The Public Schools

Fall Term Begins Monday
September 2nd

The public schools will open in all departments next Monday, September 2nd for the work of the new school year. We expect to begin work the first day, not the second nor the third day, and your child will start off with a handicap if he fails to enroll the first day. Vacation trips should not be prolonged nor other cause of a tardy beginning permitted. It is expected that the text books will be on hand at Spring's Drug Store so that pupils may come provided. Students of the high school should first enroll and classify before procuring text books.

In order to have an excellent school there must be pupils of high quality as well as a highly competent teacher. The school is a cooperative enterprise of the utmost value. There is none greater in any community. School board, taxpayers, parents, and children must all contribute their best. Thoughtful parents realize how much larger is the scope of their duty than merely to send the child to school. His physical well-being must be looked after. He must have comfortable clothing, nourishing food, abundant sleep, and be kept neat and clean. This is quite a contract in a family of four or five. Especial care should be given to the eyes, ears and teeth. So important is this regarded in many cities that medical supervision is provided at public expense. Each child should be supplied with implements of his trade, text-books, pencils, tablets, etc., and this promptly to avoid loss of valuable time through vexatious delays. In this district an unusually large part of the pupil's equipment is supplied at public expense. All his necessary material except pens and pencils, his drawing and music material, and supplementary reading in addition to the circulating library. Taxpayers who have no children join cheerfully with parents in sharing this burden, so that the children of the poorest may have their chance at the best the schools can do for them.

In view of this generous public support of the schools, it is particularly incumbent upon all parents to keep the children in school without making it necessary to resort to the compulsory law. The school authorities must enforce this law and this is not at all a pleasant duty. To keep the children in school calls for sacrifice on the part of parents amounting in some cases almost to heroism, but nevertheless it is clearly the parent's duty. Parents do not own the child's time. He must have his chance, his rights are paramount to the parents' rights—so says the state. Children in good health, over 7 and under 16 years of age must be kept in school, public or parochial, unless they have completed the eighth grade. Where extreme need exists the school board may grant labor permits in certain cases to children over 14 years of age. We give herewith the names of the teachers and their positions. We hope that the patrons of the school may early become acquainted with them in the promotion of helpful cooperation in looking after the best interests of the children. Acquaintance often prevents painful misunderstandings.

New Buildings

Now Under Construction at the Fair Grounds.

Work is being pushed at the Fair Grounds in preparation for the coming meeting of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society, September 10-13.

The new Sheep and Swine Barn is now practically completed. It is situated between the Speed and Cattle Barns. The size is 36x66 feet with ample accommodations for thirty pens. An arrangement has been perfected whereby the loading and unloading of stock will be simplified.

Work on the new Grange Hall started Monday. This building is being built by the Charlevoix County Pomona Grange, No. 40 and is under the supervision of a committee consisting of H. L. Olney, E. B. Ward and Peter Koudson. The Grange, one of the main factors in our Agricultural Society, decided about a year ago to construct a hall on the grounds to use as a rest room. The new building is to be 24x40 feet with an assembly and rest room—24x28 feet. Dressing rooms, smoking rooms, and toilets will be additional features of the building. The building is being constructed between the new dining hall and the main entrance.

Year, Fourth Grade:
Alice L. Eaton, Graded Cert. Central Normal, first year, Third Grade.
Genie Thompson, third year, Second Grade.
Eva M. White, third year First Grade.
Martha Frieberg, Life Kg. Cert. Ferris Inst. fifth year Kindergarten.
Catherine Winters, third year W. S. Principal Grammar.

Theodosia Brewer, third year W. S. Intermediate Room.
Maude Ors, fourth year, 2nd Primary Room.
Neva Jenkins, Life Kg. Cert. Alma College, first year, 1st Primary.

Mary DeWitt, first year, Jordan River School.

Of the twenty-one members of the teaching force, thirteen were with us last year; the eight new teachers have been selected with great care we believe. Two of them, Miss Mary DeWitt and Miss Flora Porter, are young ladies so favorably known in East Jordan that they need no further recommendations, the other six have excellent endorsements as students and teachers.

The new members of the high school faculty are Miss Nettie M. Willis, of Sioux Falls, S. D.; Miss Fredrica Johnson, of Big Rapids; and Miss Flora Porter of East Jordan. Miss Willis has completed three years of her course in the University of Minnesota; she has taught several years in rural and graded schools in South Dakota, North Dakota and Utah. She taught science one year in the high school of Hawarden, Iowa. Miss Johnson in June 1912 completed the two year course in the Ferris Institute; securing a life certificate as a commercial teacher. Miss Porter graduated from Oberlin University in June also, having specialized in history and English. One offense only can be charged against Miss Johnson and Miss Porter—they are both young and inexperienced as teachers.

Miss Marguerite Tows of Detroit, will have charge of the seventh grade. She secured a life certificate from the State Normal College last June. Several members of the faculty at Ypsilanti speak in highest term of liberality and personality as a teacher. Miss Hazel B. Nicloy is a Charlevoix county girl, a graduate of Boyne City high school and of the graded course for grammar teachers at the Central Normal School, Mt. Pleasant. She taught the past year with good success in upper grammar grades at Northville, Mich. She will teach the fifth grade. Miss Alice Eaton of Coleman has a primary graded certificate from the Central Normal School. She has taught in the second and third grades of Coleman during the past two years. She has been assigned to the third grade. Miss Cruise has been transferred to the second and third grades on the West Side. Miss Nava Jenkins of Harbor Springs is a graduate of the High School of that place and of a two year kindergarten course at Alma College. She will have charge of the first primary room, West Side. Miss Mary DeWitt, a member of the class of 1912 of the East Jordan high school, will have charge of the Jordan river school. She has taken a course at the Central Normal summer school in preparation for her work.

We have confidence that the high qualifications of this band of teachers guarantees a successful year for our schools, because our teachers will receive the hearty support of all in the future as in former years. Let all work together from the very first day, to make this the banner year in the history of East Jordan schools.

The Primaries.

Lindquist Lands Congressional Honors Easily.

"The Old Guard" Retained Except Probate Judge.

Probably the greatest surprise of the republican primary nominations of last Tuesday was the landslide throughout the Eleventh Congressional District, in favor of Francis O. Lindquist "the man from Greenville."

Mr. Lindquist though wholly unknown in this section carried nearly every precinct in the county by substantial majorities over Congressman Dodds and Dennis E. Alward.

For Representative in State Legislature, Herman I. McMillan of this city defeated Messrs. Padlock and Mears by about 94 majority.

For Judge of Probate, Servetus A. Correll defeated Judge J. M. Harris and Atty. E. N. Clark by about 95 majority.

Outside of the above the present corps of county officials were retained. Richard Lewis was nominated for County Clerk by about 633 majority. Daniel S. Payton for Treasurer by about 246 majority. Romeo A. Emery for Register of Deeds received a majority of 177; Pros. Atty Dwight H. Fitch a majority of 73.

The Good Roads Bonding Proposition was hopelessly snowed under.

FLYING IN FLORIDA.

Man and Machine Who Come To Our Fair Gives Successful Exhibit.

From an official report of Stroebels latest aeroplane and hydroplane performance at St. Augustine, Fla., the following is quoted:

"Dobell was the first to make a trial flight from the water. When he got into the air he turned his plane in the direction of the Spanish Fort and flew almost a mile before circling. Returning, he sported with the yachts and various craft which dotted the lake, by swooping down and then rising. His highest altitude was about three thousand feet. He was about an hour and fifteen minutes in the air, and during the time covered a distance of many miles. All of his flying was done in plain view of the crowds on the pier and his graceful spials and right and left turns excited unanimous admiration. It was perhaps the most graceful and cleverly executed hydroplane flight ever witnessed in the south. When he finally alighted on the water, Dobell, instead of killing his engine reduced its speed, a little and rode along on his pontoons on the surface of the water to within a foot of the place from which he started."

Dobell and the machine referred to above will make two flights daily at the Charlevoix County Fair.

"The Shepherd of the Hills"

Harold Bell Wright, the author of "The Shepherd of the Hills," which comes to the Temple Theatre on September 13th is conceded to be the most popular American novelist. No modern author's books have had anything like the sale that has been accorded to Mr. Wright's works.

Nearly everyone is familiar with the characters in "The Shepherd of the Hills." They are people out of the ordinary fun of life, people whose veins run good, rich, red blood. They do things in a natural, human way that they love and hate with deep passion.

In making a play of his novel, Mr. Wright with the assistance of Elisabeth W. Reynolds has retained all the dramatic moments of the story and enlarged upon the character of "Preschin Bill," making a character of him that will be long remembered by theatre goers. Naturally the love between "Sammy Lane" and "Young Matt" is the pivot upon which the play revolves.

Messrs. Gaskill and McVitty, the producers, have mounted the play in a sumptuous manner and given it a cast that promises to prove unique in the matter of types.

There is nothing more disappointing to a woman who wants to tell a secret than the discovery that the other woman is already next to it.

The season for Graham Pudding, Muffins and Gems

is here again. There is no food so well adapted for use in the warm and hot months as that prepared from Graham Flour, if the Graham is the real true-to-name kind as it contains the natural phosphates of the grain. Our Graham is made from native wheat, cleaned, re-cleaned, and ground by one reduction on a French Burr, so that it contains all the natural elements of the grain. It is far better than all the so-called health foods and cuts down the high cost of living. Ask your dealer for it and get the

"Argo Coarse Graham."

WAS GLAD TO ESCAPE ALIVE

Exciting Experience of English Officer Who Intruded on Sacred Monkeys of India.

In various parts of India monkeys are regarded as objects of worship. One of the principal monkey temples is at Nudda. Such veneration is shown here to Huniman, the monkey god, that visitors may not enter the court of the temple without removing their shoes.

On one occasion an English officer, in passing up the country near Nudda, chanced to stroll into a bamboo jungle, when his boat had "put to" for the night. He had not advanced far before he heard a terrific uproar all about him, and was not a little alarmed to behold a whole army of the largest monkeys he had ever seen making toward him from all quarters.

Some jumped on the ground before him, others swung by the bamboos over his head, and many closed up the path in his rear. Several females had young ones clinging to them, but this fact did not seem to render them less agile than the others.

The Englishman knew not what to do. He yelled at the top of his voice for assistance. To his intense relief, each time that he yelled the monkeys retreated a bit. This encouraged him to persevere in his shouting, but he observed that when he himself began to retreat the monkeys would again begin to close in upon him.

Then he stood still and gave him tremendous shout, whereat the monkeys went back again. This time the man had gained fully 20 yards and was about to repeat the call when there appeared a new figure upon the scene in the person of an aged, decrepit woman hobbling through the midst of the animals.

This aged person shook two or three of the monkeys by the paws as she passed. No sooner had she come within hearing of the Britisher than she opened upon him the visals of her wrath for disturbing the sacred animals in their retirement. She bade the intruder depart, and that quickly, an order which he lost no time in executing. The monkeys all seemed implicitly to obey the old woman's bidding, making a way for the man's retreat.

The old woman, it appeared, was employed by the Brahmans to supply the monkeys with their food each day. They were worshiped by all of the people in the country round, who brought offerings of rice and sweetmeats to them continually. Harper's Weekly.

Cruelty to Parents.

That whimsical philosopher, James Douglas, in London Opinion, writes of the crying need of a new society for the prevention of the prevention of cruelty to children and substitute therefor one for the prevention of cruelty to parents. He remarks that donations and subscriptions for such a beneficent organization would pour in from those who know by sad experience how sorrowful is the lot of the father who finds himself abandoned to the ferocity of his children. "Too long," he writes, "has the cry of the parents fallen upon deaf ears. Do you hear the parents crying, O my brothers? The young lambs are playing in the meadows, but the old people are weeping bitterly. Many a fat city merchant conceals behind his waistcoat a heart that is lacerated by the savagery of his children. Many an alderman dilutes his turtle soup with tears of anguish as he thinks of the torments his children are preparing for him in the dark precincts of his suburban home."

Collapsible Army Cart.

A collapsible military cart has been invented by an officer of the army service corps in London. The cart will be tested during the grand manoeuvres of the army next September. The cart is built entirely of tubular steel and canvas, and is extremely light to haul, though it will carry up to a ton dead-weight. Several of these can be carried in a motor lorry of the type now in use in the army, and would be instantly available for use in any desired direction. It is claimed by the inventor that no country is too rough for the cart, and that it is practically indestructible. It costs very little to build these carts, since all the parts are interchangeable; a temporary breakdown would not be a very serious matter, since spare parts could easily be carried on the motor wagons.

A Long Session.

"What! so early?" exclaimed the man.

"Yes, you see, papa is a union man, and he'll only allow eight hours for scouring."

Keep Him Busy.

"What are the principal activities of the official position our friend occupies?"

"Those involved in holding on to it," replied Senator Borghum.

Enduring Poverty

Full Stomach Better Than Pretty Dresses

By MRS. M. K. ALLEN, Utah, Cal.

WHERE shall we skimp—in food or clothing? When we were married we talked the financial matter over and decided that if we were ever to come to an easy, comfortable old age we must begin to save at once. We decided to sacrifice a certain amount of social standing rather than economize on our table. We lived in the city and husband and I were always well dressed for church and street occasions, but never aspired to any social prestige because we could not. When our little girl was born, we spared no pains or expense to give her the best food obtainable. We wanted her to be physically perfect, for we knew that with a fine physique, mental qualities would develop in proportion. Once our family physician was called in to see her and when he inquired about her diet I remarked I was giving her meat broths and meat juices two or three times a week. "Yes," he said, "that's good. She's well nourished. One can see that. Our baby should have those things, too, but we just can't afford it. Gas and meats are so very high we can't do it." That week his wife incidentally remarked to me that her new fall hat cost $15. Jack and I were horrified that one could deny the baby things she needed and be so extravagant in dress. We would never, never do such a thing. We would never let our children be bowlegged, pale-faced little creatures and us animated fashion plates! Alas for our delusions!

Five years passed and Jennie was old enough to enter Sunday school. We got her a new cloak, hat and shoes and one dress for "best." She loved her Sunday school teacher and Sunday was Jennie's one day of all. She attended regularly for six weeks. Then our air castles fell. She came home one day crying as if her heart were broken. After much coaxing we got from her "that a girl at Sunday school had said we must be very, very poor, for she had worn the same dress to Sunday school for six weeks."

This remark was made by a girl of ten years, who wore a silk dress and a diamond ring and other equally foolish and extravagant accessories. Of course, we knew this child of 10 had never thought that out. Some one in her home had made a remark like that and the child had passed the idea on. But we never could convince little 5-year-old Jennie of this. She only saw her own humiliation and no amount of coaxing would induce her to go back to Sunday school. Fortunately we moved from the city and she has forgotten it. She goes to Sunday school now and dresses better than we can afford to dress at the expense of our table. We decided it would be hunger-ache or headache and so chose the former. It was a most difficult problem, but we think it has been solved.

Why whip the children when there is another method? And never threaten the children. To do so places one under an unpleasant obligation. When the child does something that he should not, simply say to him in a kind way, "Do not do that." Then, provided the offense is committed again, you are at liberty to make a choice of punishments as you choose.

One of the finest methods is, after the deed, to ask: "Did not I tell you not to do that?" After a while the child will ask you for a favor and you can then refuse him by saying that he cannot have it because he did what you told him not to do. Make the statements simply, kindly and firmly. Such a method adopted soon becomes a habit and the children will understand it and it will be enjoyed by all parties concerned.

The average parent is angry to some extent when he undertakes to inflict corporal punishment. In which case he is in no condition to perform the act, because he has no idea as to how hard he strikes or how roughly he handles the child.

Use a mixture of kindness and firmness together with the very best judgment at your command in caring for the little ones, the same as you would desire of them when you again become the child in your dotage.

National Guard Is Adjunct of Army

By C. T. Dawson, Quincy, Ill.

The national guard is an organization founded for the purpose of protecting state and city property and to quell riots which are too great to be handled by the civil authorities. It is also a reserve force of the army, each man being called upon to do nine months' service.

Many persons form the belief that the national guard is used only to fight strikers and to protect "scabs." I can honestly say that it is founded for no such ideas.

The national guard offers a young man many club features, such as athletic meets, indoor baseball, basket ball, dancing, vaudeville, rifle practice.

The rifle practice is absolutely without expense to members, as ammunition and transportation are furnished by the state.

All equipment is furnished by the state and a member is entirely without expense.

Hurry and Worry Proving Our Undoing

By Sarah Boyle, Alameda, Cal.

Moderation in all things, advised St. Paul. There is a safe medium between the pace of an ox team that the old folks waited two or three days for and the speed of autos curving around corners into overcongested thoroughfares and the whizzing of lightning speeded motorcycles.

"All's well that ends well," and the tortoise oftentimes gets there first. The hurried meals, the complexity of unwisely self-imposed obligations, the lack of backbone, which opposes with an emphatic "No" the desire of a morbidly constituted public which demands the sensational in sky, earth and water—are causes backing a great mortality in modern times.

Hurry and worry have almost done away with the fine art of meditation, which looks placidly at things present and largely and grandly into the eternal verities.

Almost Unlimited Demand for the Paradise Feathers

Almost overnight, some fashions add rads become a furore, and it seems as if every woman, from Maine to California, wants one particular kind of hat, or shoe, or feather at the same moment. If the object of this sudden fancy is within easy reach (that is, if its price is low) its popularity is brief, because any idea becomes tiresome from too much repetition. But if the thing, which finds itself suddenly in brisk demand, can only be secured in limited quantities, its price is likely to soar for many weeks or even months. This is the case with the beautiful paradise feather, which women have long admired. A spray of a few precious feathers, mounted in a pompon of ostrich or marabout, used to be considered an achievement very well worth while. Extravagantly inclined rich people might indulge in a whole paradise bird occasionally. Then came the day when the whole hat crown was encircled with a wreath of

IN POLONAISE STYLE

White permo fabric—a silky mohair and wool weave—is used here in polonaise style over a skirt of crepe tulle, and the vivid cerise material appears again in the collar section. The polonaise is gracefully draped and fastens at the side with a white silk button and loop matching the fastening of the front of the bodice. Neck frill and sleeve ruffles are of sheer white plaited net. White buckskin colonial pumps accompany this summer costume. The soft belt is of cerise.

Girls Men Hats

Men may laugh and joke with the girl who tries to be "manly," but they never want to marry her.

Men heartily dislike girls who nag and scold; they want to run a mile from them. Men may be sorry for painfully shy girls, but these do not appeal to them. They make them feel awkward and bashful themselves. Men avoid girls who are always saying spiteful things about other girls.

Men hate untidy, slovenly girls, with badly brushed hair and a crooked waist-line.

Men fight shy of dull, discontented girls; the bright, sunny ones get all their attention.

Aligettes on Hats

The aligettes slant backward from the hat at amazing angles—the queerer the angle the more chic the chapeau. The Pocahontas is a favorite style. This is a rather small toque, with a brim rising straight up all around and the whole hat slanting slightly toward the back. Against the high brim are arranged long quills, growing shorter as they reach back, so that the hat has much the appearance of an Indian chief's headdress for the warpath.

PARASOL MATCHES THE HAT

That is, in the Latest Designs It Agrees with the Millinery Accompanying It.

If the very decorative possibilities of the parasol have been overlooked of late, the warm weather has made the fact clear that a parasol adds the last note of distinction to a dress. Every one interested in dress comments upon the varied designs of this summer's parasols and upon the amusing way in which each one agrees with the shape of the hat that is worn.

When feathers tower above the crown of the chapeau the parasol carried has an obliging cupola crown, and if the millinery is of a spreading character then when the parasol is opened it is seen that it is Japanese-like in its flat aspect.

Lace posed upon chiffon or veiled with tulle is a combination of materials of acknowledged elegance for the sunshade, and it not infrequently happens that a trail of mousseline flowers is posed inside the parasol, perchance to coincide with the trimming of the hat or with the flowers that decorate the gown.

Of freak handles there are always a certain number, and one of the quaintest is the cuckoo clock. Press a spring and the doors of the cuckoo clock fly open and the cuckoo appears on the threshold. He is a silent bird, for his trick begins and ends with the little performance already described.

Sewing On Braid.

Braid should be sewed on by taking a long stitch on the back and a very tiny stitch on the right side directly through the braid and down again. Be careful to hold the material smoothly over the finger. Keep the braid straight and firm and turn all corners sharply. You will find when using soutache that you can work more rapidly and keep the braid straight more easily if you use an embroidery frame.

Placing Holes for Buttons.

When buttoning or unbuttoning a garment, forcing the buttons across the width of the hole will soon tear out the latter. For this reason buttons with only two holes are better than those with four and should be placed so that their holes will be on a line with the length of the button-hole. Some women place buttons with four holes so that only two holes need be sewed through, thus making them last longer than if all four were used.

Clever Idea.

Putting hooks on the lower side of a vent or dress opening and eyes on the upper or usual side is a clever idea, as when the dress is ironed on "hook marks" show, as often happens when hooks and eyes are put on in the old-fashioned way. Try the "new fashioned" way—it works splendidly.

The Denial of Christ's Resurrection and Its Results

By Rev. William Evans, D. D., Director Bible Course of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—1 Cor. 15:14-18; 29-32—"And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins."

In the last address on this subject we saw that the denial of Christ's resurrection made our preaching VAIN, our faith vain, and left us still in our sins. We now proceed to set forth some further results of such denial.

IV. If Christ be not risen from the dead then we are found false witnesses. The word "found" means to be detected or discovered in the perpetration of a fraud. It is a word used for judgments regarding moral character and conduct, and conveys the idea of discovering and detecting forgery and falsity.

In using this word, the apostle would say that in proclaiming to the Corinthians the doctrine of the resurrection of Christ he and the other apostles had been guilty of perpetrating fraud upon them. If Christ be not risen, then the apostles are false witnesses; not witnesses deluded, mistaken, deceived, the victims of an hallucination, which was the result of an over-wrought brain and imagination, but false witnesses. Deluded! say the apostle, we cannot be victims of an over-wrought imagination, innocent but deceived enthusiasts—all this is impossible, we are down-right deceivers; we have willingly, knowingly perpetrated a fraud upon the church in claiming that Christ rose from the dead; we are down-right deceivers. The strange thing about the apostle's statement is that the idea of delusion or hallucination is wholly absent from his argument. It does not seem to have occurred to him to mention it. Even the possibility of it is too remote to be spoken of.

To the apostle, the resurrection of Christ is a truth or a falsehood, a reality of a fraud, a thing of sincerity or of deceit, a fact or a mistake. There is no loophole of escape—the resurrection is either a fact or a falsehood, a reality or a sham, and such persons as the apostles were guilty of perpetrating it. Paul feels that the stigma of falsehood has been put upon him. He feels that he has been stung by an insult. Somebody has not believed him—has made him out to be a liar. His testimony in effect is this: "I have seen the risen Christ; I have talked with him; I have received my commission from him. To challenge my statement is to challenge my character, my veracity, my understanding, my reason."

V. If Christ be not risen from the dead then we have no God who is worthy of our trust. To attribute to a person a good or glorious act, which it is well-known that he never performed, is to cause that person to be suspected of having prompted the false assertion. So the testimony of the apostle would lead men to think that God had inspired men to tell lies about him.

Many think that they can still have faith in God, that they still have left a God whom they can trust and in whom they can repose their faith, even though they do not accept the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The apostle says plainly, This is not so; if we have no risen Christ, neither have we a God in whom we can trust. Note the serious point here. "Paul preached of God, he commended God, and the justice of God as shown in raising his holy son from the dead. But if Jesus Christ is not risen from the dead, then we have no such God. If one like Jesus Christ is still left dead, if one be so good as Jesus was and still be deprived of life, what kind of a God have we? We have no God in whom we can trust; it is no use trying to be good. The end is a skull and a few ashes. 'We have testified of God,' says Paul, 'we have justified God, but we are found false witnesses of him if Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead. Have you considered what that point means? The modern man often assumes that he is already in possession of a God with a reliable character, whatever you make of Jesus Christ. But there is something in the career and in the issue of the career of Jesus Christ that makes a good God in this tragic world incredible unless Christ be risen from the dead. Jesus went through the worst sufferings that any man ever suffered. He sounded the depths of the world's tragedy. Now if he has been raised from the dead we may believe in God; but if there be no resurrection of the spotless Christ, then God is either dead or mad. We have no reasonable God left."

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Weston decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is late and passengers are bored. A lively time with an Englishman and Mrs. Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time on the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding wishes. Marjorie is distressed. Mrs. Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattie, a fellow passenger. Marjorie vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's story. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Marjorie reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Little Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train.

CHAPTER XVI—(Continued).

Eventually, the car quieted, and nothing was heard but the rattle and clack of the wheels on the rails, the creak of timbers, and the frog-like chorus of a few well-trained snorers. As the porter was turning down the last of the lights, a ruffled pate was thrust from the stateroom, and the luscious-eyed man whispered:

"Porter, what time did you say we crossed the Iowa state line?"

"Two fifty-five a. m."

From within the stateroom came a deep sigh, then with a dismal groan: "Call me at two fifty-five a. m., the door was closed."

Poor Mallory, pyramaleas and night-shirtless, lay propped up on his pillows, staring out of the window at the swiftly shifting night scene. The state of Illinois was being pulled out from under the train like a dark rug.

Farmhouses gleamed or dreamed lamplights. The moonlight rippled on endless seas of wheat and Indian corn. Little towns slid up and away. Large towns rolled forward, and were left behind. Ponds, marshes, brooks, pastures, thickets and great gloomy groves flowed past as on a river. But the same stars and the moon seemed to accompany the train. If the hazy witness had been less heavy of heart, he would have found the receding scene full of grace and night beauty. But he could not see any charm in all the world, except his tantalizing other self, from whom a great chasm seemed to divide him, though she was two windows away.

He had not yet fallen asleep, and he was still pondering how to attain his unmarried, unmarriageable bride, when the train rolled out in air above a great wide river, very noble under the stars. He knew it for the Mississippi. He heard a rattle knocking on a door at the other end of the car. He heard sounds of kisses, and then somebody tiptoed along the aisle stealthily. He did not know that another bridegroom was being separated from his bride because they were too much married.

Somewhere in Iowa he fell asleep.

CHAPTER XVII.

Last Call for Breakfast. It was still Iowa when Mallory awoke. Into his last moments of heavy sleep intruded a voice, like a tow-crier's voice, crying:

"Last call for breakfast in the Kingling Bar," and then, again louder, "Last call for breakfast in Kingling Bar," and, finally and faintly, "Last call breakfast r'r'r."

Mallory pushed up his window shade. The day was broad on rolling prairies like billows established in the green soil. He peeped through his curtains. Most of the other passengers were up and about, their beds hidden and beddings stowed away behind the belying veneer of the upper-works of the car. All the berths were made up except his own and number two, in the corner, where Little Jimmie Wellington's nose still played a bagpipe melody, and one other berth, which he recognized as Marjorie's.

His belated sleep and hers had spared them both the stares and laughing chatter of the passengers. But this bridal couple's two berths, standing like towers among the seats, had provided conversation for everybody, had already united the casual group of strangers into an organized gossip-tee.

Mallory got into his shoes and as much of his clothes as was necessary for the dash to the washroom, and took on his arm the rest of his wardrobe. Just as he issued from his lonely chamber, Marjorie appeared from hers, much disheveled and heavy-eyed. The bride and groom exchanged glances of mutual terror, and hurried in opposite directions.

The spickest and spanniest of lieutenants soon realized that he was reduced to wearing yesterday's linen as well as yesterday's beard. This was intolerable. A brave man can endure heartbreaks, loss of love, honor and piase, but a neat man cannot abide the traces of time in his toilet. Lieutenant Mallory had seen rough service in camp and on long hikes, when he gloried in mud and disorder, and he was to see campaigns in the Philippines, when he should not take off his shoes or his uniform for three days at a time. But that was the field, and this car was a drawing room.

In this crisis in his affairs, Little Jimmie Wellington waddled into the men's room, floundering about with every lurch of the train, like a cannon loose in the hold of a ship. He tumbled with the handles on a basin, and made a crazy toilet, trying to find some abatement of his fever by filling a glass at the ice-water tank and emptying it over his head.

These drastic measures restored him to some sort of coherency, and Mallory appealed to him for help in the matter of linen. Wellington enthusiastically offered him everything he had, and Mallory selected from his store-half-a-dozen-collars, any one of which would have gone round his neck nearly twice.

Wellington also proffered his safety razor, and made him a present of a virgin wafer of steel for his very own. With this assistance, Mallory was enabled to make himself fairly presentable. When he returned to his seat, the three curtained rooms had been whisked away by the porter. There was no place now to hide from the passengers.

He sat down facing the feminine end of the car, watching for Marjorie. The passengers were watching for her, too, hoping to learn what unheard-of incident could have provoked the quarrel that separated a bride and groom at this time, of all times.

To the general bewilderment, when Marjorie appeared, Mallory and she rushed together and clasped hands with an ardor that suggested a desire for even more ardent greeting. The passengers almost sprained their ears to hear how they would make up such a dreadful feud. But all they heard was: "We'll have to hurry, Marjorie, if we want to get any breakfast."

"All right, honey. Come along."

Then the inscrutable couple scurried up the aisle, and disappeared in the corridor, leaving behind them a mighty riddle. They kissed in the vestibule, kissed in the two corridors of the next car, and were caught kissing in the next vestibule by the new conductor.

The dining car conductor, who flattered himself that he knew a bride and groom when he saw them, escorted them grandly to a table for two, and the waiter fluttered about them with extraordinary consideration.

They had a plenty to talk of in prospect and retrospect. They both felt sure that a minister lurked among the cars somewhere, and they ate with a zest to prepare for the ceremony, arguing the best place for it, and quarreling amorously over details. Mallory was for one of the vestibules, the scene of their union, but Marjorie was for the baggage car, till she realized that Snoozums might be unwilling to attend. Then she swung round to the vestibule, but Mallory shifted to the observation platform.

Marjorie had left Snoozums with Mrs. Temple, who promised to hide him when the new conductor passed through the car, and she reminded Harry to get the waiter to bring them a package of bones for their only "obit," so far.

On the way back from the dining car they kissed each other good-bye again at all the trysting places they had sanctified before. The sun was radiant, the world good, and the very train ran with jubilant rejoicing. They could not doubt that a few more hours would see them legally man and wife.

Marjorie restored Marjorie to her place in their car, and with smiles of assurance, left her for another parson-hunt through the train. She waited for him in a bridal agitation. He ransacked the train forward in vain, and returned, passing Marjorie with a shake of the head, and a sour countenance. He went out to the observation platform where he stumbled on Mrs. Lathrop and Anne Gattie, engaged in a conversation of evident intimacy, for they jumped when he opened the door, as if they were guilty of some plot.

Mallory mumbled his usual, "Excuse me," whirled on his heel, and dragged his discouraged steps back through the Observation Room, where various women and a few men of evident unceremoniousness were draped across arm chairs and absorbed in lazy conversation or bobbing their heads over magazines that trembled with the motion of the train.

Mrs. Wellington was busily writing at the desk, but he did not know who she was, and he did not care whom she was writing to. He did not observe the baleful glare of Mrs. Whitcomb, who sat watching Mrs. Wellington, knowing all too well who she was, and suspecting the correspondent—Mrs. Whitcomb was tempted to spell the word with one "r."

Mallory stumbled into the men's portion of the composite car. Here he nodded with a sickly cheer to the sole occupant, Dr. Temple, who was looking less ministerial than ever in an embroidered skull cap. The old rascal was sitting far back on his lumbar vertebrae. One of his hands clasped a long glass filled with a liquid of a hue that resembled something stronger than what it was—mere ginger ale. The other hand toyed with a long black cigar. The smoke curled round the old man's head like the fumes of a sultan's narghile, and through the wisps his face was one of Oriental luxury.

Mallory's eyes were caught from this picture of beatitude by the entrance, at the other door, of a man who had evidently swung aboard at the most recent stop—for Mallory had not seen him. His gray hair was crowned with a soft black hat, and his spare frame was swathed in a frock coat that had seen better days. His soft gray eyes seemed to sear timidly the smoke-clouded atmosphere, and he had a bashful air which Mallory translated as one of diffidence in a place where liquors and cigars were dispensed.

With equal diffidence Mallory advanced and in a low tone accosted the newcomer cautiously:

"Excuse me—you look like a clergyman."

"The hell you say!" Mallory pursued the question no further.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In the Composite Car. It was the gentle stranger's turn to miss his guess. He bent over the chair into which Mallory had hopped, and said in a tense, low tone: "You look like a thoroughbred sport. I'm trying to make up a game of stud-poker. Will you join me?"

Mallory shook his heavy head in refusal, and with dull eyes watched the man, whose profession he no longer misunderstood, saunter up to the blissful Doctor from Ypsilanti, and murmur again:

"Will you join me?"

"Join you in what, sir?" said Dr. Temple, with alert courtesy.

"A little game."

"I don't mind," the doctor smiled, rising with amiable readiness. "The checkers are in the next room."

"Quit your kiddin'!" the stranger coughed. "How about a little freeze-out?"

"Freeze-out?" said Dr. Temple. "It sounds interesting. Is it something like authors?"

The newcomer shot a quick glance at this man, whose innocent air he suspected. But he merely drawled: "Well, you play it with cards."

"Would you mind teaching me the rules?" said the old sport from Ypsilanti.

The gambler was growing suspicious of this too, too childlike innocence. He whined: "Say, what's your little game, eh?" but decided to risk the venture. He sat down at a table, and Dr. Temple, bringing along his glasses, drew up a chair. The gambler took a pack of cards from his pocket, and shuffled them with a snap that startled Dr. Temple and a dexterity that delighted him.

"Go on, it's beautiful to see," he explained. The gambler set the pack down with the one word "Cut!" but since the old man made no effort to comply, the gambler did not insist. He took up the pack again and ran off five cards to each place with a grace that staggered the doctor.

Mallory was about to intervene for the protection of the guileless physician when the conductor chanced to saunter in:

The gambler, seeing him, snatched Dr. Temple's cards from his hand and slipped the pack into his pocket.

"What's the matter now?" Dr. Temple asked, but the newcomer huskily answered: "Wait a minute. Wait a minute."

The conductor took in the scene at a glance and, stalling up to the table, spoke with the grinniness of a sea-captain: "Say, I've got my eye on you. Don't start nothin'."

The stranger stared at him wonderingly and demanded: "Why, what you drivin' at?"

"You know all right," the conductor growled, and then turned on the befuddled clergyman, "and you, too."

"Me, too?" the preacher gasped.

"Yes, you too," the conductor repeated, shaking an accusing forefinger under his nose. "Your actions have been suspicious from the beginning. We've all been watching you."

"Dr. Temple was so agitated that he nearly let fall his secret. 'Why, do you realize that I'm a—'"

"Ah, don't start that," sneered the conductor, "I can spot a gambler as far as I can see one. You and your side partner here want to look out, that's all, or I'll drop you at the next tank." Then he walked out, his very shoulder blades uttering threats.

Minute Men.

The so-called organization of Minute Men came into existence shortly before the outbreak of the Revolution. The patriots of Massachusetts and other New England colonies banded themselves together, obtained arms and pledged themselves to the defense of the colonies "at a minute's notice." From this pledge to take up arms "at a minute's notice" they got their name.

The Minute Men were enrolled in pursuance of the act of the Provincial congress, which was passed on November 23, 1774. Many names that were destined to become famous in the Revolution appeared in this roster of patriots. In the beginning they were expected to serve only in the New England colonies, but when the conflict came no thought was taken of this. The Massachusetts Historical society has a list of the patriots who were enrolled as Minute Men.

GIRDLER ATTRACTS ATTENTION AS ENEMY OF THE GRAPEVINE

Plants Caused to Present Ragged Appearance on Account of Dead Tips Resulting From Attack of Insect—Has Been Found in Several States From Missouri to Pennsylvania.

The Grapevine Girdler. a, Egg; b, Larva; c, Pupa; d, Adult; e, Beetle Girdling the Cane Just Below Its Egg-Chamber. The Upper One of the Twin Holes in the Center of the Cane Contains the Egg. All Greatly Enlarged.

(By FRED E. BROOKS, West Virginia Experiment Station.)

The grapevine girdler is an insect not often mentioned in entomological literature, probably for the reason that in the past it seems to have confined its attacks chiefly to the plant known as Vitis californica or five-leaved ampelopsis quinquefolia, and has seemed, therefore, of but little economic importance. In this state it appears now to have developed a preference for the grape. In several localities I have seen grapevines presenting a ragged appearance on account of the dead tips resulting from the insect's attacks, but I have never been able to find either the beetle or evidences of its work on ampelopsis.

The species cannot now be regarded as a pest of very serious consequence, except in rare instances, but it has several times attracted attention as an enemy of the grape in this state during recent years, and heretofore but little has been known in regard to its habits.

The distribution of the species seems to be quite general throughout the eastern and mid-western sections of the United States. In 1882 Mr. C. V. Riley, in his first report on the noxious insects of Missouri, mentioned it as forming galls on the common creeper. At about the same time Mr. Benj. D. Walsh had specimens of the insect in his collection in Illinois, marked "Madarus ampelopsis." It was not until the year 1876 that a description of the beetle was published. In that year Dr. John L. LeConte described it in his work on the Rhynchophora of America, and gave to it the name which it still bears. LeConte gives its geographical distribution as "southern and western states." Since the description was published the species has received but infrequent and brief notice, but has been recorded as occurring in several states from Missouri to Pennsylvania.

The wound which the beetle makes in ovipositing causes the tip and terminal leaves on the young cane to drop over and die, and shortly afterward to fall from the vine. The egg is not carried to the ground with the prunings when they fall, but it remains in the vine, and the larva which develops therefrom feeds in the heart of the stump from which the leaves and tip were removed.

It is interesting to compare the methods of this insect with those of other species that girdle twigs of small branches in order to kill or partly kill the wood in which their eggs are laid and their larvae are to feed. The "hickory twig-girdler," Oncideres cingulata, a "long-horned" beetle, lays its eggs in the branches of hickory and other trees and then girdles the branch below, by cutting a deep groove with its strong jaws so that the branch above dies, and is frequently broken off by the wind. The "elm twig-girdler," Oberaea umicola, a beetle of the same family, attacks elm in a similar manner. The female cuts a deep groove around a twig so that it is easily broken off by the wind. Below the groove she cuts a slit in the bark and deposits an egg and then moves further down the twig and girdles it a second time, now merely cutting through the bark so as to deaden the part above. Another species of the same genus, known as the "black-berry cane-girdler," Oberaea bimaculata, cuts a double girdle and lays an egg between the two, in a similar manner, in the young canes of blackberry and raspberry. Still another "long-horned" beetle, the "oak-pruner," Elaphidion villosum, lays its eggs in the branches of oak and other trees but leaves the girdling to be done by its larvae. In this case the larva feeds in the heart of the twig until it is nearly full grown and then cuts the twig almost off at the lower end of its burrow. Immediately after the cut is made it retreats into the burrow above and waits for the wind to blow the twig to the ground, where it completes its transformation within the burrow.

The adult of the "raspberry cane-maggot," a two-winged fly of the genus Phorbia, lays its egg near the tips of young raspberry shoots. The larva which hatches enters the cane and after working its way downward for several inches it encircles the shoot several times, with a spiral groove made just beneath the bark, which kills the shoot above, and the larva feeds thereafter on the dead wood. The "currant stem-girdler," Janus infiger, a saw-fly, punctures the bark of currant bushes near the ends of growing tips with its saw-like ovipositor and lays an egg in the orifice. Just above the egg, it girdles the twig by making several deep cuts with its ovipositor so that the twig breaks over. The larva which develops from the egg feeds on the pith of the stump.

There are other species that operate in a similar manner, but the ones that have been mentioned will serve to show that the peculiar habit, in one form or another, is shared by insects belonging to widely separated groups. It is interesting that so many species, which in most respects do not resemble each other in the least and which represent at least three orders, have adopted some form of this peculiar way of providing for the safety and comfort of their progeny.

ERADICATION OF THE GRASSHOPPER

Ohio Station Gives Formula for Making Poisoned Bran Mash for Use in the Gardens.

The Ohio station advises that for protecting gardens and limited areas from the attacks of grasshoppers, good results are usually obtained from using a poisoned bran mash, prepared as follows:

Stir together, while dry, two pounds of Paris green and 25 pounds of bran, then moisten with water that has been sweetened with molasses or dissolved sugar, making a wet but not sloppy mash.

For plants set about three feet apart, use a tablespoonful near each plant, or the mash may be sown over the field broadcast. One treatment should not cost over $1 per acre, labor not included. Keep the poultry away from the poison.

Works in the Garden Now. Crown old in the service of his master and mistress, James was a privileged retainer.

He was waiting at table one day, when a guest politely asked for a fish fork. "Strangely enough, the request was ignored."

Then the hostess noticed the episode and remarked in a most peremptory manner:

"James, Mrs. Jones hasn't a fish fork. Get her one at once!"

"Madam," came the emphatic reply, "last time Mrs. Jones dined here we lost a fish fork."

James has now been relegated to the garden.

REV. CHAS. SAGER SAYS

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 19, 1909, 60 Ann St., New York City. "Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Bloods) in cases of pulmonary tuberculosis. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of, that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since. Yours truly, REV. CHAS. SAGER, Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.,) N. Y.

On Dec. 1, 1902, Mr. Sager wrote Mr. Abbott: "My health is very good." If you will write Mr. Abbott he will gladly furnish you any further information you desire.

CRIES TO GET ITS OWN WAY

Child Soon Learns to Know the Effect of Tears on Mother, Declares an Authority.

A mother can seldom withstand the tears of her baby, especially if it is her first baby. And yet the fear that babies will cry, or the mother's softness of heart, accounts for much of the over-indulgence of children. As soon as a child finds out that a mother is perfectly willing for him to cry if he likes, and as long as he likes, and that it doesn't disturb her in the least, but she just sits complacently (outwardly!) by and reads or sews, crying loses its virtue and life from that lesson on grows decidedly more sunshiny. For most of the crying of a young child is done deliberately because the child soon finds out that it is the way to get what it wants. "I know it is wrong to give in to my child when he cries," said a mother recently, "but I do it for the sake of the neighbors." This feeling for the neighbors is penny wise, pound foolish. In the first place anyone who lives near babies expects to hear them cry more or less, because all babies cry. But no baby cries so much as the one whose mother is so afraid of his crying that she is always trying to prevent it. Hard-hearted it may sound, but the common sense fact remains nevertheless that the crying of a young child shall have no weight whatever in his management, except as a symptom. In itself crying is not serious, on the contrary, it is healthful. A mother must decide whether the crying is a symptom of pain, weariness or of temper. But having decided that, she must treat the pain, the weariness or the temper, but never the crying itself.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HAVE PRIVILEGE OF CREATION

Consolation for Women Who Do Not Enjoy All the Advantages They See Others Have.

Women are taught very wrongly about love. They are allowed to read love stories at a tender age and form a totally fatal notion of love. They see themselves as charmers at a very early age. They begin trying to captivate to charm, to ensnare the opposite sex, before they are out of the nursery. They live and die—many, many of them—without ever in the least understanding the truth about love or, in fact, about anything else.

Women are very envious by nature. There seems to be plenty of justification in this one way you look at it. Why should one woman have luxury, ease, travel, society and fine clothes and another woman have only toil and loneliness and privation? This is a useless question. We cannot explain the inequalities of life, but there is an answer to the woman who asks this question. It is this: The more barren the field the greater the privilege of creation. You have a chance to see what you can find by the way of joy and beauty; you have an opportunity to create your own atmosphere and it can be a very lovely one if you learn the secret of making it so.—Pittsburg Leader.

Sounds Like Good Logic.

Recently, several educators came to the conclusion, after a lot of argument and discussion, that it is useless to teach girls higher mathematics and logic and that the time should be devoted to giving the girls a more practical training that will fit them to be housewives and mothers. It is much better, say the educators, to teach cooking, housekeeping and nursing. So far as logic is concerned, the educators point out that the minds of young women can be disciplined just as much, if not more so, by putting them through rigorous courses in what will be of practical benefit to them in life. It further is argued that mathematics and such studies do not help a woman to be a better companion to her husband, for he uses those things only in his business, and a woman rather should study things that can be of help to him in his hours of relaxation.

Strenuous Exercise.

They were talking about the value of regular physical exercise; and one of the group, noticing that Meredith Nicholson, the author, seemed pretty fit, asked him what he did to keep in condition.

"Who, me?" he exclaimed. "Why, I don't need any calisthenics or things of that sort. I live in a house on the sunset side of the street, and I get all the exercise my system needs in building the fire every morning."

"That doesn't seem to offer much chance for exercise," remarked a friend. "What kind of fire is it you build, wood or coal?"

"Neither," replied Nicholson. "We use gas, and I have to scratch a match every time I light the fire."

THE CRUISE OF THE ABEL

Warren W. Lamport,

Ho, ho, for a sail o'er the waters blue,
While the bright heavens over us smile,
Come, hurry, my lads, let us fill up the crew
And be off for the Mormon isle.

For hark ye, ye've borne with them long enough,
The quarrelsome, plundering set;
But long is the lane that has given a turn,
We are bound to get even yet.

Stern men say they all, with their hearts untouched

By the love which the Master taught;

It is eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth,

And woe to the enemy caught,
So they fill up the crew and they let out sail,
And over the waters they go;

Alas for the hour on the Mormon's head
Shall fall the avenging blow!

Slowly at anchor the Abel swings,

And rocks on the morning tide,
While warily up from the water's edge
Her men through the shadows glide.

As the red man follows the trail of his foe,
As the gray wolf follows the prey,
So, stealthily on through the forest they go
To the town on the edge of the bay.

To the place where the dreamer dreamed
His dreams,

And saw in the years yet to be
A kingdom built up on this snug little isle,
In the heart of the western sea.

A kingdom o'er which he himself should rule,
And rule with a despot's rod,
Backed up by a false and shameful pretence
In the name of the Christ's God.

A kingdom whose power should extend far and wide,

A temple whose spacious hall
Should echo the footsteps of myriad hosts,
Far come at their prophet's call.

And a city magnificent here should rise
Whose lustre should add to his fame,
A city of gayety, beauty and wealth,
And bearing his "sanctified" name.

But as Babel's proud king in the balance was placed

As he reveled in mirth and wine
While low at the gate lay the enemy's host,
Avengers of wrath divine,
So this kingdom anomalous built in the west,
And founded on error and lust
Likewise is found wanting when weighed in the scale,

And speedy its downfall and just.

Already its monarch lies cold in death,
The victim of vengeful hate,
The hand has been writing its doom on the wall

And the enemy lurks at the gate,
And 'tis but the work of a passing hour

As under the Mormon's eyes
The palace is sacked, the temple is burned,
And the "kingdom" in ruin lies.

Oh, the feud has been bitter, and heavy the blow

Of the raider when comes his hour

And the leaderless Mormon bends low in the blast

Like a reed in the whirlwind's power,
And the "Consecration of Property" law
Is worked in the gentile's way.

Till many a man, it is said, got his start
With the booty he gathered that day.

But wreckage and plunder are only a part,
'Tis the people themselves must go,
Must be broken completely and scattered afar,
And the Beaver be rid of the foe.

For the dove of peace never shall spread her soft wings

O'er these waters or rest on their shores Till the eagle's wild warcry in silence is hushed,

And the cause of the strife be no more.

So in from the farms and the homes of the town,

Submissive and full of dread,
The remnant are brought to the shores of bay

Like sheep to the shambles led;
Where soon they are placed upon passing ships

That enter the little bay,
And bidding farewell to their island home
Are banished in exile away.

'Tis the tale of Acadia's grief again,
Once sung by the "hard sublime,"
Whose mournful measures came echoing down

"Through the corridors of time,"
But a tale where innocent hearts not alone

The weight of the staggering blow,
But error and lust and ambition's flight
Alike in the dust are laid low.

Then ho, for a sail o'er the waters blue,
While the bright heavens over us smile,
Come, hurry, my lads, let us fill up the crew
And away from the Mormon isle.

They may not approve in the yet to be years
Of the deed which the raider has done,
But the quarrel was ours, and we've battled it through,

And the vict'ry at last is won.

Among the Jews the private ownership of land seems to have been established from the earliest times, as we learn from the purchase of land by Abraham when he secured the Cave of Macpela for a family tomb, and the story of Ruth and Boaz. Assyrian, or rather Babylonish cylinders of clay still preserve the transfers of land, and the names of humble grantors and grantees, whose names and petty bargains have survived for ages all record of the magnates whom they envied and obeyed.—Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine.

CHILD HAD ECZEMA

MOTHER SAYS SAXO SALVE MADE HER WELL

"My little girl suffered with eczema on her hands for nearly a year and reading about Saxo Salve one day I bought a tube and found it helped her. After using two tubes my baby's hands are entirely well." Mrs. E. P. Hook, 224 E. 17th street, Connersville, Ind.

In all forms of eczema, and all other crusty or scaly humors and eruptions, Saxo Salve allays the itching at once, and penetrates the pores of the skin, reaching the very roots of the disease with its germ-destroying, healing power, and soon banishes the eruption, leaving the skin smooth and unscarred.

We sell Saxo Salve on a positive guarantee for all sorts of skin affections. If it does not give satisfaction you get your money back. Try it.

LOAN BOOKS FREE.

All School Districts Can Secure Libraries at Cost of Transportation.

School districts of this vicinity may secure the use of an excellent library of fifty well selected books by paying the freight and cartage charges from Lansing and return. Educators throughout the country recognize that proper books of fiction, history, science and government compose the most essential equipment for the school room and the state of Michigan is willing to help the school districts in this matter. Those in charge of the state library have arranged to make the splendid resources of that institution available for the people of the entire state instead of merely the residents of Lansing.

The traveling libraries, as they are called, will be sent to any school district or other organization in the state upon the filing of an application with the state librarian, Mrs. Mary E. Spencer, Lansing, Michigan, and the fulfillment of the library requirements, which involves no expense, except the payment of freight and cartage charges. The libraries may be kept from three to six months then returned and a new assortment of books secured.

The libraries are made up to suit the needs of the organization securing it. Those suitable for schools are made up of books particularly adapted to young people and the fiction is of the best literature. The formation of the habit of reading the right kind of literature is the most vital part of a pupil's education and so the state makes it possible for every school to give its pupils the opportunity of forming that habit.

It's the easiest thing in the world to bring up children in the way they should go—if you haven't any.

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep, if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merita trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you. Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The East Jordan High School graduating class of 1909 held a reunion at the Russell House Wednesday. A four-course banquet was served. Clark Haire, Jr. was toastmaster. Miss Calgahan, a former teacher in our high school was present and responded to a toast. A very pleasant evening was spent by the Class in rehearsing old time pranks and romances.

The "good roads" illustrated lecture scheduled for last Monday evening was fairly well attended. Secretary Gibson was unable to be here, and Hon. Frank Hamilton, chairman of the Grand Traverse County board of County Road Commissioners, and E. H. Ellsworth, Assistant Secretary of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, were present and gave interesting talks. H. I. McMillan was chairman for the evening and R. A. Brintnall Secretary.

It has developed in connection with the revelation of the crookedness on the part of the police department of Brooklyn as well as in New York that a regular weekly tribute was voluntarily paid by the saloonkeepers of Brooklyn and for these payments the saloons were permitted to violate the law. The saloons were in league with all other disorderly resorts in Brooklyn for the purpose of providing a corruption fund and in order to make common use of the privileges in the way of freedom from official disturbance which these payments provided. The bribery of the police in order to cause the officers to betray the people whom they had pledged themselves to protect was a crime committed by the brewers and saloonkeepers of Brooklyn and New York which marks a necessary incident in connection with bribery and saloon experience wherever they exist. The treason and bribery and conspiracy which led to the murder of Rosenthal were all the direct results of liquor traffic schemes through which the business of its creatures would be increased and the profits through its control would be largely added to.

Death of Mrs. Webster.

Rosina D. Severance was born at Commerce, Oakland County, Mich. on the 21st. of March, 1837. Her early years were spent at Plymouth, Mich. she was married on Nov. 16th, 1863, to J. B. Webster, at Holly, Mich., where they resided until the fall of 1873 when they came to East Jordan—then a wilderness. In early life she united with the Baptist Church.

She died on Saturday last the 24th, rather suddenly although she had been sick for some time. She is survived and grievously lamented by her husband; an only son, William; a sister and several brothers. So ends the earthly and useful life of a loving wife and mother; industrious, faithful and kind. "The memory of the just is blessed."

The funeral took place on Monday the 26th at the home, Rev. A. D. Grigsby Pastor of the Presbyterian church officiating who gave a good address from the words "then cometh the end."

The singing which was excellent was rendered by Mesdames Sioach, Fitch, Hammond and Miss Verschel Lorraine, Miss Grigsby accompanying.

The body was interred in the East Jordan cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned hereby express their heartfelt thanks to the many friends who in the hour of their bereavement and at the funeral and grave showed such true and neighborly kindness and sympathy in so many ways, and to the singers and accompanist for the comforting songs and solos and to the Rev. A. D. Grigsby who conducted the services.

THE FINEST IN THE STATE

Is the big modern plant recently purchased from the Booth Fisheries Co. by A. T. Washburne and located at foot of "Midway" on the bay shore, as a permanent home for the constantly increasing business in the manufacture of "Sanitary Rugs from old Carpets" (trade mark established 1899) in which line a trade has been successfully established all over the United States on the excellence of products. This also gives much needed room to the Carpet Cleaning and setting department, which includes a large sterilizing abattoir for purifying rugs and carpets. The cleaning department is fully equipped with all modern and time saving machinery devices run by electricity. Two of the largest rotary renovating machines for general cleaning and a powerful vacuum machine 100 per cent more powerful and efficient than the portable ones this letter is for fine rugs and orientals. The plant is also equipped with three machines for the sewing of carpets of all kinds in the most approved manner with flat elastic seams. Thus with largest facilities, most up-to-date equipment, highest grade of workmanship, lowest possible prices, and prompt service, bespeaks a busy future for the Petoskey Rug Co. of which A. T. Washburne is proprietor and to which address all orders and correspondence should be addressed—NO AGENTS.—Petoskey Evening News, April 12, 1911.—Make your shipments as early as possible.

Eradication of Canada Thistles

By R. S. SHAW, Dean and Director, Michigan Agricultural College

Canada Thistle

The ease or difficulty experienced in eradicating Canada thistles depends on the kind of soil and the character of the crops in the rotation. As they propagate readily by root-stalks which run under the ground, they spread more rapidly and are much more difficult to eradicate in loose, open, porous soils than in heavy clays. Grain crops are more favorable for their continuance than cultivated crops such as corn, beans, roots, etc., providing the latter are properly cared for.

I. Canada thistles can be completely eradicated in a single season by thorough summer fallowing, but this is an expensive system and should not be employed unless an entire field has been taken possession of so as to make it impossible to grow a crop.

II. The best method is to follow with two cultivated crops in succession, as corn after corn, with manure applied between the two crops if possible. Cultivate thoroughly, using this as sweeps on the cultivator; these are cultivator points with wings and are from eight to ten inches wide; they can be attached to almost any cultivator with sweeps after the corn is too big for a two-horse rig. Check row corn if possible so as to cultivate both ways. If thistles are in patches which are not too numerous, give these spots more frequent cultivation than the balance of the field. The secret of success consists in keeping the thistles underground; this done, they must smother.

If two cultivated crops cannot be grown in succession and if the thistles are not all killed the first year, sow the clean portions of the field to grain and seed to clover or grass.

Then put a hoed crop on the thistle patches the second year, unless they are too numerous and scattered. If mangolds or stock beets or turnips or rutabagas are planted on these patches and if the thistles are killed by August first, clover or grass seed can be sown among the roots and covered lightly with a spike tooth drag. The following year the field will all be seeded. This succeeded admirably with us in eradicating quack grass.

III. Canada thistles are scattered in grain or pasture crops and are not too numerous, they can be subdued by the use of the thistle spud which can be procured of any hardware dealer, though he may not keep them in stock. Mark the patches in some way or other and then cut the thistles off below the ground every ten days or so after they start in the spring. This tool and the method just described are satisfactory where the thistles are not too numerous, as where new patches are starting in pasture, grain crops, along fences, in lanes, woodlots, etc.

IV. I have seen Canada thistles completely destroyed by cutting them close to the ground with a scythe just as the blossoms opened, but this probably will not occur except where followed by dry weather and adverse growing conditions. It is better not to rely upon this method.

Success can only be obtained in combatting Canada thistles by following up the methods of eradication patiently and perseveringly. Unfortunately the shortage and high price of labor too often prevent the farmer from doing the things he wants to at the proper time.

New Queen of the Dairy World

With a record of 1,058.34 pounds of butterfat produced in 365 days, Baronne Belle DeKol, a five-year-old Holstein-Friesian cow owned by Dan Dunschick & Bro., Ohio, becomes the new "Queen of the Dairy World." This wonderful cow produced during the year 27,404.4 pounds of milk testing 3.86 per cent. fat. If made into butter, her fat production would equal 7,322.9 pounds of butter or over 3 1/2 pounds per day for 365 days.

During the time that Banostine Bell DeKol was in test she received nearly, if not all the time, more or less ensilage and alfalfa. When available she received roots and a mixed grain ration, the foundation of which was bran and oats. The grain ration was varied to suit the conditions of the cow from 25 pounds to as low as 9 pounds per day and the estimated average amount of grain fed was 12 to 14 pounds daily. She was also given green food when it was available during summer season.

This cow is a wonderful example of the importance and value of good breeding. Her pedigree includes a long list of ancestors possessing high records. All Michigan farmers cannot possess animals of phenomenal ability but it is easily within the reach of all to improve their herds to the standard of profitable production by the use of pure bred sires. The bull is one-half the herd and the constant use of bulls of one breed will soon produce a high grade herd without a very great expense. Mixing breeds and the use of grade bulls has kept Michigan cattle far below the standard they ought to attain. If you are interested in this proposition write to the Michigan experiment station, East Lansing, Michigan, and ask for Circular 4 on "The Improvement of Michigan Cattle."

Better Yields.
In England the average yield of wheat runs from 30 to 33 bushels to the acre. In Germany it averages about 28 bushels. In the United States the average for the past ten years has been about 15 bushels. England gets ordinarily over 40 bushels of oats to the acre, the United States gets less than 30. The soil of England and Germany has been bearing crops centuries before ours knew the touch of a plow. These disparities in yield must be due either to the incompetency of our farmers or to the debilitation of our soil.

Correcting Soft-Shell Eggs.
Soft-shelled eggs may be caused by lack of lime in the ration of the hen and also may be due to the fact that she is out of condition, resulting from too much corn in the ration. If the former is the cause the difficulty may be righted by supplying old plaster or ground oyster shells, while in the latter wheat, bran or oats should be substituted for the bulk of the corn, and the flock made to scratch for their feed.

Trees Afford Comfort.
A few trees in the pasture add greatly to the comfort of the sheep these days. If you can't save them, set up a few posts and cover a bit of ground over for a shed.

Jim Bushwick's Widow

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Jim Bushwick of the village of Rawlins, was a ne'er-do-well. He was born lazy and without business acumen sufficient to sell or buy a peck of potatoes. He didn't drink, smoke or chew, and when he married it was to have a wife to take care of him. She was a hustling, ambitious woman, and if she could have had his help they could have been well off after five years.

She didn't have it, however. Jim was always going to do this and do that, and he never even got up energy enough to set out a bed of onions. The wife seldom scolded or complained. She was the village seamstress, and by steady work she managed to keep a roof over their heads.

Now and then there was talk of doing something to Jim—tar and feathers—a whipping—the law or something else, but it never went beyond talk. As for tar and feathers, there was no tar in the town, and no citizen would have been willing to contribute the feathers.

Thus things went on for eight years, and then Jim Bushwick was taken with a hopeless illness. When this disease took hold of the man he galloped to the grave very fast. It was only after the doctors had told Jim there was no hope for him, and that his flame of life would be snuffed out in a couple of weeks more, that the true spirit of a manly man came out. He called his wife to his bedside one day and began:

"Sarah, you are going to be a widow soon."

"Yes," she replied, as tears filled her eyes.

"I've been a no-account man and husband."

"But you've done the best you could."

"Maybe so, but when I look back I'm ashamed of myself. I can't leave you a dollar."

"Never mind, Jim. Everybody will be kind to me and I shall get along."

He Had Signed Without Looking.

Let us hope the doctors are mistaken, and that you will live many a year yet.

"Let us do nothing of the kind, but get ready for business. Sarah, you know what breach-of-promise is, of course?"

"Yes."

"If you have a pretty good case against a man he'll settle for cash."

"But how can I have a breach-of-promise case?"

"That's what I'm going to provide you with—several of them. Bring my pen, ink and paper, and then run over and tell Deacon Harrison I want to see him."

The deacon was a widower and well-to-do. He was one of those who had spoken of tar and feathers, but he had a neighborly feeling, for all that. When he had come in and expressed his sympathy, the dying man said:

"Deacon, Sarah will soon be left alone."

"Yes."

"I want folks to be kind to her when I'm gone."

"They will be, Jim—they will be."

"I'm not so sure of that. Folks get tired of being kind after a while. I know how good you are, but if you'd only put it in black and white that you'd be kind to Sarah after I'm gone I should feel a heap easier about going. Here's a paper I've drawn up that says you'll be kind."

"Why, I'll sign that, of course," was the reply; and the deacon, for once in his life, signed a paper without reading it and looking for traps. He did more than that. He offered to boss the funeral when it came off, and to be one of the pallbearers.

Then Cyrus Barnes, another widower, was sent for. He was awfully sorry to find Jim so near the grave, and he was going to pull out a dollar and leave it with him when he didn't. He indulged in further words of sympathy, which made it 88 per cent cheaper for him.

"Cyrus, I've been a poor stick of a man," said Jim.

"You have that," was agreed.

"I ought to have been at work every day."

"We all know that."

"It's a wonder you folks didn't stir me up."

"For the good of the village. We talked of it many times, but we knewed that if we put on the tar and feathers you'd be too all-fired lazy to scrape 'em off, and your wife would have the job."

"That's right. She is good, Cyrus."

"None better."

"And that brings me to what I want to ask. She won't have a dollar after I'm gone."

"Of course she won't."

"She'll have to depend on the kindness of the neighbors."

"She will."

"Cyrus, you don't belong to any church, but you believe in heaven, don't you?"

"Yes, kinder."

"You'd like to feel that I was looking down on you and acting as your guardian angel, wouldn't you?"

"If you are going to keep up your business—"

"But I'm not, Cyrus—I'm going to hustle. I'll do all that I can for you if you'll sign this paper."

"What is it?"

"Just a promise to be kind to, and that you will look after Sarah. We shall both feel a great deal better if you will."

The caller looked upon it as a dying man's whim, and signed. When ready to go he said:

"I hope you will get a hustle on you up there, Jim."

Then three more widowers and one old-bachelor got the word to call, and in the course of three days the business was wound up. Then a lawyer was sent for the signed papers handed over to him, and a great calm fell upon the dying man. He smiled every few minutes, and made no understandable explanations regarding what he had been up to. A few days later he passed away, and almost his last words were:

"Sarah, if they want to be kind to you, let 'em go ahead."

There was kindness from every direction, from contributions to pay the funeral expenses to groceries and provisions sent in for the widow's sustenance. After about a month had elapsed Deacon Harrison received a letter asking him to call at the law office of the attorney who had the dead man's papers. When the good man came strolling in, only mildly curious as to why he had been summoned, he was greeted with:

"Of course it won't take pieces for a year, but allow me to congratulate you in advance."

"What d'ye mean?" asked the deacon.

"Your marriage with the Widow Bushwick."

"Shoo! What ye joking about?"

"Only this:

"The paper he had signed for Jim Bushwick was handed him. He had signed without reading, and now behold: "I not only promise to be kind to James Bushwick's wife after she becomes his widow, but to marry her one year after his death."

"By thunder!" exclaimed the deacon as he danced around.

"No better evidence wanted in a breach-of-promise case," quietly replied the lawyer.

"She can sue and be hanged!"

"Better settle for a couple of hundred, deacon, and carry off your paper. It wouldn't sound well to have people saying that you had your second wife picked out while her husband was alive."

The deacon hung off for a week and then came down. One by one the others followed suit. Each one was financially well able to do so.

"Money contributed by your good friends, and nothing is to be said about it," remarked the lawyer to the widow as he handed her $950 of the thousand.

"To this day she has no other idea about it. Now and then some one says something about Jim Bushwick's laziness in Deacon Harrison's hearing, and he turns and replies:

"Why, there wasn't a lazy bone in his whole carcass! He made more clean money in the last two weeks of his life than I did in the hull year! Yes, drat him, he did!"

Embarrassing Hospitality.
The Itugos are very friendly, and are continually offering gifts of chicken and eggs. They have a very strong drink on the order of tapul, which they bring forth on all occasions, and the etiquette of the country requires that one should take a drink. The continued invitation to drink this "congcong" was the most disagreeable part of the trip through their country.—Manila Times.

"Then I changed from coffee to Postum, being the first one in our family to do so. I noticed, as did the rest of the family, that I was surely gaining strength and flesh. Shortly after I was visiting my cousin who said, 'You look so much better—you're getting fat.'"

"At breakfast his wife passed me a cup of coffee, as she knew I was always such a coffee drinker, but I said, 'No, thank you.'"

"What?" said my cousin, "you quit coffee? What do you drink?"

"Postum, I said, 'or water, and I am well.' They did not know what Postum was, but my cousin had stomach trouble and could not sleep at night from drinking coffee three times a day. He was glad to learn about Postum, but said he never knew coffee would hurt anyone." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"After understanding my condition and how I got well he knew what to do for himself. He discovered that coffee was the cause of his trouble as he never used tobacco or anything else of the kind. ## TWO TERRIBLE CASES OF RINGWORM CURED

By Resinol, Itching and Disfiguring.
Chicago, Ill., June 5, 1912: "My little daughter had a running sore, which was told was a wet ringworm, on the back of her head from ear to ear, and also one which spread from one hip to the other, extending from the waist down. They itched her continually. She had to be carried on a pillow, and nights she could not sleep on account of the sores. She suffered terribly, and would scratch continually. I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and after about two weeks my child was well and healthy." (Signed) Mrs. Emily Skeinell, 2383 Graham Ave.

Noasville, Pa., May 11, 1912: "It is the greatest pleasure for me to testify to the merits of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment in the treatment of ringworms, from which I suffered for about five weeks until I found a perfect cure in Resinol."

"The trouble began with severe itching, affecting my face and neck. Then burning set in, causing me to lose a lot of sleep. In all, there were a dozen fairly large sores, with many small ones. The sores were very unsightly. I tried several remedies without success, until a happy thought struck me to try Resinol Soap and Ointment. It made short work of the ringworm." (Signed) E. S. # Canada Has Sufficient Coal for 6000 Years

It Has Enough Agricultural Land for the Settling of Millions.

A report dealing with the coal resources of Canada has been issued by the Dominion Department of Mines. The estimates given are only based on what is known. In the western and northern regions, which have been little explored, there may be vast deposits of which nothing whatever is known at present. The officials of the department estimate that of bituminous coal there is in Canada 73 1/2 billion tons; of anthracite 461 million tons; sub-bituminous and lignite over 100 billion tons. The quantity of coal now annually mined in Canada is about 12 million tons. With an estimated quantity of unmixed good coal, of 74 billion tons, it would require 6,166 years to exhaust the supply. If the inferior grades were included, supply would last for 14,575 years. Of course the coal demands of Canada will keep on increasing, but it will be a good many years before the quantity of Canadian coal mined will equal present output of the United States mines. Their annual output is about 500,000,000 tons. At that rate it would take only 145 years to exhaust the estimated Canadian supply of good coal, and about 350 years to get to the end of the total supply. And with the increasing population, made up of about four hundred thousand persons a year (and it looks now as if this number would be reached this year), one hundred and seventy-five thousand the opening up of this rich field of agriculture, and it is a high class of agriculture, carried on by the use of brains, and, where energy has not been endowed, it has become in that splendid air a case of inoculated energy. The rapid advancement of railways makes the situation easy. Today one may be located thirty miles from one of the many branches of the different systems. A year from now, the whistle of the locomotive and the long train of cars may pass the farm, the elevator is but a short drive from the home, a splendid market is established, and all the advantages of an old settled community are at hand. The prospects this year from an agricultural standpoint are exceedingly bright, and, relieved of untoward conditions, the farmer is already counting his bank roll, planning for more extensive operations for next year, and figuring on paying out for his farm. He is calculating what the increased value of his holdings, as a result of a successful crop, will add to his assets. Already some fields of wheat have been harvested, barley has been cut, and the yield is above his expectation. In fact, the feeling at the time of writing is that never in the history of any country on the continent has there been such a prospect of a large average crop, all over the three central provinces of Canada, as will be harvest-being an estimate of the immigration from the United States for 1912, the consumption of coal will naturally increase. The agricultural districts of Canada have now become so well known throughout the world, and the vacant area of splendid land is still so great that it may be expected that the numbers mentioned will increase from year to year, and it will not be many years before the immigration figures will reach the million mark. It may be asked what is there to warrant this large immigration? With millions of acres of land, capable of producing twenty-five to forty bushels of wheat to the acre; or, if in oats, from forty to ninety, and even as high as a hundred bushels per acre, or the same splendid yields of flax or barley, there is ample inducement to attract these hundreds of thousands who are filling the present agricultural settlements and pushing forward into the newer settlements year by year, and leave room still for the hundreds of thousands who will follow. There remains not only the agricultural wealth of the country, but there are also the social advantages, the home-making privileges, apart altogether from the financial opportunities, there is the life and the energy born from the knowledge that the settler is more than a unit in the upbuilding, in the making of a country that will soon rank amongst the first in the nations of the world. There is no desire on the part of the writer to dwell upon the success that has followed the American settler in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the coast Province of British Columbia, or to speak of the thousands of individuals whose hundreds of dollars have made them thousands, but attention must be paid to the fact that these people have done well. They are followed by their families and their friends, who also are doing well. Where, a few years ago, seemingly only months ago, there was nothing but the open prairie, or if we speak of the more central portions of these provinces, the park districts, there are today well tilled and cultivated farms, large farms, too, and the herds of cattle. Cities and towns are the result of ed this year. The railroads are adding to their already large mileage and have got ready for handling the crop thousands of box cars. The government agents and the railways are making arrangements for from fifty to sixty thousand extra farm hands in order that the crop may be successfully and quickly harvested, business men are laying in larger stocks than usual, real estate men are active, preparing for the rush of business that is sure to follow, and everywhere there is the note of optimism, which seems to be perfectly justifiable. There is, as has been said, a vast area of the country still open for settlement and homesteading lying in the center north. Speaking of this part a writer, who made the trip when the crop was in its green stage, said: "Just now, the whole country is a beautiful sight, as it presents itself in full dress of living green, varied in shade, many places elegantly fringed and interspersed with pleatings of shrubbery and patches of sweet-scented flowers in rose, yellow, white, pink, scarlet, cardinal and purple. In traveling over the virgin soil, I have seen some of the most charming rolling prairies, sloping hills, deep ravines, mirrored lakes, artistic flower fields, and natural parks that one could wish to behold, and all placed there without the aid of man. The land in general is heavily matted with grass, mixed with vetches and pea vines, nearly up to the knee, and many millions of acres of which are going to waste while beef, pork and mutton are scaring at prices heretofore unknown. The comparatively small acreage under cultivation reminds one of a few small garden patches. "When we consider the estimated crop of 300,000,000 bushels of wheat for 1912, to be produced on these western prairies from these garden patches, some faint idea can be formed by an imaginative mind as to the immense possibilities and rich heritage of a glorious western Canada." The estimate of the wheat crop, as made by the writer quoted, is excessive, but with even 250 million bushels, there will be a great deal of satisfaction on the part of the settlers.

Willing to Wait for Good Time.
A woman who for twelve years has conducted a boarding house in Chicago, and who takes pride in telling that "boarders usually stay until they get married and then send some one to fill the place made vacant by matrimony," anticipated possible complaints because of smaller portions of meat by placing a neatly written notice in the dining room which stated that the price of beef, mutton and veal had advanced to figures which had not prevailed since the Civil war, and that "everything is high in proportion. There has never been any complaint among my boarders, and I hope there will be none. I am doing the best I can and complaint will do no good. So please be patient. There's a good time coming and I want you here when it comes." The boarders are taking the reduced rations and are "waiting," one of them says, "with shortened belts, for the 'good time.'"

Fits the Text.
"Johnnie," asks the teacher, "what do you think may be meant by the text, 'Unto him that hath shall be given, while from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath?'"
"Uncle Bill says it means fat, teacher," answers Johnnie. "He says fat folks keeps a-gettin' fatter 'n' thin ones keep a-gettin' thinner, in spite of all they do."—Judge's Library.

The Kitchen Cabinet

IF WE want to keep our friends, we must be hospitable to them in thought, receive them in our homes, visit them from time to time, write to them, and answer their letters. Our friends should be in every station, of every age, in every part of our country and globe. Life narrows perceptibly when we have few friendships and few interests.
—Margaret Sangster.

DID YOU EVER TRY THESE?

A Banana Caramel Custard.—Scald two cups of milk, pour over three eggs beaten light with a quarter of a cup of sugar. Add one-half teaspoonful of butter and beat thoroughly in a double boiler; add two thinly sliced bananas and heat until the mixture is smooth. Line a basin with caramel by melting a few tablespoonfuls of sugar in the basin and coating the sides well with it after it is a rich brown. Pour in the custard and bake in a pan of hot water until firm. Turn out of the pan when baked, and the caramel will form a sauce over the mold of custard.

Dainty Fruit Cups.—Take the whites of four eggs after chilling until icy cold, beat until stiff, add a cup and a quarter of powdered sugar, a pinch of salt and a half teaspoonful of vanilla. The sugar should be added gradually, folded in carefully and the flavoring added toward the last. Wet a board, cover with writing paper and drop good sized tablespoonfuls of the meringue on the paper. Bake in a slow oven until a golden brown. They should be made in pairs to fit together again after being filled with berries or ice cream.

Home-Made Marshmallows.—Dissolve a package of gelatine in fourteen tablespoonfuls of water. Add four cups of sugar and fourteen tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Boil until the sirup forms a thread, then pour over the gelatine and beat until thick. Flavor with vanilla. Pour into a pan and cut in squares, roll in powdered sugar.

Nut Muffins.—Mix one and a half cups of flour with a tablespoonful of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt. Cut in three tablespoonfuls of shortening, add three-fourths of a cup of milk and a fourth of a cup of nut meats. Bake in gem pans and serve with orange marmalade. More sugar a quarter of a cup is liked by many instead of the tablespoonful.

lemonade for those who do not care for the hot drink of coffee, cakes and a salad with fresh fruit is a spread good enough for the best.

A pretty way to serve stuffed eggs is to season them as desired, then on each half lay a slice of stuffed olive. Sliced nuts and olives always add to such a feast and should not be forgotten.

With the thermos bottle icy lemonade may be served. If the juice of the lemons is extracted and the sugar and water boiled together, it will take but a moment to prepare the drink.

One of the most satisfactory cakes for an outing are sponge cakes baked in patty tins. Whipped cream that has been sweetened and flavored may be carried in a mason jar and the cakes may be cut open and filled with the cream just before the meal.

Carry the salad all mixed (if potato or salad not easily made messy) in a mason jar. It is easy to manage and not so heavy as a bowl.

For those who wish to cook something or make coffee, a sheet of sheet iron or a heavy piece of wire screening makes a useful stove placed on a heap of stones. It can be used for the top of a stove for the coffee pot, frying pan and any other utensils needed.

Fried chicken is a meat easy to carry and refused by few. If each piece is carefully wrapped in paper it seems daintier and is more agreeable to eat from the fingers.

If hard-cooked eggs are used, wrap them also, fringing the ends of the papers and twisting the ends. They taste better if they are pleasing in appearance.

A hot fire will dispose of all the refuse, plates, napkins, wooden or paper dishes, so that the return basket will lose much of its bulk.

It is a noble and great thing to cover the blemishes and to excuse the failings of a friend, to draw a curtain before his stains, and to display his perfections; to bury his weaknesses in silence, but to proclaim his virtues upon his house top.

HOT WEATHER FOOD.
During the warm months it is wise to substitute nuts, cheese, eggs and milk for the more concentrated meat dishes. Salads, fruits and vegetables of all kinds are both satisfying and suitable for hot weather food.

Potato salads are great favorites, and may be varied to give variety. This is one that is nice enough for company. Cut in cubes six medium-sized potatoes, add two cups of cucumber cut in cubes, one cup of shredded almonds, two tablespoonfuls of green and red pepper, a tablespoonful of onion juice; mix all together and add the following dressing: The yolks of seven eggs, gradually beat in four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, then add a half cup of melted butter, the juice of a lemon, three teaspoonfuls of salt, half a cup of vinegar, a tablespoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of mustard. Cook until smooth, strain through a fine sieve and add whipped cream to the dressing before using. This will keep for weeks if kept in a glass jar in the ice chest.

Potato Salad.—Take ten small potatoes, boil until soft with the jackets on, cut in cubes, add three small cucumbers and three stalks of celery, also cut fine. Slice four hard-cooked eggs in very thin slices and put the ingredients in layers in a salad bowl, with a sprinkling of grated onion to give the salad a flavor. Then pour over the following dressing: Three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one tablespoonful of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste. (This dressing is simply one to season the mixture.) Just before serving add any hotted dressing; one like the above cannot be improved upon.

Wash and cut in quarters and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Too long cooking spoils the flavor also. Then drain carefully and chop seasoning with salt, pepper and plenty of butter. Reheat and serve.

A pretty way to serve radishes, though not new, is to cut them to imitate tulips. Begin at the root end and make six incisions through the skin, running up three-fourths of the length of the radish. Pass a knife under the sections of skin and cut down as far as the incisions extend. Place in cold water and the skin will fold back, giving the radish the flowerlike appearance.

WHY COWS STOOD IN WATER

Artistic Limitations Responsible for Characteristic Attitude of the Humble Bovine.

In a north of England town there was a shiftless man who would never accept gifts outright, although he was always depending on charity, says Al Friddy in his book. "Through the Mill," relates the Youth's Companion. He painted landscapes, and my aunt, when benevolently inclined, would hire him to decorate our walls with rural scenes, highly colored in glaring tints, as if nature had turned color blind. Not one stood on the vivid green hills.

"Jorvey" she remarked to the old man, "why do you always put the cows in the water?"

"It's this way, Mrs. Brindin," the old artist responded. "You see, ma'am, I never learned to paint hoofs."

Telling the Truth.
On little Arthur's birthday, he received a present of a very large furry toy monkey.

Two days later, his father found it lying in a corner with both eyes missing.

"My boy," asked father, more in sorrow than in anger, "why have you spoiled that beautiful monkey by pulling its eyes out?"

"Didn't," replied Arthur briefly. "Don't tell any untruths," snorted father, more in anger than in sorrow, "or I'll punish you! Why did you pull the monkey's eyes out?"

"Didn't," repeated little Arthur defiantly. Then he hurried on, as father took off his slipper. "I—I pushed them in!"

FACE A SIGHT WITH TETTER

Moberly, Mo.—"My trouble began with a small pimple on the left side of my face and it spread all over my face and to my neck. It would be scarlet red when I got warm. My face was a sight. It looked very unpleasant, and it felt uncomfortable. My face was something awful; it just kept me in agony all the time. Some said it was tetter, and some said it was that awful eczema, but I rather think it was tetter. I had been troubled with it for about two years and tried many remedies, but got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"When I would wash my face with the Cuticura Soap and apply the Cuticura Ointment it would cool my skin and draw great big drops of matter out of the skin. You would think I was sweating; it would run down my face just as though I had washed it. It itched and smarted and I suffered in the day time most. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for a month and I was cured of it." (Signed) Mrs. J. Brookshier, April 15, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."

—Mrs. JENNIE GREEN, Covington, Mo.

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.

"Several women who had taken your Compound told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

"This world that we're livin' in is mighty hard to beat. There is a thorn with every rose; but ain't the roses sweet?"

SUMMER VEGETABLES.
The summer squash is one of the strictly summer vegetables and is most tasty if well seasoned. Perhaps the seasoning is the important feature for a more fat, insipid vegetable, is hard to find. A gentleman visiting in a small place where summer squash was abundant, expressed his liking for that vegetable; he was so fond of it he remarked that he could never get enough. The lady with whom he was boarding said he should be fully satisfied, as they had an abundance of the squashes. The first meal when they were simply boiled, drained and salted and served with no other seasonings convinced him that for once he had had enough. He decided it was the seasonings he liked instead of the squash.

One must be lavish with butter in seasoning this dish or it will be unpalatable.

Wash and cut in quarters and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Too long cooking spoils the flavor also. Then drain carefully and chop seasoning with salt, pepper and plenty of butter. Reheat and serve.
