It is said to be true that whiskey and beer and other saloon goods to the value of between $75,000 and $100,000 were stored in the freight stations of Lansing throughout the day and night previous to the recent opening of the saloons in that city. This fact compares well with the claim made by the brewery interests that "just as much liquor was sold in Lansing during the dry period as when the saloons were there." The necessity of starting off the season of drunkenness and disorder and extravagant expenditure with almost $100,000 worth of whiskey and beer is in striking contrast with the few bottles of beer and jugs of liquor that were said to have been smuggled into Lansing from Jackson and other neighboring points. It will not be possible for any of the people of Lansing to ever again believe "that just as much liquor drank" story after they have had some further experience with the conditions that were renewed in their city on the first day of the present month.

Return Tonight

Champion-Richmond Stock Company at Temple Theatre, Saturday.

The Champion-Richmond Stock Company which made such a hit in this city a few weeks ago, in Tabloid Productions of Famous Plays, will be with us again on next Saturday night. Manager Adams—arranged with Mr. Champion to stop off in East Jordan, on his way to Detroit and present his new play "THE WEDDING DAY."

The company could only be secured for one night, as they are booked for a ten weeks run at Detroit, where they open next Monday night.

The story of the "WEDDING DAY" is well told in two acts, and has a strong vein of comedy running through-out the play. All the scenery to give the drama a first class production, is carried with the company, and as the company is well-known here, it is an assured fact that the Temple will be filled on Saturday night.

The prices of admission will be within the reach of all, 15 and 25c. One performance will be given starting at 8:15.

D. S. PAYTON,
County Clerk.

It is a well conceded fact that EMPEY BROS. are carrying the largest line of rugs of all sizes from 2x4 inches up to 9x12 feet of any concern north of Grand Rapids. You will find it greatly to your advantage to look over our stock before purchasing. They also are carrying a very nice line of DRAPERY for arch spaces in your home.

Prosecuting Attorney Shepard of Wayne County recently declared to a Detroit News reporter that "the saloons have never been closed on Sunday in the city of Detroit or the county of Wayne. Everybody knows that you can get beer and liquor anywhere on Sunday." Further stated the prosecuting attorney of that county and he continued, "It is a joke. I can't do anything about it." I've got two officers on my staff, the sheriff and police commissioners have a thousand on theirs. The people don't expect me to keep the saloons closed when the police authorities find it impossible to do so." This is very valuable testimony that Prosecuting Attorney Shepard is giving with reference to "saloon regulation" in the city where the Michigan Brewers Association and the Saloon Bonding and Surety Company have high home offices and their headquarters. The principal objection these organizations instruct their attorneys and speakers and the newspaper writers to urge against local option is that its purpose can be accomplished better through "regulation." They stand for "regulation," they say; they believe in it and insist upon it. And these same breweries own two thirds of the saloons in Detroit and Wayne county while the Saloon Bonding Company provides bonds for all of them. And what cost of "regulation" is it that they insist upon? Here it is in the words of Prosecuting Attorney Shepard: "The saloons have never been closed on Sunday in the city of Detroit or county of Wayne. Everybody knows that you can get beer and liquor anywhere on Sunday. It's a joke." That statement well describes it. The Brewery Association sort of regulation is decidedly a joke and a very poor joke at that.

School Census Enumerators Required to Make Careful Canvass

Special efforts are being made this year to insure an accurate census of the children of school age in the state of Michigan. The new law requires those who take the census to make a house-to-house canvass in the fifteen or twenty days before June 1. It is upon this census that the primary apportionment is made.

The school board selects the census enumerator and he or she is to make a house-to-house canvass, placing upon the list the names of all children between the ages of five and twenty years, whose parents or legal guardians are residents of the district. Children of summer resorters, beet-weeders and persons temporarily in the district are not to be taken on the census. The legal residence of the parents or guardians determines the residence of the child. Children, who are orphans or who have been deserted by their parents, may be reported on the census as "waifs" but an explanation must be made in each instance. The residence of the husband determines the residence of young people of school age who are married.

County Normal Notes

Georgia Adams, who was unable to finish the term at the normal because of illness, visited the normal Tuesday of last week.

The pictures which were loaned us by the State Library have been returned. These pictures are very good and the members of the normal class are going to have some of them in their schools next year.

The Rev. Mr. Taylor has very kindly accepted the invitation of the class to give the benediction address.

Wednesday morning of last week the normal class attended the meeting of the board of supervisors. The subject under discussion was the amount for which the county should be bonded.

The members of the normal class were invited to a Bird and Abor Day program given Friday afternoon by the training room children. One of the features of the program was description of the different birds common in Michigan.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas, Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night, but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." TONIGHT, Saturday, May 11

What a woman likes best about matrimony is the thought of how it must hurt her former husband to pay it. For refined room decorations call at the Hite Drug Store and see their beautiful new line of Wall Papers and cut out decorations with Cretonnes to match.

Alex. Destinn, 90 Lake St., Muskegon, desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." Hite's Drug Store.

All United States soldiers are to be taught to swim. Why not begin with the sailors? Edison Talking Machines at all prices up to $200. Liberal Terms. See C. C. Mack.

When a woman says she knows how to manage her husband what she really means is that she has learned how to put up with his irritable ways. Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says: "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal." Hite's Drug Store.

Some people seem to think that charity consists in giving advice.

The Best Underwear Made in America

Hanes Elastic Underwear

is not a new underwear. It has been an established success for many years. But, for the first time it is now being marketed under a trade-marked label.

It is such bang-up good underwear that we have always sold out our entire stock each year without any trouble.

IT IS A BETTER ARTICLE AT A COMMON PRICE

We are so situated that we can keep quality up to the highest notch, while keeping cost down to the last fraction of a penny.

To sell at 50c per garment and $1.00 per union suit. There are many finishing touches of extra value in Hanes Underwear that you'll find in no other 50c garment.

For instance: There is the improved cuff at the wrist and ankle, firmly knit to hug closely and prevent flaring out. There is the elastic collarette, put on in a special way which causes it to fit the neck snugly—never gaps and leaves the neck exposed. There are the pearl buttons which are of a quality with those used on dollar garments.

These, and other exclusive features, make Hanes Underwear the most comfortable, durable underwear possible to buy at this price.

TOOK IT ALL IN EARNEST

Two Women at the New Burlesque Could Explain Only One of the Situations.

They sat solemnly through "A Slice of Life," and they took it all in dead earnest. Not once did it occur to either of them—the earnest young woman in the polo coat, or her somewhat older companion, in a black serge suit and bonnet—that anything in the play might possibly be a joke.

But they plainly disapproved of the play. They thought the situation interesting, but they didn't like the acting. Mr. Hyphen-Brown's reference to his wife once as "Winifred" and again as "Penelope" they regarded as shocking bad taste or else evidence of a poor memory—they were not sure which.

It was when Mr. Hyphen-Brown has asked about "the child," and Mrs. Hyphen-Brown has reminded him that there is none. The girl in the polo coat gasped and said: "Why, how can that be?" and the woman in the black suit was staggered.

"Of course," she said. "Of course, dear, he is speaking of a child by a formal marriage!"—New York Evening Mail.

Widow Lost No Time.

Attorneys in probate court do not, as a rule, try to delay proceedings much. The moment that Judge Ross enters the door he is surrounded by lawyers who wish "just a minute" of his time, and he walks through a crowd of them to the bench.

A colored attorney walked rapidly into the courtroom, followed by a large colored woman. She had her sleeves rolled up to the elbows and appeared to have come from the wash tub. Her manner was businesslike.

Judge Ross went through the usual procedure. He read the will and asked the usual questions. Then he began making the usual notations.

"And when did he die?" the judge asked. "Jes' about a half hour ago," was the answer.—Indianapolis News.

Too Much Password.

Senator Bacon of Georgia passed a constituent around the capitol for a while and then, having some work to do on the floor, conducted his visitor to the senate gallery. After an hour or so the visitor approached a gallery doorkeeper and said:

"My name is Swate. I am a friend of Senator Bacon. He brought me here and I want to go out and look around a bit. I thought that I would tell you so I can get back in."

"That's all right," said the doorkeeper, "but I may not be here when you return. In order to prevent any mistake, I will give you the password, so you can get your seat again."

"What's the word?" Mr. Swate asked. "Idiosyncrasy."

"What?" "Idiosyncrasy."

"I guess I'll stay in," said Swate.—Washington Star.

Being Polite to Children.

There is a boy and a girl that I know, they are older than I am and they are so nice. Their father and mother never speak cross to them, always say "if you please" to them; treat them just as they treat grown-up folks, and the children are just as polite as grown-up folks and very careful not to hurt the feelings of their father and mother. I like to go there, it is so peaceful. We have splendid games, and when it is time for me to go home the mother says: "Now, my little man, you must say good-by, but you must come and see Willie some other day." And she gives me a big homemade cookie to eat, one with ear-away seed in it, and I am happy all the way home. I love that lady.—"Autobiography of a Baby" by Thomas L. Bradford, M. D.

His Problem.

Frost—When the whisk-broom is missing nowadays, I always wonder. Mrs. Frost—Wonder what? Frost—Whether we had it served as breakfast food or whether you're wearing it on your latest hat.—Harper's Bazar.

An Influence.

"What book do you think has exerted the most influence on that aggressive politician?"

"I don't know," replied Senator Sorghum, "but I think it must be an old-fashioned novel I vaguely remember, entitled: 'Put Yourself in His Place.'"

Gone to Waste.

"Has that young man nerve and originality?" "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "but he uses them all up in selecting funny hats."

Frills Needed

Brief Courses on Various Subjects Urged

By WILLIAM P. DUNN

OUR colleges, says Herbert Spencer, cater to the ornamental rather than to the useful in knowledge. And many are doubting if the old standbys and favorite course are really worth while—or rather if the time could not better be spent on other subjects. There are many who make the same criticism of our public schools.

This is an age, we are told, of specialization. The workman of the middle ages, of the great guilds, was a journeyman until he had learned all of his trade, even to the making of the tools required in that trade. Today those trades have been divided and subdivided and each subdivision constitutes a trade in itself. The professional man narrows himself to one branch of his profession and becomes an expert.

It is obviously impossible to acquire even a superficial knowledge of all the arts and sciences of today during one lifetime. However, the next best thing to possessing information on any subject is to know where to locate that information when you want it. To be sure, we have encyclopedias with their interesting, though sketchy, information, to which we may refer. But is it not a good idea to have in our schools a course in indexes of authorities and sources of information? That is, instead of cramming our heads full of facts and knowledge of the different arts and sciences, this course would present us with the keys of the different storage warehouses, where this merchandise is kept.

Instead of a "commit to memory" course, why not merely a skeleton course on broad general lines, with a knowledge of where to go to fill in the details? A too great knowledge of details often means a wrong perspective. With a broad foundation well laid in our school life, and a knowledge of where to go to find the materials needed to complete the structure, we could take up the work at any time in subsequent life and carry it on intelligently. The public library would then become the complement of our school system.

It would seem that we have already entered on this index course in our public schools. The knowledge given there of botany, physiology, Greek and Roman history, poetry, literature, languages, etc., is not very far reaching. But it is sufficient to act as an introduction to those fields and as a stimulus for wider and deeper knowledge of the subjects.

I believe, therefore, that too many subjects are not taught in our public schools. It is the one chance that most of the pupils will have of learning something of these subjects, to get even a bird's-eye view of those green pastures of knowledge. Reading, writing and arithmetic we shall have with us always. We shall have ample opportunity during our lifetime to improve in all three lines. Our daily newspaper will supply the reading, our everyday business, or household economy the arithmetic, and as for spelling, the phonetic, but erroneous, spelling of today may be the rule tomorrow. But the so-called "frills" of education—these are a luxury which, perhaps, were undreamed of but for our public school introduction.

Let us remind those who object to aught but the three R's being taught in our public schools that these brief courses on various subjects may be the seed falling on fertile soil. They may produce in young minds a desire to know more, and may yield fruit from soil that otherwise were sterile. The seed planted may blossom into flowers to cheer another-wise monotonous life. By all means let us have the frills.

Working for Small Firm Is Best

By C. B. EVERHAM

We are frequently advised that a young man should start to work for a large corporation, and I wish to say that unless he has some extraordinary abilities or what is known as a "pull," his best chance would be with a smaller firm.

I have worked for a railroad and know that only one out of every hundred employees is able to advance himself to responsible and paying positions. The other ninety-nine plod along from year to year with no appreciable difference in their work or salary, and are completely lost, so far as the real heads of the company are concerned. I am personally acquainted with two learned gentlemen who worked side by side for thirty-five years in the employ of this railroad and who are now receiving the munificent salary of $80 a month. Had they started with a smaller house either of them might have been independent by now. But even had they attempted something else after five or ten years of railroad life they probably would have had to return to the road again on account of their lack of experience in other lines.

In my opinion a young man ought to start in with a small but growing firm and learn the business from A to Z and stick to that firm until he becomes the right hand man of his employer. It would be well to choose a field where there is room for advancement and not get connected with a concern that has already reached the point where it can expand no more.

At any rate, if one can get in touch with his real employer and have him notice his progress it will help materially when the time for advancement comes.

Bad Effects of School Fire Drill

By E. W. CLEAVER, Cleveland

It is with pride that every loyal citizen looks upon our public schools, and there is certainly nothing left undone by the school board to insure the comfort, safety and health of the pupils.

Yet as the people are just getting over the effects of the prolonged severe cold weather it is, perhaps, now opportune to call attention to the fact that a large percentage of disease among children is attributable to that exercise termed "fire drill."

Commendable as the "fire drill" may be, it is certainly open to criticism if the life and health of school children are endangered by it. If the fire drill is being practiced during pleasant weather the efficiency attained would hardly be reduced during inclement weather.

Is there any sense or necessity in compelling little tots to practice the "fire drill" while the weather conditions are most unfavorable and to make them leave an overheated schoolroom and then stand shivering in the wind and slush without any wraps on, waiting for the signal to re-enter the schoolroom?

FLED FROM TROUBLE AND MEETS DEATH

Chinaman Is Slain in New York After Evading His Enemies in Cleveland.

New York—Len Chu Jung came from Cleveland to New York to escape threatened Tong trouble and found death at the end of his journey the other night. He was found lying wounded in the hallway of 22 Pell street after three revolver reports had sent Chinatown denizens scurrying for cover, and died at St. Gregory's hospital an-hour later.

The Four Brothers' society was holding its banquet, the third and last of the district's three big annual festivities, in the Chinese Delmonico's at 24, next door, when the shooting occurred. Much rice wine was spilled as members of the Four Brothers, dining under the Damoclean sword of On Leong vengeance, stampeded from the banquet hall.

Lieutenant Underhill and a half dozen detectives rushed up the stairs in 22 Pell street and found Len in the second floor hallway.

Ong Foon, a Hip Sing leader, went to the hospital to see if he could identify the victim. The man was dead when Ong Foon, accompanied by Detectives Mangin and Repstein arrived there. The Hip Sing member read two letters that had been found in the wounded man's pockets and said their contents indicated he had fled from Cleveland to escape enemies. One of the letters was addressed to Hang Lun Chang, who has a novelty store at 4 Doyers street.

Six Chinese are held at the Elizabeth street police station in connection with the shooting.

BOY OF THREE SMOKES PIPE

Massachusetts Infant Whose Regular Plaything Is Its Great Grandfather's Old "Dudeen."

Pelham, Mass.—Wilbur Rhodes Lovern, three years old, has smoked his great grandfather's pipe since he was a year old. When Wilbur was an infant and cried for something to play with his grandfather, to whom the pipe had descended, gave him the pipe. When Wilbur's mother discovered that he had learned to smoke, she tried in vain to break him of the habit.

"I took the pipe away from him for a time," the mother said, "but he made such a fuss I had to give it back."

He Cried for the Pipe.

When he does not have it he will whistle at a piece of wood and put it in his mouth and try to smoke it. When anybody passes by he will run out and ask for tobacco.

Mrs. Lovern fears the authorities will not permit her son to attend school unless he gives up smoking.

Probably Made a Hit

A young woman who presides over one of the kindergarten schools of Cambridge appeared at her desk recently attired in a new close-fitting skirt. With no thought other than the conducting of her regular routine work, the teacher went about her duties. She noticed, however, that one of her charges was paying little attention to his work, but following her with his eyes wherever she chanced to go. Approaching the little fellow with the intention of ascertaining the trouble, she said: "Well, Tommy—before she could go any further the youngster shook his boyish head and said: "Say, teacher, that's a classy skirt you've got on!"—Boston Post.

Marie Tempest's Nose

At the Leites musicale at the Waldorf-Astoria a young matron related a bon-mot of Marie Tempest's. "Miss Tempest's nose is frightfully pug, isn't it?" she began. "Well, I met her at a tea once, and she joked about her nose as if it belonged to someone else. "When the Creator," she said, "was looking for a nose for me he took you see, the first one that turned up."

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all that more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Women From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. SERIAL STORY

THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST

(Copyright, 1910, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)
24 SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blaine town, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan, attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Pontotowsky is a suitor and escort to Letty. Lord Galorey and a friend named Ruggles determine to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily; he can talk of nothing but Letty and this angers the Duchess. The westerner finds Letty ill from hard work, but she recovers and Ruggles and Dan invite her to supper. She asks Dan to build a home for disappointed theatrical people. Dan visits Lily for the time forgetting Letty, and later announces his engagement to the duchess. Letty refuses to sing for an entertainment given by Lily. Galorey tells Dan that all Lily cares for is his money, and it is disclosed that he and the duchess have been mutually in love for years. Letty sings at an aristocratic function, Dan escorting her home. Dan confronts Galorey and Lily together. Later he informs Letty that his engagement with Lily is broken, asks the singer to marry him, and they become engaged. Ruggles thinks the westerner should not marry a public singer.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

He wanted to tell her that the girl Dan married should be the kind of woman his mother was, but Ruggles couldn't bring himself to say the words. Now, as he sat near her, he was growing so complex that his brain was turning round. He heard her murmur:

"I told you I knew your act, Mr. Ruggles. It isn't any use."

This brought him back to his position and once more he leaned toward her and, in a different tone from the one he had intended to use, murmured:

"You don't know. You haven't any idea. I do ask you to let Dan go, that's a fact. I have got something else to propose in its place. It ain't quite the same, but it is clear—marry me!"

She gave a little exclamation. A slight smile rippled over her face like the sunset across a pale pool at dawn.

"Laugh," he said humbly; "don't keep in. I know I am old-fashioned as the deuce, and me and Dan is quite a contrast, but I mean just what I say, my dear."

She controlled her amusement; if it was that. It almost made her cry with mirth, and she couldn't help it. Between laughing breaths she said to him:

"Oh, is it all for Dan's sake, Mr. Ruggles? Is it?" And then, biting her lips and looking at him out of her beautiful eyes, she said: "I know it is—I know it is—I beg your pardon."

"I asked a girl once when I was poor—too poor. Now this is the second time in my life. I mean just what I say: I'll make you a kind husband. I am fifty-five, hale as a nut. I dare say you have had many better offers."

"Oh, dear," she breathed; "oh, dear, please—please stop!"

"But I don't expect you to marry me for anything but my money."

Ruggles put his cigar down on the edge of the table. He looked at his chair meditatively, he took out his silk handkerchief, polished up his glasses, readjusted them, put them on and then looked at her.

"Now," he said, "I am going to trust you with something, and I know you will keep my secret for me. This shows you a little bit of what I think about you. Dan Blair hasn't got a red cent. He has nothing but what I give him. There's a false title to all that land on the Bentley claim. The whole thing came up when I was home and the original company, of which I own three-quarters of the stock, holds the clear titles to the Blairtown mines. It all belongs now to me, if I choose to present my documents. Dan knows nothing about this—not a word."

The actress had never come up to such a dramatic point in any of her plays. With her hands folded in her lap she looked at him steadily, and he could not understand the expression that crossed her face. He heard her exclamation: "Oh, gracious!"

"I've brought the papers back with me," said the westerner, "and it is between you and me how we act. If Dan marries you I will be bound to do what old Blair would have done—cut him off—let him feel his feet on the ground, and the result of his own folly."

He had taken his glasses off while he made this assertion. Now he put them on again.

"If you give him up I'll divide with the boy and be rich enough still to hand over to my wife all she wants to spend."

She turned her face away from him and leaned her head once more upon her hands. He heard her softly murmuring under her breath, with an absent look on her face, accompanied by a still more incomprehensible smile.

"That's how it stands," he concluded.

She seemed to have forgotten him entirely, and he caught his breath when she turned about abruptly and said:

"My goodness, how Dan will hate being poor! He will have to sell all his stickpins and his motor cars and all the things he has given me. It will be quite a little to start on, but he will hate it, he is so very smart."

"Why, you don't mean to say—"

Ruggles gasped.

And with a charming smile as she rose to put their conversation at an end, she said:

"Why, you don't mean to say that you thought I wouldn't stand by him?" She seemed, as she put her hands upon her hips with something of a defiant look at the elder man, as though she just then stood by her pauperized lover.

"I thought you cared some for the boy," Ruggles said.

"Well, I am showing it."

"You want to ruin him to show it, do you?"

As though he thought the subject dismissed he walked heavily toward the door.

"You know how it stands. I have nothing more to say." He knew that he had signally failed, and as a sudden resentment rose in him he exclaimed, almost brutally:

"Why, You Don't Mean to Say That You Thought I Wouldn't Stand by Him?"

"I am darned glad the old man is dead; I am glad his mother's dead, and I am glad I have got no son."

The next moment she was at his side, and he felt that she clung to his arm. Her sensitive, beautiful face, all drawn with emotion, was raised to his.

"Oh, you'll kill me—you'll kill me! Just look how very ill I am; you are making me crazy. I just worship him."

"Give him up, then," said Ruggles steadily.

She faltered: "I can't—I can't—it won't be for long"—with a terrible pathos in her voice. "You don't know how different I can be: you don't know what a new life we were going to lead."

Stammering, and with intense meaning, Ruggles, looking down at her, said: "My dear child—my dear child."

In his few words something perhaps made her see in a flash her past and what the question really was. She dropped Ruggles' arm. She stood for a moment with her arms folded across her breast, her head bent down, and the man at the door waited, feeling that Dan's whole life was in the balance of the moment. When she spoke again her voice was hard and entirely devoid of the lovely appealing quality which brought her so much admiration from the public.

"If I give him up," she said slowly, "what will you do?"

"Why," he answered, "I'll divide with Dan and let things stand just as they are."

She thought again for a moment and then as if she did not want him to witness—to detect the struggle she was going through, she turned away and walked over toward the window and dismissed him from there.

"Please go, will you? I want very much to be alone and to think."

CHAPTER XXV.
Letty Lane Runs Away.
He had not got upstairs to his rooms at the Carlton before a note was handed him from the actress, bidding him to return at once to the Savoy, and Ruggles, his heart hammering like a trip hammer, rushed up to his rooms, made an evening toilet, for it was then half-past seven, threw his cravats and collars all around the place, cursed like a miner as he got into his clothes, and red almost to apoplexy, nervous and full of emotion, he returned to the rooms he had left not three hours before.

The three hours had been busy ones at the actress' apartment. Letty Lane's sitting-room was full of trunks, dressing bags and travelling paraphernalia. She came forward out of what seemed a world of confusion, dressed as though for a journey, even her veil and her gloves denoting her departure. She spoke hurriedly and almost without politeness.

"I have sent for you to come and see me here. Not a soul in London knows I am going away. There will be a dreadful row at the theater, but that's none of your affairs. Now, I want you to tell me before I go just what you are going to do for Dan."

"Who are you going with?" Ruggles asked shortly, and she flashed at him: "Well, really, I don't think that is any of your business. When you drive a woman as you have driven me, she will go far."

He interrupted her vehemently, not daring to take her hand. "I couldn't do more, I have asked you to marry me. I couldn't do more. I stand by what I have said. Will you?" he stammered.

She knew men. She looked at him keenly. Her veil was lifted above her eyes and its shadow framed her small pale face on which there were marks of utter disenchantment, of great en-ment. She said languidly: "What I want to know is, what you are going to do for Dan?"

"I told you I would share with him."

"Then he will be nearly as rich?"

"He'll have more than is good for him."

That satisfied her. Then she pursued: "I want you to stand by him. He will need you."

Ruggles lifted the hand he held and kissed it reverently. "I'll do anything you say—anything you say."

Downstairs in the Savoy, as Dan had done countless times, Ruggles waited until he saw her motor car carry her and her small luggage and Higgins away.

In their sitting-room in the Carlton a half-hour later the door was thrown open and Dan Blair came in like a madman. Without preamble he seized Ruggles by the arm.

"Look here," he cried, "what have you been doing? Tell me now, and tell me the truth, or, by God, I don't know what I'll do. You went to the Savoy. You went there twice. Anyhow, where is she?"

Dan, slender as he was, he was balding Ruggles' great frame, shook the elder man as though he had been a terrier. "Speak to me. Where has she gone?"

He stared in the Westerner's face; his eyes bloodshot. "Why in thunder don't you say something?"

And Ruggles prayed for some power to unloose his thickening tongue.

Syphoned Oxygen.
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean are continuously supplied with air, else life in the depths could not be supported. Dr. Carl Hering suggests in Science that the oxygen is syphoned down by pressure. Those who have witnessed the opening of a champagne bottle understand that a liquid will hold more gas in stable solution under pressure than when unconfined. The spraying of the waves saturates the surface of the ocean with air. The layer beneath, which is under higher pressure, in turn forces the captured air particles still lower, until at the utmost depth the richest content of oxygen should be found.

Tailored Hats That Are to Be Worn by the Summer Girl

JUST to look at the new shapes in tailored hats transports one to mid-summer, to visions of beaches and mountains, to vacation time and outings. The shape is the thing in these hats, with trimming of the simplest character. Shapes have been carefully considered and are so well balanced and beautiful that trimmings are mere accessories used to accentuate its lines, to repeat or reflect its expression or to accentuate its peculiarities.

These hats must be properly poised on the head and the trimming placed to suit the face of the wearer. But it must serve a purpose on the hat and not interfere with its hues or contradict them.

Two models in white and black are shown here trimmed with white wings and ribbon. The large round shape is faced with black velvet. The black milans and hems trimmed with white are very chic.

Colored hats of braid, with rolling brim made on wire frames and fringed with changeable taffeta, are used for darker hats. Immense bows of ribbon, with standing loops, form the trims. Bordered and fancy ribbons are used for these big ribbon decorations and loops are wired to keep them in the upstanding positions.

Although but one trimming material is used, or at most two, on this class of millinery—ample quantities are necessary of this single material. Bows are very large, sweeping like wings, from the body of the hat. But some small fancy feather ornaments are effectively used on small shapes. They are vivid in coloring as a rule, with cerise and primrose the favorites and the strongest of bright greens next. It is already settled that black and white will have a great vogue in the coming mid-summer.

REVIVAL OF COIFFURE STYLE

Eighteenth Century Idea in Hair Dressing Likely to Be Established Again.

The sketch shows an effective revival of the 18th century style of hair dressing. In this case the hair is arranged low on the forehead and is held in place by a band of silver ribbon. At the back it is arranged in loose curls and coils and one careless curl is permitted to fall over the shoulders.

The latter head-dress would look exceedingly well if accompanied by a picturesque dress of flowered taffetas.

pale mauve flowers on a silver gray ground, for example. The dress ought to have flat panniers at the sides and a large fichu of dainty muslin and lace over the shoulders. The short sleeves should also be finished off with lace and muslin frills.

Notions.
Smart little tailored costumes in snowy white whipcords, beautifully braided, or white serges, also braided, are ready for the southern season.

Separate blouses of navy blue crepe de chine are relieved by revers and collars of white satin.

Taffeta will be much used in fashioning the dresses and suits for spring wear.

The importance of brocaded velvet in the realm of evening wraps is undented.

Shoes are becoming a little more ornamental in their effect.

PARIS TAKES UP NEW COLORS

Jade and Malachite Green Are the Latest to Find Favor in the Gay French Capital.

While Paris has almost exhausted its favoritism for red, which has been going on since last summer, it has just begun its enthusiasm for jade and malachite green.

Both of these are lovely, bold tones that need veiling on a number of women, or otherwise they would be washed out.

When they are used without veiling the upper part of the bodice is made of tulle in white or flesh pink, to take the shade of the green from the face; and when a woman cannot wear the unrelieved tone it is veiled with a dark shade of green tulle instead of black tulle.

On these gowns there is an opportunity to use many jade and malachite stones as trimming and as ornaments.

Rajah Ring.

Durban interest has crept into the jeweler's realm, and hence the very latest things in this line are the Indian armlets (to be worn on the bicep arm or over the sleeve) and the rajah ring. The latter is a facsimile of the ring worn on the little toe of the dancing girls of India. It reaches below the joint of the finger, and rests on the back of the hand. In trying it on most women place it upside down. It makes a striking unique dinner ring.

Nearly all the armlets are coiled serpent designs, for the serpent is a lucky emblem in India.

Derby of Straw.

Taffeta and hemp are being used to make some of the smartest of stick hats. Panama hats are also being shown, these being very large and trimmed with wings as a rule.

But one of the most popular shapes seems to be the derby, made on much the same lines of the derby of the winter. This is rather severe, but is becoming to the young woman, and it cannot be denied that when it is becoming it is very, very smart in appearance.

Use Tweezers.

When pulling threads from hem-stitching or when working towels with cross-stitch embroidery, use a pair of tweezers.

The fingers will be saved in this manner.

All who have suffered from sore fingers due to pulling threads will realize the value of this suggestion.

Tweezers are excellent for pulling bastings. Try them and you will always have a pair handy.

Another Use for Medicine.

A Chicago family which employs as its butler an old-fashioned negro was constantly annoyed by the doorbell of the house getting out of order. On several occasions an electrician who used some sort of white powder in his work, had been called in to fix the bell.

One evening when there were guests at dinner, one of them complained of a sore throat. The mistress of the house turned to the butler and said:

"Sam, when dinner is over, go to the drug store and get a small bottle of Dobell's solution."

"Before de Lawd!" exclaimed the negro in genuine distress. "Is dat do-bell 'out' of ordah ag'in?"—Popular Magazine.

COFFEE HURTS One in Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse."

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I was using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?"

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change."

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum." "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Board of Trade Pickled for Fair and Going To Celebrate.

On Monday evening next a Pickle Supper will be served at the K. P. Hall from 5:00 to 8:00 p. m., standard. This is under the auspices of the Board of Trade and is given to celebrate the acquisition of a new industry. Though possibly not as important as a factory employing a large number of men, it is nevertheless a valuable addition to our business interests inasmuch as it will give to our farming community one more permanent industry and bring to East Jordan some business which it now loses.

Williams Bros. Co., who are to erect the new pickling station at East Jordan, have sent to the Board of Trade a liberal supply of their products for the supper Monday night and it will be of interest to test the quality of the goods which they produce.

Presbyterian Church Notes
Rev. A. D. Grigsby, Pastor.

Mother's Day will be observed next Sunday morning in the Presbyterian church at 10:30. Its object is to honor and uplift motherhood, and to give comfort and happiness to "the best mother who ever lived—your mother." A white carnation or some other white flower should be worn by every one present, and all are earnestly invited. Sons and daughters could not please mothers any better than going to church with them. Some of the real old ladies have not been able to attend public worship for years. See to it then and accompany them once more, it may be the last time. Live that day at least as your mother would have you live it. Appropriate address by pastor and music by choir. Sunday School at 11:45.

Y. P. S. C. E. at 6:45 and all young people are made welcome.

Mr. Bisbee sang very acceptably a beautiful solo last Sunday morning. The young people's choir and Mr. Webster on violin accompanied on pipe organ made a delightful musical program in the evening.

COMPOSER FOND OF SOLITUDE
So M. Massenet Discourages Long Visits From Friends, but Without Giving Offense.

The composer, M. Jules Massenet, has a beautiful estate at Egreville, and he does most of his work there, because in Paris he is rarely free from visitors. But Egreville is not so very far away from Paris, and occasionally his friends go out there and with the best intentions in the world disturb Jules Massenet at his work.

Massenet, however, never lets his friends disturb him very long. He has a neat way of suggesting their departure. He receives them cordially and in answer to the inevitable phrase of admiration for his house and grounds he always says exactly the same thing. "Yes," says M. Massenet, "the principal charm of this place is that the railway communications are so bad. The only decent train to get you out here brings you here at 1 o'clock, and to get back to Paris with anything like comfort you will have to leave again at 2 o'clock."

But one day a friend who had taken a country house ten or twelve miles away arrived on a visit. He and his son had come on bicycles. "My dear friend," said Massenet, "in these days of the motor car bicycling is horribly dangerous. I wish you would promise me to give it up."

Way to Remove Tattoo Marks.

Once tattooed, always tattooed, was formerly the rule; but a French army surgeon, Dr. Tranchant, has discovered a method of removing tattoo marks, whether made with India ink or lampblack. According to La Nature, the process consists of first rubbing the skin until a thin layer of the surface is worn away, then applying a mixture of lime, slacked just before use, and powdered phosphorus. The tattooed part having been coated with this paste, a piece of gauze is laid over it, covered with a bandage. The dressing is removed after 48 hours. The scab is allowed to dry in the air, and comes away in about a fortnight, without leaving a scar. If any trace of the tattooing then remains, the treatment is repeated. Dr. Tranchant claims to have applied this treatment in a great many cases with perfect success.

The Way It's Done.
"Doctor, I want you to look after my office while I'm on vacation."
"But I've just graduated, doctor. Have had no experience."
"That's all right, my boy. My practice is strictly fashionable. Tell the men to play golf and ship the lady patients off to Europe."

ELECTRIC HOTEL FOR PARIS
Current Will Do Everything In the Proposed Structure Except Pay Guest's Bill.

The interesting news comes from Paris that a hotel will be built there in which all the domestic service will be performed by electricity. If the promoters of the scheme keep their promises, everything will be done by electricity except the guests' payment of their bills. Even then they can give the cashier a shock by refusing to pay.

There will be no waiters, no bell boys, no coat boys, no chambermaids, and consequently no tips. If a guest arrives home at 2 a. m. all he will have to do is to touch a button, which will turn an electric sun, and then he can say to his wife:

"My dear, you're really getting lazy! Look at me: I'm up and dressed!"

If he feels that he needs a cocktail, he can touch another button. One touch brings a martini, two whiskey, three a Manhattan, four vermouth, five an ambulance. In answer, a dumb waiter rises through the floor either to bring the desired brace, or, when need be, to lower the guest to the ambulance.

The hotel promoters lay much stress on the fact that all their waiters are dumb. In place of the ordinary Swiss who only stand and wait, instead of running and serving, there will be automatons run by electricity and guaranteed not to spill soup down your back or creamed asparagus in your lap. The dining table will be decorated with flowers raised by intensive electrical culture in both winter and summer, for there will be no seasons in this hotel; push a button and you're warmer than when you see another fellow walking with the "only dear one on earth," push another button and you're colder than when the other fellow frigidly asks, "What the devil are you doing here?"

One of the features of the hotel will be an electric orchestra, in which all kinds of stringed instruments will apparently play of their own accord.

The inventor, a Frenchman named Gloria Knap, who has spent years experimenting with the various devices, asserts that they are now all absolutely perfect, and has formed a company under the name "Societe des Hotels Electriques" for the purpose of building electric hotels in every big city throughout the world.—New York World.

ALASKA'S TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM

AMERICAN RY IN GOLD BEARING MOUNTAINS

ALASKA'S greatest problem is transportation. And Alaska has problems of vital interest to every man in the United States who hopes for development of the country and for a square deal. People may fuss about the coal lands, may dispute about governmental action, may shiver at the thought of long and severe winters, but still the real problem before the great country of Alaska is transportation—not craft.

It is not every man who has taken time to consider Alaska as a part of the United States. It is not every man who has taken the trouble to learn that every Alaskan harbor south of Cook's inlet, on 60 degrees north latitude, is ice-free and open to navigation the year round. At the same time it is a well known fact that the ports of Montreal, Quebec, St. John, Albany and Buffalo are closed absolutely to navigation during the winter months. And the commerce of these Atlantic and lake ports is tremendous when considered with the shipping of the country year in and year out, writes A. H. Harris in the Los Angeles Times. As a matter of fact, the only important ports of Alaska that are closed by the severe weather of winter are Nome, St. Michaels and Fairbanks. Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway, Cordova, Valdez and Seward enjoy at least a weekly mail service from the United States by steamer.

Alaska, a country rich in minerals, in timber and in agricultural possibilities, 12 times the area of Ohio, has about 500 miles of railroad, operated by eight companies. Five of these roads are purely local, catering to the traffic of the mines in their respective territory. The other three, the Copper River and Northwestern, the White Pass and Yukon and the Alaska Northern, are here entitled to the title of railroads. They are considered on the basis of railroads in the United States proper. The White Pass and Yukon alone furnish transportation facilities to the interior of Alaska by way of the Yukon river, partly through Canadian territory, with only 112 miles of track all told.

As the Yukon river freezes during a long period in winter, the White Pass road can only be used advantageously during the summer months. And it may be worth mentioning in passing that this railroad was built with London capital in an effort to develop that part of the great north country under the rule of the crown. In doing so it was necessary to pass through American territory to reach a port on the Pacific ocean. Even with the handicap of partial or complete idleness during the severe weather of winter, the road was a financial success from the beginning of operation.

Use Electric Cars.

At Seward a standard gauge road has been constructed for 72 miles and surveyed for 700 miles, including branch lines, through the very heart of Alaska. This road, the Alaska Northern, gives very good service with electric cars daily, and with steam freight trains as demand requires. The company does not attempt to operate in winter. Along the right of way of this road is the dog trail between Seward and the Iditarod mining district, used in winter as the only means of transportation.

At Valdez there is but little track laid, but the beginning of a road to the Fairbanks district has been made. The government trail to Fairbanks is one of the best in the country, and its building resulted in the opening of an immensely rich country tributary to Fairbanks and the Tanana river, and in developing a great gold-producing district. The Tanana River railroad, which is in 65 degrees north latitude, is enabled to operate trains all the year round.

Cordova, Valdez and Seward are and will be the real ports of Alaska. Skagway is an important port, but is mainly used in winter as the starting point for Dawson, which is in Canada, and not in Alaska, as many Americans seem to think. These three seaports are the natural termini for railroads to the interior, and the only places where the commerce of the country could be handled cheaply and successfully. Cordova is easily the railroad center of all Alaska, having more than 200 miles of track connected with the terminals on the coast. The Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate operates the road and gives pretty decent service. A man can take his camp equipment in 24 hours to interior points that before the advent of the road required months of unremitting toil to reach.

While railroad transportation is the great problem in Alaska, the building of roads and trails, especially wagon roads, is of great importance. In a country of such magnificent distances as Alaska claims, where much of the road-building must of necessity be in mountainous districts, the expense of constructing highways is enormous. And the system of construction so far employed has been piecemeal. Up to date the Alaska road commission has been handicapped for means to do the work necessary to meet the demands of settlements let alone to build feeders out into the country where the demand for roads is strong and continuous.

Good Roads Draw People.

In the building of roads and trails in Alaska Americans have much to learn from the Canadians, whose work in the Dawson country has put the average American road to shame. There is but little if any difference between the country on the American side of an imaginary line and that on the side of the Canadians, yet in the roads alone there is difference enough to designate the flag under which the work was done. On the Canadian side there are more people, drawn largely by the fact that they can travel, than there are on the side of the United States, and on one side is a well drained, smooth road with minimum grades, fit for automobile traffic, while on the American side strips of mud and rocks and roots are ruinous to man's body and soul. The Canadians have realized the need of permanent development, while the American has merely reached out for exploitation and profit.

When Americans and the United States congress get in as close touch with Alaska and her needs as have Canadians and the Canadian parliament with the needs of Canadian Alaska, then will come the end of Alaska's troubles. For at the bottom of it all is ignorance. Ignorance of its immense area; ignorance of its climate, varied and peculiar though it may be; ignorance of its resources aside from gold and coal; ignorance of its importance in the commerce of the world, and, worst of all, ignorance of its people. The most widespread and injurious misconceptions are probably those regarding the climate and the people. The generally accepted notion is that Alaska is a land of perpetual snow and ice, inhabited mainly by Eskimo, while the facts are that not one-third of the area of American Alaska is within the arctic circle and that the majority of the population is white, a sturdy mixture of the best elements of the Caucasian race. In other words, the people of Alaska are of the same stock as those who built Oregon, Washington and California, that sturdy class which has ever been in the forefront of pioneering since the days of Plymouth Rock.

These people have troubles, but the greatest obstacle to progress is lack of transportation. And the solution is easy—money and brains. Talk is said to be cheap, but did you ever take into consideration the actual cost of a session of congress?

When she entered the studio at 4 o'clock she still felt an utter lack of control over herself.

The Little Professor

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.)

The little professor's eyes scanned the row of girls whose right hands beat time to the movement of his baton while they sang an exercise in solfeggio.

"Miss Vance, you are out singing," he said without stopping the rhythm.

Nadine Vance looked at him and a dull red crept up even to the line of her softly waving hair; her eyes were brooding and somber. She made an effort to sing, but no sound issued from the lips that were trembling.

"Why do you not sing?" he asked in his kindly manner.

Nadine's heavy eyes were again raised to his and the hunted look of a deer at bay sent an expression of gratuity into the professor's face.

"I cannot sing today," Nadine said in a hard, jerky voice. "It doesn't matter, anyway—I am giving up the class this week."

A swiftly hidden emotion swept across the professor's eyes; then he went on with the rhythmic movement exercise.

But the large class of girls, who one and all adored the little professor, felt strangely antagonistic toward Nadine Vance. In some way she had turned harmony into discord. It was with a certain sense of relief that the hour ended and the little professor dismissed his class with a kindly, paternal smile for each girl as she left the studio.

Nadine Vance would have slipped out, too, but she found her escape blocked by his detaining hand.

"Miss Vance," the professor's voice and eyes were serious, even grave. "I want to talk to you. Can you come here at about 4 o'clock this afternoon?"

"No," Nadine put in swiftly. The girl's usually sweet, caressing voice was hard and strained. The professor's searching eyes did not leave her.

"I Want to Talk to You This Afternoon at 4."

face. "It will do no good to talk," she continued jerkily. "I have determined to give up this branch of music."

The professor's voice took on a compelling note.

"I want to talk to you this afternoon at 4," he took her hand as he often did when parting from his pupils. "You will come?"

The color came fitfully into Nadine's cheeks, then it left her with a sudden, tense whiteness.

"Yes, I will come. But you are compelling me to do something for which I know you will be sorry." She turned and was gone.

The professor went slowly and thoughtfully back to the piano.

"She is unstrung—some love affair." He communed with himself over the keys. "What strange vagaries the feminine temperament indulges in!" The professor's fingers were playing the rhapsody of his own mind and he was not quite conscious that the inner man was seeking to forget the hours between the present and the hour of 4.

Nadine dressed with unusual taste. She had sufficient of the feminine weakness struggling with temperament to realize the value of becoming clothes. Her costume was ravishing.

"He will probably not even notice whether I have on heliotrope or burnt orange." A wistful little smile played about her lips. But in truth she knew that nothing escaped the professor's keen eyes, not even the gradually increasing turmoil in her own heart.

"And now he is going to drag me self away from me—I know he is." A blush tingled over Nadine's entire being and she dropped her lids over the shamed eyes reflected in the mirror.

When she entered the studio at 4 o'clock she still felt an utter lack of control over herself.

"Now, Miss Vance," the hint of an eternal smile in his eyes, and which was a part of the professor, mingled oddly with the gravity of his voice, "you and I are going to have a good talk." He seated her on the wide couch and dropped into his big arm chair. He looked steadily into her great brooding eyes for a moment and said tenderly, "My nightingale's eyes are shadowed, her song is silenced and"—the little professor put in his usual portion of the lighter vein—"her features are extraordinarily beautiful."

A fleeting smile spent itself quickly in Nadine's eyes. Then she looked at him in mute appeal, but she remained silent.

"Come, tell your old teacher all about it. You are fighting something out in your own heart little girl, and it doesn't pay. Something is bound to give way."

As the words "give way" left his lips Nadine felt the click of a key open the door of her heart. She cast a quick glance at the professor and slipped over, and onto the wide arm of his chair.

And because the little professor was a strong man and of well-controlled emotions he in no way showed surprise, but only looked at her with his paternal smile in his eyes. He could feel the vibrations from her slender body and wondered at the pent-up struggle within her. He was not prepared for the dry huskiness which spoke of deep feeling when after a moment she found voice.

"Call me childish, unstrung—anything you like," she buried her head in her arms on the back of his chair and drew a few spasmodic breaths. "But I'm not—I have struggled and fought against this thing called love. But it is obsession, tyranny—a dominating master. And I am utterly weary trying to escape it."

Nadine glanced shyly up. Her eyes were no longer brooding, but luminous and wonderful. The little professor felt a subtle warmth stealing over him. Unconsciously he drew in a deeper breath of her fragrance. He wondered, a trifle apprehensively, just what the faint stirring within the depths of his being might portend.

Nadine's voice continued in low-pitched, emotional cadence. She dropped her head again on her arms and spoke almost to herself. "Perhaps if I unburden my thoughts to you I may in a measure escape the bondage if not the obsession. It may be that in sharing my secret I may gain back the power of song, of laughter, and win a few moments' respite from this unutterable longing, this pent up love that is shadowing every gleam of happiness in life."

She ceased speaking, but the little professor was looking with unseeing eyes at the white hand that lay idle on her lap; he had scarcely been hearing her words, for the realization had stolen over him that something big and desperately necessary to his happiness was being dragged out of his reach.

Suddenly, and with a force undreamed of, he turned and swept Nadine off the arm of his chair and into his arms.

"Stop! Don't tell me anything more about this love of yours—I cannot stand it!" The little professor was trembling and his voice was even more husky than Nadine's own. "You have breathed your low tones into my ear and the scent of your hair in my nostrils and now your heart is pounding against my own—and when you have set my soul quivering with love for you do you think I am going to stand by and let you talk of love for some other man? You can struggle all you like, but I am going to hold you for my own!"

As suddenly as he had taken her he let go his grasp, with a contrite realization of what he had done. "Forgive me, Nadine; it all came over me so suddenly—just how dear you are to me." The little professor made a brave attempt at his kindly, paternal smile. "Can you forgive me now and leave me—"

But with a long-drawn sigh of contentment Nadine crept back into his arms and twined her arms about him.

"Whom did you think I loved?" she asked him.

Women Aviators.

The first woman to fly in a heavier than air machine was Madame Cherep Peltier, a French sculptress. The flight was accomplished in 1908 and she was a passenger in a Voisin type machine, M. Delagrangé acting as pilot.

This was in Turin, Italy. In 1909 Henry Farham carried a woman passenger aloft, and the occurrence was considered of sufficient importance to cable around the world.

Now seven countries are able to boast at least one licensed woman aviator. France has three or four, America has but two.

Madame de la Roche, erroneously termed "Baroness," is entitled to the distinction of being the pioneer of the women fliers of the world. Madame de la Roche began learning to control her flying machine at the time when it was most extraordinary for a woman to go aloft at all.—Leslie's.

Nothing hurts an egotist like the refusal of people to pay any attention to him. The average man's way of forgiving an enemy is meaner than his refusal to do so.

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race. A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital force of the body burns brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERNATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home. I was afflicted with Rheumatism, B. C. I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines."

AN EXCUSE FOR HUSBANDS

Discovery of Woman Who Has Spent Twenty Years in Studying Domestic Problems.

A heavy load of moral responsibility should never be foisted upon a man in the first flush of youth. If it is, he is almost sure to let it slide off when he arrives at years of maturity, and all sorts of complications are liable to follow. Mary Austin, who wrote "The Arrow Maker," explained these things and several others to the members of the Legislative league at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"I have been spending a good deal of time lately at the domestic relations court," she said in elucidation of her statement concerning the overfrightened young man, "and I have learned that in a great majority of cases the man 40 or thereabouts who has grown tired of his wife, because her beauty has faded and refuses to support her any longer, so that she has to appeal to the courts, was compelled to go to work when he was thirteen or fourteen to help maintain his parents or brothers and sisters. By the time he reaches middle life his moral muscles, which were strained and stretched beyond their proper capacity when they were still soft and untrained, have become feeble, if they haven't snapped entirely, and he can't be depended upon for anything."

Mrs. Austin admitted that what she had just said wasn't generally known, but she added that it was nevertheless absolutely true. She was sure of it, because she had spent 20 years studying just such problems.

GERMAN KNEW THE PIECE

Amusing Incident in Campaign to Encourage Respect for the National Anthem.

Mrs. William G. Boyd of Kingsbury place, an enthusiastic member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and former chairman of the Missouri state song committee, is directly responsible for the new order requiring all public concerts in this city to be concluded with "The Star Spangled Banner." During a talk with Park Commissioner Davis, in which the lack of respect shown the national air by St. Louisans in public places was deplored, Mrs. Boyd suggested a campaign of education as a remedy for the existing conditions. She is still laughing over the results of the attempt. She and her husband, with Commissioner Davis, visited Carr square on the evening of the first band concert, after the new order went into effect, thinking to see in the polyglot audience there a typical example of the masses' familiarity with the national air.

As soon as the first notes sounded the men in the party removed their hats, but all were alert for developments around them. Nobody appeared to notice the music except one big German, who gave vent to several disgusted grunts as it proceeded. Thinking to test him, Mr. Davis asked if he knew what that piece was.

"Know him? Ain't I a Cherman? Dot's 'Die Wacht am Rhein,' but mein Gott, how dey blays him!"—St. Louis Times.

Fashion Is Fashion.

"Why do all the women walk like ducks this year?" was the question put to a friend of mine, years since, by a younger brother.

He did not know that a quite new kind of corset had suddenly, during the summer months, "come in." To wear it meant change of gait and posture, eventually actual change of shape. Yet we all wore it—and doubtless went on praising the Venus of Melos as we did so.

The notion that, after we have learned from the scientists to deal in evolutionary periods of millions of years, we ought not naively to expect to alter the human form in a season or two, never occurred, I fancy, to any of us.

"Business is business," men are credited with saying, when invited to apply abstract laws of honor. "Fashion is fashion," women would surely say if invited to apply abstract laws of beauty.—XUantic.

Friend of Dumas.

There lives at St. Die, France, in a little commune near Rebaupal an old woman of good figure and undimmed eye, notwithstanding the fact that she was borne 111 years ago. Centenarians are not at all uncommon about the Vosges. Her name is Mme. Vry and for a long period she was in the service of Alexandre Dumas pere.

She has many recollections of the time spent at the house of the author of the "Trois Mousquetaires," and she describes Dumas as an excellent man but very fond of a good dinner, fowls being his specialty.

AFTER GRIP

Look Out for Trouble The after-effects of the Grip are apt to be serious, but a normal healthy condition may be restored in a surprisingly short time by Vinol.

Watertown, Wis.—"After a severe attack of the Grip my system was in a very weakened, nervous and run-down condition. I began taking Vinol with the very best results, and in a short time I began to feel like an entirely different person, and I am better and stronger than I have been for years."—Adelaide Gamm. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down, as Vinol, and we ask people in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it.

FAMILY'S WELLSPRING OF JOY

Hope of the Household Has Some Fun With His Anxious Relatives and a Safety Pin.

Uncle John flew down the back stairs! So great was his momentum that before he could stop himself he had gone half-way across the kitchen, and banged into the kitchen table. Turning, he rushed out of the kitchen, through the back hall, and out at the door, which he slammed behind him. Meanwhile Ellen, the nursemaid, stood before the telephone, and wildly fopped her hands, except when at regular intervals she needed them to take down the receiver in order to see if the line was still busy.

Upstairs a red-faced, squalling baby kicked and squirmed in the arms of its distracted mother. This strangling infant was the unhappy cause of all the excitement, for, so Ellen affirmed with tears in her eyes, it had swallowed a safety-pin. Although, to the mother, it seemed hours, it was in reality but a short time before Uncle John, puffing like a steam engine, returned. Behind him came the baby's father, wild-eyed and pale. At the same instant the doorbell frantically announced the doctor.

All three men tore up stairs into the nursery, where they formed a semi-circle round the human storm-center. Suddenly the baby stopped screaming to gaze in wide-eyed astonishment at the frantic men before him. Then he looked down at the floor, and murmured, "Pitty! pitty!" pointed to a large, bright safety-pin, which lay near at hand, provokingly innocent, on the nursery rug.—Youth's Companion.

CANADA HAS 5,000 HINDUS

Parliament of Religions in Chicago at World's Fair Time Started the Immigration.

The present Hindu population of Canada numbers about 5,000, all men, for no women are allowed to accompany them to Canada or to follow them after they have arrived and settled.

These are resident entirely in British Columbia and chiefly in the cities of Vancouver and Victoria and on the farms in the neighborhood, where they are industriously employed in the many forms of manual labor, for which they appear to have both special adaptation and desire.

I am indebted to Dr. Sunder Singh, the accredited agent for these people in Canada, for the statement as to how the eyes of the Hindus were first turned toward America and Canada and the first beginnings of modern emigration from India were inspired. He says that the visit of Hindu religious reformers to the great parliament of religions which was held in Chicago in connection with the world's fair first aroused these people to an appreciation of the advantages of occidental civilization and democratic institutions.

The educational work carried on by American missionaries in the high schools of India also prepared the way for a sowing of good seed in a ready soil, the fruitage of which turned the eyes of educated Hindus toward this new world. Economic conditions in India furthered a movement of emigrants to Canada in 1905, when, and continuing until 1907 not a few came to this country.—Victoria Daily Times.

THE FINEST IN THE STATE

Is the big modern plant recently purchased from the Booth Fisheries Co. by A. T. Washburne and located at foot of "Midway" on the bay shore, as a permanent home for the constantly increasing business in the manufacture of "Sanitary Rugs from old Carpets" (trade mark established 1898) in which the trade has been successfully established all over the United States on the excellence of products. This also gives much needed room to the Carpet Cleaning and retinting department, which includes a large sterilizing abator for purifying rugs and carpets. The cleaning department is fully equipped with all modern and time saving machinery devices run by electricity. Two of the largest rotary renovating machines for general cleaning and a powerful Vacuum machine 100 per cent. more powerful and efficient than the portable ones this latter is for fine rugs and orientalists. The plant is also equipped with three machines for the sewing of carpets of all kinds in the most approved manner with flat elastic seams. Thus with largest facilities, most up-to-date equipment, highest grade of workmanship, lowest possible prices, and prompt service, bespeaks a busy future for the Petoskey Rug Co. of which A. T. Washburne is proprietor and in which address all orders and correspondence should be addressed—NO AGENTS.—Petoskey Evening News, April 13, 1911.—Make your shipments as early as possible.

PALACE STILL STANDS EMPTY

Erected in 1902 for French Audit Department, Red Tape Has Kept It Unoccupied.

The Paris Matin tells a curious story of French government red tape. It says that in 1902 the government decided to create a special audit department, and a list of nominations to the various posts was drawn up. An aged reservist was appointed con-charge of a new building erected for the department in the Rue Cambon. He was told to take charge at once. The building was not quite finished, but within a month or two everything would be in order. Proudly the reservist took up his quarters in the vast unfinished palace. For days he walked through the immense building without seeing another human being. Fortunately he had taken the precaution to bring with him a kitten and a canary. For two years he saw no one and heard nothing, although he received his monthly salary with military punctuality. In 1905 the architect rushed in and breathlessly remarked that a little furniture would be brought into the building and it would then immediately become a busy hive. The kitten had become a gray-haired and tired-looking cat when, in 1908 the concharge, wearied by the strain of waiting, complained to the department heads. He was soothed by a promise that everything would soon be right. Finally his patience came to an end, and he resigned his position. The empty palace, which was erected at a cost of $1,200,000, is still awaiting one or two slight alterations.

Irresistible Impulse.

"I keep myself to myself," confided an old resident. "You modern young men are too much on the 'fall-fellow-well-meet' order. I boast of the fact that I did not speak to my next-door neighbor for ten years."

"How did you come to speak to him even then, sir?" we asked. "It must have been an extraordinary occasion."

"It was. The young jackanapes bought a new automobile."

"And you wanted a ride?"

"Sir! I am no grafter. Nor would I ride in one of the things for any consideration. No, sir. But the machine was new to him, and I couldn't resist the temptation to go over and give him some advice about running it."—Boston Traveler.

To Foster American Shipping.

The Honolulu Bulletin announces that "the Home Industry League of Hawaii is starting a movement in aid of the American merchant marine by inducing shippers to divide their trans-pacific shipping among American bottoms and otherwise foster the patronage of vessels flying the 'American flag.' That journal also calls attention to the desire in the Philippines for a direct steamship line between Manila and the United States, with Honolulu as the half way point.

REV. CHAS. SAGER SAYS

August 22, 1905

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, 60 Ann St., New York City.

Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Kidney Pills (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biogottin) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of, that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,

REV. CHAS. SAGER, Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.), N. Y.

On Dec. 8, 1901, Mr. Sager wrote Mr. Abbott: "My health is very good."

If you will write Mr. Abbott he will gladly furnish you any further information you desire.
