowy fields of white. The small, cottage-like houses, built of coral, would appear almost glaringly white were it not that in almost every instance a contrast is afforded by clinging rose bushes and sturdy vines which entwine the habitations. According to tradition, it was an American woman—Mrs. George Russell Hastings, niece of the late ex-President Hayes—who first gave to the people of Bermuda the idea of growing Easter lilies on a commercial basis. In 1878 Mrs. Hastings planted some bulbs in Bermuda and, finding that they took kindly to the thin, rich soil, she urged the farmers of the islands to raise lilies as well as vegetables. Soon it was found that an acre of lilies would net three or four times as much revenue as an acre of onions.

The AMERICAN POULTRY INDUSTRY

NO OTHER American industry has a heavier tax suddenly put upon its resources than that imposed upon the poultry industry at Easter time. It comes about largely, of course, through the significance of the egg as the emblem of the universal currency of the spring holiday. It is not, moreover, the actual consumption of eggs on the Easter breakfast table that is solely responsible for this heavy drain upon an important branch of our food market. That is an important factor, to be sure, but it must be remembered that tens of thousands of eggs are, in effect, suddenly "withdrawn from circulation" as eatables at Easter time. In this category are countless numbers of the colored eggs which have been dyed for the occasion and most of which are never intended to be eaten. Similarly there are the myriad eggs which are used for egg rolling and other childish games on Easter and Easter Monday and which are, for the most part an actual as well as a theoretical loss at the close of the day.

SCENE ON AN AMERICAN POULTRY FARM

The largest poultry dealers declare that the drain upon the egg market at the close of Lent is only rivaled by the strain imposed upon that other branch of the industry—that covering live and dressed fowls—at Thanksgiving and Christmas. With the steady increase in the Easter egg requisitions of the American people and the price advancing at times to about 50 to 70 cents per dozen in many of our most populous cities, it is small wonder that the purveyors of Easter ammunition are greatly concerned regarding the various projects for increasing the egg production of American hens. Much has been accomplished in this direction by the introduction of scientific breeding methods somewhat similar in scope to the methods followed in breeding horses and dogs. Only with chickens the qualifications of pedigree necessary to win places in the breeding pens include records of having laid at least 160 eggs per year. The source of supply for America's Easter eggs is no longer restricted to those farming communities where the poultry and egg business is in effect a "side line" and supplementary to grain growing or some other agricultural activity. A tremendous aggregate of eggs is obtained through such channels—often through the enterprise of the women folk of the farms, who are allowed the "butter and egg money" as a personal income—but heavy dependency is now placed upon the great poultry farms which specialize in this particular sphere. To convey a more vivid idea of the magnitude of these fountain-heads of the annual flood of Easter eggs it may be noted that one of the largest American poultry farms is 82 acres in extent and the buildings and poultry yards cover more than 35 acres. This metropolis of the feathered aristocrats is lighted by electricity and heated by steam. The farm has its own water system, with a complete system of piping leading to all parts of the institution and in one of the buildings is a huge food cooker, with a capacity of 1,000 gallons. In the laying department of this particular farm are more than 2,000 hens and this tremendous flock contributes from 1,000 to 1,200 eggs daily. For gathering these eggs promptly a novel system has been perfected and as the eggs are collected the date is stamped upon each one. Each individual egg is neatly wrapped in tissue paper ere it is dispatched to market.

Although no recent accurate statistics are obtainable covering the entire country, it is known that the consumption of eggs by the people of the United States, even under normal conditions, is such as to astound persons who have never had occasion to become familiar with the magnitude of this food industry. New York City alone receives about 30 carloads of eggs every working day in the year and other cities have proportionate appetites. Of course the current production of eggs is nowhere near sufficient to meet the demand at the Easter season. Great quantities of eggs are taken from cold storage for the Easter trade and, incidentally, it may be mentioned that the cold storage system has become one of the most important adjuncts of the poultry industry.

PREACH GOSPEL OF HEALTH

Plan to Have One Sermon on Sunday, April 24, Devoted to Scourge of Tuberculosis.

Following campaigns against consumption that have been carried on in the churches of hundreds of cities, and sermons on tuberculosis that have been preached before thousands of congregations during the past year, a movement has been started by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to establish a permanent tuberculosis Sunday, on which it is hoped that every one of the 33,000,000 church-goers in the United States will hear the gospel of health. This year the Sunday selected is April 24. It is planned that on April 24 tuberculosis sermons shall be preached in all the churches of the country. Literature will be distributed to members of the congregations, and in every way an effort will be made to teach that tuberculosis is a dangerous disease and that it can be prevented and cured.

Clergymen who desire to obtain additional information in regard to tuberculosis will be able to secure literature from state and local anti-tuberculosis associations and boards of health, as well as from the national association.

Romance to Order

By T. S. STRIBLING

Three gentlemen, two English, one American, sat around a table in the garden of the Mioamer and sipped slowly at their coconut water, not particularly liking the insipid drink. Outside, in the Prado, a long, unending line of carriages, motors, pedestrians moved steadily back and forth. "And they tell me that Havana is a romantic place," drawled Hulley, removing his Panama hat, for like all good tourists their first move when they reached the Cuban capital was to invest in Panamas.

"Now we've been over here a week," growled Middleham, his brother Englishman, "and as far as romance is concerned, Snow, there has been absolutely nothing doing, as you Americans put it."

As both the men appealed to Snow, and as Cuba lay so close to the States, under an American protectorate, too, that gentleman felt called upon to defend the island's good name in things romantic.

"What do you fellows expect to happen to you cuddled up here in the Mioamer gardens? You poke around and look at forts, cathedrals, historical spots and places where romances have occurred. That's all wrong. Romance is like lightning; it never strikes twice in the same place. The man who goes around gazing at romantic spots will never make one."

"Aw, come now," glibbed Hulley, "that's an American joke."

"Yes," echoed Middleham, "there may be adventures for the natives, but hardly for a foreigner like me, barely speaking the language."

"I'll show you," remarked Snow, briefly. He arose.

"Ah, now, what are you going to do?" in chorus.

"Stir up an adventure."

"What?" exclaimed Middleham, pulling out his watch, "at 10 o'clock at night?"

Snow shrugged his shoulders. "Ten o'clock at night is the beginning of the Cuban day."

Hulley arose likewise. "Come along, Middleham; let's see what he is going to do."

So the three big fellows sauntered into the hotel lobby and walked up to the dapper little clerk.

"Jaurez," asked Snow, "would you oblige me with your guitar to-night?"

The clerk smiled brightly. "Si, senor, certe," and he hurried into the office after it.

"Better get a stiletto and a revolver, too," suggested Middleham, laughing. The clerk returned; the three men took the instrument and set forth.

"Nothing's going to happen," murmured Middleham; nobody's at home."

Snow stepped. "Now you fellows see that big house right yonder, with the curly brass grillwork shining in the windows. I want you fellows to stay here in the shadow behind this corner. I'm going over and thru on this guitar a bit; maybe something will turn up."

His two friends assented. The American walked over to the window in the full glare of an arc, swung the guitar around in front and, without more ado, began to play.

It was an odd, plaintive, tangled little air that Snow played; a thing that he had picked up years ago, down in Mexico, and had played on other nights at other windows.

Just inside the shining grill work Snow could catch the glint of a silk curtain. He played on, weaving a musical phantasy, until he almost believed himself back in the old Aztec capital. The impression grew so strong as to be almost disagreeable. He stopped.

Just at that instant a hand was laid on his shoulder.

Snow laughed shortly. "The romance is off," he remarked without looking around; "you boys came over and spoiled it all."

"May I inquire what the senor is doing here?" asked a voice in perfectly good Spanish.

Snow wheeled around abruptly and found himself facing a heavy-set, swarthy man, with black mustache curled up in a fierce Kaiser Wilhelm fashion.

Snow stared at this apparition in amazement. "Am I on your preserves?" he asked in Spanish.

The stranger stepped back a little. "I see from your accent," he went on, "that you are an American, but, senor, I accept no insolence even from an American."

A little tingle of amusement went through the American. "Well, as you have answered my question in the affirmative I'll tell you what I am doing. Some friends and I have started out with this guitar this evening in search of an adventure, so I stood here playing and hoping something would happen."

At Snow's pleasant, smiling face and ingenuous explanation the stranger began to thaw.

"So you are hunting an adventure?" responded the man, agreeably. "Would you mind helping me? I was just wishing for someone to give me a little assistance in case I should need it."

"Are you joking?" asked Snow.

"Never more serious here's my hand," in impulsive Spanish fashion.

Snow took it gravely. "What shall I do?"

"Stand right here and play the guitar." Then the man vanished.

The man had hardly disappeared in the side alley when the silken curtain behind the grill was drawn back a little.

"Senor," said a voice, "did Rafael ask you to play there?"

Snow drew near and removed his Panama. He could see a dim oval face outlined in the black interior with two dark splashes for eyes, but there was a quality in the voice that made the American blunder his tune and let it die away.

"Yes, senorita," he whispered back; "someone set me here to play."

"Then why don't you play?" asked the woman, with a little tremolo in her voice.

With a feeling that he was in the midst of a phantasmagoria, Snow once more adjusted his guitar and began strumming the tune. He had hardly started again when he saw two white hands clasp the brazen grills.

"Not that! Not that!" trembled the voice. "Ah, mia Dios, not that!"

Snow paused again abruptly. "You know the tune—it is not a Cuban air?"

"Nor I a Cuban girl, senor."

"What shall I play, then?"

"Anything else." There was a touch of pathos in her words and again that dimly familiar quality the man had noted all along.

He moved a trifle closer. "May I inquire why I am playing and—to whom?"

"You are playing in Raphael's place, so that Rafael and Maria may escape unobserved. That is all, senor."

Snow pressed up against the grills. He was staring fixedly into the dark recess beyond the curtains. "And to whom?" he asked, tersely, "to whom?"

There was a broken little laugh inside, then a shaking, silvery voice numbed over the air he had just been playing, then sang softly the first line.

"But—but I composed those words myself!" stammered Snow.

"So—so you did—Len."

"Carlotta!" trembled the American in the uttermost surprise. "You!"

"Yes, yes, my father sent me here to—to avoid you."

"Well, come on—quick, Carlotta! We'll follow suit—the back way."

"But, Len," gasped the girl, "somebody must play the guitar. Rafael always played!"

Snow leaped to the middle of the narrow street and began wildly to signal toward the dark corner. The two Englishmen came up leisurely.

"Hurry! Hurry!" cried the American. "I need you!"

"What's the matter?" asked Middleham, as the two followed him back to the window.

"Stand here and play this guitar!" snapped Snow.

"Aw, now, what do I want to stand here and play a guitar for?"

"Don't ask questions! To make them think I'm here till Senorita Carlotta Vitrelli and I elope out the back way."

"Yes, senors," pleaded the voice in the window, "and if my uncle comes out you must catch him and hold him. Don't let him pursue us!" They could see her wringing her hands excitedly in the gloom.

"Now, really, Hulley, don't this upset a fellow, though? Snow here has known her for at least five minutes, hasn't he?" Then, as an afterthought, "I can't play a guitar, you know."

But Snow thrust the instrument into his hands. "You've got to try as a friend—a benefactor!"

Middleham held the guitar. Hulley looked on in amazement. Snow vanished around the side alley and the girl disappeared from the window.

The two Britons were planted doggedly by the window and Snow knew that neither the uncle nor all the Havana police could move or pass them.

THE MOTHER AND THE BOY

Childish Confidences That Should Never Be Repelled, But Always Encouraged.

A boy's heart is full and overflowing. He needs some one who will listen to his confidences. If he is repelled and finds himself alone, he becomes fretful, indolent or worse. His affairs are not "nonsense." A good mother never says: "Run away; I am busy." She listens, encourages.

Important discoveries may be made in these outpourings. She gives sympathy, enters into his feelings, sees things from his point of view. If he tells her of something which proves that he is at fault, she does not reprimand at the time, because this will check further confidences. She gives her attention quietly, tells him she is glad he has confided in her, and that she will talk of it again to him.

If a mother has insight she can solve many problems. She is interested in her boy's sports, collections, his school and companions. The choice of his companions should not be left to chance. It is well if they are from families known to his parents.

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few matted pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalded. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Danger in Spitting on Sidewalks.
 In order to show that spitting on the sidewalks is dangerous to health, an investigation has been made by Dr. John Robertson, medical health officer of Birmingham, England, which shows that seven per cent. of the "spits" collected in public places contained consumption germs. On the other hand the dust collected from the floors of the cottages of the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium has been found to be free of tuberculosis germs, showing that a careful consumptive is not dangerous.

Passion and Reason.
We fancy we suffer from ingratitude, while in reality we suffer from self love. Passion weeps while she says, "I did not deserve this from him." Reason, while she says it, smooths her brow at the clear fountain of the heart. — Walter Savage Landor.

Dignity.
A certain little girl is very dignified. One morning she hung about the kitchen continually, bothering the busy cook to death. The cook lost patience finally.
"Clear out 'o' here, ye sassy little brat!" she shouted, thumping the table with a rolling pin.
The little girl gave the cook a haughty look.
"I never allow any one but my mother to speak to me like that," she said.

The Game of Life.
Life is a game of whist. From unseen sources the cards are shuffled and the hands are dealt. Blind are our efforts to control the forces that, though unseen, are no less strongly felt.
I do not like the way the cards are shuffled.
But yet I like the game and want to play.
And through the long, long night will I, untroubled,
Play what I get until the break of day. — Eugene F. Ware.

One Enough.
A Chinese missionary, a lady, was taking tea with a mandarin's eight wives. The Chinese ladies examined her clothing, her hair, her teeth, and so on, but her feet especially amazed them.
"Why," one cried, "you can walk and run as well as a man."
"Yes, to be sure," said the missionary.
"Can you ride a horse and swim too?"
"Yes."
"Then you must be as strong as a man?"
"I am."
"And you wouldn't let a man beat you, not even if he was your husband, would you?"
"Indeed, I wouldn't!" said the missionary.
The mandarin's eight wives looked at one another, nodding their heads. Then the oldest said softly:
"Now I understand why the foreign devil never has more than one wife. He is afraid."

An Injustice.
An order prohibiting gambling among the enlisted men detailed at the West Point Military Academy caused, it would appear, much trouble for certain of the soldiers there. An old sergeant of a negro regiment who was sent to the post suggested a game of craps soon after his arrival. Other soldiers told him of the rule against gambling and refused to join in the game. "Dis 'ere ain't right," said the new arrival, "an' Ah'll see de cap'n 'bout it." Upon being admitted to the commanding officer's room the sergeant said, with some show of heat: "Cap'n, Ah understand 'dat gambin' ain't 'lowed here no mo'."
"That's correct," said the officer.
"Well, dat's a injustice to culled men, sah, 'cause 't's got a large family to support."

Another Heat Coming.
An Irishman had recently buried his wife. As he sat one evening disconsolate in the doorway of his farmhouse a woman neighbor thought she'd play a joke on him. She came up behind him covered with a white sheet and tapped him on the shoulder. He turned from the ghost with a yell and started off across the fields on a run, followed by the woman. After a short run his breath failed him, and he staggered against a tree, panting. The woman, still dressed in the terrifying sheet, caught up with him there.

"Mike," says she, "we had a fine run, didn't we?"
"Yes," says Mike, with fear in his eye, "and begob we will have another as soon as I get me wind back."

WELL DRESSED MEN

Travel where you will and look until your eyes sting from the strain, and you will find on all sides cleverly dressed men. Some of them may be young, some a trifle older and some quite old, but all are garbed in the fashion of the day. Our own city is not to be passed by, indeed it would be difficult to find a community in which clothes are given more attention or worn in better taste. We don't care to seem egotistic, but we cannot but feel that our clothes have done a lot toward bringing this about. If you care for truly smart styles you are certain to admire the many we are now displaying.

THAT SIGNIFY QUALITY

STEINWAY SOHMER WEGMAN HUNTINGTON SMITH & BARNES
STERLING GRINNELL BROS. SHONINGER MENDELSSOHN SCHAEFFER

All of the above and other leading makes will be found on our floors—and nowhere else in this State. From among the many, many Pianos on the market these names stand out prominently as the undisputed leaders. Above all others they have received the highest endorsement of Piano buyers everywhere, and now are universally acknowledged the Best in their various grades.

Quality Should Be the Piano Buyer's First Consideration.

The real, enduring quality that results from high-grade materials, expert workmanship, ripe experience and conscientious methods. Many Pianos look and sound well at first, but they lack QUALITY and sooner or later defects in material develop, faulty construction becomes evident, the tone gets harsh and discordant, the action grows sluggish and uneven, the finish checks and peels—and the Piano that meant so much to the owner becomes a failure as a musical instrument and an eyesore as an article of furniture—a constant source of disappointment and regret.

Purchasers of Our Pianos Get QUALITY and VALUE In Fullest Measure.

Not we alone, but the entire musical world acknowledges the superiority of the Pianos we sell. The buyer takes absolutely no chances in choosing any one of these well-known makes. Satisfaction is a positive certainty for time has shown that these Pianos embody QUALITY in the highest degree.

It is just as easy to own one of our QUALITY PIANOS as to take chances on an instrument of doubtful character. By purchasing in immense quantities and reducing selling expense to the very lowest point we are able to sell our matchless Pianos at LOWER PRICES than are asked elsewhere for instruments of much inferior grade. We can and do meet the lowest prices ever quoted and we also have the most costly Pianos in the world, but we GUARANTEE to give, in every case, value that positively cannot be duplicated anywhere.

See, hear and test our Pianos—get our prices and terms—investigate our methods and reputation. Do all this for your own sake and you will undoubtedly see it to your advantage to buy of us. Write, if you can't call.

SHARK HAS MESMERIC POWER

At Least That is the Way Sailor Accounts for Effect Produced on Him.

"Ever get mesmerized by a fish?" said the skipper. "No? Well, I have been many a time. It was a shark that did it."

"I don't know the scientific name of this particular variety of shark, but it abounds on the Nantucket shoals. When full grown they are from eight to ten feet long and weigh from 500 to 700 pounds. They have a broad head, with the mouth well under it. They have saw teeth, five rows of them, about an inch and a half long, and they can flatten the lot and chew their gums. But for a human being the peril is in the eyes."

"I don't believe in man eating sharks. I believe that if a shark is in bloody water he gets excited and will snap at anything he sees; but let one of those fellows get his eye on you and you don't know where you are at."

"They have a habit of coming up alongside of your live boxes and lying there while you fish. Then when you get anything on your line the shark has it off before you get a chance to pull."

"I remember the first time I saw one of them. I was a boy at the time, and one of these fellows had come up alongside of my live box and I put my hand out and touched his back. He didn't seem to mind it at all; but a minute later when I stood up I caught sight of his eyes, or one of them. Well, sir, I just tumbled back in the boat and was as helpless as a jelly-fish out of water."

"I don't know how to explain it. The eyes of this fish are no bigger than the point of your little finger, but there is something that comes out of them that makes you tumble all in a heap. Many a time after that did I know of a lot of men who have felt the same effect. The only explanation I could suggest is that the shark's eye has some sort of mesmeric power."

Woman's Work Well Done.

Half forgotten by a public whose ears rang with her praises two generations ago, and approaching the time of life when rest and reflection are considered appropriate, Ida Lewis, the keeper of Lime Rock lighthouse, still attends to her important duties as faithfully and capably as at any previous period during her 53 years' residence on the rocky island. Daily she pursues a round of labor which would exhaust a much stronger woman, and there is never an hour throughout the night when she does not consciously awaken, attentive to the red glow which assures her the light is fulfilling its mission. Most impressive of all, perhaps, in her long tale of service, is the fact that she has spent only a half-dozen nights off the rock since she became keeper in 1879.—Putnam's.

Fastidious Man.

An observing person said the other day that if anyone wished to assure himself that men are more fastidious than women let him go into a restaurant and observe both sexes.

"Why, do you know," he said, "there is one man who eats at a downtown restaurant where I do. He brings his own knife and fork and spoon in a box—a sterilized one, I suppose—and uses them exclusively. The first time I noticed him he was in the act of returning his silver to its case, and thinking he was helping himself to the company's plate, I pointed him out to a waiter."

"Oh, it's his own stuff," said the latter with a chuckle. "He's afraid of germs, and we have to humor him a little."

A Good Suggestion.

"Why, I declare!" exclaims the trusting wife. "I won't have to buy any new dresses or hats at all this spring!" "You won't?" asks the crafty husband. "Surely you will need something."

"Not a thing. I've been looking through this month's fashion magazine that you brought home for me, and I find that there isn't the slightest change in style from last spring."

And the crafty husband, inwardly gloating over the success of his scheme to paste a this year's cover on a last year's magazine, leans back in his chair and smokes and smokes and smokes.

Proof of Wisdom.

"I wonder why Minerva was called the goddess of wisdom?" queried the pretty widow.

"I don't know," growled the savage bachelor, "unless it was because she never married."

And realizing there was no hope for her in that direction, the p. w. got busy with a susceptible widower.

HOW ENGLISH SPARROWS CAN BE DESTROYED

Small Bird Is Cunning, Destructive and Filthy—Very Little that Can be Said in Its Favor.

In its economic relations the English sparrow among birds is comparable to the rat among mammals. It is cunning, destructive, and filthy. This sparrow was introduced into America about 67 years ago, and is now distributed generally over the eastern half of the United States and southern Canada and locally westward to the Pacific coast. This rapid dissemination is a result of the bird's hardiness, extraordinary fecundity, diversity of food, aggressive disposition, and almost complete immunity from natural enemies through its sagacity and its preference for thickly settled communities.

Its natural diet consists of seeds, but it eats a great variety of other foods. While much of its annual fare consists of waste material from the streets, in autumn and winter it consumes quantities of weed seed, and in summer numerous insects. The destruction of weed seed is undeniably in the sparrow's favor.

On the other hand, much can be said against the bird. It destroys small fruits, as cherries, grapes, pears, and peaches. It also destroys buds and flowers of cultivated trees, shrubs, and vines. In the garden it eats seeds, as they ripen, and nips off tender young vegetables as they appear above ground, peas and lettuce being especially subject to attack. It damages wheat and other grains when newly sowed, ripening, and in shocks. It reduces the numbers of some of our most useful native species, such as bluebirds, house wrens, purple martins, tree swallows, cliff swallows, and barn swallows, by destroying the eggs and young and by usurping the nesting places. It attacks other familiar native birds, as the robin, wren, red-eyed vireo, catbird, and mockingbird, causing them to desert parks and shady streets and towns. Unlike our native birds whose places it usurps, it has no song, but is noisy and vituperative. It defiles buildings and ornamental trees, shrubs, and vines with its excrement and with its bulky nests.

The evidence against the English sparrow is overwhelming, and the present unfriendly attitude of the public toward it is reflected in our state laws. Nowhere is it included among the birds that are protected. Though sparrows may be driven from a given neighborhood, the relief thus obtained is only temporary, and has the further objection that the nuisance is simply transferred elsewhere. More drastic action is therefore preferable.

The box illustrated is designed to be hung on a building or a tree. Its floor should be about six inches square and its height at the eaves about eight inches. The roof should be hinged at the top for removing the eggs or young. Such boxes may be built of rough boards at slight cost. By distributing a number of them about orchards, shade trees, and outbuildings, and catching the sparrows that occupy them, or by destroying eggs, the work of extermination may be carried on at a season when other methods are least effective. Sparrows frequently give annoyance by roosting in ornamental vines and in crevices about buildings. If driven out late at night, several nights in succession, they will usually desert the roost. A jet of water from a garden hose is a potent disturber, particularly on frosty nights. Where water is not available, small Roman candles may be employed.

Preliminary to the following destructive measures, sparrows should be baited until they are attached to the spot selected for their execution. Seeds, grain, or waste from the table, if supplied regularly, will soon establish a feeding place. If a general campaign is to be undertaken, enough such feeding places should be maintained to attract to them practically all the English sparrows in the neighborhood. This can easily be done in winter when food is scarce. After thus baiting the sparrows they may be trapped, shot or poisoned.

Traps alone are inadequate to exterminate sparrows, but a reduction of numbers can be effected by using a shallow box not less than four feet square, open on one side and covered with woven wire on the other. One

SPANISH BREED OF POULTRY

The Spanish breed of fowls has long been popular in this country and in Europe. Their symmetry of form, graceful and proud carriage, as well as beauty of plumage, have made them favorites of poultry fanciers, while their value as egg producers has placed them among the most desirable breeds. Their flesh is of very good quality. Their eggs are large and white, larger than those of any other breed, it is claimed, except the La Fleche.

The White Faced Spanish is the most important variety of this breed, and it is also the most common. The average weight of the Black Spanish male is about seven pounds, though it sometimes reaches eight; the hen averages about a pound less. This breed usually weighs more than one would guess because the twigs are so full crested and plump bodied. The legs are rather long. They do not often sit.

Other varieties of the Spanish breed are the Minercas or Red Faced Black Spanish, the Anconas, a mottled variety, and the White Spanish.

The great drawback to this breed of fowls is their lack of hardiness in the higher latitudes. They must have warm and comfortable quarters if they do well in anything like a cold climate, or in bad, disagreeable weather in any climate.

Civilization Judged by Milk.

Prof. Erf says the civilization of a people can be determined by the quantity of milk they use. Sure, only highly civilized people keep cows that give enough milk to have it worth while to get into the habit of making butter and cheese.

THE PROPER PINE TO USE FOR COUGHS AND COLD

Many pine extracts contain resins causing nausea and cramps. For most reliable and quickest results in curing a severe cough or cold follow this formula: "Get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of this mixture after each meal and at bed time." But be sure to get the genuine Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top case. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from his wholesale house.

A New Version.

Apropos of George Washington and the cherry tree story, Senator Beveridge said at a dinner in Indianapolis: "I asked a little boy what this story was the other day, and he actually didn't know. He said he knew, though, the story about the judgment of Solomon, and he proceeded to tell it to me. 'Solomon,' he said, 'was a very wise man. One day two women went to him, quarrelling about a baby. The first woman said, 'It is my child.' The second said, 'No, it is mine.'"

"But Solomon spoke up and declared: 'No, no, ladies; do not quarrel. Give me my sword and I will make twins of him, so that each of you will be supplied.'"

Cause of the Increase.

Going downtown the other morning in the street car Judge Reid looked up from his newspaper. "I see that the publisher of Anybody's makes the claim that his magazine has a larger circulation than yours," he remarked to the proprietor of the Earth Monthly. "Well, it's my fault if it has," snapped the other; "like a fool, I've been letting him run one of his ads. in the Earth."—Chicago News.

WHAT'S THE USE

Sticking to a Habit When It Means Discomfort?

Old King Coffee knocks subjects out tolerably flat at times, and there is no possible doubt of what did it. A Mich. woman gives her experience:

"I used to have liver trouble nearly all of the time and took medicine which relieved me only for a little while. Then every once in a while I would be suddenly doubled up with an awful agony in my stomach. It seemed as though every time I took a breath I would die. No one could suffer any more and live."

"Finally I got down so sick with catarrh of the stomach that I could not turn over in bed, and my stomach did not digest even milk. The doctor finally told me that if I did not give up drinking coffee I would surely die, but I felt I could not give it up."

"However, Husband brought home a package of Postum and it was made strictly according to directions. It was the only thing that would stay on my stomach, and I soon got so I liked it very much."

"Gradually I began to get better, and week by week gained in strength and health. Now I am in perfect condition, and I am convinced that the whole cause of my trouble was coffee drinking, and my getting better was due to leaving off coffee and drinking Postum."

"A short time ago I tasted some coffee and found, to my astonishment, that I did not care anything about it. I never have to take medicine any more. I hope you will use this letter for the benefit of those suffering from the poisonous effects of coffee."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Three Costumes

Dress for Girl of 14 to 16 Years.

Dressing Gown.

Coat for Day or Evening Wear.

DRESS for Girl of 14 to 16 Years.—Fine serge in a deep shade of old rose is used for this simple dress. The bodice and gored skirt are made in one; the panel of front being carried up to the bust over the waistband; the collar and cuffs are edged with silk straps; the vest and collarband also being of tucked silk.

Materials required: Five yards 46 inches wide, five-eighths yards silk, 4 1/2 yards lining saten.

Dressing Gown.—A specially pretty gown is shown here; it may be made up in cashmere, nun's veiling, fine French flannel or flannelette. The empire bodice is tucked in front and trimmed with insertion; the deep turnover collar also being trimmed with insertion, and lace; this is pleated at center back, and each side the front, and joins the bodice under a sash that is fixed at top under a diamond-shaped buckle made of silk over cardboard; the long ends are knotted twice and finish in loops.

MOURNING JEWELRY IN VOGUE

Must by No Means Be Too Ornate—An Instance of Proper Thing To Be Worn.

It is hard for a girl who likes quiet mourning to get jewelry that suits her taste. Most of it is too ornate, or is bestudded with pearls, or shows too much of the gold linings.

A dog collar that is being worn by a girl in the deepest crape is in particularly good style. It is made of onyx set in gold, but in such a way that none of the shining metal shows.

The form of the collar is groups of five oval sections set horizontally one above the other between square, upright sections deep enough to hold the cross pins in place. The horizontal parts are pointed at each end and about the size of an ordinary cuff pin.

This collar fits closely about the throat and can be worn on the outside of the gown or on the bare neck. In having such an ornament made to order the number of the cross pins can be varied to suit the length of the neck.

OF RUSSIAN GREEN.

Russian green diagonal chevrot was used in the making of a fashionable three-quarter length coat of the palest variety. There is no trimming save black crocheted buttons and collar and cuffs of sable.

Materials required: Six and one-half yards 46 inches wide, 2 1/2 yards insertion, 2 1/2 yards lace, three yards ribbon.

Coat for Day or Evening Wear.—Face cloth of firm texture is the most suitable material for this coat. The drawing gives the effect of the sleeves being cut in with the coat; but in reality they are separate; both center back and front are slightly drawn in by a band of embroidery, which in front end under the revers. These are faced with black silk, which is smart with almost any color.

The sleeves are trimmed with tassels. The edges of the opening at the sides are connected by cords and buttons.

The coat is lined throughout with silk.

Materials required: Four and one-half yards 52 inches wide, 20 buttons, about five yards cord, nine yards lining silk, three-quarters yard silk for facing revers, four tassels.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE BANG

Loose Fringe of Curis Has Taken Place of the Severe Cut Once So Much Worn.

While the bang is back, it, like most revivals, would scarcely be recognized by its forerunners of the late eighties.

No longer does one make herself fright with the severely plain fringe of hair completely concealing the forehead and looking as if it had been cut around a crock.

The modern bang is a loose, frizzy fringe of curls worn along the top of the forehead to soften the effect of masses of bought braids. Sometimes it is worn under the ribbon fillet, indeed, should be, if the wearer consents becomingness.

As most women object to cutting their own hair to suit a passing fashion, no one should venture playfully to pull his lady love's curl that hangs in the middle of her forehead. To his mortification and her rage the fringe and the girl may part company.

For women with big foreheads and hair scant on the temples the bang is a boon, as it is undeniably becoming and softens the face.

A Brocade Blouse.

Now is the time to use it, if you have any rich piece of old brocade reposing in an old trunk.

Can't you manage to have it match your velvet or broadcloth skirt, so that you may wear it as the French do?

They cover it with chiffon of the exact shade, or they bring it into harmony with the skirt by the use of a varying shade of chiffon.

No trimming is used, no pleats are present. The neck line is slightly low, the sleeves reach to the three-quarter mark. Around the neck and sleeve edge there appears the merest hint of plain velvet as a finish. This is elegant simplicity; and, although chiffon is not easy to handle, it will be found less difficult because of this lining of more heavy brocade.

Dyeing Laces.

To color very delicate French lace, which is usually silk, it may be stretched with thumbtacks upon a board, with clean white blotters beneath it, and painted with gasoline and oil paint made very thin.

This is done when laces are so tender that they would not stand dipping and wringing.

A broad, new varnish brush is used for the painting of lace, and the process is a most delicate one, involving great care.

Rice Water for Babies.

Boil one cup of well washed rice in three-fourths of a gallon of water until quantity is reduced to about three cups. Strain.

Serve the rice water in nursing bottle in the proportion of two-thirds rice water to one-third cow's milk. If the child is feverish and cannot digest milk serve rice water alone, sweetened or salted to taste. Above directions may be reduced or increased according to need.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the introduction of John Stephens, an American man marooned by authorities at Valparaiso, Chile. Being interested in mining operations in Bolivia, he was denounced by Chile as an insurrectionist and as a consequence was being held in a hotel. His attention was attracted by an Englishman and a young woman. Stephens rescued the young woman from a drunken officer. He was taken by her. Admiral of the Peruvian navy confronted Stephens, told him that war had been declared between Chile and Peru and ordered him to the office of captain. He decided that that night the Esmeralda, a Chilean vessel, should be captured. Stephens accepted the commission. He successfully captured the vessel supposed to be the Esmeralda, through strategy. Capt. Stephens gave directions for the departure of the craft. He entered the cabin and discovered the English woman and her maid. Stephens quickly learned the wrong vessel had been captured. It was Lord Darlington's private yacht, the lord's wife and maid being aboard. He explained the situation to her ladyship. Then First Mate Tuttle laid bare the plot against the Sea Queen, which had been taken in order to go to the Antarctic pole. Tuttle explained that on a former voyage he had learned that the Sea Queen was lost in 1833. He had found it frozen in a huge case of ice on an island and contained much gold. Stephens consented to be the captain of the expedition. He told Lady Darlington. She was greatly alarmed, but expressed confidence in him. The Sea Queen encountered a vessel in the fog. Stephens attempted to communicate.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

"Lay your hands on me again," I threatened, sternly, "and I'll floor you to the deck. I'll take that grin off your face, De Nova, if you attempt any interference with me now."

He understood quickly enough what I meant, and evidently had no relish for attacking me alone, for with one swift, searching glance into the fog, he leaped down the steps and ran hastily aft. I knew he was seeking the backing of Tuttle, and armed myself with a belaying pin, peering eagerly meanwhile for the nearby sail, and cursing the fellow at the wheel for not holding her up to the point directed. They came up together, two steps at a time, Tuttle in his shirt sleeves, and, as they attained the bridge, Bill Anderson swung himself out of the hatch and, started after them. I backed away, the ugly iron pin clamped in my hand.

"You'd better keep back," I warned, threateningly. "I'm ready to brain the first man who attempts to touch me."

Tuttle stopped, his jaw working savagely, his eyes on mine.

"Will you promise to keep quiet, sir, and let us get away out of this?"

"Damn you, no!" stubbornly, all my senses leaving me at sight of his hateful face. "I'll speak that ship yonder if I have to fight the crew of you single-handed."

"Then fight, you cockerel, and be damned to you!" roared Anderson; and he pressed past the two of them and sprang at me.

It was hot, swift work, while it lasted. I struck twice, laying open the big brute's scalp, and dropping him so his head hung dangling down over the deck, his body huddled against the rail. I aimed to do as well by Tuttle, but the descending pin landed on his uplifted arm, and before I could draw back for another blow, the fellow at the wheel released the spokes and whirled at my back, throttling me with his hands as the weight of his body crushed me to the planks. Grasping the rail I half-saved myself loose, rising to one knee, and struck him twice madly in the face; but others of the crew came tumbling on top of us, pinning me helplessly down. It was all the work of a breathless moment, and as I lay there, the knee of a negro crumpling into my chest, I saw De Nova spring to the wheel and what it hard down, while Tuttle, his left arm dangling, his teeth set from pain, began jangling the bells in the engine-room. Scarcely had the echo reached us when a strange voice hailed sharply from out the dense fog:

"Steamer, ahoy! What vessel is that?"

Tuttle's nasal voice answered:

"Steam yacht Cormorant, Panama to Easter Island, for pleasure. Who are you?"

"H. M. S. Victory, on cruise. Stand by, while we send a boat."

A deep oath sprang to Tuttle's lips, his fingers convulsively gripping the rail. Then he appeared to rally, the intensity of his fear making a new man out of him.

They were certainly expeditious enough in my case, dragging me bumping down the steps, and flinging me in between table and bench with a violence that made me groan. I caught the glimmer of a steel barrel in De Nova's hand as he drew close the sliding door.

"It was not nice sing to do, Mons. Stephens," he said, not ill-naturedly, "but, by gar, out ze farstly row it was going to be done, for I shoot ze pistol very good."

"That's all right, De Nova," I replied, realizing my complete defeat and holding no personal grudge against him. "I don't blame you. I've made my play, and have had enough. May I sit up?"

He nodded carelessly, dropping the revolver back into his jacket pocket, yet with his black eyes fastened shrewdly on my face.

"'Tis ze bes' way to talk, monsieur," pausing to listen to the mingled sounds without. "Sacre, I wonder w'at ze devil was up now!"

We both sat, breathing hard from our late exertions, listening anxiously, yet with vastly differing emotions, hope animating me that this was to prove a capture, or, at least, that some chance discovery by the officer visiting us would result in the release of the woman below. But De Nova was in an agony of apprehension, the full peril of his position clear before him. We heard the bare feet of the hurrying sailors patter along the deck, the strident voice of Tuttle issuing a few final commands, and the faint sound of oars in the water alongside. The officer came slowly up the ladder, and my heart sank as I heard him laugh carelessly to the mate's greeting. I could distinguish the sound of his voice, but not the words uttered, and in some way it impressed me with the thought that the fellow was young, a midshipman, possibly, who would prove mere puppy under Tuttle's expert handling. The two went down the companion-steps together in apparently amiable conversation, and we could hear the low murmur of voices as the crew hung over the rail jostling with the men-o-war's men in the boat below. My eyes met De Nova's in the semi-darkness, and he grinned, showing his teeth.

"Nossing ver' dangerous, monsieur," he said, easily. "Ze ol' fox he-fool zat kid."

I attempted no response, my mind already sufficiently heavy from apprehension. Oh, for just a word, merely an opportunity to cry out my story before it was forever too late! De Nova must have felt the struggle within me, for he stretched his legs across the narrow passage leading to the door, and I saw his hand thrust into his coat pocket. Underneath his genial veneer he was one to act upon occasion, absolutely careless of the result. So I waited in silence, my teeth set hard, my hands clenched, as the last vestige of hope oozed slowly out of me. They were scarcely ten minutes below, coming up chatting in rare good fellowship, the officer clinging to the rail, his feet on the ladder, while he completed some story he had been relating with much gusto. Then we heard plainly the dip of oars, growing gradually fainter in the distance, feet pattered on the deck planks, Tuttle's voice sounded from the bridge, and the vessel began throbbing to the steady chug of the screws. We were safely under way again, pressing our sharp bow into the fog-bank. Unable to control my weakness, I buried my face in my hands.

I do not know how long we sat there motionless, De Nova staring blankly at the vapor sweeping past the window, and I with head lowered in depression. It was Tuttle himself, with one arm in an improvised sling, who slid open the door of the chart-house and looked in upon us.

"This is your watch yet, De Nova," he said, shortly, "and I need to doctor up my arm a bit. You're a dam' hard hitter, Mr. Stephens, no trace of anger in his voice, but that's about the last chance you'll have to kick up a shindy on this vessel. You'll go below, sir, and stay there, unless we happen to need you."

I stepped forth onto the open deck in obedience to his gesture.

"Then I am no longer even in pretended command, but merely your prisoner."

"Call it whatever suits you best," he returned, grimly. "The result will be the same in any case. Well, De Nova, what are you waitin' for?"

"I sink maybe you say w'at was it ze navy man wanted?"

Tuttle's solemn countenance broke into the semblance of a grin.

"Plug tobacco," he announced, sucking his lips with sudden enjoyment of the joke. "Gave me the scare of my life, but that's all it amounted to. Been out cruisin' for three months, and the crew ready to mutiny for smokin' and chewin'." Nice, sociable little chap they sent over, too."

CHAPTER XIII.

In Which We Sail Due South.

As I sank down into the recesses of a cushioned chair in the cabin, my spirits at lowest ebb, I glanced up at the telltale compass—we were already headed due south.

Those days and nights following, while serving to bear us continually deeper into the immense expanse of water that concealed the mystery awaiting us in the great South sea, contained little of incident directly relating to this narrative. Day following day that same wide circle of the sky came down to unite with the circle of the waters. It was almost as though we remained motionless, "a painted ship upon a painted ocean"; only the figures on the paper, the pins on the chart, the sharp stem-cleaving waves leaping, and the oily wake astern leaving us aware of steady progression through this trackless desert of the sea.

We passed somewhat to the westward of Juan Fernandez, so far out that only with a glass from the foretop could the distant peaks be dimly deciphered in blue, misty blots against the sky. Already Tuttle had banked the fires, and spread the Sea Queen's canvas, reaching to the westward to get the most possible out of the fresh breeze. The Sea Queen changed motive power and appearance as if by magic, the square yards hiding the faintness of her keel, and concealing the rake of her masts, the white sails billowing out before the wind, sending her swooping forward through the water like a great bird, leaning over until at times her lee rail was all awash with white foam and her forward decks glistening with spume.

Tuttle drove her recklessly, holding on in spite of crackling wood and sails threatening to tear loose from the bolt-eyes, taking shrewd advantage of each slant of wind, and lowering canvas only when danger was deadly. He had come into his own, he was at home, and the rejuvenated Sea Queen leaped forward at his will, as though endowed with fresh life. He seemed to understand her moods, her caprices, as though he had sailed her in every sea, and I watched him test her, loosening a rope here, tightening another there, striving to discover her good and bad qualities, until my admiration for his seamanship almost overbalanced my growing detestation of him otherwise.

Lady Darlington became positively afraid of him, dreading his approach, shrinking from his address, yet not daring to withdraw wholly from his presence. His sole topic of conversation was psychomania, and every time she endeavored to lead him to some more pleasant subject he would return with dogmatic persistence to that one rather dismal theme. His blatant self-conceit saved him from realizing her utter weariness, and he never seemed to tire of his own unctuous, nasal tones. Heavens, but the fellow was an insufferable bore. Celeste would slip away unobserved, but her mistress and myself had no means of escape. I remained quietly below for three days, and even then was not released by any formal word of mouth. I simply became so tired of the senseless imprisonment that I mounted to the deck, taking Lady Darlington with me, determined to be confined to the cabin no longer except by physical force. De Nova was upon the bridge when we emerged from the companion, but he merely glanced at us curiously. Tuttle, coming aft a little later, retained sense enough to remain silent. The three days passed below had thrown me much into the society of both mistress and maid, although the frank intimacy of that first conversation with Lady Darlington was never resumed. There seemed an intangible barrier of reserve between us, although we talked freely enough regarding our situation, the peculiarities of Tuttle, and the constantly changing wonders of the deep. It was as if neither of us quite dared to probe beneath the surface, opening up once more the depths each endeavored to conceal; rather were we content to drift as the tide ran.

I saw comparatively little of De Nova, the second officer, during this period, and gained an impression that he was endeavoring to avoid meeting me. Yet I ran across him twice in company with Celeste, once in the cabin, and again in the narrow deck space overhanging the stern, and began to hope vaguely that the girl was winning him over to our interests. With the others I sought to approach I made no progress. McKnight seldom showed his nose above deck, and then only to smoke in sullen silence, seated gloomily on the edge of the main hatch or to the lee of the chart-house. Olsen was undoubtedly honest enough, yet without intelligence, his eyes those of a faithful dog. The Chilean, a smooth-faced young fellow wonderfully deficient in chin, I learned had been assigned as assistant to the cook, and was thus kept too busy inside the galley even to be approached. Indeed, so far I had not seen his face on board the ship.

CHAPTER XIV.

In Which De Nova Speaks.

What now occurred came upon us with such suddenness that I find it difficult to relate the incidents in detail. We must have been below the fiftieth degree of south latitude, and about 135 degrees west, with the wind strong and occasionally puffing up into squalls, bearing flakes of snow which stung exposed flesh and left a thin mantle of white along the decks. It was Tuttle's watch below, and as I paused in the protection of the companionway looking forward, while I got my pipe going, I could see De Nova on the bridge, wrapped up like a mummy, and crouching well down behind the tarpaulins. All about was a wild sea scene, never to be looked upon amid any other stretch of waters on the globe—a dull, dead picture of utter desolation, of madly racing waves, of green, sullen sea, of pale blue sky, the very frost in the air apparent; a cold, drear expanse of monotonous distance wherever the eye looked—a desert of water below, a void of air above. Big Bill Anderson, his head still bound up where I had cracked him, slouched in the doorway of the chart-house, staring aft, and a moment later De Nova came lumbering down the steps from the bridge and spoke with him for some earnestly. The boatswain finally went forward, clinging to a lifeline to keep footing on the slippery deck, and the second officer clawed along the weather-rail until he reached the companion.

ARE YOU IN LOVE?

Here's a Machine That Will record Heart Beats.

Sound from Life's Engine Transmitted Through Smoke and Flame and Registered on Paper, Showing Excitement or Tranquility.

Berlin.—Prof. M. K. Marbe of Frankfurt-on-Main has invented an ingenious apparatus for registering the beats of the heart by means of the oscillations of a flame recorded in smoke rings on a paper tape.

The machine will tell whether you are in love, will record the fact if you are excited and will betray to a physician whether there is anything wrong with the heart.

A small acoustic box (shown in the inset illustration), connected by two india rubber tubes with an acetylene generator and the recording flame, is placed over the thorax. The vibrations and shocks forming the sounds of the heart are transmitted to the membrane of this box, and through the gas contained therein to the flame, which registers in smoke rings on the paper tape the recurrence of the heart beats. Any anomaly can be easily recognized, and the invention will thus be of great use in diagnosing diseases of the heart.

Gordon's Godlike Character.

I have studied the character of Gen. Gordon pretty closely and in many books. I cannot yet say that I feel I have grasped his character all around. It was a most lovable character—at most godlike in its splendid detachment from all the ordinary appetites, weaknesses, and desires of life. In a far finer sense than the wretched, superstitious and filthy creature that sits naked and distorted outside the Hindu temples of India, and, without any effort, Gordon had attained to that death of all personal longings which to the oriental seems the acme of blessedness, and which often stands to the Christian even for the highest unselfishness, and therefore the nearest approach man can make to the founder of the Christian religion. Gordon had what often accompanies this complete detachment from the ordinary things of this world—a strange want of any sense of personal fear. Never was there a braver man. He had all kinds of courage, including Napoleon's two o'clock-in-the-morning courage."—T. B. O'Connor in London T. P.'s Weekly.

Negative and Positive.

He who is silent is forgotten; he who abstains is taken at his word; he who does not advance falls back; he who is overwhelmed, distanced, crushed; he who ceases to grow greater becomes smaller; he who leaves off, gives up; the stationary condition is the beginning of the end—it is the terrible symptom which precedes death. To live, is to achieve a perpetual triumph; it is to assert one's self against destruction, against sickness, against the annihilating and dispersion of one's physical and moral being. It is to will without ceasing, or, rather, to refresh one's will, day by day.

Don't Wake 'Em Up,

What did you tell that man just now?

I told him to hurry.

What right have you to tell him to hurry?

I pay him to hurry.

What do you pay him?

Five shillings a day.

Where do you get the money to pay him with?

I sell bricks.

Who makes the bricks?

He does.

How many bricks does he make?

Twenty-four men can make 24,000 bricks a day.

How much do bricks sell for?

Seventeen shillings and sixpence a thousand.

You give him five shillings and keep the rest?

Sure!

Then instead of you paying him, he really pays you twelve shillings and sixpence a day for standing around and telling him to hurry?

Well, but I own the machinery.

How did you get the machinery?

Sold bricks and bought it.

Who made those bricks?

Shut up; you'll wake the fools up and then they'll make bricks for themselves.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

They are East Jordan People, and What They Say is of Local Interest.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home, it is bound to carry weight with our readers. So many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press: are published as facts, people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. This is due to the experience of our citizens, and their public utterances regarding them. The doubter must doubt no more in the face of such evidence as this. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

The old-fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak stomach, Heart, or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely failer. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see!
