Over 100 Received Diplomas.

The eight grade examination for 1910 has left pleasant memories with the class that the examination of former years have done.

The general impression seemed to be that the examination was easier than former ones have been but while this may be partially true, yet more of the success is due to better teaching and better application on the part of the students than to the fact that the examination was particularly easy.

An even 200 students wrote the examination and of these 118 received state diplomas while about 40 others were very near the passing mark and will be admitted to the high schools if they will make an effort to make up a little work during the summer.

12 of the others were seventh graders who wanted to try the examination. None of the seventh graders received diplomas though some of them made fairly good records.

In addition to the 6 students who wrote part of the examination as a special test on some work that they were making up and 5 students from other counties had their papers forwarded from this county to other commissioners.

The four students from the Bay Shore school who passed the examination were determined to complete their work in orthodox fashion and it was my pleasure to attend one of the prettiest little commencement exercises in the church there that I have seen anywhere.

Twenty-five diplomas were given to the members of the Boyne City eighth grade, eighteen to the Charlevoix class and twenty-two to the East Jordan class, six to members of the eighth grade of the parochial school in Charlevoix and nine to the students of the schools on the Beaver Islands.

In the rural schools diplomas were given as follows:

Florence Alexander, Bessie Allen, Olo Lyngklip, Oswald Baler, Bertie Howe, Ward Genett, Hatlie Hamlin, Esther Hamlin, Geo. Hamlin, Chas. Rascho, Orlie Hooper, Ethel Kipp, Waceta Kipp, Bessie Tillotson, Edward Metz, Ira Olney, James Fraser, Meta Sanford, Leora Sanford, Edith Finout, Grace Davis, Marie Stoodly, Rina Kahler, Earl Bardwell, Elizabeth Doyle, Jennie M. Davis, Mary Huston, Walter Holbrook, Edward Wilde, Lee Holmberg, Donald Graham, Glenn Thomas, Hazel Niles, Isabel Phillips, Lydia Hayden, Lloyd Ballard, Susie Bennett, and Elsie Bailey.

I hope that the successful applicants will take advantage of the tuition law and that they will be enrolled in the high schools of the county next year.

The Value of an Education.

Class Oration by Flora Simmons.

Education is never a thing of the past, but always one of the most important topics on the mind of each new generation. Many millions of dollars are spent yearly in order that that youth of today may be prepared to fill the vacant places of tomorrow. It is asked, if our forefathers were able to live, enjoy life, and build a prosperous nation, with a limited education, cannot the future generation do likewise? But the times are constantly changing and the youth of today must therefore have a better education in order to meet the greater demands upon them.

An education means more than the mere knowledge of one's special occupation. Man must be able to prize more highly the fair treatment of his fellowmen, and have as his motto, that human life is of more value than money. When this is true, then we shall find that the life of the public will be safer and more pleasant. For example, the railway magnate will not work for the large profits, but for the comfort of his passengers and safety of his employees. And the capitalist who does not guard his employees against dangerous machinery, who allows them to work under unsanitary conditions, or employs child labor, will not be tolerated.

It is true that men lived in the past quiet and peaceful lives, working day after day, on their small farms, clearing the land and planting the small towns. This filled up their life, and therefore they did not require so much education. Today the country is dotted with cities and factories, the mature results of their efforts. These cities are full of the habitations of vice, which are always open, only waiting to tempt the youth. If the youths are properly educated, they will seek to read instructive books, seek the highest class of entertainment, and avoid everything which would not be instructive.

This country is covered with all kinds of industries which take experienced and educated men to operate them. It is true that some men are able to fit themselves for good positions, by imitating those who are experienced, and by private study. But it is only a few who have the ability to do this, and if it were not for the colleges, where man may be instructed for the higher positions as he could otherwise obtain. Men who seek for helpers want only those who are capable of doing the work well, and more and more industry calls for the educated and the skillful.

A thorough education requires many years of hard work but it is usually indispensable in order that these higher positions may be gained. But the men who have gained these positions find that they require much less work and time than the common place ones. To the man of small earnings old age is looked forward to with a dread, for nothing has been saved, and in order that he may live he must work every day, and life is nothing but a drudge, while the educated man usually of larger earnings has saved sufficient to keep him comfortable, and there is less need for him to work, and he may therefore have time to think about other things than work.

The most important part of an education is, that it increases one's capacity to enjoy life. The uneducated man has no time for pleasure and sees only the things which take place in the small space of his untrained mental vision as everyday occurrences, while in each sunset, or in the song of the bird the educated man finds some new pleasure.

An education that is of the right sort and that includes both mental and moral nature should give a man leisure to take part in matters of social betterment and the willingness to do so.

As civilization advances and becomes more complex, the elementary education of our forefathers no longer suffices. New inventions create new wants that demand greater efficiency to satisfy. The average man must be something of a scientist whether he be a farmer, mechanic or professional man. Now industries and occupations are ever springing up and there must be experienced men to operate these, and to teach the young their principals, is the most important work of the colleges and technical schools.

Hence along all lines of life a higher education is necessary.

Class Will

Florence McKee.

It is customary when people die, that they leave their most valued things to their friends. Thus it is that we, who feel that our life here in this High School atmosphere is soon to be of the past, with one wistful look thrown over our shoulders relinquish the joys, all the sweeter because we may have them no more.

At one time women lawyers were an unheard of thing, but now each year brings forth more of them than the previous year. Therefore the class of 1910, ever being a progressive and up-to-date class, have favored that move, and since the faculty did not object, I am now before you to read their will.

The Will.

We the class of 1910, having reached the full age of High School existence, being in good mind, do hereby make and publish this our last will and testament, making void all other wills heretofore or at any time made by us.

We will make several requests which we hope will be carried out.

First. We request that our funeral services be conducted with all the dignity due a senior class.

Second. We ask that the faculty act as mourners at our funeral.

Third. We ask the Juniors to act as mourners at our funeral.

Fourth. We do humbly pray that our grave be covered with forget-me-nots, and that a weeping willow be planted at the head by the Juniors and Sophomores.

Fifth. We make a special request of the faculty, that they keep the same alive and thriving by watering them with sweet memories.

Sixth. We expect the freshmen will visit our grave every Sunday, indeed we should not be surprised if some turn up missing at the finals tomorrow on account of the newness of their grief.

As to personal property and real estate we make the following disposition viz:

Item. To our friends, teachers, and schoolmates, our good will and best wishes for future success.

To the Juniors we joyously bequeath the following, provided they carry out the requests heretofore mentioned.

Item. Our full store of Senior dignity. We know that the Junior class, though they are few in number, will ably fill our places and be a bright and shining light to the lower classes, as we have always been.

Item. The use of the laboratory with all the pleasures, duties, and troubles thereof; namely: To take electric shocks, which however was not much pleasure for the boys since they were rather timid about such things; to make it a place for receiving callers, or holding class conferences when Mr. Northon happened to be busy; to work tirelessly for hours, to determine the value of pie, to find the density or specific heat of a substance or to prove Ohms law, then, after working so long and faithfully to perform and write up experiments, to get them back from your worthy instructor and find a most exquisitely drawn C in red at the top.

Besides these we gladly leave you Burke's speech to outline or some difficult construction in Grammar to debate about, together with one hundred and twenty lines of Ivan of Arc per day or a hard list of originals in Geometry.

Item. We are happy to bequeath to you our brilliant success at our box socials. Of course we cannot leave you our auctioneer, Anthony Barney, who is doubtless the cause of our success, but we will bequeath Nat's auctioneering ability to the one of your number who shows the greatest capability of taking that honor.

Item. We leave you the new Opera House in which to hold your Commencement exercises and we are sure that the Juniors of next year will decorate it as befits the class of 1911.

Item. We bequeath to you Arloene Jones' wasted hours, which we would like to have you use to the best advantage. Mabel Northon suggests that you use them to discover the joys of fiction, for she has often heard of such things, but as yet has been unable to discover them. Then we

ACCORDING TO FORMULA

According to formula, the man who remarks about our footwear, that he always has good luck with our shoes, doesn't quite state all truth. We mean to say that it's not luck he has with them; that it is not by chance that our shoes fit well and wear well and keep their shape and are always in good style, for when he gets satisfaction out of our shoe, he is only getting what is coming to him; in other words, he is finding in the shoe only what we put into it for him to find. We put solid leather into our shoes; solid sole leather counters, sole leather heels, one piece insoles and whole vamps are characteristic of our shoes.

A few beauties from our summer line, are Oxfords for men $3.00 to $5.00. For ladies from $2.50 to $3.50. Shoes for boys and girls for $1.00 to $2.50.

JUNE WEEK AT ANNAPOLIS

GUN DRILL AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY

DURING the first week of June of each year, the quaint little city of Annapolis, Maryland, enjoys a degree of prominence in the eyes of the people of the entire country unrivaled by that regularly accorded to any other community of the size. The explanation is not far to seek. The historic town at the junction of the Severn river and Chesapeake Bay is the seat of the United States Naval Academy, and this "first week of summer" is the climax of the year at Uncle Sam's great training school.

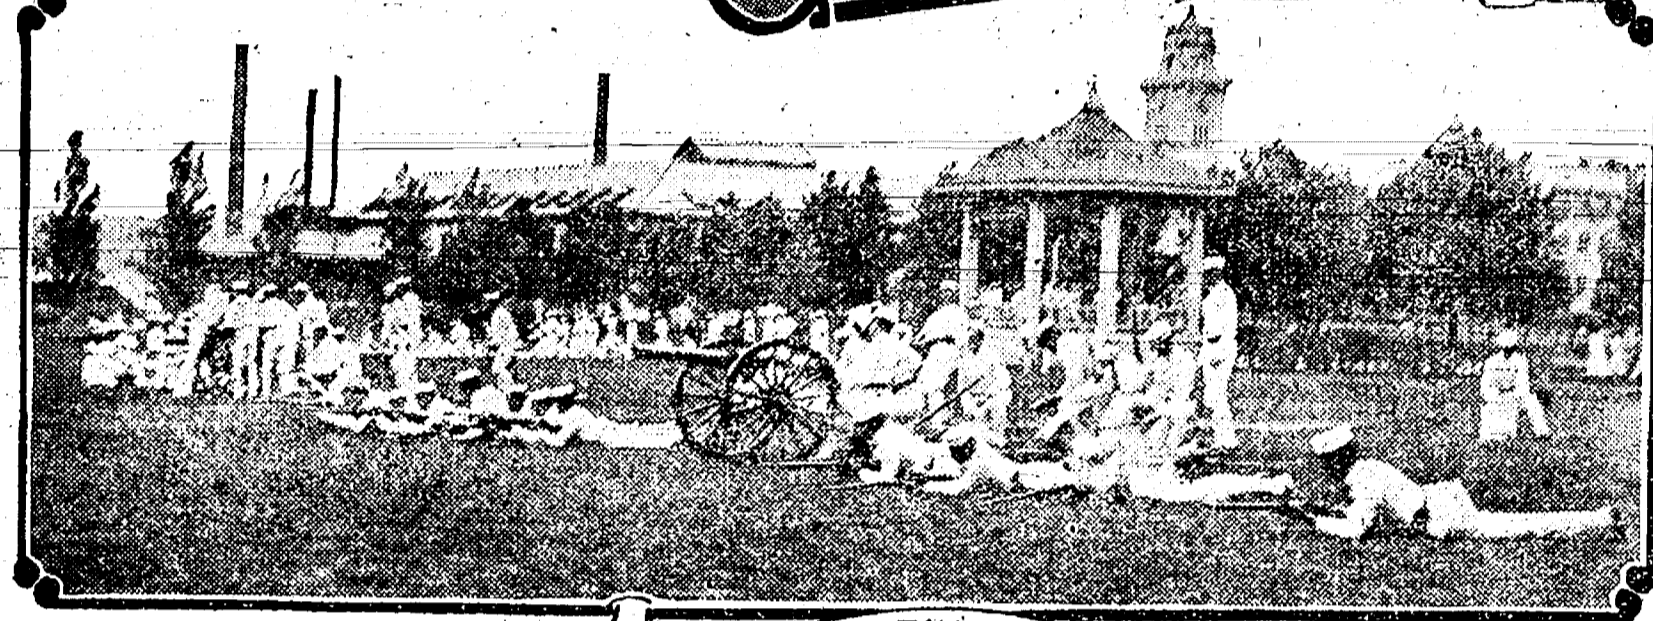

Primarily, of course, "June week" at the naval academy is significant of those varied festivities, social and athletic, which always characterize the commencement season at a great

MIDSHIPMEN MARCHING INTO BANCROFT HALL

Commentary: exercises are usually held on Friday of "June week" in the magnificent $400,000 memorial chapel which is the architectural keynote of the ten million dollar home of the naval school. As a rule the diplomas are presented to the graduates by the president of the United States, the secretary of the navy, or the admiral of the navy. The drills and parades and other or arduous spectacles in which the "middies" participate during this busy week have their compensations in the social features of the joyous season. The first class gives a garden to which invitations are eagerly sought by the visitors, and the festivities of the week close with a farewell ball that is the crowning pleasure of a memorable seat of learning. From that standpoint the crowning week of the year at the naval academy is not so different from the corresponding interval at Yale, Harvard, Cornell or any other of the big colleges, save that the military and nautical character of the institution, the discipline, the abundance of gold braid and other characteristics tend to make the wind-up of the school year at Annapolis a rather more showy function than it is anywhere else, with the possible exception of the United States Military academy at West Point.

However, the commencement exercises are but an incident of the "June week" program at Annapolis. Indeed there have been years when the graduating class of future admirals received their diplomas in February, and yet "June week" lost nothing of its importance in consequence of the elimination of the graduation feature. Over-shadowing the commencement is the fact that this is the season of the year set apart for the annual inspection by the official board of visitors, and indeed the seven days of strenuous activity is often referred to as "visitors' week" rather than as "June week," and it is more correct in several respects, one being found in the circumstance that "June week" often begins in May.

In the interpretation of the friends and relatives of the 1,000 young men in training for officers' commissions at Annapolis, "visitors' week" is synonymous with a season set apart for their edification and amusement, and this personal application of the term is readily understandable when one sees the town full of overflowing with proud parents, sisters, relatives and sweethearts of the midshipmen—the fair sex predominating by a tremendous majority. Such is the influx that the limited hotel and boarding house accommodations are fully engaged months in advance, and many visitors are obliged to travel by trolley to Washington or Baltimore each night for sleeping quarters. Attracted by the navy's greatest spectacle, this is the one season of the year above all others chosen by everybody interested in the "middies" collectively or individually to pay a visit to their proteges and the casual onlooker might readily suppose that the merry round of hops and parades and ceremonies had been designed especially for the edification of these well-wishers.

As a matter of fact, however, the succession of drills, exercises, sham battles, displays of seamanship and other practical demonstrations that crowd this strenuous week are for the benefit of the official board of visitors—less than a dozen men who in their plain civilian attire are somewhat overshadowed by the officers that escort them—brave in faiment of blue broadcloth or white duck, liberally bespattered with gold insignia. The board of visitors is appointed each year by the president of the United States for the specific purpose of conducting a thorough inspection of the naval academy and investigation of its methods of training and making recommendations as to needed changes in the curriculum, etc. Consequently, the student body at the great naval school is put through all its paces in order to afford the investigators object lessons at first hand as to the methods and equipment of the academy and the results attained in the training of young men as officers of Uncle Sam's sea service.

Annapolis appear successively in drill as engineers, infantrymen and artillerymen and they likewise demonstrate their ability to handle boats under oars, sail and steam. Torpedo, mine and gun drills are included in the varied program, while saber combats, fencing bouts and small arm target practise demonstrate the qualifications of the young men to execute as well as give an order. This year, for the first time, the midshipmen will make their summer cruise on battleships instead of on cruisers and monitors, such as have previously been utilized for such voyages.

GOT IN WITH BOTH FEET

And Next Time Brown Will Think Before He Talks Too Much.

"I see your wife is a German," remarked Brown casually.
Robinson looked up in surprise. "Why," he said, "how did you guess that? She was born in this country, and has neither a trace of accent or German idiom."

Brown laughed a little confusedly. "I just guessed it," he answered. "It was—well, maybe it was that I thought she had Teutonic features."
Robinson looked first at his wife and then at Brown. "That is curious," he said. "She is more often taken for a person of French extraction. Her people are from the Rhine district, you know, and as she is dark and slight very few would think she was German. In the popular mind that type is fair and large."

"Oh," answered Brown, who had by this time recovered his assurance, "I am well acquainted with many types of German. That is probably how I came to make such an inconsiderate remark."

Mrs. Robinson laughed lightly. "I'm proud of my Germanic origin," she said. "But it has never happened before that anyone guessed it so accurately as you did."

Then the conversation drifted to other matters. But Mrs. Brown remembered, and on the way home she said to her husband: "How did you guess Mrs. Robinson is German?"
"Nearly got my foot in it, didn't I?" said her husband, throwing out his chest a little. "But it was clever detective work on my part. Did you see how she poured tea? No? Well, she lifted the pot high and poured it so that bubbles formed in the cup. She got that gesture from pouring beer, or seeing it poured, so as to get a head. That made me think she was German. Of course she might have been some other nationality, but the Germans take most care in pouring their beer and do it most artistically, so—"

But his wife interrupted him. "How does it happen," she demanded, "that you know so much about the art of pouring beer?" And though she continued to question him all the way home and for a considerable time after they arrived home, she did not get what she considered a satisfactory explanation.—N. Y. Press.

No Cause for Contest.

Assemblyman John C. Hackett of New York recently told this story in a speech: "I was up in Rockland county last summer and there was a banquet given at a country hotel. All the farmers were there and all the village characters. I was asked to make a speech. 'Now,' said I, with the usual apologetic manner, 'I'm not fair to you for the toastmaster to ask me to speak. I am notorious as the worst public speaker in the state of New York. My reputation extends from one end of the state to the other. I have no rival whatever when it comes—' I was interrupted by a lanky, ill-clad individual, who had stuck too close to the beer pitcher. 'Gentlemen,' said he, 'I take exception to what this here man says. He ain't the worst public speaker in the state. I am. You all know it, an' I want it made a matter of record that I took exception.' 'Well, my friend,' said I, 'suppose we leave it to the guests. You sit down while I say my piece and then I'll sit down and let you give a demonstration.' The fellow agreed, and I went on. I hadn't gone far when he got up again. 'S all right,' said he, 'you win; needn't go no further.'"

Possibilities of Odd Moments.

It is really wonderful how much can be gained by improving odds and ends of time in keen-analytical observing, thinking, reading, studying. Think of the untold wealth locked up in the spare moments and long winter evenings of every life, says Success Magazine. It is possible to pick up an education in the odds and ends of time which most people throw away. If those who have been deprived of a college education would only make up their minds to get a substitute for it, they would be amazed to see what even the evenings of a few weeks devoted conscientiously to the college studies would accomplish.

When a noted literary man asked how he managed to accomplish so much with so little friction or apparent effort, he replied: "By organizing my time. To every hour its appointed task or duty, with no overlapping or infringements."

There is a great deal of time wasted even in the busiest lives, which, if properly organized, might be used to advantage.

Why They Parted.

A New York man who has paid arduous court to a charming young woman of athletic tendencies was lately encountered by a friend at one of the fashionable restaurants.

Instead of the usual intended he had with him his sister, whom he was entertaining with all the devotion that an ardent suitor might bestow upon his ideal.

"Where is your sweetheart?" asked the friend.

"Parted forever," said the late Romeo. "For keeps. In order to forget I am showing my hitherto neglected sister the time of her life."

"If you will pardon my curiosity—" began the friend.

"I will," interrupted the youth, with nearness. "I will tell you all. One day this week I saw her run along side a fast moving surface car in the street and jump on like a man. I is all on."

Wedding Fee Counterfeit.

A well-dressed stranger entered the office of Justice William B. Williams, Montclair, N. J., and after shaking hands astonished the justice by saying: "I'm here to redeem that counterfeit $10 bill I passed on you. Two years ago I called on you with my girl and two witnesses and you married us. I handed you a $10 bill. I had a counterfeit in my pocketbook that I'd carried for several years. I never missed it until yesterday. Then I remembered that I'd accidentally handed you the bill." The caller produced a good $10 bill, but the justice refused to take it. "Don't let that worry you, my dear fellow," he laughed. "I never knew it was a counterfeit. No kind of money sticks to me over night. I'm married, myself."

A Quick Cat.

Some years ago the proprietor of a hotel in southern New Hampshire told the following story: He said that when he was a boy he had occasion to go into the garret of his house one morning and that the family cat followed him up the stairs. One of the windows was open, and when they entered the garret a frightened mouse jumped out of the window, and the cat, jumping after it, caught it in mid-air and, whirling round, jumped back again into the same window.

SHIPS WITH A RECORD.

The word Dreadnought has passed into the current coin of the language in a manner that the name of no other warship ever did, the Dunlee Courier says.

The statesman and the man in the street alike talk glibly of Dreadnoughts in referring to the latest type of battleship.

When the Terrible or the King Edward represented the last word in naval construction their names did not become household words in the same way.

Of course, there was then no naval scare—no general demand for a fleet to cope with Germany.

It is interesting to recall the fact that the present Dreadnought is the seventh ship bearing that name which has served in the British navy. Her immediate predecessor is at present in the hands of the breakers. When she was completed 31 years ago she was justly regarded as the perfection of naval science. She was never called upon to defend her country in battle, but she was once in grave peril of destruction.

On that terrible day in June, 1893, when the Victoria was rammed by the Camperdown in the course of the maneuvers off Tripoli and Admiral Tryon, 22 officers and 336 men were lost, the Dreadnought, with a crew of 460 men, narrowly escaped a similar fate. It was only by the skill of Captain Moore, her commander, that a collision with the battleship Nile was avoided.

After being in commission for a quarter of a century, the Dreadnought, along with some hundred and fifty other ships, was struck off the active list by that "courageous stroke of the pen" so much applauded at the time. Along with several others she was sent to the Kyles of Bute to await a purchaser. Last year she was put up for auction and sold to be broken up. And now this gallant war vessel, at one time the pride of the British fleet, lies in the River Bubble at Preston, her framework being riven asunder and thrown on the scrap heap.

The fifth Dreadnought was one of the old wood-hull vessels that encircled our shores a century ago. She fought with Nelson, and helped him to win the glorious victory at Trafalgar. After her was named the Seamen's hospital at Greenwich.

The name of Nelson is also associated with that of the fourth Dreadnought, for it was on board this vessel that young Horatio received his training in seamanship. But the fourth Dreadnought belongs by right not to Nelson, but to another old sea dog whom we have every reason to admire. Admiral Boscawen was nicknamed "Old Dreadnought," from the first ship he commanded and from his fearless courage. In 1744, when in command of the Dreadnought, which was built in 1742, he captured the French ship Medee, with 800-prisoners.

Boscawen's Dreadnought fell on evil days and was doing harbor duty at the time of the American war, when Great Britain was drinking the cup of humiliation to the dregs.

The third Dreadnought was built in the days of William, prince of Orange. She went through the wars of Queen Anne's reign and ended her life in George II's time. Her predecessor was built by Charles II, and had a long career. She took part in seven fleet actions. After 36 years' service she foundered off the South Foreland when out looking for Jean Bart the French corsair.

When the Spanish armada was destroyed a Dreadnought had a hand in the fighting, and fully justified her name. The first Dreadnought was then under command of Capt. George Beeston. Before the armada however, she had been associated with the name of a greater naval hero than Beeston. Drake took her with him when he set out to "sing the king of Spain's beard," and she did her share in burning the Spanish fleet at Cadiz. Under the command of Captain Fenner she was with Drake again at Corunna after the armada had been shattered. She saw Frobisher slain in the attack on Brest in 1584, fought again at Cadiz under Essex and Raleigh and sailed with Raleigh upon the islands voyage.

DEAF AND DUMB!

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH

(Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.)

The two young men seated at the round table in the little open-air restaurant had kept up a desultory flow of talk, such as was compatible with doing justice to the delicious soft-shelled crabs for which the Sea Gull is noted. But it was a soundless conversation, inarticulate, for the fingers talked rather than the lips. George Laveton was a deaf mute and his cousin, Allan Merrifield, though less proficient in the sign language, had mastered enough of its intricacies to enable him to sustain a part in the conversation.

"Deaf and dumb, poor things! Isn't it dreadful?"

It was a girl's voice, coming from the table at the right.

"Yes, dreadful! And especially for the handsome one," replied her companion.

"Now, which of us does she mean?" wondered Allan. His uncertainty was a credit to his modesty, for George's lean, brown face, in spite of an expression of alert intelligence, lacked every element of beauty. Fortunately the speaker settled the question by adding, "What dark, beautiful eyes he has! I never care for blue eyes in a man."

Allan heaved a sigh of relief. George's eyes were gray. He improved the first opportunity to glance at the other table. The girl in blue was beautiful. Her oval face was tinted like a seashell and the big violet eyes with their long lashes were bewitching in their frank pity.

George nudged his friend and his nimble fingers spelled out warning.

"Don't stare so. It's rude."

"The worst of it is," remarked the girl who had spoken first, "that such an affliction shuts them out of every-sentimental regrets. But somehow the memory of the girl whose name was Winifred came back to Allan often in his hours of relaxation, or when he heard sweet music. Sometimes he dreamed of seeing her and the joy of recognition invariably awoke him. And so things went until one crisp fall morning, when Fate again took a hand in the game.

Allan came out of his office in a rush. He had some important matters to attend to before meeting a client. He had not yet reached the point in his profession when he could safely keep clients waiting. Accordingly he started to cross the street, despite the fact that a touring car was bearing down upon him, heralding its advance by the aggressive toots by which the modern motorist asserts his pre-eminence claim to the public highway. Allan believed that he had time enough to get across before the car should strike him and that, anyway, it was the chauffeur's business to look out.

At the critical moment his calculations were upset by a hand that clutched his arm. He stopped and pulled violently back, from under the very wheels of the swerving car.

Allan got back to the sidewalk without knowing just what had happened, except that the hand that had first clutched him still held fast to his arm. Then, looking down, he saw that it was a little hand in a blue glove.

The hand released its hold on him, touched his shoulder, as if to attract his attention, and pointed in the direction of the now vanishing car. Allan understood that an effort had been made to save him from the consequences of his own recklessness and he tried to seem grateful.

"Yes, I see," he stammered. "I suppose it was rather close. Awfully good of you."

The brim of the big hat was tilted with startling suddenness, disclosing a face, winsome in spite of its pallor. "You— you can speak?" gasped the girl—the girl whose name was Winifred.

The situation was trying. Suddenly it flashed upon him that his possession of the normal faculties was an offense to her. He tried to think of an answer to make to her and she backed away from him, the waves of color flooding her face.

"And you can hear, too," she accused him. "You can't deny it."

"I'm afraid I can't," said Allan with real emotion.

"And you're not deaf and dumb at all? I was trying to save your life I thought that you couldn't hear the horn and that you would be killed."

"I did hear it and I thought I had time to get across. But it was just as plucky of you," Allan cried. "I shall never forget it. Never!"

She had her hands up over her face. He could see only the tips of her ears. His admiring tribute had not comforted her—she was thinking of something else.

"You heard me?" she cried in a smothered voice—"that day in the restaurant? You couldn't have helped hearing every word. Oh! her voice rose in a wail. "Oh! What must you think of me?"

He came close to her. The street was full of people. Some passers-by stared at the pair, the girl with her face covered, as if she were crying, and the tall young man bending over her and plainly trying to comfort her.

But, for all Allan knew, they-two were alone in some enchanted garden. "I'd like to tell you what I do think of you," he said, unsteadily. "Some time when we're better acquainted I shall do it. But without waiting I can tell what I think about myself, and it's that I'm the luckiest fellow on earth to find you again. Now I'm going to walk along with you and find out what your name is—besides Winifred."

The client came promptly at eleven. And he waited as long as if Allan had been an acknowledged ornament to the bar, rather than a beginner with a name to make.

Woman as a Social Success. There is no quality more to be desired to make a woman a social success than that of tact. Its possessor knows the right thing to do and the right time for doing it and thus gains a reputation for cleverness and for many virtues which a tactless person would never win from her circle of acquaintances, no matter how excellent her qualities of both heart and head.

The tactful woman is not only a patient listener, but she is a thoroughly good one. She shows no weariness even when she has heard the same story more than once from the same person and she smiles in the right place and appears to enjoy hearing jokes as much as her companion enjoys telling them, says Woman's Life.

A tactful woman generally gets her own way with her husband and with other people and yet in such a manner that people always suppose that they are following their own and not her inclinations. The fact is that she knows when a man is approachable and likely to be amenable to her wishes and when it is best to leave him alone. Tact is a weapon guided with a multitude of precautions and feminine wiles by the wise woman and it is only the wise who possess it.

MOTHER IN VISION SAVES SHIP AT SEA

APPEARS TO YOUNG SEAMAN IN DREAM AND WARNS HIM OF DANGER.

BARELY AVERTS A CRASH

Woman Herself Also Dreamed of the Same Night That Her Sailor Son Was in Grave Peril of a Collision.

Portland, Me.—While coasters, especially the hard-headed down-east Yankee kind, share few of the superstitions or queer notions of deep watermen, they are not all so intensely practical that they can't take a useful hint, even when it is given in a mysterious way. There are men sailing out of Bangor today who believe all that they see or hear in dreams, and down at Castine lives a man who tells earnestly of how his vessel and all hands were saved by a vision, his own mother appearing to him in the dead of night, after having called his name in vain, and pointing off to windward, where a big ship was bearing down upon them. He is Capt. J. A. Webster—but let him tell his own story:

"I shipped on board a vessel called the Grand Turk, commanded by Capt. John P. Nichols, in Searsport, in 1842. She was what they called a brigantine, full-rigged brig forward, fore and aft masts on the mainmast, with top sail and top gallant sail, with high quarter deck for cabin, steeple for the sailors in the forward end, rail from main deck about three feet high.

"I was twenty-two years old. In the winter of 1843 went to New Orleans for a load of molasses for New York. The second day out the wind came around dead ahead and blew fresh southwest. Had to put her on the wind to beat out. In the afternoon the wind blew smart and we had to take in all the light sails and put her under snug sail for the night. There was quite a little sea" making up, night came on and it was quite dark. It was my watch below from 8 to 12, and I was pretty sleepy.

"The first thing that I knew I heard my name called in a quick, sharp voice. I recognized my mother's voice. It was very dark in our room. As soon as I opened my eyes I saw the image of my mother as plain as could be, with a terrible look of fear and grief on her face, standing at the foot of the steps to the companionway. She looked at me and then pointed her hand away off to the windward, toward the starboard bow, as we were on that tack, and vanished instantly.

"I started upon the run, bare-footed and bare-headed, over the deckload, and up the fore-rigging about twenty-five feet. I could hear around a sound resembling thunder in the distance. I

NOT INTERESTED IN TOADS

But Exasperated Suburbanite Was Forced to Listen to Statistics Until Patience Gave Way.

"Toads—" began the man who is always looking up queer statistics. "Blast the toads!" snapped the suburbanite with the ham, the bag of flour and the lawn mower. "I am not interested in toads."

"But you should be, sir. The toad lays 81,000 eggs annually."

"Very extraordinary, but—"

"The female toad also lives to be a thousand years old. Now if a hen could live to be a thousand years old and lay 81,000 eggs annually it would take a cold-storage warehouse as big as Maine, California and Texas, to hold them."

"Wonderful, but my train—"

"Stood on end the eggs would reach from here to the moon and back and leave enough to fill the Pacific ocean."

"Let go of my buttonhole, sir. I want to make the train—"

"Useless job. The train is already made. Listen to sense. After those eggs filled the Pacific ocean it would cause a tidal wave that would sweep—"

But just then the exasperated suburbanite brought his bag of flour down on the garrulous stranger. Then he escaped to his train.

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, would any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Irasburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power:

"The greatest need of this country (United States) in another generation, or two will be the wheat-growing and raising of homes for its people and producing surplus for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Our aim is to be the great wheat country."

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building in the wheat fields of Western Canada.

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 23 bushels per acre. From homesteads of 160 acres and adjoining, pre-emptions of 400 acres at $3 per acre, are to be had in the choicest districts. Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured; mixed farming a success. "Why Have You Lost Your Appetite?"

thing. Of course they can't marry. No woman in her senses would consider such a thing.

"I don't know why," cried the girl in blue, indignantly.

"You don't?" The exclamation of her companion indicated mingled disapproval and surprise.

"Well, for one reason, he couldn't make love to you."

"He wouldn't need to," declared the girl in blue, a trifle sentimentally. "If only he looked—" she broke off with a laugh and her companion said, reprovingly:

"Well, Winifred, I don't wonder you blush."

Allan longed to see how she looked when she was blushing, but he did not dare to raise his eyes. And her name was Winifred. Somehow he liked the sound of it. He repeated it musingly to himself.

The talk at the table on the right turned into other channels, but though Allan listened eagerly for a clue to the identity of the speakers, none reached his ears. "In a few minutes we'll leave or they'll leave," he reflected; "and I'll never see her again." It seemed to him that it was a piece of malice on the part of fate to have placed the girl in such tantalizing proximity, at the same time setting between them the barred wire fence of social convention.

Why couldn't he have met her? He wished for a hurricane or an earthquake, something that would afford him an excuse for hurrying to her side and proffering his aid. But nothing happened except that George finished his crabs and asked on his fingers the leading question:

"Why have you lost your appetite?" Allan took a final glance at the girl as he rose to go. She was even prettier than he had imagined—and sweeter. What a pensive little mouth was hers, drooping at the corners! And what a brave, tender-hearted little girl she had proved herself in her impetuous challenge to her friend. It seemed hard that he was turning away from her without any assurance that he would ever see her again. As he stepped aboard the street car he had so burdensome a sense of heaviness at heart that the ludicrous side of the situation forced itself on his attention and he laughed aloud.

In the nature of the case, an energetic young lawyer who is also a social favorite has little time to give to did not seem to feel nervous or excited. The sound kept growing louder; then I knew there was a vessel coming for us, and it was pretty dark.

"Presently I could see the water foaming under her bow and sparkling like diamonds, and could see the dim outlines of a big vessel coming right for us. She would have struck us right between the two masts or near the mainmast. As soon as I could see what it was best to do I halloed as loudly as I could to the man at the wheel: 'Hard up your helm, for God's sake—ease off on the main sheet!'"

"That was done in an instant. She paid off and gathered headway. By this time the ship was pretty close on, and I halloed: 'Luff aboard the ship.' Then I saw a light on the bow and heard a man pass the word aft.

"The ship swung to, the jibs rattled in the wind and I could hear men talking and could see several lights on board, and by that time we were pretty well out of her way. This was all done in less time than it takes to tell it.

"In the summer I came home, and my folks were all delighted to see me. Mother said that she never expected to see me again. Then she told me she dreamed that she saw a great ship that was going to run down our vessel, and it scared her almost to death. Father said she called my name out several times in her sleep.

Ladies' Equity Notes.

This is the month of roses and June brides.

A very pretty wedding occurred at noon on Wednesday, June 22, at the home of Mrs. Mary Crawford, when a large party of relatives met to witness the marriage of Miss Minnie Crawford and Mr. Earl Gould of Echo.

The bride was lovely in a pale blue silk princess gown.

The house was decorated with roses. After the ceremony the happy crowd sat down to a fine dinner.

A brother of Mr. Gould came from Ohio to attend the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gould have the best wishes of their many friends, and of the members of Goldenrod local. Many pretty and useful presents were presented to the bride.

Last Saturday evening a shower was given Miss Minnie Crawford by Goldenrod Local. About fifty attended, bringing a shower of presents. A good time was enjoyed and a lunch served. All went away wishing Minnie happiness all along the path of life.

The L. S. of E. have received an interesting letter from an Equity woman of Roselle, N. Y., describing her little farm. She says that she presumes we western farmers would think her little farm of ten acres a tiny place, and yet with the six acres rented, it contained the sole income of herself and five children for the past five years. It is a very pleasant home, sixteen miles from New York city. She has for sale the following crops—strawberries, asparagus, cabbage, carrots, sweet corn, chickens and eggs. The income from the farm is over $1,000 a year, not a bad showing for a woman farmer on a market garden. She says that were she able that it could be made to produce twice or thrice the $1,000, but they do not complain and have a pleasant home with all the comforts that a farmer should enjoy. She closes by wishing that they had a Ladies' Society of Equity organized there, and says that she expects to belong to it soon. In our country there are many farm women who will become interested in the farm woman society.

Secretary of Goldenrod local has a long letter from Elsie Matthews, describing their journey to their new home. Miss Elsie gave a very interesting account of all points of interest and every station from the day she left East Jordan until she reached Chestertown, Md. They are pleased with their new home and are building their new house.

Funeral of Homer Maddock.

The funeral services of Homer Maddock were held at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, June 19. The building was crowded to its utmost and many were gathered about the doors and yard. James Gidley, Harry Sloan, Arthur Vance, George Spencer, Austin Sheldon and Bert Nicholas served as pall bearers with John Porter, Vernon Payton, O. D. McIntyre, Benjamin Smatts, John Cuson and Leon Balis as honorary bearers. Following the casket came Harold Lampert supporting his sister Mary. Then came the families of his brothers and sisters, Roland Maddock, Ed and Chas. Alexander and Mrs. Josiah St. John, of this place, and Mrs. W. M. Anderson, of Boyne City and Mrs. W. F. Worth of Tower, Mich. Other relatives were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. R. O'Neill, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walker, of near Ironton. After these came the family of Rev. W. W. Lampert, and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Plank. The aged father, Joseph Maddock, was too feeble to be at the church and the brothers Charles, William and Joseph were too far away. Music was furnished by the young people's choir of which deceased was a member, but it was a trying ordeal for them, and some broke down unable to sing. Will Sloan, Tom Lalonde, Roy Webster and Harry Sloan sang "Some Sweet Day" and "That Beautiful Land," and the chorus gave the closing hymn, "Lead Kindly Light." The memoir was read by M. H. Robertson. The services were in charge of Rev. J. H. Cater and Rev. Herbert Kennedy, members of the local church, the latter reading the scripture and offering prayer. Mr. Cater chose for his text the words "Be ye also ready," and made use of the occasion to enforce upon all the need of timely and full preparation for the change from time to eternity.

After the services at the church the casket was borne to the parsonage, where many called during the remainder of the day to take their last look at the face of the dead.

On Monday morning the funeral party took the steamer Hum for Charlevoix, where the body was laid to rest beside that of his mother who died two years ago.

So ends the earthly career of an exemplary type of young manhood; one who was athletic in build and spirit and took a leading part in the games and social life of the town, and yet was so pure in his ideals and so kind and gentle in spirit that everybody loved him. His seeming untimely death has raised a thousand and one questions, but these must be left for the greater future to answer. He died with a firm trust in Christ as a personal Savior, and there is reason to believe that he was wanted by his Maker for some nobler service in the life beyond. The following lines written by his pastor, which closed the memorial tribute, appropriately express the sorrows and hopes that mingle in the hour.

SOME DAY.

Some day! Some day!
 Yet oh, so far, so far away!
 So many years must come and go
 Of summer sun and winter snow,
 So much of cloud, so much of rain,
 So much of bitterness and pain,
 Ere we shall pass the mystic door
 And meet our loved and lost once more.

Yet oh, some day!
 Sweet star of hope, whose glimmering ray

Shines thro' the darkness and the gloom
 That gather o'er the silent tomb.
 Let life be brief, let life be long,
 Let joy be full or grief be strong,
 God wills that all shall pass away,
 And that we meet again some day.
 Some day. Some day.

NONE OF THIS

W OULD you want your mother to be the figure in the left hand picture? That is a portrait of the mothers of thousands of other men! Would you want your father to be the one represented in the right hand picture? And your little sister to be as the child here shown? The fathers, and the sisters, of thousands of men are as these! But if ever we find no choice but to thus sap the life from our fellow creatures in order to make a living, we will quit the business! The big point is that—don't find himself up against any such choice! And, rightly viewed, neither do any of the tailors or "clothes manufacturers" who pile up rotten profits on the ruins of human life! Look at that picture in the middle. That is one view of a part of Fred Kauffmann's "big white shops" as the artist sees it. He wants happy workers. They do better work. He wants sunny work-rooms. Good work can't come out of dark holes. He wants elbow-room. Many a slip in clothes-making comes from crowding! We have ideals—and also business sense. BOTH are best served by the same kind of conditions. Better conditions. Healthful conditions. Clean, bright, stimulating conditions. "We are for Success!" all right, but not at the cost of human souls! AND WE HAVE PROVED, AND ARE PROVING, EVERY DAY, that SUCCESS does not need to have the sweat shop price-tag on it. Every stitch of Fred Kauffmann's work is done on his own premises—under his own eye—in OUR own sunlight! Do you care? You bet you do. We show 500 new Spring Woolen Samples, and our tape is waiting for you.

FRED KAUFFMANN
 WHO TAILORS OUR GARMENTS

WE want to call your attention to our FRED KAUFFMAN book of samples for good, dressy, "Made To Your Measure Suits. We want you to know that there is not a better way to get a good, perfect-fitting Suit than to have us take care of your measurements and by learning from you what kind of a suit you require. We guarantee you a perfect fit. We get most of our orders through satisfied customers who are delighted with their suits, and wanting to do their friends a favor, advise them to see us. We are so confident we can please you that we do not require any deposit until you know that you have a perfect fit—then it's so evident that it's a bargain you will find it a pleasure to pay the price.

 The Michigan Agricultural College is about to publish a bulletin giving information regarding the planting and cost of an orchard. This publication will be ready for distribution in the early future and copies may be had upon application to the Western Michigan Development Bureau.
 County politics this year promises to play a big part in the state election this year, there being an unusually large number of contests on for county offices and combined with the fact that this is also a legislative election year, will bring an unusually large number of votes in state politics.
 The next meeting of the Charlevoix County Fruit Growers' Ass'n will take place at Boyne City next Tuesday, June 28th. The directors of the Western Michigan Development Bureau will also meet on the same day and place and Secretary Gibson of the Bureau will address both meetings.
 The Boyne Citizen of last week is authorized for the statement that the Labor Party of that city intends launching a county labor ticket this fall to oppose the regular republicans. It is evident that the Boyne City "Labor" bunch have overlooked the fact that Boyne City don't spell Charlevoix County.
 By the formation of a large company known as the Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company, capitalized at eight million dollars, Charlevoix county loses two of its most prominent business men, W. H. Matthews and L. P. Knowles of Boyne City, who have been chosen as general manager and secretary respectively of the new corporation with headquarters in Detroit.
 State Game and Fish Warden Pierce is sending out 15,000 posters bearing quotations from the laws relative to the protection of forests from fire. The placards are mounted on cloth and are being sent to supervisors and deputy wardens for posting throughout the sections where there is danger of forest fires, calling the attention of all to the requirements of law in this regard.
 The railroads, fruit raising sections, and cities of the Western states are planning exhibits in connection with the coming land show in Chicago that call for an expenditure of more than $100,000. But they are not going to be able to "back Michigan off the board" because the Western Michigan soil and climate produce a quality of fruit that cannot be equaled by the Western states.
 East Jordan's church circle is receiving an addition in the building of the Norwegian-Lutheran church on the corner of Third and Nicholls sts.—just east of the Catholic church. It is to be a handsome frame structure and a credit to our community. Rev. Maackstaad of Suttons Bay is to be pastor. Among those instrumental in the building are Andrew Berg, Jacob and Nelson Anderson, and the Olsons, Larsons, Thorsons and other families hereabouts.
 Aron Parker and Earl Young of Charlevoix have just returned from one of the most delightful of canoe trips. They left Charlevoix in a birch bark canoe, went through Pine Lake to East Jordan, where a portage was made to the river which took them to the chain of intermediate lakes where they spent the entire week snapping the views, camping on the shores, and canoeing about through the lakes and channels. Mr. Parker speaks of the trip as one of the most perfect that it has ever been his good pleasure to enjoy. The trip took them by water, except for the portage near East Jordan from Charlevoix to Elk Rapids, which they reached through Grand Traverse Bay, thus forming almost a complete water route from Little Traverse Bay to Grand Traverse Bay.—Potoskey News.

 Harry Denstone and Miss Lily Sheehy were married on Wednesday evening at the residence of the brides parents; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Sheehy in the eastern part of town.
 Rev. W. W. Lamport officiated, and the attending couple were Norman Sheehy and Elma Sheehy, of Grand Rapids, cousins of the bride. About thirty guests witnessed the ceremony and partook of the delightful refreshments. Music, both vocal and piano, added greatly to the merriment of the evening. And the boys from "Mill A" and the shingle mill gave some impromptu selections with artillery accompaniment. Their first number was "The Tune the Old Cow Died On," and as one listened to the old classic as the boys gave it he could not but wonder that this whole barnyard had not collapsed. After "refreshments" and a glimpse of the bride they departed with "Over the Hills and Far Away." Mr. and Mrs. Denstone have the warmest of friends who wish them all joy. They will take up their new life in the Allison Pinney cottage on Fourth Street.

 Anyone having $2,150.00, which is not earning sufficient, can be shown where it will earn about 50 per cent per annum for two years by calling at once on W. A. Loveday without delay.
 A party of our citizens consisting of Dick Steffes, Jos. Cummins, M. F. Nackerian, Harry Curkendall, and the latter's brother-in-law Mr. Maas of Chicago, are up at Fred Lawway's camp on the Jordan—just fishin'.
 Mrs. Samuel Ramsey was a little surprised when on Thursday afternoon a few of her neighbors called. The weatherman had prepared a hot time, but the heat was a minor part. The sociability, and the delicious and cooling refreshments served, drove the thought of heat from their minds, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed. Before leaving a gift was presented as a token of esteem and memory of June twenty third.
 Notice is sent to the East Jordan Local Union of the Farmers' Society of Equity from Assistant Secretary M. R. Sleight of Indianapolis, that a county union of the Society will be established in this county in the near future, and will be located at either East Jordan, Charlevoix or Boyne City, the place offering best shipping facilities and interest. This is opportunity for the East Jordan and Miles locals to exert themselves and secure the county union for East Jordan. Everyone is looking forward to the development of our county, but in no way could a greater development come than by the farmers' securing fair prices for their produce, thereby leaving money in their hands to improve and develop their lands. H. B. Sherman, the national organizer is now in Michigan, and with state organizer W. H. Beaman, are now working Benzie county. Mr. Sherman says that Charlevoix county is on his list for work early in the season and they will work first through the potato growing counties. Farmers and merchants should think over this proposition—it would mean an increase of business, and the building of a large Equity hall where the county union is located.

 In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by James Gidley.

LUXURIES OF MODERN HOTELS

Multi-Millionaire Can Live Better Now Than Kings of Old Ever Did.

Modern New York hotels have reached the acme of luxury and are adapted to the long purses of the multi-millionaire, who requires as a matter of course, luxuries which the most powerful monarch in the world might long for in vain.

His bedroom timepiece is regulated for him by Washington observatory, and his business may be carried on in the seclusion of his own apartments over a private or long distance telephone.

The Bible in Practical Life.

One of the most practical features of the present uprising of students lies in the fact that the Bible is being transferred from the region of dogmatic and theological conceptions to the realm of real life.

Exercise for Double Chins.

If you do not go in for rubber bands, steaming, trained massage and various other devices for getting rid of a double chin, at least, try this simple exercise.

Put fingers of each hand on back of neck near base of brain, with thumbs under the chin and palms up. Having rubbed grease into flesh to prevent friction massage heavily both front and back.

This is done by moving thumbs with rotary movement over the rolls of flesh from tip of chin down, at same time working fingers on muscles at back of neck and under ears.

Persist in this exercise, varying it frequently with throwing head as far back as it will go while working across the rolls of the chin, and improvement should soon be noticed.

Rafting on the Delaware.

Two rafts of hemlock logs, belonging to "Deacon" Mitchell of Callicoon, N. Y., were started down the Delaware river from above Equinunk one recent Tuesday. One, a "three handed raft," passed the Lackawann dam the following Wednesday about four o'clock; the other, a larger raft, earlier in the afternoon.

There was a fair freshet in the Delaware, and the timber reached its destination, Belvidere, N. J., on Friday. So far as heard from, these are the only two rafts that descended the Delaware the present spring. This is a striking contrast compared with the number of rafts run on the Delaware 30 years ago, when during a regular freshet several hundred would pass a given point daily for perhaps a week.—Philadelphia Record.

Women Only Guess.

A woman who says she has made something of a study of the subject, declares that there is much foolishness about the intuition of women. She says that they simply guess, just as men do, but that when the guess comes right they praise themselves, while the many times in which the guess fails they forget and maintain discreet silence about it.

Life Like Mercury.

A German physiologist has shown remarkable amoeba-like movements in a drop of mercury.

A bicromate of potash crystal and the drop of mercury are laid a fraction of an inch apart on the level bottom of a glass dish containing dilute nitric acid, and as the yellow ring from the dissolving crystal reaches the mercury, the latter jumps back, then moves to the crystal and sends forth and draws back long tentacles, with lively twitchings curiously like those of a living animal.

Giving Rebuke

Tact Needed in Order to Secure Good Results

By JOHN A. HOWLAND

NOCK before you come in here, please," said the general manager, sitting in the privacy of his inner office. "And now you may take the matter back and wait until I send for you, if you'll be so good."

The general manager had been talking to me for some time. The door had opened suddenly and the young man acting as private secretary stepped in, had crossed the room, laid a batch of papers on his employer's desk, and was tiptoeing out again, when he had been called back.

There was something cutting in the well modulated tone of voice which the employer used. The sting of it had been emphasized, in fact, by the intonation. Breeding would not allow me to look at the young man, but the figure which shaped itself in the corner of my eye as the young man tiptoed back for the papers showed me how keenly the speech had stung him.

Was that speech justified?

Distinctly not! Moreover, it was an expression indicative of a bad business policy in the man who had risen to the position of a general manager. For me, I only saw the man's limitations as an organizer. I should have been a little less certain of my investment had I owned stock in his company.

No matter how that young man might have offended before in this manner the reprimand was out of all proportion to the offense, taking it for granted that the young fellow was at all worthy of the position he held. And if he were unworthy of it, why did he hold it?

Coming in no one could have been more considerate in tiptoeing across the room than was this messenger. To me, looking back upon this phase of the incident, I am sure that the young man's actions showed that he felt he had intruded and was making every effort to lessen its effect. There was apology in every movement across the floor. Literally it was not an interruption until the manager, through his rebuke, made it so.

Instead of this manager's embarrassing me and outraging his employee as he did, how much more effective it might have been for the employer, a moment after I had gone, if he had called his man in and asked that such interruptions cease? If never before he had been forced to rebuke the man he could have made the request in the most considerate manner; if it had occurred before, he could have laid whatever emphasis might have been deserved upon the offense. The young man would have recognized any deserved form and degree of reprimand. His loyalty would have been strengthened by the fact that his employer, by waiting, had saved him undue embarrassment. Still more, he could have had a chance to explain and offer apology.

Dangers Beset "Good Fellow" Girl

By TERESA MOORE

In every young girl's life there comes the time when she must decide which she will be "mother's girl" or a "good fellow," one of the boys. If you decide to be mother's girl you'll have a quiet sort of time, staying home mostly while the other girls go to parties, theaters and such places. And by and by a man will come along, one who wants to settle down, and you'll get married. Men usually prefer to marry mother's girls.

Now, if you want to be a "good fellow" you'll have all the attention you want and you needn't run after the boys or call them up. They'll do all that when they know that you're a game kid and in for all the fun that is to be had out of life.

But there are dangers which beset the "good fellow's" path and the temptations are many. So some of the "good fellow's" become the kind of woman whom mother's girl doesn't meet, a lot of them are our cheery, self-supporting bachelor girls, a few of them are happily married.

More Chances Now Than Ever Before

By S. G. DERICKSON

The rush of settlers to occupy that country is on in unprecedented volume and new towns are springing up everywhere, making good openings for professional and business men and mechanics.

The same things may be said of Wyoming and Idaho.

Instead of the opportunities being lessened there was never a time when they were so numerous and so good.

How to Be a Certain Failure

By P. L. WOODCOCK

Sixth—Never look among your clouds for silver linings. Seventh—Follow these directions closely and failure will track your steps like a bloodhound; in adversity you will be as worthless as an old rotten sheet for a sail in a gale of wind; when fire comes, as come it must, you will find all the metal you ever had in you is turned to dross; and in the fire, you know, dross never purifies nor refines—it only burns.

HOME-MADE STALLS AFFORD COMFORT AND CLEANLINESS

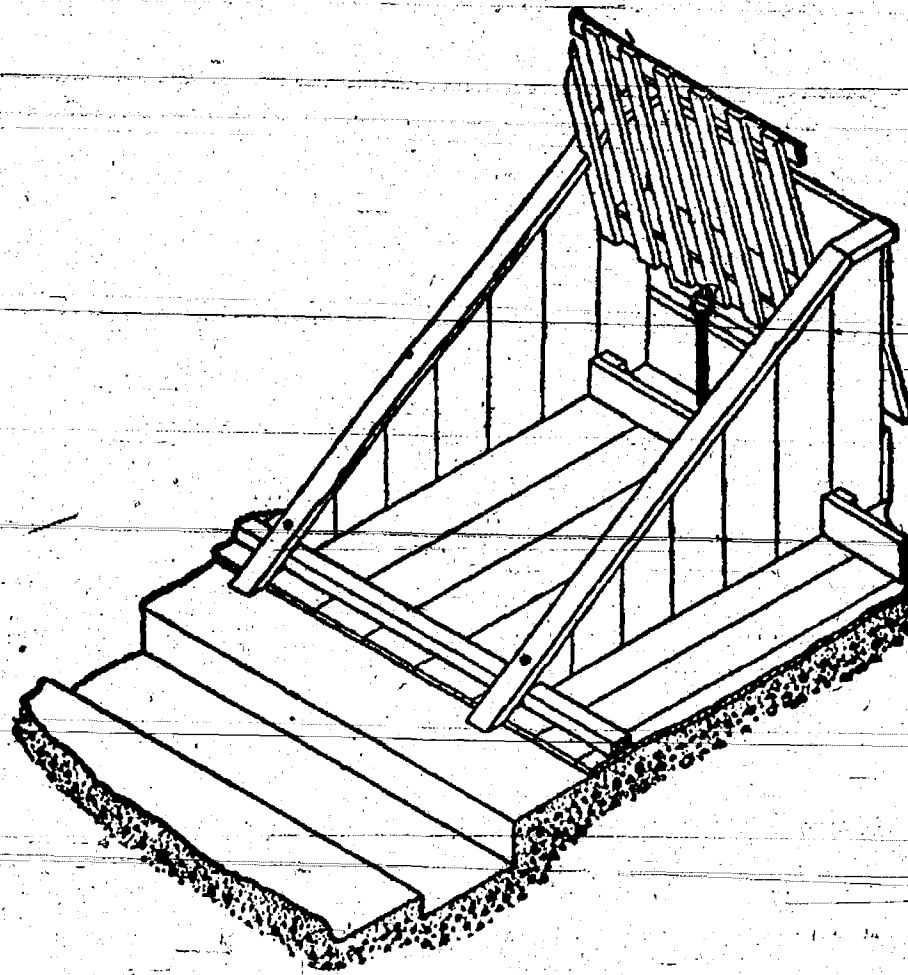

Absolute Necessity in Any Dairy Barn and Can Be Made By Any Farmer Possessing Required Mechanical Skill.

Cow comfort and cleanliness considered, some form of a cow stall is almost an absolute necessity in a dairy barn. Rigid stanchions are not comfortable. Too often they do not induce cleanliness.

Prof. C. A. Ocock of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, is the author of a recent bulletin on sanitary cow stall.

The stall herewith illustrated, it is thought, will answer the fire requirements established as standard by one prominent dairy authority: First, cleanliness; second, comfort; third, bar. The hay rack is so arranged that it allows more room at the bottom of the stall than at the top. This forces the cow to stand back from the hay rack when eating and, of course, places her nearer to the gutter. The crossbar which has already been referred to can be moved forward or backward to accommodate large or small cows. The chain or rope with which each cow is tied is so arranged that when she lies down she is drawn forward which further aids in keeping her body in front of the crossbar. The floor in front is hinged at the top and opens upward and forward for the pur-convenience in feeding, milking and cleaning; fourth, economy of construction; fifth, secure enclosing.

The Model Stall.

This stall is built as indicated in the drawing to force the cow to stand with her hind feet between the crossbar and gutter; in this way keeping the stall proper perfectly clean. When lying down the cow necessarily steps forward and lies in front of the cross-pose of admitting grain and water. As will be noted the partitions are so arranged as to make it almost impossible for one cow to step upon the under of another lying in the adjoining stall. This is a feature of merit which will be recognized by any one who has ever had charge of milk cows. Ten of the model stalls, it has been estimated, would cost $30.33.

SENSIBLE IOWA HOG HOUSE

Thinking it may be of interest and encouragement to your readers who are raising pigs farrowed in midwinter, I herewith send sketch and description of hog house planned by Mr. James P. Condon of Oak Park farm, in this vicinity, writes Thomas O. Boyle of Webster county, Iowa, in Homestead. He has at the present writing 50 little pigs born in February, during the coldest period. They are thriving and in fine condition, and Mr. Condon gives the credit to the place he has for housing them. They show promise of meeting a $10 market. Last summer, after an investigation as to materials and proportions of hog houses in general, he came to the conclusion that hollow cement blocks was the material he desired, and that most of them were too wide for sufficient sunlight and ventilation, so he had one built according to his own ideas. He used a hollow cement block with a water and frost-proof facing. Having a fine sand pit on his farm he contracted with a cement concern to do the work. They made the blocks on the ground on an up-to-date block machine. The building is 64 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet high on the front and 7 feet high in back. He put on a three-ply rubberoid roof, which is warmer than shingles, and guaranteed for 15 years with a coat of paint every three to five years. He had a cement feed lot put in, running the entire length of the building, and believes it is a great factor in having healthy hogs and more sanitary than any other kind. It also makes a fine approach. He has a tight board fence in front of the feed platform, thus having a good windbreak and on sunny days their hogships enjoy a sunning thereon. The fall and winter was a good time for the test of the wall, and it proved both water and frost proof. Part of the time Mr. Condon uses sand for bedding, but through the coldest weather it was necessary to put in straw for the brood sows and their litters.

MOTOR CAR IN COUNTRY

Increased Use of Automobile By Farmers Shows That It Is Real Convenience in Farming Districts.

(By H. E. HARPER.) Automobile manufacturers generally are recognizing the possibilities of expanding their business by adapting their product to the needs of the farmer.

Prosperous as never before, with a larger crop than in any previous years, the farmer has money to spend and the farmer with money wants to and does live every whit as well as his city brothers and generally better.

The thing to consider is what type of car will best meet the requirements of the farmer buyer. First is the question of roads. The country roads are not all gravel roads or macadamized turnpikes.

The successful country car must be one which will travel over inferior roads—roads that sometimes are heavy with mud, roads that are often covered 12 inches or more with new fallen untrodden snow.

Here the first essential is light weight. A good light weight car should be selected. A car weighing 2,000 to 3,000 pounds is not a practical car for all around country service. A car weighing 1,200 pounds is much better suited to the average road conditions.

Then, too, this light car can easily travel off the regular roads, over the fields to any part of the farm.

A light car is easier on tires, reduces gasoline and oil bills and calls for less replacement expense.

The next point of importance lies in simplicity of design, accessibility of all parts and perfect standardization of various parts. While the average farmer is a much better mechanic than is the city man, due to long use of agricultural implements, he has no garage to call on for repair work and must do it all. The less complicated the mechanism, the better suited to the farmer's need.

Any trip—business or pleasure—can be made in decidedly less time with a car than with horses. In planting, plowing or harvest times this saving is valuable. A quick trip to the city for repairs for a mower or a reaper and back again in a hurry is very important when the grain is ripe or the grass is ready.

Worn-Out Land.

The only cheap way to put worn-out land into shape is to seed it down to clover, cut one crop and leave the second growth to be plowed under. Then the land will be in shape to respond to fertilizers. I have found that I could get more income from a piece of land by seeding down half of it to clover and putting all the manure and fertilizer on the remaining half, than by trying to keep the whole piece in cultivation, says a writer in Baltimore American. After a year or two in clover and grass, the other half would be plowed up. On a fresh sod a good dressing of chemical fertilizers will pay well.

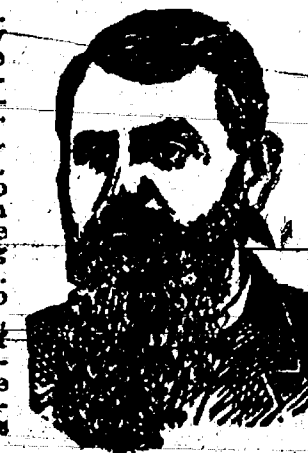

Value of a Sow.

The sow that brings two litters a year and nourishes them well until six weeks old is worth two or three times pork prices, however high pork may be. Never fatten your reliable sows until they fail to be reliable.

A MINISTER'S CONSTIPATION

Rev. Kemp Tells of His Digestive Troubles and How He Overcame Them—You Can Do So Free.

The lack of exercise in a minister's life makes him very prone to constipation—but for that matter, most everybody is constipated now and then. It is the nation's disaster.

Many a man and woman know that a sure way to cure constipation and other stomach, liver and bowel troubles is with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which a church people have been buying for twenty years. Rev. W. B. Caldwell, Secretary of the Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says in part:

"For years I have been a victim of constipation but I have never found anything to equal Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I also had indigestion and heart trouble. I can certainly recommend it. It can be bought of any druggist at 50 cents or $1 a bottle. If there is anything about your case that you don't understand, write to the doctor. If you have never used this remedy and would like to try it, send your address and a free sample bottle will be forwarded to your home. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill."

Very Fishy.

She was a fisherman's daughter, she wore her hair in a net, and she preferred lox in a piscatorial way.

"My love," he whispered, "you hold first place in my heart! Although I 'founder' about in expressing myself, my 'sole' wish is that you will save me from becoming a 'crabbed' old bachelor. I shall stick to you closer than a 'limpet,' from you a 'wink'll' be the road to guide me. Together we will 'skate' over life's 'rocks,' and when I look at your hand beside me I shall say to myself: 'Fortune was mine when I put 'hering' there!'"

And then the lady dropped her eyes in sweet confusion, and murmured: "Pass the salt."

UNSIGHTLY COMPLEXIONS

The constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for toilet, bath and nursery purposes not only preserves, purifies, and beautifies the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but prevents inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the complexion and skin. All who delight in a clear skin, soft, white hands, a clean, wholesome scalp and live, glossy hair, will find Cuticura Soap most successful in realizing every expectation.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are admirably adapted to preserve the health of the skin and scalp of infants and children, and to prevent minor blemishes or inherited skin humors becoming chronic, and may be used from the hour of birth. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the civilized world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, for their free Cuticura book, 32 pages of invaluable advice on care and treatment of the skin, scalp and hair.

Willing to Pay for Rammer.

When the British square at the battle of Abu Klea, in the Nubian desert, was penetrated by the dervishes, one of them attempted to spear a gunner who was in the act of ramming home a charge. The Briton braided the Sudanese, but the rammer head split on the man's hard skull. Next day the gunner "was sent for." Mistaking the reason, and knowing from experience that soldiers are charged for government property which they break, he led off with: "Please, sir, I'm very sorry I broke the rammer, but I never thought the fellow's head could be so hard. I'll pay for the rammer so as to hear no more of the case."

Old Men in Responsibility.

The American business system, which gives mere boys responsible positions before they have acquired practical experience, is to an Englishman quite unaccountable. He wonders whether it does not cause reckless trading and wild speculation. In other countries they prefer to keep elderly men in responsible positions because they can be depended upon. Messrs. Dyke & Sons, Somerset, England, employ 66 men. More than half have completed 30 years' service, 20 have been there 40 years, nine over 50 years and one 70 years.

asked Julia Cedersten what she would suggest, but she only answered, "Silence is golden." But whatever you do, please do not spend your time like Irvin Hilliard, for without a constitution of steel, such overstudious habits would drive one into the last stages of nervous prostration.

Item: All of Carroll Hoyt's unasked questions, and Olive Hunsberger's unargued points we bequeath to you. But, if you find your supply limited, by special permission you may obtain some of the old ones.

Item: Edna leaves you a big stock of smiles. You need not object to the large stock for smiles are one thing that do not go out of style.

You may distribute these things evenly among yourselves, since you know by whom each of these will be put to the best use.

We are proud to name among our number the stars of both the girls' and boys' athletics.

With the money left in our treasury, after all bills and funeral expenses are paid, we wish a new book of lectures to be bought for Mr. Northon, which he will deliver free of charge to the High School. If there should happen to be any money left after that buy Gladys Hudkins a stick of candy.

Last but not least we leave a full store of friendship behind us for teachers and all of our fellow students. And one good thing about bequeathing friendship, we can give away any amount of it and not diminish our own stock in the least.

It may be that we have left several bad impressions with the teachers; by some disputed question or childish pranks, not to be expected of dignified Seniors; but we hope that, "the good that we have done may live after us and that the evil be interred with our bones," and that the faculty will recall that some of us are dying young.

We do hereby constitute and appoint Mr. J. T. Northon the sole executor of this, our last will and testament.

In witness whereof, we, the class of nineteen hundred ten, the testators have to this, our last will, set our hand and seal on this fourteenth day of June, anno domini, one thousand nine hundred and ten.

The Valedictory

Arloene Jones.

Dear friends: You all know what this occasion means to us. It is, in truth, commencement, the beginning of a new life, but we believe that we are prepared to cope with whatever the future has in store for us. At least we have done our best; we have tried to make the most of our opportunities. These last years of school have not been easy ones, but through the long months of our struggle we have put forth every effort that we might not be unprepared for the work which lay before us; we have taken every precaution that there shall be no blot of failure on the white pages of our record. In this time of preparation we have been given every assistance by our teachers, parents and the patrons of our school. And we are deeply grateful for this aid; we mean to show it not by words only, but by deeds—we mean to make our lives such that when in the future our benefactors shall see us nobly filling our places in this great world, their thoughts will journey backward to this memorable evening as they say proudly: "Ah, that was a glorious class, that class of 1910!"

But tonight we are gliding swiftly out on the boundless ocean of life. It stretches out into the dim distance enveloped in a golden haze. Tonight there are no clouds on our horizon, no whitecapped breakers dash against the shore, but only the gentle japping of the waves is heard, as they curl about the prow of our vessel.

Of course we do not expect fair weather all the time. The surges will seem very wild indeed; storms will gather overhead, and gloomy darkness envelop us. But do we fear? Ah, no! The sun will shine again, the sea grow calm and we shall sail on undaunted, for ours is "Staunch and strong, a goodly vessel, That shall laugh at all disaster, And with wave and whirlwind wrestle."

Long have our characters lain in the shipyard. Since our earliest memory their architects have been at work endeavoring to select only the sound and strong, for there was to be no flaw in the vessels, "Nor faithless joints, nor yawning seams." Day by day they grew, with beams fastened securely and ribs firm in their places. Slowly the shadowy framework developed into well-defined outlines and these in turn into the likenesses of vessels, proof against wind and wave.

Meanwhile the masts of perseverance were raised aloft, the sails of purpose were unfurled to the breeze and the rudders of education were installed.

That, like a thought, should have control

Over the movement of the whole."

And now all is finished. Tonight we launch with flying colors we set sail upon the unknown deep. Each one is master of his own ships, and it is for each one to keep the course marked out, straight toward the sunny coast of success upon which loom the snow-capped mountains of his ideal. Each one knows the dangers that beset his path, and woe to him who, lured by the Sirens of Temptation, turns from his course to strike upon the shoals of failure and be swept into the black whirlpool of despair.

Classmates, tonight we separate, tonight we bid each other a long farewell. These days spent together at school have been pleasant, if busy ones, and in the rush of future years their memory will linger with us as one of the brightest spots in our lives. But even the brightest spots must fade, and tonight this daily intercourse must end.

'Like as a plank of driftwood, cast off the watery main, Another plank encounters, meets, touches, parts again, So it is with friends ever on life's unresting sea— We meet and greet, and sever, drifting eternally.'

Our courses deviate, perhaps they lead to the opposite ends of the world, but we must still sail on.

"Ah, if our souls but pulse and swing Like the compass in its brazen ring, We shall sail securely and safely reach The Fortunate Isles on whose shining beach The sights we see and the sounds we hear Will be those of joy and not of fear."

Then let the winds blow, we do not fear. When storms rage about us we shall learn to reef our topsails and plow our way through the wild billows until we emerge once more into a quiet sea.

Class History—Part I.

Ethel Crowell.

Of all the years in the twentieth century probably 1910 will stand out most prominently for two reasons: first, for the passage of the earth through the tail of Halley's Comet, and second, for the graduation of this class. And in order to prove to you the reason for the last named bold assertion, I shall endeavor to give a few of the most important events, which have transpired in the life of this class during the last twelve years.

It was in the fall of 1898 that we began our school career, in that ancient building on State Street, which answers both for a jail, and city hall. In our kindergarten year we learned to make paper chains, sew cards, and sing our first song, "Good Morning, Merry Sunshine," under the guidance of Miss Severance, whose patience was often severely tried; but only when driven almost to desperation, did she place us in a dark, uncanny closet; and it is needless to say that after we were liberated, we were model pupils for the remainder of the day. Our recesses were spent on teeter-totters, and nearly lumber piles, where we daily celebrated the "glorious Fourth," and delivered impassioned oration, such as would put a Daniel Webster in the shade.

The next year, the addition to the Central school building was completed, and we were transferred there and became first graders.

That year we learned to read, write and give the multiplication table.

One day, when we were in the second grade, a little girl with long black curls came to put some color into our rather humdrum existence, and ever since then, Agnes has been on hand with a fund of Irish wit.

In the third grade, two more joined us Anthony, our stalwart athlete, and Olive, the meekest girl in school.

We had just settled down to work in the fourth grade, when Julia entered. That same year we presented the room with a picture of Sir Galahad; that it might serve as a model and inspiration for the youths in the future.

Our class seemed dramatically inclined, for in the fifth grade we so ably presented the play, Hlawaatha, that everyone prophesied a brilliant future for us in the theatrical field.

In the sixth and seventh grades we observed Arbor Day by cleaning the school yard, an unheard of procedure before; which this circumstance alone should make us famous.

In the eighth grade double honors were heaped upon us, first, Flora and Carroll becoming suddenly ambitious joined us; and second, the School Board invited us to sit behind the Senior class at their graduation exercises, which honor was greatly appreciated by us.

That same year, many of the class feeling that they knew all that books could teach, left school, and already three from that number have been sacrificed upon the altar of matrimony.

The following fall, we began our High School course with the addition of Harriet, Mary, Arlene, Hazel Goodman, Hazel Cummins, Florence and Irwin.

Mary has suddenly become ambitious, for her motto is "Advance."

Harriet is noted for her unfailing kindness to children, for all this year, she has championed the cause of a certain youngster in the Freshman Class.

Hazel Goodman, Arlene and Florence have always upheld the dignity of the class, and consequently graduate with flying colors.

Hazel Cummins has become interested in the antique, and spends most of her time studying the Julian Calendar.

Irwin's gallantry is a household word from here to Central Lake; and his experiments in Physics have already astounded the Scientific world.

The tenth grade will be remembered for the entrance of Edna, and the 340 sessions of Algebra in the Laboratory.

In our Junior year we again displayed our dramatic ability in the play, Rip Van Winkle, in which Reta and Carroll starred; and in the debate at Harbor Springs, in which Flora won such honors.

When we enrolled, this year, there were sixteen; but Mabel realizing the magic in the number, seventeen, joined us.

The events this year have been many, and varied. We have given senior suppers in which we were ably assisted by the public. Many a night we have stayed at class meetings, until 8 o'clock, debating upon some very weighty subject.

On St. Patrick's Day, our hearts were gladdened by an invitation from the teachers to celebrate that worthy Saint's birthday with them.

For a few days last month, our lessor's were not up to par, which was probably due to the late hours kept in watching for the comet; and on the eighteenth, fully believing in the prophesy that all should end on that day, our lessons in Physics were sadly neglected; a circumstance which brought just reproach upon our heads for such folly.

Thus, I have told you only a few of the best remembered events, for if I should attempt to tell them all, they would fill a large size volume. We have struggled long and faithfully; each year, we have overcome some new obstacle until we stand to-night as Seniors; and it will be for you to judge, in the future, if we have profited by the lessons learned in our school days. "We are what the past has made us, the future lies within ourselves."

Class Poem.

Hazel Goodman.

We're seventeen, we're seventeen,
A goodly number it would seem.
Last fall, when our high school began,
We entered with a rush and jam
Back seats were then our greatest aim,
They're privileges of Senior fame,
And looking down the well-dild d aisles
We saw new teachers, all in smiles.

And if at first we were quite shy,
We gained more courage by and by.
For soon, our teachers kinder grew,
We liked them better than they know.
Our flower is the creamy rose,
With it, we vanquished all our foes.
Our colors, lavender and white,
Are symbols of our strength and might.

First Nat, the oldest of us all,
In time of need on him we call.
For he's a wise and learned man,
This is the truth and not a sham.
Ariocne, our bright and shining star,
A beacon light, which lung afar,
To reach, we all have tried in vain,
For she remains ahead the same.

Then Edna, with a laugh so clear
That gently falls upon the ear,
Her manner gentle and so kind,
[And Carroll, the in stature small]
Yet large and spacious is his mind,
[In it, we know there's room for all.]
And Hazel, as a general rule
Is seen with Julius after school.

Now comes in line our learned Flo,
Of course this she, as we well know
Is said to be our second best.
And this, she's proved in many a test.
Then Julia, oft in printer's ink
Begins her life's pursuit, we think,
But we are wrong, this is not all,
She only waits her dear Har's call.

The Olive is so short and small
"Tis she who wins at basket ball,
In school her work is always good
The she has not the highest stood.
But Irvin who prefers to play
In the laboratory day by day,
Has only yet one joy more dear
To walk with Gladys all the year.

Of Florence, but little need be said
For well we know she is not dead,
As often still we rumors hear
She speaks her mind without much fear.
And Reta like all of the rest
Has always tried to do her best,
The lessons have been hard and long
That she should miss them would be wrong.

Then Mary has a little bird
With voice the sweetest ever heard,
With milkwhite face and hair like snow,
Where Mary is, he's sure to go.
And Ethel learned and so tall,
In knowledge, first surpassed us all.
But now her light more dim has grown,
A brighter star ahead has shown.

And then our Mabel, wise and fair
Who came from Furwell—it was there
Our Superintendent Northon taught,
When by our school board he was sought,
And as our school room was so small
We had not seats enough for all,
So Mabel in the office sat,
A Senior privilege was that.

The girl who has the curly hair
Is Harrie, who sits over there,
For freshmen all her thoughts are kind,
As to their size, she does not mind.
Now Agnes, with her winking smile,
Which she received from Ireland's Isle,
And which in school has won such fame,
Has cheered us thro' sunshine and rain.

Tonight we launch, where shall we anchor?
Should Fate be kind, we'd surely thank her,
And here's to you, and here's to you,
O! E. J. S. so tried and true
The years may come, the years may flee,
For you our hearts will ever be,
So here's to you, so here's to you
O! E. J. S. so tried and true.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.
