Local Option

County Organization formed at Charlevoix recently.

The Charlevoix County Local Option Committee was organized at Charlevoix last week. Below is a brief outline of the articles of organization.

OBJECT. The object of this committee is to further and protect the cause of local option in Charlevoix county and incidentally render such assistance to other counties, or communities, when called for, as our experience may warrant and suggest.

COMMITTEE. The county local option committee shall be composed of six representatives from East Jordan, six from Boyne City, six from Charlevoix and two from Boyne Falls, during the first year of its existence, to be appointed by the local option committee or organization of the respective places; in addition thereto each Township in the County shall be entitled to one representative on the committee to be named by the Local Option Committee or organization of such Township.

After the first year of its organization, the Cities, Villages and Townships in the County shall be entitled to representation thereon in proportion to its population upon the basis of one representative for each 500 inhabitants, or fraction thereof, to be appointed by the local option organization, as above provided.

OFFICERS. It shall be the duty of the County Committee immediately upon its first organization and thereafter at each annual meeting, to choose the following officers to serve for one year from the date of such annual meeting and until their successors have been chosen, viz: Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer.

At the annual meeting, there shall be appointed the following standing committees, viz: Executive committee, Committee on Law Enforcement.

LAW ENFORCEMENT. The Committee on Law Enforcement shall consist of ten members. It shall be the duty of this committee to investigate all alleged violations of the local option law within the county and report the same to the proper officers of the county charged with the enforcement of the law and render such assistance in the collection of evidence and the prosecution of cases of violations as they may be able and as such officers shall request.

They shall also report to the executive committee any case where such officers have refused to prosecute offenders against local option law, when so requested to do by said committee, and such complaint to the executive committee shall be made by the chairman of the Law Enforcement Committee after the same shall have been fully investigated and such action authorized by his committee.

MEETINGS. The annual meeting of this committee shall be held on the first Monday in July of each year. Regular meetings shall be held on the first Monday of October, February, May and July in each year.

FINANCES. The expenses of the County Committee shall be met by dues from the respective local organizations represented thereon, which for the first year of its existence shall be as follows: Boyne City, $15.00; East Jordan, $15.00; Charlevoix, $15.00; Boyne Falls, $5.00; which sums shall be understood as including the dues for the respective Townships in which the several above places are situated. The dues from each Township shall be not less than $3.00 for the first year.

Price of Lands Going Up.

According to statistics compiled by the land commission the values of land sold by the department in the last seven years steadily has increased. During the last six months 80,380.44 acres were sold for $106,523.23, as against 235,133.74 acres which in 1907 sold for $216,018.81.

Deputy Land Commissioner Carlton says this remarkable increase is due in a large measure to the higher prices which are now received for northern lands. Lands which now bring in the department $5 or $10 per acre were considered valueless a few years ago, and in many cases were sold by the state for 50 cents per acre.

W. R. C. Resolutions.

East Jordan, July 18, 1910. Resolutions on the death of our sister member, Mary E. Lanway, who died June 30, 1910.

Mary E. Lanway joined Stevens Corps in the early days and was a charter member of our order. She was always a faithful worker, and never so happy as when assisting those in need. After months of patient suffering an all-wise Providence has taken her from us to a well earned rest, and while we shall miss her from our ranks, we are assured that our loss is her gain, therefore be it

Resolved that we extend to her afflicted family our sincere love and sympathy.

Resolved that as a further token of respect that the charter of the Corps be draped for thirty days.

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and a copy be spread upon the records of the Corps.

It is reported that officers of the Michigan State Brewers' association have announced that that association will not take an active part in the Michigan local option elections next spring. The brewery association officers are quoted as saying that the anti-saloon agitation has abated in Michigan and that the local saloon forces are now strong enough to fight their own battles. It may be that the gain of ten counties for local option in Michigan last spring is an evidence of decreasing opposition to the saloon. A gain of ten more next spring will be very acceptable to the opponents of the saloon regardless of the significance the brewers may attach to such a result. The statement, however, that the brewers' association will take no part in next year's local option campaign contains just about as much truth as the further statement from that source, that local option sentiment has abated or is abating in Michigan. The so-called "business men's" organizations may be missing from the saloon line of battle in Michigan hereafter, but the brewers will be there.

'Foley Kidney Pills Have cured Me.'

The above is a quotation from a letter written by A. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks float before my eyes. I took Foley Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me." Hite's Drug Store.

Mackinac Island.

WARREN W. LAMPSON

There's a beautiful island that lies in the west,
Where the waters of two seas meet;
Where summer has ever the pleasure of June
And life is delightfully sweet.

When the meadows are brown and the brooks have run dry
And the streets of the city are hot,
I bid me away from the dust and the care
And hide in this emerald spot.

For Hygieia here mixes of air and sunshine
And slumber a compound so rare
The ill of my flesh and the fret of my brain
Are gone ere I scarce am aware.

And I bend to the oar as I drive the light skiff
Swiftly over the silvery waves,
Or follow the pathways that lead to the glens,
To the rocks and the firs and the caves.

Or I lie on the cliffs and watch the great ships
As slowly they pass to and fro
And list to the wash of the waves as they break
On the white, pebbled strand far below.

While over my spirit a drowsiness falls,
A dreamy and mystical maze,
Thro which I see vaguely dim, shadowy forms,
The ghosts of the long-ago days.

For the fairies are dancing again on the lea,
And the gods hover 'round as of yore;
And the Indian's wigwam I see in the glade
And his birch-bark canoe on the shore.

From her rock in the west the lone maiden I hear,
As she calls to her lover afar
Then leaps from the dizzy height into the depths
As falls from the heavens a star.

And the trapper and hunter are here as of old,
And the trader comes back with his ware;
While the devil leaps out of his kitchen and bounds
Up the rocks in a terrible scare.

And Yankee and Briton in battle array
Contend for the mastery once more,
Till my vision is lost in a great cloud of smoke
And I wake at the cannon's loud roar.

Oh, the blissful delight of an hour on the cliffs!
Just to watch the ships sail to and fro.

Just to list to the wash of the waves on the beach
And dream of the long, long ago.

So, come when the meadows and lanes are all brown,
And the streets of the city are hot,
Come, bid thee away from the dust and the care
And hide in this beautiful spot.

For, of all the fair isles in the clear-flowing streams
And lakes of this wonderful west,
Old Mackinac Isle, with its legends and haunts,
Is ever the fairest and best.

A drummer was taken ill suddenly. He went to see a physician of considerable standing, and the following conversation ensued: "I feel very sick," declared the drummer. "What's the trouble?" asked the physician. "Severe pain in my side," "Humph," said the doctor slowly, "I think you have appendicitis." "You have made a mistake, doctor," replied the salesman. "I'm not a millionaire, just a plain drummer." "Well, I guess you just have the cramps, then," replied the indignant paragon. "Five dollars, please."

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food That Cured Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," says a woman in Salisbury, Mo. "At that time there was none kept in this town, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago traveler.
"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea, and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use the new food the cramps disappeared and have never returned.
"My old attacks of sick stomach were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble has disappeared entirely. I am today perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.
"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He tells me by the case to many of the leading physicians of the county, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food."

JULY FOURTH

by HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN

THOMAS JEFFERSON

When the clock struck four, I was on the floor, The bells began to ring and the cannon to roar, The guns to fire and the crackers to snap— This is the Fourth of July.

PONCE upon a time—if you are exacting as to dates, the time fell between 1835 and 1860—there was a country parson who kept a record of his Fourths. In the year 1855 he broke into poetry and the quoted quatrain was the result. This record of his Fourths, taken from his journal, was published in the Atlantic Monthly.

Now if various and sundry reasons, all excellent in their way, did not keep this esteemed magazine closed to the eyes of boyhood, it is to be feared that this parson, despite his poetry, would be voted a cross-old man. For when the Fourth fell on Sunday he saw no reason why it should be celebrated on any other day or in any fashion not in keeping with a seemly observance of the Sabbath. Instead of gladly accepting the bounty of the calendar and having a trilogy, a series of three dramatic and exciting days fraught with danger and delight, this gloomy personage would have limited the day's events to a sermon and a prayer.

In his records can be found testimony against him, for they read:

"July 4, 1847. Sunday.
"July 5, Monday morning. This is celebrated as the Fourth of July very improperly. Yesterday was the day and ministers might have preached upon the subject of religious freedom; this would have been sufficient and ought to have been satisfactory. But no; there must be noise, the drum must beat and the cannon roar, the children be dressed in their best and paraded, and 'Don't these children look nice?'"

"Oh, yes, very nice, but if their parents would teach them to respect their superiors and behave with propriety it would be far better. Well, there has been a general turnout, rich and poor, young and old, all mixed up together. This is a free country—but not so, it is a country of slave holders. We hold 3,999,999 of our fellow mortals as slaves—and how inconsistent!"

"July 5, Monday.
"The community were not satisfied to have yesterday as being the Fourth of July because they could not serve Satan so openly and boldly as today. My opinion is that when the Fourth of July comes on the Sabbath it ought to be remembered in a suitable and proper manner by assembling in the sanctuary and hearing the proclamation of peace announced from the pulpit, good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. Suitable prayers and suitable readings would be a suitable acknowledgment that our blessings are of God, but because this won't do we must have a great noise and bustle and much that is derogatory to the Christian character must be put in operation."
He didn't like the methods of celebration any better when the glorious day fell in the middle of the week for July 4, 1849, he wrote:

"Wednesday. At the rising of the sun the bells of the city are ringing and the cannon roaring, calling upon those within hearing to awake, arise and call upon their God, and give him thanks for this great blessing, our national independence, which we this day commemorate by making all the noise we can and by acting as well as we can and as bad as we can."
All of which would justify any boy in the belief that though the parson may have been a God-fearing personage who walked the narrow path all his godly days and was never even tempted by a lingering desire for pleasant primrose byways, he must certainly have been rather an unpleasant person to live with and that the milk of human kindness which was his portion, though it may not have soured, was as certainly lacking in cream.

How different was the letter which John Adams in the first flush of joy over the adoption by congress of the Declaration of Independence, wrote to his wife. Its date, July 3, may give some ardent young Americans excuse for firing their crackers before the dawn of the day which even lawmakers say may have its claim shattered into fiery noise.

This first historic Adams, first vice-president, second president of the republic which he helped to bring into being, was a good husband. Busy as he must have been, for he was a foremost figure in the stirring events, "the Atlas of Independence," the "Colossus of that debate" which preceded the vote on the nation-making resolution, he wrote on July 3 two letters to his wife, Abigail. In one he said: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that these united colonies are and of right ought to be, free and independent states." In the other: "The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore. You will think me transported with enthusiasm; but I am not. I am well aware of the toll and blood and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this declaration and support and defend these states. Yet through all the gloom I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means; and that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even though we should rue it, which I trust in God we shall not."
Though posterity selected, instead of July 2, July 4, the day on which the formal Declaration of Independence prepared by a committee of five, headed by Thomas Jefferson, was discussed and accepted, the resolution for Independence was, as these letters show, really adopted July 2.

It took a long time for the petitioners of the colonies to conceive of independence. Leaders like Samuel Adams waxed impatient with those who believed a peaceful settlement of the trouble was possible without separation from the mother country. Yet Washington in the first congress denied that the colonies desired or that it was to their interest to set up for independence. Franklin looked upon it as an event which, if it must come, was lamentable.

Lexington and Concord and Bunker hill favored the radicals. June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of the Virginia delegation, following the instructions which he had received from the council of Virginia, presented a resolution: "That these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; that all political connection between them and Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved." John Adams seconded the motion and a debate followed. There are no authentic reports of these debates. The war had not yet been won. Public report of what was said would have been of extreme danger to these men, who, indeed, would have been hanged had good King George been able to get them, but hanging men is like making rabbit pie—you must first catch the rabbit.

It is likely that those who led the debate in support of the measure were John and Samuel Adams, Roger Sherman, Oliver Wolcott, Richard Henry Lee and George Wythe. Those opposing were probably John Dickinson, John Jay, James Wilson and Robert R. Wilson. It appeared that four New England colonies, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, and three southern colonies, Virginia, Georgia and North Carolina, were prepared to vote at once in the affirmative, but as unanimity was desired a final vote was postponed until July 1, and a committee composed of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston, was appointed to prepare a formal statement for the world.

Lee, the mover of the resolution, would perhaps have been named chairman of the committee had not his wife fallen ill. As it was, Jefferson received the honor and save for a few alterations by Franklin and Adams the Declaration of Independence was written by him. The original draft in the state department in Washington, save for these interlineations by Franklin and Adams, is in his handwriting.

July 1 debate was resumed on the Lee resolution. July 2 all the delegates but those from New York voted in favor of it and it was of this action that John Adams wrote to his wife. The original resolution having been carried, the formal declaration prepared by the committee to show a due respect for the opinions of mankind was reported and discussed until late July 4, when it was finally accepted and signed by the president of the congress, John Hancock, and the secretary. Within a week the provincial congress of New York expressed its approval. August 2 an engrossed copy of the declaration was laid before congress and received the signatures of delegates from 13 colonies, 55 in all, though Matthew Thornton of New Jersey did not sign until November.

Grim jests were passed. Hancock, writing his name large, said that John Bull could read it without spectacles and impressed upon his comrades that since the fatal day was cast they must "all hang together in this matter," which gave Franklin a chance for his bon mot, "Yes, indeed, we must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

A fat delegate—some say it was Harrison, others that it was Carter Braxton of Virginia—said to one of light weight, either Carroll of Carrollton or Gerry of Massachusetts: "When it comes to hanging I shall have greatly the advantage, for my neck would be broken at once, while I fear you will dangle in the air and hang for some time."

The first public celebration of the Declaration of Independence was probably that of July 8, 1776, when John Nixon read the statement in the yard of the statehouse in Philadelphia and the king's arms were taken down in the courtroom. In New York in 1777, in honor of the first anniversary of the glorious day, every soldier was ordered an extra gill of rum. In 1778 the general orders read: "Tomorrow, the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, will be celebrated by firing 13 pieces of cannon and a feu de joie of the whole line." Even as early as that parades were in order. A description of one shows that elaborate hair dressing is not of the twentieth century only and that the Tories were not so insignificant as to escape notice.

"We had a magnificent celebration of the anniversary of independence when handsome fireworks were displayed. The Whigs of the city dressed up a woman with the monstrous head-dress of the Tory ladies and escorted her through the streets with a great concourse of people. Her head was elegantly and expensively dressed. I suppose about three feet high and proportionate width, with a profusion of curls. The figure was droll and occasioned much mirth. It has lessened some heads already and will probably bring the rest within the bounds of reason, for they are monstrous indeed. The Tory wife of Dr. Smith has christened the figure Contenella, or the Duchess of Independence, and prayed for a pin from her head by way of relief. The Tory women are very much mortified notwithstanding this."

Barbecues, fireworks, parades, picnics, white dresses—these seem early to have become a part of the day's celebration. Noise and accidents, also, early developed. Julia Ward Howe, in her reminiscences, tells that she remembers her own distress as a child because the Democratic mayor of New York, Gideon Lee, prohibited home fireworks. Fortunately for her and her sisters and brothers, they lived next door to the mayor and he made an exception in their favor.

In 1857 she listened to the ode written by Emerson and read in the town hall at Concord July 4, 1857. Perhaps he caught the spirit of even the day's noise better than the other parson, at least he wrote more kindly of it: "The cannons boom from town to town, Our pulses beat not less, The joy bells chime their tidings down, Which children's voices bless."

A Tart Tongue.

Col. Robert C. Carter, at a Nashville banquet, was talking about campaign comrades.

"There were Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest-tongued man in the regiment."

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out-foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress."

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away."

"No," she said, "I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this! I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up!"

"Made up, is it?" said Dash. "Like the rest of you, eh?"

Why He Quit.

"Bondsonby has given up smoking." "Impossible. He's been a slave to the habit for years."

"He's given it up, all right."

"Why? Did the doctor order him to do it on account of his nerves?"

"No, I don't believe so; but you know that peach of a stenographer he's had for the past few weeks? Well, I happened to overhear her say one day, when Bondsonby was listening, that she would be as willing to kiss a pig as to kiss a man who was always smoking."

Soothing.

"But those extremely violent women lunatics—how do you manage to keep them so quiet?"

"That's an idea of the new superintendent's."

"Yes?"

"Yes; he had the straightjackets made up in the peek-a-bog style."—Puck.

Why He Whitewashed.
A country doctor tells a story of a man who moved into a dilapidated old cottage, and was found by the doctor badly whitewashed inside and out. "I'm glad to see you making this old place so nice and neat," said the physician, "it's been an eyesore in the neighborhood for years." "Tain't nothing to me about eyesores," was the reply. "The last couple what lived here had twins three times, and I hope whitewash is a good disinfectant. Ye see we've got ten children."

Had a Reason.
"Why don't you call your newspaper the Appendix?" asked the enemy of the political boss.
"Any special reason for wanting me to do so?"
"Well, it's a useful organ."

PATENT Thompson's Eye Water

Through the Pantry Window

By CLAUDINE SISSON

On a certain chill October afternoon, which was brightened only by a flare of crimson leaves on all the maples and the ever-present tangles of aster and golden rod along the bushy banks, Elsie turned her horse in at a rickety picket gate and dismounted before the porch of a tiny, shabby, neglected house.

Tears came to Elsie's eyes, as she thought of the dead woman who had animated it with her kindly presence. She felt that she would like to go in and look about and try in imagination to refurbish the abandoned rooms and to people them with the gentle figures that had once frequented them.

The thin old horse, a freckled gray from the livery stable in town, was pulling at the reins in an effort to get his nose to the grass. Elsie sought for some place to make him secure and remembered the little barn. If the door was not nailed up she could put him in there.

The door was not nailed up. It slid open easily and she led the horse in and tied him to the stall which had held only cobwebs and hay and dust for a long time. A little had remained in one corner. She carried it to the horse, who received it as eagerly as if it had been the freshest of fodder. Then she went to the house.

It was locked securely. She went about trying the shutters. At last she found one partly off the hinges—blown off by a high wind, no doubt. She swung it clear and put her hand to the window underneath. To her surprise, it raised as she pushed upon it. She seemed to hear a familiar voice saying in her ear:

"The ketch on that pantry window needs fixing bad, but I can't seem to do it. But, what difference does it make? There ain't no burglar coming in here for the little trash I've got. If one did come in he'd be glad enough to get out again, after I'd given it to him good and lively with that old pair of brass tongs I keep handy for the purpose."

Aunt Hope's dear voice! Aunt Hope's own remembered words! And this was the pantry window. Elsie pale under her veil. Well, it was over. Of what use was it to regret? Yet Elsie knew how anxiously Aunt Hope had longed for them to be friends again, how strongly she had advised their making up their foolish quarrel.

"You are both young and high tempered," she had pleaded again and again, "but there'll come a time when you'll be old and remorseful unless you make up now. Why, you are made for each other, Elsie. You'll never be happy with anyone else, nor will David. He's a splendid young fellow. Don't I know? Wasn't I with his mother the night he was born, and haven't I watched him grow up from baby to man? And haven't I watched you grow up, too? And I love you both. I've tried to have you, care for each other because I felt that was as it should be. And now you've let that little trollop of a Doris Kennedy come between you! Oh, I know what folks say about me—that I am a meddling fellow of matchmaker."

"Peacemaker, aunt Hope," Elsie had laughed, tremulously.

"Well, then, peacemaker. I hope I am. Blessed—you know what the Bible says. But I ain't sure of that unless you'll let me make peace between you and David!"

"Some day," Elsie had half promised. That was a year ago. Then they had met at Aunt Hope's funeral and had not spoken. Afterward David had gone back to the city to his work and Elsie had gone hers in the little country town. As far as she knew now, her romance was ended. There was no Aunt Hope to advise and gently smooth away the difficulty. But, oh, the sweetness and the bitterness of it lingered with her like mingled myrrh and honey. She had loved David—she loved him still—and must go on loving him as long as she lived. But she had the Bennett temper. He had it, too, far back somewhere, a couple of generations ago, a certain marriage had made them kin. She would not give up. Neither would he. And it was all because she had not liked his city cousin, Doris Kennedy, and he had! Perhaps down in her heart Elsie had been a bit jealous of the blonde young woman who looked as if she had been run in an exceedingly slender mold, and had never so much as bent her back since—an effect obtained, it was said, by means of an exacting dressmaker. Elsie was far too natural to admire Doris' immobility, loads of false hair and layers of pink and white powder. And she had told David so in a none too pleasant way.

"But her heart is all right," he had argued stoutly. "Doris is a good girl. The trouble is, you are envious of her, that's all!"

"Envious!" cried Elsie, scarlet with rage. So the quarrel had begun.

As she sat there now in the empty room Elsie owned to herself sadly that she had been unreasonable. After all, Doris was David's own cousin and older than he. There had been no reason in the world for her being jealous—as she had been; yes, she had to admit that now.

"If only I had listened to aunt Hope. If only I had let her make peace as she wished."

A crash at the back of the house startled her. A window had fallen! She sprang in her feet. Steps were coming toward her through the house—heavy steps—a man's. Now they were in the kitchen—now the dining room. She plunged toward the door that opened into the little front entry. It was locked. She tugged at it frantically. Heaven! To be shut in this house with a tramp. Still tugging, with futile desperation, at the unyielding door she looked back over her shoulder just as the invader appeared in the parlor door—a tall young fellow in a respectable ulster, who looked almost as white and shaken as she knew she was.

"Elsie!" he exclaimed. "Great Scott!"

"David!" she gasped. And half fell against the supporting door. They stared at each other, the color slowly coming back to their faces.

"Did you get in at the pantry window, too?" Elsie asked, when she could.

He nodded.

"I remembered that aunt Hope was always going to have it fixed and never did. What are you doing here, Elsie?" He came close to her.

"What are you?"

"I came because I had to. I felt as if I was being called."

"David! That's just the way I felt."

Their eyes sought each other's, awe-struck, wondering. Then their hands met.

"Forgive me, Elsie. I was wrong," he faltered.

"Forgive me, David, I was wrong, too."

They clung together.

"I didn't care for Doris. But she was my cousin."

"I know, I know."

She was in his arms now. And he had kissed her.

"David," Elsie said, from his shoulder, solemnly, "do you suppose—that she, aunt Hope, drew us here today?"

His eyes had the look of one who has been very near the holy things.

"Who knows?" he answered, very low. "Blessed are the peacemakers!"

Elsie Turned Her Horse In at a Rickety Gate.

looked in. The tiny place was neat, the cupboard doors shut; an old iron spider hung against the wall.

The window sill was only knee high from the ground, and Elsie climbed over it easily. She let down the window behind her. The floor gave back an empty sound beneath her feet as she walked across it to the kitchen. The kitchen, too, was quite unchanged.

After the dining room came the parlor, the room that in Aunt Hope's lifetime Elsie had always loved best. It was a good sized room in the front of the house. She lifted a window and turned the slats of the closed shutters. The yellow afternoon light came in across the bare floor. Innumerable motes danced in its rays. Upon the walls a few old pictures still hung, and the wall paper showed fresh spaces upon its faded surface where others had been.

Elsie sat down upon one of the appealing chairs and clasped her hands in their riding gauntlets about her knee. There was a chill of friendlessness and stale air in the room, but she did not feel it. She was thinking of the last time she had been in this room. There had been flowers in the room and many people. In the midst lay aunt Hope, always hitherto so gracious and genial, so quick to respond to the love of her friends and neighbors. Her hands were crossed upon a flower; her lips smiled a new little smile of understanding of men's ways and of God's. Above the hushed sound of tears rose a dignified voice: "I am the resurrection and the life."

How vividly she remembered it all! She had sat here and he had sat there with aunt Hope between. And though they both looked at Aunt Hope tearfully they would not look at each other. How pale he had been! And, perhaps, she, too, had been just as

WINS LIFE FIGHT FAR UNDER SEA

DIVER CAUGHT BY STEEL RAIL FACES SUFFOCATION.

KEEPS COOL, SAVES SELF

Manages to Extricate His Air Tubes, Crawls to the Deck of a Vessel and Falls in a Faint—Goes Down Again.

Seattle, Wash.—Threatened with suffocation beneath seven fathoms of water, at the bottom of the city beside pier No. 8, when an 800-pound rail crashed across the slender pipes that supplied him with air, Diver Henry Peterson struggled grimly against impending death and when almost exhausted managed to free himself.

While he struggled his companions above labored frantically, working the pumps that supply the life sustaining element. Somewhere beneath them, far beyond their reach, an issue was being fought out in which they could have no part.

The news of the inexplicable, sinister battle spread along the waterfront. Hundreds of people assembled at the scene, powerless to render aid.

Peterson was recovering 250 tons of steel rails lost off one of the Washington Stevedoring company's scows. The rails were a portion of a consignment brought from the United Kingdom by the Blue Funnel liner Titan on its last voyage to this port. After they had been unloaded from the Titan's hold the scow capsized and dumped 74½ of them, each weighing approximately 800 pounds, into the bay.

Capt. Harry Finch and Son used one of the Neptune Salvage company's scows in recovering the rails. The scow has a stationary engine and a derrick for hauling the rails from the water as fast as the diver hooked one.

Peterson hooked the cable to a rail. As the engine drew the line taut preparatory to lifting it to the scow a rope attached to the derrick boom gave way. The boom, freed from restraint, swerved directly across the scow and dropped the 800-pound rail into the water, where Diver Peterson was working.

The rail fell athwart the diver, pinning the tubes which supply him with air. Realizing his predicament and seeing death from suffocation beneath the water staring him in the face, Peterson, with rare presence of mind, got down in the ooze and started to disentangle the breathing tube from beneath the rail.

Giving frantic signals to those on the scow above that he was in imminent peril, Peterson struggled to loosen the thin piping. Meanwhile the half-dozen men on the scow, fearful that a tragedy was being enacted below, did all in their power to help Peterson. The men at the pumps kept up a supply of air, but could not ascertain from bubbles rising to the surface whether the life giving element reached the diver.

When Peterson was almost exhausted he managed to disentangle the air pipe. He crawled up the ladder and was helped to the scow by Henry Finch, Jr., and several of the men. He sank limp against the rungs of the ladder by which he had ascended.

After a rest Peterson again went down into the murky depths, amid the applause of hundreds of spectators.

Conditional Piety. Two Scotch fishermen, James and Sandy, belated and befogged on a rough water, were in some trepidation lest they should never get ashore again. At last Jamie said:

"Sandy, I'm steering, and I think you'd better put up a bit of prayer."

"I don't know how," said Sandy.

"If ye don't I'll chuck ye overboard," said Jamie.

Sandy began: "Oh, Lord, I never asked anything of ye for fifteen years, and if ye'll only get us safe back, I'll never trouble ye again, and—"

"Whist, Sandy," said Jamie. "The boat's touched shore; don't be beholden to anybody."—Short Stories.

CAN HE DENY?

Did Mr. Kelley Make Pledges for Support? It's Charged.

Sault Ste. Marie, June 23.—An upper peninsula man, who is actively interested in Chase Osborn's campaign for the governorship, in an interview here today threw a veritable bomb into the Kelley camp by directly charging the lieutenant-governor with having made a pledge, months ago, to the mining interests of the upper peninsula that he would, if elected governor, veto the tonnage tax bill if it passed the legislature. He said:

"My attention has been called to an editorial in the Lansing State Republican, which has lately become the Kelley mouthpiece, in which the declaration is made that the gubernatorial contest lies between Osborn and Kelley. This is followed by the bald statement that Osborn is pledged to the mining interests, while Kelley is pledged only to the good of the state."

"Up to a few days ago I was inclined to agree that the contest lay between Messrs. Osborn and Kelley, but since Kelley's Mr. Pleasant speech, in which he attempts to repudiate his intimate association and connection with the present administration, I am beginning to believe Kelley will be a negligible quantity in the situation before primary day. People instinctively admire loyalty even when the object of that sentiment is not entirely to their liking. But when, as in the present case, a man who is an integral and important part of an organization, who has been largely responsible for the success at the polls of that organization, attempts to repudiate it solely because he finds public sentiment almost universally unfriendly to that organization, I have too high an opinion of public intelligence to believe he can get away with it."

"The second declaration in the Republican is a most unfortunate one, and so far as Kelley is concerned, since it permits of a rejoinder which will puzzle Mr. Kelley to meet satisfactorily."

"Mr. Osborn is pledged to no special interests, either in the upper or lower peninsula. He is pledged to see equal and exact justice done all interests. His political record and the character of his declarations upon the stump; in fact his entire life and the quality of his mind give absolute assurance upon this point. But how about Mr. Kelley?"

"Is Mr. Kelley prepared to deny without qualification that in his efforts prior to Mr. Osborn's entrance into the race, to secure the support of the upper peninsula that he gave certain representatives of the mining interests his personal pledge that he would protect the mining companies against the tonnage tax proposition should it become an issue before the next legislature? Is Mr. Kelley ready to deny that he gave these representatives the assurance that if a tonnage tax bill passed the legislature, and he were governor, he would kill it by his veto?"

"I don't believe Mr. Kelley will answer these questions. He has had one good opportunity to do so, but declined. The Detroit Free Press, several weeks ago, asked a similar question. Kelley ignored it then, and I presume he will ignore it now."

"While equitable assessment for taxation is still a problem as it always has and will be for years to come, it is no more a problem now than it has been during the six years of the Warner-Kelley regime. Throughout the six years of Warner as governor, and Kelly as lieutenant-governor, no word on this subject escaped either Kelley or his chief. Now that Kelley is a candidate and needs an issue he has become very keen for equitable assessments, particularly in a section of the state where he does not expect much support."

"The real issue in Michigan today and the issue in which every citizen is interested is that the money collected for state taxes shall be honestly, wisely and conservatively expended. Since the Kelley-Warner record along this line is not exactly popular, Kelley is making every effort to distract attention from this phase of the situation."

The Measure of Beauty.

Women are wont to say that they dress for the men. I believe they do; also for themselves; also for other women says, Erman J. Ridgway, in The Delicater for August. I don't believe one man in a thousand can appreciate an elaborate gown. Most men, I think, like simpler effects. A gaudily overdressed woman makes her escort painfully self-conscious. If he be a gentleman. But all men can and do appreciate the ensemble of a beautiful face and a beautiful figure beautifully gowned. And the simpler the gown the greater the appreciation. The best dressers realize this. I heard of one recently whose parting injunction to her tailor was, "Spare no expense to make it simple."

Why is it that trained-nurses are so attractive? I never saw an unattractive one, and some of them are "a joy forever." Is it health? Their study has taught them how to take care of themselves. Is it their immaculate costumes? Why shouldn't everybody be aseptically clean? Is it their mission that appeals to our sentiment? Why shouldn't everybody have a mission? After all isn't that our real measure of beauty?

How too often have I seen a beautiful face, glowing with health, and had the surface beauty sadly marred for me by discovering an insipid brain inside. It is the same with men. Some splendid specimens whom I have eagerly gone to meet, soon showed brainless heads or licentious souls, and I have turned away with disgust. A weak man must always be a sad sight, however attractive the outside. Men feel this quickly. In other men; women in other women; but men do not get the measure of a shallow or bad woman so quickly, nor women the measure of a handsome rake.

Such gatherings are like a love feast and help to make life the happier.

A bad train wreck occurred Tuesday morning on the Pere Marquette at Baker's Creek north of Traverse City in which brakeman Beaman lost his life and Engineer Fred Vahay was fatally injured. Both were on the Elk Rapids train. The train known as the Stone run from the Stone Crusher had doubled up the hill and registered at Baker's Creek but did not register out as they had to go after the tail end of the train. The short freight run known as the Elk Rapids Switch Run came north to Baker's Creek and seeing the Stone Run registered in, went on north and collided with it going down the hill. The impact drove the two heavy engines together so tight that a wrecker from Grand Rapids was necessary to clear the track.

Western Canada is having an "American exodus" and the population is being considerably reduced. The continued drought and partial failure of crops and grafting Canadian government is blamed for the outflow. Although no estimate of the number leaving the country can be obtained it is well up in the thousands and American immigration officials declare that one day last week 249 left on one train. In northern and central Saskatchewan, where fully two-thirds of the wheat acreage lies, the crops are in excellent condition, but in southern Alberta they are practically nothing.

The Y. P. S. C. E. achieved a brilliant success in every way on Tuesday evening at their social on the lawn of the Presbyterian parsonage. No labor was spared by the willing hands of the members of the C. E. assisted most heartily by Mrs. Grigsby's class and the result of Japanese lanterns, flags, bunting and so on, the lights shining amid foliage, happy young people and older people sitting or moving around in the half light of the lanterns will not be forgotten soon by all participating. A voting contest for the most popular young woman and young man, resulted in favor of Miss Edith Ramsey and Charles Malpass, who each received a souvenir as a prize. Songs were sung at intervals, and delicious refreshments served. About 100 were present and upwards of $16 was received towards the liquidation of the debt still owing to the managers of the lecture course.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as a sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

MUST HAVE SERVICE AT ONCE

Regular Fact That Few Men Can Wait With Patience for Telephone Answer.

Why is it that when a man has to wait for "Central" to answer his telephone...

Why is it? The reason is comparatively obvious to one who analyzes the problem.

Men are used to waiting for others. Therefore delay in a bank or store causes no wrath.

Safe to Hold Radium.

What is described by its makers as the most ingenious safe ever constructed has just been completed.

It is well known to science that radium emanations will pass through the thickest and hardest steel.

This compartment of the safe is designed to hold 100 pounds of radium, valued at $5,000,000,000.

Practical.

An English friend who contends that we Americans have no true sense of historic value or artistic verity...

One of the Americans, evidently a middle-aged man of business, poked his nose into the room and out again.

Well Shooter Blown to Atoms.

A terrible fate was that of Charles P. Key, an oil well shooter, living in Wellsville, Pa., who was blown to pieces by an explosion of nitro-glycerine.

Strange Death.

It would seem that there are still some causes of death which have not as yet come within the scope of the medical man's observation.

A Model.

"So you think Mr. Meekton is a model husband," said the new member of the society.

A Change.

More Help

Depends Upon Employer in Double Sense

W. G. WELLESLEY BRABBIT

WHEN does the business of an employer justify his taking another employee upon his pay roll? It all depends upon the employer and in a double sense.

Smith, we will assume, has five men on his office staff. Two or three evenings a week he gives these five men 50 cents each to pay for dinner downtown.

"You see," explains Smith, provided he explains at all, "there isn't work enough to justify another man and while work is crowding we'll have to put in a little overtime to tide us over."

But what is this actual situation, reduced to cold, calculating figures? Suppose that Smith's force puts in a nine-hour day, ordinarily. Suppose that his five men work two evenings a week from 7:30 to 9:00 o'clock.

This question of when the services of another employee is needed to an office force, especially, is so delicately balanced that only a broad-minded employer always is able to adjust it in wisdom.

"Why, they don't mind it," he says, under question. "I've got men out there who have been with me ten years or more and I never saw one of them scowl in my life when he was asked to work in the evening."

But the entire willingness of the employee to work extra hours easily might be the best reason in the world why he shouldn't be asked to do so. The fact that he is willing to work indicates that he has had an appreciative employer in many respects.

Wagner's Music Brings Doleful Sounds

By JAMES J. BAHN

Those Pi Phi Psi boys, for instance (to take the history of a certain fraternity in one of the Chicago high schools for an illustration), soon observe that almost everybody eats lunch in the school lunch-room.

I realize that these reflections upon the efforts of the great master are likely to bring down upon the devoted head the indignation of people who throw fits over the racket of the Wagner stunts.

A farther remove becomes necessary. This time it is half a mile down the street to Kelly's new store, well known as "The Blink," where one can vibrate quite familiarly for a few minutes around the free lunch counter.

What now is the dietetic, hygienic, etc., dairy lunch served at cost in the school lunchroom for the local woman's club? What, even, are Greek peanuts and ice cream? A tub of arsenicated suds for us, and a couple of condemned wickerwursts! Life is on the wing!

Honored by the Governor.

Effusive compliments have been paid to Governor Marshall many times, but it remained for an old Irish woman to cap the climax.

"Ah," she said, "an 'tis the governor," and she swallowed up the governor's slim right hand in her own right hand, made large and muscular by many days of toll.

"What's a shame?" asked the restaurant man in surprise.

FERN EMBROIDERY.

One of the Prettiest Summer Decorations for the Vacation Season Table Linen.

In nearly every summer home the living room is used as dining-room, the meals being served on the center table, which is a feature of every summer cottage living room.

Sometimes a small lunch cloth is used, but usually the dollies are liked best, as they are delightfully dainty in appearance.

To embroider the fern use wash silks of different shades of green. Embroider in long and short stitch and Kensington outline for the stems.

LANCIES OF FASHION.

Tucking is used a great deal on the summer gowns.

Swiss fabrics are often worn with a colored slip.

This season one finds entire coats and wraps of cretonne.

The elastic belts, in different widths, are more popular than ever.

Coarse Russian braid is used a great deal for trimming coats and capes.

The chantecler is found embroidered on the instep of the latest silk hosiery.

The finest of roses are used for trimming caps of muslin or lace for the baby.

The shoulder seam on the new shirt waists is much longer than that of last season.

Lingerie embroidered with the all-pervading chantecler is one of the fads of the hour.

Many of the summer coats have long revers that cross and button below the waist line.

A box-plaited quilling of net is the finish at the wrist of a pretty sleeve seen recently.

Ribs of brass as well as of gilt and white enamel are seen in some of the summer sunshades.

Separate blouses of black net with lace insertion are worn over an underblouse of white.

Going-away Coats. An enterprising English dressmaker fills in her spare time making "going-away coats" for little dogs.

This would indicate that the American belle, who carries in her arms the small mite of a dog is not the only foolish woman in existence.

It is said that these little coats are fashioned of velvet or cloth to match the bride's traveling gown, but to the practical they suggest only those very wonderful blankets we made in our little-girl days for brother's wooden horse.

Pockets, we are told, for the handkerchief and for four gutta-percha shoes for doggie finish the coat.

Cold Water Only. When the kitchen wall is darker than it should be and you strongly suspect that part of the general graysness is soot, there is a ready remedy in cold water, provided the wall be painted or covered with enameled paper.

The paper should first be dusted down with a feather or a clean cloth wrung out of cold water until clean. Do not use warm water, as it is likely to turn the paper yellow. Be sure to rinse the cloth as it gets dirty and also to change the water frequently if you would secure the best results.

NEAT IDEAS IN TUB DRESS

Costumes That Will Be Just the Thing When the Really Warm Weather is With Us.

The first costume is in old blue linen, three tucks are made at the side of both skirt and bodice, the latter has one wide tuck standing out over the shoulder. Buttons in sets of four trim both bodice and skirt. The cuffs are tucked all over, so is the collar band.

Straw hat turned up at the side and trimmed with large flowers.

Materials required: 7 yards 42 inches wide, 3/4 dozen buttons.

The other design, although made in linen for summer wear, is a style that may be reproduced just as well in any firm woolen material.

The color of our model is sky blue; in style, it is a semi-princess, the front forming a panel.

The skirt is trimmed with a band of wide brocade, anglaise, from under which the linen is cut away. The yoke is of piece embroidery, and is outlined with a fold of darker blue linen under the edge. The oblong pieces of embroidery form a further trimming.

Hat of pale blue fancy straw trimmed with a feather mount.

Materials required: 7 yards 40 inches wide, 3 yards wide embroidery, 1/2 yard piece embroidery for yoke, 1 1/4 yards narrower insertion.

Strawberry Face Lotion. A good vegetable lotion to soften and whiten the skin is made by hulling a quart of strawberries, mashing them through a sieve, then adding two tablespoonfuls of strong vinegar to each quart of berries. Let it stand until it draws plenty of juice and strain through a fine muslin. Bottle tightly and keep in a cool place.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the introduction of John Stephens, a Massachusetts man marooned by authorities at Valparaiso, Chile. Being interested in mining operations in Bolivia, he was denounced by Chile as an insurrectionist and as a consequence was hiding. At his hotel his attention was attracted by an Englishman and a young woman. Stephens rescued the young woman from a drunken officer. He was thanked by her. Admiral of the Peruvian navy confronted Stephens, told him that war had been declared between Chile and Peru and offered him the office of captain. He declined that that night the Esmeralda, a Chilean vessel, should be captured. Stephens accepted the commission. Stephens met a motley crew to which he was assigned. He gave them final instructions. They boarded the vessel, but successfully captured the vessel supposed to be the Esmeralda, through strategy. Capt. Stephens gave directions for the capture of the craft. He entered the cabin and discovered the English woman and her maid. Stephens quickly learned the wrong vessel had been captured. It was Lord Darlington's private yacht, the lord's wife and maid being aboard. He explained the situation to her ladyship. Then First Mate Tuttle laid bare the plot, saying that the Sea Queen had been taken in order to go to the Antarctic circle. Tuttle explained that on a former voyage he had learned that the Donna Isabel was lost in 1753. He had found it frozen in a huge mass of ice on an island and contained much gold. Stephens consented to be the captain of the expedition. He told Lady Darlington. She was greatly alarmed, but expressed confidence in him. The Sea Queen carried a vessel of the Sea Queen. Stephens attempted to communicate. This caused a fierce struggle and he was overcome. Tuttle finally squaring the situation. The Sea Queen headed southward. Under Tuttle's guidance the vessel made progress toward its goal. De Nova, the mate, told Stephens he believed Tuttle, not acting as skipper, insane because of his queer actions. Stephens was awakened by crashing of glass. He saw Tuttle in the grip of a raving delirium and overcame him. The sailor upon regaining his senses was taken ill. Tuttle committed suicide by shooting. Upon vote of the crew, Stephens assumed the leadership and the men decided to continue the treasure hunt. The islands being supposed to be only 200 miles distant, Tuttle was buried in the sea. Lady Darlington pronouncing the service. Stephens awaking from sleep saw the ghost, supposed to have formed the basis for the romance of the island. Upon advice of Lady Darlington, Stephens started to probe the ghost. He came upon Lieut. Sanchez, the drunkard officer he had hunted in Chile. He found that at Sanchez's inspiration, Engineer McKnight played "ghost" to scare the men into giving up the quest. Stephens announced that the Sea Queen was at the spot where Tuttle's quest was supposed to be. The crew was anxious to go on in further search. De Nova, the mate, Lady Darlington thanked him. The Sea Queen started northward. She was wrecked in a fog. Stephens, De Nova, Lady Darlington and her maid being among those to set out in a life boat. Ten were rescued. Stephens saw only one chance in a hundred for life. Lady Darlington and her maid were rescued. Stephens and he did likewise. Lady Darlington told her life story. How she had been harrowed by Tuttle, yearning for her old life. She revealed herself as the school chum of Stephens' sister. She expressed a wish to die in the sea rather than face her former tormentor and go back to her old life. A ship was sighted. The craft proved to be a derelict. They boarded her. She was frozen tight with hundreds of years of ice. They read the log of the Isabel, which told how the Spaniards had died from cold, one by one. Lady Darlington sang to prevent the men from becoming moody. The crew commenced the hunt for treasure. They found the treasure, said to contain a part of 3,000,000 pesos, firmly imbedded in ice.

They Came Howling About Me Like So Many Wolves, Eager to See.

fell slashing against the front of the ice. "Only two of you men can work here at once," I put in hastily. "Hold on, Johnson, until we get this shipshape. An axman, with a helper to haul back the ice out of the way, is all we need. Any more would only be in the way; besides, some of us ought to be on deck. It is going to require hours, maybe days, to get that chest out, and meanwhile we must sail this vessel and keep her right side up. The thing to do is to arrange relays, and keep at it steady. Johnson, you and Kelly go to work first. The rest of us will climb up into the cabin, and figure it out."

ory of it—until I bring you back to real life again." "I do not need it, sweetheart," and I bent low, looking into her eyes. "The fever has left my blood. I hardly know how it ever laid such hold upon me, but the thought of all that wealth below drove me as mad as the others. You see how much I need you." "Oh, no, you would have recovered without my help, although it might have required more time to complete a cure. But I fear there is no hope for the men."

CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued. "By God, mates, there's one of 'em, anyhow!" roared a voice, hoarse from exploding excitement. But I was already upon my knees, feeling blindly into the ice cavity. They came howling about me like so many wolves, eager to see with their own eyes, but I crowded them back, snatching the candle from De Nova's fingers and throwing the flickering light down level with the deck. "It's a brass-bound chest, men," I cried, straightening up and facing them. "But it is going to require some hard digging to get it out. About all I can see is the handle of it." I never comprehended before how the passion and lust for gold can express itself upon men's faces. Expense, motionless, breathing heavily, their features drawn, their eyes gleaming feverishly in the yellow flame, they stared at me and then at that ice-front, demented and speechless. No one thought of where we were—castaways, our lives the sport of winds and waves, a sudden wreck under us, our nearest port a thousand miles away across a stormy sea; all we realized at that moment was that there, just before us, under that mantle of ice, lay buried three million pesos. God! the collar of my jacket seemed choking me; I breathed as if a man's fingers clutched my throat, and I saw McKnight's burly form shaking as if he had an ague fit. Three million pesos! The hot blood rushed to my head, a lava stream, and De Nova's face, white as chalk behind his little black mustaches, seemed dancing before me ghostlike. Damn him! the fellow made me think of Salvatore, the man who, just above, frozen and dead, had guarded this treasure for 126 years. I cast the suggestion aside with a curse and a laugh, grasping Kelly by the shoulder to steady myself—to realize these were real men, this task before us real work. It was like coming forth from under an anæsthetic, leaving me weak as a child, yet with brain and faculties aroused to action. Johnson thrust forward the cleaver.

"Let me get in there, sir, I'm the man for a cuttin' job." I stepped aside, and the broad blade decks in discontent, now that the ship and weather gave us little occasion for concern. Here they vigorously plied the cleaver, working in relays of two hours each, during the remainder of the day and night. After breakfast had been served we all of us went below to unite our strength in hauling forth the loosened box from the ice cavity.

We accomplished this by resorting to block and tackle, and even then experienced no small difficulty in dragging it away from the ice grip. Under the dim candlelight it appeared a fair-sized sea-chest, constructed of some heavy, dark wood, and bound securely by metal bands, with a cumbersome lock. A considerable quantity of water from somewhere continued to seep down into the lazarette, making the floor an icy puddle, and so we talled on to the ropes again, and hoisted the chest up through the trap-door out upon the cabin deck. I could find no keys in any of the state-rooms, and we must have been half an hour breaking the rusty lock and prying open the lid, the only sounds audible the blows struck and the heavy breathing of the men. Finally we wrenched apart the last band, and our eager eyes beheld the revealed contents—pieces of eight, yellow and level to the top! There was a wild yell, a fierce scramble, the crazed men digging their fingers into the coins, handling them, fondling them, laughing and crying like children in their excitement, and cursing each other as they struggled for a chance at the box. For the moment, staring down at the dull glow of the metal, I even lost control of myself, scarcely aware of the mad uproar. It was actually there—there—before me! That old Spanish record had all been true, here, and beneath that ice between decks lay the remainder—three million pesos! Here was the wealth of a king; here, almost within reach of our hands, and it was all ours—ours, if we could only bring it forth to where it possessed value.

If we only could! The thought struck me like a blow. I knew the truth. There was not one chance in a thousand—not one. I made no effort to deceive myself. The men, even the mate, blinded by the gold-lust had ignored facts plain as day to me—the terrible listing of the ship to port, the constant seeping of water into the hold, the increasing soddiness of the staggering hull—all these combined to tell the story—that the Donna Isabel was doomed. No power of men, situated as we were, could ever save her. The protecting ice-sheath, by help of which she had drifted ghostlike out of the Antarctic, pounded by the fierce seas, loosened by the milder air of more northern latitudes, had already commenced to flake off, and the invading water was discovering crevices everywhere along her ancient seams. We had come to the gold; we had discovered it; it was ours. But we could only gaze on it, and give it back to the ocean in exchange for our lives. I straightened up, my lips compressed, and looked beyond the struggling figures of the men into Doris's questioning gray eyes. Father of Mercy, I possessed something worth more than money—the love of a woman! Ay, but what of the men? What of the men? It would be cutting their hearts out; yet it must be done—done, if necessary, with all the brutality of a slave driver. She had said this treasure was a curse, a legacy of crime and death, a prize for dead men. Not while I retained mind and body to battle should it cost our lives. I pushed De Nova backward, and planted myself across the open chest, scowling into the uplifted, angry faces.

"That's enough, men. This is part of the treasure all right, but there is no occasion for you to go crazy over it. Put those chips back—do you hear, McKnight?—put them back, and we'll shut down the lid. They're nice to look at, and dream over, but that's about all the good we'll ever get of them. Were there any signs of others down there in the ice, Johnson?" (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Hot Water Cure for Insomnia. To insure the benefit of the hot water, it must be taken off the fire the moment it boils—not just before or after—and poured at once into a cup or glass. Then it should be taken while very hot. A little practice will enable one to swallow it at little less than the boiling point, and in addition to the proper temperature, the proper time must be observed. It is most efficacious in curing indigestion and improving the general tone of the system if taken immediately on waking in the morning, again an hour before lunch and an hour before dinner also, and to drink two glassfuls on retiring will almost positively insure sound sleep. It may require two or three days' trial before the desired result is effected, but once gained it can be held without interruption by faithfully pursuing this method.

CHAPTER XXVII. In Which the Treasure Causes Trouble. But the men did not forget, or cease in their eager efforts to rescue that frozen gold from the grasp of the ice. By this time, thoroughly convinced myself that our final preservation of this wealth would prove impossible, I was still far from devoid of interest in its recovery, and consequently made no effort to interrupt the work being carried on between decks. It was better that the men be busy and their minds occupied than to have them roaming aimlessly about the

LITTLE KNOWN DISTRICT

CALIFORNIA STAGE ROAD

IN THE quiet succeeding the uproar until recently emanating from the camps of Nevada, there becomes audible a modest plea for recognition from a comparatively unknown region of northern California.

One of the most promising of these districts is that comprising the western fourth of Siskiyou county, the adjacent portions of Humboldt and Del Norte and the northern part of Trinity, a compact area approximately 2,600 square miles. The Klamath, the Scott, the Salmon—the north and south forks of the last named—and the New rivers traverse this territory, and with their numerous tributaries constitute its drainage system.

To the professional, as to the casual mining operator, it will appear as a surprising fact that approximately half of this great area, or 1,200 square miles is virgin ground to the miner—unprospected and unappropriated public land. This unknown area is rich in mineral is beyond question, since those regions, north, south, east and west, so far explored, are uniformly and heavily mineralized.

Prospecting here has so far been confined to those narrow strips of country constituting the principal drainage lines—the river heretofore named—and immediately adjacent thereto.

Geographically, this district divides itself into three sections—the "Klamath," and the "Salmon," the "New river." Mineralogically there are but two sections, the "Klamath" and the "Salmon," the "New river" lying immediately south of and its formation being identical with that of the "Salmon."

In the Klamath, the base ore—iron, copper and cinnabar—predominates, in the "Salmon" occur free milling gold ores almost exclusively, with no base; and to the writer's knowledge but one complex ore has been encountered, a high-grade $700 telluride accompanying very rich "specimen" gold.

The "Salmon," properly so-called, extends from the Salmon mountains summit to the east—approximately thirty miles west into Humboldt county, and from just north of the North fork of the Salmon river south 20 miles to the Trinity mountains summit, where the "New river" section begins. This great, heavily mineralized area, including "New river," has mostly been merely scratched over, only a very small portion has been fairly prospected. In no case has anything approaching intelligent and systematic underground exploration been carried out.

The prevailing rocks are those of California's mother lode, and of Nevada county—metaphoric and auriferous slates (including mariposite) granite, porphyry and diorite. The quartz, with few exceptions constituting the vein matter, is identical in character, structure and contained matter with that of the last regions named, where deep workings have demonstrated the permanency of such veins in these enclosing rocks, and also the important fact that the ore's free milling character persists to great depth. The ores of the "Salmon," as has been said, are almost wholly free milling, usually carrying one to three per cent. of high grade concentrates in the form of iron pyrites, galena and zinc blende.

Many veins of this section are blind, or nearly so, cropping only at intervals and then to no great extent, which accounts, somewhat, for the retarded development. In the nature of things this condition is to be expected. The surface is exceedingly rugged, heavily timbered and brushy. The precipitous slopes usually carry a heavy over-burden of talus and soil. All this has its ultimate advantages, as it implies unlimited timber supply, water under high heads, and the possibility of mining by tunnel instead of by shaft.

The creeks and rivers of the Salmon have a recorded gold production of over $25,000,000. (Siskiyou's record approximates $150,000,000.) Very nearly all this has been produced without capital other than the labor of the miners engaged and the very limited financial means at their command. In other words, this section has developed it by its own resources. Hydraulic and placer mining is still usually carried on by the crude methods of fifty years ago, or at least with inadequate equipment. On the main streams there is yet available considerable ground suitable for the dredger or elevator and for hydraulicking.

Adjoining the "Salmon" on the north, extending to within a few miles of the Klamath river, approximately 30 miles, and from the Marble mountains summit on the east to beyond the Humboldt county line on the west for close to 25 miles, is a region for all practical purposes a terra incognita. Surrounded on all sides by ground known to be heavily mineralized, this 700 square miles may be fairly assumed to be more or less mineralized. The occasional trapper or Indian reports quartz float to be plentiful and the numerous streams to contain gold. This region, however, is wholly unprospected; there is not a single mineral location of record in it. It would seem worthy of exploration and prospecting.

Adjoining this unknown region to the north is the "Klamath" section, extending from a few miles south of the Klamath river (which drains it) north 18 miles to or beyond the Oregon line, and from the vicinity of Gottsville on the east 65 miles to beyond the Del Norte county line on the west. The Siskiyou range traverses it from east to west, its summit whose trend is irregular, lying six to twelve miles north of the Klamath river.

The "Klamath" prevailing rocks are the crystalline slates and schists, overlying diorite and gabbro. Lime rock, granite and serpentine are present to a less extent. On Indian creek is found possibly the only commercially exploited deposit of jade on the continent.

The "Klamath" ores, as before noted, are chiefly base—iron, copper and cinnabar. Copper predominates, every mile, so far as explored, showing surface indications of it—extensive gossan cappings, outcrops of slate or schist heavily stained with iron or copper and the seams and fissures filled with copper-bearing mineral.

The entire territory herein treated of is heavily timbered, making an inexhaustible supply of timber conveniently available for mining and all purposes. The numerous torrential streams render available water under high heads for direct application as power or for generating electricity for transmission.

Within the territory described land suitable for cultivation is practically unknown, except along the Klamath river where a number of fine, large ranches are located, but just over the Salmon mountains lies Scott valley, a very fertile and productive section whence subsistence supplies are drawn. The road into the "Salmon" is a good mountain highway and freight charges are reasonable.
