Clarence Darrow, a man who through two or three local option campaigns came to Michigan from Chicago as the high-priced advocate of the brewers' association, will probably not perform such service again. It is declared by the working men who paid him that Darrow pocketed over $100,000 of their hard earnings for posing as the attorney of the McNamara, while all the time that this money was pouring into his hands he knew that the McNamara brothers were guilty. Had he either openly or secretly given this information to the laboring men he was pretending to represent it would have saved them many hard earned dollars. Clarence Darrow accepted money for service he knew he was not going to perform. He accepted pay for preparing to defend the McNamaras when he knew that they were as guilty as bloody crimes could make them. And this same Clarence Darrow accepted money from the breweries and saloons in Michigan for making speeches in their behalf when he knew they too were stained with the blood of scores and hundreds of their victims and were the cause of grief and misery to many, many thousands of our state's mothers and wives and little children.

The Range of Vision.

Data have been gathered in Germany with reference to the distance at which persons may be recognized by their faces and figures, says the Scientific American. If one has good eyes, the Germans claim, one cannot recognize a person whom he has seen but once before at a greater distance than 25 meters (82 feet). If the person is well known to one, one may recognize him at from 50 to 100 meters, and if it is a member of one's family, even at 200 meters. The whites of the eyes may be seen at from 27 to 28 meters, and the eyes themselves at 72 to 73 meters. The different parts of the body and the slightest movements are distinguishable at 91 meters. The limbs show at 182 meters. At 540 meters a moving man appears only as an indistinct form, and at 720 meters, 2,861.6 feet, the movements of the body are no longer visible.

Deduction.

"What are you grouchy about?" asked the young man who wears his hat over one eye.

"Your manners—" suggested Mr. Mildboy.

"But you told me to make myself at home in your office."

"True. And I was merely sympathizing with you. I am sure that with your aggressive style of speech and your general lack of repose your home life cannot be happy."

Art and Science.

"What a beautiful picture of an angel!" said the lady who was visiting the art gallery.

"Yes," replied the aviation enthusiast, "but between you and me those wings aren't practical."

Proceedings of City Commission.

Special meeting of the City Commission held at the City Hall, Monday evening Jan. 22, 1912. Meeting was called to order by Mayor pro tem Hudson and adjournment was taken to the City Attorney's office. Present, Hudson and Kenny (2); absent, Cleveland (1).

Minutes of the four previous meetings were read and approved.

On motion by Kenny, supported by Hudson, the following bills were allowed and the Clerk instructed to draw orders for the same:

John Nachazel, gravel and cleaning water tank.....	$ 4 25
H. W. Dicken; Vance case and water rebate.....	3 50
Standard Oil Co., cylinder oil.....	8 73
Total.....	$16 48

The City Commission of the City of East Jordan, having under consideration the matter of paving on Mill, Main and Esterly streets in said City, Commissioner Kenny offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

Resolved, that this Commission deems the paving of Mill street from the east rail of the East Jordan and Southern Railroad track to the east line of Third street; Main street from the north line of Mill street to the north line of Garfield street, and Esterly street east from the east line of Main street a distance of one hundred seventy feet, more or less, to the east line of alley and west from the west line of Main street a distance of ten feet, to be a necessary public improvement, as shown by the plans, plats, diagrams, specifications, profiles and blue prints now on file with the Clerk of this City, and intends to establish a special assessment district therefor as shown by said plans, plats, diagrams, specifications, profiles and blue prints, and that said special assessment be assessed and pay seventy-five (75) per cent of the cost of such improvement (the City to pay its just proportion of the cost of intersections of streets and alleys and benefits derived by parks and public places), the same to be assessed upon the lots, lands and premises abutting such proposed improvement; that the Commission intends to establish a special assessment district comprised of the lots, lands and premises, and streets and alleys abutting upon such proposed improvements as shown by the plans, plats, diagrams, specifications, profiles and blue prints now on file with said Clerk; that it intends that said City shall pay twenty-five (25) per cent of the cost of said improvements, together with its just proportions of the cost of the intersection of the streets and alleys, and of benefits to parks and public places.

Resolved further that this City Commission meet on the thirteenth day of February, A. D. 1912, at the hour of seven o'clock p. m. at its regular place of meeting in the second story of the Hose House on Main street, in said City for the purpose of hearing and considering any objections to the proposed improvement, or the establishment of said special assessment district, on the several amounts to be paid. The City Clerk shall give notice of this meeting by publication in the Charlevoix County Herald, a newspaper published and circulating in said City, once in each week, for two successive weeks prior to said time of meeting.

Adopted by the Commission by aye and nay vote on the twenty-second day of January, A. D. 1912. Ayes, Kenny and Hudson (2); nays, none (0). Moved by Kenny, supported by Hudson, to adjourn. Carried.

Otis J. Smith,
City Clerk.

SIMPLE MIXTURE USED IN EAST JORDAN

Many in East Jordan are now using the simple buckthorn bark and glycerine mixture known as Adler-ika, the new German Appendicitis remedy. A SINGLE DOSE relieves constipation, sour stomach or gas on the stomach almost INSTANTLY. This simple mixture antiseptizes the digestive organs and draws off the impurities and people are surprised how QUICKLY it helps. James Gidley, Druggist.

BOOTLEGGERS CAUGHT

Couple of Boyne City Men Must Stand Trial.

Jesse Sweet, a lumber jack, and Jack Wyant, who runs a second-hand store, both of Boyne City, were arrested Tuesday at that place for illegally selling "booze."

Wyant is the proprietor of a small second-hand store, using this method to cover up the illegal sale of the "booze," and was caught red-handed by sheriff Robbins. He was given his liberty by giving $500 security to appear Monday for a hearing. Sweet is a lumber jack, and was also caught in the act of selling liquor. He was given a hearing before Justice Hammond of that city, bound over until the next term of court, and taken to Charlevoix to await trial.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach. This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable. His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food. We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. The W. C. Spring Drug Co.

County Normal Notes

The Normal students attended the Parents' Association Wednesday evening. The first number on the program was a solo and chorus by the class. Mrs. R. B. Armstrong, Mrs. H. A. Craig and Mr. A. F. Bridge also gave talks on topics of great interest to the citizens.

Lila Gray was absent Friday on account of illness.

Miss Himes received a letter from Miss Margaret Ryan, class of '09, who is teaching in a private family at Elkhart, Ind. She enjoys her work very much.

The program, given under the directions of Misses Himes and Whitting, at the Historical Society was greatly appreciated.

Miss Himes received a card from Miss Ethel Murray, class of '11, who is teaching near Clarion, stating that she attended the Teachers' Institute held at Boyne City last week, but that she did not see any Charlevoix students or teachers there.

The Normal class attended the Farmers' Institute held at the court house Saturday. They furnished part of the music during the day but took a more prominent part in the program in the evening. Their part consisted of talks by the different members of the class and music. We feel the institute was a great benefit to us from the fact that we have a much different opinion of country life.

There is nothing incredible in the reported discovery of rich potash fields in the United States—indeed it has been expected by many people since the necessity of potash as a fertilizer has been harped upon by agricultural scientists and Germany has shown a disposition to save her own potash for her own needs.

Demand for Trained Men Greater Than Supply

By MADISON C. PETERS

IN 1791 Daniel Webster's father, who was a captain under Gen. John Stark in the Revolutionary war, was made a judge of the local court at a salary of about $350.

When Daniel Webster was fourteen years of age, his father took him to Exeter academy. Daniel's education was determined upon because of the fear that the heavy work of a farmer would be too severe a task for Daniel, who was weakly as a boy.

You will not always be boys. In a few years you must take your place among men and in order to be qualified to exert much influence over them you must know something.

When washing to use the sink for washing dishes, fold a cloth and lay over the drain and invert a saucer on this. The sink will then hold the water.

Doctor Richardson's rules for old age: To eat light, nutritious food, plenty of milk and seasonable fruits and vegetables.

Day after day the modern juggernauts sweep through our crowded streets, claiming their human victims without a hand effectively raised in protest.

The coroner's jury exonerated the driver of the automobile. Perhaps the verdict was legally correct. It was an accident.

French toast is another quite common way of serving toast. French Toast.—Beat two eggs slightly, add a half teaspoon of salt and a cup of milk.

You know what it means to be in the right place at the right time, although your being there was not of your own calculation.

Too many people in this world take great credit upon themselves for what they are, when if it were not for the fact that they were lucky they would be no better off than their less fortunate neighbors.

For that matter, they are lucky to be well, strong and of good, sound mind. It is of none of their doings they are such, because if a man is born of good health and strength it is chance.

The great prize of life may come by accident. Shakespeare says: "Fortune brings in some boats that are not steered."

Good positions do not always come by merit, as the result of one's own direct efforts. Many a poor-laboring man is raised to wealth by the death of some rich relative or some poor washerwoman is raised to high position by marrying a man of fortune.

HELPFUL HINTS.

When cleaning door knockers, knobs and handles of brass, slip a piece of pasteboard, an oblong with a slit in the side, around the part to be cleaned.

Beware of too long bathtubs; they are dangerous, especially in a crowd. Five cents will be the cost for amputation, and it may save your neighbor the loss of an eye.

When presenting a book to another, it is not wise to write the name in it, as the friend may have a duplicate and wish to exchange it.

A candle is a nice traveling companion. When carrying bottles of liquids that are so apt to spill and spoil the very best garment, pour a little melted wax around the corks before starting on a trip.

Do not eat apples without a thorough washing. A small microscope will show a young child the reason for this precaution.

Ice cold soap suds will cause the swollen finger to give up the tight ring.

When it is necessary to drink boiled water, aerate it by pouring from one pitcher to another. This removes that flat taste.

Keep the clasp of your gold beads or pearls in front when wearing a heavy coat, as the clasp is easily pressed open and the beads are lost.

A slight rubbing with emery paper will remove the gloss that is so objectionable upon garments.

Use the old whisk broom for sink brushes.

Old pieces of flannel make fine soft absorbent mops.

When washing to use the sink for washing dishes, fold a cloth and lay over the drain and invert a saucer on this. The sink will then hold the water.

Doctor Richardson's rules for old age: To eat light, nutritious food, plenty of milk and seasonable fruits and vegetables.

Eat moderately, and have a light meal before retiring.

Wear warm clothing, exercise moderately and keep active and cheerful. Be interested in what is going on in the world. Be busy, have plenty of sleep (at least nine hours) in a well-ventilated room.

IF YOU don't know, say so. It's a sign of strength to acknowledge your weakness.

Don't abuse the rich; we can't all be poor.

TOAST DISHES.

When toasting bread, cut it and place in the oven to get hot and disperse some of the moisture.

The numerous toast dishes that are so well-known to need direction for preparation are cream toast, egg on toast, and various meats served on toast.

French toast is another quite common way of serving toast. French Toast.—Beat two eggs slightly, add a half teaspoon of salt and a cup of milk.

For luncheon dishes, tomato on toast, asparagus with white sauce or oast and almost any of the vegetables are good served on toast.

Oyster Toast.—Serve broiled oysters on milk toast, cut in small triangles, and sprinkle with chopped celery.

Toast water is a drink which is often given to invalids. Soak toast in water, strain, add a little lemon juice and sugar, and you have a drink that has quite a little nutriment in it.

MONTENEGRO A LAND OF WAR AND SONG

MONTENEGRINS AT GETTING

IT WOULD be easy to miss the frontier of Montenegro if one were not on the lookout for it. It is marked by a row of paving stones set obliquely across the road and a post painted with the Austrian black and yellow.

The streets are wide and well metalled. The houses are small, but they looked well built and comfortable, and there are wells at various corners, where the people draw water in the evening.

There are villalike palaces for the royal family and various rather imposing legations; but in the main both houses and churches are very modest in appearance and do not lay claim to any great antiquity.

The peasants wear long coats of white feltlike cloth with bright sashes and all have the "torba" or pouch common throughout Dalmatia.

The man of means does not wear this undyed material. He has a green, wide skirted coat, with sleeves slit near the shoulder, so that he may wear the coat without them when it is warm.

All alike wear the poetic headdress of their country, a little round cap, which is at once a dirge, a lyric and a song of victory. It has a red top and a brim of padded black silk, which is used as a purse.

"Papa was very polite at dinner," observed small Margie. "In serving the ladies he said 'dressing' because they like to dress, but in serving the gentlemen he called it 'stuffing,' because they always want so much to eat."

The Montenegrin type of face is short, square, brown eyed, dark haired. It is ready enough to smile, to see a joke, but in repose it has a tragic sadness, a look of mourning that matches the black cap brim.

They sowed their seeds in the little pockets of earth that collect in dips and dells in the rock and built themselves houses of the plentiful stone.

The soil is rich, but there is very little of it, so every patch is made to contribute its half dozen potatoes or its handful of grain.

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Brackwater, a beautiful widow who is attracted by his immense fortune and wishes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Poniatowsky is suitor and escort to Letty. Lord Galorey and a friend named Ruggles determine to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily; he can talk of nothing but Letty and this angers the Duchess. The westerner finds Letty ill from hard work.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

But Dan hesitated, looking at the bit of humanity that he had laid with great gentleness on the divan covered with pillows. Letty Lane lay there, small, as a little child, inanimate as death. It was hard to think the quiet little form could contain such life, fire and motion, or that this senseless little creature held London with her voice and grace. Higgins knelt down by Letty Lane's side, quiet, capable, going about the business of resuscitating her lady much as she laid the singer's bodice and shoes. "If you would be so good as to open the door, sir, and send me a call page. They'll have to linger out this contract or put on some feature."

"But," exclaimed Blair, "she can't go back tonight."

"Lord, yes," Higgins returned. "Here, Miss Lane; drink this."

At the door where he paused, Dan saw the girl lifted up, saw her lean on Higgins' shoulder, and assured then that she was not lifeless in good truth, he went out to do as Higgins had asked him. In a quarter of an hour the curtain rose and within half an hour Dan, from his box, saw the actress dance to the strains of the Hungarian Band.

CHAPTER X.

The Boy From My Town.

He went the next day to see Letty Lane at the Savoy and learned that she was too ill to receive him. Mrs. Higgins in the sitting-room told him so.

Dan liked the big cordial face of the Scotchwoman who acted as companion, dresser and maid for the star. Mrs. Higgins had an affable face, one that welcomes, and she made it plain that she was not an enemy to this young caller.

The visitor, in his blue serge clothes, was less startling than most of the men that came to see her mistress.

"She works too hard, doesn't she?" "She does everything too hard, sir."

"She ought to rest."

"I doubt if she does, even in her grave," returned Higgins. "She is too full of motion. She is like the little girl in the fairy book that danced in her grave."

Dan didn't like this comparison.

"Can't you make her hold up a little?"

Higgins smiled and shook her head. Letty Lane's sitting-room was as full of roses as a flower garden. There were quantities of theatrical photographs in silver and leather frames on the tables and the piano. Signed portraits from crowned heads; pictures of well-known worldly men and women whom the dancer had charmed. But a full-length picture of Letty Lane herself in one of the dresses of "Mandalay" lay on the table near Dan, and he picked it up. She smiled at him, enchantingly from the cardboard, across which was written in her big, flashing hand: "For the Boy from my Town Letty Lane."

Dan glanced up at Mrs. Higgins.

"Why, that looks as though this were for me."

The dressing woman nodded. "Miss Lane thought she would be able to see you today."

The picture in his hand, Dan gazed at it rapturously.

"I'm from Blairtown, Montana, where she came from."

"So she told me, sir."

He laid the picture back on the table, and Higgins understood that he wanted Miss Lane to give it to him herself. She led him affably to the door and affably smiled upon him. She had a thrill in her hand, a tingle on her finger, and a lot of needles in her bodice. She looked motherly and useful. Blair liked to think of her with Letty Lane. He put his hand in his pocket, but she saw his gesture and reproved him quietly: "No, no, sir, please, I never do. I am just as much obliged," and her face remained so affable that Blair was not embarrassed by her refusal. His parting words were:

"Now, you make her take care of herself."

And to please him, as she opened the door, she pleasantly assured him that she would do her very best.

Dan went out of the Savoy feeling that he had left something of himself behind him in the motley room of an actress with its perfumed atmosphere of roses and violets. The photograph which he had laid down on the table seemed to look out at him again, and he repeated delightedly, "That one was for me, all right! I'm the 'boy from her town' and no mistake." And he thought of her as she had lain, lifelessly and pale on the dressing-room sofa, under the touch of hired hands, and how, no doubt, she had been lying in her room when he called today, with shades drawn, resting before the long hard evening, when London would be amused by her, delighted by her, charmed by her voice, by her body and her grace. He had wandered up as far as Piccadilly, went into a florist's and stood before the flowers. Her sitting-room had been full of roses, but Dan chose something else that had caught his eye from the window—a huge country basket of primroses, smelling of the earth and the spring. He sent them with

"He took on with the mine a lot of discontented half-hearted rascals—a whole bunch who had failed all along the line. He didn't chuck 'em out. 'There's no life in old wood, Josh,' he said to me, 'but sometimes there's fire in it, and I'm going to light up,' and he did. He won over the whole lot of them in eighteen months, and within two years he had that darned mine paying dividends. Meanwhile something came his way and he took it."

From his chair Dan asked: "You mean the Bentley claim?"

"Measles," his friend said comically, with a grin. "Your father was sick to death with them. When he was sitting up for the first time, peeling in his room, there was a fellow, an Englishman, a total stranger, come in to see him. 'Better clear out of here,' your father says to him. 'I'm shedding the damndest disease for a grown man that ever was caught.' 'I'm not afraid of it,' the Englishman said, 'I'm shedding worse.' When your father asked him what that was, he said the idea that he could make any money in the West. He told your father that he was going back to England and give up his western schemes, and that he had a claim to sell, and he told Blair where it lay. 'Who has seen it?' your father asked. 'Any of my men?' And the Englishman told your father that nobody had wanted to buy it and that, was why he had come to him. He said he thought his only chance to sell was to hold up some blind man on his dying bed and that he had heard that Blair was too his card and wrote on it, "To the Girl from My Town," and sent the gift with a pleasure as young and as fresh as was his own heart.

He got no note of acknowledgment from his flowers. Miss Lane was evidently better and played every night; no mention was made of her indisposition in the papers. But Dan couldn't go to the Gaiety or bear to see her make the effort which he knew must tire her beyond words to conceive.

After a few days he called at the Savoy to get news of her. He got as far as the lift when going up in it he saw Prince Poniatowsky. The sight affected Miss Lane's townsman so terribly that instead of going up to the dancer's apartment Dan took himself off, and anger, displeasure and something like disgust were the only sentiments he carried away from the Savoy. He sent her no flowers, and gave himself up unreservedly to Joshua Ruggles and to a couple of men who came in to see him by appointment. And when toward four o'clock he found himself alone with Ruggles, Dan threw himself down in a big chair and looked intensely bored.

"Well, I guess we don't need to see any more of these fellows for a week, Dan," Ruggles yawned with relief. "I'm blamed if it isn't as hard to take care of money as to get it. I was a poor man once, and so was your father. Those were the days we had fun."

Ruggles took out a big cigar, struck a match sharply, and when he had lit his Henry Clay he fixed his gaze on the flying London fog, whose black curtain drew itself across their window.

"There's a lot of excitement," Ruggles said, "in not knowing what you're going to get; may turn out to be anything when you're young and on the trail. That's the way your father and me felt. And when we started out on the spot that's Blairtown on the map today, your father had forty dollars a week to engineer a busted mine and to pull the company into shape."

Dan knew the story of his father's rise by heart, but he listened.

sick to stir out of his room and to prospect. Your father liked the fellow's cheek, and when he found out that he had the maps with him, your father bought the whole blooming sweep at the man's price, which was a mere song.

"Your father never went near his purchase for a year or more, and when he had turned the mine he was managing over to the original company, with me as manager in his place, at a salary of twenty thousand dollars a year, he said to me one day, 'Ruggles, you'll be sorry to know that the fun is all over, I've struck oil! But the oil was copper. The whole blooming business that he'd bought of that Englishman was rich with ore. Well, that's the story of Blairtown,' Ruggles said. "You were born there and your mother died there."

Dan said: "Galorey told me what dad did later for the man that sold him the mine, and it was just like everything else he did, for dad was all right, just as good as they come."

Ruggles agreed. He left his reminiscences abruptly. "Your dad and me had the fun in our time; now you are going to get the other kind; you're going to make the dust fly that he dug up."

And the rich young man said musingly: "I'll bet it isn't half as good as my land."

And Ruggles agreed: "Not by a jugful." And followed: "What's on tonight?" "Mandalay?"

Dan's fury at Prince Poniatowsky came back. "I guess you thought I was a little loose in the lid, didn't you, Josh, going so often to the same play?"

"You wouldn't have been the first rich man that had the same disease," Ruggles answered.

"There is nothing the matter with Mandalay, but I'm not gone on an actress living, Josh; you are in the wrong pew."

At Five O'clock Tea

THE very large cities, and a few smaller ones, have succeeded in establishing the custom of "five o'clock tea," which is altogether worth while. It is a little event in the day, for those who would otherwise stay at home, which takes women out of doors for a space and brings them into inspiring touch with each other. After the matinee or the afternoon's shopping one may see women at their prettiest in the tea-rooms of the hotels, or the great shops, or at those confectioners who are wise enough to provide an attractive rendezvous for homeward bound patrons. The comfortable part is that one may be gowned appropriately in the plainest of tailor-mades or in more pretentious visiting-costumes, and, in the matter of millinery, everything is admissible, with the tendency toward dressy hats, ever growing in favor. Hats plain, more hats semi-dress and most hats dressy may be looked for at the five o'clock tea.

This latitude in millinery is portrayed in the three hats shown here. In Fig. 1, a clever little bonnet shape of deep rose colored braid boasts no trimming, but a quilling of ribbon about the face and a sash about the crown. This is in a soft greyish blue that seems somehow to have been borrowed from a tint in the braid. This hat was quite fit with a long enveloping cloak of dark blue cloth which covered the matinee bodice of the wearer.

The bonnet-like shape, with tan crown developed in dark amethyst plush is a striking model in a semi-dress hat. The pendant beads and oriental embroidery take a step beyond the tailored type.

The bonnet of velvet and lace, modeled on the Dutch shape, is an inspiration. Big butterfly wings of lace, and a gilt and silver ornament make up its simple ensemble. But it is a hat to catch and hold the attention and to compel admiration.

Grouped about a table in a party of four one may find the plainest and the most elaborate of hats, with all wearers enjoying a sense of being correctly dressed. Pretty millinery and soft furs are charming for the 5 o'clock tea.

FOR THE AFTERNOON.

A three-piece walking costume in green tweed and black velvet.

White Gaiters Are Worn

The woman who has pumps and does not wish to get high shoes until late in the winter can now use her cloth gaiters and be very much in style. White ones are quite the fashion and their rivals are pearl gray. These are worn with the black shoes with all kinds of gowns that are short and for the street.

STYLES MUCH MORE SIMPLE

Richness of Attire That Has Marked Past Seasons Has Been Considerably Modified.

This year the girl who is trying to adjust the balance between a self-respecting smartness of attire and a minute income has everything on her side. Compared with last year's richness and eccentricity, which made the task more than puzzling to the home dressmaker, there is a notable revival of the severely simple.

Hats with hardly any trimming at all, braid and buttons in lieu of embroideries, simply cut dresses of one color only, and the plainest of coats and skirts; are a few of the sweeping changes in store for us. There is very little doubt that the majority of women will welcome the new order of things.

Foremost among the revivals of the winter is the return to favor of our old friend, the blouse, which suffered a period of almost total eclipse during the summer, when the all conquering "little frock" swept everything before it. It comes back absolutely in its earliest and most elementary form. The shirtwaist was the shape in which the blouse was first made known to us, if one excludes the old Garibaldi, and this year it will reign again in all its trim simplicity.

With the shirt blouse comes another old friend that has been long neglected. The smartest and most fashionable belt for the coming season will be made of plain patent leather, fastened by the simplest and most unassuming of buckles.

An Aid to Beauty.

Camphor water applied to the nose with a soft cloth at intervals will reduce the pores of the skin.

Persons not susceptible to colds should try walking briskly in the rain without an umbrella as a tonic for the complexion.

Equal portions of pure rice powder and some one of the favorite French face powders make a delicate and effective filling for the powder box of the woman who always cannot afford the French brands.

The teeth should be brushed thoroughly with a reliable powder or paste in the morning and lightly after each meal and before going to bed.

Fur Trimmings.

Many of the new evening gowns show fur trimming in the shape of three-inch footbands of slightly narrowed widths on the tulle edge.

HORN DINNER CALL

London's Oldest Custom Relic of Crusaders.

Benchers, Barristers and Students Summoned by Ancient Method—Recalls Days When Clocks and Watches Were Unknown.

London.—Nowhere do old customs cling more firmly than in the ancient seat of legal learning, the Middle Temple, London, which still jealously guards the traditions it has inherited. To the present-day benchers, barristers and students are summoned to dinner each evening during term time by the blowing of a horn—a custom which has survived on this spot since the romantic days of the crusaders. Every evening at 5:30 during the three weeks of the legal terms, a warder, in gold-braided uniform, procures the ox horn from the strong room of the Middle Temple, and proceeding to the famous fountain in Fountain court, summons the members to dinner by blowing a blast on this primitive instrument.

He then visits each court in turn, according to ancient custom, and many a bencher throws up his window to listen to the sound of the winding horn, which has been heard continuously in those precincts since the time when the Knights Templar established themselves there in 1184.

Its use recalls the days when clocks and watches were unknown, and the voice of the watchman, calling out the time, was a familiar sound through the night watches. Sun dials were then the only guides the people possessed as to the flight of time, and of these more than one still survives, with its quaint motto, on the walls of the Temple buildings. It is to the sworn enemies of the Knights Templar, the Saracens, oddly enough, that we do, indeed, the greater part of our mathematical knowledge as well.

When the Templars founded their new monastery between Whitefriars and Essex house in the Strand, the latter was, as its name implies, merely a beach beside the silver Thames, and all around was open country, the site of the present law courts being a large field which was used as a tilting ground by the knights. In later days, when the men of law had taken over the settlement of the Knights Templar, the students, who were housed in the Temple, were dependent on its kitchen for their daily meals. After a hurried breakfast in the buttery at eight o'clock they would take their law books, and wander off along the Strand, where, in summer time, they lay under the trees and bushes studying law. Some would row across the river to the Surrey fields, and wander through the open country.

Half an hour before dinner the panyer man, who drew the daily supply of bread every morning from Westminster, used to take a large ox horn and walk along the river's side, blowing the horn as a signal to the student's to return to the temple for dinner.

The panyer man, who was formerly charged with the duty of winding the horn, had also to provide the hall with mustard, pepper and vinegar, his annual wages in 1638 amounting to $26. Other useful members of the staff were the chief wash pot and the under wash pot, the chief turn broach, the steward's servant and under turn spit; the last named receiving $6 a year.

The horn now in use in the Middle Temple possesses no antiquarian interest in itself, dating back only some ten years. It was brought over from the Argentine by one of the members shortly before it was found necessary to discontinue the use of the old one. "Ye horn of ye Middle Temple" had become so decrepit, through age and constant use, that the weird and fancy sounds it emitted were calculated to bring it into ridicule. It had become a mass of silver bands, which had been added from time to time to keep it together, and close up the cracks in its sides. But in spite of these bands the air still escaped so freely that the warder who blew it had to place a wet handkerchief over the horn every time he used it.

So the ancient horn, which had sounded the welcome summons to dinner in term for generations, was placed on the retired list, and now it only sees the light on grand nights in hall, when it is placed on the table with the rest of the Middle Temple's proud display of silver plate.

WONDERFUL RESCUE AT "GIB"

Veracious Soldier's Story of How He Saved His Chum With a Horse-shoe Magnet.

"It was a terrible moment," said the old soldier, with a shudder. "Tell us all about it!" cried the squad of recruits, eagerly.

"It happened at Gib. I was walking along the top of a cliff with a chum, when he was suddenly seized with vertigo. There was a sheer drop of at least 4,000 feet, and when I saw him reel and slip over the precipice I gave him up for lost. Quick as lightning, I pulled a large horseshoe magnet out of my pocket, and, laying flat upon my chest, extended over the chasm. I could see my friend far below, falling rapidly, and turning over and over. He looked no larger than a doll; but gradually as the magnet exerted its influence, his figure became more distinct, and he rose with a terrific bump. The magnet had attracted his large steel spurs and, exerting all my strength, I held him there for two hours, till help came."—Tit-Bits.

Exercise.

Exercise in its general significance is a glorious thing. It is not, however, anything much in its purely physical sense. Thus, a person with large muscles and not very big wits is of almost no value to society, whereas a person who has exercised both is often indispensable. Exercises for the wits are very difficult. There is nothing to do 100 times, or 50 times. It is not something to which one can give 20 minutes the first thing in the morning and then go the rest of the day. Socrates, who was the Saviour of mental exercise, kept his pupils at it pretty much of the time. There is one phase of it which is especially hard. This is the exercise of one's rights. Unexercised rights are much worse than unexercised muscles. Thus, after voting, we are ordinarily mentally stiff and sore for several days. This is because, unaccustomed to exercising our rights, we strain them.

The secret of it all is to exercise your muscles a little, your wits a little and your rights a little. As the Greeks said, "Nothing too much."

What Simplicity Portends.

This is a period of studded simplicity in dress which does not imply that dress is any the less opulently merrily that we see no beauty in elaboration or superfluity, and display a pretty tendency to wear wreaths of wild flowers on our hats instead of plumes and roses.

Incidentally, no more striking proof can be furnished of an artificial age than a love of simplicity. In Charles II's day, the fair ladies posed as shepherdesses, and tried to be the heroines of pastorals, though never taken as a whole, was society less near to nature. The Roman nobility believed in a return to the primitive life, while indulging in the greatest luxury. The people who are really poor cherish no happy illusions about plain attire and plainer fare. To them they are merely accompaniments of a poverty of which they are ashamed since they cannot help.

He Hated That Kind.

P. F. Jerome, the secretary of the United States Hay Fever association, said at the recent convention at Bethlehem, apropos of certain unpleasant hay fever symptoms: "These symptoms are often made light of, but for my part I feel toward them as the poor man felt in the dentist's chair. 'This man had a bad tooth pulled out, and as soon as the paroxysm was over he placed his forefinger on another tooth and said bravely: 'Yank this fellow, too, doctor.' 'But that's a good tooth!' remonstrated the dentist. 'It aches,' said the man. 'But,' said the dentist, 'the pain is only sympathetic.' 'Yank it, anyhow,' was the answer. 'Darn such sympathy!'"

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound "Cures In Every Case."

Mr. Jas. McCaffery, Mgr. of the Schlitz Hotel, Omaha, Neb., recommends Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, because it cures in every case. "I have used it myself and I have recommended it to many others who have since told me of its great curative power in diseases of the throat and lungs." For all coughs and colds it is speedily effective. Hites Drug Store.

DRAWING THE SOCIAL LINE

King's "Fake" Gold Plate. The first point of interest is suggested by the title of the volume, "The Gold and Silver of Windsor Castle." Whenever a royal banquet at Windsor or Buckingham palace is described in the newspapers the writer says that "the sideboards were adorned with the famous gold plate." In point of fact, there are only three pieces of gold plate in the Windsor collection, two of them a small silver ten and one-half inches in diameter and a cup and cover nine and one-half inches high, both dating from the first year of George IV, and it is a melancholy fact that the former was made from a number of gold snuff boxes presented to the Duke of York by various cities and by the University of Oxford. All the rest of the "gold" plate is really silver gilt, and Mr. Jones' book brings out the curious fact that most of the gilding, even of the silver pieces that had been made a century or two earlier, was done by George IV's goldsmiths, Rundell and Bridge.—London Times.

William Dean Howells' Snob Story From Wales About the Retired London Tailor.

"I lunched with William Dean Howells in his apartment in Half Moon street while I was in London last month," said a Chicago essayist. "Mr. Howells was as boyish and gay as ever. He was as hard as ever on the snob. 'He told me a snob story he had heard in Wales. He said that a London tailor made his pile and retired to a Welsh castle, where he set up as a squire. 'But the tailor had hardly got established as a squire when a London hatter retired and set up in a neighboring castle as a squire also. It was disgusting. 'A friend, apropos of the ex-hatter's coming, said to the ex-tailor: 'Will you call on him?' 'Not I,' was the reply. 'One must draw the line somewhere.' 'And so,' said the friend, 'you draw it round the neck, eh?'"

"He had been drinking hard, no other motive known." The Grand Rapids Herald of Saturday last gives this brief announcement in a headline as an explanation that fully explained the suicidal act of Thomas E. Harris, a coatmaker of that city. Ed. Harris was a good fellow, the newspaper reporter further explains, and he had been on a protracted spree. He was a member of a local social organization and had been spending much of his time in the saloons. The saloonkeepers knew that he was going rapidly in the direction of destruction and they cheerfully helped him along. While in a distracted condition of mind, caused through continued saloon indulgence, Harris went to a telephone called for his wife and asked her to listen while he fired the pistol shot that took his life. A later grouping in this picture provided through the Grand Rapids saloons is thus presented by the Grand Rapids Herald: "Inexpressibly pathetic was the figure presented by the little woman as she stood beside the operating table gripping the hand of her self slain husband as his life ebbed away." And thus the husband was taken from his home and his wife, and a man who could of been useful and valuable was taken from the community. But "personal liberty" had been used to the limit, in another instance while most of the man's earnings were going into the saloon's cash register.

Dangerous Animal.

An Ohio man and his wife with a couple of friends went out for a run in the country the other day in their motor car. The trip was quite a long one and they arranged to have luncheon out in the woods. As they neared their destination a stop was made and one of the party made his way into the bush on the side of a hill to get water. He was gone an unusually long time, and on his return explained his delay by saying: "There was only a trickling stream coming from the spring, so I had to wait. There was a ram down there in the bushes, and it seemed to be taking up all the water."

"A what?" inquired the hostess.
"A ram—hydraulic ram."
"My!" she said with some surprise.
"Weren't you afraid of the little beast?"

Little Fathers.

Mr. S. Joseph Baker of the department of health in New York has had picture films made showing how the "little mothers" learn their lessons. Recently "little fathers" took their turn and all the small boys in the neighborhood of one of the schools were busy borrowing babies, and they showed themselves very apt at learning how to take care of them. These children have to care for the babies while their mothers are at work and are taught to do it scientifically.

MANKIND IS STILL MEDIEVAL

Woman Lawyer Says the Attitude Toward Her Sex is Unjust and Barbaric.

That legislation tending to make marriage more difficult and divorce easier would lessen some of the evils of the social system was the opinion put forward in a talk on "The Law and the Lady," by Miss Mary Wood, a lawyer, at the Woman's Forum.

Miss Wood began her paper with a history of the attitude of the English lawmakers toward woman, touching on various statutes that now seem eccentric, such as the provision of the middle ages, which limited the coat of the cloth in a woman's dress to twelve pence a yard.

"And yet that was no more barbaric," said Miss Wood, "than the bill of the Massachusetts legislator, who would have put a ban on the skirts that were less than six inches below the knee, decollete gowns and fancy socks on stockings. The bill was killed. I don't know what happened to the man who fathered it."—New York Evening Post.

Temper Talk.

A girl does not look pretty when her face is convulsed with rage. Her lover will not forget how she looked.

Nor does a man look dignified, nor does he, as a rule, talk sense, when he is rowing with his sweetheart. Some day, after they are married, perhaps, she will remember what a vulgar fool he made of himself, once upon a time, and she will remind him of it. And then he will be very sick and sorry for himself.

So don't get angry. It is never worth while.

And it isn't a bit clever, either. Any monkey will chatter if it is teased. Any cat will spit if its tail is trodden on.

Try to be more human than a monkey or a cat. Try to smile when you feel like scowling, for when you scowl or frown it leaves wrinkles which can never be removed by treatment of any kind, and it is not worth while to spoil the beauty of the face for a scowl.

French Woman Especially Treasured Four Post Cards That Showed Scenes in America.

"Wait just a moment." The girl in lavender linen stopped her friend before the post card stand on the curbstone, near Forty-second street and Broadway, and began a rapid search through highly colored "souvenirs of New York." She had lived in New York all her life and most of her acquaintances lived here, too, and her companion marveled.

"I want a really good one," she was saying to the post card vendor, "one that is rather magnificent and yet the way things really look. Something along Broadway, or you might try the Metropolitan tower."

She turned to her friend with an explanation. "They are for a woman I met in Paris this summer," she said; "she was charming, and we talked about Paris."

"But one day she told me she was going to show me some of her treasures. And what do you think they were?"

"Four postal cards, of America! And she gloated over them. There was one of Boston Common, with the corner of Boylston and Tremont streets sticking up in the back. And there was one of Broad and Chestnut streets in Philadelphia, and one of Michigan drive in Chicago. But the one she treasured most was the New York skyline."

"Some day," she said, "I shall see that. That is the magnificence of life!"

"And so," finished the girl in lavender linen. "I'm going to send her some more. Personally, I prefer the Place de la Concorde, or the view of the Ile de la Cite from the Pont des Arts. But if a Frenchwoman is really crazy about New York!"

The New First-Aid Car

THE American Red Cross, that great humanitarian organization for relieving suffering and distress in time of peace as well as in time of war, is constantly broadening the scope of its activities.

Its latest, and certainly one of its most important services on behalf of mankind is the placing in commission of a second hospital and school on wheels known as a first aid to the injured car. The object of this ingenious portable Red Cross headquarters is to interest and instruct in first aid work the railroad men and other toilers of the country. By means of this car the Red Cross will be enabled to carry on a much-needed form of "missionary work" and can get in close touch, as it could by no other method, with the workmen of the land who are in a position to render the most valuable service as volunteer Red Cross workers.

The first aid car which has lately gone into commission is the second of these cars to be sent a wandering up and down the steel-tracked highways of the United States, but the first one, which was introduced less than a year ago, went forth with so modest a heralding that the general public heard little of it or its work. No sooner, however, had Car No. 1 entered upon the work of giving instruction in first aid to employees of various railroad systems than it became evident that a single car would be insufficient to meet the demands for this new service. Accordingly, a second car was arranged for—an old parlor car being purchased by the Red Cross and rebuilt for this specific purpose. Henceforth the Red Cross officials will be enabled to realize their dream to keep one of the cars constantly in service on the railroads west of the Mississippi and the other on the railway systems east of the Mississippi.

The Red Cross first aid instruction cars are rather small cars indeed by present day standards, but this was designed so and is an advantage rather than a detriment. Indeed, with a length of less than sixty feet such a car may be used not only on the mountain divisions of railroads, with their sharp curves, but also on some valley lines. Indeed, the car can be taken almost anywhere where there are rails over which it may run. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the railroads of the country are manifesting their appreciation of the valuable and disinterested work which the Red Cross is doing in this sphere by hauling the first aid cars free of charge over their respective lines.

RENDERING FIRST AID TO AN INJURED RAILROAD MAN

The first aid car is divided into two parts of almost equal size. One-half of the space of the car is given over to an assembly and demonstration room—for, as has been explained, the car is a hospital school on wheels—and the other half is taken up by the living quarters for the instructors and crew. These men live on the car at all times, just as doctors and nurses might reside at a hospital with which they were connected. It is in the assembly and demonstration room, however, that the chief functions of the car are carried on. The room is large enough to accommodate a considerable number of people, seated on camp stools, so that it is entirely practicable to use it as a lecture hall in giving first aid instruction when there is no larger hall available in a town visited and when weather conditions do not permit of the first aid demonstrations being conducted in the open air.

But the first aid car has another function quite aside from its primary purpose of a nomadic school. It may, on occasion, be used as a temporary or emergency hospital and it is likely to prove of great value in this capacity, since it can, upon telegraphic request, be rushed to any camp or town or village where a disaster of any kind has taken place and where there are, perhaps, no regular hospital facilities of any kind. The car carries the necessary apparatus for quickly transforming the lecture room into a hospital ward and there is a stock of stretchers, remedies, bandages and all the paraphernalia necessary for use under such circumstances. This latter equipment is in addition, of course, to the appointments and instruction outfits, charts, books, etc., which are designed merely for use in the regular instruction work on the car and which later will probably be the equipment used nine-tenths of the time, for summations to lend aid in great disasters will, happily, it is hoped, be of rare occurrence.

Few people appreciate the great need for more general instruction in first aid work such as the Red Cross is going to try to give through the instrumentality of its new rolling stock. We have become pretty well aroused in this country in recent years over the menace of the "white plague," and yet as a matter of fact, since 1881 the deaths from tuberculosis in the United States have decreased 48 per cent, whereas in the same period the deaths from accidents have increased more than 47 per cent. Similarly the United States government has felt compelled within the past couple of years to take definite steps to reduce the number of accidents in our coal mines and yet the death rate from accidents on railroads is even larger than in mines. Moreover, under present arrangements the needs of the miner in respect to first aid instruction seem to be met much better than in the case of some other industries.

No wonder, then, that the Red Cross is directing its first aid propaganda to the railroad men of the country and to the workers in shops, mills, etc.

Not only is the Red Cross giving widespread instruction in first aid to the injured (which it is argued is just as necessary as instruction in hygiene) but it is conducting, by means of this new type of car, a campaign for the prevention of accidents. Statistics seem to indicate that about one-half of the accidents which result in injury or death would have been preventable by the exercise of proper care and reasonable preventive measures and the Red Cross is endeavoring to teach workmen how to dodge mishaps and how to minimize the effect of an accident if it does appear inevitable.

The Red Cross will not depend entirely upon the lessons and lectures given on the first aid cars, although these pave the way for effort in the direction of volunteer first aid work. Supplementing these are series of charts and, more important yet, simple books of instruction and surgical materials which can prove serviceable in unskilled hands. A special first aid book has been issued for the use of industrial workers and has been translated into Italian, Slovak, Polish and Lithuanian. In the near future there will be issued other editions of this work specially adapted for use by women, by policemen and firemen, by sailors and by farm hands and ranch workers. Of course it is not the thought that such instruction will enable even the most skilled of the volunteer Red Cross workers to replace the doctor except in the case of trivial injuries, but with the new knowledge these volunteers will know what to do until the doctor arrives, and often, by stopping a flow of blood or by other means, may be enabled to save life when a regular physician is not promptly on the scene.

To cover the full scope of this new work the Red Cross has found it necessary to go even farther and to supplement its work of instruction by providing several different forms of first aid boxes equipped with certain simple remedies and necessities such as are required in putting the first aid instruction into practice in shops and elsewhere. These supplies are sold at prices which are intended merely to cover the cost of preparation without providing any profit, and that they supply a long felt want would seem to be indicated by the fact that the Red Cross has, during the past year, sold considerably more than $5,000 worth of such supplies. And, not content with carrying this first aid crusade into the shops and mills and throughout the railroad world, the Red Cross has lately enlisted the co-operation of the Boy Scouts of America, and first aid instruction is being given to all of the youngsters in this organization according to plans and methods prepared by the Red Cross.

Such are the demands upon it that a first aid car cannot remain for long at any given point. The general plan adopted is to spend about three days at each point selected by the railway officials—that is, the officers of the railroad system whose lines are being traversed. As many first aid demonstrations and lectures as possible are given in the time allotted. As a rule it is not practicable thoroughly to instruct men in first aid work in so short a time, but they learn considerable of the subject and there is an arousal of interest which almost invariably results in the organization of a first aid corps which is developed by local physicians and with the aid of the Red Cross instruction books and emergency outfits. Still further to stimulate interest throughout the country the Red Cross has set aside a fund of $5,000 the income of which is to be distributed annually in prizes to the first aid workers who show the greatest proficiency or who perform exceptionally dangerous or arduous first aid work.

The past few years has seen remarkable progress in the proficiency attained by workmen in caring for their fellows who have suffered injuries in the line of their work. From the rough and ready surgery in which the workman has always displayed some skill in treating the injuries peculiar to his own special vocation, modern antiseptic methods have been acquired and now the unfortunate victim of an accident is given all the chances in his fight for life that modern science can devise. There is no longer idle hands and anxious moments awaiting the arrival of the surgeon, and rough but skilful hands perform the first aid treatment which gives relief to the sufferer, and in many cases means the saving of his life. All large manufacturing establishments are now equipped with first-aid chests supplied with all the necessary surgical and medical appliances for giving emergency treatment. Regular drills in ambulance work are conducted so that those whose duty it is to care for the injured workmen may be kept at the highest state of proficiency. Humanitarian as well as financial reasons make it the part of wisdom for the employers to encourage in every way the first aid crusade among their workmen. One case is related of a workman in a Chicago factory who removed a steel splinter from the eye of a fellow workman in such a skilful manner as to excite the wonder and admiration of the surgeons who later took charge of the injured man. The promptness and skill of this emergency surgeon, saved the sight of this man's eyes.

PIPE OR CIGARETTE. Latter Apparently the Form in Which Tobacco Was First Used.

While the question as to which preceded the other, the egg or the hen, is still a subject for dispute in the district school debating societies, the question as to which came first into use, the pipe or the cigarette, appears to have the greater part of the evidence, so far as white testimony is concerned, in favor of the cigarette—and anti-tobaccoists may put that in their pipe and smoke it. The Indianapolis News remarks: When Columbus landed on the island of Guanahani, which he called San Salvador, on October 12, 1492, he and his men saw, to their great astonishment, a number of copper colored natives collected on the shore pulling clouds of smoke from their lips and noses. They were smoking what later came to be called tobacco, the leaves of which the natives had burned into cylindrical rolls within the husks of the Indian corn. While this was evidently the most primitive way of burning the leaf, there were pipes long before Columbus arrived. Large numbers of pipes have been found in so-called Indian mounds in the central west, as well as along the northern lakes and throughout the south. In 1519, when Cortez invaded Mexico, the natives smoked pipes made from reeds and richly ornamented. Montezuma, it has been recorded, was accustomed to "take his pipe" after dinner when it was brought to him with much ceremony by a bevy of beautiful maidens and handed to him after he had rinsed his mouth with scented water.

The North American Indian usually made his pipes out of a kind of stone known as red pipestone, of which there were large deposits in the old Sioux country and the great spirit is said to have given his indorsement to this particular material, which might have been a Sioux monopoly, in these words: "This stone is red. It is your flesh. It belongs to you—up all. Out of it make no more tomahawks, war hutchers nor scalping knives, use it only to make the pipe of peace and smoke therefrom when you would propitiate me and do my will."

CHANGED PLANS. A Chicago banker was dictating a letter to his stenographer. "Tell Mr. So-and-so," he ordered, "that I will meet him in Schenectady."

FOR THE BAKING DAY

HINTS THAT OUGHT TO BE HELPFUL TO HOUSEWIFE.

Perfect Parker House Rolls.—Lady Washington Rolls.—Norfolk Sally Lunn.—English Tea Cakes.—White Fruit Cake.

Perfect Parker House Rolls.—At night pour one pint of luke warm milk over two tablespoons of sugar, and two of lard; add a little salt, one quart of flour, half cup bakers' and one cup of home made yeast. Stir well; let raise till morning, when add one more quart of flour and knead for ten minutes; let raise till after noon, then knead another ten minutes; roll out half inch thick, cut out with biscuit cutter; crease with floured knife; spread a pat of butter on one-half, fold over, pinch ends, brush with melted butter and set to raise till very light. Bake in hot oven 20 minutes.

Lady Washington Rolls.—Pare and slice one large potato, boil in half pint water till tender, then mash in water, adding one tablespoon sugar, one of butter, two of flour, one teaspoon salt and half cup strong yeast. Mix well, set in warm place to raise. When light, stir into batter one well-beaten egg, one-half pint sweet milk, three pints sifted flour. Knead well, set to raise, when light, make into oblong rolls, dip in melted butter, let raise half hour. Bake in very hot oven.

Norfolk Sally Lunn.—Three pints flour, six eggs, four ounces butter, one-half pint yeast, one pint milk; melt butter, but do not boil it, mix well beaten eggs with flour, put all ingredients together, beat well, put in baking pan and let raise till morning, when bake in steady oven for three-quarters of an hour. For tea, let raise six hours.

English Tea Cakes.—One quart flour, one cake compressed (or one cup liquid yeast), two eggs, three-quarters cup butter, one teaspoon sugar, salt, one pint milk. Warm flour, dissolve butter in warm milk, stir well beaten eggs in yeast, mix batter well, add enough more flour to make firm dough, and knead well. Let raise three hours, then knead again; divide into eight pieces, roll out as large as small plate, set on buttered tin, and place in warm place to raise. When very light, bake 20 minutes in good oven; turn out, split with fork, butter liberally. Pile one on another. Begin at 7 a. m. for afternoon tea.

A White Fruit Cake.—One pound of sugar; three-quarters of a pound of butter; one pound of flour, one dozen eggs—whites only; one pound of citron, three pounds sweet almonds, blanched and chopped fine; two pounds grated coconut, one-half pound grated pineapple, one level teaspoon soda, one glass brandy, or white wine. After mixing the cake, slice three bananas and stir lightly in. Bake and ice, as any other cake.

Ironing Handkerchiefs. To make handkerchiefs that have been washed look like new put a very thin starch in them after washing—just a suspicion of starch—and after they are dry, dampen slightly and let lie for half an hour. Place them on the ironing board with the embroidered side down, if they are embroidered, and over them put an old thin piece of muslin. Press with a hot iron, fold and press—always under the muslin. This keeps them from getting yellow and makes them look exactly like new.

Dutch Apple Pudding. One pint of flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt. Rub one-quarter cup of butter with the flour. Beat one egg very light, add to it three-quarters of a cup of sweet milk and stir into flour. Place in well-buttered pan. Pare and core four apples to cover the top and sprinkle over them two tablespoons sugar. Bake quickly and serve at once with egg sauce. Sauce—One cup sugar, half cup butter, half cup hot milk. Separate two eggs and beat well. Add whites last.

Syrup Kuchlein. Melt two scant cups lard and add to it two cups molasses, one teaspoonful each of cloves and cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful salt, a teaspoonful soda dissolved in a little hot water, one well-beaten egg and sifted flour, adding the flour a little at a time until the dough is thick enough to roll out. Cut in fancy shapes and bake in a moderate oven.

Salting the Almonds. Beat two tablespoonfuls of butter in a chafing dish, add one cupful of blanched and dried almonds. Stir until evenly colored. Drain and sprinkle with fine salt. To blanch the almonds, drop them into cold water, bring slowly to boiling point, then strain and remove the brown skins. Dry and use.

Curried Rabbit. Fry two cottontails a golden brown in olive oil; season with salt and add to meat one chopped apple and small onion; cover with boiling water; sprinkle a teaspoon of curry powder over top, cover tightly and simmer three-quarters of an hour. Serve with a border of boiled rice. Wild pigeons may be cooked in the same way.

Apples. After peeling apples drop them into cold water. This will prevent them becoming discolored.

A HEALTHY, HAPPY OLD AGE

May be promoted by those who gently cleanse the system, now and then, when in need of a laxative remedy, by taking a desertspoonful of the ever refreshing, wholesome and truly beneficial Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which is the only family laxative generally approved by the most eminent physicians, because it acts in a natural, strengthening way and warms and tones up the internal organs without weakening them. It is equally beneficial for the very young and the middle aged, as it is always efficient and free from all harmful ingredients. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine, bearing the name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plain printed on the front of every package.

TIED DOWN.

20 Years' Slavery—How She Got Freedom. A dyspepsia veteran who writes from one of England's charming rural homes to tell how she won victory after 20 years' fight, naturally exults in her triumph over the tea and coffee habit.

"I feel it a duty to tell you," she says, "how much good Postum has done me. I am grateful, but also desire to let others who may be suffering as I did, know of the delightful method by which I was relieved. "I had suffered for 20 years from dyspepsia, and the giddiness that usually accompanies that painful ailment, and which frequently prostrated me. I never drank much coffee, and cocoa and even milk did not agree with my impaired digestion, so I used tea, exclusively, till about a year ago, when I found in a package of Grape-Nuts the little book, 'The Road to Wellville.' "After a careful reading of the booklet I was curious to try Postum and sent for a package. I enjoyed it from the first, and at once gave up tea, its favor.

"I began to feel better very soon. My giddiness left me after the first few days' use of Postum, and my stomach became stronger so rapidly that it was not long till I was able (as I still am) to take milk and many other articles of food of which I was formerly compelled to deny myself. I have proved the truth of your statement that Postum 'makes good, red blood.' "I have become very enthusiastic over the merits of my new table beverage, and during the past few months, have conducted a Postum propaganda among my neighbors which has brought benefit to many, and I shall continue to tell my friends of the 'better way' in which I rejoice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' in place. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They're genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BLACK KNOT

By G. H. COONS,
Research Assistant in Plant Pathology, Michigan Experiment Station

Black Knot on Wild Plum Tree—Plum Orchard's Are Often Infected From Wild Plum Trees Some Distance Away.

Two illustrations accompany this article. They show the same disease on different plants, one on wild plum and the other on the cultivated plum. The disease is the same, the cause the same, the control is the same, but both are shown to emphasize the fact that the plum and cherry orchard is in grave danger if wild plums and cherries which are diseased are near by.

A fungus is a plant which makes no food supply for itself, but takes its food from living and dead material. If the plant takes its food from other living plants, it is called a parasite. These parasites grow upon and within the tissues of the other plants, sapping their vitality and producing grave disturbances in the life of the host plant. These parasites do not consist of leaves, stems and roots as do the common plants as we know them, but they consist of a great number of thread-like cells which are so small that a microscope is necessary to make out their structure. Fungi spread by means of small bodies which are called spores, and while these spores are not seeds, they serve the same purposes—that is, distribution.

Black knot is a disease caused by a fungus which manifests itself by producing large, glossy black outgrowths on plums and cherries. In the spring and early summer the knots look greenish, and the swollen tissue of the stem marks the invasion of the disease from an old knot. The greenish appearance is due to the fact that the entire knot bristles with a

MUCK SOILS

By PROFESSOR J. A. JEFFERY,
Professor of Soils,
Michigan Agricultural College

Considerable areas of so-called muck land are found throughout the drift region. Because of the fact that these lands are low-lying and are frequently difficult to drain, and because, also, in most cases they behave differently from upland soils both in the crops they will produce and in the freedom with which they will produce, owners of such lands are frequently uncertain of their management.

First of all muck soils should be thoroughly drained; and until they are drained it is practically impossible to grow the common crops upon them. Frequently the fall is so slight that the work of the draining must be done with great care in order to insure a system that will work. It sometimes happens, also, that these areas lie between surrounding higher areas through which it is practically impossible to procure an outlet for a drainage system. In such cases it is frequently true that the underlying subsoil is a clay which in turn is underlain by a gravel or gravelly sand, the water table in which lies at a considerable distance below the clay subsoil. In such case a well three feet in diameter may be dug down through the muck clay subsoil into the underlying gravel. This well should be filled with field stones to within two feet of the surface; above the stones should be placed a layer of finer material, and above this should be filled in true soil to the level of the surface. This well may then be used as an outlet for one or more drain systems, taking the water from the muck areas.

When drained, these soils are ready to mass of minute greenish threads, and these threads give the appearance of velvet. Each thread cuts off from its tip a minute body called a spore, which can carry the disease from one plant to another. After the spore is cut off from the thread, the thread grows again and cut off more spores. In June and July the diseased branches begin to lose their green and velvety appearance and soon show a great number of small black pustules or pimples. These can be seen very clearly with the eye, and other details are brought out with a small lens. Each of these pustules is a case in which more spores are borne which are capable of spreading the disease. There is this difference, however, between the two forms of fruiting bodies described. One seems to serve in the summer time to spread the disease while the other carried the disease over winter.

To control this pest, one must recognize the importance of the two crops of spores which have been described. The crop which is produced in the summer must be held in check by sprays, probably the self-bottled lime-sulphur that is used to prevent shot hole and leaf spot will do this. The other control measure and the one which is most important is the destruction of the knots upon the trees before the winter spores—that is, those that are borne in those little black pustules—are ripe and spread. Studies made at the Michigan Agricultural college this fall on black knot indicate that these spores are ripe by December and therefore the black knot must be cut out immediately and in the following years; it should be cut out in the early fall. If the black knots are cut out and burned it is evident that the spores which carry the fungus over winter are destroyed and the progress of the disease will be checked.

It is too often the case that the farmer cuts out the black knot on his own orchard and his neighbor neglects this necessary measure, and it is often the case, as indicated in the first paragraph, that the disease is spread from wild plants in the vicinity. It is safe to say that there is not a community in Michigan but will show several instances of this passage of disease from the neglected lot of trees to healthy young ones.

Therefore, the farmer and fruit grower must do more than destroy the disease as it shows itself in the orchard—they must get rid of the breeding places.

The department of botany will examine specimens of diseased plants and give the advice that is suitable, free of charge—Department of Botany, East Lansing, Mich.

be plowed and cropped. They are suited to the growing of timothy, corn, especially corn for ensilage, peppermint, cabbage, celery and onions. They are not always suited to growing the small grains. They will produce large yields of sugar beets, but usually while the tonnage is large, the sugar content is low and the impurity content high.

Although these soils appear very rich, they cannot usually be depended upon for more than one or two good crops unless they receive an application of some fertilizer. Of the mineral fertilizers, potash is the one required. An application of 100 to 150 pounds of muriate of potash or sulphate of potash gives most excellent results. An application of ten tons of barnyard manure per acre is wonderfully efficient in rendering these soils productive.

It is frequently said that the failure of these soils to produce a crop is due to an acid condition. For this so-called acid condition of soils lime is usually recommended. It has been found, however, that an application of lime to muck soils is injurious rather than helpful. It is reported that in one region muck soils are benefited by the application of phosphoric acid: It is generally true, however, that potash salts and manure are the two things that help muck soils.

Care of Farm Machines.
All that may be said about the care of farm machines may be summed down to these three things—good roof, good paint and good lubricants. These three determine whether the days of a machine shall be long in the farm or whether it shall soon return to the dust whence it came and another order go to the firm who made it.

Buy the Best Sire.
If you are breeding pure breeds, buy the best sire you can get, even if it strains your pocketbook.

NERVOUS IN PUBLIC

MANY WORLD-FAMED SPEAKERS NEVER OVERCOME THIS.

With Some It Persists as Mannerisms —Yawn and Handkerchief of Late Duke of Devonshire—Gladstone's Peculiar Actions.

Persons who are unaccustomed to speak in public believe that their nervousness is solely due to their inexperience, and that public men can make speeches as coolly as they make conversation. In some cases this may be so, but few speakers are ever able wholly able to cast off their nervousness. Sometimes it persists only in the form of a mannerism, attractive or otherwise, but some old parliamentarians never escape from the tremors and terrors which afflict them when their maiden speech was delivered.

The late duke of Devonshire is usually spoken of as the perfect type of the impressive Englishman. When he entered the house of commons as Lord Cavendish, he distinguished himself by prefacing his maiden speech with a prodigious yawn. But he was by no means as languid in fact as he was in appearance.

When he rose to speak he would lean one arm on the nearest of the two iron-bound boxes on the table between the front benches. After a slight hesitation and a few quiet words, the other hand would steal to the tall pocket of his coat and emerge holding a neatly-folded white cambric handkerchief. Without unfolding it he would gently rub the corners of his mouth, and this done, the hand, still holding the handkerchief, would rest on the hip or be thrown back.

Sitting near him, one could observe that the grip on his handkerchief tightened, and that the muscles of the hand were in continuous action. At the close of his speech the hand opened, and one saw not the clean, folded cambric handkerchief, but only a solid, greasy ball, which was quickly returned to the pocket. Here was the safety valve for the impressive nobleman's nervousness.

Gladstone was one in whom nervousness had become mannerism. When he rose to speak he began with a few graceful words on the speech which was about to follow, or some pointed remark as to the character and importance of the subject. In his earlier days this was, no doubt, to "get his breath."

His next act was to raise his right hand over his head with the thumb bent down and gently scratch his skull. That is rather common among public speakers. The third action of Mr. Gladstone was his peculiar and individual sign. Throwing his arms downward by his side, he would with his fingers seize the cuffs of his coat and draw these down over his shirt cuffs so as to conceal them completely. The ordinary practice is just the reverse, the desire being to expose and not conceal the white linen of the shirt cuffs. These were the invariable preludes to the great commoner's speeches.—Pall Mall Magazine.

Not in the Library.
Mr. Claptrap arrived at the circulating library the other day with his hands full of small packages and as cross as two sticks because his wife had asked him to fulfill some commissions for her while he was out. With a look which was just as disagreeable as he felt he handed to the little librarian a list which he had made to aid his memory.

"My wife wants these books," he said gruffly. "Be quick about getting them, if you please. I'm in a great hurry."

The girl, who was a trifle shy and inexperienced, flushed, and, saying that she should have the books directly, went to look for them. She was gone some time and when she returned he glared at her indignantly and asked if she expected him to "wait all day."

"I'm very sorry," she apologized, "but you see I've been looking for the last book on the list. Here are the other three, but 'Hairpins and Castor Oil' I can't find and I'm afraid it isn't in the library."

"Good heavens!" groaned Mr. Claptrap, quite crestfallen. "Did I put those things down in the book list?"

In Praise of Modesty.
Reginald De Koven told a musical story in Chicago a pretty story in praise of modesty.

"A group of tourists," he said, "visited Beethoven's house in Bonn. One of the tourists, a girl of twenty or so, sat down at Beethoven's piano and played the 'Moonlight Sonata' none too well. Beethoven's own work, in his own room, on his own piano!

"When the girl had finished, she rose and said to the old caretaker: 'I suppose lots of famous musicians have been here and played on this instrument?'

"Well, miss," the caretaker answered gravely, "Paderewski was here last year, and his friends urged him to play, but he shook his head and said: 'No, I am not worthy.'"

A Good One.
"Is little Mrs. Bings' worthless husband going to dine home on Thanksgiving day?"

"No; I understand he is going to stay away for a culinary reason."

"A culinary reason?"

"Yes. He knows his goose is cooked."

"That sort of guff will flatter her!"

How He Found Out.
"Mr. Chairman," shouted one of the delegates to the convention. "I move that the nominating speeches be limited to one minute each!"

"Second the motion!" yelled a dozen others.

A storm of protest arose, but the chairman put the motion.

It was lost by a vote of 47 to 45.

"I merely wished to find out, Mr. Chairman," explained the delegate who had made the motion, "how many ambitious orators there are in this convention. There are forty-seven."

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 24 K, Boston.

Notice of Primary Enrollment.

Notice is hereby given, that in accordance with Act No. 281, Public Acts of 1909, as amended by Act No. 279, Public Acts of 1911, the BOARD OF ENROLLMENT of the several townships and wards of the county of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, will be in session SATURDAY the 27th day of January A. D. 1912, from 7 o'clock A. M. until 5 o'clock P. M. of said day, for the purpose of enrolling the names of all persons, members of whatever political party, who make personal application for such enrollment.

Following is a brief statement of the different ways in which enrollment can be had in townships or cities during the year of 1912:

Enrollment dates this year are January 27th, and April 1st.

1st. By personal application on enrollment days.

2nd. By a written request accompanied by affidavit, an elector can enroll any day, but can not vote at any primary held within two months. This affidavit and application must be delivered to the township clerk or other officer in charge of the enrollment book.

3rd. An elector who was sick or unavoidably absent on enrollment day or who became 21 years of age or an elector after enrollment day can have his name enrolled on primary election day and vote at that election by taking the necessary oath.

4th. If an elector who has been duly enrolled as above changes his residence from one precinct in the state to another he can be enrolled in the new precinct by obtaining a proper certificate from a member of the enrollment board of the precinct where he formerly resided stating that he is duly enrolled in the precinct from which he has moved and is entitled to enrollment in the new precinct, or by making oath to such facts.

No person can vote at any Primary election in Michigan unless his name has been enrolled under said Act No. 279.

All enrollments prior to Aug. 2nd, 1911, is VOID.

An entirely new enrollment is required.

An elector who neglects or refuses to give the name of HIS POLITICAL PARTY CANNOT have his name enrolled.

Dated at Charlevoix, Mich. this thirteenth day of January, A. D. 1912.
DANIEL S. PAYTON,
Clerk of the County of Charlevoix.

Primary Enrollment.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with act No. 281, Public Acts of 1909, as amended by Act No. 279, Public Acts of 1911, the Boards of Enrollment of the City of East Jordan, State of Michigan, will be in session on Saturday, January 27, A. D. 1912. In the several Wards of said City at the places designated below, Viz.: First Ward, C. A. Brabant's Store; Second Ward, Dan Goodman's Store; Third Ward, C. C. Mack's Store; for the purpose of enrolling the names of all persons, members of whatsoever Political Party, who make personal application for such enrollment.

Dated this 9th day of January, A. D. 1912.
Otis J. Smith, Clerk of said City.

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee.

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts; and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Real Orderlies are eaten—just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Real Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 35 cents and 80 tablets 80 cents. Remember, you can obtain Real Orderlies in East Jordan only at our store.—The Rexall Store. W. C. Spring Drug Co.

AGE IN COTTON FACTORIES

Death of Oldest Weaver in Lowell Reveals Bright Side of Operatives' Lives.

A news dispatch tells of the death in Lowell of the oldest weaver in that city, a woman who was seventy-one years of age and was in comfortable circumstances, but who still preferred to work, in spite of her age. We call this to the attention of the friends of the "poor mill girl." In spite of what they tell about employment in a cotton factory, it seems that it is quite possible for a woman to follow the trade of a weaver until she has passed three score years and ten; it is possible for her to lay by money enough to place her in comfortable circumstances, and it is possible for the associations in busy, bustling weaver shops, with their noise and heat and all the other unpleasant features, may be more endurable to a woman who has cultivated the habit of industry over a long period of years than the loneliness she would feel in a comfortable home with only such tasks to take up her time and her attention as those necessary to light housekeeping. The picture of industry, thrift and undoubted faithfulness that is shown in this brief news item from Lowell can be duplicated in nearly every one of the textile centers of New England, but it is the picture that is not so frequently held up to the view of the interested as the reverse of it. Nobody who has the welfare of the operatives—and that means of the industry itself—at heart would desire that the disagreeable features be covered so that the world would think there was nothing in them that should be improved; but it is gratifying and in the interest of truth besides to let a modicum of brightness reflect upon the canvas on occasions.—Fall River Herald.

BIRTH REGISTER IN SALT

Novel "Certificate" in a Bottle Shown to Old-Age Pension Officer in England.

Since the old-age pensions act has been in operation in England, says a writer in the Strand Magazine, there has been a great search for birth certificates, in order to enable those entitled to its benefits to claim their pensions. As the registration of births, more than seventy years ago, was not carried out as now, there has been a difficulty in many cases in proving the age of the applicants, and in one instance at least a certificate of an exceedingly novel character was presented. At any rate, the local pension officer said he had never come across one like it, and he was quite prepared to take it as a proof of the age of the applicant. When a child was born in this particular family a clear glass bottle was procured and partly filled with salt; then the letters and figures forming the names of the child and date of birth were cut out of a newspaper and placed inside the bottle, being put in their correct position with a piece of wire, and then more salt was carefully added to keep them in place. Sprays of flowers and other ornamental designs, cut from cretonne, were also tastefully arranged around the inside of the bottle, and then the whole was tightly packed with salt, and corked and sealed. It was then placed in a prominent position on the dresser or in a corner cupboard, where it has been for more than seventy years. The white salt shows up the letters and ornaments in relief, and the whole effect is novel and pleasing.

Elephant's Wisdom.

In response to an inquiry as to what was the cleverest act he ever knew an elephant to perform, a British road officer told how once, when unloading some steel tubing from a ship, it was the elephant's task to carry the pipes by means of his trunk from one part of the wharf to another.

The pipes had been oiled to prevent them from rusting, and when the elephant took one up it slipped from his grasp. He tried it again with the same result, and at last seemed to comprehend what was the reason for his failure, for he soon afterward pushed the pipe with his foot to a spot where there was a pile of sand and then rolled the pipe backward and forward. The sand, owing to the oil, adhered to the tube, and the elephant then put his trunk around it and carried it with ease. He applied the same means to the other tubes without aid or suggestion from his mahout.

A Chance Now.

Some enterprising man in East Jordan can step into a nice business that is bound to grow in your town. We have had so many letters from ladies asking us "why we can not establish a carpet cleaning machine here." If you have a dry line or any business to run in connection write us at once and we will assist you in placing the most modern machine made at a price that will surprise you and your city will amply support such an enterprise. A visit to our plant in Petoskey will convince the most skeptical. Write at once as the fall cleaning will pay for it.

CUPID'S DOMAIN IN BERLIN

Marriage Registry Office in That City is Decorated With Symbols of Wedlock.

The marriage registry office is in all countries usually a bare and unromantic scene, with its undecorated walls, superannated green baize covered table and general air of stumfiness and parchment. Modern Berlin has introduced a new fashion by setting the stage, so to speak, in harmony with the performance—or is it drama?—to be enacted thereon.

At the very door the bridegroom's hand grasps a dove-shaped handle to procure him and his blushing companion admittance and in the dove's bill hang two intertwining rings. The small passage leading to the office contains a smiling statue of Amor with his bow and arrows, while on all sides, both in the passage and the office, is the eye met by the symbols of wedlock: rings, roses, hearts, locked hands and children's heads.

Even the ornaments of the lamps and stove are designed in the same spirit, while on one of the office walls is a large bronze tablet with verses appropriate to the occasion. In such surroundings, remarks a writer in one of the papers, it must be almost a pleasure to get married.—European Letter to the New York Sun.

WELL KNOWN MINISTER

Restored to Health by Vinol

Rev. D. Schneider, who is a well known minister in Rice Lake, Wis., writes:

"I had a very severe stomach trouble last year from which I was kept in bed three months. I had engaged the services of a doctor, but to no avail. I then read of Vinol and determined to try a bottle. Before it was used up I was out of bed, and four bottles made me a well man. Vinol is a splendid medicine, and I can gladly recommend it."

Prominent men from all over the country do not hesitate to endorse this wonderful tonic.

For twelve years Vinol has been sold on the "money back" plan, and every year strengthens its popularity and proves by continued tests that it will do what we claim for it.

GOOD TEA AND COFFEE

can be told by the aroma—the odor of each. The peculiar fragrance that comes from a high quality of Tea or Coffee cannot be detected in low grade goods, because it isn't there. We are handling only the very best of Teas and Coffees—the kind that goes to the tables of the critical and always gives satisfaction. And the prices are not so aristocratic as the goods.
