Baccalaureate

Annual Exercises at Methodist Church, Sunday.

The Baccalaureate sermon and exercises for the Class of 1911 were held at the Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday evening. A fine musical program was given including anthems, choruses, and a male quartette. Rev. T. Porter Bennett delivered the sermon, discussing along educational lines. Below is a resume of the sermon.

Text: Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.—Prov. 22: 29.

Diligence the secret of success in the educational world or in any department of life. If we expect to be of any service to others we must show forth diligence in whatever we undertake. Benj. Franklin said, "Diligence is the mother of good luck." You graduates are here as a result of your diligence in pursuing your several studies. You have applied yourself to the tasks as they have come to you, you have sought out a solution to the problems that you have had to solve. Diligence might almost be said to be education put in action.

Education is the development of individuality, the drawing forth and putting into healthy action all the powers of man, whether of the mind, body or spirit. Milton said, "Let all a complete and generous education that which fits a man to perform justly, skillfully and magnanimously all the offices both private and public of peace and war."

We ought therefore to note what education is; its object and its results, and see if it can be applied to our text.

We will be obliged to turn to those who are an authority. We must remember great men are great educators. Confucius who lived 550-478 B. C. said, "Learning without thought is labor lost, thought without learning is perilous. He says knowledge is when you know a thing to hold that you know it and when you do not know a thing to confess your ignorance."

Buddah gave us his idea of education when he said, "Self denial virtuous life, suppression of all self seeking, love for fellowmen, are cardinal virtues which bring blessedness to mankind."

In China the motive of education was to prepare for success in this life, in India for the future life, in Persia to support the state, in Israel to rehabilitate the nation and in Egypt to maintain the supremacy of the priests. Aristotle held that education is a life long task, beginning at birth and continuing till death and includes the development of the body, the character and the intellect.

"Know thyself" and "Man is the measure of all things," are words that Socrates uttered many years ago.

We must not forget that the church has always played an important part in the educational world. Martin Luther said, "Religion is the foundation of all school instruction."

We as a nation are to be congratulated upon our school system and we must never tolerate anything that would handicap our public school system. It is no question that it has been one of the greatest blessings that has been conferred upon any people.

Bacon in his inductive method says, "Experiment, Investigate, Verify." These same words can and ought to be practiced by the students of today. Be able to prove things for yourselves; know why you accept certain statements. We are not machines. We might mention a number of other educators such as Augustine, Charlemagne, Comenius, Pestalozzi and Froebel, names that suggest the uplifting of humanity and the betterment of the world in the world of education.

What are some of the results of education? It reveals ourselves to us. "We learn to do by doing."

We only learn ourselves as it is revealed to us through education. Then it widens our vision. Education is a failure if we do not have a wider vision of life and its realities. We realize that we have not learned all. There are other people in the world that have rights and privileges as well as we have. It gives to a person system. He knows how to solve the problem in a more systematic way. Education teaches him to think for himself. Too many people are letting the other fellow think for him. This will apply to the church as well as outside of the church. If I as a pastor tell you that you must do certain things you have a right to think for yourself in reference thereto. The dogmatism of any church or people are not always correct.

Education brings you in touch with great personalities makes you more efficient and gives you a higher ideal of life.

The schools prepare for citizenship. The future of the nation depends upon our idea of citizenship. If the rising generation gets the true idea of love of country it will receive it from the school.

Take college men as they are related to high official positions. Statistics tell us that the college graduates in the United States have averaged one to seven hundred and fifty of the adult population. Yet from this small fraction have come thirty-two per cent of our Congressmen, forty-six per cent of our senators, sixty-five per cent of the presidents, and seventy-three per cent of the judges of the Supreme Court. Today college education increases the possibilities of young men reaching success one thousand and forty-three fold while in point of wealth it is estimated that college training gives a young man four hundred and forty times as many chances of becoming rich as the uneducated man possesses. Then we parents ought to see to it that our children have the privilege of attending school and that we as young people seize every opportunity to gain an education.

At ten years of age Benjamin Franklin was cutting wicks for tallow candles in a Boston candle shop. At seventeen on a Sabbath morning we find him trudging through the streets of Philadelphia, with all of his earthly possessions on his back and in his pockets. The sum total of his assets consisted of some old clothes one silver dollar, a shilling in copper coin and—himself. As he passed by a girl, who afterwards became his wife, looked out of the window and laughed and made sport of the grotesque figure of young Franklin. But that sturdy youth had learned the lesson that all must learn: that there is in every life a work to be wrought out which places that life at market value whether we willed it to be or not, and with this thought in view he applied himself diligently to his work. His abilities were soon recognized. He arose. By and by he became the founder of the University of Pennsylvania and the American Philosophical Society and a little more than half a century after that Sabbath morning when we saw him walking down the street of Philadelphia we find him standing before the King of France the accredited ambassador and representative of the United States of America.

We as young people must remember that the men who have made a success of life have known the value of time. Education is the power of Attention, Observation, Judgment, Expression and Appreciation. The demand today is not for the average man but the superior man. The best is none too good. The world demands men who will choose honor at the price of success and scorn success at the price of honor. Remember students "labor omnia vincit" labor conquers all things. Also that Pope has said "A little learning is a dangerous thing."

The Faculty, Parents and Graduates are to be congratulated at this time. Your motto, "We have reached the bay in safety: The ocean lies beyond," is very appropriate. No one knows what storms and tempests may be upon that ocean but place your hand in the Great Teacher's hand and be diligent in all your work and all will be well.

Remember what Horace Mann said in his last address to the graduating class at Antioch, "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity."

A man with more dollars than sense makes a noise like an easy mark. There's always something about a wedding that doesn't suit a woman who was not invited. Marriage is about the only thing that can convince an old bachelor that he doesn't know it all. Women have queer ideas of a good time, but they seldom have a dark brown taste next morning. When a man bets and loses his money he attributes it to ill luck, but when he wins he thinks it due to his smartness.

Foreword

Some one has said, "the true value of a life assurance policy must be gauged by the security of the protection given; if it proves to be a good investment, all the better; when both are shown, there is nothing on earth to equal it."

The security of the protection afforded by the Sun Life of Canada needs no comment, and the profits paid are not exceeded by any company on this continent.

ADVICE TO THE UNINSURED.

Beware of widows! Especially your own!

A man of principle leaves his widow principal.

If you pay as you go in life, pay your widow as you go in death.

WHAT WORRY DOES.

Dr. Snow, of London, the distinguished opponent of vivisection, says that worry is the most frequent cause of cancer. In times past this affliction, which is becoming increasingly prevalent, has been attributed to the excessive consumption of meat, to fish and even eggs. If worry predisposes humanity to such a scourge at this, in addition to all the other ills for which it is held responsible, it is plain that the earth has few evils so great or so general, says the New York Herald. Where contagion and herdity slay their thousands, worry kills its hundreds of thousands. Worry leads straight to insanity. It prepares the way for consumption and kidney trouble. It shatters the nervous system and thus is the forerunner of a hundred complaints which lower vitality, produce suffering and result in untimely death. Progress in sanitary science, in surgery and in medical practice has lengthened the average span of life in spite of conditions which undeniably increase the sum of worry. In fact, worry is the price that many pay for the advantages which they now enjoy. If mankind could have had the full benefit of the wonderful discoveries of the past century or more, with none of the drawbacks of increasing worry, the average of life would be much greater than it is.

The statement of Professor Kenneth G. Smith that for the average man a trade is better than a profession is absolutely true, yet there is on the part of some very average people a disrespect for labor, and a loathing for honest grime. A numerously represented class of young men on leaving high school yearn for employment in which they can wear good clothes and not soil their hands. They would sooner by clerks than mechanics. If their relatives will supply them with the means of further schooling they will proceed to be doctors or lawyers, thought without any special calling in the direction of a profession. Often it happens that individuals who might have been of use in the world in a mechanical pursuit are failures through life, because namby-pambyism caused them to make a wrong start.

President David Starr Jordan of the Leland Stanford university has decided that no more baseball shall be played by the students at that institution. His decision came as the result of his attendance at a game, which he says was characterized by "systematic muckerism." That is a phrase which sounds as if it might stick.

Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard, learned to ride a bicycle at 65. Thomas Huxley performed the more difficult feat of learning Greek at the same age, but was not watched by the small boys in the neighborhood.

Boston finds that unless congregations can pay more to preachers, pulpits, if filled at all, will be occupied by "fourth-rate" men. Even "second rate" sounds rather distressing and not suggestive of active competition with the balmy Sunday.

A New York broker has been sued for $100,000 by the husband of an actress because her affections were alienated. This should make it possible for the lady to dispense with the services of her press agent.

It has been decided by a Chicago judge that a woman is not bound, morally, legally or otherwise, to shave her husband's neck. This should have a tendency to clarify the situation.

Four goats into which experimenters had injected 1,000,000,000 germs of various kinds have escaped and are astray in New York. This ought to bring about a lively movement in disinfectants.

According to a New York court decision the actor who falls into the orchestra pit, keeps eight balls in the air or clouts his partner with a newspaper of a Sunday evening is not taking part in a concert.

Tourists who are anxious to see the coronation procession will be able to do so for five dollars, says an exchange. We are still determined, however, to wait for the moving pictures.

A Cornell professor wants boys encouraged to study Greek to take their minds off moneymaking. But such theory is Greek to the modern business parent's mind.

A great scandal has been hushed in England because a woman has decided not to go into court and talk. But can a scandal be permanently hushed in that way?

Promote Anarchy Young Willie Not Made Better Citizen By FREEMAN TILDEN

SURELY there must be a considerable number of thoughtful persons who on the fifth of July survey the wreckage from the preceding twenty-four hours with dismay and doubt. A whole day in which the normal forces of law and order are practically suspended, during which serious misdemeanor becomes merely "excess of spirit," when private property can be destroyed with impunity and moral delinquency and general license are encouraged—these are things worth thinking of. The farcical part of such an anarchistic condition lies in the attempt to attribute to it a world of patriotic impulse. Any suggestion toward an amelioration of the evils of Fourth of July celebrations is usually met with pained expressions of distrust. These people want to throttle Patriotism. They are trying to discount Liberty. They are told how essential it is that the hoodlum, the unspanked youth, the mentally half-equipped adult shall range the streets, make the night dreadful, the day dangerous and commit excesses at will—to the end of expressing a great content with Liberty. And yet these conservative souls continue to doubt.

In an unguided moment an American of some importance, enthusiastic over the success of that deliberative council which effected a republic and the courageous men who maintained it, announced that "the eagle should scream." So it did, and justifiably. But it is a certainty that if the eagle had lost its sense of proportion and continued to scream within that gentleman's hearing a sufficient length of time, he would have had an enthusiastic desire to wring its neck. He meant "reasonably."

So, nowadays, it is hard for some honest people to see why shooting blank cartridges and blowing a tin horn will make a better citizen of young Willie; why the loss of his front gate is necessary to impress Mr. Smith with his civic duties; or why—and this is most serious—the deadly tetanus germ should be turned loose among hundreds of lads whose only fault is that their parents have not the intelligence of the animal which points out dangers to its young.

Once every year the American nation exhibits itself in a barbaric spectacle pitifully unfit for the observance of such a tremendously important and far-reaching event. Is he a hopeless mollycoddle who prefers to carry the instincts of patriotism in his head, rather than frighten his neighbor's horse with it? Is it decadent to ask for the suppression of a palpable madness which profits nobody and causes a distinct loss of time, of money, of peace, of respect for law, of respect for self?

How Many Moving Pictures Help Young By ROGER KING St. Louis

There has been so much printed of late about the harm caused the young by moving picture shows that I should like to add my little bit to the side of the defense. For my part, I have never attended a show yet that did not contain something worthy of human interest. Only last evening I dropped into a moving picture show on my way downtown. One of the films showed a poor father, a peddler, who met with an accident, who lost track of his daughter while he was delirious in the hospital. When he was well again, six weeks after being hurt, he started out, ragged and hungry, to look for his child. When he stopped at a country house to make inquiries he was asked if he cared for a bit to eat. His thanks were almost tearful. The spectators knew and I knew that an act of practical Christianity had been shown on the screen. Why did the tears start in my eyes? Why was I on the edge of my seat waiting to see if the man of the house would turn him away hungry? Right then and there I started to think of the many times a poor, deserving man has been turned away hungry and footsore from the door of many a man who lets his Christian feelings fade as he passes out from the Sunday service.

"From Under the Flying Chaff" By A. W. MACY Author of "Shortcut Philosophy"

Adversity is a good sifter of friends. "All the world loves a lover," till he gets married. There is never any reduction in the wages of sin. The devil is uneasy when honest men get together. In the hands of a fool a fortune becomes a misfortune. Married couples who cannot agree might try being agreeable. When suspicion creeps in at one window confidence flies out at another. You might as well throw stones at the east wind as argue with a conceited man. Children have themselves to blame if they neglect the proper training of their parents. You take small chances in betting on a "sure thing," for you are almost certain to lose. The young man who was expecting to accept a position has been obliged to hunt for a job. MEASURES FOR CONTROLLING HARMFUL GRAPE-ROOT WORM

Special Investigation Made by Bureau of Entomology at Washington—Spraying With Arsenical Poison Is Recommended.

During the last 10 or 15 years the grape-root worm has attracted much attention on account of ravages in vineyards in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. American varieties of grapes had been rather free from insect attacks on the roots up to that time, but the grape-root worm is now recognized as the most serious of the insects that feed on our grapes. A special investigation by the bureau of entomology at Washington has been made the subject of a report, bulletin No. 89, from which the following extracts are made:

After discussing the vineyard conditions, remedial measures tested and various field experiments to control the pest, the report recommends spraying the vines with an arsenical poison when the beetles feed on the foliage. They feed much more freely immediately after emergence from the ground than later on, hence the advisability of spraying promptly. A sharp lookout should, therefore, be kept from the middle of June forward. If pupae are found in the soil the beetles may be expected to emerge within a week or ten days. The formula recommended consists of arsenate of lead three pounds to 50 gallons bordeaux, the 5-5 formula.

When pupae are discovered the soil beneath the trellis should be removed by the horse hoe and carefully and thoroughly stirred with the hand hoe.

NUT-BEARING TREES BEST

Worthy of Attention of All Farmers and in Many Cases They Will be Found Profitable to Grow.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.) Nut trees are worthy of the attention of all farmers and in many cases they will be found profitable to the grower and easy to get started.

Black walnut, chestnut, tickory and butter-nut trees are propagated by gathering the nuts in the fall before they have become dry and planting in April in nicely prepared ground as deep as the diameter of the nut, either where they are to grow or in a row in the garden—in the latter case they should be taken up the first winter and buried beyond the power of the frost.

If one half of the top roots are pruned before setting the young trees the lateral roots will put forth a more vigorous growth and the trees are more sure to make a good, healthy growth.

It is to be hoped that these kind of trees will receive more attention in the future than they have in the past as there are few farms that do not have fence rows or waste lands that could be made useful by planting to some variety of nut-bearing trees.

Burbank Cantaloupe. Hal B. Fullerton of the Long Island experimental farm says the much-lauded Burbank cantaloupe creation turned out to be a fuzzy, slim, elongated curiosity, rather pointed at the blossom end, flat and insipid in flavor, somewhat like a cross between a raw citron and a squash.

Old Pear Trees. There are pear trees now in the vicinity of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, supposed to have been growing at the time of the Revolution, and which are in good healthy condition; and numerous ones which, evidently, have passed 75 years.

Larva (Enlarged).

The efficiency of this method may be increased by throwing up a ridge of earth beneath the trellis during the last cultivation preceding summer to encourage the worms to form their pupal cells above the roots of the vine, and thus admit destruction by cultivation without serious injury to the vine roots. No experiments with oil, carbon disulphide, fertilizers, salt, etc., have been found effective in controlling the pest while in the ground, and no spray has been of use in destroying the eggs because these are protected by the bark.

The third season generally exhibits serious, permanent infestation because the vines have by that time grown somewhat rough, and there are crevices in which the females may lay. When the vines in a producing vineyard have been badly injured they may frequently be renovated by cutting back to the ground, so the limited vitality may be devoted to making vegetable growth. A heavy application of fertilizer may be made, the vines thoroughly sprayed when the beetles appear, and thorough cul-

EXCELLENT HOUSE FOR SWINE

The hog house shown in the illustration is planned after the type used by Prof. Dietrich at the Illinois University farm. It is so constructed as to admit the greatest possible amount of sunlight directly into the pens and upon the floors during the season when it is most desired that it should reach these places and also so that it may be kept cool and comfortable during the summer heat. For the latter purpose shades may be drawn over the open upper windows and the concrete floors sprinkled with cool water during the greatest heat of the day. The roof should project far enough at the eaves so that the lower windows are shaded by it when the sun is high on summer days. By keeping the doors open an air current may be kept passing in at the lower part of the house and going out at the top through the shaded windows which should be open from the top. The use of net wire partitions between the pens, and along the alleys aids materially in perfecting this current which would be more or less obstructed by solid board or plank structures.

In planning a house of the foregoing type the dimensions should first be determined especially with regard to its width as the height of the windows must be adjusted accordingly to have the maximum amount of sunlight fall upon the floors of the pens at the proper time. The latitude of the locality should also be taken into consideration in determining the height at which the windows must be placed to get the desired results after the width of the building has been determined.

Evergreen Windbreak. A windbreak of evergreens is valuable in many ways, and has no drawback if not set so close to the house as to shut off breezes in summer, or to shed leaves upon the lawn and kill out the grass. At the proper distance it is both attractive and useful. It keeps off the cold winds from the house so that we scarcely realize how much wind is blowing beyond the hedge. When set near the barn it is a valuable shelter for stock. The cows when turned out, quickly seek the protection of the evergreens.

Wisteria Leaves. The tender leaves of the Wisteria are largely used in China for food. The bark is used for making clothes, ropes and sandals.

Gas From Tree. The cottonwood tree is rich with gas and experiments are being conducted with the view of extracting it and burning it from a holder.

FEED YOUNG GIRLS

Must Have Right Food While Growing. Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain that which is up-building and nothing harmful.

At that age the structure is being formed and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic condition and cause life-long suffering.

A young lady says: "Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago that I finally quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles, and nervousness."

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk at my meals, but at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum."

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had it made right—according to directions on the package—I found it grateful in flavour and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum!"

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than for a long while before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Jeffries Mansion Was Besieged by Callers.

The murder of the aristocratic Astoria, therefore, was hailed by the editors as an unmitigated journalistic blessing, and they proceeded to play it up for all it was worth. All the features of a first-class sensation were present. The victim, Robert Underwood, was well known in society and a prominent art connoisseur. The place where the crime was committed was one of the most fashionable of New York's hostels. The presumed assassin was a college man and the son of one of the most wealthy and influential of New York's citizens.

True, this Howard Jeffries, the son, was a black sheep. He had been mixed up in all kinds of scandals before. His own father had turned him out of doors, and he was married to a woman whose father died in prison. Could a better combination of circumstances for a newspaper be conceived? The crime was discovered too late for the morning papers to make mention of it, but the afternoon papers fired a broadside that shook the town. All the evening papers had big scare heads stretching across the entire front page, with pictures of the principals involved and long interviews with the coroner and Capt. Clinton. There seemed to be no doubt that the police had arrested the right man, and in all quarters of the city there was universal sympathy for Mr. Howard Jeffries, Sr. It was terrible to think that this splendid, upright man, whose whole career was without a single stain, who had served his country gallantly through the civil war, should have such disgrace brought upon him in his old age.

Everything pointed to a speedy trial and quick conviction. Public indignation was aroused almost to a frenzy, and a loud clamor went up against the law's delay. Too many crimes of this nature, screamed the yellow press, had been allowed to sully the good name of the city. A fearful example must be made, no matter what the standing and influence of the prisoner's family. Thus goaded on, the courts acted with promptness. Taken before a magistrate, Howard was at once committed to the Tombs to await trial, and the district attorney set to work impaneling a jury. Justice, he promised, would be swiftly done. One newspaper stated positively that the family would not interfere, but would abandon the scapegrace son to his richly deserved fate. Judge Brewster, the famous lawyer, it was said, had already been approached by the prisoner's wife, but had declined to take the case. Banker Jeffries also was quoted as saying that the man under arrest was no longer a son of his.

As one paper pointed out, it seemed a farce and a waste of money to have any trial at all. The assassin had not only been caught red-handed, but had actually confessed. Why waste time over a trial? True, one paper timidly suggested that it might have been a case of suicide. Robert Underwood's financial affairs, it went on to say, were in a critical condition, and the theory of suicide was borne out to some extent by an interview with Dr. Bernstein, professor of psychology at one of the universities, who stated that he was by no means convinced of the prisoner's guilt, and hinted that the alleged confession might have been forced from him by the police, while in a hypnotic state. This theory, bolstering as it did their pet sensation, did not suit the policy of the yellow press, so the learned professor at once became the target for editorial attack.

The sensation grew in importance as the day for the trial approached. All New York was agog with excitement. The handsome Jeffries mansion on Riverside drive was besieged by callers. The guides on the sight-seeing coaches shouted through their megaphones:

"That's the house where the murderer of Robert Underwood lived."

The immediate vicinity of the house the day that the crime was made public was thronged with curious people. The blinds of the house were drawn down as if to shield the inmates from observation, but there were several cabs in front of the main entrance and passers by stopped on the sidewalk, pointing at the house. A number of newspaper men stood in a group, gathering fresh material for the next edition. A reporter approached rapidly from Broadway and joined his colleagues.

"Well, boys," he said cheerily, "anything doing? Say, my paper is going to have a bully story to-morrow! Complete account by Underwood's valet. He tells how he caught the murderer just as he was escaping from the apartment. We'll have pictures and everything. It's fine. Anything doing here?" he demanded.

"Now," granted the others in disgruntled tones.

"We saw the butler," said one reporter, "and tried to get a story from him, but he flatly refused to talk. All he would say was that Howard Jeffries was nothing to the family, that his father didn't care a straw what became of him."

"That's pretty tough!" exclaimed another reporter. "He's his son, after all."

"Oh, you don't know old Jeffries," chimed in a third. "When once he makes up his mind you might as well try to move a house."

The afternoon was getting on; if their papers were to print anything more that day they must hasten downtown.

"Let's make one more attempt to get a talk out of the old man," suggested one enterprising scribe.

"All right," cried the others in chorus. "You go ahead. We'll follow in a body and back you up."

Passing through the front gate, they rang the bell, and after a brief parley were admitted to the house. They had hardly disappeared when a cab drove hurriedly up and stopped at the curb. A young woman, heavily veiled, descended, paid the driver, and walked quickly through the gates toward the house.

Annie tried to feel brave, but her heart misgave her when she saw this splendid home with all its evidence of wealth, culture and refinement. It was the first time she had ever entered its gates, although, in a measure, she was entitled to look upon it as her own home. Perhaps never so much as now she realized what a deep gulf lay between her husband's family and herself. This was a world she had never known—a world of opulence and luxury. She did not know how she had summoned up courage enough to come. Yet there was no time to be lost. Immediate action was necessary. Howard must have the best lawyers that money could procure. Judge Brewster had been dead to her entreaties. He had declined to take the case. She had no money. Howard's father must come to his assistance. She would plead with him and insist that it was his duty to stand by his son. She wondered how he would receive her, if he would put her out or be rude to her. He might tell the servants to shut the door in her face. Timidly she rang the bell. The butler opened the door, and summoning up all her courage, she asked: "Is Mr. Jeffries in?"

To her utter amazement the butler offered no objection to her entering. Mistaking her for a woman reporter, several of whom had already called that morning, he said:

"Go right in the library, madam; the other newspaper folk are there."

She passed through the splendid reception hall, marveling inwardly at the beautiful statuary and pictures, no little intimidated at finding herself amid such splendid surroundings. On the left there was a door draped with handsome tapestry.

"Right in there, miss," said the butler.

She went in, and found herself in a room of noble proportions, the walls of which were lined with bookshelves filled with tomes in rich bindings. The light that entered through the stained-glass windows cast a subdued half-light, warm and rich in color, on the crimson plush furnishings. Near the heavy flat desk in the center of the room a tall, distinguished man was standing listening deprecatingly to the half-dozen reporters who were bombarding him with questions. As Annie entered the room she caught the words of his reply:

"The young man who has inherited my name has chosen his own path in life. I am grieved to say that his conduct at college, his marriage, has completely separated him from his family, and I have quite made up my mind that in no way or manner can his family become identified with any steps he may take to escape the penalty of his mad act. I am his father, and I suppose, under the circumstances, I ought to say something. But I have decided not to. I don't wish to give the American public any excuse to think that I am palliating or condoning his crime. Gentlemen, I wish you good-day."

Annie, who had been listening intently, at once saw her opportunity. Mr. Jeffries had taken no notice of her presence, believing her to be a newspaper writer like the others. As the reporters took their departure and filed out of the room, she remained behind. As the last one disappeared she turned to the banker and said:

"May I speak to you a moment?"

He turned quickly and looked at her in surprise. For the first time he was conscious of her presence. Bowing courteously, he shook his head:

"I am afraid I can do nothing for you madam—as I've just explained to your conferees of the press."

Annie looked up at him, and said boldly:

"I am not a reporter, Mr. Jeffries. I am your son's wife."

The banker started back in amazement. This woman, whom he had taken for a newspaper reporter, was an interloper, an imposter, the very last woman in the world whom he would have permitted to be admitted to his house. He considered that she, as much as anybody else, had contributed to his son's ruin. Yet what could he do? She was there, and he was too much of a gentleman to have her turned out bodily. Wondering at his silence, she repeated softly:

"I'm your son's wife, Mr. Jeffries."

The banker looked at her a moment, as if taking her in from head to foot. Then he said coldly:

"Madam, I have no son." He hesitated, and added:

"I am dead."

She looked at him pleadingly.

"But I want to speak to you, sir," Mr. Jeffries shook his head, and moved toward the door.

"I repeat, I have nothing to say."

Annie planted herself directly in his path. He could not reach the door unless he removed her forcibly.

"Mr. Jeffries," she said earnestly, "please don't refuse to hear me—please—"

EXPLORING THE AIR

Six Nations Interested in Series of Investigations.

Mass of Information Concerning Conditions in High Altitudes Is Being Obtained—Weather Balloons Used for Tests.

Omaha.—Six nations are interested in a series of investigations now being carried on in Omaha by the United States government and collaborated in by the governments of England, Germany, France, Italy and Belgium. These investigations have for their object the thorough exploration of the atmosphere at a height of more than ten miles above the earth's surface, and so successfully are they being carried out that a mass of information concerning conditions existing as high as eighteen miles up in the air has been secured. Similar explorations are being conducted in the countries named above and when these are completed all information gathered by each country is to be exchanged with all other countries engaged in the investigations.

The research is being prosecuted with the assistance of "weather balloons," which are sent aloft bearing in attached baskets a number of delicate contrivances for measuring whatever conditions are met on the trip from earth through the clouds and back again to earth. The experiments continue for two weeks, a weather balloon being sent up each afternoon during that period by each of the six governments. When the information thus gained is properly arranged the meteorological bureaus in each of the countries taking part will receive tabulated copies.

The little balloons, which are six feet in diameter, are so arranged that they will explode somewhere far above the ten-mile level, the explosive force being the hydrogen with which the bag is filled.

One of these balloons recently reached a height of 18 miles before bursting and at that altitude the temperature was only 35 degrees below zero, although at a point between nine and ten miles high the records showed that a temperature of 94 degrees below zero had been gone through. On this particular date the temperature at Omaha, the starting point of the balloon, was 47 degrees above zero.

Another balloon registered an air current traveling at a rate of more than 100 miles an hour.

The instruments used are so delicate that one of them—that for measuring the humidity—depends for its record upon the distance that a human hair will lengthen on passing through a stratum of air which contains slightly more moisture than did the stratum immediately below it.

The records are made upon a soot-covered cylinder by a stylus point, operated by a level, which in turn is controlled by the instruments. This cylinder is slowly turned by a clockwork arrangement, and when the box is returned to the weather station a glance at the sooty covering will give the atmospheric pressure, the humidity, and the wind velocity at any height traversed by the balloon.

The strand of hair used in the instrument for determining the humidity is chemically dried before it is placed in position. Thereafter, upon passing through a moist stratum, the hair absorbs a portion of the moisture, the hair lengthens and the stylus point records the change on the cylinder. If the next stratum is dry some of the moisture in the hair is evaporated, the hair becomes shorter, and the cylinder makes the record accordingly.

The air pressure is determined, or recorded by the aid of a small cylinder, from which most of the air has been drawn. A small plunger, to which is attached a stylus point, makes the necessary scratches on the soot-covered cylinder.

A trial package of Munyon's Paw Paw Pills will be sent free to anyone on request. Address Professor Munyon, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. If you are in need of medical advice, do not fail to write Professor Munyon. Your communication will be treated in strict confidence, and your case will be diagnosed as carefully as though you had a personal interview.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour, they do not gripe, they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 26 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw-Paw-Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

Regular size bottle, containing 45 pills, 25 cents. Munyon's Laboratory, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia.

SYNOPSIS.
Howard Jeffries, banker's son, under the evil influence of Robert Underwood, fellow-student at Yale, leads a life of dissipation, marries the daughter of a gambler who died in prison, and is disowned by his father. He is out of work and in desperate straits. Underwood, who had once been engaged to Howard's step-mother, Alicia, is apparently in prosperous circumstances. Taking advantage of his intimacy with Alicia, he becomes a sort of social highwayman. Discovering his true character, Alicia denies him the house. He sends her a note threatening suicide. Art dealers for whom he acted as commissioner, demand an accounting. He cannot make good. Howard calls at his apartments in an intoxicated condition to request a loan of $2,000 to enable him to take up a business proposition. Underwood tells him he is in debt up to his eyes. Howard drinks himself into a maudlin condition, and goes to sleep on a divan. A caller is announced and Underwood draws a screen around the drunken sleeper. Alicia enters. She demands a promise from Underwood that he will not take his life. He refuses unless she will renew her patronage. This she refuses, and takes her leave. Underwood kills himself. The report of the pistol awakens Howard. He finds Underwood dead. Realizing his predicament, he attempts to flee and is met by Underwood's valet. Howard is turned over to the police. Capt. Clinton, notorious for his brutal treatment of prisoners, puts Howard through the third degree, and finally gets an alleged confession from the harassed man. Annie, Howard's wife, declares her belief in her husband's innocence.

"Not this lady," said the boy. "The other lady. I think she said Jeffries, or Jenkins, or something like that."

The captain waved his hand toward the door.

"That's all right—go. We'll find her all right."

The boy went out and the captain turned round to Annie.

"It'll be rather a pity if it isn't you," he said, with a suggestive smile.

"How so?" she demanded.

The captain laughed.

"Well, you see, a woman always gets the jury mixed up. Nothing fools a man like a pretty face, and 12 times 1 is 12. You see if they quarreled about you—your husband would stand some chance." Patronizingly he added, "Come, Mrs. Jeffries, you'd better tell the truth and I can advise you who to go to."

Annie drew herself up, and with dignity said:

"Thanks, I'm going to the best lawyer I can get. Not one of those courtroom politicians recommended by a police captain. I am going to Richard Brewster. He's the man. He'll soon get my husband out of the Tombs."

Reflectively she added: "If my father had had Judge Brewster to defend him instead of a legal shark, he'd never have been railroaded to jail. He'd be alive to-day."

Capt. Clinton guffawed loudly. The idea of ex-Judge Brewster taking the case seemed to amuse him hugely.

"Brewster?" he laughed boisterously. "You'd never be able to get Brewster. Firstly, he's too expensive. Secondly, he's old man Jeffries' lawyer. He wouldn't touch your case with a ten-foot pole. Besides," he added in a tone of contempt, "Brewster's no good in a case of this kind. He's a constitution lawyer—one of them international fellers. He don't know nothing—"

"He's the only lawyer I want," she retorted determinedly. Then she went on: "Howard's folks must come to his rescue. They must stand by him—they must—"

The captain grinned.

CHAPTER XII.

The American dearly loves a sensation, and the bigger and more blood-curdling it is the better. Nothing is more gratifying on arising in the morning and sitting down to partake of a daintily served breakfast than to glance hurriedly over the front page of one's favorite newspaper and see it covered with startling headlines. It matters little what has happened during the night to shock the community, so long as it satisfies one's appetite for sensational news. It can be a fatal conflagration, a fearful railroad wreck, a gigantic bank robbery, a horrible murder, or even a scandalous divorce case. All one asks is that it be something big, with column after column of harrowing details. The newspapers are fully alive to what is expected of them, but it is not always easy to supply the demand. There are times when the metropolis languishes for news of any description. There are no disastrous fires, trains run without mishap, burglars go on a vacation, society leaders act with decorum—in a word the city is deadly dull. Further consideration of the tariff remains the most thrilling topic the newspapers can find to write about.

"From what I hear," he said, "old man Jeffries won't raise a finger to save his scapegrace son from going to the chair. He's done with him for good and all."

Chuckling aloud and talking to himself rather than to his vis-a-vis, he muttered:

"That alone will convince the jury. They'll argue that the boy can't be much good if his own go back on him."

Annie's eye flashed.

"Precisely!" she exclaimed. "But his own won't go back on him. I'll see to it that they don't." Rising and turning toward the door, she asked: "Have you anything more to say to me, captain?"

"No," replied the captain hesitatingly. "You can go. Of course you'll be called later for the trial. You can see your husband in the Tombs when you wish."

No man is so hard that he has not a soft spot somewhere. At heart Capt. Clinton was not an unkind man. Long service in the police force and a mistaken notion of the proper method of procedure in treating his prisoners had hardened him and made him brutal. Secretly he felt sorry for this plucky, energetic little woman who had such unbounded faith in her good-for-nothing husband, and was ready to fight all alone in his defense. Eyeing her with renewed interest, he demanded:

"What are you going to do now?"

Annie reached the door, and drawing herself up to her full height, turned and said:

"I'm going to undo all you have done, Capt. Clinton. I'm going to free my husband and prove his innocence before the whole world. I don't know how I'm going to do it, but I'll do it. I'll fight you, captain, to the last ditch, and I'll rescue my poor husband from your clutches if it takes everything I possess in the world."

Quickly she opened the door and disappeared.

"That's the house where the murderer of Robert Underwood lived."

The immediate vicinity of the house the day that the crime was made public was thronged with curious people. The blinds of the house were drawn down as if to shield the inmates from observation, but there were several cabs in front of the main entrance and passers by stopped on the sidewalk, pointing at the house. LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVE FAILS

In regard to skin diseases medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid. WASH THE GERMS OUT. A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription, penetrates to the disease germs and destroys it, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25-cent trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief.

Now a Day For Father, Dear Father

(BY THOMAS SHELBY)

It used to be "Father, dear father, come home with me now," the story being that father had enough to drink. Daddy used to be represented as all sorts of a bad 'un, with an ineradicable tendency to spend his wages instead of taking them dutifully home on Saturday night. Now it's "My father was a grand old man" and "Pin a rose on Daddy, dear."

That's what they are going to do with father now. No longer is he to be numbered among the despised of earth. The wind of public favor has veered around toward much abused dad, and he is to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle him. Why, he's to have even a day of his own—the third Sunday of every June. On that glad day sermons are to be preached for daddy's glorification, he is to be relieved from his usual duty of helping mother to dry the dinner dishes, and we are all to wear roses in his honor. Happy day for dad!

While mother's day, the second Sunday in May, mothered by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, has a few year's history behind it and is steadily spreading its influence throughout the United States, father's day is a product of the present year. Credit for it must be awarded to Mrs. John B. Dodd, of Spokane, Wash. She is the "mother of father's day." Her suggestion that a day be set aside in her own city in honor of father met with instant recognition and favor in Spokane, and the city authorities fell in line with remarkable unanimity. Father's day, 1910, met with a great success in Spokane.

Mother's day has its white carnation, the emblem of mother. Father's day has its rose, colored for the father who is still in the land of the living, white for the father who has passed away. If you wish to give outward evidence of honor and respect for the father who held you lovingly in his arms when you were a baby wear a rose on father's day, the third Sunday in June, and use your efforts to have your preacher deliver an appropriate sermon on that day. It is suggested also that the showing of some little attention to father if he is still in the land of the living or a visit to his grave if he is dead will be an appropriate feature of the day's observance.

As a long time will elapse before the next observance of father's day, perhaps it might be well to consider how father himself views it. Does he want to be singled out as an object of laudation for doing his duty as a daddy, or does he believe that the simple consciousness of having performed that duty is reward enough? Perhaps the testimony that their efforts are appreciated by the children whom they have helped to rear will be a sweet savor in the mouths of the majority of fathers whose bowed backs and grayed or silvered hairs bear witness to years of toil cheerfully and patiently borne for their offspring.

The words of Governor Hay, of Washington, who was asked to express an opinion of father's day may sound good to many fathers. He wrote:

"Now as to father's day movement while, of course, I do not disapprove of the movement in any way still I feel that mother's day is the more important of the two and that we fathers can scratch along some way or other without having such a flattering mention of us. We men are somewhat bashful and might feel much embarrassed were we to receive so much public adulation. Speak up, fathers of the nation. Would a word of loving praise for you be amiss once a year, or would you prefer that your efforts pass unnoticed and unrewarded save by the approval of your own conscience?"

The effort on the part of the liquor journals and saloon forces generally to have it appear that Pennsylvania possesses a model license liquor law is well explained when it is further made known that the laws of no other state in the union are more favorable to the liquor business than in Pennsylvania. It is estimated that there are 1,200 so-called "blind tigers" in the city of Philadelphia alone. "These places do not pay any license or fee to the city, county or state, but they are protected by the breweries and politicians of that city. Conditions have become so notorious that the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association have actually started a campaign against the horde of illegitimate liquor selling places that are known to exist. In one ward in Philadelphia there are more than 100 places where liquor is openly sold in violation of the state law. And this is the fruit of the liquor law of Pennsylvania to which reference is made in liquor journals as "model license law."

H. S. COMMENCEMENT

Held at Methodist Church Thursday Evening.

The annual Commencement Exercises of the East Jordan High School at the Methodist church Thursday evening officially closed the school year and marked a new era in the lives of three of our young people—Esther L. Monroe, Gladys B. Hudkins and Louise S. Gleason—who completed the work of our schools and were given diplomas.

The auditorium was tastefully decorated in the class colors and ferns. The musical part of the program was fine—the music of the High School Orchestra being encored, A sextette, "Sweet May," was well rendered by Misses Theresa Reid, Irene McEachran, Constance Loveday, Margaret Geck, Beulah Holliday and Mildred Sweet, with Eva Waterman as accompanist. An instrumental duet, "Silvery Wave" by Misses Gleason and Hudkins, and a quartette, "Lucia di Lammermoor," by Theresa Reid, Constance Loveday, Clarke Claire Jr., and Harley Hammond, completed the musical part.

Rev. T. Porter Bennett gave the invocation following which Miss Gladys Hudkins delivered the Welcome Address; Miss Esther Monroe followed with the Class History and Class Will. Class Prophecy, "The Three Fates" was a dialogue given by the three Seniors, Misses Gleason, Hudkins and Monroe. Miss Louise Gleason delivered the Valedictory.

The meat of the program was an address given by Rev. L. S. Brooke of Howell, Mich., his subject being "The Recreation of Fools." Although the hour was late when Mr. Brooke was introduced to his audience, the gentleman held the attention of his hearers for over an hour as he gave an interesting talk of his travels in Europe.

The program closed with the presentation of diplomas by: President of the School Board, E. J. Crossman.

Eighth Grade Graduates.

The eighth grade of our public schools held their Class exercises at the High School building, Wednesday afternoon. The program as given in our last issue, was carried out. The Salutatory was given by Erzella McMillan, Class History by Ralph Fuller, Class Poem by Anna Berg, and Valedictory by Leden Stewart. Considering the age of these youngsters, their efforts in composition and delivery were remarkable. Secretary of the School Board, W. P. Squier presented the diplomas.

Cassius Chandler, a well known citizen of Benzie county, gives an interesting bit of evidence in behalf of the good results that have come to his home community through local option. Mr. Chandler says: "The question of local option has been settled for at least two years in this county and the following personal experience convinces me more thoroughly than ever that it is certainly a benefit to farmers: This spring I delivered two cars of fruit trees in 'dry' Benzie and 'wet' Manistee counties. In the former county my collections on delivery were 90 per cent cash, while in Manistee they were only 20 per cent and for the balance notes were given."

MRS. C. WALSH

For Little Misses

BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

No prettier millinery can be found for the little miss than is pictured here. Children's hats are more elaborate than for many seasons, but the choice of materials saves them from losing their childishness. Simple laces, light and transparent straws, small flowers and soft lightweight ribbons, with high luster, take away every suggestion of grown-up styles and leave us and the little ladies equally delighted with the season's offerings.

The first hat shown is the familiar corday model with puffed crown of lacy braid and brim facing of the same. The upper brim is covered with two rows of side plaited chiffon or mull edged with lace. A collar of ribbon is finished with a rosette at the side, made of two ruffles of the ribbon. Small rose buds and foliage finish the trimming. Children from six to sixteen years can wear a design of this kind.

The odd little hat in Fig. 2 is designed for a little youthful wearer. It is made on a wire frame of a lacy silk braid. The side crown is made of ribbon shirred at each edge on a wire. The brim is finished with the braid laid in box-plaits. A childish wreath of small daisies and forget-me-nots, with bows of ribbon at each side, trim the hat. A single tie (which may be omitted) falls from the left side and is fastened to the shoulder with a little collar pin under a spray of flowers.

DAINTY SCARFS FOR SUMMER

Of All Kinds and Descriptions, and Generally More Elaborate Than Ever.

Marabout and ostrich scarfs are more elaborate than ever. There is no end to the possibilities that lie within the fluffiness of the feathers, combined with folds or shirings of chiffon.

An edging of black and white marabout completes a bit of feminine daintiness that would add charm to any costume.

A fancy bow of cerise velvet combined with chiffon in the same shade has long ends that would be especially effective on a white frock.

The most popular scarfs have bodies of shirred chiffon with edgings of marabout that either match or are in striking contrast.

They are so simple in design that any woman even passably clever with the needle can fashion one in an afternoon.

A muff to match is a smart acquisition and the set looks well with an evening coat or for theater wear.

MADE UP IN DARK BLUE

Charming costume in dark blue striped silk with revers and cuffs in plain silk. The skirt is high-waisted, and with it is worn a blouse in blue ninon.

Backache Means Dying Kidneys

How You May Cure Yourself Quickly and Thoroughly.

Every man and woman should know that backache is usually a well-defined symptom of advancing kidney disease which may end fatally unless treated in time; that rheumatism and bladder trouble are caused from nothing more nor less than kidneys that do not filter the poison from the blood.

Once they are made to work properly, these diseases should quickly disappear. This is done by the new treatment, Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills.

We urge everyone who has pain in the small of the back, profuse or scanty urination, pain in the bladder, cloudy or foul urine, not to fail to get a package today of Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills, and drop all other kidney treatments.

Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills are now sold at all drug stores—25 and 50 cents, or direct from Derby Medicine Co., Eaton Rapids, Mich. If you would like to try them first, ask your druggist for a free sample package. Then buy a package; you will not regret it.

Some Antique Mugs.

The college collector of antiques stopped off at Bacon Ridge.

"Good day, sir," he said, addressing the postmaster. "I am collecting old-fashioned articles and would like to know if I could find anything like that in his hamlet. Say antique mugs, for instance."

Uncle Jason stroked his chin whiskers.

"Antique mugs! By heh, I know the very place where there be two of them now."

"You do? Here's a good cigar. Now where can I find these antique mugs?"

"Why, down on Main street, in Hiram Spruceby's shop. Grandad Wheatley and Pap Simmons are in there getting shaved, and by heh, when it comes to antique mugs, I reckon thars' be the oldest in the country, stranger."

Age of Oysters.

Oysters grow only during the summer and especially during the long, warm summers at that, and are scarcely big enough for the mouth before the third year. It is easy after looking over a bunch of shells to tell how old an oyster is. A summer hump and the winter sink come across the shell every year, but after the seventh or tenth year full growth comes; then, by looking at the sinks between the humps it is hard to tell anything more about Miss Oyster's age. Oysters live to be 20 years old.

Fine Scheme.

LATEST IDEAS IN HOSIERY

Smartly Dressed Girls Have Returned to the "Clock"—Silk Stockings Always the Proper Thing.

"Clocked" hosiery, such as worn years ago, has become the newest fad for smartly-dressed girls. All the stockings for day wear show this embroidery up the side, sometimes in self-colors, but more often in one contrasting. Red or white on black is beyond doubt the best.

This form of decoration has already displaced openwork for the carefully dressed woman. It has finally been decided that lace effects are not good for the street, but that they should be reserved for the house and evening wear. Therefore, elaborate as is the hosiery for dress use, it is very plain for street wear.

Severity in out of doors dress has led to adopting an entirely different quality of hosiery for that time. Girls who can afford to wear silk stockings always, but they have now at least three different qualities. When walking, the thin transparent, though plain, kind is given up.

This is now reserved for the house in the morning, or when paying visits in a motor in the afternoon.

A New Silk.

Among the newest and elegant silk fabrics which the season has called into prominence is satin tulle, a very lustrous weave, heavy of weave, beautiful of finish, but soft and graceful despite its heaviness.

It is quite wide, as are the finer silks, and is to be had in plain colors in the new and fashionable tones, as well as striped effects—the ground one shade and tiny hair line of contrasting color crossing it. The stripes are single and not too far apart to be unduly conspicuous.

For elegant afternoon or more simple street dresses satin tulle is very effective and will make very striking toilettes.

Hint for Traveler.

One girl, who is something of a traveler, has for her trunk a large sheet of blue muslin. This is put in the bottom of the trunk before the packing is started. When everything is in it is folded over the top of the clothes and firmly pinned with safety pins. With this precaution the girl is sure to find her garments as smooth at the end of a trip as at the start.

Making Over Hemstitched Linen.

Having a luncloth and several traycloths that were beginning to break at the hemstitching, I found that by sewing a piece of lace or fancy open finishing braid over the hemstitching I could make them last much longer, and also look as well as new.—Harper's Bazar.

Effective With Gold.

Gloves of the natural yellow doe skin will be found effective with a costume which has gilt buttons or other decorations of the most precious metal.

SETTING A HIGH STANDARD

Child's Idea of Goodness Set Forth in Perfect Faith, Without Irreverence.

All things are relative, and to the child, gazing at life and its wonders with eyes as yet undimmed by sophistication or sorrow, nothing is impossible, nothing unspeakable, nothing too sacred to be discussed or too difficult to be attempted. Not irreverence nor impertinence, but innocence prompts such speeches as that recorded of the child of a popular journalist by his devoted paternal grandmother.

"Grandma," said the little boy, delightfully addressing her, "do you know what's going to happen? Papa says that if we're real, real good, he'll take us to the circus!"

"That's nice," smiled the young-hearted adult between whom and the eager youngling no hint of age separation mars perfect comradeship. "How good do we have to be?"

The embryo man, after a moment of silent consideration: "Oh, as good as God, I guess!"

Socially Launched.

In his native town Jimmy had always been most popular with young and old, but when he was sent away to boarding school, he was for a time too homesick to make friends. His first letter was little more than a wall.

"I'm way behind the other boys in everything," he wrote, dolefully. "Tisn't only studies, but it's gymnasium and banjos and everything. I don't believe they'll ever have much use for me."

But the second letter, written after a week in the new school, was quite different in tone.

"I'm all right," he wrote to his mother. "The boys say they'll teach me all they know, for they're proud to have me here. I can stretch my mouth half an inch wider than any other boy in school, and my feet are the longest by a full inch. So you needn't worry about me any more."—Youth's Companion.

Had His Troubles.

"Michael Dolan, an' is it yourself?"

"Yes, sure it is."

"Well, ye know that bietherin' spalpeen, Widdy Castigan's second husband?"

"That I do."

"He bet me a bob to a pint of whiskey I couldn't swally an egg without breakin' the shell uv it."

"An' ye did it?"

"I did."

"Then phwat's allin' ye?"

"It's doon there," laying his hand on the lower part of his waist coat, "if I jump about I'll break it, and cut me stomach wid the shell, an' if I kape quiet it'll hatch and I'll have a Shanghai rooster scratchin' me inside."

Well Mated.

Thus the inquisitive boarder: "What has become of the old-fashioned woman who used to call a wedding reception an infare?"

Response by the white-haired boarder: "I think she married the old-fashioned man who used to crack his knuckles regularly twice a day."

Ambiguous.

Obliging Shopman (to lady who has purchased a pound of butter)—Shall I send it to you, madam?

Lady—No, thank you. It won't be too heavy for me.

Obliging Shopman—Oh, no, madam, I'll make it as light as I possibly can.—Punch.

The Riddle.

The Sphinx propounded a puzzle. "Why does it always rain the day you move?" she asked.

Herewith the ancients gave it up.

A woman's idea of a brave man is one who isn't afraid to go into a dark closet in which there may be a mouse.

LOST FAITH IN WHITE MAN

Eskimo Tested Efficacy of Telephone Scheme, and Realized He Had Been Deceived.

An interesting story is told regarding the efforts of an Eskimo to construct a telephone line. The Eskimo came into possession of a piece of wire of considerable length and never having seen wire before he asked Professor McMillan of the Peary north pole expedition what it was and what it was for. He was told that the white man strung it on poles stuck in the ground and a voice talking to an instrument at one end could be heard at the other end. After some search the next morning the Eskimo was found to be engaged in telephone construction work of his own. He stuck some sticks in the ground and hung his wire on them. He held one end of the wire to his mouth and talked to it at the top of his voice. Then he ran as fast as he could to the other end and held the wire to his ear with the expectation of hearing his own words repeated.

When he failed to hear any sounds the expression on his face revealed his opinion of his white friend.

To the Childish Mind.

Dorothy Ullman of E. Eighty-fourth street, is a very literal young person. To her mother's definition of the All-Seeing Eye she returned a question as to the size of the eye.

"Can God see everything?" she continued.

"Yes, dear, he can see everything, at all times."

That afternoon Dorothy escorted her mother down town. Before an optician's display she stopped. Then, "Mother," she asked, pointing to the big winking eye in the window "Is God's eye as big as this?"—Cleveland Leader.

Very Much Attached.

Swenson—Why do you always hear a ship referred to as "she"?

Benson—I guess it is because she sometimes becomes very much attached to a buoy.

When a girl yawns it's up to the young man to get in the home stretch.

EXPERIENCE.

Teacher—Tommy, what is a coquette?

Tommy—It's a thing you make out of what's left of the stewed chicken.

A Question of Change.

A story is going the rounds of a couple of young people who attended church recently. When the collection was being taken up the young man commenced fishing in his pocket for a dime. His face expressed his embarrassment as he hoarsely whispered: "I guess I haven't a cent. I changed my pants." The young lady, who had been examining the unknown regions of woman's dress for her purse, turned a pink color, and said: "I'm in the same fix."

Difficult to Answer.

Explaining the happenings of the sixth day of the creation, Miss Frances Hartz read to her Sabbath school class: "And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground."

"Well," spoke up one kid, "that's nothin' new. Did he put him in the sun to dry, the way we do our mud pies?"

Miss Hartz discreetly slurred the answer and proceeded with her lesson.—Cleveland Leader.

The expectation of being pleased which prevails so much in young persons is one great source of their enjoyments.—Bowdler.

Can't Get Away From It

Is it possible to nourish, strengthen and Rebuild the Brain by Food?

Every man who thinks uses up part of the brain each day. Why don't it all disappear and leave an empty skull in say a month of brain work? Because the man rebuilds each day.

If he builds a little less than he destroys, brain fog and nervous prostration result sure. If he builds back a little more each day, the brain grows stronger and more capable. That also is sure. Where does man get the material to rebuild his brain? Is it from air, sky or the ice of the Arctic sea? When you come to think about it, the rebuilding material must be in the food and drink.

That also is sure.

Are the brain rebuilding materials found in all food? In a good variety but not in suitable proportion in all.

To illustrate: we know bones are made largely of lime and magnesia taken from food; therefore to make healthy bone structure we must have food containing these things. We would hardly feed only sugar and fat to make healthy bone structure in a growing child.

Likewise if we would feed in a skillful manner to insure getting what the brain requires for strength and rebuilding, we must first know what the brain is composed of and then select some article or articles (there are more than one) that contain these elements.

Analysis of brain by an unquestionable authority, Geoghegan, shows of Mineral Salts, Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined (Phosphate of Potash) 2.91 per cent of the total, 5.33 of all mineral Salts.

This is over one-half.

Beaunis, another authority, shows "Phosphoric Acid combined" and Potash 73.44 per cent from a total of 101.07.

Considerable more than one-half of Phosphate of Potash.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows: Potassium and Phosphorus (which join and make Phosphate of Potash) is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Gao, W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash). This salt unites with albumen and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

The natural conclusion is that if Phosphate of Potash is the needed mineral element in brain and you use food which does not contain it, you have brain fog because its daily loss is not supplied.

On the contrary, if you eat food known to be rich in this element, you place before the life forces that which nature demands for brain-building.

Mind does not work well on a brain that is broken down by lack of nourishment.

A peaceful and evenly poised mind is necessary to good digestion.

Worry, anxiety, fear, hate, etc., etc., directly interfere with or stop the flow of Pyloric, the digestive juice of the mouth, and also interfere with the flow of the digestive juices of stomach and pancreas.

Therefore, the mental state of the individual has much to do (more than suspected) with digestion.

Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash as the principal Mineral Salt, added to albumen and water.

Grape-Nuts contain that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

A healthy brain is important, if one would "do things" in this world.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Nature's way to rebuild is by the use of food which supplies the things required: Brain rebuilding material is certainly found in

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE CENTENARY

HOUSE IN BRUNSWICK, ME., WHERE "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" WAS WRITTEN

IN JUNE of this year the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Harriet Beecher Stowe will be widely celebrated. A new life of the "little woman who made the great war," as Lincoln called her, is about to come from the press, written by her son, Charles Edward Stowe, and her grandson, Lyman Beecher Stowe.

Among the most interesting of the facts it brings out is that it never occurred to the "little woman" that there was anything about "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in the least likely to precipitate a war. She wrote the book with the kindest feelings toward the south, and her aim was to be not only just but generous.

To begin with, Mrs. Stowe was not of the extreme-abolitionist type. It was her firm belief that the better element in the south hated slavery, and that this element was much larger than was commonly supposed. Then, too, while she loathed the system with all her heart she was willing to believe that it took more often than not the kindly patriarchal form.

She gave Uncle Tom three masters, and two of them were kind. She made one of her plantation owners detest slavery and free his slaves. She wanted to make the north understand that the best southerners would co-operate with them in a reasonable attempt to do away with the evil.

Never was a little lady more surprised to find herself execrated. Her feeling had been when she first wrote the book that it would displease the abolitionists and bring sympathetic response from the south—that is, if anybody ever read it at all, which she had doubted.

When the book appeared the world turned topsy-turvy for her. Garrison, with whom she never quite agreed, wrote her that she was no longer abused—she had drawn it all on herself. People in the south who had not read the book, or who had read it with their minds made up beforehand, thought her some sort of a monster. A cousin who lived in Georgia did not dare put the name of Mrs. Stowe on the envelope when she wrote to her.

Mrs. Stowe found herself, in short, put in a class of agitators with whom she had never belonged, and the poor little dove of peace she had sent out came back with its feathers ruffled beyond recognition.

The question of slavery came into her life at an early period. It is not true that she knew nothing of the "peculiar institution" at first-hand. She lived long in Cincinnati and met there many southerners, and it was on plantations where she visited that she got the color for the book she was to write many years after.

She was hardly more than a girl when she visited the Kentucky plantation which became afterward the home of Uncle Tom and Eliza, and about the same time she met Topsy. Topsy came to Cincinnati in the company of a wealthy Louisiana family which had liberated its slaves and it was in trying to teach her religion that the famous conversation occurred: "Do you know who made you?" "Nobody as I know of; I spect I growed."

In 1836 Cincinnati became the hotbed of anti-slavery talk. Mr. Theodore Weld of Lane Theological seminary led the movement. He had spent much of his life in the midst of slavery and was dedicating the remainder of his life to its overthrow. His ablest assistant, the editor of an abolitionist paper, was Dr. Birney, a slave owner from Alabama, who had freed his slaves, and come away to fight the system.

It was natural that with these friends Mrs. Stowe should have had kindly feelings toward the south, should have thought that it was rapidly waking to the horror of slavery, and that the majority of its citizens were anxiously trying to put an end to it. As far as the "cause" was concerned her associations were with anti-slavery southerners rather than the northern abolitionists.

Henry Ward Beecher edited in Cincinnati a small daily paper, his sister, now Mrs. Stowe, helping him. She records an incident of the agitation in Cincinnati that shows the fighting blood of the young man who was to become the great preacher.

Dr. Birney's abolitionist paper was wrecked by a mob, and she writes: "Many respectable citizens are inclined to wink at the outrage in consideration of its moving in the line of their prejudices." Henry Ward Beecher did not wink. He feared an attack on his own paper, and his sister found him one day making bullets in the kitchen. She asked what he was making them for.

"To kill men with," he answered grimly, and Mrs. Stowe, telling her son about it years later, said, "I never saw Henry look so terrible. I did not like it, for I feared he was growing bloodthirsty."

Professor Stowe helped at times the underground railroad. He it was who took the original of Eliza and "Little Harry" to the house of the old Quaker when the master was pursuing the fugitives. It was not long after this that she wrote she felt keenly the need of an intermediate party which would oppose slavery without the violence of abolitionists. But, she said, if no such party was formed many people would be forced to join the abolitionists "in spite of their excesses."

In 1850 the Stowes left Cincinnati for Brunswick, Me. It was there that her great resolve was taken that she would use her pen to fight slavery. Already she was a successful author and deeply interested in the cause of the slave. Her brother wrote and put the proposition to her squarely: why did she not write about the subject nearest her heart and make people understand? It was in the little parlor of her Brunswick home. She read the letter aloud. As she finished the appeal she rose from her chair, crushing the letter in her hand and said: "God helping me, I will write."

The material for "Uncle Tom's Cabin" came from various sources, but she verified them all. The Kentucky plantation she already knew. The slaves whom she had known in Cincinnati had talked freely, giving the light as well as the tragedy of their lot.

Uncle Tom seems to have been drawn from Joshua Hoosen, a black man of great sweetness and piety, who told her appalling stories of life as he had seen it.

The book, then, was published, with many misgivings, but none among them was that the south would fail to understand the friendliness of her spirit. Then she found herself the most famous and the most abused woman in the world.

Mrs. Stowe had that exaltation of character which lifts a soul above praise or blame. In the midst of the tumult she wrote poetry and planned a trip to England in the interest of the cause. It is typical of her ingenuously that she was much surprised to find herself welcomed and feted on the other side of the ocean. Where she had expected to rest and see nobody, she discovered she was the talk of the country.

When the war broke out Mrs. Stowe's son was among the first to go. She wrote afterward: "It was the will of God . . . that the slave mothers whose tears nobody regarded should have with them a great company of weepers, north and south—Rachel's weeping for their children and refusing to be comforted."

After the war Mrs. Stowe went south and lived for a time in Florida. The scheme was to raise cotton with free labor, but it failed disastrously. In other ways the stay in the south was a success, and everywhere Mrs. Stowe appears to have been treated with consideration. The era of abuse was over.

After cotton they tried to raise oranges, but a frost spoiled that plan. Mrs. Stowe lost $34,000 in this way, and then she founded the Christian Union with her brother, Henry Ward Beecher, and lost most of the rest of her money. She kept writing, not because her fame tempted her, but because the money was needed. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which made so many fortunes, never yielded her more than a few hundred dollars.

SALAD WITH CHEESE

MANY WAYS IT MAY BE SERVED TO SUIT THE TASTE.

Every Variety Has Its Especial Form—Glass Topped Dishes With Silver—Bases the Delight of Up-to-Date Hostesses.

As well imagine a Punch without Judy as salad without cheese. Its absence makes the best mayonnaise or French dressing wanting in flavor.

The hostess without imagination accepts the salad and cheese dictum, but does not glorify it. There are housekeepers who buy cakes of cream cheese—pineapple, Edam, Roquefort, Gorgonzola, Brie, even the common American product—and then serve the choice of the family year in and out.

It is cut in the square chunks, passed on the same plate with the same water thin, butter thin or salted wafer in dreary monotony.

Variety is the spice of salad as well as of life, and great is the variety in which cheese can masquerade.

If taste is conservative and the family will not eat but one kind of cheese, then vary the service. Fascinating are the new servers. There are silver incrimbed glass jars with heavily monogrammed lids of silver to beautify the porcelain jars that hold certain cheese. They come in all sizes, and there are cheese scoops in proportion.

For large cheese that last for days there are special glass-topped dishes with silver base to prevent drying out. Some tops are of rock crystal, others entirely of chased silver; again, glass with silver overlay.

The Edam cheese is much more appetizing in its silver holder of narrow prongs and broad base, with deep silver scoop to match, than if served with its hard red rind on an ordinary plate. Just here the thoughtful hostess has portions of the cheese loosened in the shell, as manipulating the scoop at a crowded table is not easy.

Cheese buns, cheese squares, the cheeses passed whole and cut with a special cheese-knife, like Brie and Gorgonzola, have special flat dishes dedicated to their service. Sometimes they are of rock crystal, more often of crystals with silver rim or deep silver border, or their special platters in plain silver with open work border. Always there is the long-handled cheese fork to facilitate service.

Crackers are passed separately, but some hostesses prefer the compartment dish made to accompany the salad course. This comes in rich China, especially in Dresden, also in chased silver. Some have a handle, like a basket, others are on pedestals like a divided compote.

In these compartments go cheese, with its fork lying across it, bar-le-duc, a small spoon and crackers. Often two kinds of cheese are served.

Baked Tripe.

Take a pound of fresh dressed white tripe, wash it in cold water, cut it into neat squares, slice half a dozen onions and fry them lightly in butter; put them into an earthen baking dish which has a close-fitting lid, lay the tripe upon them and sprinkle over it a large tablespoon of flour, a little pepper and salt; cover the whole with milk, put on the lid and bake the tripe in a moderate oven; when done enough skim the fat from the top; serve the tripe on a hot dish; cider can be substituted for milk; time to bake, about half an hour; sufficient for two or three persons.

Ribbon Fig Cake.

One cup butter, one cup sugar, three cups sifted flour, one cup milk, four eggs beaten separately, three heaping teaspoons baking powder. Take half the batter and pour into three or four jelly tins. On each layer put split pressed figs—imported are best—seeds up. Take the remainder of the batter and add two tablespoons molasses, one cup seedless raisins, half a cup currants, one teaspoon cinnamon, half a teaspoon cloves. Bake and place the layers alternately with thick white icing between.

Steamed Fruit Puffs.

Sift together two cups flour and three teaspoons baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Add one cup milk, making a heavy batter. Grease small cups. Put tablespoon of batter in each, then a spoonful of either strawberry or raspberry jam, and cover with more batter. Steam for half an hour. When done, turn out on small plates and serve hot with cream or sauce. The above quantity will make six puffs.

Hot Chocolate Sauce.

Boll half cup sugar and the same quantity of water five minutes, and set aside to cool. In a double boiler melt quarter pound unsweetened chocolate; add to this the sugar syrup and one teaspoonful vanilla. Keep this very hot until time to serve the cream, then pour a little of the sauce over each portion.

A Black Fitting Room.

A "black fitting room" is an innovation in an eastern establishment that will, in all probability be extended to other parts of the country. All the walls of this chamber are black and in the electric light rays one gets the effect of evening colors in a way not possible by daylight.

KIDNEY CHILLS AND BACKACHE.

If, when you get wet or take cold, it "settles on the kidneys" and there is a shivery, chilly sensation in the back, it shows kidney weakness which is often the beginning of serious disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used persistently until the backache and other symptoms disappear.

C. D. Kessler, 408 E. 5th St., Mendota, Ill., says: "Kidney trouble came on me about 20 years ago and became so bad I was unable to work for weeks. I was thin, worn out and nervous; the doctors admitted they could not help me and my friends expected me to die. As a last hope I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and shortly after passed a gravel stone. Later on several more stones passed and from then on I improved until cured."

Husband Who Had "Married Money" Acknowledged the Truth to His Friends' Query.

Aprons of a beautiful young wife, worth $40,000,000, who had just divorced her penniless husband in order to marry again, Henry E. Dixey, the comedian, said at a dinner in New York:

"The young man who marries for money has none too easy a time of it. His rich wife is likely to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or else she is likely to limit his allowance to 25 or 50 cents a day."

"I married money," a man once said to me.

"Wasn't there a woman attached to it?" I asked.

"Yes, you bet there was," he exploded. "So much attached to it that she never parted with a penny."

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON BABY

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, as it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores."

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. My baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her skin perfectly, and her skin is now pretty and fine through using them. I also use the Cuticura Soap today, and will continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are good for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 210 W. 18th St., New York city, Aug. 28, 1910.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., for free booklet on the skin.

"Oh, I don't mean that way," said Blinks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blest if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the Philosopher.

"Are what?" said Blinks.

"Blest if they can see an English joke," said the Philosopher. "It is a sign of an unusually keen vision."—Harper's Weekly.

"Kicking the Bucket."

When we speak facetiously of some one for whom we have no reverence as having "kicked the bucket," we employ a phrase that would seem to be a piece of latter-day slang, but as a matter of fact, it dates back to old England, when, about the year 1725, one Bolsover hung himself to a beam while standing on the bottom of a bucket, and then kicked the bucket away. Although at first used only in cases of suicide, it has been applied in the course of years to any death, without distinction.

To the Point.

Over in Hoboken in a shop frequented by Germans, hangs a sign framed in mournful black, reading thus:

"We regret to inform our honored customers that our good and generous friend, Mr. Credit, expired today. He was a noble soul, always willing and helpful, but has been failing for some time. May he rest in peace. PAY CASH!"

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GRATON, 61 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

After La Grippe

"I had suffered several weeks with La Grippe. Had pains in my head and eyes. It felt as though there was a heavy weight on the top of my head, until it seemed that my brain would burst. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. When I dozed off I would awake with a sudden jerking of my whole body. Dr. Miles' Nerve, Heart Remedy and Nerve and Liver Pills cured me. A number of friends have since realized the same benefits."

MRS. ALVIN H. LOCKS, Seabrook, N. H.

The after effects of La Grippe are often more serious than the disease, as it leaves the system in a weakened condition that invites more serious troubles, such as pneumonia, etc.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve should be taken for some time to thoroughly restore nerve strength.

Dr. Miles' Nerve is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle does not benefit, your druggist will return your money.

The 'Phone Girl's Power.

The telephone girl sits in her chair and listens to voices from every where, she hears all the gossip, she hears all the news, she knows who is happy and who has the blues; she knows all our cares and hears of all our joys; she knows every girl who is chasing the boys. She knows of our troubles, she knows of our strife; she knows every man that is mean to his wife. She knows every time we are out with the boys; she hears every excuse each fellow employs; she knows every woman who has a dark past; she knows every man who is inclined to be fast. If the telephone girl would tell all she knows, it would turn all our friends into bitterest foes; she could raise a small wind that would soon be a gale, engulf us in trouble and land us in jail. She could let go a story which, gaining force, would cause our wives to sue for divorce; she would get all the churches mixed up in a fight, and turn all our day into sorrowing night; in fact, she could keep the whole town in a stew if she'd tell the tenth part of the things that she knew. Now doesn't it make your brain and head whirl when you think what you owe to the telephone girl?

An Unwarranted Assumption.

Saying "It's human nature," as though that implied an unalterable condition, is a poor way out of any difficulty. Lincoln, so wise in many ways, said more than once, "You can't change human nature;" as though the bad in it must always exist along with the good. The German chancellor, however little he may share some other things of Lincoln's, evidently shares this fatalistic view. The three hundredth anniversary of our translation of the Bible was made the occasion for some declarations by English and American statesmen in favor of a universal arbitration; but Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg said: "General disarmament is an insoluble problem so long as men are men; it will remain true that the strong will prey upon the weak."

In effect, that is, he said: "You can't change human nature"—and so he dropped the subject. Now this is a singular doctrine for the occasion that called forth the peace declarations. If human nature cannot change, why celebrate the anniversary of a book whose most vital message consists precisely in asserting that it can. As a matter of fact, human nature does change. When Frederick was laying the foundation of the German Empire it was human nature to work as much destruction as possible upon the enemy—by burning defenseless villages, wantonly ruining the peasant's crops, and so on; but present-day human nature condemns wanton injury to noncombatants. No doubt intelligent Iroquois Indians of the seventeenth century believe that to torture a captured foe was simply human nature and would be practiced "so long as men are men." If human nature does not and cannot grow juster, kinder, wiser, why all this aimless bother called civilization? Blaming things on human nature is a shabby, subterfuge for a private individual or for an imperial chancellor.

Stamps Not Liked

In the midst of the talk over Canadian reciprocity and the speculation as to what the Canadian Parliament and the American Congress will ultimately do, a little news item has been slipped past partially without comment. It refers to Canada and shows that there seems to be flowing in Canadian veins some kind of blood akin to that which our forefathers carried around with them in 1776.

Canada had to have a new issue of postage stamps and the British government in its London habitat arranged for the issue and sent the new stamps over to Canada after they were printed. The new stamps did not mention the word Canada on them, being simply good advertising for King George. The Canadians did not like them and the officials at Ottawa promptly returned them to England and informed the officials at the home office that Canada would get out its own stamp issue. This only goes to show that there may be other stamp acts besides the one we read about some time ago.

County Normal Notes.

Edith Cady, Jennie Hunderman, Ethel Murray and Audie Delaney are having practice teaching in the training room this week.

The class very much enjoyed the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. F. M. Taylor, Sunday evening, June 4.

Ethel Vance, a graduate of Central Lake High School, and a teacher last term in the Antrim county schools, visited the class Monday morning.

The training-room children and normal class held a picnic on the Lake Michigan beach last Thursday afternoon, having a very pleasant time.

House-keepers this week are Eva Cram and Raymond Bennett, editors are Jennie Hunderman and Audie Delaney.

Triumph of a New Idea.

About the quantity of reading matter furnished in the average Sunday newspaper there is no reason to complain—unless it be on the score of too-muchness—but the quality often leaves much to be desired. The only shining and unqualified exception to this rule is found in the unique Sunday Magazine of The Chicago Record-Herald. There is nothing else like it in the whole range of American journalism. It is a real magazine that is regularly issued as a part of the Sunday paper. It is filled with first-class fiction, able articles, choice pictures and a wide range of good miscellany, all by popular or really famous authors and artists. When writers such as Conan Doyle, Anthony Hope, Rudyard Kipling, Jack London, Sewell Ford, Cyrus Townsend Brady and Roy Norton are counted among the contributors to a Sunday paper its triumph can no longer be doubted.

The Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald is far and away the best literary treat offered to newspaper readers in the United States to-day. The largest monthlies and independent weeklies cannot surpass it in quality or sustained interest. You will always find one of the finest serials of the year in its pages, often captured from the big monthlies at record prices. Its short stories, including those of the delectable Shorty McCabe, can't be surpassed.

"I have no use for liquor dealers who sell to children," declared Judge Phelan of Detroit. Judge Phelan was officially presiding in his court room when the statement was made. His remarks were directed to Walter Bartlett, 233 Brooklyn avenue, and he further said to the Detroit saloon-keeper: "If you can't get along without taking the nickles of babies you'd better get out of the business." The case in Judge Phelan's court was brought by Mrs. Nora Garry who complained that Bartlett had been selling liquor to her son Frank, a sixteen-year-old boy. After Truant Officer Jordan had so cured sufficient further evidence to warrant taking the case into police court Mrs. Garry changed her mind about prosecuting. "It looks very much to me" said Judge Phelan to the woman, "as if you had been approached in this matter." Judge Phelan did not further say what he evidently knew to be true, that the absence of a material witness the fact that the boy would not now swear that Bartlett sold him liquor, and that Mrs. Garry had changed her mind about prosecuting, were all further accomplishments on the part of the saloon in as direct opposition to the law and to decency as the original offense had been. The saloon as an instigator of crime and as a participant in bribery and perjury is almost as dangerous to the state and to society as in its direct relation to drunkenness and debauchery.

If every one was as great as he thinks he is what a splendid race of people we would be.
