Opera House a Certainty

East Jordan Realty Co. to Build
Two-Story Structure.

A much-talked-of matter of building an opera house to replace the burned Saturday opera house, is finally settled through the efforts of Contractor Harry S. Price and other leasing business men. Enough stock has been raised to warrant the going-ahead of the project.

At a meeting of the stock holders first of the week steps were taken to incorporate the East Jordan Realty Co. with a capital stock of $15,000. Those elected directors are W. L. French, H. S. Price, B. E. Waterman, Geo. G. Glenn, E. J. Crossman, W. A. Stroebel, W. C. Spring.

The plans are to tear out the old structures now occupied by Mack's Jewelry Store and the Bowling Alley and erect thereon a two story brick building 50x157 feet. Two stories are to be in front, with the opera house in the rear and connected with Main street by a wide lobby. The seating capacity will be 800.

Next Village Officers.

At the Village Caucus Saturday evening everything went harmoniously and the following officers were placed in nomination by a unanimous vote:

President—A. E. Cross
Clerk—Chas. A. Hudson
Treasurer—R. L. Lorrain
Assessor—Wm. A. Pickard
Justice—Harry S. Price
Trustee—Joseph Cummins
Trustee—B. E. Waterman

As the Citizens Caucus of Monday night endorsed the above candidates the election will be merely a ratification.

ROGERS-GRILLEY

Recital at Presbyterian Church
Tuesday, March 21st.

High School Lecture Course.

A Rogers-Grilley recital is sure to be a pronounced success, for the worth and charm of this entertainment has been proven by many seasons of practical experience. The combination long since gained a foremost position among the few standard attractions. Many years of enthusiastic effort have enabled these gentlemen to produce a program for the amusement-loving public that not only provides pleasure, but conforms to what is best in art. From the harp classic with which Mr. Rogers opens the program, followed by a group of impersonations and original selections by Mr. Grilley, the listeners are carried through a series of artistic efforts in the realm of pathos, humor and music, until the closing number leaves the audience wondering if it is really true that such a delightful evening has been given by a company of only two people. Every season finds these artists with fresh novelties and striking selections added to their extensive repertoire, so they are always able to present an entirely new program at each appearance. Probably this has much to do with that notable fact concerning this combination of their continued reappearance on some of the strongest and most conservative courses in the United States, such as Brooklyn, Baltimore, Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Washington and many others. They have also appeared at scores of colleges, universities, preparatory and normal schools in nearly every state in the Union. Today they are furnishing one of the strongest, most unique and thoroughly delightful programs in this field of work.

Adults 50 cents; children 25 cents.

The equipment of the post office building will be leased and equipped. Shower bath, dressing and locker rooms, wrestling mat, punching bag, hand ball and volley ball courts are among the things planned at present.

The admission fee is three dollars for the first six months. The promoter of the club, Harry Potter, has endeavored to see all who might be interested, but has undoubtedly overlooked several. REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Met at Saginaw Last Week and Nominated State Ticket.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

For Justices of Supreme Court—Russell C. Ostrander, Lansing; John E. Bird, Adrian.

For Regents of the U. of M.—Benjamin S. Hanchett, Grand Rapids; Lucius L. Hubbard, Houghton.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Luther L. Wright, Ironwood.

For member State Board of Education—Thomas W. Nadal, Olivet.

For members State Board of Agriculture—John W. Beumont, Detroit; Jason Woodman, Paw Paw.

The Republican convention at Saginaw convened Thursday and was attended by delegates from every county in the state except Mackinaw, there being 1,302 delegates present.

The convention was very harmonious and everything went smoothly and without a hitch, the state ticket being nominated and made unanimous.

Judge Harris, our Boyne City candidate for Member of the Board of Education was defeated for the nomination but he is not kicking any over the defeat as he did not try to put up a fight for the place, in fact we believe our citizens feel his defeat worse than the judge himself.

Governor Osborn made a brilliant speech stirring up the convention by making a plea for reciprocity and attacking the U. S. senate for seating Lorimer in that body.

The convention urged the Michigan delegation in Congress to support permanent tariff legislation bill and also urged the direct election of United States Senators.

The question of reciprocity with Canada was considered too delicate a subject and was not touched upon although the convention endorsed President Taft and also Governor Osborn.

Renovating an Apple Orchard.

Prof. L. R. Taft's statement that hundreds of Michigan apple orchards 30 years or over in age could be brought into bearing has been proven time and again. Prof. C. D. Jarvis of the Connecticut Experiment college voices this same statement. In a recent interview he says for demonstration purposes he secured possession of an orchard that was 50 years of age, but had not borne fruit for a number of years. The owner agreed to care for the trees as directed by Professor Jarvis. To commence with, let us say these trees were in sad, unpruned for years and seriously infected with San Jose scale, so that it was not an easy undertaking. Heroic methods were inaugurated. To bring the trees down to earth was first considered. As much as 30 feet was removed from the tops, severely headed in, as the pruner would say. Seventy-five per cent of the brush was removed and all wounds coated over with paint. Then followed a complete system of spraying. Carefulness was shown to rid every branch of the scale. For summer spraying he used Bordeaux and the lime sulphur wash, adding at the right time arsenate of lead. The soil treatment consisted in breaking up the heavy sod and continually harrowing up to August 1. Then a clover crop was sown. Fertilizer—300 pounds of sulphate of potash, 400 pounds of basic slag and the same of ground raw bone was used. No stimulates like nitrogen was found needed in this case and so was omitted. The result was a vigorous growth of new limbs the foliage showing a remarkably healthy appearance. Today this orchard is worth money and will produce a fine crop of fruit.

When money talks it usually gets an encore.

CANNOT SEE PERFECTION

Louisville Courier-Journal Is an Avowed Agnostic Concerning This Wonderful Man.

Down in Missouri somewhere, according to the newspapers, there has been found the perfect man. At least they say he was perfect because he never told a lie or spoke a cross word to his wife. And her husband declares his wife is equally perfect. But the Louisville Courier-Journal has doubts. At least it thinks perfection may have some drawbacks, for that lively newspaper comments as follows on the character and career of the model of human perfection, who recently died: "He must have been awfully lonesome. Every man in town going to work cheered and refreshed by the daily morning spat, with his wife must have shunned him as a breathing reproach. Certainly, in view of the fact that he could not tell a lie, nobody would dare invite him to a sociable little game of draw or think of embarking with him on a house of even the most harmless sort. Then, again, how many thousand times he must have been held up as a shining light to erring everyday husbands. That in itself would seem to be enough to turn every man in the town against him. He must have picked his steps in fear and trembling, with the eyes of the whole community watching for the first sign of a recession from grace. The married men must have attended his funeral with well-dissembled grief and a sigh of relief. The question that pre-eminently calls for an answer, however, is: For how much of the man's perfection was he really entitled to credit and how much was vicarious? When one considers that his wife never spoke a cross word to him and never told him a fib it is apparent that there is some room for speculation—for doubt, even. One wonders whether he would have got to heaven with a bogey score had he not been blessed with an extraordinary wife."

Possibly He Had an Object.

The bashful young man with the rocking chair habit apologized when he found himself sliding across the room, chair and all, toward the girl on the piano stool. Several times during the evening that involuntary trip across the carpet was repeated, to the evident distress of the shy young man. The next time he called the young man picked out the same animated chair, but though he rocked vigorously it remained rooted to that one spot. Presently he bent down and examined the rockers. Each rocker had been banded in two different places with wide velvet ribbon. The girl on the piano stool smiled.

"I put those velvet bands on the rockers for your benefit," she said. "You can rock just as easily with them on, but your chair will not budge half an inch all evening."

"Oh, thanks," said the young man, but he eyed the intervening distance disapprovingly, and it seemed doubtful if he appreciated her efforts to make him comfortable.

Tale of a Temperance Worker.

A young woman rushed up to a young man on Superior avenue, the other day and shook hands with him cordially, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "I have a confession to make to you," she gurgled. "You won't believe it, but I always thought you drank."

The young man fingered for a clove and tried not to blush.

"And now," she pursued, "I find that you are actually a temperance worker. Now I see you are trying to be modest and deny it, but you can never fool me again. I overheard my brother saying, in his slangy way, you were a great booze fighter! Oh, he was in earnest. Why, he said that you had punished more of the stuff than any other ten men in Cleveland. I'm proud to know you; will you ever pardon me for misjudging you?"

She was gone before he got through choking.

The Absent-Minded Lamar.

The late L. Q. C. Lamar, former United States senator from Mississippi and at the time of his death an associate justice of the United States Supreme court, was a very absent-minded and abstracted man.

One day he entered one of the old horse cars that ran in Washington years ago, walked up to the box at the end where passengers were supposed to deposit their fares, put his hand in his pocket, took out a coin and dropped it in.

"Why, senator," said a friend, "you put in a quarter instead of a nickel!"

"Did I?" said the senator. "How very stupid of me!" Then he put his hand in his pocket again, took out a nickel, dropped that in and sat down with a satisfied smile.—Saturday Evening Post.

Women Inventors

Praised for Great Many Useful Articles

By JOHN D. WHITE

TOTAL number of patents approximating 6,500 have been issued directly to women. Of these a bare dozen would come under the caption of "freak" inventions, and there is not a single product of the perpetual motion crank. Dearth of whimsicalities show that practicability is a characteristic of the woman inventor.

Harriet Hosmer, famed as a sculptor, has invented the permanent magnet as a motive power. This is used in lifting large masses of metal. She also has discovered a method of transmuting limestone into marble.

A process of producing artificial marble was invented by Mme. Dutillet. Mme. Poppova has invented a rudderless airship which competent authorities pronounce a success. It has been called the "annulated dragon" from its peculiar construction. Mme. De Condray was the inventor of the manikin, useful in the teaching of anatomy.

The familiar ice-cream freezer was patented in 1843 by Mrs. Nancy M. Johnson. The model in the patent office shows that it has remained practically unchanged. Jeannette Powers invented the aquarium, and the Coston light so useful in maritime signaling at night, is named from its inventor, a Washington woman.

Lady Amherst's patent spring collapsible muff has had quite a vogue among the ultra fashionables. Miss Madeline Edison, who assists her famous father in his laboratory, has invented and marketed an automobile map.

Mary E. Walton's noise deadener, adaptable to elevated railways, and her smoke consumer, are both successful. The apiarist is indebted to Frances Dunham for the comb foundation for her bee hives, which so increases the saccharine crop. The essential feature of this invention is that all the cells are "worker" size.

Sally Rosenthal's pocket sewing machine; Betsy J. Martin's asbestos suit; and Augusta Roger's engine, that dumps its blinkers from the rear on to the track; Maggie Knight's device for making satchel bottom bags, and the Burden horseshoe machine shows a wide divergence in creative ideas. But they are all practicable.

Syllabic types, a slate and also a typewriter for the blind, a process for concentrating ores, a machine for producing ozone, a car coupler and a car wheel, contrivance for heating cars, a beehive, the self-fastening button, a collapsible collar button, a life raft, a machine for making folding bags, and underglaze painting on pottery, are a few of the inventions credited to women, each of which has contributed its mite to the progress of the race.

The honor of a few epoch-making inventions has been conferred wrongly on men, if certain historians be correct. Notably is this true of the cotton gin. These dissenters say that the honor of that great discovery really belongs to Mrs. Catherine Greene, widow of Gen. Nathaniel Greene of revolutionary fame. They say that dread of the world's adverse comment and consequent loss of social caste induced her to assume the name of Mrs. Miller, which was used in connection with the patent. These same historians say that in 1817 Mrs. Ann H. Manning perfected a mower and reaper, thus anticipating McCormick's and Hussey's inventions by 17 years.

Brutal Bull Fights in Old Mexico

By E. C. THOMPSON

The first bull fight I saw in Mexico was a disgusting sight. How any nation can sanction it is beyond me. The poor skinny horses forced into the one-sided battle constitute one argument against the sport, even if there were no other.

On a Sunday afternoon everyone goes to the fight, just as many in this country go to the ball game. But give me the ball game every time.

The native peon is at the fight, putting up possibly his last cent to see it and yell himself hoarse.

I have seen men throw their hats into the arena and go crazy as any baseball fan when the horses, men and bull go into a heap and there is a chance of blood's being spilled.

I went to a fight to satisfy myself as to actual conditions and to see if there was any chance for the dumb brutes, and was convinced that it is purely a one-sided affair.

The bull has no chance, and it seems to realize its predicament in a short time and tries to escape its tormentors.

I saw one in his agony jump clear over the inner wall of the arena showing plainly that he did not want to fight.

The horse, old and worn out from work and abuse, blindfolded on one eye only, the one nearest the bull, is the worst sufferer of them all.

He is compelled to carry his rider as long as he can stand up, after being gored by the maddened bull, and if not injured mortally is reserved to be sent in again at some future date.

As to the men, they have shields to run behind when the bull gets too dangerous. When there they are just as safe as those in the bleachers. They stay there, too, until some other fellow attracts the bull to some other part of the ring, then bravely walk out again to help some one else out of the same predicament.

Great sport! And you see some of our women from the states attending regularly, enjoying it with as much zest and laughter as the native, making heroes of the performers!

There ought to be a law passed compelling the women to remove their hats in churches and public meetings.

How would it look for men to wear their hats in church?

The hats not only obstruct the view of the preacher and good-looking singers, but prevent the sound of the voice from reaching the persons behind them.

Women should consider this and know that their ugly coal-scuttle and wide-brimmed hats are nuisances; they encourage selfishness and cause the men to lose respect for the hats and the women that wear them.

AIDS AMERICAN BRIDE AND BABE TO FLEE RUSSIA

Mrs. Lillian de Malinowski Tells of Alleged Persecution by Her Husband's Rich Parents.

RESCUED BY NEW YORKER SHE MET ON STEAMSHIP.

Thrilling Adventures to Recover Her Baby Son, Heir to Large Estate, Recounted on Her Safe Arrival in the United States—Still Fears That the Boy May Be Kidnaped by Emisaries of His Father's Family.

NEW YORK.—Separated from her wealthy Russian husband by the scheming of his family; kept by force from the side of her baby boy; risking her life to regain him, and finally escaping across the Austrian border of Poland by the aid of an American friend who had hurried to her from Norway, Mrs. Lillian Richter de Malinowski is back in New York after three years of distressful married life.

With his girlish mother is Leonard George de Malinowski, eighteen months old and heir to a vast estate not far from Gittmir, Russian Poland. In Ithaca is Edward G. Wyckoff, a member of the typewriter family and rich in his own right, who thinks modestly but with real satisfaction of the part he had to play in the drama of Mrs. de Malinowski's life.

Four years ago Caesar de Malinowski came to America from Russia. He was the son of Casimir de Malinowski, a rich Polish land owner, whose home, "Mlynyszcze," was one of the oldest and largest estates in all that part of the empire, Caesar, then twenty-four, had come to the United States because his father insisted upon his marriage to the daughter of the owner of the adjoining estate. "If I must marry I want to marry the girl of my choice," de Malinowski said, and bade his family farewell.

Wedded in New York.

A very few months in America brought him both the desire to marry and the girl of his choice. She was Lillian Richter, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Caroline Richter of Tea Neck, N. J. Five times he proposed to her, and finally, April 28, 1908, they were married in St. Francis Xavier church, New York.

For a long time the young husband's family refused to recognize his marriage, but finally the father came to see his new daughter for himself, and in July, 1908, they sailed together for Europe and "Mlynyszcze." On the steamer with them was Mr. Wyckoff and his family bound for a two years' visit to the continent, and in the course of the journey Mrs. de Malinowski became so intimate with them that when the time for good-bys came she kissed Mr. Wyckoff and called him "Dad."

That fall the Wyckoffs visited "Mlynyszcze," and were cordially welcomed by the entire family. They spent a week on the estate and then started again on their travels. A year and a half later, leaving his family in London, Mr. Wyckoff went to Iceland, intending to come home by way of Spitzbergen and Norway. He had not much more than got on his way before this telegram came to his address in London:

"Please come to rescue. Homeless, childless, penniless. LILLIAN."

Alarmed by this word, Mr. Wyckoff replied with a request for more information. This answer came without delay:

"Please wire money. Beg Dad to come."

After much search these messages were relayed to Mr. Wyckoff at a village on the coast of Norway, and at once he started for Russia. He had made reservations on the Virginian, sailing from Liverpool on Aug. 19, just a month away, and his passports would expire Aug. 5. That left him but two weeks in which to get to Gittmir and make what arrangements might be necessary for Mrs. de Malinowski. He wasted no time, however, in worrying over the shortness of his notice.

Reaching Gittmir, Mr. Wyckoff only succeeded in finding Mrs. de Malinowski at the home of her physician after a friendly German had come to his aid as an interpreter. He was shadowed everywhere he went, and when he finally found the little mother his passport had but three days to run.

Mrs. de Malinowski was almost a wreck, physically as well as nervously. Her own passport was good over a limited territory only, but Mr. Wyckoff, by the cunning use of soft words and persuasive roubles, got her and the baby safely to Warsaw. The next night the little party was on its way to Kallsz, on the Austrian border.

At every station gendarmes went through the train, plainly in search of Mrs. de Malinowski, but Mr. Wyckoff had run short neither of flattery nor money, and each new danger was passed until Kallsz was reached. There a delay of three hours came and a company of soldiers. This time there was no disguise of the fact that Mrs. de Malinowski was being sought, but even in this crisis the Itacan did and said things so suavely that the soldiers peeped into the compartment where the mother and the baby seemed to be asleep, turned to Mr. Wyckoff with a salute and allowed the train to cross the border ten minutes later. The troubles of the Americans were over.

Bride's Story of Persecution.

"My sorrow began immediately after the baby was born," Mrs. de Malinowski told a reporter for The World the other day. "My mother-in-law and my sisters-in-law turned openly against me, and before Leonard was a month old he had been taken from me, and even Caesar had taken apartments in another wing of the manor and refused to see me.

"The most absurd reasons were given for all this. Mme. de Malinowski accused me once of taking some linen while she was away, as though I could make any use for it, supposing I had wanted it, in a house where we all lived together. There was nothing too trivial to be used against me, and finally, after all my jewelry and most of my clothing had been taken away from me, I was taken by servants to Gittmir and ordered never to return.

"I took refuge with a priest. I had got to know, and began to plan to get Leonard. I really didn't care for anything else, but I did want my baby. The first time I tried to get him I lay hidden behind a clump of bushes for two hours and a half waiting for a nurse who had promised to bring him to me. She got so near to me I could see her eyes, when some other servants caught up with her and took her back to the house.

"That night orders were given to shoot any one found on the place without permission, but the following midnight I tried again, another servant having promised to bring Leonard to me at a specified point on the banks of the Volynia.

The Volynia is very wide and swift there, but it has shallow places where reeds and grasses grow to the surface. Although the priest tried to dissuade me, I hired two men to row me across the river. Half way across the boat began to leak. I grew frightened and the boat capsized. Fortunately it was one of the shallows, and although I went into water up to my shoulders the priest, who had been following in another boat, dragged me quickly in beside him and took me back to his house.

Disguised as Servant.

"Even then I had not failed to see that lights were moving through the Manor house, and I made up my mind that they were getting ready to take the baby away, as I had heard they meant to. I was so sure that I went to the station at Kodyna, where Mme. de Malinowski would have to take the train wherever she was bound. The station master hid me in the upper part of the building, and from a balcony I soon saw Mme. de Malinowski arrive with five servants and the baby.

"I was dressed as a peasant, and when my mother-in-law got into her compartment I was put into one adjoining. She had the train searched to make sure I wasn't aboard, but my disguise saved me, and we started for Berdeschev. The conductor proved to be my salvation. Sixteen years before, when he was a porter, he told me, Mme. de Malinowski had given him 25 kopeks—five cents in our money—for handling 25 trunks, and he had never forgiven her!

"He telegraphed ahead to Berdeschev, and when the train arrived the police were waiting. I told them that a rich woman was trying to kidnap my baby, and when they had satisfied themselves that I was the baby's mother, and when they discovered Mme. de Malinowski in the next compartment with the baby, they took him from her and gave him to me. It was my first victory.

"I hurried back to Gittmir and paid board for a week, which left me only enough money to send the telegrams to London. But within a very short time Mr. Wyckoff had come to me and it was all over. When we reached Charing Cross and I saw Mrs. Wyckoff waiting there for me I came near to fainting for joy than I ever shall again, I know."

Protected Her Arrival.

Mrs. de Malinowski and her small son sailed for New York on the Adriatic August 10, 1910. Mr. Wyckoff, being compelled to wait for the Virginian, cabled to his brother, Clarence F. Wyckoff, to meet Mrs. de Malinowski, but since the name of the young mother did not appear on the passenger list Mr. Wyckoff had great difficulty in finding her. He sought the aid of Collector William Loeb, Jr., and met no less than ten steamers due on the same day as the Adriatic, or the next. Mr. Loeb, however, had seen to it that no obstacles should stand in Mrs. de Malinowski's way, and although Mr. Wyckoff did not meet her at the pier he did find her just as she was starting for her mother's home.

"I have no doubt," Mrs. de Malinowski said yesterday, "that the attempts to get Leonard away from me will continue. My husband's family does not care about me, but they do want him, and they are as rich as I am poor. The upkeep of Mlynyszcze alone costs them between $100,000 and $150,000 a year, and I have no reason to think that they will agree either to let Caesar come back to me or to let Leonard stay with me in peace."

Mr. Wyckoff received a letter not long ago from De Malinowski in which he begged his American friends not to form an opinion of the case until his side had been heard. He did not say, however, what that side was.

MAN MARRIES FOUR SISTERS

Weds One After Another as Death Successively Removes Them—Has Son by Each Wife.

White Hill, N. J.—To marry four sisters is the experience of Harry D. Philkitt, formerly a resident of this place, who now resides in Baltimore, Md. He is 58 years old, and has married Miss Josephine Conroy, seven years his senior. She is the fourth bride, and a sister to his three other wives, now deceased. Philkitt declared after the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. S. C. Cutter, that he felt like a boy of 19.

He was first married 40 years ago, when he eloped with Miss Marie Conroy. He was greatly attached to all four sisters, and it has been often said that they were all in love with him. His first wife was killed in an accident about six years later. He afterward married Miss Anna Conroy, with whom he lived for a dozen years. She died of heart disease while they were enjoying a trip to the Pacific coast.

Mr. Philkitt remained single for two years, declaring to his friends that he would never marry. He did not keep this resolution, however, as he again fell in love when he came here to visit the Conroy family, and the graves of his wives, who are all buried in the family plot.

Miss Lillian Conroy was the next bride. He wooed and won her during this visit and she accompanied him to Baltimore as a bride. This proved Philkitt's longest venture in matrimony, as the couple lived together for 18 years. At the expiration of that time Mrs. Philkitt died of typhoid fever. Mr. Philkitt remained single two years, but Cupid possibly believed that he made too good a husband to be without a wife, the wedding to Miss Josephine Conroy and the widow being the outcome. Mr. Philkitt is the father of three boys, one having been born to each of his three wives.

Child Welfare Exhibit.

The New York child welfare exhibit, which is scheduled to open on January 18, will be most comprehensive and will consist of moving pictures, documents and anything that will help to make the subject clearer to those interested. Among the speakers will be Miss Jane Addams of Hull houses, Miss Florence Kelley of the Consumers' league, Miss Lillian Wald, founder of the Henry settlement and initiator of the idea of a children's bureau, and a number of men workers and sympathizers. The exhibit is financed by philanthropists and is headed by the Russell Sage foundation with $6,000. Twenty men have contributed $1,000 each.

CHAPTER I.

"I'm N. G.—that's a cinch! The sooner I chuck it the better!"

Caught in the swirl of the busy city's midday rush, agitated in Broadway's swarming mood of hustling humanity, jostled unceremoniously by the careless, indifferent crowds, discouraged from stemming further the tide of pushing, elbowing men and women who hurried up and down the great thoroughfare, Howard Jeffries, tired and hungry and thoroughly disgusted with himself, stood still at the corner of Fulton street, cursing the luck which had brought him to his present plight.

It was the noon hour, the important time of day when nature loudly claims her due, when business affairs, no matter how pressing, must be temporarily interrupted so that the human machine may lay in a fresh store of nervous energy. From under the portals of precipitous office buildings, mammoth hives of human industries, which to right and left soared dizzily from street to sky, swarmed thousands of employes of both sexes—clerks, stenographers, shop girls, messenger boys—all moved by a common impulse to satisfy without further delay the animal cravings of their physical natures. They strode along with quick, nervous step, each chatting and laughing with his fellow, interested for the nonce in the day's work, making plans for well-earned recreation when five o'clock should come and the uptown stampede for Harlem and home begin.

The young man sullenly watched the scene, envious of the energy and activity of all about him. Each one of these hurrying throngs, he thought bitterly to himself, was a valuable unit in the prosperity and welfare of the big town. No matter how humble his or her position, each played a part in the business life of the great city, each was an unseen, unknown, yet indispensable cog in the whirling, complicated mechanism of the vast world metropolis. Intuitively he felt that he was not one of them, that he had no right even to consider himself their equal. He was utterly useless to anybody. He was without position or money. He was destitute even of a shred of self-respect. Hadn't he promised Annie not to touch liquor again before he found a job? Yet he had already imbibed all the whiskey which the little money left in his pocket would buy.

Involuntarily, instinctively, he awoke back into the shadow of a doorway to let the crowds pass. The pavements were now filled to overflowing and each moment newcomers from the side streets came to swell the human stream. He tried to avoid observation, fearing that some one might recognize him, thinking all could read on his face that he was a sot, a self-confessed failure, one of life's incompetents. In his painful self-consciousness he believed himself the cynosure of every eye and he winced as he thought he detected on certain faces side glances of curiosity, commiseration and contempt.

Nor was he altogether mistaken. More than one passer-by turned to look in his direction, attracted by his peculiar appearance. His was a type not seen every day in the commercial district—the post-graduate college man out at elbows. He was smooth-faced and apparently about 25 years of age. His complexion was fair and his face refined. It would have been handsome but for a drooping, irresolute mouth, which denoted more than average weakness of character. The face was thin, chalk-like in its lack of color and deeply seamed with the tell-tale lines of dissipation. Dark circles under his eyes and a peculiar watery look suggested late hours and overfondness for alcoholic refreshment. His clothes had the cut of expensive tailors, but they were shabby and needed pressing. His linen was soiled and his necktie disarranged. His whole appearance was careless and suggested that recklessness of mind which comes of general demoralization.

Howard Jeffries knew that he was a failure, yet like most young men he would not admit it. He insisted that he could not be held altogether to blame. Secretly, too, he despised these sober, industrious people who seemed contented with the crumbs of comfort thrown to them. What he wondered idly, was their secret of getting on? How were they able to lead such well regulated lives when he, starting out with far greater advantages, had failed? Oh, he knew well where the trouble lay—in his damnable weakness of character, his love for drink. That was responsible for everything. But was it his fault if he were born weak? These people who behaved themselves and got on, he sneered, were calm, commonplace temperaments who found no difficulty in controlling their baser instincts. They did right simply because they found it easier than to do wrong. Their vir-

He Was a Type Not Seen Every Day in the Commercial District.

There was nothing to brag about. It was easy to be good when not exposed to temptation. But for those born with the devil in them it came hard. It was all a matter of heredity and influence. One's vices as well as one's virtues are handed down to us ready made. He had no doubt that in the Jeffries family somewhere in the unsavory past there had been a weak, vicious ancestor from whom he had inherited all the traits which barred his way to success.

The crowds of hungry workers grew bigger every minute. Every one was elbowing his way into neighboring restaurants, crowding the tables and buffets, all eating voraciously as they talked and laughed. Howard was rudely reminded by inward pangs that he, too, was famished. Not a thing had passed his lips since he had left home in Harlem at eight o'clock that morning and he had told Annie that he would be home for lunch. There was no use staying downtown any longer. For three weary hours he had trudged from office to office seeking employment, answering advertisements, asking for work of any kind, ready to do no matter what, but all to no purpose. Nobody wanted him at any price. What was the good of a man being willing to work if there was no one to employ him? A nice look-out certainly. Hardly a dollar left and no prospect of getting any more. He hardly had the courage to return home and face Annie. With a muttered exclamation of impatience he spat from his mouth the half-consumed cigarette which was hanging from his lip, and crossing Broadway, walked listlessly in the direction of Park place.

He had certainly made a mess of things, yet at one time, not so long ago, what a brilliant future life seemed to have in store for him! No boy had ever been given a better start. He remembered the day he left home to go to Yale; he recalled his father's kind words of encouragement, his mother's tears. Ah, if his mother had only lived! Then, maybe, everything would have been different. But she died during his freshman year, carried off suddenly by heart failure. His father married again, a young woman 20 years his junior, and that had started everything off wrong. The old home life had gone forever. He had felt like an intruder the first time he went home and from that day his father's roof had been distasteful to him. Yes, that was the beginning of his hard luck. He could trace all his misfortunes back to that. He couldn't stand for stepmother, a haughty, selfish, suspicious, ambitious creature who had little sympathy for her predecessor's child, and no scruple in showing it.

Then, at college, he had met Robert Underwood, the popular upper classman, who had professed to take a great fancy to him. He, a timid young freshman, was naturally flattered by the friendship of the dashing, fascinating sophomore and thus commenced that unfortunate intimacy which had brought about the climax to his troubles. The suave, amiable Underwood, whom he soon discovered to be a gentlemanly scoundrel, borrowed his money and introduced him into the "sporty" set, an exclusive circle into which, thanks to his liberal allowance from home, he was welcomed with open arms. With a youth of his proclivities and inherent weakness the outcome was inevitable. At no time overfond of study, he regarded residence in college as a most desirable emancipation from the restraint of home life. The love of books he considered a pose and he scoffed at the men who took their reading seriously. The university attracted him mostly by its most undesirable features, its sports, its secret societies, its petty cliques, and its rowdiness. The broad spirit and the dignity of the alma mater he ignored completely. Directly he went to Yale he started in to enjoy himself and with the sophisticated Underwood as guide, went to the devil faster than any man before him in the entire history of the university.

Reading, attendance at lectures, became only a convenient cloak to conceal his turpitudes. Poker playing, automobile joy rides, hard drinking became the daily curriculum. In town rows and orgies of every description he was soon a recognized leader. Scandal followed scandal until he was threatened with expulsion. Then his father heard of it and there was a terrible scene. Jeffries, Sr., went immediately to New Haven and there followed a stormy interview in which Howard promised to reform, but once the parent's back was turned things went on pretty much as before. There were fresh scandals, the smoke of which reached as far as New York. This time Mr. Jeffries tried the plan of cutting down the money supply and Howard found himself financially embarrassed. But this had not quite the effect desired by the father, for, rendered desperate by his inability to secure funds with which to carry on his spree, the young man started in to gamble heavily, giving notes for his losses and pocketing the ready money when he won.

Then came the supreme scandal which turned his father's heart to steel. Jeffries, Sr., could forgive much in a young man. He had been young himself once. None knew better than he how difficult it is when the blood is rich and red to keep oneself in control. But there was one offence which a man proud of his descent could not condone. He would never forgive the staining of the family name by a degrading marriage. The news came of the unhappy father like a thunder-clap. Howard, probably in a drunken spree, had married secretly a waitress employed in one of the "sporty" restaurants in New Haven, and to make the mesalliance worse, the girl was not even of respectable parents. Her father, Billy Delmore, the poolroom king, was a notorious gambler and had died in convict stripes. Fine sensation that for the yellow press—"Banker's Son Weds Convict's Daughter."—So ran the "scare heads" in the newspapers. That was the last straw for Mr. Jeffries, Sr. He sternly told his son that he never wanted to look upon his face again. Howard bowed his head to the decree and he had never seen his father since.

All this the young man was reviewing in his mind when suddenly his reflections were disturbed by a friendly hail.

"Hello, Jeffries, old sport! Don't you know a fellow frat when you see him?"

He looked up. A young man of athletic build, with a pleasant, frank face, was standing at the news stand under the Park place elevated station. Quickly Howard extended his hand.

"Hello, Coxie!" he exclaimed. "What on earth are you doing in New York? Whoever would have expected to meet you in this howling wilderness? How's everything at Yale?"

The athlete grinned. "Yale be hanged! I don't care a d— You know I graduated last June. I'm in business now—in a broker's office in Wall street. Say, it's great! We had a semi-panic last week. Prices went to the devil. Stocks broke 20 points. You should have seen the excitement on the exchange floor. Our football rushes were nothing to it. I tell you, it's great. It's got college beaten to a frazzle!" Quickly he added: "What are you doing?"

Howard averted his eyes and hung his head. "Nothing," he answered gloomily. Coxie had quickly taken note of his former classmate's shabby appearance. He had also heard of his escapades.

"Didn't you hear?" muttered Howard. "Row with governor, marriage and all that sort of thing? Of course," he went on, "father's damnably unjust, actuated by absurd prejudice. Annie's a good girl and a good wife, no matter what her father was. D—n it, this is a free country! A man can marry whom he likes. All these ideas about family pride and family honor are old world notions, foreign to this soil. I'm not going to give up Annie to please any one. I'm as fond of her now as ever. I haven't regretted a moment that I married her. Of course, it has been hard. Father at once shut down money supplies, making my further stay at Yale impossible, and I was forced to come to New York to seek employment. We've managed to fix up a small flat in Harlem and now, like Micawber, I'm waiting for something to turn up."

Coxie nodded sympathetically. "Come and have a drink," he said cheerily.

Howard hesitated. Once more he remembered his promise to Annie, but as long as he had broken it once he would get no credit for refusing now. He was horribly thirsty and depressed. Another drink would cheer him up. It seemed even wicked to decline when it wouldn't cost him anything.

They entered a bar conveniently close at hand, and with a tremulous hand Howard carried greedily to his lips the insidious liquor which had undermined his health and stolen away his manhood.

"Have another?" said Coxie with a smile as he saw the glass emptied at a gulp.

"I don't care if I do," replied Howard. Secretly ashamed of his weakness, he shuffled uneasily on his feet. "Well, what are you going to do, old man?" demanded Coxie as he pushed the whiskey bottle over.

"I'm looking for a job," stammered Howard awkwardly. Hastily he went on: "It isn't so easy. If it was only myself I wouldn't mind. I'd get along somehow. But there's the little girl. She wants to go to work, and I won't hear of it. I couldn't stand for that, you know."

Coxie feared a "touch." Awkwardly he said:

It is true we labor under many illusions, but if these were to be done away with we should hardly deem it worth our while to labor at all.

Almost none of the things which man so ardently pursues in the belief that they will make him happier is really capable of doing so, and yet it is useful that he keep up the pursuit for the sake of what he incidentally achieves in behalf of destiny. The illusions we labor under partake, in fine, of the nature of sanitary conditions, though they chiefly affect the health of the spirit, and by that have no municipal functionary appointed to look vigilantly after them. Nor, in fact, do they need any such, since providence has been so kind as to see to it that illusions we shall always have.—Puck.

Being Natural.

Can you, if you be the gentler sex, walk down the street behind an elegantly gowned woman and restrain the impulse to imitate her poise of head, her carriage and the fascinating ways she possesses? Have you ever been in a crowded room where one woman was the center of attraction and seen someone trying to imitate her? A woman is most charming when she is natural. A woman who is natural, even in her erratic moods, does not give offense. One cannot imitate the ways, manners and style of another without appearing ridiculous. The nicest women we meet are those who do not pose or seek to imitate some one else.

MAIL SNATCHER JERKS BRAKEMAN FROM CAB

REMARKABLE ESCAPE FROM DEATH WHEN HOOKED FROM HIS ENGINE.

Rawlins, Wyo.—George A. Ball, brakeman on a Union Pacific freight train, had a remarkable escape from death when he was jerked from the cab of the engine, in which he was riding, by the "snatcher" on the mail car of a flyer moving in the opposite direction. He was carried several hundred feet before he dropped. And, although the hook struck him with a force that ordinarily would have cut a man in two, he was not severely injured. The "snatcher" caught Ball squarely in the back, jerked him out of the cab with the same deftness that it would a sack of mail—and swung him against the side of the mail car. Ball fell in such a way as to be clear of the wheels.

WICKED STOCKING STILETTO

Woman's Dagger Carried in the Garter Much as the Highlander Wears His Dirk.

Chicago.—A fashion note from London tells us that, as woman's weapon, the hatpin is to be superseded by a stiletto held in the garter. Fashion does not date her decrees from London, and we may, therefore, be permitted to doubt the authenticity of the item. The picture shows how a stiletto is worn in the garter—a custom followed, perhaps, in imitation of that of the women of Lombardy during the Austrian occupation. Beware, then, lest calf love turn to calf hate!

There are several reasons why the hatpin will never give way to a stiletto held in the place mentioned. For readiness, accessibility, and cheapness the hatpin exceeds all its other weapons to woman's hand. It is unsheathed by a single upward movement of the arm. The stiletto—well, we decline to dwell upon the motions, processes, and results brought about by its owner drawing it forth. With the present hobble skirt its use is simply impossible.

RATTLER AVENGES ITS MATE

Hunter Who Kills Snake Is Immediately Bitten by Second Reptile.

Newburgh, N. Y.—Arthur J. Serventi of this city went to Pike county, Pennsylvania, in quest of deer. When a short distance from Eldred, while following deer tracks, he came across 16 rattlesnakes sunning themselves on a rock. As he approached, the two largest started up. Serventi shot the foremost, and in endeavoring to get away he fell. The snake which was near him at once struck his right hand, puncturing his forefinger at about the second joint.

Serventi realized the situation, and as soon as he could get to a safe distance he took his hunting knife, and open his finger and sucked out the poison. He hired a rig, drove to Eldred and had his hand treated by a physician. By this time the hand and arm had swollen to great size.

A day or two afterward, with his guide, he visited the rock, found the snakes in the sun, killed the big snake that had bitten him and captured the entire family of 14 small snakes.

"I would probably take many generations of adversity to train Americans into the farseeing thriftiness of my people," once observed an American of Scotch birth. "I remember a case of a Scotch woman who had been promised a few bonnets by a lady. Before she undertook the purchase the lady called and asked the good woman:

"Would you rather have a felt or a straw bonnet, Mrs. Carmichael?" "Weel," responded Mrs. Carmichael thoughtfully, "I think I'll tak' a strae ane. It'll maybe a mouthfu' to the coo when I'm done wi' it."—Lippincott's Magazine.

RESULTS OF FOOD.

Health and Natural Conditions Come From Right Feeding.

Man, physically, should be like a perfectly regulated machine, each part working easily in its appropriate place. A slight derangement causes undue friction and wear, and frequently ruins the entire system.

A well-known educator of Boston found a way to keep the brain and the body in that harmonious co-operation which makes a joy of living.

"Two years ago," she writes, "being in a condition of nervous exhaustion, I resigned my position as teacher, which I had held for over 40 years. Since then the entire rest has, of course, been a benefit, but the use of Grape-Nuts has removed one great cause of illness in the past, namely, constipation, and its attendant evils."

"I generally make my entire breakfast on a raw egg beaten into four spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, with a little hot milk or hot water added. I like it extremely, my food assimilates, and my bowels take care of themselves. I find my brain power and physical endurance much greater and I know that the use of the Grape-Nuts has contributed largely to this result."

"It is with feelings of gratitude that I write this testimonial, and trust it may be the means of aiding others in their search for health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WASH THAT ITCH AWAY

It is said that there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure to Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town!

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25-cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief.

WATCHING the WORLD with the CAMERA

By LEWIS EDWIN THEISS
COPYRIGHT BY PEARSON PUBL. CO.

PERHAPS at some time you have stood on a street corner and breathlessly watched a man with a monster camera worming his way along a slender iron girder hundreds of feet above you, to get a picture from a certain perilous point of view. Or you may have been at a race course and watched with a shiver a young man who stood on the track, with his eye glued to the finder of a camera while the horses thundered down upon him. Possibly you saw another young man at the most dangerous turn of the Vanderbilt cup course calmly photographing the roaring racers as they rushed toward him at 60 miles an hour, while your heart stood still until the dust cloud blew aside and showed you the picture man still alive. You marveled that any human being would take such risks. You would have marveled still more had you known that for these men risks are a part of the day's work—the work of placing at your breakfast table in your newspaper next morning, or a month later in your magazine, a photographic history of the world's doings. For these are the men who are watching the world with the camera. Newspaper photographers, writers a few inches behind him. He got into the tree safely, though he dropped his gun. His camera was strapped to his back, so he sat on a limb and photographed his pursuers. "You can see very well," said Mr. Wille, "why I have no picture of myself doing it."

MAKING PHOTOGRAPHS FROM A PERILOUS POINT IN YOSEMITE VALLEY

Mr. Dugmore's most thrilling moment in Africa would likewise have been impossible to photograph. He had crept to within 30 yards of a sleeping rhinoceros, when the beast suddenly jumped up and charged him at express-train speed. Mr. Dugmore took a head-on picture of the beast at 15 yards, and his companion fired at the drop of the shutter, fortunately turning the animal. Although Mr. Dugmore has no picture of himself in this situation, his photograph of the charging rhinoceros is one of the most remarkable pictures in existence.

Yet photographers have sometimes gotten pictures of themselves in extremely dangerous situations; but such pictures are probably never posed for. That is what Mr. Wille had in mind when he said that one's perilous moments are pictured. I have seen a photograph of a picture man in a battle, who was made conspicuous by his wagon and his outfit, but who was nevertheless calmly grinding away at his machine while shells and bullets were falling all around him. But he was not posing. He was so intent upon his work that he did not know that a fellow knight of the camera had snapped his picture. Mr. Ponting has an equally remarkable likeness of himself. With an assistant he one day climbed the Japanese mountain Asama-Yama to get a picture of the crater. While his helper stood waiting with another camera Mr. Ponting advanced to the edge of the volcano's mouth. He was in the very act of taking a picture when an eruption occurred. The assistant was as quick as Mr. Ponting. He snapped Mr. Ponting before the latter could even turn round. Then the two ran for their lives.

Not all of the difficulties of securing pictures are physical. People have to be photographed as well as things and animals, and many prominent personages have such a deep hatred for camera men that they go to great lengths to balk them. Mr. J. P. Morgan, for instance has an unpleasant habit of breaking his cane over the back of an offending photographer. This would not bother the camera man a particle were it not that Mr. Morgan always sees to it that the camera is broken with the back. Another difficult subject to photograph is John D. Rockefeller.

Many of the men who watch the world with the camera have chosen some special field of endeavor. Mr. E. S. Curtis and Mr. George Wharton Jones have elected to photograph the Indian. But in order to overcome the Indian's fear of the camera and to get intimate pictures of their life that would have historic value these men have had to live for months and years among the aborigines. Mr. James is an adopted member of the Moki Indian tribe. His Indian name is White-man-with-the-long-beard-who-is-not-afraid-of-rattlesnakes. In some of their religious ceremonies the Mokis use live rattlers. Mr. James, in order to get his pictures, went through the ceremonies with them. As a result he was laid up for months with a snake bite.

The photographing of wild creatures likewise has its devotees. Mr. Julian A. Dimock spent a summer photographing tarpon in Florida. Miss Julia Rogers, the naturalist, fished for him, and played the tarpon within range of the camera. The two were in a rowboat. The result of that summer's campaign is a most wonderful series of photographs, showing the huge fish at every stage of their great leaps.

Mr. Dugmore and Mr. Schillings, the German scientist, are among the most daring of animal photographers. Each has spent months in Africa photographing the fauna.

Even more dangerous is the practice, which the world's insatiable thirst for knowledge has brought about, of photographing wild animals at night. In the blazing light of day the photographer can take his picture from a comparatively safe distance, particularly if he is using a telephoto lens. But in the darkness of night the subject must be within the radius of the flashlight—a distance at most of only a few yards. Then, too, wild animals can see in the dark. Man cannot. With the fall of night, also, wild animals lose in part their fear of man. Thus the chances are all against the photographer.

Of all the men who are now watching the world with the camera the most famous is Prof. James Riclton of Maplewood, N. J. That is he is of Maplewood on those few occasions when he is home. Mr. Riclton was once a school teacher. His scientific knowledge and his love of travel caused Mr. Thomas Edison to send him to India to find a certain kind of wood for electrical purposes. Mr. Riclton found the wood. Also he took some pictures. He has been doing it ever since, and that was 40 years ago. Now he is well into the sixties, but there is nothing that daunts him. He is justly known as the dean of the profession.

EXCELLENT GRAIN FIELDS IN WESTERN CANADA

YIELDS OF WHEAT AS HIGH AS 54 BUSHELS PER ACRE.

Now that we have entered upon the making of a new year, it is natural to look back over the past one, for the purpose of ascertaining what has been done. The business man and the farmer have taken stock, and both, if they are keen in business detail and interest, know exactly their financial position. The farmer of Western Canada is generally a business man, and in his stock-taking he will have found that he has had a successful year. On looking over a number of reports sent from various quarters, the writer finds that in spite of the visitation of drouth in a small portion of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, many farmers are able to report splendid crops. And these reports come from different sections, covering an area of about 25,000 square miles. As, for instance, at Laird, Saskatchewan, the crop returns showed that J. B. Peters had 12,800 bushels from 320 acres, or nearly 40 bushels to the acre. In the Blaine Lake district the fields ranged from 15 to 50 bushels per acre, Ben Crews having 1,150 bushels from 24 acres; Edmond Trotter 1,200 bushels off 30 acres, while fields of 30 bushels were common. On poorly cultivated fields but 15 bushels were reported.

In Foam Lake (Sask.) district 100 bushels of oats to the acre were secured by Angus Robertson, D. McRae and C. H. Hart, while the average was 85. In wheat 30 bushels to the acre were quite common on the newer land; but off 15 acres of land cultivated for the past three years George E. Wood secured 495 bushels. Mr. James Traynor, near Regina (Sask.) is still on the shady side of thirty. He had 50,000 bushels of grain last year, half of which was wheat. His market value was $25,000. He says he is well satisfied.

Arthur Somers of Strathclair threshed 100 acres, averaging 25 bushels to the acre. Thomas Foreman, of Milestone, threshed 11,000 bushels of wheat, and 3,000 bushels of flax off 600 acres of land. W. Weatherstone, of Strathclair, threshed 5,000 bushels of oats from 96 acres. John Gonzilla, of Gilles, about twenty-five miles west of Rosthern, Sask., had 180 bushels from 3 acres of wheat. Mr. Gonzilla's general average of crop was over 40 bushels to the acre. Ben Cruise, a neighbor, averaged 45 bushels to the acre from 23 acres. W. A. Rose, of the Walderheim district, threshed 6,000 bushels of wheat from 240 acres, an average of 25 bushels, 100 acres was on summer fallow and averaged 33 bushels. He had also an average of 67 bushels of oats to the acre on a 50-acre field. Wm. Lehman, who has a farm close to Rosthern, had an average of 27 bushels to the acre on 60 acres of summer fallow. Mr. Midsky, of Rapid City (Man.) threshed 1,000 bushels of oats from 7 acres.

The yield of the different varieties of wheat per acre at the Experimental Farm, Brandon, was: Red Fife, 28 bushels; White Fife, 34 bushels; Preston, 32 bushels; early Red Fife, 27 bushels.

The crops at the C. P. R. demonstration farms at Strathmore (Alberta) proved up to expectations, the Swedish variety oats yielding 110 bushels to the acre. At the farm two rowed barley went 48 1/2 bushels to the acre. Yields of from 50 bushels to 100 bushels of oats to the acre were quite common in the Sturgeon River Settlement near Edmonton (Alberta). But last year was uncommonly good and the hundred mark was passed. Wm. Craig had a yield of oats from a measured plot, which gave 107 bushels and 20 lbs. per acre.

Albert Teskey, of Olds (Alberta) threshed a 100-acre field which yielded 101 bushels of oats per acre, and Joseph McCartney had a large field equally good. At Cupar (Sask.) oats threshed 80 bushels to the acre. On the Traquair farm at Cupar, a five-acre plot of Marquis wheat yielded 54 bushels to the acre, while Laurence Barknel had 37 bushels of Red Fife to the acre. At Wordsworth, Reeder Bros. wheat averaged 33 1/2 bushels to the acre, and W. McMillan's 32. William Kraft of Alix (Alberta) threshed 1,042 bushels of winter wheat off 19 1/2 acres, or about 53 bushels to the acre. John Layeroff of Dinton, near High River, Alberta, had over 1,100 bushels of spring wheat from 50 acres.

E. F. Knipe, near Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, had 800 bushels of wheat from 20 acres. W. Metcalf had over 31 bushels to the acre, while S. Henderson, who was hailed badly, had an average return of 32 bushels of wheat to the acre.

McWhirter Bros. and John McEln, of Redvers, Saskatchewan, had 25 bushels of wheat to the acre. John Kennedy, east of the Horse Mills district near Edmonton, from 40 acres of spring wheat got 1,767 bushels, or 44 bushels to the acre.

J. E. Vanderburgh, near Dayslow, Alberta, threshed four thousand bushels of wheat from 120 acres. Mr. D'Arcy, near there, threshed ten thousand and fifty-eight bushels (machine measure) of wheat from five hundred acres, and out of this only sixty acres was new land.

At Fleming, Sask., A. Winter's wheat averaged 39 bushels to the acre and several others report heavy yields. Mr. Winter's crop was not on summer fallow, but on a piece of land broken in 1882 and said to be the first broken in the Fleming district. The agent of the Canadian government will be pleased to give information regarding the various districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, where free homesteads of 160 acres are available.

Feminine.

A local ironworker who has been married a couple of years always declared that his first son should be named Mat, after one of his best friends.

Learning that the ironworker and his wife had recently been blessed with a charming baby, the friend smiled all over his face when he greeted the father on the street.

"Well," he beamed, "how 's little Mat?"

"Mat, nothing," answered the father; "it's 'Mattress.'"—Youngstown Telegram.

It Wasn't a Fire.

The principal of one of the New York East Side night schools was enrolling a new pupil, who was toggled out in a suit of clothes so new that it hurt him. Just before the boy came in the principal had heard the sound of fire engines in the street.

"What is your name?" the principal asked the lad.

"Tom Dugan," was the reply.

"Where was the fire, Tommy?" asked the principal as he wrote down the name. There was no reply; only a scowl.

"I say, where was the fire?" repeated the principal.

"Don't git gay wit me," was the somewhat astonishing answer. "Dere wasn't no fire, see? I bought dis here suit an' I paid seven-fifty for it."

MANY DEFINED PRINCIPLES IN PRUNING FRUIT TREES

Should be Adapted to Different Varieties—in Forming Top of Trees Several Distinct Systems Are Practiced.

(By R. W. FISHER.)

It is known that heavy pruning of the tops of fruit trees in winter or during the dormant period has a tendency to produce wood growth, or cause the trees to grow larger. This is due to the fact that when pruning is done when the tree is dormant the plant food which is taken up by the roots early in the spring is concentrated into a smaller portion of the top and results in the very rapid growth of the parts left. Weak trees are often forced into vigorous growth by heavy top pruning which is done in the winter or early spring.

When vigorous plants are given a heavy winter pruning water sprouts are often produced, because there is more plant food sent up from the roots than the top area can use, resulting in the growth of dormant lateral buds.

Heavy pruning of the top in the summer or when the tree is in an active state of growth has a tendency to check the wood growth, causes fruit buds to form and sometimes results in the growth of water sprouts. The wood growth is checked because when pruning is done when the leaves are performing their function of assimilating plant food a large portion of the area which is making plant food is removed and the supply of prepared plant food is checked, thus causing a decrease of growth over the whole tree.

Heavy root pruning checks the growth of wood by cutting off the supply of moisture and crude plant food. This results in an increasing number of fruit buds. In sections of

The shape, however, should be largely determined by the natural characteristics of the tree. Low-headed trees produce the best results in many localities. They are able to stand heavy winds without injury, the fruit is nearer the ground and makes harvesting a crop and all orchard work much easier, and the trunks are not so likely to be injured by sun-scald.

If one-year-old trees are set out, the pruning the first year will consist in cutting the top back to within eight or ten or twenty-four inches of the ground. The cut should be made just above a strong bud. During the first season three or four branches should be permitted to grow; the others rubbed off soon after the buds expand.

In the spring of the second year, if more than three or four branches grow during the first summer, they should be cut out, making the cut near the main stem and parallel to it. The remaining branches should be cut back to within three or four buds of the main stem, making the cut just above a strong bud.

In the spring of the third year all but three or four branches are cut out, including the terminal branch, and the others are cut back to within three or four buds of the stem from which they grow, the idea being to produce three or four well developed and well situated twigs on each branch each year, and having the branches so placed that the tree will grow into a symmetrical form and be open enough so that the sunlight can get into the center of the tree, thus adding much to the color of the fruit. By cutting each season's growth back to within a few buds of the last season's growth the tree is made to grow much stockier than it otherwise would.

The pruning after the third year is very similar to that given in the third year. Three or four twigs are selected on each growth, the others cut out, and the remaining twigs cut back. All cross limbs or limbs that are too close together, or that rub together should be cut out.

Pruning First Year at Planting. Second Year Growth.

the country where fruit trees have a tendency to start bearing very young and to produce large crops of fruit, it is often necessary to do such pruning that will cause wood growth rather than the production of fruit buds.

In forming the top of the tree several distinct systems are practiced.

MAKES HANDY FIRE ESCAPE

Stout Knotted Rope Makes Excellent Substitute for Ladder—Any Cool-Headed Person Can Use It.

It is not feasible to have a ladder at every window, and in case of fire people in the second story are often in danger of their lives. For safety, the large knots in a strong rope, coil it neatly on the floor or some place where it can be found immediately in the dark. Make a loop at one end so it may be looped around a bed post or a stout hook placed in the window frame. In case of fire throw out the loose end of the rope and scramble out. Any cool-headed person can wriggle down a rope of this kind, although they may blister their hands or get a slight fall in doing so, but even so, it is better than being roasted.

GROWING HERBS IS ESSENTIAL

Nothing Can Quite Take Their Place in Household—Seeds of Annual Sort Should be Sown Early.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.) No garden can be considered complete that does not include a goodly variety of herbs; for nothing can quite fill their place in the household.

The seeds of annual sorts should be sown early, but of the perennial varieties (and many of the best are that) the seeds sown in mid-summer will produce strong plants that may be freely cut from the following year.

Make the soil rich, mellow and fine before sowing the seed. When the seedling plants are large enough they may be transplanted to the borders, or the fence-row where they can grow undisturbed year after year.

When the roots become large they may be divided and new plants started if more are wanted, though two or three plants of one variety will furnish all a good-sized family will need, as the leaves should be cut several times during the season.

The leaves should be cut when fully grown and before the plant blooms, choosing a clear, dry day for the work. Spread in a cool, shady room to dry, as drying in the sun or by the fire spoils both color and flavor.

When thoroughly dry powder the leaves by rubbing between the hands and store away in tight cans or boxes.

Corn Producer Wins $500.

Perley G. Davis of Granby, Mass., sets a new world's record for corn this year's production, and was given a $500 award by the New England Corn exposition judges. The record was made on one acre of land, from which Mr. Davis harvested 108 1/2 bushels of crib dry yellow flint corn. His yield at harvest time was 127 bushels of shelled corn.

Australian Wool Industry.

It has been calculated that the industry of wool production brings Australia an annual return of from $150,000,000 to $175,000,000. But this does not include the returns from the sales of sheep, stud and flock, and the large quantity disposed of at the yards for local consumption. Possibly all these bring the total up to $250,000,000 a year.

OPINION NOT ALWAYS FINAL

Pretty Safe to Say That Doctor's Diagnosis Was "Away Off" in This Case.

The pretty daughter of a physician is engaged to a college student of whom her father does not altogether approve. His daughter is too young to think of marriage, the doctor asserts; the college student is too young to think of it, likewise. It is out of the question.

She explained all this to her lover the other night.

"Father says," she summed it up; "father says, dear, that I will have to give you up."

The young man sighed. "Then it's all over?" he murmured, with gloomy interrogation. And the girl laughed and blushed.

"Well," she said, "well, you—know that when the doctor gives you up that's just the time for you to take more hope. Isn't it sometimes that way?"—Reboboth Sunday Herald.

PAINFUL FINGER NAILS CURED

"I have suffered from the same trouble (painful finger nails) at different periods of my life. The first time of its occurrence, perhaps twenty-five years ago, after trying home remedies without getting helped, I asked my doctor to prescribe for me, but it was not for a year or more that my nails and fingers were well. The inflammation and suppuration began at the base of the finger nail. Sometimes it was so painful that I had to use a poultice to induce suppuration. After the pus was discharged the swelling would go down until the next period of inflammation, possibly not more than a week or two afterwards. These frequent inflammations resulted in the loss of the nail. I had sometimes as many as three fingers in this state at one time.

"Perhaps ten years later I began again to suffer from the same trouble. Again I tried various remedies, among them a prescription from a doctor of a friend of mine, who had suffered from a like trouble. This seemed to help somewhat for a time, but it was not a permanent cure; next tried a prescription from my own doctor, but this was so irritating to the sensitive, diseased skin that I could not use it. I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had used the Cuticura Ointment previously on my children's scalps with good effect. I did not use the Soap exclusively, but I rubbed the Cuticura Ointment into the base of the nail every night thoroughly, and as often beside as I could. I had not used it but a few weeks before my nails were better, and in a short time they were apparently well. There was no more suppuration, nor inflammation, the nails grew out clean again. One box of Cuticura Ointment was all that I used in effecting a cure." (Signed) Mrs. I. J. Horton, Katonah, N. Y., Apr. 13, 1910. On Sept. 21, Mrs. Horton wrote: "I have had no further return of the trouble with my finger nails."

As It Appeared in Print.

Senator Newlands of Nevada was soaring in debate one day, soaring so high he "hit the ceiling." He realized he was getting a trifle flowery and to excuse himself said: "Indeed, Mr. President, perfriv'atory may be pardoned, for this subject furnishes all the food eloquence needs."

That sounded pretty good to Mr. Newlands, but he was a bit abashed when he read in the Congressional Record next day that he asserted his topic "furnished all the food elephants need."

The Selfish View.

A READER CURES HIS CONSTIPATION—TRY IT FREE

Simple way for any family to retain the good health of all its members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels has looked the whole field over, has practiced the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what he called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowels muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure.

Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 85 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. Great Baseball Play.

"What was the greatest baseball play you ever saw?" asked a friend of Governor-elect John W. Tener.

"The greatest play I ever saw," said he, "took place in an amateur game on a town lot at Charleroi. The teams were playing on a wet field and an outfielder who wore a derby hat went after a high fly. He came to a little pond and taking his eye off the ball made a jump to cross it. As he was leaping the ball struck him on the head, went through the crown of his hat and lodged there. The base runner was out and the fielder had not touched the ball with his hands. Can you beat it?"—Washington Correspondence Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby grow off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

Why Didn't You Vote Tuesday?

Tuesday's tight vote at the judicial primaries in Detroit prompts the Free Press to make inquiry as to the cause of the indifference manifested in the selection of candidates for circuit judges. The situation in Detroit was the same as elsewhere in the state, and the digest of the condition by the Free Press will apply to Charlevoix County as well as Detroit and other places. The editorial is as follows:

The utter lack of popular interest in the judicial primaries this week has been observed with misgivings by thoughtful people. Mr. Codd, who led the poll, received a total of little, if any, more than 12,000 in the entire county, and his city vote will barely mount to 10,000. It seems fair to put the aggregate number of republican ballots below 14,000, and the official count may show that it was considerably below that figure.

To what cause is this want of concern to be traced? The selection of judges certainly cannot be considered a matter of such slight importance in our governmental affairs that it can be regarded with indifference by practically all of the electorate. Yet 14,000 is a trifling percentage of the normal republican strength of Wayne county. Even the majority primaries of last September, unimpressive as they were until after the polls were closed, brought out 23,500 voters in the party. The ensuing election was of course, not a measure of either the republican or the democratic following and its total of 22,000 for the nominal candidate of one party for the office as well as its 50,000 combined vote for the two candidates, cannot properly be used for comparison. Take the 1908 election instead, however, and it appears that the Breitmeyer 35,000 must pretty well represent the republican normal number at the time, increased by the growth of population in the meantime to 40,000 at least this year.

Of these 40,000 voters less than a quarter took the trouble to go to the booths this week. To what must their indifference be laid? It is not a sufficient explanation to say that this was only a judicial election and that people don't care about such contests, for the judicial election that installed the present circuit judges six years ago brought out 30,000 voters for Judge Brooke, who led the republican ticket, and 30,000 for Judge Murphy, the democratic leader. The city must have added 100,000 to its population in the six intervening years, but the incoming residents are not discovered at all in the present test, and the concern of the voters who were here in 1905 has dropped off to a meager part of its former proportions.

The total vote in the city election of last fall fell off, materially from that recorded two years before. The total vote in the judicial primary is insignificant compared with that of the spring judicial election six years ago. The fall showing might be accounted for by the explanation that it was not a presidential year, but how is the singular apathy of Tuesday to be expunged?

What is the cause of the indifference to this urgent public duty, and what is the remedy?

The politicians have their theories, no doubt, but we should like to hear from the average man. Why didn't you vote this week? Is your interest in politics decreasing, or were you merely unconcerned in this particular contest? A frank expression of beliefs on the subject ought to furnish some timely information about the present sentiments of the voters, and of the non-voters as well.

Good luck seems to stumble right onto the hustler.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Are tonic in action, quick in results. A special medicine for all kidney and bladder disorders. Henry Bower, Traverse City, Mich., says: "Since the first of the year I have been a very sick man. Have spent a lot of money in doctoring, have bought various kidney medicines and used them but to no effect. Foley Kidney Pills were brought to my notice through a friend and I decided to try them. After using them a short time I was greatly relieved and can honestly say that they did me a world of good."

Afloat on Drifting Ice.

TRAVERSE CITY.—This city was plunged into intense excitement Sunday morning when it was discovered that a heavy south wind was carrying the ice out of the bay and that 30 men and boys were afloat on an ice floe which had been detached from the main body and was rapidly moving lakeward.

The moving ice floe was discovered by some of the skaters when a gap of several feet was shown. Several jumped safely over, Harry Dean receiving a severe sprain in making the leap. The rest could not escape. The alarm was soon spread and hundreds gathered and finally boats were secured and all safely rescued, when the ice was about a quarter of a mile out from shore.

On the opposite side of the bay, at the same time, Lloyd Lafranier, Peter Hansen and Julius Swanson were discovered afloat on a floe about an acre in extent. Lafranier, a young banker, discovered the ice moving and thought they could get off at Marion Island, but the wind was carrying the ice towards the opening to the lake. He took a plunge and swam to shore, a distance of 200 yards. He was exhausted and nearly frozen when taken to a farmhouse.

Hansen and Swanson stayed on the ice, which was rapidly breaking in a heavy sea. A rescue party went out from the city carrying a small duck boat, the only craft to be had in a hurry. George Madison put to sea alone, the boat not being large enough for more than two men in peril. The ice was then two miles from shore. After a desperate struggle, he reached the floe and finally, with great difficulty, rescued the men. A few moments afterwards the seas smashed the ice and in half an hour was entirely out of the bay. The small boat was nearly swamped several times and it was with great difficulty that shore was reached safely. Had Madison been five minutes later the men would have been drowned.

Some men like to play about having been on a float.

The man who makes enemies is at least doing something.

The man who is on the square does not have to sneak round.

300 SALARIES RAISED EVERY MONTH

Just to prove that we can raise your salary. And if one thing more than another proves the ability of the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, to raise the salaries of poorly paid but ambitious men and women it is the monthly average of 300 letters voluntarily written by students telling of salaries raised and positions bettered by I. C. S. Training. And this is but a small percentage of the entire number benefited. Estimated on a basis of the 300 who report salary increases every month, even though we should help but half of our students, there would be made possible for I. C. S. trained men in one year increase salaries amounting to over twenty million dollars! These results mean something. They prove that I. C. S. Training is the most powerful force for promotion in the world.

Of the hundreds of thousands benefited by this system of training hundreds have been in the poorest circumstances; young men and old men living in all corners of the world; men working for small wages with unsteady employment; in short, hundreds that were in worse circumstances than you are now. They have taken the first step to better themselves and have doubled, tripled, quadrupled their earnings. All this proves that you can do the same if you have the will power to start—if you are not ambition in the ranks of the "put it off's." Mark and mail the coupon. If you have the least spark of
