All the Green Fields Are Not Far Off.

Properly prepared advertising might easily give attention to the upper peninsula lands just purchased by a syndicate that would make them as attractive as the glowingly painted orange groves of Florida or the tempting homesteads of Oklahoma and the Canadian northwest. Distance has much to do with the enchantment of these far-off green fields, but it can safely be doubted whether they are any more enticing in reality than the agricultural territory all around us or whether they offer financial inducements a whit stronger than our own farming territory.

One has to live on Floridan and Oklahoman land to learn its disadvantages, and then one discovers them quickly. The agents' pretty circulars describe realities for the most part, since deliberate deceit would be suicidal for such enterprises, but they picture the accomplished results of prolonged work and the new arrival finds that he must live for years in economical straits before he can reach the position of his predecessors. He must face, too, the chance of misfortune, frosts, lost crops, unknown pests, and a host of obstacles that always spring up in the path to success, and in the long run he is apt to find that independence is as hard to gain in one part of the world as in another. If it were not so, and if one section offered exceptional inducements and more certain profits than all others, the rush to the favored spot would quickly exhaust its available supply of land.

There isn't any reason why skillful farming in Michigan will not pay as well as skillful farming anywhere. Adaptation to circumstances, specialization in crops suited to the soil and the market, industry and thrift will still bring their reward even in this climate. The enterprise now inaugurated will undoubtedly record its failures and its successes, like all similar enterprises. But it directs attention to the important fact that Michigan has yet much undeveloped farm area and that the competent man may win a fortune on the land without journeying to the remote horizon to seek his pot of gold at the rainbow's foot.—Detroit Free Press.

URGE SLEEPER AS GOV. OSBORN'S SUCCESSOR

Political Friends of State Treasurer Already Busy.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 29.—It became known in Lansing Sunday that several politicians of note in the state were in the capital city Saturday for the express purpose of launching a boom for the candidacy of State Treasurer Albert E. Sleeper for governor two years hence.

Since the statement from Gov. Osborn that he would not be a candidate for re-election there has been considerable activity among several gentlemen who are known to aspire for the job of governor. Mr. Sleeper's name has been prominently mentioned and it is known that he has a large political following who are urging his candidacy.

Letters are being sent several people in the state sounding them as to their choice in the matter.

Prominent among the list of others who are mentioned as being candidates at the expiration of Mr. Osborn's term are: Secretary of State Martindale, of Detroit; John Carton of Flint; Amos S. Musselman, of Grand Rapids; Lieut. Gov. John Q. Ross, of Muskegon, and C. L. Glasgow, chairman of the state railroad commission, whose home is at Nashville.

Fortunes From Rubbish.

Only a few years back sawdust was regarded by owners of sawmills as so much waste to be got rid of anyhow, and as quickly as possible. Anybody could have it, and welcome. Some proprietors even paid people to cart it away. Today all this is altered. Sawdust, so far as being looked upon as rubbish, is greatly prized and turned to account in a hundred different ways in arts and manufacture.

Sugar for instance, is made from it. So, too, alcohol, which is, of course, the basis of all spirits. At a recent banquet attended by famous chemists from all over the world excellent brandy was served which had been distilled from sawdust. It was mellow, of agreeable flavor, perfectly free from any odor or taste of turpentine, and none of the guests knew, until they were told, that it was other than genuine juice of the grape.

Sawdust, again, forms the basis of more than twenty different kinds of explosives. The so-called "white" and "yellow" gunpowder are merely so much sawdust saturated with certain acids. Gas for lighting purposes can be manufactured from sawdust equally as well as from coal. In the lumber regions in Canada, where sawdust is cheap and plentiful, many towns and villages are lighted with sawdust gas. The mode of production is the same as is used for coal gas. The sawdust is baked in retorts and yields from 20,000 to 30,000 cubic feet of gas per ton.

What is known as wood meal fodder for cattle is just sawdust mixed into a mash with hot distillers' wash and flavored with rock salt. It can be fed to the beasts in its fresh state, or it can be dried and pressed into molds like oil cake, or it can be baked in the form of dough. Mortar made from sawdusts is now largely used in building operations.

Sometimes a girl gets even with a man for not asking her to marry him by telling her friends she turned him down.

More than a hundred well-known and influential Michigan newspapers have given publicity during recent weeks to their determination not to give space to any liquor advertising in their columns. This action on the part of the newspapers of Michigan means the surrender of thousands of dollars in earnings that heretofore have been regarded as legitimate. But it has come to be well recognized that newspapers that permit their pages to be used in urging the purchase and use of whiskey and beer and brandy are not entitled to the freedom of the home or the confidence of its members. It may require a little more time for that view of the matter to be fully accepted and generally adopted by newspapers and newspaper patrons but the sentiment is growing and it will continue to grow until it is as fully a matter of recognition and acceptance as if it related to another sort of indecent proposal or to a criminal solicitation.

JOEL JOHNSTON.

The attempt made by a representative of the brewers of Detroit to bribe a resident of Highland Park, a suburb of that city, suggests a very pertinent inquiry. Saloons are not now permitted in Highland Park. The people of that suburb of Detroit are enjoying the benefits of local option. The brewers of Detroit are seeking to have it believed that local option doesn't hurt their business. Why then should they be willing to permit bribery in order to establish saloons in Highland Park? The only possible answer to this question is that through the establishment of saloons in Highland Park they expect to sell more beer and whiskey and to add very largely to the number of persons who patronize saloons. The entire local option controversy is illustrated in that Highland Park bribery effort and the disputed facts involved are so clearly set forth as to be quite easily understood even by the wayfaring man.

Advice Concerning Stomach Trouble and How to Remedy Them

Do not neglect indigestion which leads to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent doctor once said that ninety-five per cent of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25c, 50c and $1.00. FOOD CONSUMPTION GROWING American People Are Not Eating More, but the Number to Be Fed Increases Rapidly.

In 1899 the American hen laid eggs in sufficient numbers during the calendar year to amount to seventeen dozen for each inhabitant of the United States.

The per capita product of milk in the year 1899 was 95.6 gallons per annum. To maintain this per capita for the benefit of our increment of population, says the Atlantic, the milk supply in the year 1910 must exceed that of 1899 by 1,242,300,000 gallons.

To maintain butter, of which the per capita amount produced in 1899 was fourteen pounds, at the same per capita in 1910 the aggregate production must exceed the former figure by 182,000,000 pounds.

Of potatoes, that other staple of human consumption, the per capita product at the last census was about four bushels; hence in 1910 to maintain the potato supply for our newcomers but not to increase it for the rest of the community to the extent of even one potato each (one potato a piece means approximately 180,000 bushels), there must be raised 52,000,000 bushels more of this homely but useful vegetable than were reported in 1899.

What this product means is best noted by observing that to supply it would consume the entire potato crop as reported at the last census of the state of California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland and North Carolina.

Penny Post Increased Mails.

The mails from England to the United States are heavier by 32 per cent, since the postage was reduced to 2 cents, says the British postmaster general's annual report, which has just appeared.

Absent But Not Forgotten.

"One morning when we were in some continental city," says Carl Harris, just back from a trip to Europe with former Mayor George W. Gardner, D. C. McIntyre and A. A. Schantz, "Commodore Gardner and I sat down for breakfast at a hotel where American newspapers were sold. We went out to the newsstand and bought two copies of the Leader and started to enjoy them while our mutton chops were on the fire.

Receptacles for the Baby.

It is a remarkable fact that no other race has shown more skill, ingenuity and careful thought in the preparation of receptacles for the baby than have the American Indians. Of course, there are hamper, baby baskets and glided baby carriages in the department stores and in the homes of the wealthy that in costliness and elaboration surpass the wildest dreams of the red mother of the western plains; but these are exceptional, and at best are mere articles of commerce, to be bought like a pair of shoes or any other commodity, and discarded without a thought when no longer needed.

Where Peter Learned Shipbuilding.

Emperor Nicholas will present to Zaandam, in Holland, a statue of Peter the Great. It was in this village, it will be remembered, that Peter learned shipbuilding for the benefit of his country. The house in which he lived has long been a place of pilgrimage for foreigners visiting Holland. It was restored and inclosed for its preservation by Emperor Nicholas' grandfather.

A Real Philanthropist.

"A rich man who gave away $7,000 worth of drinks is dead."

"Greatly mourned."

"Yes, and sincerely mourned. He didn't insist that the recipients of his bounty raise $7,000 more for drinks."

Lock the Door!

"Well, ma'am; the cheese ran out yesterday and I think the butter will run out today."—Yonkers Statesman

Busy Women

Good System Affords Ample Time for Resting

By ELLA LOUNSBURY

NOT LONG ago I read an article written by a woman who strongly deplored the fate of housewives in general. She declared cooking and dishwashing to be a drudgery, setting forth the argument that intelligent women would not submit to such slavish employment as housework; that they preferred doing stenographic work or something more elevating by which they could earn sufficient to hire the drudgery done, provided their husbands were not financially able to do so.

Having been a business woman, as well as a housewife, I believe I am in a position to be a fair judge in such matters. From my point of view there is nothing so commendable in a woman as her ability to do housework in a systematic and efficient manner. It requires intelligence to do housework without making it a burden.

Every woman should systematize her work so that she would have not only certain days but certain hours for the various duties which arise, and if she displays sufficient energy she will find that she can have all her afternoons in which to do as she pleases.

I pity the woman who finds it necessary to put in three or four hours a day washing dishes! She must be an indolent creature at best and not deserving of an opportunity to rest.

How much time does the business woman find in which to rest? The very shortest days any business house has average seven hours, and at that rate she is working three hours longer in an office or store than she would have to in doing housework.

In doing her own work she is at least her own mistress and not subjected to the orders of a capricious and tyrannical master.

The housewife who systematizes her work finds ample time to improve her mind, whereas the business woman has not a moment to call her own until she gets home in the evening, and then probabilities are that she is so weary she does not feel like delving into anything deeper than an easy chair or a bed.

The housewife's freedom is very much greater in every way than the business woman's, to say nothing of the inconvenience to which the business woman is subjected in having to go to and from her work every day in all kinds of weather, hanging to a strap in a crowded street car, her toes being trampled upon and enduring a hundred other disagreeable things which she is apt to encounter.

Nothing to my mind could be more deplorable than the fact that women find it necessary to enter the business world, as I believe God intended women to use their talents toward the uplifting of men, and how can they expect to uplift men by entering the business field, putting themselves on a common level with the lowest classes, fighting battles that men alone were intended to fight, and, to a very great extent, losing the dependence, delicacy and refinement that women naturally possess?

Good Little Sermons for Business Girl

By N. W. HARDING

For goodness' sake, leave your elbow gloves and French heels at home when you go to work. For the fluffy, frilly places they are all right, but are absurd in the daily grind of business life. I don't mean not to dress neatly or becomingly, but I do beg of you to have a little sense of the eternal fitness of things. Make your sleeves long and your collars high, and your waist-of-material thick enough to serve its rightful purpose, and there will be little fear of your boss telling his friends to come up and see the show.

If you are only getting $6 a week, do the best that you can. You are under obligation to your employer to give him your best, and if he judges that it is worth only $6, why, then it is up to you to stay or go. But for the love of heaven, don't do just what will barely let you through and then stop, arguing that you are only half-paid and will only do half work. You will never be paid full price at that rate, my girl.

If the gas stove explodes or the water tank freezes, don't send up a wail to heaven, thinking it will reach the boss' ears. He isn't in that direction, and besides he wouldn't believe you. What difference does it make to him what it is that makes you late. You're late, aren't you? That's what counts. Suppose somebody sold him a horse and it got loose and ran away before it could be delivered, or his tailor should ruin his suit and came whining that his scissors were dull. You've sold him your time, haven't you? Well, deliver the goods.

Sometimes it's pretty hard not to "talk back" when employer or fellow employee is especially irritable. But it seldom gains a point, and you are sure to "feel better inside" if you keep your peace. Show the other fellow that you, at least, have self-control and make him ashamed of himself.

Those Horrid Stylish Hobble Skirts

By ANNA GOLDBERG

The frequent change of fashion not only causes misfortune to the poor working girl, but it also disgraces civilization. Who would ever believe that such a style as the hobble skirts could ever appear? Skirts so narrow as to prevent the girl from moving her feet!

The other day a young lady wished to board a car, but could not make one step on account of the hobble skirt she wore! She was helped on by a young man who accompanied her.

Does not every woman understand the more comfort there is in dress the better it is for her physical development. We so often ridicule the dress of the Indian and other barbaric people, but the time will surely bring to us the comfortable dress of the barbarian.

Neatness and cleanliness are really the requisites of dress. Women at the present day are highly developed in every branch of intellect and science. Intelligent women ardently preach woman suffrage, which will some day be gained.

But let our great-minded women preach also the abolishment of style, of those hobble skirts, rats, puffs and all such things, which are a disgrace to society.

Beauty and purity of soul, heart and character are much superior to mere beauty of dress.

A PUNCTURED PIPE TOSSES UP WORKMAN

WHACKS 12-INCH MAIN WITH AN AX AND RISES ON MINIATURE GEYSER.

Boston, Mass.—Eugenio Vespucci accidentally whacked a 12-inch water main with an ax while working in Cambridge. Eugenio rose up for a short distance on the hole which his ax had made. A little later he descended with a thud, while the water, unimpeded, shot up to a height of thirty feet. If Vespucci had not attempted to restrain the outburst of the water by sitting on the broken pipe in order to give his compatriots a chance to escape from the trench in which they were working, he would not have risen upon the front elevation of the geyser; but his compatriots might have suffered much more severely than they did.

Shot Up on the Water Spout.

Vespucci and three other men were removing a three-foot pipe belonging to the metropolitan water department which interfered with the progress of the new subway at that particular part of Boylston street in Cambridge.

FALL IN BIG BRIDGE TRAP

Chicago Express Driver With His Horse and Wagon Meet With a Singular Accident.

Chicago.—A man with his horse and wagon was imprisoned in the pit of the half-opened "jack-knife" bridge at Van Buren street for almost two hours, during which time the man faced death, first by being hurled into the depths of the pit and drowned, and again by being kicked to death by the frightened animal, which sought to free himself in vain.

Firemen finally rescued the driver and extricated the horse by means of a derrick.

The man, G. H. Powers, driver for the United States Express company, drove on the bridge as it was being opened. He said he was in a hurry and did not hear a warning signal, neither did he notice the red lights, which the crossing policeman and bridge tender said were burning.

"I only know my horse and wagon suddenly dropped as if we had been swallowed up by the earth," said Powers, describing his experience, "and it seemed weeks before help came. All the time the poor horse was trying to kick itself free, and each time the iron-clad hoof missed my head by a hair. I heard the water below, and was afraid to move for fear I would drop into the river. Once I heard the grating of the bridge and I thought my last minute on earth had come, as I realized the slightest movement of the monster bridge in the wrong direction would mean death.

"I called my horse by name and tried to quiet him, but in vain, and the suspense was terrible. Death was presented in a dozen different ways, and it seemed unreasonable to believe or even dream that I might escape it in all forms."

Endless Chain of Death.

Kirkland, Ala.—When a passenger train struck and killed a cow near here, the results were unusual. The cow was hurled to a side, striking and killing a negro. In falling, the black struck a dog, killing it.

That Interview

By DONALD ALLEN

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Miss Josie Morris was on a visit to her college chum and best friend, Florence Gray. Miss Josie had arrived at the dignified age of twenty, but was still referred to by her acquaintances as "that mischievous minx." On the contrary, Miss Florence, who was a year younger, had dignity enough for a woman of forty, and was not to be compared to a minx, a fox, a wolf or any other animal.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris had been called away from their home for a stay of four or five days. They did not doubt that Florence could manage things during their absence, but they did not take that little "minx" into consideration.

Something was wrong with the auto, and it was not to be taken out of the garage until the father returned. He hadn't left the house an hour before Miss Josie was planning to have it out. She pestered and protested and coaxed, and when the gardener had finally looked the machine over and said he guessed it was all right if not speeded up, Miss Florence reluctantly permitted herself to be coerced.

Off they started one afternoon, with the gardener at the wheel, and at the end of a mile they left the highway, dodged a telegraph pole, tore through a stone wall and brought up in a blackberry patch. No one was killed—no one badly injured. They were just shaken up; and the auto was just smashed.

The accident was heard of, and the city editor of the Eagle assigned a reporter to secure the details in an interview. The gardener, who had just had his scalp wound dressed, said that the thingumbob had suddenly got away from the thingumbob, and that the first thing he knew he didn't know anything, except that the boss would surely give him the bounce when he returned.

"I AM DEAF AND DUMB, YOU MUST WRITE OUT YOUR QUESTIONS"

This was not enough for the Eagle. It wanted thrills and sensations, and the gardener was sent into the house to see if they could be had. A personal interview was requested with Miss Florence Gray. She promptly replied in the negative, but just as promptly "that little minx" came to the front with:

"Oh, it will be delightful! All my life I have longed to be interviewed for a newspaper, but it has never come about."

"But father will be angry."

"Then, you needn't interview. I'll attend to it."

"But you'll make a great long story of it."

"Of course I will; and, oh, Florence, we can have some fun out of it at the same time. We can make it the greatest interview of the twentieth century!"

"What do you mean?" her friend asked.

"You needn't come in the room at all. I'll tie a bandage around my head and another around one of my ankles, and I'll pretend to be deaf and dumb. Get me a pencil and some paper. It will be barrels of fun."

"But—but—"

But she had her way about it. The reporter was shown into the parlor to find one of the victims of the accident nesting in a big easy chair, and he proceeded to say:

"I am from the Eagle, and I shall be most obliged for your story of the accident. Were you sneezing?"

Miss Josie fetched a groan and wrote on a slip of paper:

"I am deaf and dumb. You must write out your questions."

"By George, but this is rather interesting!" exclaimed the reporter. "Deaf and dumb, and a staving looking girl at that! Too blamed bad. First and only interview with a deaf and dumb girl."

And he wrote out the question he had asked before, and she wrote in answer:

"No, we were not speeding. We were just passing a swamp, and I think a bullfrog came out and I tacked one of the front wheels. I felt the machine give an awful shudder, just as a strong man does when he is shot and death comes to him."

"She can't mean that they were attacked by a bullfrog, and yet she says so," murmured the reporter. "It'll make good copy, though. That will come under the head of 'A New Danger to Autoists—Beware the Bullfrog.'"

Then he wrote and asked her why she thought as the auto left the highway and she realized that a smash-up was imminent, and she replied:

"I thought of some popcorn I once bought at Coney Island. It was the best ever. I wish I could find some more like it."

"Here's ingenuousness for you," said the reporter. "She must be all of nineteen or twenty, and yet she has the mind of a girl of ten. What will go under the sub-head of 'Death Staring Her in the Face, and Yet She Thinks of Coney Island Popcorn!'"

Then he wrote and asked her if she could remember her sensations as the machine was plowing its way through the stone wall, and she answered:

"Most vividly. I thought I was in my room and turning handsprings over the bed and cartwheels around it. I had just turned a back somersault and kicked a globe off the chandelier when the auto stopped."

"By George, but she may be a circus or a vaudeville girl!" exclaimed the reporter. "No, she can't be. Her father is a church deacon and in the lumber business. Never heard of a girl turning cartwheels in her own room before. I'll make a daisy thing of this interview."

Then he asked her if at any time during the awful danger she felt the sensation of fear.

"Not at all," was the reply. "On the contrary, there was such a feeling of contentment that I cannot describe it. I seemed to be floating in the air on angels' wings. I could look down on earth and see an old woman frying eggs and bacon, and oh, how I longed for them; I tried to fly down for dinner, but I kept flying higher instead."

"By George! By George!" softly exclaimed the newspaper man. "I'll run that in under the subhead of: 'Hacon and Eggs and Grim Death.'"

Then he asked if she thrilled when the auto at length brought up in the blackberry bushes.

"I felt seven successive thrills pass over me," she replied, "and then I found myself picking blackberries to carry home for a pie. I was cut and bruised and shaken, but I did not feel it. I was languid. I was placid. I was content. If death had come it would have been painless. I think they ought to kill our murderers that way instead of by electricity. That's all."

The Eagle man went away with the "scoop" of his life, and "that little minx" tumbled down on the floor and laughed until she had to be threatened with life imprisonment. The Eagle was watched for next morning, but not a line of that interview could be discovered. It was so the next day, and then the young man called. He was met by the consciousness-stricken Josie, who blushing began to stammer excuses, but was interrupted with:

"Will you please tell the deaf and dumb young lady that I would like to speak to her for a moment?"

"But I am she."

"Yes, I think you are, come to look at you closely."

"And—and you wanted to say?"

"I wanted to say that there were no thrills in that interview the other day until the last. I am going to put them into this at the very start. Where can I find your father?"

"In the city, but—but—"

"No, you don't understand, but I'll explain. I am going to him to ask for the hand of his deaf and dumb daughter, and tell him that I'll provide an asylum for her for the rest of her life."

"Sir!"

"And then I'm going to woo you until you consent to be my wife. No use talking. Just be deaf and dumb about it. I lost the scoop, but I'm going to gain you."

Good Qualities of Electric Clock.

The electric clock is self winding and will remain in accurate operation for a period of at least one year. The winding operation is performed by a dry battery, and if this is of good quality there is no reason why the clock should not run much longer than one year. The movement of this clock is greatly simplified as compared with the spring-driven clock. The winding arm consists of a lever with a weight on the end, and as the winding arm drops to a certain point it closes an electric circuit and energizes an electromagnet. This magnet, by attracting its armature, pulls the "winding-arm" up ready gradually to fall again, applying its weight to running the clock. This "winding" occurs at regular intervals of seven or eight minutes and on this account an electric clock keeps better time than a spring clock.

Maine Out-of-Doors Sleepers.

Sleeping out of doors is a prevailing habit among Skowhegan people. About 50 people, winter and summer, sleep in the open, some having only a piazza to sleep under and others are building sleeping porches. This habit is not among sick people entirely, but people who are apparently well.—Portland Press.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Newburg with the forged notes in the possession of the railroad. He asks Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 10 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and returns to lower 10. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found in a car by a constable. The constable points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The man is arrested and Blakeley is released. Blakeley returns home and finds a note under his door. The note is a picture of the train taken just before the wreck. Blakeley is a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tells him a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Allison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Allison and his partner is off. Allison tells Blakeley about the attention paid her by Sullivan, whom she was on her way to marry when the wreck came. It is planned to give Mrs. Conway the forged notes in exchange for Sullivan. Mrs. Conway kills herself and Bronson, and the ashes of the forged notes are found in the train. Sullivan is found and explains how he is in the power of Bronson, who ordered him to steal the forged notes from Blakeley.

"He would probably be accused of the crime. So, although when the wreck occurred I supposed everyone connected with the affair had been killed, there was a chance that you had survived. I've not been of much account, but I didn't want a man to swing because I left him in my place. Besides, I began to have a theory of my own."

"As we entered the car a tall, dark woman passed us, with a glass of water in her hand, and I vaguely remembered her. She was amazingly like Blanche Conway."

"I see, too, thought the man with the notes was in lower ten, it explained a lot, including that piece of a woman's necklace. She was a fury, Blanche Conway, capable of anything."

"Then why did you countermand that message?" I asked curiously.

"When I got to the Carter house, and got to bed—I had sprained my ankle in the jump—I went through the alligator bag I had taken from lower nine. When I found your name, I sent the first message. Then, soon after, I came across the notes. It seemed too good to be true, and I was crazy for fear the message had gone."

"At first I was going to send them to Bronson; then I began to see what the possession of the notes meant to me. It meant power over Bronson, money, influence, everything. He was a devil, that man."

"Well, he's at home now," said McKnight, and we were glad to laugh and relieve the tension.

Allison put her hand over her eyes, as if to shut out the sight of the man she had so nearly married, and I furtively touched one of the soft little curls that nestled at the back of her neck.

"When I was able to walk," went on the sullen voice, "I came at once to Washington. I tried to sell the notes to Bronson, but he was almost at the end of his rope. Not even my threat to send them back to you, Mr. Blakeley, could make him meet my figure. He didn't have the money."

McKnight was triumphant. "I think you gentlemen will see reason in my theory now," he said. "Mrs. Conway wanted the notes to force a legal marriage, I suppose?"

"Yes."

The detective with the small package carefully rolled off the rubber band, and unwrapped it. I held my breath as he took out, first, the Russia leather wallet.

"These things, Mr. Blakeley, we found in the sealskin bag Mr. Sullivan says he left you. This wallet, Mr. Sullivan—is this the one you found on the floor of the car?"

Sullivan opened it, and, glancing at the name inside, "Simon Harrington," nodded affirmatively.

"And this," went on the detective—"this is a piece of gold chain?"

"It seems to be," said Sullivan, recoiling at the blood-stained end.

"This, I believe is the dagger." He held it up, and Allison gave a faint cry of astonishment and dismay. Sullivan's face grew ghastly, and he sat down weakly on the nearest chair.

The detective looked at him shrewdly, then at Allison's agitated face.

"Where have you seen this dagger before, young lady?" he asked, kindly enough.

"Oh, don't ask me!" she gasped, breathlessly, her eyes turned on Sullivan. "It's—it's too terrible!"

"Tell him," I advised, leaning over to her. "It will be found out later, anyhow."

"Ask him," she said, nodding toward Sullivan.

The detective unwrapped the small box Allison had brought, disclosing the trampled necklace and broken chain. With clumsy fingers he spread it on the table and fitted into place the bit of chain. There could be no doubt that it belonged there.

"Where did you find that chain?" Sullivan asked, hoarsely, looking for the first time at Allison.

"On the floor, near the murdered man's berth."

"Now, Mr. Sullivan," said the detective, civilly, "I believe you can tell us, in the light of these two exhibits, who really did murder Simon Harrington."

Sullivan looked again at the dagger, a sharp little bit of steel with a Florentine handle. Then he picked up the locket and pressed a hidden spring under one of the cameos. Inside, very neatly engraved, was the name and a date.

"Gentlemen," he said, his face ghastly. "It is of no use for me to attempt a denial. The dagger and necklace belonged to my sister, Alice Curtis!"

CHAPTER XXXI.

And Only One Arm.

Hotchkiss was the first to break the tension.

"Mr. Sullivan," he asked suddenly, "was your sister left-handed?"

"Yes."

Hotchkiss put away his notebook and looked around with an air of triumphant vindication. It gave us a chance to smile and look relieved.

were mainly silent. My thoughts would slip ahead to that hour, later in the evening, when I should see Allison again.

I dressed in savage haste finally and was so particular about my tie that Mrs. Kipton gave up in despair. "I wish, until your arm is better, that you would buy the kind that hooks on," she protested, almost tearfully. "I'm sure they look very nice, Mr. Lawrence. My late husband always—"

"That's a lover's knot you've tied this time," I snarled, and, jerking open the bow knot she had so painfully executed, looked out of the window for Johnson—until I recalled that the no longer belonged in my perspective. I ended by driving frantically to the club and getting George to do it.

I was late, of course. The drawing room and library at the Dallas country home was very empty. I could hear billiard balls rolling somewhere and I turned the other way. I found Allison at last on the balcony, sitting much as she had that night on the beach—her chin in her hands, her eyes fixed unseeingly on the trees and lights of the square across. She was even whistling a little, softly. But this time the plaintiveness was gone. It was a tender little tune. She did not move, as I stood beside her, looking down. And now, when the moment had come, all the thousand and one things I had been waiting to say forsook me, precipitately beat a retreat and left me unsupported. The arched moon sent little fugitive lights over her hair, her eyes, her gown.

"Don't—do that," I said unsteadily. "You—you know what I want to do when you whistle!"

She glanced up at me and she did not stop. She did not stop! She went on whistling softly, a bit tremulously. And straightway I forgot the street, the chance of passers-by, the

"I Understand Now What Puzzled Me Then."

After all, Mrs. Curtis was dead. It was the happiest solution of the unhappy affair. McKnight brought Sullivan some whisky and he braced up a little.

"I learned through the papers that my wife was in a Baltimore hospital and yesterday I ventured there to see her. I felt if she would help me to keep straight, that now, with her father and my sister both dead, we might be happy together."

"I understand now what puzzled me then. It seemed that my sister went into the next car and tried to make my wife promise not to interfere. But Ida—Mrs. Sullivan—was firm, of course. She said her father had papers, certificates and so on, that would stop the marriage at once."

"She said, also, that her father was in our car, and that there would be the mischief to pay in the morning. It was probably when my sister tried to get the papers that he awakened and she had to do what she did."

It was over. Save for a technicality or two, I was a free man. Allison rose quietly and prepared to go; the men stood to let her pass, save Sullivan, who sat crouched in his chair, his face buried in his hands.

McKnight saw her, with Mrs. Dallas, to their carriage and came back again. The gathering in the office was breaking up; Johnson had slipped away as unostentatiously as he came. Sullivan, looking worn and old, was standing by the window, staring at the broken necklace in his hand. When he saw me watching him, he put it back on the desk and picked up his hat.

"If I cannot do anything more—" he hesitated.

"I think you have done about enough," I replied, grimly, and he went out.

I believe that Richey and Hotchkiss led me somewhere to dinner and that, for fear I would be lonely without him, they sent for Johnson. And I recall a spirited discussion in which Hotchkiss told the detective that he could manage certain cases, but that he lacked induction. Richey and I voices in the house behind us. "The world doesn't hold anyone but you," I said, reverently. "It is our world, sweetheart. I love you."

And I kissed her.

A boy was whistling on the pavement below. I let her go reluctantly and sat back where I could see her.

"I haven't done this the way I intended to at all," I confessed. "In books they get things all settled and then kiss the lady."

"Settled?" she inquired.

"Oh, about getting married and that sort of thing," I explained with elaborate carelessness. "We could go down to Bermuda—or—or Jamaica, say in December."

She drew her hand away and faced me squarely.

"I believe you are afraid!" she declared. "I refuse to marry you unless you propose properly. Everybody does it. And it is a woman's privilege: she wants to have that to look back to."

"Very well," I consented with an exaggerated sigh. "If you will promise not to think I look like an idiot, I shall do it, knee and all."

I had to pass her to close the door behind us, but when I kissed her again she protested that we were not really engaged.

I turned to look down at her. "It is a terrible thing," I said, exultantly, "to love a girl the way I love you and to have only one arm!" Then I closed the door.

From across the street there came a sharp crescendo whistle and a vaguely familiar figure separated itself from the park railing.

"Say," he called, in a hoarse whisper, "shall I throw the key down the elevator shaft?"

THE END.

PRACTICAL NEST FOR CURING PERNICIOUS HABIT

Simple and Satisfactory Device Illustrated That Prevents Hens From Eating Eggs—How It Is Put Together.

One of the most practical nests ever seen for curing the egg-eating habit of hens is the one used by J. T. McDonald of Delaware county, N. Y. It is so simple and so satisfactory in other ways as well that it should become widely popular, not only with poultrymen whose hens have acquired this habit, but with all who wish to obviate it and to have clean eggs, says the American Agriculturist. Mr. McDonald's flock of about 500 hens had developed a taste for fresh eggs to such an extent that scarcely any eggs were being gathered, so he built a fitted nest, with a sacking bottom, which passed under a semi-partition of wood to a covered part, into which the eggs roll as soon as laid.

The drawing shown herewith gives a good idea of the plan. A frame four inches wide is made of half-inch stuff, clear, nearly two inches wide, is nailed. This leaves a two-inch space below the cleat. Then a bottom is nailed on one-half the box, the other half being left vacant. Above the cleat a strip three or four inches wide is nailed, and to this a hinged door is fastened so as to lift upward. Then an old sack is tacked around the upper edges of the frame at the open end, drawn under the cleat and tacked around the other end of the frame, so as to make a slight pocket. In this end some chaff is placed; in the open or nest end some china eggs are fastened by strings three or four inches long, so they will move freely. Mr. McDonald uses glass eggs with small knobs on them, or real eggs filled with plaster paris, in which knotted cords are imbedded while the plaster is wet. The nest is then placed

Nest to Cure Egg-Eating.

The size will depend upon the breed of fowls kept, but about 14 inches wide and 28 long will be found satisfactory for Leghorns. In the center and on the upper half of the long sides a with a slight tilt toward the covered end, so the newly laid egg will roll out of harm's way. Not only did Mr. McDonald secure plenty of eggs at once, but every egg was clean.

MICE INJURE FOREST TREES

During Winter Months Little Rodents Gnaw Bark About Base of Trees Which Frequently Results in Complete Girdle.

(By CHAS. E. THORNE, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.)

For some years catalpa, mulberry and other trees commonly grown, have suffered considerable injury by the attacks of field mice. During the winter months these rodents gnaw the bark about the base of the tree to a greater or less degree, which frequently results in a complete girdle. When girdling occurs below the root crown the trees usually die. The amount of injury varies with the severity of the winter, although a season rarely passes without reports of occurrence. During the winter of 1909-10, characterized by deep snows and severe cold, ravages to an extent heretofore unknown were reported from all sections of the state.

There are no practical means of exterminating field mice, although certain operations are helpful in preventing their attacks on trees. It has been observed that injury is greater and more general where dead grass, mulch or debris of any kind lies close to the trees. Material of this nature affords the harboring place, from under which cover mice prefer to operate. Before winter sets in all grass or mulch material of any kind should be raked away from the trees for a radius of at least two feet, leaving the ground as bare as possible. Where mulch culture is used a foot or two about each tree should be left bare. Injury is more severe on those trees whose root systems set high on the ground; that is, in cases where freezing and thawing have caused heaving. Such trees afford cavities in which mice harbor, and complete girdles usually result fatally if below the point where root and stem join. Throwing a few shovelfuls of dirt about the trees has given satisfactory results.

Trees which have been more than half girdled should be cut off an inch about the root collar and sprouts allowed to grow from the stumps. In the case of trees over three or four years of age all sprouts may be permitted to stand the first season, and all but the most thrifty removed the winter following. In some cases all but the most thrifty may be removed when a foot high. The one remaining must be staked in order to prevent its breaking off or becoming distorted.

Mice injury in some cases has caused a large percentage in loss of trees, particularly in catalpa groves, and parties possessing these groves will doubtless profit by taking precautionary measures in preventing as far as possible the attacks of these rodents.

PROFIT IN SKUNK FARM

Majority of Failures Due to Lack of Experience With Animals' Habits—Much Time and Energy Needed.

(By H. K. FISHER.)

From time to time skunk farms have been established, but from some cause, probably lack of experience, cost of feeding the animals, or fencing the inclosures, the industry was soon discontinued.

The majority of people who start in this business seem to think that the animals will take care of themselves, and do not appreciate that, to make a success, they will have to devote a great deal of time and energy.

This is true in regard to the domesticated animals and is doubly so where wild ones are concerned. There is no reason why a man should not succeed in the skunk business, if he is fond of animals and is willing to get well acquainted with their habits.

EXCELLENT SILVER WYANDOTTE

Farmers who want hens of good size that lay well, sit well, raise and take care of broods well, can do no better than to choose the Silver Wyandotte. The variety here pictured matures in about five months, by which time pullets properly bred and managed should begin to lay. When given free range the fowls will practically maintain themselves most of the year. Like the Plymouth Rock and the Rhode Island Red, the Wyandotte is one of the most justly popular breeds in this country.

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation.

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope, they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic. Price 25 cents.

Funds to Fight Tuberculosis. Based on reports from all parts of the United States the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued a statement which shows that in 1910 nearly $15,000,000 was spent in the fight against tuberculosis, as opposed to $8,000,000 spent in 1909. The largest item of expense in 1910 was for treatment in sanatoria and hospitals, $11,376,500 being expended for that purpose, or more than double the amount for 1909.

The anti-tuberculosis associations spent $760,500, and the tuberculosis dispensaries $889,000. The special municipal and state expenditures aggregated $1,750,000.

The statement declares that the most significant fact in the survey of the year's work is the increase in the percentage of public money spent. While in 1909 53.5 per cent. of the total expenditure was from federal, state, municipal or county funds, 62.5 per cent. came from public appropriations in 1910. The actual amount of public money spent in tuberculosis work this past year was $9,267,900, or more than double the amount from this same source in 1909. This fact indicates, the national association declares, that anti-tuberculosis associations are gaining ground, by securing increased appropriations from public money.

FREE IRRIGATION

Places Michigan in Advance of Western Competitors in Fruit Raising.

Grand Rapids men interested in western Michigan development are taking note these days of the reports in Chicago papers regarding the failing irrigation companies of Montana, Washington and Oregon, and are asking what is to become of the great fruit orchards of those districts, to which irrigation has been a necessary adjunct. The Conrad Lapid and Water company of Montana and the Big Lost River Irrigation company of Idaho, which have furnished moisture for so many big orchards of that western fruit district, have passed into the hands of receivers.

According to the Grand Rapids boosters the one great difference between western Michigan as a fruit growing region and the fruit sections along the Pacific slope, particularly in the northwest, is that with the latter the moisture necessary to a good crop must be secured by artificial means, while here, nature answer-the purpose. Irrigation in the northwest has cost millions of dollars and these companies have become bankrupt because they need some more millions and cannot get them. Fruit growing lands in the west come high and after the land is paid for the expense has only begun, the annual cost of irrigation being something frightful.

An attache of the Western Michigan Development Bureau stated yesterday that westerners, having developed the fruit growing habit, are beginning to see the burden of this irrigation and the way it cuts into profits, and they are now turning their attention to Michigan. The failure of the irrigation companies will be a still harder blow to the western district. That it will drive many fruit growers into selling their orchards and moving east is confidently believed. Michigan has proven that it can produce the goods and the natural irrigation from the clouds, that it comes without license or tax, is proving attractive. It is claimed that correspondence from the west, the result of the exhibit at the Chicago land show, and a study of Michigan conditions indicate a distinctive hit and buyers of Michigan lands, from that section are looked for in the near future.

 ball teams went to Bellaire last Friday to play the teams of that place.
 The score of the boys game was 31 to 19 in favor of Bellaire. The game was fast and very exciting although the score does not show it. Our girls lacked practice and as a result were defeated by a score of 19 to 3.

The Plane Geometry classes began work in construction this week.

The basketball team was blown down by the stormy wind last Sunday evening and now the high school teams are deprived of a place in which to practice and play basket ball.

The Arithmetic class is making out
 Bills and Receipts this week.

Flashlight pictures were taken of the high school assembly room, the chemistry laboratory, the H. S.
 music and orchestra on Wednesday.

After La Grippe

"I had suffered several weeks with La Grippe. Had pains in my head and eyes. It felt as though there was a heavy weight on the top of my head, until it seemed that my brain would burst. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. When I dozed off I would awake with a sudden jerking of my whole body. Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart, Remedy and Nerve and Liver Pills cured me. A number of friends have since realized the same benefits."

MRS. ALVIN H. LOCKS,
 Seabrook, N. H.

The after effects of La Grippe are often more serious than the disease, as it leaves the system in a weakened condition that invites more serious troubles,
 such as pneumonia, etc.

Dr. Miles'

Restorative Nervine

should be taken for some time to thoroughly restore nerve strength.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle does not benefit your druggist will return your money.

A special Saturday afternoon Matinee is planned at the Family Theatre for each Saturday, commencing at 2:30 p. m. Admission 5c. This will afford visitors from the country an opportunity of seeing the motion pictures and illustrated songs.

While driving across Walloon Lake from the Von Platen road with a heavy load of logs a team of horses belonging to Joe Corwin of Walloon broke through the ice and were nearly drowned. Several men worked faithfully for an hour before the horses were released from their cold bath. The sleighs and logs are at the bottom of the lake.—Boyne Journal.

Mr. Christian of Chicago, who is an expert in theatre planning and construction made East Jordan a second visit on Friday. He says the combination of Roller Rink and Theatre has worked out profitably in other places, and cites a small town in Pennsylvania where the combination has operated for six years and still making money, and sees no reason why it shouldn't pay here.

A painting sketch of the proposed New Theatre and Amusement House will be on exhibit for a few days in the window of Lovedar's Real Estate Office, showing just how the building will appear erected on the same site of the burned Opera House. It certainly will make a great addition to the appearance of the street, show up well from the lake, and be something we could all well be proud of. Whether we get it, all depends on how strong the "Booster" germ is working.

Mr. A. H. Sheppard and family returned to East Jordan on Friday after having spent a year farming in Sanilac Co. Mr. Sheppard thinks highly of that country. Hay and beans being the principal crops. Some farmers growing as high as ninety acres of beans. Mr. Sheppard himself harvested 90 acres of hay and 24 acres of beans on the farm he worked and brought back with him a carload of hay, after selling several tons before moving. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada is one of the most progressive companies doing business today in the world. In looking over the annual statement for the past year we find that large gains were made in all important items. The Company is growing stronger as each year rolls around.

The Company paid to policyholders last year nearly three million, and since organization the amount is $23,243,167. The life assurance in force stands at nearly 130 millions. The Company's growth during the past ten years is as follows: Income in 1899, $2,596,207—in 1909, $7,778,132; assets in 1899, $9,247,664—in 1909 this item is $32,804,996; the life assurances in force in 1899 were $52,806,035—in 1909 this item is nearly 130 millions.

This is certainly fine progress, and one the officers and stockholders may be proud of. The Company is well managed by President Robertson Macaulay and Managing Director T. B. Macaulay.

They are piloting this staunch old Company along safe lines, and have built up an institution which is looked upon as one of the strongest life insurance companies in the world.—Insurance News, Philadelphia.

Everything indicates that the first annual poultry show of the Charlevoix Poultry Association to be held February 9, 10 and 11 will be one of the most successful exhibitions of high grade poultry ever shown in this part of the state. If you wish to see a splendid showing of poultry don't fail to attend this poultry show.

A general pension bill has passed the house of representatives, granting pensions of from $12 to $36 per month to all soldiers who served not less than 90 days in the civil war and 60 days in the Mexican war. The only requirement is that they shall have attained the age of 62 years. The general scale of pensions fixed in the new bill is as follows: Sixty-two years, $15 a month; 65 years, $20 a month; 70 years, $25 a month; 75 years, $30 a month. It was shown that 100 veterans are dying every 24 hours. The bill passed by a vote of 212 to 92.

Pellston is practically isolated from the outside world as far as railroad traffic is concerned. The head of the G. R. & L. railway at Grand Rapids, has issued a general order that no passenger trains are to stop at Pellston to receive or discharge passengers, baggage or express, while the serious smallpox situation continues there, and that mail will be received and discharged through the medium of the mail crane. Dr. Shanway of Lansing, secretary of the state board of health, visited the place last week upon request of the village council and ordered a more rigid enforcement of the quarantine and other precautions to prevent the spreading of the disease.

The New Battleship Masts

U.S. BATTLESHIP COALING FROM A COLLIER, SHOWING NEW STYLE MASTS

SEARCHLIGHT STATIONS ON NEW BATTLESHIP MAST

NEW STYLE MAST FROM BELOW

SHOWING NEW STYLE MASTS COMPLETE

THE officials who have the say of things at the U. S. navy department have evidently become thorough converts to the advantages of the new style masts, or "fire control towers," as they are technically termed, which have been installed on most of the United States battleships and are now being placed on the others. The government has been experimenting with these new "peach basket" masts for several years now, but it is only lately that there has come evidence that the new wrinkle has been finally and definitely adopted as an adjunct of Uncle Sam's approved type of warships.

The new masts are so unique and so radically new that it is small wonder that the other powers have been prone to go slow in introducing such an innovation. No other nation in the world has anything of this sort on its fighting craft and so naturally Uncle Sam could not profit by the experience of anybody else. Then, too, it costs thousands and thousands of dollars to build and install one of these great skeleton steel structures and naturally the navy department wants to be right ere it goes ahead in the matter. This stage has now been reached.

First of all an experimental mast was rigged up on the monitor Florida, and in order to try out the new invention under actual war conditions the monitor was anchored in Hampton Roads and shells were hurled at the mast by the huge guns on a warship stationed some distance away. The new kind of tower withstood the gunfire well enough to justify many of the claims which had been made for the invention theoretically. Thereupon Uncle Sam went ahead and ordered such masts installed on a number of the old battleships of our navy and on those then building. A total of 22 masts were thus put in service and then a halt was called in order to make thorough exhaustive tests of the new masts under every imaginable condition of sea service. It is this period of probation which has just now come to an end. There were rumors at one time that the new style mast had been pronounced a failure and would be discontinued, but this proved unfounded. The new invention has been officially endorsed and now the work will proceed of not only providing such masts on all our battleships but also on the armored cruisers. The new "woven wire" or "peach basket" mast, as they are familiarly called, are primarily observation towers and their function is an integral part of the modern "fire control" system of our battleships—the system for directing and governing the gunnery fire in time of battle. The peculiar construction of the new structures is to be attributed to a desire to safeguard the electrical and other communicative lines upon which the greatest dependency is placed in time of battle—the nerves of the battleship, as it were. For years there was a constantly increasing storm of criticism against the tapering steel tubes known as military masts, with which the battleships were formerly fitted. It was claimed that a single well-placed shot from an enemy's 12-inch gun would sever that style mast and in addition to heavy loss of life would rob the ship of its observatory and searchlight station. On the other hand it is claimed that an enemy might shoot away fully 75 per cent. of the steel latticework comprising one of the new cylindrical towers without putting it out of commission. Indeed, tests have proven that an enemy would have to sever at least 46 of the steel tubes comprising one of these new style masts ere it would topple over. The average mast or tower as installed on one of our battleships is 90 feet in height and stands 120 feet above the water line. The base of the mast is circular, ranging in diameter from 20 to 26 feet, but all masts have a uniform diameter of 9 feet 6 inches at the top. Each mast is crowned with a platform 10 feet square, the 100 square feet of space thus provided being ample for the observers and the electrical and mechanical signaling devices which enable these lookouts to communicate with the officers on the ship below.

The tower is circular in form—or, to be exact, the shape of the tower might be designated as that of a truncated cone the exterior surfaces, being slightly concave near the top. This outline not only helps the tower to withstand wind strains but makes it possible to employ what is known as the double spiral construction, which makes for stability in the highest degree. By this scheme the steel tubes are arranged in such a manner that half of them slant from right to left, while the remainder incline in the opposite direction. Each individual tube terminates at the top platform on exactly the opposite side of the tower from that at which it started at the base. Further stability is contributed by steel rings—double rows of them encircle the framework at intervals from the base to the top. These rings act as braces for the double spiral network of tubing and to insure a uniform distribution of all strains the tubing is fastened to each row of rings.

STUBBORN ECZEMA ON HANDS

"Some nine years ago I noticed small pimples breaking out on the back of my hands. They became very irritating, and gradually became worse, so that I could not sleep at night. I consulted a physician who treated me a long time, but it got worse, and I could not put my hands in water. I was treated at the hospital, and it was just the same. I was told that it was a very bad case of eczema. Well, I just kept on using everything that I could for nearly eight years until I was advised to try Cuticura Ointment. I did so, and I found after a few applications and by bandaging my hands well up that the burning sensations were disappearing. I could sleep well, and did not have any itching during the night. I began after a while to use Cuticura Soap for a wash for them, and I think by using the Soap and Ointment I was much benefited. I stuck to the Cuticura treatment, and thought if I could use other remedies for over seven years with no result, and after only having a few applications and finding ease from Cuticura Ointment, I thought it deserved a fair trial with a severe and stubborn case. I used the Ointment and Soap for nearly six months, and I am glad to say that I have hands as clear as anyone."

"It is my wish that you publish this letter to all the world, and if anyone doubts it, let them write me and I will give them the name of my physician, also the hospital I was treated at." (Signed) Miss Mary A. Bentley, '93 University St., Montreal, Que., Sept. 14, 1910.

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous arsenic or alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Callispora Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Syriatica), Black Cherry bark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number, and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn, and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fever; for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is a "just as good" and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making it at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take one pint of granulated sugar, add 1/2 pint of warm water and stir about 2 minutes, you have a good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $2.00. It keeps perfectly. And you will find the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

TRAGEDY OF OLD OCEAN

Disappearance of Captain and Crew Never Was Satisfactorily Explained

THE mystery of what became of the master and crew of the British bark Invincible, which sailed from New York for Santa Rosalia, Cal., and was found at anchor and abandoned off the Falkland Islands, recalls vividly to the nautical minds the fate of the brig Mary Celeste of New York, for nearly forty years the prize riddle of the sea, the Bangor (Me.) correspondent of the New York Times writes. The Mary Celeste sailed from New York for Genoa with a cargo of petroleum and alcohol. She was commanded by Capt. Benjamin S. Briggs of Marlon, Mass., with Albert G. Richardson of Stockton, Me., as first mate; Andrew Grilling of New York as second mate and Edward William Head of New York, Volkert Lorenzer, Arien Harbens, B. Lorenzer and Gottlieb Goodhood, all of Germany, as the crew. The captain's wife and small child were also on board. The brig was in first-class condition, well manned and well equipped in every way, and when she sailed from New York on November 17, 1872, the whole ship's company was happy and contented. Yet none of them was ever again seen, dead or alive. The brig was found on December 4 on the Azores, drifting aimlessly about in light winds, with her head sails set and all her other canvas down. There was nothing to show why she had been abandoned or what had become of her people. She was thus found by the brig Dei Gratia, from New York for the Mediterranean, and after a careful examination Captain Moorehouse of the Dei Gratia put a prize crew on board and sent her into Gibraltar, where she arrived on December 13, 1872, and was turned over to the admiralty court. Her owners refused to pay the heavy salvage demanded and let the salvors take her.

"Fanny, my dear wife." Whether these words were written by the mate merely as an expression of affection while thinking of home, or in a moment of panic and despair when about to abandon the vessel, can only be conjectured. There was nothing else about the vessel to indicate the state of mind prevailing on board when she was abandoned. The date of this last entry in the mate's log was November 24. When ten days later she was boarded by men from the Dei Gratia her stern boat was gone and it appeared that some food, probably canned goods, had been taken from a locker. Otherwise everything was in such ship-shape that, but for the date of the last entry in the log, the Dei Gratia's men could have sworn that the vessel had been abandoned within an hour. Her running rigging was all properly made fast and the slack coiled neatly on deck or over the masts. The companionways were open, half-turned music lay upon the rack of the little cabinet organ in the cabin and children's toys were scattered upon the floor. In the captain's stateroom his gold watch hung at the head of his berth and in his wife's room the impress of a child's head was distinct upon the pillow.

In the 38 years that have elapsed since the Mary Celeste was abandoned countless stories, all more or less fanciful, have been written about her, and numerous theories have been advanced in explanation of this greatest of sea riddles. Mutiny, disease and piracy have been suggested. In 1877 a story was circulated to the effect that Mate Richardson had been seen hiding in the West Indies, and that he and members of the crew had murdered the captain and stolen many thousands of dollars that the vessel was carrying.

As a matter of fact, the Mary Celeste carried no money of any amount. As late as 1897 another yarn was published to the effect that a sailor, who claimed to have been the mate of the Dei Gratia, had made a death-bed confession in Iquique, saying that when he boarded the Mary Celeste he found that all hands, except Captain Briggs, his wife and the cook, had died of smallpox, and that he, Jacob Howell, the confessor, had thrown all three of the survivors overboard, taken $8,000 in gold that Mate Richardson had been carrying for the purpose of "going into business in Africa," and then had returned to the Dei Gratia with the report that the Mary Celeste had been found completely abandoned. This absurd story was first published in San Francisco and later found its way to Maine. It was, on the face of it, a pure invention, like the story of the murder of the captain. The only reasonable explanation is that her master and crew became alarmed by the rumbling of the cargo and, fearing that her decks would be blown off by the accumulation of confined gas from the petroleum and alcohol, got out of her in a hurry. It is well known that oil cargoes confined under tightly battened hatches will generate gases, especially when the vessel is pitching and rolling in heavy weather, and that these gases, thus confined, will cause a loud rumbling noise like distant thunder. The log of the Mary Celeste contains numerous allusions to rumblings below decks, and indicates a fear among her officers and crew that an explosion would take place. Evidently, if this theory holds, Captain Briggs did not know that the danger might have been averted by removing the hatches and allowing the gases to escape, as is often done. Assuming that the Mary Celeste's people left her in a great hurry, alarmed at the danger of an explosion, the question arises, "What became of them?" The theory generally accepted by seafaring men is that they tried to make a landing on the Azores, and that the boat was capsized in the heavy surf, although there is no record of either the boat or any of the bodies ever having been found.

CRUISING IN THE POLAR SEAS

A TOILER ON A WHALER

There is one branch of the United States naval service in which men and officers alike undergo wild adventures, see strange sights and suffer great hardships. It is the Alaskan revenue cutter service. Pursuing criminals in a country wilder even than the balliwick of the Canadian mounted police, sailing uncharted arctic seas, capturing Japanese seal smugglers, studying ethnological and geographical conditions among unnamed races and unmapped countries, their lives are filled with the romance and the privations, the mystery and the revelations of the true pioneer.

Lieut. LeRoy Reinburg, who is in charge of the revenue cutter Patrol at Chicago, saw service in the polar seas in a three years' cruise aboard the cutter Thetis, which ended in October, 1909. His trips took him thousands of miles, from Cape Attu, the most westerly point of Uncle Sam's dominions, and one of a tiny island group tucked away almost within the sweep of the Asiatic coast, to 81 degrees north latitude, up beyond Cape Hope and Cape Barrow, on the northern coast of Alaska. Some day Lieutenant Reinburg is going to publish the account of those three years, in which the Thetis and her crew represented the United States and the sovereign law in places where both are but shadowy tales. He will tell of ice packs miles and miles in extent, in one of which the powerful cutter lay helpless for two weeks, and of a whaler, which, less fortunate and less stanch, crushed like an egg and went down with all hands. He will tell of cold and hunger—of men found dead on ice packs and starving natives herding together by the hundreds; of adventures comic and tragic and marvelous. To a reporter he recounted some of his wanderings.

Saw Whaler Go Down.
"We started out of Frisco," he said, "to be gone three years. We went up along the coast and struck ice in about 65 degrees north latitude. There was a fleet of whalers there at the time and we stood by to help them if we could. One of them did crush and go down without a moment's warning and the religiously inclined said it was a judgment of God because the vessel's captain had kicked in the head of one of the crew a few days before. We ourselves were caught in the ice later, but after two weeks the ice cracked during a fog and when the air cleared we saw a channel opening from us to clear water."

"There is no police or anything of that sort up in northern Alaska, you know, and part of our duty was to serve all of the warrants that had been issued by the federal authorities. We had a couple of marshals along, and we would send out firing parties along the coast whenever we would get trace of our man. The story of these trips would fill volumes. We also looked out for Japanese seal poachers, charted the seas we traversed, studied the Eskimo races we ran across, and did a thousand and one things in a land where there were mighty few other people to do them. Our captain, Capt. A. J. Henderson, was a mighty man, with a rule more absolute than that of many kings. We had a federal commissioner along, and could give the men we arrested a preliminary hearing right on the vessel. Then we would take them back to Nome or some other port for trial."

"Sealing laws are very strictly enforced now, as the government has prohibited the killing of seals entirely for ten years, and the observance of them is rigid. I really believe that it would be easier to kill a man here in Chicago and get away with it than to kill a seal away up in the north, a thousand miles from civilization, and escape punishment. The government will spend anything necessary to track down the culprit."

"The Japanese are the worst offenders, and eight revenue cutters are kept busy in those waters all the time, keeping watch on them. They are arrested by the scores and the uniform sentence is 16 months' imprisonment, fines and confiscation of the vessels and all of their equipment, along with whatever hides may be on board. The vessels and the gear are sold by the government, but the odd part about the proceeding is that under the law the skins must be destroyed. Why, I know of one vessel which was taken with 1,600 pelts aboard, and under the law these should be destroyed although they are worth $40 each. The court is holding them, however, in the hope that some other arrangement can be made about them. The fights that the cutters used to have with the Japanese smugglers and poachers are now almost entirely a thing of the past, although whenever a suspected vessel is sighted it always takes a shot across her bows to stop her. Resistance is rare, however."

"During our travels we saw many sights that would rival any of the natural attractions of the world. There is a waterfall up there which is higher than Niagara, though of course not nearly so large, and a natural bridge that is much finer than the one in Kentucky. It is 175 feet high within the arch and fully 600 outside. Up around Hogosiv there is an area about 60 miles in each direction which is virtually 'in the making.' It is in a state of volcanic evolution. Look at these two pictures. They show the same scene, and one was taken two weeks after the other. See the rocks are twice as high in the second as they were in the first. It's the same way with the channels along the coast—here one day and there another. There are no charts, no lights, nothing of the sort, anywhere along the coast, and navigation is dangerous in the extreme."

Lieut. Reinburg had hundreds of views of sights all over the polar seas. One is the photograph of an Eskimo child, its face ravaged by cancer of the nose. The infant was operated on and his life saved by the ship's doctor, A. D. Foster, at 70 degrees north latitude. "Give any disease up there in that climate half a chance, and it will cure itself," declared Lieut. Reinburg. Another picture showed the whitened bones and grinning skulls, mounted upon a platform (burial is unknown in the frozen north), of an expedition, which, according to Eskimo tradition, embarked on a search for the north pole 50 years ago on a vessel known as the Genie. Where it started, or who formed it, none knows, but its end is known to all.

King and Queen of 74 People.
"Cape Attu, the westernmost point of Uncle Sam's dominions, contains just 74 people," Lieut. Reinburg went on, "but it has king and queen, just the same. King Philaretta and Queen Maude, that was the best we could make of their names. I bought one of the finest hand-woven baskets I ever saw for four dollars from Queen Maude, in her regal hut. We tried to determine to what race the Attuans belong, in an effort to get evidence to support the theory that the Mogilians and Indian races merge insensibly, through the Eskimo, as one proceeds east from China. We were unable to make any decision, though, as to how the Attuans might be called, and Russian scientists are going out with the next cutter to have a look at them. We send out a cutter there every year and it brings the only mail that reaches there."

"It would take a dozen volumes to tell of all of the experiences we went through and of the strange sights we saw. It certainly is a novel quarter of the globe and well worth three years of any one's life."

One Ohio Bird Survives Breed of Several Billions.

Ending Her Days in the Cincinnati Zoological Garden is All That Remains of a Species Once Numerous.

Cincinnati, O.—One solitary passenger pigeon, ending her life at the Zoological garden in Cincinnati, is today all that remains of an American species that early in the last century swarmed over the continent in flocks numbering billions. With the death of this sole survivor of a bird tribe, whose nesting places often covered hundreds of square miles, there will soon disappear the last race of the wild pigeons that have been slaughtered by the million by men who fed their hogs upon the carcasses they could not carry away. Though it is too late to save this species, special efforts are now being made by the Audubon workers to bring about the restoration of other birds of economic value that must otherwise share the same fate.

For many months systematic search has been made throughout the continent by officials of the Audubon association for relics of the once prolific passenger pigeon. Members of the organization headed by Prof. C. F. Hedge of Clark university have made a standing offer of $1,500 to anyone discovering a nest of this species; but, though thousands have been trying eagerly for the prize, not one single claimant has appeared. In response to a recent inquiry by T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon societies, the authorities of the Cincinnati Zoo have just furnished the last chapter in the tragic tale of these butchered birds. The "Last of the Passenger Pigeons" is a female, eight teen years old, whose mate died recently without issue at the age of twenty-four.

As late as 1877 what is now known to have been the last nesting place of these wild birds was found in the state of Michigan, where their nests thickly covered the trees over an area 28 miles long and four miles wide. Residents of New York declare that in 1850 they flocked over Manhattan Island in such numbers that they obscured the sun and that ships loaded in bulk with the bodies of these birds lay at the wharves selling them at a cent apiece. Audubon is quoted as observing a roosting place of wild pigeons in Kentucky early in the last century that extended 40 miles and was three miles in width. On its edges men with guns, nets, clubs and torches slaughtered the roosting birds, each often bagging 500 in one day.

Declaring that practically all the gulls and terns in America today have survived solely through the work of protection and restoration at their reservations, leaders of the National Association of Audubon societies are now appealing to the people of this country to support the work of preserving dying species of native birds which they have already begun. The Upland Plover, Cabot's Tern, the Least Tern, they assert, can be saved to the nation by quick agency measures for which special funds are to be raised.

Popularizing the Potato.
Paris.—When potatoes were introduced into France the natives had been told they were poisonous and that it was death to partake of them.

To overcome this prejudice Parmentier gave a big banquet in Paris, at which every dish was made from potatoes. There were 16 courses in which potatoes played the major or minor part. Even the brandy and liquors were the product of this vegetable, King Louis XIII. was among the guests and gave his host land on which to cultivate potatoes near Paris. As the tubers grew to size Parmentier posted guards around the fields by day and withdrew them at night so that those who lived around them could steal them at night, eat the vegetable and thus become convinced. So, unconsciously, the French were converted to the dish and never gave it up.

FLAX IS PROFITABLE

Wonderful Paying Proposition in Western Canadian Prairies.

So much is heard of the wheat, oats and barley grown in the prairie lands of western Canada, and so much has been told of the wealth to be made out of the raising of cattle on the succulent and rich grasses of those fertile plains, that a most important product has been almost lost sight of. Flax. Recent press reports advise us that on one of the last boats to clear from Fort William (at the head of Lake Superior) for Buffalo, there were 241,000 bushels of flax valued at $683,220, and on another boat leaving the same day there were 288,000 bushels valued at $720,000. There has been a big demand for Canadian flax this season, and the lake movement has been very heavy. Flax is always a sure crop, and gives to the farmer who is anxious for quick return after getting on his land, the chance he is looking for. There is opportunity for thousands yet, on the free homesteads of 160 acres, and many of these are available within short distance of the lines of railway that are already built or under construction, either on the main line or branches. Besides these free grant lands there is an opportunity to purchase from railway and land companies at reasonable prices.

The display of western Canada's grains in the straw as well as threshed grains and grasses recently made at St. Louis was an excellent demonstration of what the country can do. It proved splendid as an illustration of the resources of that vast prairie country, which during the past year has again proven its ability to produce excellent yields of wheat, oats and barley—and flax. Not only this, but the splendid herds of cattle are a source of large revenue. There is a fund of information to be had by reading the Canadian government literature, copies of which may be had free by applying to your nearest Canadian government agent.

Their Last Hope Gone.
When the minister praised the raspberry jam at Mrs. Green's bountiful Saturday night supper, he could not imagine why Angie and Horatio, the twins, gazed at him so reproachfully. "Don't you like raspberry jam, my little man?" he asked Horatio.

"Yes, sir, I do, and Angie does," said Horatio in distinctly resentful tones, "and mother told us that she was afraid the last she made wasn't quite up to the mark, and if you didn't praise it, Angie and I could have it for luncheon on our bread, for Mrs. Willis and Mrs. Shedd never said a word when they ate it, and you've made the third; but now she'll use it for the church societies," and Horatio looked gloomily at his twin, who returned the look in kind.—Youth's Companion.

"A great deal depends upon yourself and the kind of food you eat," the wise old doctor said to a man who came to him sick with stomach trouble and sick headache once or twice a week, and who had been taking pills and different medicines for three or four years.

He was induced to stop eating any sort of fried food or meat for breakfast, and was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, leaving off all medicines.

In a few days he began to get better, and now he has entirely recovered and writes that he is in better health than he has been before in twenty years. This man is 58 years old and says he feels "like a new man all the time."

44 Bu. to the Acre RAW FURS is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province show other excellent results—such as 40 bushels of wheat on 120 acres, or 58 1/2 bushels per acre, 25, 30 and 40 bushels of oats, 100 bushels of corn, as high as 180 bushels of clover hay, etc. etc. etc. are were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup
at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for the exhibition of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emption of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the best districts. Schools, churches, hospitals, etc. are provided. Climate excellent, soil the very best, railways, telegraph, hand, building lumber cheap, prices low and reasonable in price. Irrigation, especially in the West, is a great asset. Write as to best place for settlement, or better yet, visit the "Last Best West" (sent free on application) and get information to Dept. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent.

How To Stop Stubborn Cough

We don't mean just stop the irritation in your throat—but cure the underlying cause.

Cough syrups cannot do this. It takes a constitutional tonic body builder to do the work properly—and cure you to stay cured. Vinol is the remedy you need.

Mrs. Minnie Osmond, of Grosse Pointe, N. Y., writes: "After trying several remedies for a bad cough and cold without benefit, I was asked to try Vinol. It worked like magic. It cured my cold and cough and I gained in health and strength. I consider Vinol the most wonderful tonic and invigorator I ever saw."

If we cannot stop that cough with VINOL—our delicious cod liver and iron tonic—which is made without oil—we will not charge you a cent for the medicine you buy. This seems like a pretty fair proposition—and ought to be accepted. Don't you think so? With this understanding we ask you to try a bottle of VINOL.

Dear Sirs:—
The Rugs came yesterday and are simply superb. If I could see old sinners converted and made over as new as those Rugs are I should think that perfection was reached in transforming men.

How you can do it out of such old carpets is a surprise to me. Your charges are reasonable. Your work is excellent. Your attention to patrons is commendable. And the products of your looms surpassing all our expectations.

With many thanks, we remain,

WE HAVE BEEN TO MAINE

The editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate has written in a recent issue, a strong defense of prohibition in Maine, under the above caption.

He says: The proprietors of some county papers deny complicity or responsibility for the legalized liquor traffic. They refuse to directly advertise saloons, breweries, whiskey or beer, and at the same time sell space, editorial and otherwise, to brewers, in which to garble or misstate facts, as well as to state stupendous falsehoods in regard to the great effects of prohibition in the states of Maine and Kansas, states where the experiment has been most thoroughly tried.

So many people in Western Missouri are able to see Kansas and judge for themselves, that the monumental and professional liars are not so bold in their statements about Kansas as they are about Maine, which has been seen by comparatively few of the country people of the state of Missouri. What we mean by professionals are the men who go around over the country with samples of some kind or other, pretending to be drummers. This is to disguise the fact that they are hired to go from place to place misrepresenting and misstating the conditions in prohibition states, towns and territory, spouting their fraudulent statements in smoking cars, railway stations and hotel offices. And yet recently the publishers of some country newspapers are sufficiently gullible and greedy to take the blood money of brewers for publishing similar stuff in their printed columns.

We have read and heard so much of this sort of stuff that we made a journey to Maine and spent a part of a summer vacation there in the study of civic and social conditions. We found the people happy and prosperous, having more savings banks and more money in them per capita than any other state in the nation. There were single legalized saloons in St. Louis and Boston which were doubtless selling more intoxicants than the city of Portland. We went out with some of the deputy sheriffs making thorough search for violators of law. Whenever a bottle, jug or keg of beer was found it was poured into a sewer.

Our people in the country generally will do well to believe but little or nothing of what the wets say in the hired columns of country papers, paid for by brewers' blood money!

SALOONS ONLY GOOD, WHEN CLOSED FOR GOOD

Few young cities have passed through so rapid yet so conclusive an experience in temperance as Rockford, Illinois. Several years ago, the citizens decided against the saloons and for two years there was not a single drinking place in town. Business was good, people saved money, and the banks reported increased deposits. Then the citizens took the opposite tack and decided to give the saloons another trial—but on the promise of obedience to state and local laws and good behavior generally. There were to be "model" saloons. The first day the bars were opened, thirty-nine arrests were made for rioting in the streets. According to the Rockford Republican, it was a case of "mobs" of liquor-made rioters, constituting a vindication of the "dry" campaign. It is evidently impossible for the police department to take proper care of the output of Rockford's saloons. Another Rockford paper, the Star, after reviewing the situation, remarks: "It is hardly an exaggeration to say that there was more immoderate drinking and public intoxication yesterday than during a whole year under the 'dry' regime." These unfortunate experiences would seem inevitably to lead to the conclusion that a saloon can only be good when it is closed for good.—The Christian Herald.

THE EXCUSE OF DOUBT

When the disciples saw the small quantity of the bread and fish they said that it was nothing compared to the multitude. That crowd can never be fed by anything that we have or can get. An impossible task. They limited the Christ of God. Their doubt was their greatest hindrance. The size of the loaves compared to the size of the multitude. The disciples today stand before the drinking host and exclaim: "Nothing can be done! It will never be in my day!" No, it will not, brother, unless you use the ballot box as a basket.—The People.

ARE HEAVILY FINED

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Fines aggregating $51,500 and penitentiary sentences ranging from 15 months to two and a half years were imposed on liquor dealers by Judge Landis in the U. S. district court today. The defendants are charged with violating the Internal Revenue law. Six of the 13 accused escaped the prison sentence, but all were fined.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY.

Are the Statements of East Jordan Citizens Not More Reliable Than Those of Utter Strangers?

This is a vital question. It is fraught with interest to East Jordan.

It permits of only one answer. It can not be evaded or ignored. An East Jordan citizen speaks here. Appeals for the welfare of East Jordan.

A citizen's statement is reliable. An utter stranger's doubtful. Home proof is the best proof.

W. L. Smith, Main St., East Jordan, Mich., says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy of merit for the purposes for which their use is intended. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on different occasions, procuring my supply from the Spring Drug Co. and their use has always been followed by the best results. I do not hesitate to say that Doan's Kidney Pills are far superior to any other kidney remedy." For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. County Normal Notes.

Eva Crain, Audie Delaney, Jennie Hunderman and Florence McKee, have finished their first three weeks of practice teaching.

Tuesday morning, Jan. 24, the class listened to a very interesting talk by Judge Mayne, in the high school room.

Florence McKee was absent Tuesday, Jan. 24 on account of illness.

The editors for this week are Ethel Murray and Raymond Bennett; the housekeepers are Hazel Price and Audie Delaney; Jennie Hunderman is the gardener.

The class had a flash light picture taken Friday.

The efforts of hotel proprietors to have some sort of recognized difference made by the law between their places and ordinary saloons is resented by the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers association. The latter organization says that the sale of liquor is either a proper and legitimate business or it is not. The very effort of the hotel proprietor to have his bar called something else than a saloon indicates his dislike of the term and his abhorrence of its purpose. The Wholesale Liquor Dealers association properly sums up the matter with his declaration: "The proprietor of a hotel that runs a bar is a retail liquor dealer, a saloonkeeper, nothing more and nothing less."

To Consumptives.

Edward A. Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Bioggetti from the original formula is the Sovereign Remedy for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, LaGrippe, Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung Affections. Thousands of people say they have been relieved by it.

Those who have used it will have no other, and recommend it to their fellow sufferers. It has cured many after they were given up as incurable by their physicians.

The undersigned as a consumptive can testify from his own experience as to its value.

Equity Ladies Notes.

Mrs. Anna Fox, State Auditor for the Ladies Society of Equity, visited the state secretary, Mrs. Olive Bartholomew on Monday and audited the secretary's books.

Thirty-six new members were added in the past year.

Hon. H. B. Sherman, National organizer for the Farmers Society of Equity, has been holding meetings in Southern Michigan assisted by C. A. Mastin State Director. Three good locals of progressive farmers are the result, at Centerville, Glendale and Three Oaks the degree work is now used and pronounced fine. The Equity Ladies take pride in this report, as one local of 34 members is the direct result of the L. S. of E. convention in that section.

A farewell surprise party was tendered to Miss Koseta Sheppard and her brother Russell, on Thursday and Friday evenings previous to their leaving for their future home at East Jordan. The young people are held in the highest esteem of their wide circle of friends and schoolmates. The both evenings were happily spent, but mid the scene of jollity there was a sorrowful feeling that existed among their young friends when they thought of the parting time which was so near. After the guests had wished the young people success in their future home, they departed for the night.—Sanilac County Republican.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98 per cent of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, The W. C. Spring Drug Co.
