City Primary

Not Much Interest Shown At Our First City Election.

East Jordan's first city primary was held Monday, to select candidates for Mayor, two commissioners and two justices of the peace. Only 230 votes were cast out of a population of approximately 3,000.

For Mayor, Alden E. Cross received 109 votes, Ora D. Cleveland 81, and Fred E. Boosinger, 57.

For Commissioner, long term—J. H. Graff 96, J. F. Kenny 87, C. H. Whittington, 41.

For Commissioner, short term—Chas. A. Hudson, 108, B. E. Waterman, 60, W. E. Palmiter, 53.

For Justices of the Peace—Henry J. Carpenter and Charles McCalmon were each nominated without any opposition.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found three notices to electors from the Charter Commission relative to the coming election. Be sure and read them, Mr. Voter.

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME,"

Another era of nation-wide speculation has passed. This time the people's spare cash went into land projects many of which have proven just about as productive of dividends as have in the past similar flyers in stock exchanges. Many people of this community have contributed to the land boom. They have been attracted by the fact that the property they bought is far from home and, as a rule, in a locality that they knew little, if anything, about. A large amount of this business has been done by prospectus and circular letter, and in some cases the buyer will be happier if he never sees what he bought. We all believe in land investments, but we have thousands of acres of good land here in our own neighborhood that ought to be improved.

This movement has taken capital from our community that might otherwise have been spent for local improvements, for homes, schools, churches, better roads, farm improvements and other things which would have made for the greater prosperity of this vicinity. We believe now, however, that the time has come to center attention upon the welfare of East Jordan. We believe also that it is time to forget about politics, the tariff and other bogies and settle down to a plan for bettering this particular community by strong co-operative effort.

It has been said that the tariff is a local issue and, in a large measure, the same may be said of prosperity. The business men of this vicinity have it in their power to make prosperity in this locality, but, in order to accomplish something definite, their money must be kept at home and spent at home. Our general welfare will not be promoted by sending it to Canada or to any part of the world with which we have no daily business relation.

We need a commercial club to lay out a campaign of development which will make this a better place to live in. "There is No Place Like Home" when everyone is trying to make it a better place. The time for action is right now. We can afford to disregard every other issue but that of local prosperity, but we should be up and doing something to further our own interests. We have in this vicinity fine homes, good farms, good schools, good roads and many other things that help to make life worth living. Let's try to make them still better and put our money into solid improvements at home.

Occasionally a man has the last word with his wife, but he has to say it under his breath.

With the first scratch on the parlor furniture the bride enters upon the tragedy of married life.

We often wonder what has become of all the men who were going to make millions out of inventions they once patented.

The knowledge that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives is a constant source of worry to some people.

Women have no monopoly on curiosity. Many a man will work harder to find out something of no benefit to him than he will to pay his debts.

Michigan Crop Report.

Lansing, Mich., July 7, 1911.

WHEAT. The reported excellent condition of wheat for April and May, indicated for the State a yield of at least 20 bushels per acre, but the ravages of the Hessian fly in the southwestern portion of the State caused a number of correspondents to estimate the yield at from 3 to 10 bushels, probably their estimate may prove to low after threshing and this department still hopes for a return of 20 bushels per acre.

The average estimated yield in the State is 18, in the southern and northern counties 17, in the central counties 20 and in the Upper Peninsula 22 bushels per acre. The total number of bushels of wheat marketed by farmers in June at 90 mills is 131,082, and at 78 elevators and to grain dealers 151,821, or a total of 282,903 bushels. Of this amount 222,604 bushels were marketed in the southern four-tenths of counties, 48,687 in the central counties and 11,612 in the northern counties and Upper Peninsula. The estimated total number of bushels of wheat marketed in eleven months, August-June, is 13,700,000. The amount of wheat yet remaining in possession of growers is estimated at 1,500,000 bushels. Fifty mills, elevators and grain dealers report no wheat marketed in June.

RYE. The average estimated yield of rye in the State, central and northern counties is 25, in the southern counties 14 and in the Upper Peninsula 22 bushels per acre.

CORN. The condition of corn in the State is 92, in the southern counties 93, in the central counties 90, in the northern counties 89 and in the Upper Peninsula 97. One year ago the condition of corn in the State was 78.

BUCKWHEAT. The acreage of buckwheat sown or to be sown, compared with an average for the past five years in the State is 81, in the southern and northern counties 82, in the central counties 75 and in the Upper Peninsula 99.

BEANS. The acreage of beans planted or to be planted, as compared with an average for the past five years in the State is 100, in the southern counties 92, in the central counties and Upper Peninsula 103, and in the northern counties 112. The condition of beans, compared with an average in the State is 91, in the southern counties and Upper Peninsula 94, in the central counties 93 and in the northern counties 85.

POTATOES. The condition of potatoes in the State is 91, in the southern counties 92, in the central and northern counties 88 and in the Upper Peninsula 96.

SUGAR BEETS. The condition of sugar beets in the State and central counties is 92, in the southern counties 91, in the northern counties 90 and in the Upper Peninsula 97.

CLOVER. The condition of clover sown this year, as compared with an average, in the State is 87, in the southern counties 81, in the central counties 91, in the northern counties 90 and in the Upper Peninsula 101. The acreage of clover that will be harvested, compared with an average for the past five years, in the State is 83, in the southern counties 77 in the central counties 88, in the northern counties 89 and in the Upper Peninsula 94.

TIMOTHY. The acreage of timothy that will be harvested, compared with an average for the past five years, in the State is 89, in the southern counties 87, in the central counties 93, in the northern counties 91 and in the Upper Peninsula 98.

PEAS. The acreage of peas sown or to be sown, as compared with an average for the past five years in the State is 84, in the southern counties 87, in the central counties 77, in the northern counties 79 and in the Upper Peninsula 109.

FRUIT. Reports from correspondents show a slight decline in the percentage of apples, peaches, pears and plums from figures given last month.

The following table of percentage gives the averages in regard to fruit in the State and the different sections.

	State	Northern Counties
Apples.....	49	48
Peaches.....	76	77
Pears.....	68	56
Plums.....	68	50

Rather Quiet

Annual School Meeting Only Brought Out 48 People Interested.

With a population of approximately 3,000, the annual school meeting of District No. 4, South Arm township, could only muster 48 men, women and boys who were interested enough to turn out for a couple of hours Monday evening. If our schools go forward as they should, the people of this district must show more interest, than that of last Monday evening. While the School Board the past few years has worked "tooth and nail" for the advancement of our schools, the apathy shown by its patrons Monday evening is no encouragement for them to continue.

Owing to the absence of Pres't E. J. Crossman, Com'r Millford acted as chairman of the meeting.

Secretary W. P. Squier read the minutes of the last annual meeting, which were adopted. The financial report, also read by Sec'y Squier, was adopted as read. The report of Treasurer L. A. Hoyt was also accepted.

The estimates of the Board for the coming year, as published in the two local papers, was unanimously adopted. This amounted to $4,200 for teachers' wages and $8,200 for the general fund. The total amount of teachers wages is $12,200 which increases the wages of several of our teachers and adds one more to the corps.

The length of school year was fixed at nine and one-half months which is the same as last year.

A resolution was adopted prohibiting discus throwing and like sports on the school grounds or by pupils going from or coming to school.

In the election of trustees, W. P. Squier was re-nominated but in a short talk that gentleman stated frankly that he was not a candidate for re-election. C. L. Lorraine and W. E. Malpass were also nominated. On the second ballot Mr. Lorraine received 28 of the 47 votes cast and was declared elected.

S. G. Rogers, who has served for nearly thirty years, declined to allow his name to be presented again. Ira D. Bartlett and W. E. Malpass were nominated, and Mr. Bartlett received 31 of the 47 votes cast.

ME AND JIM.

WARREN W. LAMPSON.

I've been thinkin' here today
How it happened, fur away
In the misty long ago,
'Bout a million years or so.

Me an' Jim—Jim was my pard—
Out there in the ol' schoolyard
Got ourselves onct in a fix
Cuttin up some youngster tricks,
Which want nothin' specially new
Fer my pard an' me to do,
Secin' we was healthy chaps,
An' a little wild perhaps,
Tho' jest what we did that day
I dunno ez I kin say;
Best forgotten anyway.

But I want to tell yo' what
There's one thing I ain't forgot!
When we heard the master's rule
On the winder, rappin' school,
An' we got inside again,
Jing! but my heart sunk like sin,
Fer I saw right on the spot
Me and Jim had both been caught.
'Twant no use denyin' it,
We was caught, don't yo' forget
Fer the master's watchful eye
Saw the whol' thing on the sly.

Well we got it, Jim an' me!
Right out where they all could see;
In the good ol' fashioned way
What we used ter in our day,
Fer the master spoke right out;
An' he says, "You injin lout!
I'm agoin' to give you one
You'll remember when it's done!"
An' I guess he did the biz;
In that ancient way o' his,
Fer I'm thinkin' here today
How it happened, fur away
In the misty long ago,
'Bout a million years or so.

MOTOR CARS IN THE ALPS.

Motorists who desire to include the most picturesque parts of Switzerland in their itinerary have run up against a dead wall of opposition on the part of the people of the canton which contains the finest Alpine scenery, including the valley of the Engadine, the Maloja lakes, the famous resorts of Moritz, Pontresina and Davos and the passes of the Splügen, Maloja and Bernina, says the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. The question of admitting motor cars to the Grisons was submitted to the people by resort to the initiative, and the result was a vote of absolute exclusion. This came to pass in spite of the disposition of the federal authorities to encourage automobile traffic and the active work of the Swiss Automobile club on the same side. The people, however, were unalterably hostile for the reason that the Alpine roads are narrow and that, if motor cars were admitted, the use of those highways would be fraught with great danger. Obviously, if the opposition so manifested is to be overcome the only means of accomplishing this end is by the widening of the mountain roads. Here again, however, the will of the people must be consulted and the issue is bound to be mighty uncertain.

We are now getting intelligence that will add to the charm of farming and gardening and magnify the ideals of the city fellow who dreams of the delicious flavor of rural life. It has been discovered, through experiments in Scotland, that the application of electricity to a garden bed will make the lettuce, the cucumbers, the peas, the tomatoes, the beets, etc., grow furiously and increase the yield from 20 to 100 per cent. The time for the things to come up, after the seed is put in the ground, is reduced at least one-half. The application of the electricity can be done by putting some electric lights over the bed or discharging high-tension electricity from a system of overhead wires. There is scientific reason for this sort of horticulture. Electricity is a powerful and permeating fluid, and it is particularly effective in promoting plant life.

In New York it has been made an offense for a driver of a motor vehicle to speed away after an accident, and if he is caught the penalty is so much the heavier. It is so comparatively easy for an offending motor driver to escape by speeding that every risk to his doing so should be put in his way. This speeding in city streets is getting to be one of the most serious menaces of urban life. More than one valuable life has been sacrificed to it, and what power there is in law and the law's enforcement to stop it should be done.

A Brooklyn man got blood poisoning from a blister caused by lawn mowing. Just on the eve of the opening of the suburban season, this accident is a significant coincidence, if nothing more. At any rate the victim deserves the blessings of his kind for furnishing the average commuter with a good and valid excuse which no wife worthy of the name can gainsay.

Magnus Alexander, commissioner from Massachusetts of workmen's compensation, announces that "an average man can decently support a family of five on $600 a year." We assume that Magnus does not regard a touring car or an electric runabout as a strictly necessary concomitant to decent living.

A western university professor says that the blonde type will become extinct in this country and that the average American will revert to the Indian type. But here comes in the triumph of science over mere nature; even atavism cannot extirpate the chemical blonde.

Chauffeurs arrested a second time in Atlantic City for speeding will lose their licenses. Some such drastic measure must be taken in all large communities against this new danger of civilization, or next time the census will have to be padded everywhere.

If it is necessary to get up at six o'clock every morning to reach the age of one hundred and one, we are satisfied to linger the traditional three score and ten years in this world and let it go at that.

Thoughtless individuals often accuse newspapers of printing falsehoods, but here is a little story from a Michigan paper that can't be questioned: "She was left a widow through the death of her husband."

There may be merit in the plan to revise the Ten Commandments, but we have no doubt that this wicked world would be greatly improved if the original Ten Commandments were obeyed.

Saving Money

Gives Some People Many Happy Hours

By F. EVAN JONES, Chicago

Only days ago I read a letter from a teacher or a professor in a town or small city who asked if it is worth while to save money. He had, during eight or ten years, saved and invested so that he had now about $5,000. His object in saving was to build a home for himself and his family. During these years of self-denial the lot on which he intended to build had gone up in value from $600 to $1,000 and the house that he and his wife had planned to build for $5,000 would now cost $8,000. Because of this the teacher or professor asked if it is worth while to economize and save money.

Certainly it is. The teacher's or professor's own statements are a convincing proof of it. The amount he now has as a result of his saving is so much money, whatever its buying capacity may be, or whether property or building materials have gone up or down. And when a person has $5,000 he can, with his experience in saving and investing, very easily in a few years get another $5,000.

One of our great financiers said not very long ago that it was hard-earned to save the first $1,000.

It seems that the good teacher or professor was discouraged because he could not for $5,000 build the house which he and his wife had planned for so many years. But, according to his own statement, the planning of that house was the mainspring of the saving of that large amount he now has. And, besides, it has given them many happy hours. But any one can build a very fine and comfortable house, with every modern convenience, for $5,000. An unaccountable number of us—and myself for one—would be more than glad if we had that amount with which to build a home.

Both in Chicago and elsewhere have I seen houses, and good looking and comfortable they have been, that have not cost more than the amount the teacher says he has.

But if one has that sum to start with he can easily borrow some more, even $3,000, if he believes he ought to have a home costing so much. Having his own home and the habit of saving, it ought to be comparatively easy to pay a loan on the house.

Certainly it is worth while to save money. The teacher's or professor's own letter is a conclusive and convincing proof of it.

"From Under the Flying Chaff"

By A. W. MACY

A framed-up excuse is sure to be a poor one. Heroes often come of unsuspected material. Those who speak as they think should think before they speak. A self-satisfied man is merely a case of arrested development. The shining shield of virtue turns aside many a poisoned shaft. Experience often comes in wholesale lots, but we always pay the retail price. A good beginning may be half the battle, but a good ending is the whole thing. The human tongue is the only instrument that does not wear out with constant use. Honesty may be the best policy, but the man who adopts it as a policy will bear watching. What would the beasts think if one of their number should get drunk and make a man of himself? Diamonds are ground in diamond dust; so must we be chastened in the grit of our own experience. Some people have no more sense of propriety than a caged rooster that crows in front of a meat market. (Copyright, 1911, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Much Joy Found in Adopted Child

By FRANCES J. SCHNEIDER

Are adopted children ever a comfort? Several years ago we laid our little daughter to rest and then our little son also passed away. God only knows the pain of parting and loneliness. Some months ago we went to an orphan asylum and took a little girl not quite two years old. Our home has changed since then. The child has crept into our hearts and leaves no room for sadness. Trouble? Yes, of course; but she is ten times more pleasure than trouble. When we contemplated taking a baby our friends told us we did not know when we were well off and that certain people that did not have trouble were foolish to put their foot into it, and so forth. But when my baby puts her arms around my neck and says "mamma" I feel repaid for any trouble or worry she may be. My husband also loves her as though she were our own. Moreover, we have friends in Ohio that have adopted two little girls and I know that they would also advise any one to do likewise.

Every Knock Boost for Better Things

H. W. WINESAP, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many people of many minds go to build this busy world. The writer is acquainted with many excellent people who have the average amount of brotherly love, who could scarcely be called spiteful or narrow, who are as free from rancor and spleen as anyone (none of us is perfect), and yet they are intensely annoyed by the many unnecessary noises made by their thoughtless neighbors. Because a person admires the howling of a worthless cur or the crowing of that 3:00 a. m. nuisance, the rooster, it does not necessarily follow that every one must be overjoyed by these demonstrations. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you, but don't twiddle your thumbs and believe you have no kick coming when the wise breeders try to rub it into you. The kicker, the crank and the generally discontented person have been responsible for ninety-nine one-hundredths of all the betterments in the living conditions of the world, and history repeats itself daily. Here's to the knocker—every knock is a boost for better conditions.

PARIS GREEN IS RECOMMENDED TO CONTROL DESTRUCTIVE PEST

Cut-worm Does Much Damage in Gardens and Sometimes to Foliage of Fruit Trees—Caterpillars Usually Lie in Concealed Place During Day Time and Come Forth at Night to Feed.

(By WM. J. PARDY.)

By "cutworms" is meant the larvae of certain millers or moths. The term is applied to a number of species which are very destructive to garden and field crops and sometimes also to foliage of fruit trees. Though there are some differences in the life histories of the several species, they are sufficiently alike in some of their habits so they may be fought by similar methods. The larva is a flat, dirty gray or brownish creature, an inch or more in length when full grown and practically hairless. The W-marked cutworm and the spotted cutworm are each marked by a double row of black spots, which in the first mentioned species are of equal size, but in the second the spots gradually decrease in size toward the head. The caterpillars usually lie curled up during the day, in a sheltered spot or in the earth. After nightfall they come to the surface to feed upon whatever vegetation may be convenient. They are very general feeders, eating leaves, buds, fruit, stalks or roots, and show a decided preference for plants that are young and succulent. When the hibernating larvae first begin to forage they are particularly injurious. Not infrequently a farmer will be obliged to reset plants several times before a stand is obtained because the pests cut them off as fast as they are set. The injury continues until midsummer, when the larvae are full grown.

The larvae then burrow into the ground to a depth of four to six inches to form a cell in which they pupate. Later in the summer the moths emerge. These differ somewhat in coloring in the various species, but for the most part have grayish or brownish obscurely marked forewings and grayish or yellowish white hind wings. The most effective remedy is the poisoned bran mash which has come into wide use. This is made by mixing half a pound of Paris green with 50 pounds of slightly moistened bran. In making this, it is best first to dampen some of the bran slightly with water containing a little sugar or salt, half a pound to a gallon. After mixing thoroughly, add the Paris green by dusting it on to the surface and stirring all the time. When required for garden use sprinkle a little of the poisoned mixture by hand around such plants as are liable to attack. When crops are planted in rows a convenient way is to make the mixture rather dry and then distribute it by means of a wheel seeder. In field practice, among such close-growing crops as standing grain, which are sometimes injured by cutworms, the poisoned bran remedy is also serviceable. The mixture can be distributed by means of a paddle of shingle and can be thrown easily to a distance of 20 feet. When distributed in this way there is much less danger of chickens and birds picking it up than if it is placed in lumps.

The question of danger from the use of this poisoned bait is one that must be considered. As a rule there is little danger from this cause. The quantity used is so small that it is not noticed by poultry; then, too, in gardens, poultry do so much harm to plants that they should never be admitted at the time of year when cutworms occur injuriously and only at special times of the year when there are no crops to injure. The experience of a great many people who have used this remedy without taking any special precautions is that injury to domestic animal is extremely rare. However, there will be many occasions when plants in gardens may be protected by putting out the poisoned bran in small heaps and then covering, so that the material cannot be got at by stray chickens and other poultry.

SMALL TOOLS ON THE FARM

Necessity of Fairly Complete Outfit Is Apparent if Farmer Would Avoid Many Trips to Town.

(By WALTER B. LEUTZ.)

If the average farmer were asked: "How much money have you invested in the small tools on this farm?" it is probable that after a moment of thought, during which he would have a mental picture of an ax, a hand-saw, a grind-stone and rather a confused idea that there was a lot of stuff of one sort or another somewhere about the farm, would reply that from $25 to $50 would cover the cost. A recent investigation conducted in Ohio, discloses the fact that this is far short of the mark. Careful inventories were taken on 33 farms, and in every instance the total amount was many times what the owner had "guessed."

The fact that these small tools are bought, one at a time as needed, and are not cared for systematically, leads to a very erroneous idea of their value. Summarizing the inventories of these 33 farms, it is estimated that to completely equip a general farm of 100 acres in Ohio with small tools will probably cost from $200 to $300, or in excess of the farmers' "guess" by more than 500 per cent. An error in judgment of this amount, particularly when the error is against the farm, is serious enough to challenge attention. Even on farms where inventories are habitually taken, these tools of minor equipment are usually included as "other small tools," and given a guessed at value, somewhat after the stereotyped expression appearing on sale bills: "other articles too numerous to mention." Farm requirements differ very greatly, the highly specialized farm not needing nearly so many tools as the general farm. The necessity of a fairly complete outfit is apparent if the farmer would avoid expensive trips to town or to the neighbors to meet some immediate need, thereby stopping teams and laborers until the repair is effected. The advantage of some systematic arrangement is also apparent, in order that the exact tool may be at hand when wanted and thus avoid loss and delay by reason of mislaid, borrowed, stolen or lost tools. Some of these tools can be charged to special farm enterprises, as to the horses, the dairy, corn, hay, grain, etc., but by far the great majority constitute an overhead charge against the farm. The connection between an auger bit handle and a bushel of wheat may not be at once apparent to the miller, but it requires the auger bit handle to turn the bit, to bore the hole in the plank, to make the wagon-jack, to grease the wagon that hauled the grain to the machine, and that brought the wheat to the mill. Before the bushel of wheat can yield a profit it must help pay for the auger bit handle and the other minor tools which total a hundred or more dollars in value on any well managed farm.

Slacking to one breed of fowls is best for the average farmer. The Silver Laced Wyandotte is an excellent producer of eggs and meat. It comes as near being the ideal dual purpose fowl as any for farm conditions.

Willing to Support Proxy. Albert Tiedemann, a freshman of the University of Pennsylvania, was called upon to vote for officers in a recent gathering. Not being well acquainted with the nominees, he thoughtfully hesitated before filling out his ballot. One of the company left the room with the explanation that he would "vote by proxy." "So will I," said Albert, and with his pencil poised above his paper, leaned over to a companion on his right and asked: "Say, what's Proxy's first name?"

WANTED TO SLEEP. Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desire. A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him. "You will doubtless understand how the suffering from indigestion with which I used to be troubled made my work an almost unendurable burden; and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till nearly daylight. "I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care I experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me. "Since I began the use of Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite, I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table. "I find that by eating a dish of this food after my Sabbath work is done, (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me. "I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food, now that I know its value. It is invariably on our table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they cannot be persuaded to touch anything else." SYNOPSIS.

Howard Jeffries, banker's son, under the evil influence of Robert Underwood, fellow student at Yale, leads a life of dissipation, marries the daughter of a gambler who died in prison, and is disowned by his father. He is out of work and in desperate straits. Underwood, who had once been engaged to Howard's stepmother, Alicia, is apparently in prosperous circumstances. Taking advantage of his intimacy with Alicia, he becomes a sort of social highwayman. Discovering his true character, Alicia denies him the house. He sends her a note threatening suicide. Art dealers for whom he acted as commissioner, demand an accounting. He cannot make good. Howard cuts at his apartment in an atrocious condition to request a loan of $2,000 to enable him to take up a business proposition. Howard drinks himself into a maudlin condition and goes to sleep on a divan. A caller is announced and Underwood draws a screen around the drunken sleeper. Alicia enters. She demands a promise from Underwood that he will not take his life. He refuses unless she will renew her patronage. This she refuses, and takes her leave. Underwood kills himself. The report of the pistol awakens Howard. He finds Underwood dead. Howard is turned over to the police. Capt. Clinton, notorious for his brutal treatment of prisoners, puts Howard through the third degree, and finally gets an alleged confession from the harassed man. Annie, Howard's wife, declares her belief in her husband's innocence, and calls on Jeffries. He refuses to help unless she will consent to a divorce. To save Howard she consents, but when she finds that the elder Jeffries does not intend to stand by his son—except financially, she scorns his help. Annie appeals to Judge Brewster, attorney for Jeffries, Sr. to take Howard's case. He declines. It is reported that Annie is going on the stage. The banker and his wife call on Judge Brewster to find some way to prevent it. Annie again pleads with Brewster to defend Howard.

"You're not afraid to help him," she said. "I know that—you just said so."

Judge Brewster raised his fist and brought it down on the desk with a bang which raised in a cloud the accumulated dust of weeks. His face set and determined, he said:

"You're quite right! I'm going to take your case!"

Annie felt herself giving way. It was more than she could stand. For victory to be hers when only a moment before defeat seemed certain was too much for her nerves. All she could gasp was:

"Oh, judge!"

The lawyer adjusted his eyeglasses, blew his nose with suspicious energy, and took up a pen.

"Now don't pretend to be surprised—you knew I would. And please don't thank me. I hate to be thanked for doing what I want to do. If I didn't want to do it, I wouldn't."

Through her tears she murmured: "I'd like to say 'thank you.'"

"Well, please don't," he snapped. But she persisted. Tenderly, she said:

"May I say you're the dearest, kindest?"

Judge Brewster shook his head. "No—no—nothing of the kind."

"Most gracious—noble-hearted—courageous," she went on.

The judge struck the table another formidable blow.

"Mrs. Jeffries!" he exclaimed.

She turned away her head to hide her feelings.

"Oh, how I'd like to have a good cry," she murmured. "If Howard only knew!"

Judge Brewster touched an electric button, and his head clerk entered.

"I don't see why I should. It's my name and we're relatives—by marriage." There was an ironical ring in her voice as she went on: "Relatives! It seems funny, doesn't it, but we don't pick and choose our relatives. We must take them as they come."

Alicia made an effort to appear conciliatory.

"As we are—what we are—let's try to make the best of it."

"Make the best of it?" echoed Annie. "God knows I'm willing, but I've had mighty little encouragement, Mrs. Jeffries. When I called to see you the other day, to beg you to use your influence with Mr. Jeffries, 'not at home' was handed to me by the liveried footman and the door was slammed in my face. Ten minutes later you walked out to your carriage and were driven away."

"I knew nothing of this—believe me," murmured Alicia apologetically.

"It's what I got just the same," said the other dryly. Quickly she went on: "But I'm not complaining, understand—I'm not complaining. Only I did think that at such a time one woman might have held out a helping hand to another."

Alicia held up her hand protestingly.

"How could I?" she exclaimed. "Now, be reasonable. You are held responsible for Howard's present position."

"Yes—by the police," retorted Annie grimly, "and by a couple of yellow journals. I didn't think you'd believe all the gossip and scandal that's been printed about me. I didn't believe what was said about you."

Alicia started and changed color.

"What do you mean?" she exclaimed haughtily. "What was said about me?"

"Well, it has been said that you married old Jeffries for his money and his social position."

"Old Jeffries!" protested Alicia indignantly. "Have you no respect for your husband's father?"

"Not a particle," answered the other coolly, "and I never will have till he acts like a father. I only had one interview with him and it finished him with me for all time. He ain't a father—he's a fish."

"A fish!" exclaimed Alicia, scandalized at such less majesty.

Annie went on recklessly:

"Yes—a cold-blooded—"

"But surely," interrupted Alicia, "you respect his position—his—"

"No, m'm; I respect a man because he behaves like a man, not because he lives in a marble palace on Riverside drive."

Alicia looked pained. This girl was certainly impossible.

"But surely," she said, "you realized that when you married Howard you—you made a mistake—to say the least?"

"Yes, that part of it has been made pretty plain. It was a mistake—his mistake—my mistake. But now it's done and it can't be undone. I don't see why you can't take it as it is and—and—"

She stopped short and Alicia completed the sentence for her:

"—and welcome you into our family—"

"Welcome me? No, ma'am. I'm not welcome and nothing you or your set could say would ever make me believe that I was welcome. All I ask is that Howard's father do his duty by his son."

"I do not think—pardon my saying so," interrupted Alicia stiffly, "that you are quite in a position to judge of what constitutes Mr. Jeffries' duty to his son."

"Perhaps not. I only know what I would do—what my father would have done—what any one would do if they had a spark of humanity in them. But they do say that after three generations of society life red blood turns into blue."

Alicia turned to look out of the window. Her face still averted she said:

"What is there to do? Howard has acknowledged his guilt. What sacrifices we may make will be thrown away."

Annie eyed her companion with contempt. Her voice quivering with indignation, she burst out:

"What is there to do! Try and save him, of course. Must we sit and do nothing because things look black? Ah! I wasn't brought up that way. No, ma'am, I'm going to make a fight!"

"It's useless," murmured Alicia, shaking her head.

"Judge Brewster doesn't think so," replied the other calmly.

The banker's wife gave a start of surprise. Quickly she demanded:

"You mean that Judge Brewster has encouraged you to—"

"He's done more than encourage me—God bless him!—he's going to take up the case."

Alicia was so thunderstruck that for a moment she could find no answer.

"What!" she exclaimed, "without consulting Mr. Jeffries?"

She put her handkerchief to her face to conceal her agitation. Could it be possible that the judge was going to act, after all, in defiance of her husband's wishes? If that were true, what would become of her? Concealment would be no longer possible. Discovery of her clandestine visit to Underwood's apartment that fatal night must come Howard might still be the murderer, Underwood might not have committed suicide, but her visit to his rooms at midnight would become known. Judge Brewster was not the man to be deterred by difficulties once he took up a case. He would see the importance of finding the mysterious woman who went secretly to Underwood's rooms that night of the tragedy.

"He consulted only his own feelings," went on Annie. "He believes in Howard, and he's going to defend him."

Alicia looked at her anxiously as if trying to read what might be in her mind. Indifferently she went on:

"The papers say there was a quarrel about you, that you and Mr. Underwood were too friendly. They implied that Howard was jealous. Is this true?"

"It's all talk," cried Annie indignantly—"nothing but scandal—lies! There's not a word of truth in it. Howard never had a jealous thought of me—and as for me—I've always worshiped the ground he walked on. Didn't he sacrifice everything for my sake? Didn't he quarrel with his father for me? Didn't he marry me? Didn't he try to educate and make a lady of me? My God!—do you suppose I'd give a man like that cause for jealousy? What do the newspapers care? They print cruel statements that cut into a woman's heart, without giving it a thought, without knowing or caring whether it's true or not, as long as it interests and amuses their readers. You—you don't really believe I'm the cause of his misfortunes, do you?"

Alicia shook her head as she answered kindly:

"No, I don't. Believe me, I don't. You were right when you said that at such a time as this one woman should stand by another. I'm going to stand by you. Let me be your friend, let me help you." Extending her hand, she said: "Will you?"

Annie grasped the proffered hand. It was the first that had been held out to her in her present trouble. A lump rose in her throat. Much affected, she said:

"It's the first kind word that—"

She stopped and looked closely for a moment at Alicia. Then she went on:

"It's the queerest thing, Mrs. Jeffries, but it keeps coming into my mind. Howard told me that while he was at Underwood's that dreadful night he thought he heard your voice. It must have been a dream, of course, yet he thought he was sure of it. Your voice—that's queer, isn't it? Why—what's the matter?"

Alicia had grown deathly pale and staggered against a chair. Annie ran to her aid, thinking she was ill.

"It's nothing—nothing!" stammered Alicia, recovering herself.

Fearing she had said something to hurt her feelings, Annie said sympathetically:

"I haven't said anything—anything out of the way—have I? If I have I'm sorry—awfully sorry. I'm afraid—I've been very rude and you've been so kind!"

"No, no!" interrupted Alicia quickly. "You've said nothing—done nothing—you've had a great deal to bear—a great deal to bear. I understand that perfectly." Taking her companion's hand in hers, she went on:

"Tell me, what do they say about the woman who went to see Robert Underwood the night of the tragedy?"

"The police can't find her—we don't know who she is." Confidently she went on: "But Judge Brewster will find her. We have a dozen detectives searching for her. Capt. Clinton accused me of being the woman—you know he doesn't like me."

The banker's wife was far too busy thinking of the number of detectives employed to find the missing witness to pay attention to the concluding sentence. Anxiously she demanded:

"Supposing the woman is found, what can she prove? What difference will it make?"

"All the difference in the world," replied Annie. "She is a most important witness." Firmly she went on: "She must be found. If she didn't shoot Robert Underwood, she knows who did."

"But how can she know?" argued Alicia. "Howard confessed that he did it himself. If he had not confessed it would be different."

"He did not confess," replied the other calmly. "Mrs. Jeffries—he never confessed. If he did, he didn't know what he was saying."

Alicia was rapidly losing her self-possession.

"Did he tell you that?" she gasped.

Annie nodded.

"Yes. Dr. Bernstein says the police forced it out of his tired brain. I made Howard go over every second of his life that night from the time he left me to the moment he was arrested. There wasn't a harsh word between them." She stopped short and looked with alarm at Alicia, who had turned ashen white. "Why, what's the matter? You're pale as death—you—"

Alicia could contain herself no longer. Her nerves were on the point of giving way. She felt that if she could not confide her secret to some one she must go mad. Pacing the floor, she cried:

"What am I to do? What am I to do? I believed Howard guilty. Why shouldn't I? I had no reason to doubt his own confession! Every one believed it—his own father included. Why should I doubt it. But I see it all now! Underwood must have shot himself as he said he would!"

Annie started. What did Mrs. Jeffries mean? Did she realize the tremendous significance of the words she was uttering?

"As he said he would?" she repeated slowly.

"Yes," said Alicia weakly.

Annie bounded forward and grasped her companion's arm. Her face flushed, almost unable to speak from suppressed emotion, she cried:

BLUE GRASS GIRLS WHO SHOT TO KILL

TWO YOUNG DAUGHTERS OF KENTUCKY MOONSHINER ROUT A REVENUE POSSE.

DEPUTY MARSHAL IS KILLED

Sisters, Aged Fifteen and Eighteen, Surprised in Their Mountain Home, Give Deadly Battle—A Tragedy of the Kentucky Wild.

Sergeant, Ky.—After a 50-mile ride into the Kentucky mountains, now and then finding a stream swollen by spring freshets, the correspondent found among the towering pines about Long Fork creek the Tackitt sisters, Bettie, aged eighteen, and Fannie, aged fifteen, who recently gave battle to a posse of revenue officers, killed one, wounded another and put the United States deputy marshal in command to flight.

A new-made mound in the village burying ground marks the place where lies Charlie Smith, deputy marshal, with a bullet still embedded in the muscles of his heart. The sisters are charged with killing him. One or both admit it but they declare they fought in defense of their aged mother whom Smith had shot and beaten with his revolver when a raid was made on their still in the mountains of Pike county.

Revenue nostrils had scented stewing mash in the mountains back of Sergeant, in which corn was being converted into whisky in violation of at least seven pages of government statutes. Of course it had to be raided. The task was assigned to Deputy Marshal J. Matt Potter, one of the bravest officers in the south. For seven years he has been in the service of Uncle Sam, and more than twice has shot off moonshiners who fired on him. He picked Levi Smallwood and Charlie Smith for such moral support and physical participation as the occasions might require.

They crept up the gully and came to the mountainside clearing at midday. Before the Tackitts knew what was happening the son of the family was caught, handcuffed and placed on a rock, an easy captive. This was only the beginning of the fight.

Uncle George Tackitt, head of the family, was away from home. This the revenue officers did not know. They rushed the house to get him but met his wife instead. Defending herself with stove-wood she beat off arrest until she was shot through the scalp and arm and beaten into submission by Deputy Smith. Bettie and Fannie Tackitt were not inactive during this interval but were gathering guns and ammunition for a fight that lasted several hours in which three men were pitted against two girls. Smallwood was wounded in the arm and crippled. Then a shot took off the fingers of his trigger hand and he was out of the battle. The Kentucky maidens were then pitted against the deputies.

Finally Smith, underestimating the nerve and marksmanship of the girls attempted to take the house by storm. He moved forward from his shelter, covering both windows with his rifle. He raised the weapon to shoot but in an instant he was fatally wounded with a bullet in his heart. Potter retreated without his prisoners. Both girls were put under bond for appearance at court. They are much admired for their bravery.

Sees Earth Gulp a Horse.

Pottsville, Pa.—While plowing a field in a suburb of this place John Moss, who was driving two horses, suddenly saw one of them drop out of sight. A moment later he also was dragged by his hold on the reins into an old mine breach. Clutching a bush, he managed to hoist himself back from the brink and keep the other frightened horse from also going into the hole. The horse that fell into the shaft dropped 30 feet, and a small inclined slope had to be sunk to effect a rescue.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. A boy's idea of a good time differs a good deal from the notion of an old man about similar matters. And the old man has a way of seeming wonderfully virtuous because he doesn't indulge in a lot of foolishness which no longer appeals to him.

Just at the present time more than a little interest is being manifested at Washington by members of congress and by Pres. Taft in seeking legislation that shall prevent medicine vendors and the makers of patent nostrums from advertising their products as "sure cures" when in many cases they possess no value whatever in that direction. It is noteworthy and surprising that this effort appeals to many men of influence and prominence who appear not at all interested in newspaper liquor advertisements. There is not a street or hardly a block in any village or city in the entire United States in which cases of extreme drunkenness and loss of physical and mental power and ruin in every distressing form has not been directly brought about through the whiskey and beer habit. The patent medicine evil may be worthy of attention, but no sane man or woman can for a moment compare it with the drink affliction. And yet some newspapers and magazines that approve the effort to silence the "sure cure" solicitations give the use of their own pages to display advertisements soliciting the sale of whiskey and wine and gin and beer to men and women and to boys and girls. Public sentiment however is rapidly increasing and uniting in opposition to whiskey and beer solicitations and in a little while they will disappear from all publication making claim to public worth and respectability.

SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1911.

Michigan's Cleanup Day.

July 25 has been set by the state fire marshal as "cleanup day." On this date the people of Michigan are asked to dispose of rubbish in basements, warehouses, stores, factories, public buildings, etc., in order to reduce the fire risk. The request deserves a general response.

Annually this country burns up millions. Since 1879, the first year for which statistics are available, the loss has mounted steadily. In that year it totaled $77,703,700. In 1910 it had reached $210,000,000. Think of how many universities this would entow, how many libraries it would build, how many children it would educate, how many poverty-stricken men and women it would feed and clothe! Ninety per cent of this loss is chargeable to carelessness—gross criminal carelessness in little things.

One of the "little things" that cause fires is untidiness, the throwing away in dark corners of paper, packing material, shavings, etc. A stray match a spark, a cigar or cigarette butt or spontaneous combustion does the rest. Because of this national habit of thoughtless untidiness the fire loss in this country is the highest in the civilized world. Because of it the business men of this country stagger under abnormally high insurance rates.

Who is responsible? Everybody—or nearly everybody. Those not careless themselves tolerate carelessness in others. Thus the blame must be widely distributed. The remedy lies in everybody doing those little things that prevent fires. Experts can talk of elaborate systems for prevention—they are good within their limits—but the real cure lies in the people themselves taking just such simple precautions as the fire marshal suggests.

Setting aside a particular day for cleaning up is a good idea. It concentrates public attention on the subject. Let all co-operate in remembering July 25 this year and then make every day thereafter "cleanup day."

Michigan's First Land Show.

Michigan's first Land and Apple show will be held in Grand Rapids, November 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11, 1911, under the auspices of the Western Michigan Development Bureau and the Grand Rapids Press. The men who have been selected to prepare the show and make a success of it are:

Petoskey Record. At Monday night's council meeting some startling revelations were made on the dangerously low condition of the city water supply. Ald. Cross of the water committee reported that the people on the hill section of the city are without water, even for drinking purposes, for several hours each evening, and that if a fire should break out in that section of the city in the evening there would be no water for fire protection and that a fire in the downtown section could not be fought for more than a half hour at most. He reported the water in the well at low water mark and that during the evening the well was pumped practically dry. The tanks in the south east section of the city he said, were dry before eight o'clock Monday evening and if people continued to sprinkle for four hours each day there will be no relief from this condition until the new well at the plant is finished, and that during the completion of the new well conditions will be even worse, for during that time little water can be pumped from the old well. To remedy this condition the council ordered all lawn sprinkling discontinued until further notice.

"Coronation of King George and Queen Mary," showing scenes of the most gorgeous pageant recorded in history. The crowning of a King and queen at which all nations of the world were present. At the Family Theatre next Thursday evening, July 20th. Don't miss it.

Erwin "Farmer" Watson, a wrestler of state wide reputation who made East Jordan his home a part of last year, was seriously and probably fatally injured in a runaway at Everett, Washington, recently. He is in the hospital with six ribs broken, and four pulled away from the backbone. He also received several bad bruises.

Mrs. Emma SALT District Deputy Lady Maccabees of the World of Cadillac, held a most interesting meeting Thursday with the members of Jordan River Hive. Plans were made for a large class to be initiated in the fall, also to hold a public meeting at which time Mrs. Alberta Drocelle, State Commander of Detroit, will be present.

D. R. Jones of Petoskey has been appointed chief state deputy state game and fish warden; taking the place of Chas. N. Smith of Petoskey, and State Game and Fish Warden Pierce has been replaced by William Oates, of Calumet, by Governor Osborn. Mr. Jones has for several months been deputy state dairy and food commissioner. Mr. Smith will remain in Petoskey until fall at least.

A quiet wedding took place on the West Side last Sunday evening when Mrs. Rosa Batterbee became the wife of Mr. Francis Crothers both of this city and who are both favorably known. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Porter Bennett, pastor of the Methodist church at the bride's home. On Monday they left for places in the northern part of the state and will spend a short time in Duluth, Wis.

There will be a labor Day celebration in Charlevoix Monday, September 4. Committees have been appointed, and plans are formulating for a grand good time generally. Invitations are being sent to all outlying towns and cities to come and join in making this one of the best gala days held in years. There will be races of various kinds, games, parades, band contests, torch light processions in the evening, etc. Everybody invited to come and share in a good time. See bills later.—Charlevoix Courier.

Fernando M. M. Wall, 66, retired merchant, is dead of a broken heart at Sherman, Mich., because Sherman lodge, No. 372, F. & A. M., has had to give up his charter, owing to the fact that the greater part of the village has been destroyed by fires, and the population so dwindled that the village cannot support a separate lodge there. One night last week the survivors of the lodge which has been in existence there for 30 years, met to take final action over the surrender to the grand lodge of the state. The majority vote favored the action. Wall wept at the outcome. Arising to his feet, he admitted the futility of banging on any longer to the charter. He urged, however, that the lodge's Bible, presented by the Sherman Eastern Star, be returned to the Star chapter. By vote the lodge ordered this done. Wall arose again, and said: "Thank you brothers. It is the end." At the instant he fell dead to the floor.

Au Sable and Oscoda Burned

Twin Cities on East Shore Completely Destroyed.

Barge Loading Here Rescues 300 People From Flames.

The twin cities of Au Sable and Oscoda, located on the shore of Lake Huron south of Alpena, were destroyed by fire last Tuesday. The fire originated in the outskirts of Au Sable about three o'clock in the afternoon, soon spread to the slab piles of the Loud Lumber Co., then to the canning factory and in a very short time the entire town was burning. A 50-mile wind from the west drove the fire through Au Sable and carried it to Oscoda across the river. The population of the two towns was about 2000 and there was great danger of many lives being lost, the fire spreading so rapidly that people left all their belongings and fled for safety.

The steam barge Niko of Chicago, Captain Meyers which is now taking on a cargo of pine lumber on the West Side, was the means of saving the lives of a large number of the inhabitants. The Niko tied up at the Loud Company's dock at Au Sable at about the time the fire started and seeing the danger which the people of the town were in Captain Meyers went at once to the authorities and offered to take on board all who came to the docks. In a short time the boat was crowded with men, women and children anxious for safety. Captain Meyers kept the barge tied at the dock until both the boat and dock were afire and the lines had burned. The fierce wind showered the barge with pieces of burning boards but the three lines of hose on the boat saved it from serious damage.

Reports in state paper exaggerated the story of the rescue, saying that hundreds of people were left to perish on the dock when the barge pulled out but according to Captain Meyers not one person was left. He also states that there is no truth in the statement that he and his crew held back the crowd with guns and clubs until the women and children were aboard. All who were at the dock to go were taken on in an orderly manner.

After leaving the dock the barge stood by for an hour and a half and took on several men from small boats and then proceeded to Port-Huron arriving there at 5:00 a. m., Wednesday. By 7:00 o'clock Mayor Bell of Port Huron had the 283 refugees brought by the Niko assigned to hotels and restaurants for breakfast and by 10:00 o'clock the citizens of the town had raised a relief fund of $500.

Captain Meyers has received much praise for his part in the rescue of nearly 300 endangered people but he modestly says that it was no more than any ordinary man would do.

Besides the destruction of Au Sable and Oscoda forest fires have done considerable damage in other parts of the state. Four lives were lost at Au Sable but the number lost in the isolated parts is not known. Alpena suffered a loss of $500,000; the Hite village of Waters has been destroyed.

Onaway, Millersburg and other towns have suffered considerable damage; the White Lumber Co. of Boyne City lost several camps and six steam loaders. Cobb & Mitchell lost a camp near Boyne Falls and The Ward Co. lost three camps.

The fires in this section of the state are under control at present and conditions are not so dangerous as during the first of the week.

Three people, a woman, a girl and a boy, were drowned near Traverse City Sunday by the wind tipping over their boat.

Playing the Ghost

By CLAUDINE SISSON

If Judge Lester had been a superstitious man he might never have become a judge. It was on Friday that he accepted the nomination; it was on the 13th that he came down with his contribution to the campaign fund; it was on another Friday that the convention nominated him, and it was on the 15th again that the recount of the votes proved that he had actually been elected by a majority of 23 votes. Again, had the judge been a superstitious man he would have hesitated before buying the manor house known as "The Maples." Only forty rods down the road stood what had come to be known as "The Ghost House." It had been a fine place in its day, owned and tenanted by gentility and wealth, but things had gone wrong and the lawyers and chancery had come to the feast. The house had been abandoned and was in decay. Farmers without the fear of the law before their eyes had helped themselves to doors and other things, and the small boy had seen to it that not a whole pane of glass was left.

From abandonment to pillage, decay and ghosts is a natural transition. The stories came to the ears of Judge Lester, but made no impression. If there were ghosts he'd have them arrested and brought before him, and on conviction, which was reasonably certain in every case, the sentence would be for not less than three years and four months, and not more than six years and eight months.

When the judge's wife came to hear of the ghosts stalking about so near her every night at midnight she shuddered. Not so with the daughter Cally, however. She'd always wanted to see a real ghost, and to shake hands with it if it was a well-behaved one, and here was her opportunity. Perhaps a witch or two would be thrown in for good measure.

His honor went his way without heeding the fact that the number of ghosts seemed to be increasing as summer drew on, while at the same time the number of his chickens was steadily decreasing. On two of three occasions his attention was called to whoops and yells that sounded very human from the Ghost House, but he was busy with his law books and did not investigate.

It was Miss Cally who solved the problem. That is, when she was out one morning galloping over the wet grass to get her share of the dew cure, she saw five strapping big tramps leave the Ghost House in single file to scatter over the country and tell the sad story of losing their all in the great Chicago fire. Their appearance started a train of thought that was to solidify two weeks later, when her chum, Molly Parsons, came up for a month's stay.

"A haunted house? You don't mean it!" replied the visitor.

"Honest Injun!"

"And there are ghosts?"

"No. There are tramps sleeping there nights, which is better for us. We are to be the ghosts. Molly Parsons, you get ready for the time of your life. We are going to scare a dozen Weary Willies most to death!"

"But your father and mother?"

"They are not up to date, dear. In the afternoon we raise a ladder to my window to trim the ivy. It is left there. At night we descend and the ghosts walk. We have pillow-cases drawn over our heads, and sheets draped around our bodies, and we glide to and fro and say 'hist!' and 'death!' Lands, but won't it be fun?"

Three or four nights later the affair came off, but not exactly according to program. Miss Cally had got the idea that at least five tramps found lodgings in the Ghost House every night, whereas there were nights when none sought the place at all. No tramp can ever tell just where he will be when night falls. Important business or the police may detain him. The idea of the girls was to invade the house in advance of all callers, and they were successful in this. By the help of a candle they found their way in and to a room upstairs, and then sat down on the floor to tremble and shiver and wish they were out of it. It suddenly began to rain, and that didn't add to the cheer of the situation.

No tramps! The only ghostly figures were the two girls, sitting with clasped hands and their backs to the wall. The situation was solemn. It was weird. It was uncanny. There wasn't the least bit of fun in it.

Hist! A step! A swear-word! A man enters the open front doors. Mr. George Fenwick, artist, coming up from the city on a late train to the house of his brother had found the rain and mud too much for him, and had sought shelter. He batted his wet felt hat against the wall. He scraped his muddy feet on the floor. He swore in a soft and gentle way—not to be wicked, but just to make the weather behave itself.

"He's no tramp!" whispered Miss Cally to her friend.

"No?"

"He's some nice young man. You can tell that by his way of swearing. I wonder if he's heard about the ghosts?"

"S-sh! He seems to be listening!"

"I hope he is. I'm going to scare him bald-headed!"

"Cally Lester, if you utter the least sound I'll—"

But the sound was uttered. It was a long-drawn groan—just such a groan as a man who had got stuck while crawling under a corn-crib would utter. The silence down stairs could have been cut with a knife.

Another groan, ending with a wail—such a wail as a strong man utters when he gives up his fight with the mad waves and sinks to the bottom of the tossing sea. Of course, the wail is uttered before he reaches the bottom.

There was the movement of feet down stairs, and then a voice called up:

"Any one up there? If so, don't try any of your tricks on me!"

"O-h-h-h-h! M-m-m-m-m-m!" was answered.

This sighing, wailing, groaning agonizing sound was made by Miss Cally Lester while Miss Molly Parson was trying to hold a hand over her mouth. It should have brought about the bald-headed act, but it didn't. Somebody downstairs muttered something about tom-cats, and then feet were heard of one ascending. An electric cigar lighter was flashed, a man stood in the door of the room, and the two girls gave utterance to shrieks.

"Good evening, ladies! Waiting for the storm to pass, I suppose! Some thing new in evening-costumes, I see. I should be happy to paint you both as you sit there. The wailing and groaning were perfect. Why don't you try it for the phonograph?"

"Sir!" replied Miss Cally as she scrambled up. "We are two girls. We came here to play ghost and scare away tramps. It's just a lark. We are now going home, and—"

"No, I won't follow."

"And as you are a gentleman—"

"Not a word to any living soul. You have a candle there. Let me light it for you and show you out."

And as they plodded home in rain and mud to climb the ladder, Miss Molly Parsons said, after a long silence:

"Cally, you arranged all this and led me into it, and now you've got to pay the penalty."

"How?"

"You've got to marry the man we didn't scare!"

Mr. Fenwick has been pretty constant in his calls at "The Maples" for the last year, and it was only the other evening that the judge woke from a nap to say:

"Yes, he'll be asking for an interview with me in a very short time, now."

Automatic Drinking Fountain.

A Santa Ana, Cal., inventor has devised a new automatic drinking fountain, which has been installed in different sections of Los Angeles and is meeting with success. By simply inserting a one-cent piece in one of the slots of the fountain and pressing down a lever, one will receive a glass of ice-cold filtered water automatically filled just to the brim. If the prospective imbiber has no cent piece, he can insert a nickel in another slot and receive four cents change. Ice is placed in a space beneath the fountain on several iron coils which run up into the machine. The water flows through these tubes and becomes cooled. The machine will not accept substitutes for money, but immediately returns slugs and smooth coins.

New Electrical Discovery.

Developments in the investigation of electricity at the University of Chicago were announced the other day.

Prof. R. A. Millikan made public results which he declares supply not only complete proof that electricity is a definite substance which can be separated into the atoms composing it, but which gives a satisfactory demonstration that all matter is composed of molecules which are in constant motion, every object being of countless moving atoms which give an incalculable number of analogies to the ceaseless motions of the solar system.

DAUGHTER OF LORD NOW ON THE STAGE

FLORA SACKVILLE-WEST BECOMES A DANCER BEFORE LONDON THEATREGOERS.

FATHER ONCE IN WASHINGTON

Public Appearance of This Daughter of a Former British Ambassador to the United States Revives the Sackville-West Scandal.

London.—It is quite a common thing nowadays for titled folks to go on the stage. The latest one to adopt this profession is the Hon. Flora Sackville-West, daughter of a former British ambassador at Washington. Lord Sackville was British minister to the United States in 1888. He was recalled by the British government because he advised a naturalized American citizen how he should vote in a presidential election. Miss Sackville-West inherits her talent for dancing from her mother, the beautiful Josefa Duran, a Spanish dancer, around whose shadowy figure the Sackville peerage case raged about two years ago.

A few years ago all England was ringing with the scandal of her father's life, during a suit instituted by her brother to establish his and his sister's legitimacy. The suit failed, the English courts holding that Sackville-West had never acknowledged the legitimacy of his union with their mother, Josefa Duran de Ortega, a Spanish dancer and actress, and that the children were not entitled to a share in the estate.

The romance of Lord Sackville-West and Josefa Duran de Ortega started England at the time, and the appearance of their daughter on the stage is reviving echoes of the old scandal. Sackville-West, in 1864, was secretary of the British legation at Madrid. He was thirty-seven years old; the incomparable Josefa, on whose twinkling toes hung the admiration of the town, was five years younger, in the full ripe bloom of her dazzling charms. For a month or so her other adorers gritted the teeth of wrathful envy while she continued to dance and permitted her English gallant alone to pay her his addresses. Then she disappeared utterly from the stage.

The secretary of the legation began to have disappearances, too. It was an open secret that he passed those intervals with Josefa in a handsome villa near the Chateau d'Afcachon, on the outskirts of Bordeaux, where his innamorata was domiciled. But, to society and diplomacy, that made not the slightest difference. He was a bachelor; he was immensely wealthy; he entertained lavishly; hadn't half the world just some such delightful secret as he?

Lord Lionel's diplomatic career went on with steady advancements, and his relations with Josefa continued. He maintained her in luxury, and provided generously for the care and education of their children. But never did he consent to legitimize them; never did he give to the radiant Josefa the right to be known as Lady Sackville-West.

He died, legally unmarried, and his next of kin, after the brief and scandalous battle in the English courts over the estate, came into the possession of the fortune and occupied magnificent Knole house, which is one of the great mansions of England.

So that is why graceful, pretty, poor Flora Sackville-West is dancing like an entrancing houri of the east on the stage of a London theater.

While in Washington Sackville-West's two daughters were with him and he introduced them into society. No one there suspected that there was any question as to their legitimacy.

Subordinate Officer the Recipient of Hints Intended for His Superior.

A sea captain's wife tells this story of a maiden woman, sister of one of the owners of the ship on which she once made a long voyage. She had very decided opinion on most matters, and she and the captain had many spirited arguments at the dinner table.

The captain's wife, a meek, submissive little soul, fearing that in the heat of argument her husband might say something to offend their august passenger, was in the habit of kicking him on the shins to hint at moderation. Nevertheless, all these reminders passed unheeded.

One day she administered a more vigorous kick than usual, and noticed an expression of pain flit across the face of the mate, who sat opposite her.

"Oh, Mr. Brown, was that your shin?" she asked.

"Yes, Mrs. Blaikie," said the mate, meekly, "it's been my shin all the voyage, ma'am."—Youth's Companion.

The Worth of the Voice.

How wonderful is the human voice! It is indeed the organ of the soul! The intellect of man sits enthroned visibly upon his forehead and in his eye, and the heart of man is written upon his countenance. But the soul reveals itself in the voice only; as God revealed himself to the prophet of old in the still, small voice, and in the voice from the burning bush. The soul of man is audible, not visible. A sound alone betrays the flowing of the eternal fountain, invisible to man.—Longfellow: Hyperion.

Couldn't See the Resemblance.

They have been joking Assistant Treasurer James A. Mathews of the Guardian bank, on his resemblance to President Taft, and Mr. Mathews has steadily refused to be annoyed thereby. So the jokers subsided and the joke died a natural death.

Until the other night, when Mr. and Mrs. Mathews dined together with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harmon and their little daughter, when the Taft resemblance was revived. Turning to young Miss Harmon, Mr. Mathews asked whether she, too, thought he looked like the president.

Dorothy studied long and earnestly. Then she answered:

"Not in the face, Uncle Jim."—Cleveland Leader.

Some Day Ask Your Physician

To tell you the curious story of how the mind affects the digestion of food.

I refer to the condition the mind is in, just before, at the time, or just following the taking of food.

If he has been properly educated (the majority have) he will help you understand the curious machinery of digestion.

To start you thinking on this interesting subject, I will try to lay out the plan in a general way and you can then follow into more minute details.

Pawlow (pronounce Pavloff) a famous Russian Physician and Chemist, experimenting on some dogs, cut into the tube leading from the throat to the stomach.

They were first put under chloroform or some other anesthetic and the operation was painless. They were kept for months in very good condition.

When quite hungry some unappetizing food was placed before them and, although hunger forced them to eat, it was shown by analysis of the contents of the stomach that little if any of the digestive juices were found.

Then, in contrast, some raw meat was put where they couldn't reach it at once, and a little time allowed for the minds of the dogs to "anticipate" and create an appetite. When the food was finally given them, they devoured it ravenously and with every evidence of satisfaction. The food was passed out into a dish through the opening before it reached the stomach. It was found to be mixed with "Ptyalin" the alkaline juice of the mouth, which is important for the first step in digestion. Then an analysis was made of the contents of the stomach, into which no food had entered. It was shown that the digestive fluids of stomach were flowing freely, exactly as if the desirable food had entered.

This proved that it was not the presence of food which caused the digestive juices to flow, but the flow was caused entirely and alone as a result of the action of the mind, from "anticipation."

One dog continued to eat the food he liked, for over an hour believing he was getting it into his stomach, whereas, not an ounce went there; every particle went out through the opening and yet all this time the digestive juices flowed to the stomach, prepared to quickly digest food, in response to the curious orders of the mind.

Do you pick up the lesson? Unappetizing food, that which fails to create mental anticipation, does not cause the necessary digestive juices to flow, whereas, food that is pleasing to the sight, and hence to the mind, will cause the complicated machinery of the body to prepare in a wonderful way for its digestion.

How natural, then, to reason that one should sit down to a meal in a peaceful, happy state of mind and start off the breakfast, say with some ripe delicious fruit, then follow with a bowl of crisp, lightly browned, thin bits of corn like Post Toasties, and a sprinkle of sugar and some good yellow cream and the attractive, appetizing picture cannot escape your eye and will produce the condition of mind which causes the digestive juices nature has hidden in mouth and stomach, to come forth and do their work.

These digestive juices can be driven back by a mind oppressed with worry, hate, anger or dislike of the disagreeable appearance of food placed before one.

Solid facts that are worthy the attention of anyone who esteems prime health and human happiness as a valuable asset in the game of life.

"There's a Reason" for saying "The Memory Lingers" when breakfast is started with POST TOASTIES.

Under Conditions, the Matter Seemed Comparatively Easy of Arrangement.

The central police station was overcrowded one day last week. Officers were wondering what they would do should another arrest be made, when the door opened and a sleepy-looking, blue-eyed foreigner drifted in with a most dejected "Goot evening, mens."

The officers nodded their greetings to the stranger, who then asked: "Can I did some sleepings here? I just came from Chicago and am start to work tomorrow."

"Well, the only space we have left is a bunk, which is already occupied by a colored man. You can share that if you want to," replied the officer.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy who was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them at 10 years of age and had them for four years. I tried three doctors and one specialist but all of them said he could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He is now hale, hearty and gay. It has been three years since he had the last spell. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines praise wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

Blight Injuring Fruit Trees.

Prof. H. J. Eusface horticulturist at the Michigan Agricultural College, calls attention to the "blight" which is doing great damage to the present season, in the Western Michigan apple, pear and quince orchards.

The disease, he says, is an old and common one. Its appearance is very striking. The diseased parts of the tree, whether young shoots, blossoms, fruits, or fruit spurs, turn brown and the leaves do not fall off but hang on the tree. Hence the presence of the disease is easy to detect.

The trouble is usually more common and serious on pears and quinces, of all ages, than on old apples, but it is often very destructive of young apple trees.

Many methods of control have been suggested and tried but the only one that has been successful is the eradication of the diseased portions. That this method may be successful, requires a systematic inspection, at frequent intervals, of every tree in the orchard and the removal of all diseased portions.

The inspection and eradication should be done in pear and quince orchards of all ages and in young apple orchards. A large number of apple and pear orchards have been started in Michigan during the past few years and they should be examined at once. The trouble is seldom serious enough on old apple trees to pay for the labor of cutting out the diseased portions, however it may be advisable on some varieties that are very susceptible to the disease like the Taiman Sweet.

Certain precautions must be carefully followed in cutting out the diseased portions. Unless these are taken the work will not be effective and may be worse than if no efforts were made to check it.

The rules for cutting out the diseased parts are as follows:

1. Make the cut well back into the healthy wood. The cause of the trouble may extend farther than it appears.
2. After every operation, wipe off the tool and also the cut surface with some disinfectant solution. A good one is corrosive sublimate. 1 to 1,000 strength. This is easily prepared by placing in a pint of water one corrosive sublimate tablet which can be secured of any druggist.
3. Keep the diseased twigs in a bag or basket and burn them.

It is reported from Ann Arbor that the regents of the University of Michigan have it in mind to appoint a permanent detective whose duty it will be to see that the law providing against the sale of liquor to University students shall be respected. It is said that the saloon-keepers of Ann Arbor protest against this law constitutional and insist that they can't distinguish student from non-student. But the officers of the University and members of the faculty declare that this statement is not true. The saloon-keepers do know students from non-students and they aggressively cater to the student trade. The true status of the Michigan saloon-keeper can be realized by the people of the state when it is necessary to provide a special detective service in order to prevent the deliberate ruin of boys who have been sent from their homes to our state's great school. If this danger or even a far less one existed from any source alleged to be due to capitalism, trusts, to any foreign government, the people of Michigan would be aroused and active throughout the entire Commonwealth. Saloon "regulation" and saloon pretense as to the observance of law are shown in their true colors through this requirement that special officers be hired in order to keep the saloons from deliberately debauching the school boys of our state.

MICHIGAN TO HAVE HER OWN SHOW

Big Land and Apple Display To Be Pulled off at Grand Rapids.

Michigan is to have its own great Land and Apple Show this fall. It will be held in the Coliseum, Grand Rapids, the second week in November under the joint auspices of the Western Michigan Development Bureau and the Grand Rapids Evening Press, which have together assumed the responsibility of placing before the world the products and resources of this state as they have never been displayed before.

It is proposed to make this show the finest exhibition of Michigan apples ever gathered together. To this end the Western Michigan Development Bureau has decided not to exhibit at the Chicago Land Show this year, but to combine its energies with The Evening Press, and united make the first Michigan Land and Apple Show a fruit exposition that will cause the world to open its eyes in astonished admiration. When it is considered that the Michigan display was without question one of the most striking features of the Land show last year and the year before and that preparations are under way for the Michigan show with the intention of eclipsing all previous achievements, an exhibit may be expected in Grand Rapids that will advertise the state far and wide as the producer of the finest fruit on the American continent.

Besides the display of apples and other fruits there will be packing demonstrations, lectures on scientific fruit growing methods, and exhibits by manufacturers and others.

Other Michigan Development Bureaus have responded promptly and affirmatively to the invitation to cooperate in the making of a show that will be truly representative of all Michigan. The Original Fruit Ball Association of Southern Michigan, the Eastern Michigan Development Bureau, and the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau are all expected to display their products here.

When the question of local option was being discussed by the people of Macomb county a very energetic protest against the movement in that direction came from Mr. Clemens. It would hurt business, it was declared, and Mr. Clemens needs to be an open town in order to make its prosperity possible. Local option does hurt some kinds of business. It doesn't disturb factories or mills or machine shops or farms or stores, or any of the legitimate means through which men earn money or spend it for themselves or their families. But it will hurt and it should hurt some persistent features of "business" at Mr. Clemens. Two visitors to that city, a man and his wife from Akron, Ohio, were taken to a house on Front street and relieved of $40 for an alleged examination by a local physician. The participants in the affair have been arrested but an effort is being made to hush it up for fear that "it will disturb business at Mr. Clemens." Local option would not harmonize with Mr. Clemens' "wide-open policy" but the latter's relation to grafters and swindlers and to saloon defiance of law provide an opportunity for choosing between the one and the other which makes the issue very clear. Mr. Clemens has lost in volume of business, in property values and in future possibilities through the effort on the part of some of its people and acquiesced in by others to become a resort for a class of people whose operations require deliberate disregard of law by the community in which they live and thrive.
