Several of East Jordan's Young People Take Up the Bonds of Matrimony This Week.

"God, the best maker of all marriages Combine your hearts in one, your lives in love." —Tannyson.

MacFarlane-Crossman.

A date long to be remembered was Monday the 19th, for on that evening, with the moon outside lying low and full, two of our best known young people were united in marriage. Mr. Robert P. MacFarlane and Miss L. Vern Crossman at the home of her parents. The rooms, perfectly and tastefully decorated with flowers, and brilliantly lighted, were in admirable keeping with the well dressed and cheerful crowds that filled the home. Miss Flora Haire sang some beautiful airs at intervals followed by piano selections by Miss Nicholas who also played Mendelssohn's wedding march at the entrance of the bridal party. About eight young children advanced unrolling white ribbons, followed by others still younger scattering flowers. Then came as follows: John Porter escorting the groom, Miss Helen Turnbull of Huntsville Ont., maid of honor, and bringing up the rear the bride, beautifully gowned, leaning on her father's arm. The Rev. A. D. Grigsby officiated. Afterward congratulations and visiting were in order and later on delicious refreshments. Later on still Mr. and Mrs. MacFarlane left for Petoskey enroute for Pittsburg to visit relatives. The popularity of the bride and groom is evident from the many and costly gifts mostly of silver and cut glass. Friends from outside were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Crossman and babe, and Mrs. DeCracker and daughter from Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. George Brown of Cheboygan, Misses Lot (four sisters) of Pigeon, Mrs. Eberhorst of Bay City and Mrs. Rogers of Bellaire. The best wishes of their many friends follow them into their unknown future.

Deane-Greenwood.

Thursday the 22nd was a happy day for one of our most esteemed young ladies, for Miss Eva Greenwood became that afternoon in her mother's home the wife of Mr. Charles Deane of Kalamazoo. Rev. A. D. Grigsby officiated and it was about 3 o'clock when the bridal pair were made one. An excellent dinner followed and later on Mr. and Mrs. Deane left for Kalamazoo where a beautiful new home awaits them. The many gifts beautiful and useful of glass, silver, etc., were ample proof of the popularity of Mrs. Deane. All join in wishing her and her husband a very happy life.

Roberts-LaLonde.

St. Joseph's Catholic church was the scene of wedding festivities Monday morning last when, at eight o'clock, Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Moses LaLonde Sr., was united in marriage to Mr. John Roberts of New Ulysses, Kansas. Rev. Fr. McDouald performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. Following the ceremony, Mrs. S. A. Bush, a sister of the bride, entertained at her home on the West Side to a wedding breakfast. The happy couple left that morning for Chicago, and will be at home at New Ulysses after October first.

Richards-Dewey.

At Frederic last Monday occurred the marriage of Mr. Fred Richards, a well known business man of East Jordan, to Mrs. Blanche Dewey, also of this city. They are spending a fortnight with Detroit friends.

How I Started My Rolling-mill.

I was just entering upon my thirty-fourth year when, owing to the failure of my wife's father, I found myself obliged to make a living.

I had often wondered where all the steel rails came from, and now I determined to go into the business of supplying them to railroad companies. Having learned, through careful inquiry, that nearly all of them were made in rolling-mills, I persuaded the owner of a bankrupt iron-foundry to convert it into a rolling-mill. Then I went to a good reliable machinery man on the next block and told him to send me some of the very best rolling-mill machinery that he had in his store.

Meanwhile my noble wife had not been idle, and by the time I was ready to begin operations she had induced several of the most brilliant women in society to agree to buy all their steel rails of us. Touched by her unselfish devotion, I clasped her in my arms while the tears coursed down my cheeks.

Then I called on a railroad president, told him that I desired to become self-supporting, and asking him to buy some of my rails. He told me to deliver a basketful to his place of business every Saturday night.

Greatly elated over my prospects I called together a number of working men whom I found idle on the streets, and directed them to make some nice steel rails without delay and take them around to the kind railroad president.

Rejoicing at the prospect of steady employment, the working men hastened to obey, and the rails that they made under my direction proved so durable that in a very short time I had all the orders that I could fill.

I attribute much of my success to the fact that each rail is delivered to the customer tastefully wrapped in tissue-paper fastened with pink ribbon.

The organ of the liquor dealers of Michigan, "Truth," had an article in a recent issue urging against any disturbance of the workman's right to drink. That the workman shall not be disturbed in his right to spend his money for liquor is the only favor the saloon has ever sought in his behalf. The organ of the liquor traffic of Michigan is not interested in the workman's home or in his family or in his efficiency, or in any of the things which concern his comfort and his welfare. But that he shall be permitted to drink and through drinking shall increase his desire in that direction, regardless of every other tie on earth to him and every other obligation. That is the saloon's single and supreme interest in the workman.

And fortunately the workman is coming to understand that fact. The labor unions are coming to understand it also and their strongest and most reliable leaders have become the zealous and most effective opponents of the entire liquor business.

The Weather Bureau is reaching higher altitudes of ambiguity every day. Monday, for instance, it gave us "unsettled and generally fair."

Platonic Marriage—Not For Real Men or Women.

Omitting sentimental pyrotechnics, and getting right down to practical day in and day out three meals and millinery existence, marriage is not an unselfish relationship, says Erman J. Ridgway in The Delineator for October. A man may protest, and he may believe, if he is very young and ardent that he is "taking this woman" to work for and cherish, and make happy; but, way down among his instincts, if he troubles to look, he will find a conviction that this particular woman will make a good home for him, and honor him among his fellows; that she will cater to his patriarchal aspirations in providing a family, and that in her he will continue to find through the years sweet satisfaction for his soul and body hunger.

The conviction may be unconscious, but it is there. If when a lover wooes his lady-love she were to answer: "Yes, I'll marry you, if you will agree to a platonic marriage; no children, no love-making; rooms in a hotel; and an allowance," an old dodo might accept the terms, but any real man out of the wheel-chair stage would promptly take to his heels.

There are probably a few things which, if a woman knew she was going to miss them in the marriage relationship, would send her flying from it.

A Good Position.

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of E. R. and Wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, Ohio, or Philadelphia, Pa.

Commemorating Historic Scenes and Heroic Deeds

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

COPYRIGHT BY W.A. PATTERSON

IT IS probable that never before in the history of the country has there been such a well-sustained movement as there is today to secure proper public memorials of the dead who in life rendered great service to their fellows, and to commemorate by tablets and by monuments the scenes of great battles and of the great events of peace which had their lasting effect upon the history of this great republic.

For two or three years during the sessions of congress, the senate and house committees which have memorial matters in charge have been busy considering memorial plans which properly might have congressional support. At the same time the Daughters of the American Revolution and kindred patriotic societies have been engaged in the work of raising funds to make memorials of the past possible. In the city of Washington the residents have felt a touch of the same spirit, and there is here today an active organization which was formed for the express purpose of providing ways and means to keep in the mind of the present generation, the memories of the past, by means of worthy memorial tablets emplaced on buildings of historic interest, or on land or ground made famous as the witnesses of historic events.

For some time there have been before congress three plans, for a great memorial to Abraham Lincoln. No one plan has been definitely adopted, but the sentiment is all one way, and it is virtually assured that before another year has passed there will be under way the work necessary to commemorate worthily the life and the deeds of the "Rail Splitter President."

One of the plans is for a great highway to be known as the Lincoln Road, or the Lincoln Highway, to connect the capital with the battlefield of Gettysburg. It is held by many students of English that the short address which Abraham Lincoln delivered on the battlefield of Gettysburg is one of the finest examples of expression in the mother tongue known to the world of letters. Lincoln is inseparably connected with Gettysburg, and the fact is due almost wholly to the speech which he delivered on the anniversary of the battle, a speech which, it is said, was prepared only at the last moment before delivery, the only preparation except that of thought, consisting in a few notes jotted down upon the back of an old envelope.

The senate committee on library, which has in charge memorial work, reported favorably a bill authorizing the expenditure of $100,000 for the erection of a memorial arch upon the camping ground of the American army at Valley Forge, in the state of Pennsylvania. The library committee some time ago recommended and secured the passage of a bill appropriating money for the erection in Washington of a statue to John Barry, commodore in the United States navy during the Revolutionary war. A monument also is to be erected to Christopher Columbus and a part of the cost will be paid by the people of the United States. Statues to Kosciusko and Pulaski have been erected within the year, and other statues and monuments, either have been put in place, or are now well on the road to completion. It is said that the patriotic societies, by their excellent educational work throughout the country, have so aroused the sentiment of the people that the pressure which has been brought to bear on congress properly to recognize the services of the dead and gone has been irresistible.

A good deal of interest attaches to the proposed memorial arch at Valley Forge. It was there that Gen. George Washington and his army passed the awful winter of 1777-8, a time of suffering, starvation and danger from the enemy. As has been said, a bill authorizing the expenditure of $100,000 has been reported favorably from the library committee. There seems to be no opposition in congress to the appropriation, and a bill sanctioning it probably will be passed at the next session.

always been a forest, and the greater part of the earthworks, consisting of entrenchments, the star redoubts, and Forts Washington and Huntington, had not been greatly affected by the elements nor disturbed by man. In 1875 an imposing celebration of the anniversary of the evacuation was held. As a result of this celebration, the Centennial Memorial association was formed by patriotic women, who purchased the house which General Washington occupied during the greater part of the encampment. The house has been restored to its condition when occupied by Washington.

In 1893, the general assembly of Pennsylvania declared that "the title to and ownership in the ground covering the site, including Forts Washington and Huntington, and the entrenchments adjacent thereto, and the adjoining grounds, in all not exceeding 250 acres, but not including there-in the property known as Washington's headquarters, and now owned by the Centennial and Memorial Association of Valley Forge, shall be vested in the state of Pennsylvania, to be laid out, preserved and maintained forever as a public place, or park, by the name of Valley Forge, so that the same and their fortifications thereon may be maintained as nearly as possible in their original conditions as a military camp."

Since the establishment of the park, the state of Pennsylvania has appropriated $315,215 toward the acquisition and improvement of the land and buildings, including the Washington headquarters building and ground, which were acquired five years ago by condemnation, and made free to all visitors. The park now contains 467 acres.

In 1901 the Daughters of the Revolution erected on the reservation an imposing granite shaft 50 feet high, called the Waterman monument. On the face of the monument is the following inscription:

To the Soldiers of Washington's Army Who Sleep at Valley Forge, 1777-1778. Erected by the Daughters of the Revolution.

On the south side is another inscription as follows:

Near This Spot Lies Lieutenant John Waterman, Died April 23, 1778, Whose Grave Alone of All His Comrades, Was Marked.

It is estimated that there were 3,000 deaths in General Washington's army during the winter's stay in this camp. Most of the bodies were buried in the camp grounds. Five years ago the Daughters of the Revolution erected east of, but not far from where Varnum's brigade is supposed to have been encamped, a log hut of the exact dimensions erected by the soldiers under Washington. Above the door to this hut has been placed a tablet bearing the following inscription:

On This Spot Stood One of the Huts Occupied by the Soldiers of Washington's Camp During the Winter of 1777-1778. This Reproduction Was Erected by Colonial Chapter of Philadelphia, Daughters of the Revolution, May, 1905.

Members of the senate committee on library, express the hope that eventually all the great battlefields of the Revolutionary and Civil wars in the states of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland will be connected by boulevards.

The great memorial arch at Valley Forge will be one of the few great arches of history which will represent something more than mere victory in the battle of men. It was a moral and physical victory in one that Washington and his men achieved at Valley Forge. They conquered privation and they conquered rebellion against the hardships of fate.

The Romans were practically the originators of the memorial and triumphal arch. In fact, they used the ordinary building and bridge arch itself to a much greater extent than had ever been known before. Three of the great Roman triumphal arches are still standing. They are those of Titus, Septimius, Severus and Constantine. That of the first Christian emperor is by far the most beautiful. It marks the triumphal return from Gaul and Britain led as tradition has it, by the blazing cross of stars, with the luminous sign which bade him "conquer by this."

In the Arch of Septimius there could be traced for years after its erection, the information that the emperor had gained great victories over the Parthians. As one looks at this monument today it is interesting to recall that the man and emperor who passed in triumph under it, after its completion, was the one who built the wall in Britain to check the inroads of the fierce Scotch Highlanders. The Arch of Titus has but one arcade entrance, and upon this there rested at one time with other spoils of war, the golden candlesticks of the Temple of Jerusalem, of which Titus in very truth, had not left "one stone upon another."

Of the other famous Roman arches, the foundations of one erected in the days of the republic, may still be traced, though of the structure which rose above them little or nothing is known. It was under this arch that Fabius Maximus walked in triumph after he had thoroughly thrashed the Gauls. Another arch, but of which no trace exists, was one that was erected in Syracuse in honor of Verres, the legate of Rome in Syracuse, for whom Cicero, as every schoolboy knows, made it so uncomfortable in one of his orations.

There are still foundations left of the Arch of Drusus, "erected to commemorate the success won in Germany by the son of Augustus' wife."

Napoleon commemorated his passage of the Alps by the Simplon road, by erecting at the road's terminus at Milan, an arch which is a magnificently beautiful copy of Roman models.

DROVE HIS AUTO THROUGH FLAMES

RAN THE MACHINE FACE TO FACE WITH DEATH AND ESCAPED.

SAVED MOTHER FROM DEATH

Also Rescued Sister, Brother-in-Law and Others Hemmed in by the Great Forest Fires That Have Been Raging for Some Time.

Chicago.—A vivid story of how he drove an automobile nine miles through a flaming forest on a road not more than twenty feet wide in its widest parts, to rescue his mother, sister and brother-in-law from death amid the burning trees, while great tongues of fire shot across the road and blinding smoke assailed his eyes and nostrils, was told by Louis Nissen.

"Acres of forest and flame!" Thus Mr. Nissen summarized his realistic description of the recent forest fires in Wisconsin, in one of which he experienced his thrilling adventure. His big red touring car made three trips through the heart of the blazing woods, bearing to safety, in addition to his mother, brother-in-law and sister, the latter two Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wachsmuth, a liveryman named Strube with a party of four strangers who had been touring the country.

Mr. Nissen's own people were trapped in their farmhouse nine miles north of Ogema, Wis., situated in the north central section of the state. The liveryman and his party were in the same general neighborhood and unable to move either forward or back, as their rig, a four-seated buggy, had broken down. All were in a dangerous plight when rescued. Mr. and Mrs. Wachsmuth and Mr. Nissen's mother are now stopping at the home of Mr. Nissen.

"Ogema is about 420 miles north of Chicago," said Mr. Nissen. "I was only up in that country for a few days, but they were certainly replete with interest. My brother-in-law, his wife and my mother were at their farmhouse, some nine miles beyond Ogema, at the time the fires began. I had gone north primarily on a pleasure trip and contemplated

Reversed my Engine in a Great Hurry.

Duluth, Minn., as my destination. Needless to say, when I found out the desperate situation of my people I gave up all thought of any further joy riding.

"No one who has not seen one of the forest fires can have any conception of what a fearful thing it is. All about are burning woods and flaming marshes, and they burn morning, noon and night for days and days. It is only heavy rains which finally extinguish the big blazes.

"There is only one road leading to the 360-acre farm of my brother-in-law. There he had a sawmill, three stables, a home and 400,000 or more feet of timber, and up there he was trapped with the forest burning on all four sides of him. I went up this road for him and his wife and my mother and I had an awful time. The roadway was possibly twenty feet wide at its widest points and on either side all along the nine miles I was forced to travel the woods were burning. Great tongues of flame shot across the road at places and the smoke was awful. I was choking and half-blinded during the entire trip, but I kept the machine at top speed—or at as high a speed as I could force it along the poor road.

"Finally I reached them and just in time. I hurried them in the machine to a clearing about three miles distant, where we fixed up a shelter. Then I went back and tried to save some of the household goods, but found that next to impossible. My brother-in-law lost practically everything—his sawmill, his home and nearly everything in it, besides all his acres of timber.

"It was prior to my trip after my own people that I had heard of the plight of Strube and his party. His rig was out of whack in some way and he was stranded up on a country road in the northern part of the state, but I got to him in time and by crowding we managed to get all the party into the machine and hurried them to safety."

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was troubled with falling and inflammation, and the doctors said I could not get well unless I had an operation. I knew I could not stand the strain of one, so I wrote to you sometime ago about my health and you told me what to do. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I am to-day a well woman."—Mrs. WILLIAM ARENS, 938 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaint, inflammation, ulceration, displacement, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

MISUNDERSTOOD HIM.

"My friend," said the solemn man on the railroad train, "do you drink intoxicating liquors?" "Sure!" cried the convivial chap. "Much obliged for the invitation. Got a flask with you?"

A Bernhardt Trick.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who is supposed to be something of an artist as well as an actress, was recently called upon in one of her marvelous creations to enact the role of a sculptor, and to model a certain bust in view of the audience. This fairly electrified the critics, but when going into rhapsodies over the technical skill in handling the clay which Mme. Bernhardt exhibited they showed that they knew little of the artistic tricks of actors and actresses; as a matter of fact, she does nothing of the kind. The bust is modeled and baked, and over it is placed damp clay of the same color. This the talented actress merely pulls off, exposing the beautifully modeled head underneath.

There can be no greater mistake than to suppose that the man with $1,000,000 is a million times happier than the man with one dollar.

The Island of TUTUILA

NATIVE SAMOAN WAR BOAT

SO LITTLE has been written of the Samoan Islands that many American citizens are not even aware that to the United States government belongs the finest coaling station, at one of the most strategic points in the south seas.

Dating back to the early part of the year 1899, the two rival factions of Samoa, the "Tumua," or party led by Chief Mataafa, and the Matus, or party led by Chief Malletoa, held a "fono" or mass meeting at Apia, on the island of Upolu.

Both Mataafa and Malletoa aspired to the throne of Samoa, and the object of this meeting was to settle the dispute and place the rightful king on the throne, writes Eugene D. Park, Jr., yeoman, U. S. N., in Los Angeles Times. The decision, when rendered, declared Malletoa to be the reigning king of Samoa, and this decision was upheld by the United States, Germany and England.

Mataafa now became hostile, and fell back with his followers, the Tumua faction. After this ensued the engagements between the United States, Germany and England with Malletoa on the one side and Mataafa and his rebels on the other.

The trouble was finally brought to an end and adjusted through a commission sent by the three countries and the representative from the United States must have been a splendid diplomat to have secured Tutuila. This commission conceded to Germany the island of Upolu, on whose shores the town of Apia is situated, to England was given the island of Savali, which Germany later gained possession of in exchange for her treaty rights to Tonga, and for the United States was obtained the islands of Tutuila and Manua.

Whatever attraction Manua had I do not know, but in getting possession of Tutuila the United States secured the prize grab of Neptune's south sea collection, for here is located the navigable and land-locked harbor of Pago-Pago. In fact, it is the only harbor in Samoa where a vessel could seek adequate protection from storms.

This harbor is commodious enough to shelter a fleet and the Pacific fleet, seven cruisers and seven torpedo boats, rode at anchor here without inconvenience. Since a ship must be allowed enough floating space to swing completely around her anchor with the change of tide, it can be plainly seen that the harbor of Pago-Pago is a valuable aid to the United States.

As the harbor opens to view to the eyes of the visitor it presents a beautiful aspect, one which is simultaneously grand, awe-inspiring, quaint and restful. Being completely surrounded by high mountains, the harbor seems like the gigantic crater of some extinct volcano which, in its final struggle for existence, expired with one last rend which tore out a narrow channel to the Pacific, allowing that peaceful old mother of oceans to sweep in and put an end to all volcanic disturbances.

Along the entire distance around the shore can be seen groups of native houses, tearing themselves against a background of towering hills, whose sides present the aspect of an impenetrable jungle.

When ashore for the first time, in Tutuila one is both surprised and pleased at his reception by the natives. Their hospitality seems unbounded. As you walk by any Samoan house you are cordially invited to enter. A clean mat will be spread for you to sit cross-legged upon, you will be treated to the best that the house affords, and usually the maid of the house will make you a bowl of kava, the national drink.

and cat calls. On the other hand, if you submit to extortion rather than take any unworthy advantage over an ignorant savage, you will be invited to come again.

The furnishings of a Samoan house are simple in the extreme, and during the day consist only of rough mats spread upon the coral floor. When a Samoan wishes to build a house he utilizes the services of all his "aigas," or relatives, and everything is manufactured from the crude material gathered from the hillsides. The floor plan of the house is of an oval shape. This space is leveled off and covered with broken bits of coral which are gathered in abundance on the beach, by the women. Surrounding this floor space a set of poles are secured in an upright position, reaching to a height of about six feet. In the center two or three large upright poles, usually about one foot in diameter by fifteen to twenty feet in length, are secured, and from these to the tops of the outer supports the framework of the roof is built.

As the Samoans have no nails they have devised a method of making a very serviceable kind of fiber cord. The old men collect a quantity of coconut fiber, which they roll between hand and knee to the thickness of ordinary cotton string, after which they braid and splice it together into great rolls. These rolls are cut from as needed. This, then, is the means of binding and lashing the roof together and securing it to the uprights.

Then sugar-cane leaves are gathered, doubled, laced, braided and finished into little mats, about three feet long by fifteen inches wide. When a sufficient number of these are ready the roof is thatched with them after the method of shingling a house, allowing the eaves to extend over a distance of two feet. This forms a most efficient protection between the Samoan and his country's prodigious rainfall.

A Samoan house has the advantage over an American home, inasmuch as it can be opened on all sides or on any one side at the discretion of the family. The posts surrounding the floor space are set at a distance of about 2 1/2 feet apart and a curtain is formed for each individual space thus created by using small mats, similar to the thatching mats except that these are made of coconut leaves instead of sugar cane. These little mats are arranged over the openings in such a manner that they overlap and will readily fold up shut-terwise. In this manner any of the spaces between these many posts can be opened to or closed against the weather by merely pushing up the curtain and securing it or by unhooking it with a light pull at a bow knot and letting it drop.

Mats are then spread over the coral floor and the house is complete. It is generally the custom to celebrate the completion with a "fa-fa," or feast.

Aside from chests, boxes, etc., for the storage of personal property, the furnishings consist only of the prerequisites of peaceful slumber, "tainamus," sleeping mats, and bamboo pillows.

A "tainamu" is a mosquito protection, box shaped and about 6 1/2 feet in length by four feet in width by six feet in height. To this small loops are fastened along the tops of the two sides and through these loops two cords are stretched, allowing several feet extra at each end of the "tainamu" to extend and tie to the sides of the house, at a level with the tops of the uprights, thereby suspending the "tainamu" directly over the sleeping mats. During the day the sleeping mats are rolled up and set aside and the bottom of the "tainamu" is twisted and thrown over the taut top. The sleeping mats differ from those used during the day, inasmuch as they are softer, finer woven and much larger.

The bamboo pillow strongly reminds me of the days of the Spanish Inquisition, but custom and natural inclination have taught the Samoan to "lay me down and sleep" in any old place and at any old time. To make these pillows, a piece of straight bamboo about two feet by three inches in diameter is obtained, into which are driven two small pegs at each end in the manner of an inverted "V." The pillow is then complete and when used in sleeping throws the neck into an angle of about forty-five degrees from the body. This may be comfortable to a Samoan, but I think an American, used to bodily comforts when he does rest, would prefer some scrap iron.

CARE OF THE RUGS

THEIR WELFARE IN SUMMER IS ALL IMPORTANT.

Should Be Thoroughly Cleaned and Alred Before Putting Into Storage—Some of the Best Methods of Caring for Them.

The good housewife is naturally concerned about the summer welfare of fine rugs, and she realizes that if they are used in the hot months they won't be so resplendent in winter. Simply putting rugs away in the proper manner for the summer will sometimes renew fading colors to an astonishing extent.

Before sending the rugs on their storeroom vacation the chamber itself should be well cleaned. Use perfectly cold water for the scrubbing and naphtha soap; then when floor shelves and painted walls are dry go over all the woodwork with clean rags smeared with kerosene. The moth-miller has no fondness for petroleum and so this device alone will keep it out of the storeroom.

The rugs themselves must be thoroughly beaten, cleaned of spots and hung in the broad air for some hours. A Turkish rug will stand a soap and water scrub admirably and where it is feasible a light one may be put entirely in a tub and washed like a sheet. After the airing beat the rug again, using a strong rattan beater, then spread smoothly and spray with a strong black pepper tea. Have prepared some wooden rollers about two inches through and as long as the rug is wide. First put over the rug a sheet made of newspapers pasted together, then place the roller on top of this at one end of the rug and begin to roll, keeping the wooden prop straight all the time. Cover the roll with more paper pasted together, then insert it in a round bag made of tough manila paper and paste all the loose ends securely. As long as there are no loose seams in this outer bag no moths can get in, but a further precaution would be to spray the bag tightly all over with pepper tea.

Cheap rugs and old carpets will not need quite so much care, but if they are to be kept entirely free of moths they should be looked after. Beat, sunbrush and spray these in the same way as rugs, then roll them between newspapers, with a thick sprinkle of gum camphor between the folds. Cover the piles of loose rugs or carpets with burlap, or more newspapers, to keep off dust.

Breaded Salad Eggs.

These dainties are liked by almost all children—old enough to eat them, and if there is any objection to the bread the eggs can be prepared without it. Boil the eggs that will be needed until sure they will be hard and mealy. Leave them for half an hour in cold water, then peel and cut in lengthwise slices. Scoop out the yolks and work them to a paste with olive oil or a little sour cream; add salt and a squeeze of lemon juice and then put in enough toasted crumbs, finely powdered, to make a mixture dry enough to pick up in the fingers. Stuff this in the white shells, cover each one with a sprinkle of crumbs and set in the ice box until needed. At the utmost two halves—a single egg—is enough for an eight-year-old stomach, for these eggs are very substantial.

Onion Salad.

When baking new beets allow two extra ones for this salad, as the baked beets has a finer flavor than plain boiled beets. Spiced beets can be used or canned beets, but the baked beets give preference. Cut the beets into quarter-inch slices, then into strips. Cut a medium-sized Spanish onion into quarters, then slices. Scald and drain quickly and while still hot marinate with a spoonful of fresh dressing and let cool. If you have enough tender white celery to make a cupful into dice, add to the beets and onion. Also a tablespoonful of capers or chopped pickles. Season to taste with salt and pepper, mix and mask with a good dressing.

Ice Help.

After placing in ice chamber of refrigerator sprinkle the ice with coarse salt and cover with a clean cloth; over this put a newspaper, tucking both in tight about the edges. The moisture caused by the salt on top of the ice will make the cloth adhere to the ice and the cloth and paper combined will practically exclude the air. No food should be put into the ice chamber of the refrigerator, as the lid or door to the same ought never to be opened except when absolutely necessary.

To Cook Veal Cutlets.

To cook veal cutlets or steak, so it will be as good as chicken, egg and crumb it and fry brown in hot grease. Then put in a bakingpan and add enough hot water to not quite cover the meat and cook in the oven for an hour. It will be so tender it can be almost cut with a fork and is as good cold as hot.

Dainty Dessert.

Place two tablespoonfuls of apricot jam in dessert glasses and heap over it the whites of an egg beaten stiff, to which has been added one-half dozen macaroons cut fine, one tablespoonful powdered sugar and vanilla to taste. Whipped cream may be substituted for the beaten egg if a richer dessert is desired.

Doll House Library.
A search for a child's short story, "The Griffin and the Minor Canon," in a volume all by itself revealed to a persistent city shopper the thought and money that are expended on the furnishing of dolls' houses. Book stores had not the story in a single volume, but in a department store one young woman interviewed had recently been transferred from the toy department and was able to contribute a helpful hint.

"I think," she said, "you can find it in one of the dolls' houses downstairs." Curiosity had by that time become a sauce to literature, so the shopper hurried downstairs to inspect the doll houses. Three of the most expensive houses contained libraries consisting of a score of diminutive books and each book contained a child's story complete. One of them was "The Griffin and the Minor Canon."

TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Registered at Last to Perfect Health by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Narcissa Waggoner, Carterville, Ill., says: "For over ten years I suffered terribly with backaches, headaches, nervous and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions were unnatural and gave me great trouble. One day I suddenly fell to the floor, where I lay for a long time unconscious. Three doctors who treated me diagnosed my case as paralysis and said they could do nothing more for me. As a last resort, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I am stronger than before in years." Remember the name—Doan's.

TUBERCULOSIS IN THE PRISON

Per Cent. of Suffering is Enormous and There Seems but One Remedy.

From several investigations that have been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis it is estimated that on an average about 15 per cent. of the prison population of the country is afflicted with tuberculosis. On this basis, out of the 80,000 prisoners housed in the penal institutions of the United States at any given time, no less than 12,000 are infected with the disease. If the Philippine Islands and other insular possessions were taken into consideration the number would be much larger. Some of the prisons of Pennsylvania, Kansas and Ohio show such shocking conditions with reference to tuberculosis that many wardens admit that these places of detention are death traps. Similar conditions could be found in almost every state, and in the majority of cases the only sure remedy is the destruction of the old buildings and the erection of new ones.

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies—but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fit me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

And They Wondered!

Judge Nicholas Longworth, who used to sit on Ohio's supreme bench, looked unnaturally grave, and a neighbor, in recognition of his facial depression named a pet owl "Judge-Longworth." It was the very next day that an excited maid broke up his wife's garden party. "Oh, madam," said she. "Madam! Judge Longworth has laid an egg."

In the Desert.
Here is a glimpse of the horrors of a western desert taken from the Goldfield (Nev.) News: "Another desert victim is reported, and Archie Campbell, manager of the Last Chance mining property, near Death valley, came to Goldfield yesterday to endeavor to establish the identity of the unfortunate."
"Mr. Campbell encountered the unknown man on the desert in a frightful condition. He was in the last stages of desert exhaustion, devoid of clothing, sunburned, blistered and crazed, with his tongue swollen enormously, a pitiable object, and unable to speak."
"He was tenderly conveyed to camp but kind aid came too late, for an hour after he had absorbed the first cup of water he expired."

Another Tradition Exploded.
Two Englishmen were resting at the "Red Horse Inn" at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a low tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise, and called a waiter, who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.
"Pon my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously, "I thought he was born in a manger!"—Success Magazine.

Still In Love.
A happily married woman who had enjoyed thirty-three years of wedlock and who was the grandmother of four beautiful little children had an amazing old colored woman for a cook. One day when a box of especially beautiful flowers was left for the mistress the cook happened to be present, and she said, "Yo' husband send you all the pretty flowers you gits, missy?" "Certainly my husband, mammy," proudly answered the lady. "Glory!" exclaimed the cook. "He suttently am holdin' out well."

Embarrassing.
When the new minister, a handsome and unmarried man, made his first pastoral call on the Fosdicks he took little Anna up in his arms and tried to kiss her. But the child refused to be kissed. She struggled loose and ran off into the next room, where her mother was putting a few finishing touches to her adornment before going into the parlor to greet the clergyman. "Mamma," the little girl whispered, "the man in the parlor wanted me to kiss him!" "Well," replied mamma, "why didn't you let him? I would if I were you." Thereupon Anna ran back into the parlor, and the minister asked: "Well, little lady, won't you kiss me now?" "No, I won't," replied Anna promptly, "but mamma says she will!"

Evolution.
Observe constantly that all things take place by change and accustom thyself to consider that the nature of the universe loves nothing so much as to change the things which are and to make new things like them.—Marcus Aurelius.

A Queer Salute.
A French soldier on active service was informed by the mayor of his village that his father had recently died. In acknowledgment he wrote as follows: "Monsieur le maire, I heartily thank you for my father's death. It is a little accident that often happens in families. As for myself, I am in the hospital minus one leg, with which I have the honor to salute you."

A Hermit's Cave.

Close to the city of Sydney, New South Wales, with a train terminus almost at its door, yet hidden away on the rocky shore of one of the bays of the far famed harbor, is a cave dwelling. Here for ten years or more a man of retiring and literary disposition has made his home in a cave. In the center is a draped bed with mosquito curtains. Photographs and colored prints adorn the walls and table. Visitors, of whom there are rather too many, since the recent advent of the trams, to please the hermit, are always struck with the scrupulous cleanliness of everything in this unique dwelling place.—Strand Magazine.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the falling "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by James Gidley

Despair and Despondency

They probably know of some of its many cures. If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. S. C. Smith, a Boyne City banker, made a statement recently relative to local option and its results which very vividly presents some undeniable facts in that connection. Mr. Smith stated that when the saloons were doing business in Boyne City, less than two years ago, a draft for $1,200 would be sent through his bank each week to the Grand Rapids Brewing Company. But since the saloons had been driven from Boyne City through an affirmative vote on local option in Charlevoix county, drafts to the Grand Rapids Brewing Company were no longer sent from that community. But the most important part of Mr. Smith's statement is yet to come. The wages of the working men of Boyne City which had formerly been gathered in the saloon tills to buy this brewing company draft were now finding their way into a larger number of savings accounts, the total increase in the saving deposits in the first year of local option in Boyne City being a little more than 300 per cent. This statement as to the experience of Boyne City makes it quite clear as to the direct interest of legitimate business men in all practical phases of local option controversies. The two hundred dollars per day which a little while ago were being sent to the Grand Rapids Brewing Company from Boyne City are going towards increasing the worth of men and the value of property and the care of children and the comfort of the families in that city. And all honest business men are permanently interested in the furtherance and the accomplishment of these desirable purposes.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments. The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, ceases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—asa general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

A rat got tangled up in one of the dynamos which supply power for the great blast furnace mill of the United State Steel corporation at Gary, Ind., says Louisville Courier-Journal. It required several hours to separate the rat's remains from the dynamo and in the meantime the corporation was losing money at the rate of a thousand dollars a minute. Now the steel trust is advertising for cats. Advertisements have been inserted in the Gary newspapers, offering 50 cents apiece, with no limitations as to age, sex, size, pedigree or character. Fifty cents a head is a good price for cats and the officials of the steel trust are likely to have to contend with an embarrassment of offerings. When the news percolates to all the cities and small towns of Indiana there will be a rush of feline shipments to Gary and the steel trust will find itself with a surplus of cats scarcely less troublesome than the overplus of rats with which it has been contending heretofore. Hundreds of Indiana families will willingly part with all their feline possessions at a compensation of 50 cents per cat. Some thousands of small boys will explore the alleys and woodsheds until the last backyard fence is denuded.

The report from Pisa that royal engineers state that the inclination of the leaning tower at that place has increased eight inches and that the structure is likely to collapse will tend to further increase the number of those who believe that the tower was never intended to be a freak of masonry, but that it became a wonder by the yielding of its foundation on one side. As a "drawing card" for tourists the famous leaning tower has had value in addition to the historic considerations, and if it should fall there would doubtless be a demand for its reconstruction. A modern builder could give Pisa a leaning tower of greater inclination by using an anchored steel skeleton and clothing it with well fastened veneer.

A speaker at a meeting of a medical society in New Jersey declared that some of the greatest surgeons living had left sponges, forceps and other instruments in the abdominal cavities of persons operated upon, and that the practice was "inexcusable." This makes cheerful reading for the lay public, especially that portion of it that has hospital experience in prospect; but the statement of the existence of this practice is also puzzling from the fact that it must be a more or less expensive practice to the surgeons themselves to be so careless about losing good instruments.

Laws Galore to Protect Dumb Animals

By THURDE RAYLE BRUCE

ANTICRUELTY societies, humane societies and endowed and well-supported institutions for the benefit of our speechless animal friends are abundant and these have laws galore. Yet in the city of Chicago horses by the hundreds are abused, mutilated and cruelly tortured on our streets.

In the statutes of Illinois, published in the Humane Advocate, the fortieth annual report of the Humane society, there is a clause reading that "whoever cuts the solid part of the tail of any horse in the operation known as docking, or by any operation performed for the purpose of shortening the tail, and who shall cause the same to be done or assist in doing such cutting, unless such is proved to be a benefit to the horse, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100.

"Concerning Cruelty to Animals" another clause reads, "by carrying or driving, or causing to be carried or driven or kept, any animal in an unnecessarily cruel manner."

Both of these clauses fully cover docked tails, short checkreins and curb bits, now so universally used.

Little attention has been paid to the cruelties of the curb bit. It is an instrument of torture belonging to the dark ages. As it lies across the tongue of the horse it cuts cruelly and brings a horse down to heart-broken submission. The construction on the outside is sufficient to prove its wicked torture.

These bits are largely used by bus drivers and society people, who sport smart equipages. In order to look smart their horses have tails cut so short that they stand erect in the air in an atrocious manner, shamefully disfiguring the horse. As if this was not enough, the curb bit is used and an extra strap is brought across the nose and then the poor animal is checked up so short that it is in misery if it moves.

According to the statutes of these societies all these atrocities could be stopped, the offenders punished and the fines go into the treasuries of the societies.

Will some humane, Christian people interest themselves in our noble friend, the horse, and join the Humane society and Anticruelty society in such numbers that they will force activities among the membership.

Unique Way of Earning Spending Money

By Clarence George Malmrose

A woman whose only asset in the money-making way was a pleasant cottage situated in a shady yard near a summer hotel, last year made a comfortable income for herself through the suggestion of a friend. The friend was at the hotel with her small child, who was rather too old for the extra expense of a nurse, yet who could not be permitted to run wild. "This vacation is no rest for me," moaned the mother. "I'm nothing but a nursemaid, cannot get away from Bobby an hour at a time. I am crazy to accept Mrs. Blayne's invitation for a morning bridge, but how can I with that child tagging at my heels?"

"Let him come over and play in our yard," was the reply. "An imposition," murmured the mother, her face lightening perceptibly. "How I wish there was a day nursery for children of the moderately well off."

"Done," said the woman, who needed money. "I'll start one if you'll be my first patron."

Bobby arrived about ten o'clock and had such a good time playing under the trees, digging in a flower pot, or listening to stories that he did not want to go back to the hotel when his mother appeared, prize in hand.

It was a gay week at the hotel and the next day Bobby returned, accompanied by several small friends, whose mothers were also without nurses.

There was no elaborate preparation, no cut and dried system of amusement. The children played by themselves in safe quarters, with occasional suggestion and supervision from the "lovely lady" on the porch.

There were not even regular hours. It became the habit for mothers who had engagements to leave their little ones for an hour or two while they sailed or climbed or went to a band concert.

Soon one or two women whose children were mere babies, too small to be taken to the dining-room, asked permission to leave the infants safely enconced in their coaches on the porch or under the trees with the fostering care of a woman who needed money.

It was a great convenience to mothers who did not keep a nurse and not a hardship to the child chaperon, as she soon came to be known. She had as real a love of children as her want of money was real and the combination of the two needs worked splendidly.

Aviation Accidents on Rapid Increase

By ANTHONY WAGNER

We frequently read of aviation fatalities and recently the list of those killed is increasing at the rate the sport is growing. I predict that before man can conquer the air there will be an appalling sacrifice, not only in the number killed or injured, but in the terrible deaths some will suffer.

What could be more dreadful, while consciousness lasts, than plunging from a height of hundreds of feet, knowing that mangled must result?

Count Zeppelin's airship was disabled on its initial passenger trip, it being, I believe, the first to carry regular passengers. This serves as a warning that we are decades from a safe commercial end of the game, and it will never be half as safe as transportation on the earth's surface.

We have witnessed balloon ascensions at amusement grounds and have seen the aeronaut descend safely in a small parachute which would weigh but a few pounds.

Why don't the aviators supply their planes or dirigibles with life preservers in the shape of parachutes.

These, however, would not be of much use over water and flights over channels seem to be a recent diversion.

For Hot Weather

When the sun strengthens and blazes in the sky and heat becomes a factor to reckon with in dress, and everything else, millinery must be cool looking or it will fail to be attractive. All white or combinations of white with black, give us the crispest and best effects for the dog days. But white set off with a bit of scarlet, deep blue or leaf green is smart and effective also, and may be chosen instead of white with black.

Black for day time wear is not cool looking except when made of the thinnest fabrics, like lace and net. The big black hats of hair braid or pyroxyline are lacy in texture and the admiration and the darling of the summer girl's heart. This season they belong to the "mystery" class; those hats that come down over the head, veiling the eyes and showing the profile from one side only. The corday hats of net and lace or those made on the "helmet" shapes have captivated as many as the big drooping picture hats.

A lovely hat for the hot weather is shown here made of dead white chip, overlaid with black chantilly lace. A grouping of four immense roses in tulle and silk is mounted across the front, they are almost colorless with a bluish or pale pink at the edges of some of the petals. The effect is of millinery as light as air.

A pretty sailor for practical wear is trimmed with white wings and a coronet of platted ribbon across the front. The shape is a Milan in the natural pale yellow of the finished hat. All the trimming is pure white and a crisp satin faced ribbon is chosen for making the plaiting.

A floating washable lace veil is the thing generally worn with these sailors.

CHARMING LINGERIE GOWN

Exceedingly Pretty Dress Eminently Suitable for Garden Party or River Wear.

A very charming lingerie gown has a smartly cut skirt tucked flounce, upon which appears a row of vandyked insertion, the insertion being continued at the top of the flounce in the same form, and appearing at intervals upon the skirt, the center immediately below the knee being beautifully embroidered. The bodice has a collar of valenciennes lace, insertions of which appear in dainty design upon the bodice and upon the long sleeves and waist belt, the center of the bodice being embroidered to match the skirt. This is an exceedingly pretty and useful model, and is eminently suitable for garden party or river wear. This model is the one illustrated above.

Effective Sofa Pillows. An effective and easily made sofa pillow for a summer home is made in oblong shape, 14 by 20 inches.

The pillow is covered with plain heavy weave crash in ecru or gray. Two inches from each end are bands of flowered cretonne three inches wide crossing the pillow. These bands are edged on both sides with narrow ecru lace applied flat.

Another variation had the body of the pillow of flowered chintz or cretonne with bands of figured ecru linen such as is used for furniture covering. The ends of this pillow have a two-inch wide linen lace in ecru trim-

ART IN WEARING OF SASH

Height and Breadth Can Be Increased or Toned Down by Draping of Sash.

There is a great deal of art in the wearing of a sash. One can increase one's height or one's breadth, adorn a plain gown, tone down an elaborate one, give a touch of distinction to one's whole appearance, simply by the way in which the sash is draped and adjusted.

Try wearing the sash in shawl style over the shoulders, caught by a stitch in back and tucked under the girdle, to fall in diagonal lengths to just above the ankles.

Or wind it twice around the waist, like a girdle; cross it in front and fasten with a knot at the sides of the skirt below the knees.

Then there is the Scotch tartan effect, especially attractive with a plaid scarf, where there is a broad band over the left shoulder, a narrow draped one over the back and the right, and a knot at the waist on the left side, so that the sash falls in a broad width almost to the bottom of the frock.

The adjustment of the sash may well have reference to the concealment of some defect in the garment it covers—a tiny tear, perhaps, or an ineradicable stain. It should emphasize the good points of the figure and hide the bad. That is why the old fashion of the stiff bow at the back was so bad; it made every woman look stout.

Give a little thought to the draping of your sash, and half your battle for beauty of appearance is won.

The Dainty Negligee.

Dainty negligees appeal to most women and when these pretty garments can be made at home without much trouble they are especially interesting. In one model seen recently the material was fine white cross bar dimity and might have been cut by a simple long kimono pattern. The neck was finished with a large shawl collar of persian lawn and valenciennes insertion, and the large flowing sleeves were in the same lingerie effect. Both sleeves and collar were edged with a lace frill. A casing of the lawn was sewed on the gown at short waist length and was threaded with pink ribbons which tied in the front at the ends of the deep collar.

Tulle Roses.

A charming trimming on a pink silk evening dress seen recently consisted of a cluster of five roses, formed of pink tulle, with green tulle stems twisted over thin wire, sewed to the left side of the low neck. The effect was exceedingly attractive, and showed again the value of the little touches to raise a gown from the commonplace.

SIMPLE STATEMENT OF FACT

Mr. Johnson Unable to See Where in Any Way He Had "Put His Foot in It."

It is common to deplore the lack of humor in a person. Yet the very want of it may save a certain amount of embarrassment, as was the case on a certain occasion with President Johnson. "He was one day," says a writer in Harper's Magazine, "visiting my mother, and a friend, Mrs. Knox, a widow, came in. She had known Mr. Johnson some years before, when he was a member of the legislature but they had not met since then.

After mutual recognition, Mr. Johnson said: 'How is Mr. Knox? I have not seen him lately.'

"He has been dead six years," said Mrs. Knox.

"I thought I hadn't seen him on the street," said Mr. Johnson.

"When Mrs. Knox left, my mother said, laughing: 'That was a funny mistake of yours about Mr. Knox.'

"What mistake did I make?" said Johnson. "I said I hadn't seen him on the street, and I hadn't."

One Side Enough. Senator William Alden Smith tells of an Irish justice of the peace out in Michigan. In a trial the evidence was all in and the plaintiff's attorney had made a long and very eloquent argument, when the lawyer acting for the defense arose.

"What are you doing?" asked the justice, as the lawyer began.

"Going to present our side of the case."

"I don't want to hear both sides argued. It has a tendency to confuse the court."—Washingtonian.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Brown case to take the deposition of the chief witness for the prosecution, John Gilmore, a millionaire. In the latter's house the lawyer is attracted by the picture of a girl whom Gilmore explains is his granddaughter, Alison West. He says her father is a rascal and a friend of the forger. Standing in line to buy a Pullman ticket Blakeley is requested by a lady to buy her one. He gives her lower eleven and retains lower ten. He finds a man in a drunken stupor in lower ten and retires in lower nine. He awakens in lower seven and finds his bag and clothing missing. The man in lower ten is found murdered.

Some one was on the floor at our feet, face down, head peering under the berth. Now he got up without apology, revealing the man who had summoned the conductor. He was dusty, alert, cheerful, and he dragged up with him the dead man's suitcase. The sight of it brought back to me at once my own predicament.

"I don't know whether there's any connection or not, conductor," I said, "but I am a victim, too, in less degree; I've been robbed of everything I possess, except a red and yellow bathrobe. I happened to be wearing the bathrobe, which was probably the reason the thief overlooked it."

There was a fresh murmur in the crowd. Somebody laughed nervously. The conductor was irritated.

"I can't bother with that now," he snarled. "The railroad company is responsible for transportation, not for clothes, jewelry and morals. If people want to be stabbed and robbed in the company's cars, it's their affair. Why didn't you sleep in your clothes? I do."

I took an angry step forward. Then somebody touched my arm, and I unditched my fist. I could understand the conductor's position, and beside, in the law, I had been guilty myself of contributory negligence.

"I'm not trying to make you responsible," I protested, as amiably as I could, "and I believe the clothes the thief left are as good as my own. They are certainly never. But my valise contained valuable papers, and it is to your interest as well as mine to find the man who stole it."

"Why, of course," the doctor said shrilly. "Find the man who skipped out with this gentleman's clothes, and you've probably got the murderer."

"I went to bed in lower nine," I said, my mind full again of my lost papers, "and I awakened in number seven. I was up in the night prowling around, as I was unable to sleep, and I must have gone back to the wrong berth. Anyway, until the porter awakened me this morning I knew nothing of my mistake. In the interval the thief—murderer, too, perhaps—must have come back, discovered my error, and taken advantage of it to further his escape."

The inquisitive man looked at me from between narrowed eyelids, ferret-like.

"Did anyone on the train suspect you of having valuable papers?" he inquired. The crowd was listening intently.

"No one," I answered promptly and positively.

The doctor was investigating the murdered man's effects. The pockets of his trousers contained the usual miscellany of keys and small change, while in his hip pocket was found a small pearl-handled revolver of the type women usually keep around. A gold watch with a Masonic charm had slid down between the mattress and the window, while a showy diamond stud was still fastened in the bosom of his shirt. Taken as a whole, the personal belongings were those of a man of some means, but without any particular degree of breeding. The doctor heaped them together.

"Either robbery was not the motive," he reflected, "or the thief overlooked these things in his hurry."

The latter hypothesis seemed the more tenable, when, after a thorough search, we found no pocketbook and less than a dollar in small change.

The suitcase gave no clew. It contained one empty leather-covered flask and a pint bottle, also empty, a change of linen and some collars with the laundry mark, S. H. In the leather tag on the handle was a card with the name Simon Harrington, Pittsburg.

The conductor sat down on my unmade berth, across, and made an entry of the name and address. Then, on an old envelope, he wrote a few words and gave it to the porter, who disappeared.

"I guess that's all I can do," he said. "I've had enough trouble this trip to last for a year. They don't need a conductor on these trains any more; what they ought to have is a sheriff and a posse."

The porter from the next car came in and whispered to him. The conductor rose unhappily.

"Next car's caught the disease," he grumbled. "Doctor, a woman back there has got mumps or bubonic plague, or something. Will you come back?"

The strange porter stood aside.

"Did Anyone Suspect You of Having Valuable Papers?"

"Lady about the middle of the car," he said, "in black, sir, with queer-looking hair—sort of copper color, I think, sir."

CHAPTER V.

The Woman in the Next Car. With the departure of the conductor and the doctor, the group around lower ten broke up, to reform in smaller knots through the car. The porter remained on guard. With something of relief I sank into a seat. I wanted to think, to try to remember the details of the previous night. But my inquisitive acquaintance had other intentions. He came up and sat down beside me. Like the conductor, he had taken notes of the dead man's belongings, his name, address, clothing and the general circumstances of the crime. Now with his little notebook open before him, he prepared to enjoy the minor sensation of the robbery.

"And now for the second victim," he began cheerfully. "What is your name and address, please?"

I eyed him with suspicion. "I have lost everything but my name and address," I parried. "What do you want them for? Publication?"

"Oh, no; dear, no!" he said, shocked at my misapprehension. "Merely for my own enlightenment. I like to gather data of this kind and draw my own conclusions. Most interesting and engrossing. Once or twice I have forestalled the results of police investigation—but entirely for my own amusement."

I nodded tolerantly. Most of us have hobbies; I knew a man once who carried his handkerchief up his sleeve and had a mania for old colored prints cut out of Godey's Lady Book.

"I use that inductive method originated by Poe and followed since with such success by Conan Doyle. Have you ever read Gaboriau? Ah, you have missed a treat, indeed. And now; to get down to business, what is the name of our escaped thief and probable murderer?"

"How on earth do I know?" I demanded impatiently. "He didn't write it in blood anywhere, did he?"

The little man looked hurt and disappointed.

"Do you mean to say," he asked, "that the pockets of those clothes are entirely empty?"

The pockets! In the excitement I had forgotten entirely the sealskin grip which the porter now sat at my feet; and I had not investigated the pockets at all. With the inquisitive man's pencil taking note of everything that I found, I emptied them on the opposite seat.

Upper left-hand waist-coat, two lead pencils and a fountain pen; lower right waist-coat, matchbox and a small stamp book; right-hand pocket coat, pair of gray suede gloves, new, size seven and a half; left-hand pocket, gun-metal cigarette case studded with pearls, half-full of Egyptian cigarettes. The trousers pockets contained a gold penknife, a small amount of money in bills and change, and a handkerchief with the initial "S" on it.

Further search through the coat discovered a card-case with cards bearing the name Henry Pinckney Sullivan, and a leather flask with gold mountings, filled with what seemed to be very fair whisky, and monogrammed H. P. S.

"His name evidently is Henry Pinckney Sullivan," said the cheerful follower of Poe, as he wrote it down. "Address as yet unknown. Blonde, probably. Have you noticed that it is almost always the blonde men who affect a very light gray, with a touch of red in the scarf? Fact, I assure you. I kept a record once of the summer attire of men, and 90 per cent, followed my rule. Dark men like you affect navy-blue, or brown."

In spite of myself I was amused at the man's shrewdness.

"Yes; the suit he took was dark—a blue," I said.

He rubbed his hands and smiled at me delightedly.

"Then you wore black shoes, not tan," he said, with a glance at the aggressive yellow ones I wore.

"Right again," I acknowledged. "Black low shoes and black embroidered hose. If you keep on you'll have a motive for the crime, and the murderer's present place of hiding. And if you come back to the smelter with me, I'll give you an opportunity to judge if he knew good whisky from bad."

I put the articles from the pockets back again and got up. "I wonder if there is a diner on?" I said. "I need something sustaining after all this."

I was conscious then of some one at my elbow. I turned to see the young woman whose face was so vaguely familiar. In the very act of speaking she drew back suddenly and colored.

"Oh—I beg your pardon," she said hurriedly. "I—thought you were—some one else." She was looking in a puzzled fashion at my coat. I felt all the cringing guilt of a man who has accidentally picked up the wrong umbrella; my borrowed caller sat tight on my neck.

"I'm sorry," I said idiotically. "I'm sorry, but—I'm not." I have learned since that she has bright brown hair, with a loose wave in it that drops over her ears, and dark blue eyes with black lashes and—what does it matter? One enjoys a picture as a whole; not as the sum of its parts."

She saw the flask then, and her errand came back to her. "One of the ladies at the end of the car has fainted," she explained. "I thought perhaps a stimulant—"

I picked up the flask at once and followed my guide down the aisle. Two or three women were working over the woman who had fainted. They had opened her collar and taken out her hair-pins, whatever good that might do. The stout woman was vigorously rubbing her wrists, with the idea, no doubt, of working up her pulse! The unconscious woman was the one for whom I had secured lower 11 at the station.

I poured a little liquor in a burling masculine fashion between her lips as she leaned back, with closed eyes. She choked, coughed and rallied somewhat.

"Poor thing," said the stout lady. "As she lies back that way I almost think it was my mother; she used to faint so much."

"It would make anybody faint," chimed in another. "Murder and robbery in one night and on one car. I'm thankful I always wear my rings in a bag around my neck—even if they do get under me and keep me awake."

The girl in blue was looking at us with wide, startled eyes. I saw her pale a little, saw the quick, apprehensive glance which she threw at her traveling companion, the small woman

I had noticed before. There was an exchange—almost a clash—of glances. The small woman frowned. That was all. I turned my attention again to my patient.

She had revived somewhat, and now she asked to have the window opened. The train had stopped again—and the car was oppressively hot. People around were looking at their watches and grumbling over the delay. The doctor bustled in with a remark about its being his busy day. The amateur detective and the porter together mounted guard over lower ten. Outside the heat rose in shimmering waves from the tracks; the very wood of the car was hot to touch. A Cambridge Beauty darted through the open door and made its way, in erratic plunges, great wings waving, down the sunny aisle. All around lay the peace of harvested fields, the quiet of the country.

CHAPTER VI.

The Girl in Blue.

I was growing more and more irritable. The thought of what the loss of the notes meant was fast crowding the murder to the back of my mind. The forced inaction was intolerable. The porter had reported no bag answering the description of mine on the train, but I was disposed to make my own investigation. I made a tour of the cars, scrutinizing every variety of hand luggage, ranging from luxurious English bags with gold mountings to the wicker nondescript of the day coach at the rear. I was not alone in my quest, for the girl in blue was just ahead of me. Car by car she preceded me through the train, unconscious that I was behind her, looking at each passenger as she passed. I fancied the proceeding was distasteful, but that she had determined on a course and was carrying it through. We reached the end of the train almost together—empty-handed, both of us.

The girl went out to the platform. When she saw me she moved aside, and I stepped out beside her. Behind us the track curved sharply; the early sunshine threw the train in long black shadow, over the hot earth. Forward somewhere they were hammering. The girl said nothing, but her profile was strained and anxious.

"If you have lost anything," I began, "I wish you would let me try to help. Not that my own success is anything to boast of."

She hardly glanced at me. It was not flattering.

"I have not been robbed, if that is what you mean," she replied quickly. "I am—perplexed. That is all."

There was nothing to say to that. I lifted my hat—the other fellow's hat—and turned to go back to my car. Two or three members of the train crew, including the conductor, were standing in the shadow talking. And at that moment, from a farmhouse near came the swift clang of the breakfast bell, calling in the hands from barn and pasture. I turned back to the girl.

"We may be here for an hour," I said, "and there is no buffet car on. If I remember my youth, that bell means ham and eggs and country butter and coffee. If you care to run the risk—"

"I am not hungry," she said, "but perhaps a cup of coffee—dear me, I believe I am hungry," she finished. "Only—"

"I can bring your companion," I suggested, without enthusiasm. But the young woman shook her head.

"She is not hungry," she objected, "and she is very—well, I know she wouldn't come. Do you suppose we could make it if we run?"

"I haven't any idea," I said cheerfully. "Any old train would be better than this one, if it does leave us behind."

"Yes. Any train would be better than this one," she repeated gravely. I found myself watching her changing expression. I had spoken two dozen words to her and already I felt that I knew the lights and shades in her voice—I, who had always known how a woman rode to hounds; and who never could have told the color of her hair.

I stepped down on the ties and turned to assist her, and together we walked back to where the conductor and the porter from our car were in close conversation. Instinctively my hand went to my cigarette pocket and came out empty. She saw the gesture.

"If you want to smoke, you may," she said. "I have a big cousin who smokes all the time. He says I am 'kippered.'"

I drew out the gun-metal cigarette case and opened it. But this most commonplace action had an extraordinary result: The girl beamed me stopped dead still and stood staring at it with fascinated eyes.

"Is—where did you get that?" she demanded, with a catch in her voice; her gaze still fixed on the cigarette case.

LEOPARD MOTH MOST INJURIOUS OF INSECTS

Pronounced as One of Worst Pests Attacking Shade Trees—Accidentally Introduced Into This Country From Europe.

Female Leopard Moth.

(By W. E. BRITTON, Ph. D., Entomologist, Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.)

A brief note was printed in the last report of this station regarding the occurrence of the leopard moth in Connecticut. Since this note was published considerable evidence has been brought to our attention of serious damage to shade trees, especially elms, by this insect. Pruning of the trees and especially the removal of dead branches reveals the tunnels of the leopard moth larva, which is a borer in the branches and trunks of many species of broad-leaved trees. Several specimens of the adult moths have been captured in New Haven, but it was not known until recently that the insect is doing much injury to the trees in Connecticut.

The leopard moth is a European pest, and like many other very injurious insects that we now have to fight, was accidentally introduced into this country, being first noticed in June, 1881, at Hoboken, N. J. Three years later Dr. E. B. Southwick found it injuring trees in Central park, New York city, and in 1894 pronounced it one of the worst insect pests attacking shade trees. The leopard moth was soon found in other cities near New York, and in 1907 Mr. A. H. Kirkland, then superintendent in charge of the work of suppressing the gypsy and browntail moths in Massachusetts, called attention to its presence in Boston. During 1909 the writer was informed of its occurrence in Providence, R. I., and also that many of the fine elms of Cambridge, Mass., were threatened with destruction by this insect. The leopard moth is reported by Professor Smith as occurring as far south as Long Branch, N. J. As it first appeared in Hoboken, N. J., it will be seen that like many other European insects introduced into this country it has spread northward much more rapidly than in any other direction.

The position of the caterpillars tunneling in the branches, especially when they are in the tops of large trees, render them exceedingly difficult to reach. If the trees are pruned or otherwise gone over systematically every year or two the borers will certainly be detected and can be treated by injecting a few drops of carbon disulphide from an oil can into each and closing the opening with clay, putty, grafting wax or newly made hard soap. The poisonous fumes penetrate throughout the galleries and will kill the borers therein.

Wilting branches indicate the presence of the borers and should be removed and destroyed. All twigs and limbs that break off during storms should be gathered and burned, thus destroying many of the borers in their tunnels. All female moths should be destroyed wherever found.

MIXING CEMENT AND SAND

A good concrete mixer can easily be made. Take a piece of timber six by six or five by five inches square, cut down the corners, making it eight-cornered as near equal as possible. Have the blacksmith make about 80 wings out of flat iron about one-eighth of an inch thick and two inches wide. Cut the pieces four inches long, cutting about miter slant at each end. Drill two holes about one and one-half inches from one end, bent strips in the middle to a right angle with the same slant as ends are cut. Nail these wings onto the eight-cornered timber, going round and round, making an auger like a conveyor auger in a mill or threshing machine. This auger should be about seven feet long. In the middle of each end of the auger or cylinder bore a hole for a short shaft; a piece of gas pipe will do. Head end of the shaft must be fastened securely. Or bore a hole through end of cylinder and through shaft and fasten with a bolt. On outer end of this shaft fasten securely a pulley ten or more inches in diameter, depending on speed and size of pulley on engine. This pulley should have not less than four inches in face and should not run more than 100 revolutions per minute.

Make a trough for this cylinder to work in, using a plank for bottom just wide enough so wings work free. Use 12-inch boards on sides. Leave top open. Put in head at each end, boring hole in center of foot end and making slot at head end so cylinder can be removed by lifting at pulley and pulling endways. Leave opening at foot end of box for mortar to drop through into a mortar box or on a platform. Make a small hopper on head end of box and close by placing a box large enough to hold a sack of cement. About half way to the other end place a barrel with faucet to supply water. Use measures of proportionate size. A boy puts in a measure of cement to a man's measure of sand, pouring in slowly together. Regulate water by faucet, and the machine will do the rest.

TURNING WASTE INTO VALUE

No System of Farming Has Ever Been Successful Which Does Not Include Keeping of Live Stock.

(By J. E. PAYNE, Colorado Agricultural College.)

The history of the settlement of Western Kansas and Western Nebraska shows that the people who kept much cows were able to hold their claims and make themselves homes, while many of their neighbors who refused to be in partnership with the cow failed. This has been found true of the early settlers of Colorado and other states. Some people are able to get along without cows, but the chances are against the person who makes the attempt.

It seems to be one of the foundation principles of agriculture that no system can long be followed at a profit which does not make provision for returning to the land in some form the elements of fertility taken from it by the crops. So no system of farming has ever been successful for any great length of time in any climate which does not include the keeping of live stock as one of its important features. The successful man, be he manager of a farm or a factory, is the man who plans to turn waste products into value.

Kaffir, milo, sorghum, millet, stock beets, stock melons, the straw from grain, corn stalks and all other rough feed which is produced on the farm is of a nature that market for it is extremely limited. And some variety of this rough feed is produced in large quantities in every community every year. So much is produced that if the growers tried to sell it all directly for cash, it would not bring enough to pay for hauling it to market. As much is produced, forty miles from a railroad as in the community joining the shipping station.

The cow will furnish a home market for all the bulky feed which the farmer can raise, and will take it, delivered at his yard—paying about as much per ton as the care of her owner and his management will permit. The cream produced can be sold for cash, and the farm products will be marketed in concentrated form. What would have required a four-horse team to take to market can be hauled to market, when reduced to cream, in a one-horse buggy.

Bush Beans.

Try bush beans in hills and see whether you like the plan better than drills; that is, drop four or five beans at spaces of about eight inches. The advantage claimed is that better opportunity is afforded for tillage, as the hoe can be worked with ease about the hills.
