Local Option

Rally at the Temple Theatre, Sunday Evening.

The opening meeting of the campaign, locally, to keep saloons out of Charlevoix County will be held at the Temple Theatre next Sunday evening, March 17th, at 7:00 o'clock.

Judge J. M. Harris will be one of the principal speakers. The local option question will be considered mainly along the following lines:

Its effect upon the rate of taxation, its effect upon industrial growth of cities and villages, and the effect upon crimes and misdemeanors and upon them.

Charlevoix County has had three years' trial of local option, and every citizen should investigate the records without prejudice and determine what the effect has been.

Be sure and attend the meeting Sunday evening and hear what the local option adherents have to say for their cause.

The three big counties voting on the local option question last spring, Calhoun, Jackson, Genesee, could have held from wet to dry by a change of only 74 votes.

The total wet majority of the three counties combined was only 74. The majority against local option in Calhoun was 32 the wet majority in Genesee 8, and in Jackson 33. Every wet vote that could be bought or bribed and held in the boarding houses and saloons and resorts of Jackson, Battle Creek and Flint, were brought there and held there in order to increase the wet total.

And yet there were far more than enough dry votes in these counties to have carried all three of them if only the full dry vote had been registered in the ballot box. The valuable lesson of last spring's close vote in these three big counties is this: The brewers and saloon men can be counted on to get every vote cast and counted that can be through any sort of means said to belong to them. No matter how "quiet" the local option campaign in any county may seem to be the saloons and brewery association are doing their work. It remains for the friends of local option to benefit by this knowledge and by last spring's experience through getting out every vote that belongs to them. Local option will win if this is done. It can only lose through permitting the saloons and the Brewery Association to do better work in getting out their vote than is done by opponents of the liquor traffic in doing their part.

A change of 74 votes would have won for local option last spring in the three big counties of Calhoun, Jackson and Genesee. A little more hard work would have won in these counties and a little harder work will win in the counties to vote on the local option question on the first day of the coming month.

TAFT ENDORSED IN SOUTH

Prof. J. B. Allen Writes Interestingly of National Politics.

The Herald is in receipt of an interesting letter from Prof. Jerome B. Allen, who is spending the winter at St. Eno, Tennessee, which indicates that our Southern neighbors strongly endorse the Taft administration. The letter is dated March 1st, and below are excerpts from same:

"I enclose two clippings from the Chattanooga Times, the leading Democratic paper of Tennessee, and one of the ablest papers of the South, and those clippings express the feelings very correctly of the Democracy of this section who are as anxious that the Republicans shall renominate Taft as they are to nominate an able man for their own standard bearer so we may have a good president no matter which is elected. They all say (The Democrats), that Taft has proved himself a true able and an impartial president as well as a sound patriot. Many Democrats even say that if Mr. Roosevelt SHOULD get the nomination that they would be willing to vote for Taft to defeat the ambitious ex-president.

"The Democrats here look upon Roosevelt as an able but ambitious egotist whose selfish ambition overrides all the other considerations that underlie the foundations of our government and would tend to make a larger Mexico than our southern neighbor.

"Weather here is delightful now and the buds of the fruit and the forest trees are opening for their robes of green."

REV. CHAS. SAGER SAYS

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 22, 1905. Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Blood) in cases of pulmonary trouble. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of, that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my recovery. Yours truly, REV. CHAS. SAGER, Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.) N. Y.

On Dec. 2, 1905, Mr. Sager wrote Mr. Abbott: "My health is very good."

If you will write Mr. Abbott he will gladly furnish you any further information you desire.

Blind Pigs In Saloon Territory.

There are more than fifteen hundred licensed saloons in the city of Detroit, 1582 when last reported. More saloons to the acre and to the number of people than were ever before in that city or any other section of Michigan. Yet today there are more "blind pigs" in Detroit, more places where liquor is being sold secretly and illegally than the combined number of blind pigs in all other counties of Michigan. The possession of saloons does not prevent blind pigs. It creates them. A committee of Detroit saloonkeepers recently called on commissioner Croul to ask him to do something extraordinary through the police department to lessen the number of unlicensed liquor selling places. They declared to Commissioner Croul that there were so many blind pigs running in opposition to their business in Detroit that their trade is being ruined. Commenting on this action on the part of the saloonkeepers and on the situation they told of to Commissioner Croul, the Detroit Journal editorially said: "The police, the saloonkeeper and the courts will now unite to crush the blind pigs and the law breaking bar-rooms." Thus the blind pig seems to have accomplished what all other efforts combined could not accomplish. They have brought ruin face to face with the saloonkeepers of Detroit and have caused them to pathetically appeal to the police headquarters for protection. That is all right as far as it goes. But what becomes of the claim of the Michigan Brewery Association that the "regulated" sale of liquor will prevent the existence of blind pigs. Think of it. 1582 saloons in Detroit and so many blind pigs surrounding them, by the side of them and between them, that the saloonkeepers say their business will be ruined unless the police department can help them out? And then think of the Brewery Association claim that the "regulated" sale of liquor will prevent the existence of "blind pigs."

The Secrets of Foot Comfort and Trim Ankles

These secrets lie not in stockings of costly material. They lie in the way the stockings are fashioned.

Some stockings sewn into shape. Others are pressed into shape. The former are slightly but uncomfortable. The others lose their shape in wear and wash.

The only stockings in the world which are shaped in the knitting—without seam—the only stockings in the world which are knit to fit the calf, the ankle, the heel, the feet, the toes—are

Burson Fashioned Stockings

Please understand. There are only three kinds of stockings, regardless of price. The first kind is the sewn stocking, with its awkward and uncomfortable seam in the leg, the heel, the feet, the toe. The second kind is shaped after knitting—shaped with a hot iron to deceive you. And the only stocking of the other kind—the only stocking which is shaped in the knitting without seams is the BURSON Fashioned stocking.

Burson stockings insure trim ankles. No amount of wear can make them loose or baggy. They cannot rip because they have no seam.

Burson stockings may be had in cotton, lisle, mercerized. In all weights, all sizes, all qualities. Prices from 25c up.

The cheapest Burson stocking is knit in the best Burson way. And no matter how much you pay for stockings you will find a better Burson stocking at same or lesser price.

When you buy stockings next, ask to see Burson Fashioned. See the shapely ankles. Test the uniform elasticity. Note the absence of seams—even in the toe—

And then remember that no other seamless hose will keep their shape—that only Burson hose are knit to shape without a seam. No seam is better than the best seam.

TOO MUCH FOR THE LAWYER

How a Michigan Congressman, Testifying as Lumber Expert, Silenced the Noisy Attorney.

There is a certain representative in congress from Michigan who was once summoned as a witness in a case being tried in Saginaw, the summons being based on his expert knowledge of the lumber business.

Representing the opposition there appeared a very vociferous lawyer who made up in noise what he lacked in argument.

"What," demanded the counsel in stentorian tones of the witness, "what do you regard as merchantable lumber?"

"Lumber that may be sold at a profit," replied the imperturbable witness.

The lawyer pounded the table again, strutting about, shouting a good deal more, and finally came back at the witness in this wise:

"And what, sir, would you regard as merchantable grain?"

"I don't know anything about grain."

"Ah, you don't, you don't, eh? Well, then, what about merchantable fruit?"

"Nor fruit, I am a lumberman."

"Come, now, my dear sir. As to slabs and culls—should you say that they were merchantable?"

"They are products of the mills."

"Oh, ho!" fairly yelled this lawyer this time. "Can you tell the honorable court whether you have any ideas at all about any kind of merchantable goods?"

"Oh, yes," replied the redoubtable witness. "A lawyer, for example, who tries his case with his brains—I should call him a merchantable lawyer; but the one who tries his case with his mouth and his hands and feet, I should call him a cull!"

That closed the cross-examination.—The Green Bag.

Eating Problem

Should be Pleasure and Not Penance

By DR. CHAS. E. PAGE, Boston

SO MUCH depends upon the individual's inclination that the question of eating cannot be settled by a mere yes or no reply nor indeed by the experience of any number of individuals, that is to say, so far as regards the feeding of the thousands who are accustomed to eating three times a day and would not take kindly to the proposed change.

In my private practice I favor the three-meal plan, but always with the qualification that in case of lack of appetite, or in face of any actual illness, the meal or meals should be omitted until convalescence, and the return of normal hunger. Personally, I eat three or four times a day with pleasure and satisfaction, and without experiencing any sort of inconvenience, day in and day out, and year after year.

It remains to be said, however, in this connection, that whoever has already had a sufficient day's ration at any hour of the day, cannot with safety or ultimate satisfaction eat again on going to bed.

In my treatise, "Practical Guide to Health," published some years ago, occurs the following on diet, appetite, etc.: "Learn to distinguish between hunger and mere appetency; you may have the latter without hunger, but not hunger without appetite. Never eat without an appetite; never a mouthful. It is a species of self-abuse which is inexcusable for sick or well. There is no pleasure in it, and it prevents the speedy return of a normal appetite."

I have known one man to hate another man because of the color of his hair. Another one said to me: "I hate a man who parts his hair that way." Another one said to me of a very good man: "I can't like him, he eats with his knife."

General Grant Knew How to Fight

I have known lawyers who constantly quarreled with opposing clients and counsel, while neglecting the fight due their own client. I have known merchants so busy quarreling with competitors as to neglect their own business.

The greatest soldier of all history was Grant and he could fight without quarreling. He "demanded" things and the things he "demanded" were "immediate and unconditional surrender."

SHOE AND GLOVE FASHIONS SPRING STYLES ALREADY OUT

Black and White is the Combination for Both Articles of Apparel Just Now.

Entirely aside from this question of mourning every one knows that the combination of black and white is being featured this season more than usual. Still it is a surprise to most fashion observers to discover that even the realm of shoes is beginning to show this combination.

Some of the smartest of the new kid low-cut shoes have white uppers, but shiny black heels and a mere line of black kid about the top.

An ultra smart model has the vamp of soft-finish black and the uppers—side and back—of white.

Black buttons on high white shoes replace the pretty crystal buttons in some instances. Black bows are favored on all white shoes of the "pump" or low Oxford type.

The black heel will be seen on some of the white canvas and buckskin shoes in place of the tan or white covered heel.

Black stockings may be worn with white shoes, or white stockings with black ones.

Gloves show the same inevitable combination. Some long gloves of white kid have narrow diamond-shaped insets of black near the elbow, and long black gloves reverse this order by having insets of white.

FRINGE OF STRAW.

The hat in the drawing is one of the new things. Cut away from the front it flares wider and wider at the back, like a longshoreman's sou'wester, or a fireman's oilskin. This hat is made of chip in natural color with a wide band of velvet which is edged top and bottom with straw fringe.

Tendency in Skirts. The skirts to suits are frequently made with a tunic effect, or a side trimming, says the Dry Goods Economist. Sometimes both sides are trimmed, while in others only the left side. The slashed effect, with simulated underpetticoat, is also excellent, and frequently the slashing is made with an underskirt of self material, but laid in inverted plaits so as to give a little more fullness in walking.

Let the Hair Show. Don't make the mistake that many do of putting their hats down over their foreheads without letting a lock of hair show. It is really necessary to have the hair arranged around the face to soften the features as well as the line between the hat and forehead.

This year will be the third observation of Tuberculosis day. Plans are being made to have the gospel of health preached more widely than ever before.

THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST

(Copyright, 1914, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courted by Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the young man is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Pontotowsky is a suitor and escort to Letty. Lord Galorey and a friend named Ruggles determine to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily and she asks Dan to build a home for disappointed theatrical people. Dan visits Lily for the time being. Letty and Dan announce his engagement to the duchess. Letty refuses to sing for an entertainment given by Lily.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

On the threshold of her door he asked her to let him know when she would sing in Park Lane, and in touching her hand he repeated that she must count on him. With more tenderness in his blue eyes than he was himself aware, he murmured devotedly:

"Take care of yourself, won't you, please?"

As Blair passed from the sitting-room into the hall and toward the lift, Mrs. Higgins came out hurriedly from one of the rooms and joined him.

"How did you find her, Mr. Blair?"

"Awfully-seedy, Mrs. Higgins; she needs a lot of care."

"She won't take it though," returned the woman. "Just seems to let herself go, not to mind a bit, especially those last weeks. I'm glad you came in. I've been hoping you would, sir."

"I'm not any good though, she won't listen to a word I say."

It seemed to surprise the dressing woman.

"I'm sorry to hear it, sir; I thought she would. She talks about you often."

He colored like a school-boy. "Gosh, it's a shame to have her kill herself for nothing." Reluctant to talk longer with Mrs. Higgins, he added in spite of himself: "She seems so lonely."

"It's two weeks now since that human devil went away," Mrs. Higgins said unexpectedly, looking quietly into the blue eyes of the visitor. "She hasn't opened one of his letters or his telegrams. She has sold every pin and brooch he ever gave her, scattered the money far and wide. You saw how she went on with Cohen, and her pearls."

She heard her as through a dream. Her words gave form and existence to a dreadful thing he had been trying to deny.

"Is she hard up now, Mrs. Higgins?" he asked softly. And glancing at him to see just how far she might go, the woman said:

"An actress who spends and lives as Miss Lane does is always hard up."

"Could you use money without her knowing about it?"

"Lord," exclaimed the woman. "It wouldn't be hard, sir! She only knows that there is such a thing as money when the bills come and she hasn't got a penny. Or when the poor come! She's got a heart of gold, sir, for everybody that is in need."

He took out of his wallet a wad of notes and put them in Higgins' hands.

"Just pay up some bills on the sly, and don't you tell her on your life. I don't want her to be worried." Explaining with sensitive understanding: "It's all right, Mrs. Higgins; I'm from her town, you know." And the woman who admired him and understood him, and whose life had made her keen to read things as they were, said earnestly:

"I quite understand how it is, sir. It is just as though it came straight from home. She overdraws her salary months ahead."

"Have you been with Miss Lane long?"

"Ever since she toured in Europe, and nobody could serve her without being very fond of her indeed."

Dan put out his big warm hand eagerly. "You're a corker, Mrs. Higgins."

"I could walk around the world for her, sir."

"Go ahead and do it then," he smiled, "and I'll pay for all the boot leather you wear out!"

As he went downstairs, already too late to keep an engagement made with his fiancée, he stopped in the writing-room to scribble off a note of excuse to the duchess. At the opposite table Dan saw Prince Pontotowsky, writing, as well. The Hungarian did not see Blair, and when he had finished his note he called a page boy and Dan could hear him send his letter up to Miss Lane's suite. The young westerner thought with confident exaltation, "Well, he'll get left all right, and I'm darned if I don't sit here and see him turned down!"

Dan sat on until the page returned and gave Pontotowsky a verbal message.

"Will you please come upstairs, sir?"

And Blair saw the Hungarian rise, adjust his eye-glass, and walk toward the lift.

CHAPTER XV.

Galorey Gives Advice.

Lord Galorey had long been used to seeing things go the way they would and should not, and his greatest effort had been attained on the day he gave his languid body the trouble to go in and see Ruggles.

"My God," he muttered as he watched Dan and the duchess on the terrace together—they were nevertheless undeniably a handsome pair—"to think that this is the way I am returning old Blair's hospitality!" And he was ashamed to recall his western experiences, when in a shack in the mountains he had watched the big stars come out in the heavens and sat late with old Dan Blair, delighted with the simple philosophies and the man's high ideals.

"What the devil does it all mean?" he wondered. "She has simply seduced him, that's all."

He got Dan finally to himself and

"I don't know," said the boy slowly. Then followed up with an honest, "Yes, I would."

Gordon caught eagerly. "Well, he sent you to me. Your friend Ruggles has gone off and washed his hands of you, but I can't."

Lord Galorey walked across the room briskly and came back to Dan. "First of all, you are not in love with Lily—not a bit of it. You couldn't be—and what's more she is not in love with you."

Blair laughed coolly. "You certainly have got things down to a fine point, Gordon. I'll be hanged if I understand your game."

Galorey went bravely on: "Therefore, if neither of you are in love, you understand that there is nothing between you but your money."

The Englishman got his point out brutally, relieved that the impersonal thing money opened a way for him. He didn't want to be the bouncer and the cad that the mention of the woman would have made him.

The boy drew in an angry breath. "Gosh," he said, "that cursed money will make me crazy yet! You are not very flattering to me, Gordon, I swear, and Lily wouldn't thank you for the motives you impute to her."

"Oh, rot!" returned Gordon more tranquilly. "She hasn't got a human sentiment in her. She's a rock with a woman's face."

Dan turned his back on his host and walked off into the billiard-room. Galorey promptly followed him, took down a cue and chalked it, and said:

"Well, come now, let's put it to the test."

Blair began stacking the balls.

"How do you mean?"

"Well, when you have had time to get your first news over from Ruggles,

"And What's More, She's Not in Love With You."

without any preparation began, pushing Dan back into a big leather chair, and standing up like a judge over him:

"Now, you really must listen to me, my dear chap. I shan't rest in my grave unless I get a word with you. Your father sent you here to me and I'm damned if I know what for. I've been wondering every day about it for two months. He didn't know what this set was like or how rotten it is."

"What set?" The boy looked apologetically young as Gordon stared down at him. There wasn't a line or wrinkle on his smooth brow or on his lips and forehead finely cut and well molded—but there were the very seals of what his father would have been glad to see. "The boy had the same clear look and unspooled frankness that had charmed Galorey at the first. He had been a lazy coward to delay so long."

"Why, the rottenness of this set right here in my house." And as the host began to see that he should have to approach a woman's name in speaking, he stopped short, his mouth wide open, and Dan thought he had been drinking.

"You are talking of marrying Lily," Gordon got out.

"I am going to marry her."

"You mustn't."

Blair got up out of his chair. It didn't need this attack of Galorey's to bring to his mind hints that had been dropped that Galorey was in love with the Duchess of Breakwater. It illuminated what Galorey was saying fast and incoherently.

"I mean to say, my dear chap, that you mustn't marry the Duchess of Breakwater. Look at most of these European marriages. They all go to smash. She is older than you are and she has lived her life. You are much too young."

"Hold up, Galorey; you mustn't go on, you know. You know I am engaged; that's all there is about it. Now, let's go and have a game of pool."

Galorey had not worked himself up to this pitch to break off now at a fatal point.

"I'm responsible for this, and by gad, Dan, I'm going to put you on your guard."

"You are responsible for nothing, Galorey, and I warn you to drop it."

"You would listen to your father if he were here, wouldn't you?"

tell her you have gone to smash and that you are a pauper."

"I don't play tricks like that," said the westerner quietly.

"No," responded Galorey bitterly, "you let others play tricks on you."

The young man threw his cue smartly down, his youth looked contemptuously at the worldly man, and he turned pale, but he said in a low voice:

"Now, you've got to get up on this, Gordon; I thought at first you had been drinking. I won't listen. Let's get on another subject, or I'll clear out."

Galorey, however, cool and pitiful of the tangle in the boy's affairs, wouldn't let himself be angry. "You are my old chum's boy, Dan," he went on, "and I'm not going to stand by and see you spoil your life in silence. You are of age. You can go to the devil if you like, but you can't go there under my roof, without a word from me."

"Then I'll get out from under your roof, tonight."

"Right! I don't blame you there, but before you go, tell Lily you have lost your money, and see what she is made of. My dear chap—he changed his tone to one of affection—"don't be an ape; listen to me, for your father's sake; remember your whole life's happiness is in this game. Isn't it worth looking after?"

"Not at the risk of hurting a woman's feelings," said the boy.

Queensland Pearl Divers.

The Queensland diver gets into his dress at daybreak, steps onto the ladder over the side, and fastens the life line round him; the tender screws on the face glass, the pumps are started, and down goes the diver to look for shells. If he is on ground when shell is plentiful he fills his bag, then allows his dress to fill with air, which brings him to the surface, when he is hauled, to the boat by the life line. He empties his bag onto the deck and goes down for another bagful. Some of the divers occasionally work in 25 fathoms.

The greatest danger with which the diver has to contend is paralysis, and knowing the danger he runs he sometimes demands $1,000 in advance, and this amount is sometimes lost to the pearler through the seal and daring of the diver.

UNCLE SAM'S SMOKELESS POWDER

FIRING A 12 INCH GUN AT FORT WADSWORTH

THE tendency of modern warfare has been toward the adoption of those instruments which accomplish its purpose with as little risk to the users as possible. This is exemplified somewhat in the use of smokeless powder, the manufacture of which is attended with much less danger, and its transfer from place to place results in fewer accidents as compared with the production of gunpowder. It can be handled with perfect safety and even set on fire in the open air without causing an explosion or occasioning the least anxiety.

At Indian Head, which is also the navy proving ground, there is a plant for the manufacture of this powder which is owned and operated by the United States government and the entire output of the factory, which last year amounted to over a million and a half pounds, is used by our navy. Should occasion ever require, the powder will also be used at Uncle Sam's many big fortifications, the accompanying illustration, showing a portion of one, Fort Wadsworth, near New York city.

About 25 buildings are used in the process of its manufacture. They are situated in that portion of the government reservation farther from the river and scattered over a large area, being about 400 feet apart. Explosions will sometimes occur no matter how great the precautions used, for the materials which go to make up the manufacture of powder are necessarily combustible, so the wisdom of this provision on the part of the government may be understood; for if one building should accidentally be blown up the others would not suffer thereby. The greatest secrecy is maintained as to some parts of the chemical process, and few of the three or four hundred men employed really know the entire combination of the chemical ingredients used in the smokeless powder making. The efforts of the powder board and the directors of the powder factory are constantly directed toward the improvement of the quality of the output, and recently two special points have been aimed at: First, to insure the chemical stability of the powder for as long a period as possible; second, to secure a degree of uniformity which will insure what is called "ballistic stability" of the powder—that is to say, a permanence of velocities and pressure throughout prolonged periods under varying conditions of temperature, moisture, etc. In short, to have the powder work as well in any part of the world as it does on the proving grounds.

There is a big laboratory attached to the factory standing some distance away from the other buildings, and here at least a dozen expert chemists are always at work and through their experiments a new stabilizer has been recently introduced into the powder-making formula, and from the reports of the officers of our battleships in various parts of the world the results have been most satisfactory. The whole powder making plant is wonderfully interesting even to a layman. Few people, however, are permitted to see its workings, for powder making, like gun testing, is conducted away from the public gaze.

Smoking is not permitted on the grounds, and so carefully do the authorities guard against accidents that the workmen are not even permitted to carry matches. All the buildings are well ventilated, as the fumes of the chemicals used are apt to bring on heart trouble. Chimneys are arranged to carry off the poisonous gases, consequently there is little illness among the men. There are facilities for a rapid output in case of necessity—a matter which would be of vital importance in time of war. There is also a reserve supply which is constantly on the increase as our navy grows larger.

The cotton used is shipped to Indian Head in large bales and stored in a building erected for that purpose. It is purchased in large quantities and must be of a special grade. The second stage of the work begins when the cotton goes to the picking room. Here colored men open up the bales and pick the fibers apart. After the fibers are separated the cotton is ready for the drying room, where it is kept for 24 hours. The temperature of the drying room is 212 degrees during the entire time and the workmen can only remain a few minutes at a time. After this process the cotton

TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Restored at Last to Perfect Health by Doan's Kidney Pills. Mrs. Narcissa Waggoner, Eastonville, Ill., says: "Over ten years I suffered terribly with backache, headache, nervousness and dizziness. The kidney secretions were unnatural and gave me great trouble. One day I suddenly fell to the floor, where I lay for a long time unconscious. Three doctors who treated me, diagnosed my case as paralysis, and said they could do nothing for me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I am stronger than before in years."

Subject for the Minister.

According to reports gathered by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, practically 10 per cent. of all deaths in church congregations are caused by tuberculosis. In a study of 312,000 communicants of 725 churches in the death rate among these church members was found to be 2.24 for every thousand communicants. This is higher than the rate for the registration area of the United States, which was 1:60 in 1910.

"While these statistics," says the national association, "are not comparable from the point of view of accuracy with those of the bureau of census, sufficient credence may be given to them to indicate that one of the most serious problems of the ordinary church has to consider is that of the devastation of its membership by tuberculosis. Every minister in the United States should give this subject some attention during the week preceding or that following April 23, Tuberculosis day."

Man and His Happiness.

"Man is the creator of his own happiness; it is the aroma of a life lived in harmony with high ideals. For what a man has, he may be dependent on others, what he is, rests with him alone. What he obtains in life is but acquisition; what he attains, is growth. Happiness is the soul's joy in the possession of the intangible."—From Self-Control, by William George Jordan.

TRAP OF HIS BOYHOOD DAYS

One of the Familiar Sort Set by Lads Awakes Reminiscences of City Man.

"I used to set traps like that," this man said, referring to one which some boys had set up in a city street to catch sparrows.

It was a small wooden box turned bottom side up and set at the outer edge of the sidewalk with one end lifted and supported on a stick. One end of the stick was on the sidewalk and the other end under the box edge. The boys put some oats on the sidewalk under the box, and to the supporting stick there was attached a string leading across the sidewalk to the house area, the boys' hair. When the sparrows came under the box to get the oats they pulled the string and twitched the stick out and down came the box to trap the sparrows under it. Or that was the idea.

"Just like that," this man went on. "That's a time-honored sort of trap. We didn't have any sparrows then; what we used to try to catch was pigeons, doves, and we used a bigger box, a soapbox, and what we used to put under it was bread crumbs."

"Time and again I've set up such a trap in a street where pigeons used to come around and baited it and then got off somewhere holding the string and waited for the pigeons to walk under the box so I could trap 'em."

"And the pigeons would come and they'd walk around the box and pick up things all around it and sometimes they'd get so close that I was sure they were going under and then I'd pounce down, all keyed up, ready to pull and get 'em, but somehow they generally stopped right at the edge, or if one got under and I pulled the string the pigeon was always sure to get away before the box came down."

"I don't know just how it was, but I never caught a pigeon. I guess it will be about the same here now with these boys trying to catch sparrows, but it's a lot of fun to set the trap and try."

We are now in the market for all kinds of

Alfalfa: The Dairyman's Best Friend.

(BY JAMES W. HELME.)

Ten years ago the writer began to grow alfalfa in southern Michigan. At first he made some mistakes and had some failures, but gradually experience taught him how to remedy his early failures until, during the last three years he has used no other hay than alfalfa and he can grow a crop with more certainty of success than he can of red clover or any other forage crop.

SOIL FOR ALFALFA.

Alfalfa seems to thrive well on sandy or clay soils provided they are well drained. Permanent moisture should not be nearer than five feet of the surface. It does not do well on rich, mucky lands or lands naturally wet, and standing surface water will kill alfalfa in two or three days. Alfalfa needs a fairly rich soil to start on. It is a mistake to sow it on poor land without liberal fertilization.

SOWING ALFALFA

Alfalfa should be sown just as early in the spring as possible, in April or March if possible. Frosts, or even freezing weather, will not hurt the young alfalfa plants. It grows in cold weather when most weeds are dormant and early sowing gives it a chance to get ahead of the weeds. It may be sown alone or with a nurse crop. If the latter is used, a bushel of barley to the acre is the best. The writer sows it alone and generally gets one good crop of hay the same season, and sometimes two. Twenty pounds of seed to the acre is about the right amount to sow. I prepare my ground thoroughly making a good seed bed, I sow broadcast, use a weeder to cover the seed and then roll the ground.

While I have never inoculated my soils with alfalfa bacteria, the value of a good stand of alfalfa is so great that I recommend inoculation. It may be done in three ways. First, by treating the seed with a culture of bacteria which can be obtained at the Agricultural College. Second, by sowing a pound of sweet clover seed to every twenty pounds of alfalfa. Third, by sowing on the field, soil taken from an old alfalfa field or along the road where sweet clover flourishes.

CLIPPING AND CUTTING.

Unless the weeds show up very bad I would not clip it until the alfalfa shows blossoms. Often the first year it will turn yellow when six or eight inches high. Mow it down at once and it will come up nice and green. Let it go into winter with an after-math six or eight inches high to hold the snow.

TIME TO CUT ALFALFA HAY.

Most people cut alfalfa too late. As soon as blossoms begin to appear it is time to cut the crop. This is very important especially with the first crop. If the first crop is allowed to get into full bloom before cutting, the next crop will be seriously injured. It is said that it will pay to cut the first crop on time and lose it rather than postpone the cutting for weather conditions. Moreover, the hay has a greater feeding value if cut early and the stand will be benefited.

CURING THE HAY.

Alfalfa will stand more wet weather in the cock than red clover. If allowed to lie in the sun too long the leaves will rattle off. In practice after cutting I allow it to get well wilted, then I rake it up and let it stand and cure in the cock for several days. Then I open up the cocks for about an hour to dry off the sweat and then draw. In rainy weather, which is probable during the first and third cutting, I use hay caps of great value. For these I buy common unbleached sheeting 40 inches wide, making a cap 40 inches square. In each corner I sew an 8-ounce stone to weigh them. Such a cap costs nine cents and will do excellent service for years if taken care of.

ALFALFA HAY AS A DAIRY FEED.

Chemical analysis shows that well cured alfalfa hay has the same food value as bran, pound for pound. Here lies its value to the dairyman, as it furnishes him the necessary protein for a milk ration. Fifteen pounds of alfalfa hay and 35 pounds of corn silage furnish a number one balanced ration for a 1,200 pound dairy cow. It is doubtful if it will pay to feed grain with such a ration. Horses will leave their grain to eat alfalfa. Fed alone it makes an ideal winter ration for the brood sow.

VALUE TO THE SOIL.

Alfalfa, like red clover and other legumes, takes nitrogen from the air and stores it in the ground. It is thus a soil builder. Theoretically it is a permanent grass but after about five years June grass will begin to appear in the field and run the alfalfa out and it is well to turn it under after five years cutting and put it into corn. Alfalfa does not do well on acid soils and hence lime is often applied to new fields. The ground limestone rock is usually used but there is no better form of lime to use than marl which can be found in many lakes and swamps all over Michigan. If a commercial fertilizer is used when seeding, one strong with phosphoric acid is the best.

WHY EVERY FARMER SHOULD GROW ALFALFA

- First, It will yield four to five tons of hay per acre each year.
  - Second, It has a greater food value than any other coarse forage.
  - Third, All stock like it and do well on it.
  - Fourth, It enriches the soil and makes possible better crops.
  - Fifth, A seeding once started lasts for years, a great saving over seeding of red clover.
  - Sixth, All stock like it and it furnishes a rich food that enables a farmer to dispense with many feed bills.
  - Seventh, While cattle and horses should not be pastured on it, it makes the very best possible hog pasture for the production of cheap pork.
- Try a few acres of alfalfa this coming spring and learn to grow it. You will have to get into the game sooner or later and why not "do it now."

WOMAN REFORMER IN EGYPT

Several Improvements Urged by Bahiat-Al-Badia Are New-Laws in That Country.

Bahiat-al-Badia is said to be the most popular woman of her race in Egypt. She has taken part in various movements to help Egyptian women. At a recent congress she delivered an address setting forth the needs of the Mohammedan women and calling on the members of the congress to support laws to help them. The congress voted in favor of six of the reforms she proposed—that every girl should receive a common school education, that in every school there should be an educated woman to teach the girls good manners and the rudiments of religion, that as soon as practical a university school should be established for women, that a physician and a nurse to aid women in childbirth should be maintained in every city and village, that special schools be established where girls should be taught housekeeping and the care of children and that the hating of women to stand about a bier and beat their heads and faces at funerals be forbidden.

When Bahiat-al-Badia proposed that the women of Egypt should be allowed to attend the mosque, pointing out that this privilege had been enjoyed by Turkish women for years, there was an uproar in the congress. When she tried to have the question of polygamy discussed there was a great tumult, every member of the congress shouting.—Detroit Free Press.

How England Grows.

A great deal of interest is taken in England in the question of coast protection. The ocean, assailing the cliffs, gradually tears them away, but this very process furnishes a defense for the land by building up long beaches of sand and shingle which arrest the waves before they can attack the cliffs. An effort is making to prevent or better regulate, the removal of this material for construction and road building, because in many places its removal has permitted the sea freely to exert its power of erosion.

The Ordnance Survey has ascertained that in the last thirty-five years England has lost 6,000 acres by sea erosion, and gained 46,000 acres through reclaiming land the existence of which is mainly due to material brought down by the rivers.—From the Youth's Companion.

Our Wasted Seaweed Resources

IN these days when so much is said about the conservation of our natural resources and the utilization of products that are neglected and wasted, it is strange that no account is taken of the marine forests and gardens that fringe our sea coast. Yet, since seaweeds are the only vegetation found over three-fourths of the superficial area of the earth, it must be obvious that their place in the economy of nature must be far from being insignificant. In their native element the most important function of these seaweeds is the same as that performed by ordinary forms of vegetation on land—that of rendering animal life possible. They take the elements existing in water as impurities and transform them into materials essential to animal life. It is evident, therefore, that the seaweeds are not quite as useless as they are supposed to be.

Along the coast of New England, the British Isles and western Europe they are used as fertilizers. In many countries they are fed to swine and cattle. In Holland they have been employed

In the building of dykes. Sometimes they are used to stuff mattresses, cushions and upholstered furniture. Experiments have been carried on to use them as a substitute for wood pulp in the manufacture of paper. But the Japanese have attained the climax of utility in the employment of the seaweeds. In the bay of Tokyo 2500 acres are planted every year with the red laver, a sea plant, which is transformed into a dried and toasted powder which is of highly nutritious value, being rich in proteins. These weeds are planted in a very curious manner. In October and November bundles of bamboo or brush are prepared and taken to the grounds in boats at low tide. Deep holes are made in the muddy bed of the bay by thrusting down through the water an elongated conical wooden frame with two long upright wooden handles. Into each of these holes is placed one of these brush bundles, forming long rows that project above the water. The brushes afford a lodging place for the spores of the red laver and they become attached to the twigs and develop within three or four months into plants which are fit to be harvested. They are then cut, dried, pressed, toasted and ground into a powder. This red laver grows abundantly along the coasts of the United States.

Of greater importance than this is the manufacture of a seaweed isinglass which is exported from Japan to all the countries of the world. There are not less than 500 establishments in Japan which are making this isinglass. It is prepared from seaweeds of the genus Gelidium. They are boiled, strained and filtered in order to separate the gelatine from the other materials. The ready product is white, shiny and semi-transparent and is used in making jellies, soups, sauces and to purify the wine of the natives, which is made from rice and is called "sake." In the United States it is chiefly employed in food preparations where gelatine is required. It is also used for the sizing of textiles, the stiffening of the warp of silk, the clarifying of wines, beer and coffee, the making of molds in the manufacture of paper. In all civilized countries the Japanese gelatine, under the name of agar-agar, is used exclusively as the culture medium in bacteriological work. Large shipments of this gelatine are also sent to the schnapps factories in Holland.

The most abundant of all seaweeds are the kelps, distributed along every coast line. From these the Japanese prepare "kombu," which enters into the dietary of every family in Japan. It is used as a vegetable, cooked with soups, fish and meats. It is also made into confections and beverages.

Iodine has been manufactured from kelps for many years, but the price has been so reduced by the working of the nitrate fields of Peru that its manufacture from kelps in the United States can be made attractive and profitable only by utilization tion of the by-products such as chloride of potassium, alginate, cellulose, dextrin, mannite and other salts, including sodium alginate.

The United States, however, has one seaweed industry of commercial importance in Irish moss, a form of alga that grows abundantly along the Atlantic coast, particularly north of Cape Cod. The center of the industry is at Scituate, Mass., where it has been exploited for over three-quarters of a century. The average annual output at present is about 800,000 pounds, valued at $25,000. It is used chiefly for making blanc mange, and is also employed in making cough remedies, jellies and puddings. It is also used for clarifying beer and in sizing fabrics.

In Roman times an alkaline dye was prepared from seaweed, probably from fucus vesiculosus, the common bladderwrack. The "seaweed pictures" sold at watering places almost invariably contain a large proportion of the dried external skeletons of plant-like animals, such as the sea-mats (stauria) and sea-firs (sertularia).

Between twenty and fifty fathoms seaweeds are rare, beyond that depth their occurrence is exceptional. The principal natural means of distribution are, of course, ocean currents; but man counts for something, inasmuch as species are brought from port to port on the bottom of ships. Among the chief barriers must be reckoned straits of deep sea, coast, deserts of sand and mud, and the intrusion of fresh water lowering the salinity of the neighboring tidal water. Probably the oldest seaweed known is one of siphonous structure, described as from the Devonian rocks.

Besides being used in the manufacture of iodine, the coarser brown seaweeds are also collected for manure, and the wrack or wrack harvest, or cutting of these weeds in the Channel Islands, forms an important part of the farmer's work at certain times of the year. Laver, prepared from a species of porphyra, is valued as a delicate condiment in the west of England, and a similar preparation from ulva latissima is known as green laver. Dulse (Rhodospira palmata) and tanglers (the young stalks of laminaria digitata and L. saccarina) have been used for food in times of scarcity, but must be difficult to digest. The last named species yield mannite. Among the best known species of green seaweeds are the tubular enteromorpha, or pipe-weed; the branched cladophora; ulva, or sea lettuce, with flat spreading fronds; the feathery bryopsis, like a miniature palm tree; and the button-like codium; or sea purslane.

The brown seaweeds are arranged in three groups—phaeosporeae, fucoaceae and dictyotaceae—according to their mode of reproduction. In all there are about 170 genera, chiefly from the colder seas; and varying in size from the minute coccoarpus growing on species of fucus to the gigantic macrocystis and lesonia of the Antarctic. The floating thallus of the former may reach a length of a thousand feet, and the branching tree-stalk of the latter is several yards high, and as thick as a man's arm. Sargassum, or gulf-weed, is included here. These belong to the first group, in which a sexual reproduction is effected by swarm-spores; sexual reproduction also takes place by the conjugation of cells, usually differing from swarm-spores only by their fusion. Here also belong the tanglers (laminaria); with fronds borne on a stalk that shows some advance in structure. In the fucoaceae, of which the bladderwrack (fucus), sea-oak (balliarys), and sea-thongs (bhaunthalia) are common examples, the female cells are non-motile, and the male cells free-swimming; a sexual reproduction does not occur. The common Dictyota dichotoma and the rarer peacock weed (padina pavonia) may well represent the third group. A sexual reproduction is effected by non-motile spores; the male and the female cells are also non-motile. A single cell is produced in, and ejected from, the female organ; the male cells do not bear cilia. According to Strasburger the process of fertilization has not been observed. The third group contains nearly 300 genera, mostly from temperate and tropical seas.

The vast harvest of the sea, as represented by the algae that grow to maturity and then decay along our extended coast lines and are wasted, is capable of adding tens of millions to the wealth of the nation, of supporting numerous industries that would give permanent employment to many thousands of people, and of relieving American manufacturers from dependence upon foreign sources of supply for chemicals and other materials used in various arts and industries.

BOATMAN HAD HIS OWN IDEAS

Absence of Expected "Tip" Brought Out Excellent Sample of Real Irish Wit.

A good story of Irish repartee has been published concerning John Bright. He was always ready for salmon fishing, and on several occasions went to Ireland with Mr. George Peabody, the American philanthropist. One day Mr. Bright, noticing a policeman on the bank, inquired of him what sum the boatmen were entitled to ask for rowing up the Shannon on a day's fishing. He said that from seven shillings and sixpence to ten shillings was the usual payment.

Mr. Bright said to Mr. Peabody, "Have you three half-crowns? I have no change."

Mr. Peabody produced the money and gave it to the boatman. He was dissatisfied, and said:

"And is that all ye're giving me?"

"That's all," replied Mr. Peabody. "Well, that bates all I ever heard," answered the boatman. "An' they call ye Peabody. Path, I should call ye Pay-nobody!"

WHAT HE WAS DOING.

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I consulted with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases."

(Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Mean People.
Henry Russell, the head of the Boston opera, was describing his foreign tour in search of talent.

"They were mean people," he said of the singers of a certain city. "I could do no business with them. They thought only of money."

Mr. Russell smiled.
"They were as bad as the man who discovered the Blank theater fire."

"The first intimation the box office had of this fire came, at the end of the third act, from a fat man who bounded down the gallery stairs, stuck his face in at the ticket window and shouted breathlessly:
"Theater's afire! Gimme me money back!"

His Magic Wand Not Waved

Money King Apparently Asked Leading Question Only as a Matter of Information.

John D. Rockefeller gets a lot of fun out of his money. Of late years he has chosen as his friends several young newspaper writers, and one day, playing a game of golf with a reporter, he let out this howl:
"I enjoy being with young men so much that I wish I could seek their society more freely, but it is a hard thing for me to do. You see, I meet people, and begin to like them, and just when I do that they hit me in the back with a contribution box."
The young man agreed with the millionaire that such a practice was discouraging, not to say disgusting, appalling and frightful. This cheered Rockefeller immensely.

"By the way," said the millionaire graciously, "how are you getting on financially?"

The reporter immediately had a vision of tumbling into a pile of money, but he was too crafty to give any sign of his elation.
"Oh," he said airily. "I'm doing about as well as a man of my age could expect."
Then Mr. Rockefeller, without cracking a smile, resumed the game. Popular Magazine.

Why Price of Coffee Soars

Growers Have Quit Raising the Bean and Have Turned to Cultivation of Rubber.

Moly bars are partly to blame for the higher price of coffee. One may not be able to own a motor car, but because of them one may soon be too poor to have a cup of Rio for breakfast.

Coffee growers have quit raising coffee and are cultivating rubber, the Los Angeles Examiner says. The motor car has boomed the rubber market until there is big money in producing the raw material, while the price of coffee for 15 years has been so low that there was little or no money in it. That is the explanation the coffee brokers give of the sudden advance in the price of the bean without which an American breakfast is a tasteless thing.

There has been some talk of a shortage in the supply of raw rubber, but according to consular reports the seringa rubber district in the Amazon valley in South America would be sufficient by itself to supply the growing needs of the world's consumption if it could be worked economically, which is only possible with a far greater population than that at present available and better means of transport. At present, except in the Aere, seringa rubber has practically only been touched to a distance of about six miles on each side of rivers navigable by some sort of craft.

It must be awfully unlucky to walk under thirteen ladders.

A BALD-HEADED WOMAN

Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage.

Half is certainly most necessary to a woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet, right here in East Jordan, there are thousands of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess, which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break, and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair becomes, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will either cure dandruff and baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall's "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall's "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. W. C. Spring Drug Co.

An Ideal Sunday Newspaper.

Recent issues of THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD reminds one that Chicago may fairly lay claim to producing the best newspapers. In the world, not excepting those of New York. THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD in foreign news alone, has its own special cable service in addition to those of the New York Herald, World, Journal of Commerce and Associated Press. This is a fair example of the completeness of the paper in every department.

Aside from the regular news features, there is something in THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD for every member of the family. The sporting pages both daily and Sunday, give the latest authentic news in every line of sport. The Woman's section is filled with illustrated articles on the newest wrinkles in fashion and domestic science. "The People's Institute of Domestic Economy," filling a whole page every Sunday, is the newest and best household department in any paper.

Dame Curtis's "Novelties in Entertainments" is a valued feature. The dramatic and musical page, written by James O'Donnell Bennett and Felix Borowski, are admittedly without their equal in the West. The array of splendid special articles by skilled writers, finely illustrated, also is typical of the high literary quality of THE RECORD-HERALD. In the way of humor there is the comic colored supplement for children, besides S. E. Kiefer's delightful "Alternating Currents" for everybody.

But the thing that lifts THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD most emphatically above all its rivals is its magazine section—a real magazine, full of stories and articles by the most famous writers of our day, illustrated by celebrated artists. Its recent $10,000 prize contest has attracted to its pages the work of the best short story writers in our language. No wonder THE RECORD-HERALD is regarded as the best Sunday newspaper!

Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer who owns or controls saloons in every city and county in Michigan, also has a palatial home in the prohibition city of Pasadena, California. The St. Louis brewer evidently selected that city for a home because there were no saloons there to disturb his enjoyment. More than half a million dollars of profits made through Brewer Busch's saloons in Michigan and elsewhere are expended in his winter home in California. It will also be recalled that Brewer Pabst of Milwaukee headed a petition to prevent the establishment of any saloon on the streets which he lived. Pabst did not want that any member of his family should be annoyed or disturbed by saloon frequenters or by the drunks they would turn out. And yet the agents of Brewer Busch of St. Louis and Brewer Pabst, of Milwaukee are now going about the cities and villages of Michigan, urging the retention of saloons where they now exist and seeking to have them brought back in counties from which they have been banished. They do not wish to have saloons in sight, or sound of their own homes but they insist upon compelling other people to endure them. If the voters of Michigan to whom the opportunity will be given at the coming spring election will show the same favor for their homes and for their families that have been shown by Brewer Busch of St. Louis and Brewer Pabst of Milwaukee they will do all in their power through their votes and otherwise to secure success for local option.

THE FINEST IN THE STATE.

Is the big modern plant recently purchased from the Booth Fisheries Co. by A. T. Washburne and located at foot of "Midway" on the bay shore, as a permanent home for the constantly increasing business in the manufacture of "Sanitary Rugs from Carpets" (trade mark established 1888) in which line a trade has been successfully established all over the United States on the excellence of products. This also gives much needed room to the Carpet Cleaning and retinting department, which includes a large sterilizing abattoir for purifying rugs and carpets. The cleaning department is fully equipped with all modern and time saving machinery devices run by electricity. Two of the largest rotary renovating machines for general cleaning and a powerful Vacuum machine 100 per cent times more powerful and efficient than the portable ones, this latter is for the rugs and orientals. The plant is also equipped with three machines for the sewing of carpets of all kinds in the most approved manner with flat elastic seams. Thus with largest facilities, most up-to-date equipment, highest grade of workmanship, lowest possible prices, and prompt service, bespeaks a busy future for the Petoskey Rug Co. of which A. T. Washburne is proprietor and to which address all orders and correspondence should be addressed—NO AGENTS.—Petoskey Evening News, April 13, 1911.—Make your Shipments as early as possible.

Miss Myrve Scroggie, president of class of '08, visited the normal Friday afternoon.

The members of the normal class have completed their work in school law and now will take up geography in its place.

A COLD, LA GRIPPE, THEN PNEUMONIA is too often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause; soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Made Well By Vinol—Letters from a Grateful Mother

New Haven, Conn.—"My little girl, ever since her birth, was frail and sickly and nothing seemed to do her any good until we tried your cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol. As soon as she commenced to take it, I noticed an improvement in her health and appearance. She has now taken three bottles of Vinol, and from the good it has done her I can say it will do all you claim for it in building up and strengthening frail and delicate children." (Name furnished on request.)

Another mother of Chicago, Ill., writes: "I can not say too much in praise of Vinol for delicate failing children."

We ask every mother of a frail, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it does not do all we claim.
