"Littlest Rebel"

Strong Attraction Coming to Temple Theatre.

Above play is scheduled for East Jordan on Wednesday, October 23rd. The below article is taken from the Michigan City, Ind., News of October 1st, and gives a good idea of the character of the play.

"The Littlest Rebel," a good sturdy melodrama which serves to keep alive some of the early traditions one can not well afford to forget, was given an excellent presentation at the Orpheum Monday night, and the audience was well pleased with the entertainment. There is a lot of action in this play and the sympathy with which it abounds never fails to touch the heart-strings. There were many moistened eyes.

"The Littlest Rebel" is an example of civil war plays which flourished some years ago. Such plays were generally believed to have lost interest with the public, but to Edward Pepple fell the lot of changing the impression. The people to whom the struggle of the north and the south was an actual and painful experience now form exceedingly small minority of playgoers. "The Littlest Rebel," however, is of interest for its own sake, in spite of and not because of any factional prejudices. Its chief success lies in the fact that it is written on a formula that differs from most other war plays. The love of a gallant officer who wears the blue for a loyal daughter of the Confederacy is not the motive of Pepple's drama. It is rather the humanity that is stirred in the northern officer by the little daughter of a southern scout upon whose head the penalties of war have fallen rather heavily. It is the sorry plight of this little child which from first to last appeals to the sympathies of the audience, and the awful war itself becomes only a sombre and picturesque environment.

Little Violet Savor, who plays the little role of a bright little girl with beautiful blue eyes. This little character has been most successfully drawn by Mr. Pepple and it is admirably portrayed by Miss Savor, a movable little girl.

Upon her fate hinges the story of the play. For a juvenile her work is the best ever seen here. A leading lady hardly in her teens holding the center of the stage at times entirely by herself is nothing short of a marvel. She is a winsome little tot and those who saw her last night will long have occasion to pleasantly remember the "little rebel."

The leading male roles were taken by Marshall Farnum, as Capt. Herbert Cary, a confederate scout and father of Vergie, and Lynn Osborne as Lieut. Col. Morrison, U. S. Cavalry. These roles were taken in the original Chicago company by William and Dustin Farnum. Now there are three companies. Dustin Farnum is still playing Lieut. Morrison, of the northern army, while William and Marshall are at the head of their own companies but playing different roles from Dustin.

Mr. Osborne possesses everything necessary for a successful interpretation of the role of Lieut. Col. Morrison and his work was equal to that of Mr. Farnum, both of whom were superb.

Another real good piece of work was that of Martin Regan, who played the part of the negro character. He gave an excellent and convincing portrayal.

Helen Scott appeared as Mrs. Herbert Cary, and it was regretted that she was seen only in the first act. She was very good as the wife of the confederate scout. She has a pleasing stage appearance and a strong personality.

The entire company is a capable one and one would ask for a more vivid or impressive war play.

Lots of unemployed men would rather find fault than find work.

Some married couples can patch up a quarrel until it looks as good as new.

Most men would make a bee-line for the tall timber if they saw justice headed their way.

The man who is always on time wastes many valuable hours waiting for the other fellow.

As a fun producer a comedian isn't in it with a benighted man when he starts out to assert himself.

THREE "DRY" CANDIDATES

Of the three candidates for governor, Watkins, Ferris and Musselman, it is difficult to say which one is the most enthusiastic prohibitionist. By what trick of fate do the liquor interests find themselves thus candidates?

A few months ago the liquor interests were represented as dominating the political situation in Michigan. They had leagues and societies, organizations and clubs, lobbyists and attorneys, states and tickets in such formidable array that some people were inclined to believe that the liquor men had gained control of the rising and setting of the sun in this state, and that it was impossible to get a permit to shoot a duck or to get a burial license without the O. K. of omnipresent, omniscient and omnipotent liquor organization.

Governors! Why they made governors over night! But what do we find? They stake all on one candidate who met defeat, and now each of the parties, democratic, progressive and republican, has a prohibitionist as its candidate for governor (or is there a fourth, a prohibitionist party?)

Obviously, the liquor interest will vote for someone for governor in spite of this dilemma. They will choose one of the three horns. Which one? Surely not Ferris, the schoolmaster, the lecturer on plain living and high thinking, the sincere advocate of temperance and local option. Surely not Watkins, the study progressive fighter who has gathered anti-liquor legislation and who is as straight-standing in his prohibition principals as a plumb-line.

Yet whom have we left here but Musselman, the pronounced prohibitionist, the missionary of temperance, whose innumerable platform announcements on prohibition have given him a place as a blow-in-the-bottle, dry-to-the-death, out and out prohibitionist-advocate.

What is a poor liquor man to do in such a pass? Kidnaping of the candidates and ply him with liquor? Declare an election unconditional that does not provide of a wet governor? There is one other recourse. Take to drink.—Detroit News.

Life Mission of Wrappers.

In some localities growers have found it profitable to wrap certain kinds of their fruits before packing. Suitable paper of a light grade is used for this purpose, and if the stock is fancy, each wrapper has printed on it in fancy label bearing the name of the brand, where and by whom grown. The cost of these wrappers is very slight, and they not only serve as a means of advertising fancy produce, but they improve the appearance of the whole package.

Further than this, the use of wrappers has a tendency to prolong the keeping qualities of the fruit. One or more peaches or apples in a package may begin to rot. This condition causes a liberation of moisture that, unless checked, will spread and cause decay to develop in other specimens. When each fruit is wrapped the paper absorbs a certain amount of this moisture, thus checking for a time the spread of decay. Wrappers are also an aid in keeping fruit firm and snug in the package.

When a man proclaims in a loud voice that he is a gentleman it's a safe bet that he isn't.

One of our exchanges truthfully says that when pa was young, people who had bad colds, soaked their feet in hot water and took a few draughts of catnip and got well. Now they have lagripp take quinine and feel sick all summer. Then they had sore throat, wrapped a piece of bacon in an old stocking, tied it around the neck at night and went to work the next day. Now they have tonsillitis, a surgical operation, and two weeks in a hospital. Then they had stomach trouble and took castor oil and recovered. Now they have appendicitis, a week in the hospital and six feet due east and west and six feet perpendicular. Then they went to a restaurant as boarders; and now they go to the cafe as guests. Then they broke a leg; and now they fracture a limb. People went crazy; now they have brain storms—or are born crazy we don't know which. Politicians then paid good, hard cash for support now they send government seeds instead. Yes, times have changed and we all change with the times. That's progressiveness.

Will Warn Investors.

Orchard investment schemes which hold out offers of rewards in excess of reason are to be placed under the ban by the government, and in order to protect those who are willing to part with their money on these wild schemes warnings will be sent out over the country stating the facts and telling the people in the cities who are looking toward the land to hold onto their hard-earned dollars until they are sure that their prospective purchase really has at least a part of the merit that it claimed for it by the promoters who are so anxious to make a sale. These schemes include western apple projects, Mexican rubber plantations and banana farms in the Central American countries. These extensively advertised lands are heralded as sure money makers and the profits that they are expected to pay are so high that any person of ordinary intelligence would not take a second thought about them when it comes to risking money of any great sum in them. In spite of these unreasonable inducements that are held out to catch the unwary and those who are over anxious to get rich by a minimum amount of work, thousands of small investors are caught in the net and fleeced out of their savings. So numerous has this variety of easy marks become that the government finds it necessary to step in and take their part by warning them of the risks they run in taking a long chance on some other man's game, especially when he knows the game and the purchaser has to play his end of it by proxy through the medium of the promoter himself. It is a game that works both ways, but the two ways always come together in the pocket of the man who unloads the land upon his unwary customer. It is fortunate that Uncle Sam takes such a fatherly interest in his citizens, but on the other hand it is a sad commentary upon the business genius of the public to think that it is so incompetent that paternalism of this character has to be resorted to in order to keep the dollars of citizens where they belong.—Traverse Record Herald.

"It's THE BEST POLISH I EVER USED"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't forget the fact that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself. It makes a brilliant glossy shine that doesn't rub off fast. It adheres to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us: "I sent you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid form—easy to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill. Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silverware or hardware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

Tagging Bachelors

Tax for Single Men Is Being Urged Instead

By MOLLIE BROWN, San Francisco

UNDOUBTEDLY the men who first wore buttons advocated matrimony and wished for a wife. The old time bachelor buttons were essential to dignity and comfort and were not merely a tag of eligibility.

Mrs. Frank Page, society leader of Cambridge, Mass., blossomed forth and stated that a bachelor button (indicating freedom from matrimonial strife) should be worn on the coat lapel.

I doubt the advisability of tagging the dear boys who enjoy single blessedness.

What good would it do? It would not increase their usefulness, nor add to their popularity. Bachelor ensigns would probably mean, in the words of the old songs: "I'm Glad I'm Free" or "Darling, I Am Waiting for Thee," according to the viewpoint.

Some financiers say: "Don't tag the bachelors, but tax them." That is a thieving proposition and only married folks would sanction it.

The world needs bachelors—men and women—and they look good and do good without the label.

If there must needs be tagging done, I suggest that we tag the married man with a sign so large that "he who runs may read."

I don't think that bachelors pose as married men, but married men often pose as bachelors when seeking their soul mates.

Some sympathetic, well intentioned persons might say that a man encumbered or blessed (as the case might be) with a wife and family has tags enough. But is it not reasonable to suppose that any married man could carry the extra weight of a tag or button, bearing the warning: "Girls, I am not free, there are other tags on me."

Put a label on bachelors? Perish the thought.

A tag would embarrass those worthy bipeds.

Remember this is leap year, and all liberty loving bachelors cherish the inspired words of Patrick Henry: "Give me liberty or give me death."

People Must Live Within Their Means

By Lillian Swiney, Cincinnati, O.

It is well known that many men are not paid salaries that compensate them for the time they devote to business, yet the question in this time of strong competition is not how much the position is worth, but to find the best man to fill it at the lowest salary.

Nevertheless, when a couple is forced to resort to taking roomers despite a salary of $35 a month there must be a leak somewhere. People of today live in too expensive apartments, many men on this salary paying as high as $40 a month, instead of renting a four or five room stove heated flat for half that amount, and the difference set aside for homes of their own.

Again, our men and women are both clothes and amusement "mad." They crave and want everything new and the best in wearing apparel. Theaters and clubs must be indulged in, and what is the result? These take so much of their salary that the laws of God and nature must be broken and they refuse to bring children into the world.

Now, what is the result of this? Ill health and divorce stand out most prominent.

Rather than live in less pretentious apartments and wear last season's garments, of course a little old style in cut, but just as warm and comfortable, and shut themselves out of society for a season or more, they put out of their lives God's greatest blessing, children.

Until our people learn that a salaried man cannot live like a millionaire and that the laws of God and nature must be obeyed this great evil of divorce will not cease.

Critics harp on the unlovely voices of women, but what about the men's? For instance, a smile, fitted across the face of every waiting traveler when the guard called the trains in a Chicago depot the other day. I sat within five feet of him and not one station could I understand, but he made up for his lack of clearness by the huge volume of noise. It almost seemed as though he did it purposely. I never heard such a jumble before.

Ralph Herz in "The Charity Girl" gives a fine sample of the railway guard. It is not at all overdrawn.

And listen to the voices of young boys. One talks through his nose—"adenoids," comments the doctor. Another overgrown boy pipes in a tiny treble all head tones. Another chops off his words so fast you never can tell whether he is saying something or has swallowed a fish bone.

The fault lies with the parents and teachers. They should teach children to breathe properly and then insist on clear enunciation. One plainly spoken word is better than a dozen slovenly ones.

Boys should be taught the possibilities of their pent up voices. Let them exercise their voices as well as their muscles.

It is easier to prevent than correct an acquired habit.

To be convinced just listen to the average man's voice.

Let the boy alone. His father and mother should join their interests in other things, working together and keeping up a continuous flow of bright conversation. They should join forces in beautifying the home and surroundings and their own personal appearance.

Talk of your flowers, your home or of current events. Choose governmental questions or the abundant blessings of the present year—always something along developing lines. Speak always with enthusiasm and abiding interest. Let your tones ever express faith and sincerity in the success of the best things and in a spirit that dares to aim for success along these lines.

Good Advice for Any Young Mother

SEASONABLE MILLINERY

HANDY FOR THE TRAVELERS

Probably Most Convenient Pin Cushion That Has Yet Been Brought Into Common Use.

A pin cushion that lends itself to the needs of the traveler is a combination affair of cushion and jewel box. The leather frame is green, red or drab blue, is octagonal in shape, with a heavily padded cushion top covered with velvet.

This top fits so tightly into the lower part that none but the initiated guesses at the double function of the box. This makes it a safe-hiding place for trinkets.

An ingenious girl has copied one of the combination cushions by using a fancy candy box, six inches in diameter and two inches high. She padded the top with wool, covered it with pink chiffon velvet the top of the flowers in the gaily stamped border and finished the edge with a narrow silver braid.

Instead of using the bottom for jewelry, she turned it into a collar box. The dimensions enable her to carry more than a dozen collars without crushing.

BLOUSE.

Almost any blouse material might be made up in this simple style; pin tucks in sets of threes are made across the front and in center back, and one wide tuck is carried over the shoulder to waist front and back. The collar is hemstitched at the edge, and the wristbands are finely tucked in the center. Collar and small yoke of spotted muslin.

Materials required: 3 yards 27 inches wide, 1/4 yard muslin.

Begin With a New Hat.

"A new hat I must have," says the average woman each season, and a new hat she does have, even if she has to go without some of the necessities to get it. Now this may seem foolish to some, but in reality it is very wise. With a becoming hat, fresh and up-to-date, even though it is accompanied by an old suit, provided it is neat and trim, a woman passes as stylish and well dressed. Let her appear, on the other hand, in a new suit, with an old hat, dejected and hopelessly out of fashion, and she is immediately referred to as way behind the times. And so it is that the woman who is wise in dress matters begins each new season with a new hat.—Woman's Home Companion.

Good Parisian Idea.

The French are using flesh colored tulle in combination with black gowns. At a distance this has a startling effect as of an exaggerated décolletage, but it is decidedly becoming, because the faintly flushed tulle is much softer against the neck and arms than the white or cream tones.

WARDROBE NEEDS MUCH CARE

Amply Repaid, However, on the Score of Economy, as Well as Having Proper Appearance.

People are not all naturally neat and tidy, but often "a word to the wise is sufficient." If a dress is taken off and thrown to the floor, perhaps in a damp state, or even hung up undried, when next wanted for wear it will be found crushed and dragged; whereas, if care is taken to shape it well, place it on a hanger and hang it where the air has a chance to dry it, the garment will appear fresh and neat when wanted again. The wardrobe of an untidy, careless girl or woman will cost her twice the amount of her more tidy neighbor, and she will never look so fresh and trim.

Hats often suffer most. A hat comes bright and new from the milliner's, is worn day after day, tossed on a bed or chair when taken off and left for all dust and dirt to adhere to it. After a month's wear it is hardly fit to be seen. The girl who keeps her new hat for clear days, brushes it carefully, arranges the bows of flowers, then puts it away in a box or covers it with paper, finds it a pretty hat as long as she requires it. "A stitch in time saves nine" is a very true saying regarding all clothes. A garment is sent to the laundry with a small hole, returns with a far larger one, and at last is thrown aside only fit for the rag bag. If the same garment had been mended in time it would have lasted months.

Stockings should have special notice. All thin places should be neatly darned before they become holes.

A veil folded each time it is taken off will keep neat much longer than when folded; gloves pulled out and smoothed will wear twice as long as if they were crushed and tossed into a drawer.

Dresses should be folded right side out and covered with paper or an old sheet. Keep all drawers, chests and wardrobes neat and clean and all articles carefully sorted, not all mixed up in a state of confusion. Be neat and you will be amply repaid for the little trouble it causes you.

TOILET TABLE.

Tetter and ringworm are caused by imperfect indigestion and should be cured by proper diet. Local applications of iodine will give temporary relief.

An excellent tonic for the hair is made of one ounce of best castor or sweet oil, two ounces of bay rum and two of French brandy. Scent with rose geranium.

People suffering from indigestion should eat a very light breakfast. A raw egg separated and beaten light with a little cream or milk added is often sufficient and easily digested.

The best kind of exercise is the kind that makes you forget that you are exercising. In other words, play, says a physician. It's a good scheme to have some more or less strenuous game for a hobby, golf or bowling or tennis or archery—anything that appeals to you and affords exercise with interest. But this is not saying that systematic exercise is not a good thing, too.

The Dolly Varden Gown.

Each of the French couturiers has brought out a Dolly Varden flowered gown and, though differing in particulars, all these gowns are alike in one respect—the panner. A Dolly Varden costume without a panner would be like Hamlet with Hamlet left out, or something equally as disappointing; and, indeed, the panner, quite as much as the flowered material, makes the costume worthy of its name. Pompadour silks and flowered taffetas in new and charming patterns have appeared like magic in the shops to make these Dolly Varden gowns, and as a quantity of the silk is required for the draped panners, the folk who have been crying out against the small amount of material necessary now days should cheer up.

A man must draw the line somewhere, but the chances are he will get on the other side of it later.

Unhindered. "Yes, sir, the cause of woman suffrage is going to advance with gigantic strides from now on." "Going to discard the hobble skirt, eh?"

American Tools Preferred. A favorite sport in New Zealand, as also in Australia and Tasmania, is competition in wood chopping and sawing; and in these contests, which attract a great deal of interest, the championships are always won through the use of American tools. In fact, the expert woodsmen working for a prize would never think of using any other kind of tools.

Obliging. A young man who had never testified before was called before the court as a witness in a certain case. He was somewhat flustered over the attention that was being paid him, and mumbled his words so that the young woman stenographer could not hear them distinctly. He was told to speak plainly and to turn toward the stenographer.

"Speak to the stenographer," said the prosecutor. "At that the young man arose and with a deep bow to the lady said, 'How do you do?'"—Satire.

A Pen and Ink Snakeappears. Woodrow Wilson, on a recent visit to Atlantic City, referred good humorously to his rather illegible handwriting.

"But my hand is nothing," he said "to that of Horace Greeley." "Poor Greeley once quoted from Shakespeare in a leading article, 'Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true.' "This appeared next day: "'Tis two, 'tis fifty, 'tis fifty, 'tis fifty-two.'"

Wild Ones. Charles Grafty, the noted sculptor, was talking at his summer home at Polly Grove, near Gloucester, about the quaint humor of the Gloucester fishermen.

"In Gloucester one day," he said, "as I dived among the shipping, an old salt began to narrate his experiences to me.

"'Vunst,' he said, 'I was shipwrecked in the South sea, and that I come across a tribe of wild women without tongues.'"

"'Wild women without tongues!' sez I. 'Goodness! How could they talk?'"

Old Roman Wall Unearthed. A part of the wall which once enclosed old St. Paul's, London, has been discovered in excavations at the corner of Paternoster Row and St. Paul's alley in London. The wall, which is about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew Close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it, too, contains the drug caffeine.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says: "I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and a part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to."

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope. But wreck of taxi cab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Forster has a living time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time passing through the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Later blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Marjorie decorate bride's berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Marjorie proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Marjorie's classmates in giving couple wedding wishes. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annie Kattie, a fellow passenger. Marjorie vainly utters a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Marjorie reports to Marjorie her failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Marjorie finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Marjorie again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform gives Marjorie's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie is laboriously aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Train Wrecker.

The train-butcher, entering the Observation Room, found only a loving couple. He took in at a glance their desire for solitude. A large part of his business was the forcing of wares on people who did not want them. His voice and his method suggested the mosquito. Seeing Mallory and Marjorie mutually absorbed in reading each other's eyes, and evidently in need of nothing on earth less than something else to read, the train-butcher decided that his best plan of attack was to make himself a nuisance. It is a plan successfully adopted by organ-grinders, street pianists and other blackmailers under the guise of art, who have nothing so welcome to sell as their absence.

Mallory and Marjorie heard the train-boy's hum, but they tried to ignore it.

"Papers, gents and ladies?—Yes? No? Paris fashions, lady?"

He shoved a large periodical between their very noses, but Marjorie threw it on the floor, with a bitter glance at her own borrowed plumage.

"Don't show me any Paris fashions!" Then she gave the boy his congé by resuming her chat with Mallory. "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

The train-boy went right on auctioning his papers and magazines, and poking them into the laps of his prey. And they went right on talking to one another and pushing his papers and magazines to the floor.

"I think I'd better get off at Ogden, and take the next train back. That's just what I'll do. Nothing, thank you!" this last to the train-boy.

"But you can't leave me like this," Mallory urged excitedly, with a side glance of "No, no!" to the train-boy.

"I can, and I must, and I will," Marjorie insisted. "I'll go pack my things now."

"But, Marjorie, listen to me."

"Will you let me alone!" This to the gaddy, but to Mallory a detected wall. "I just remembered I haven't anything to pack."

"And you'll have to give back that waist to Mrs. Temple. You can't get off at Ogden without a waist."

"I'll go anyway. I want to get home."

"Marjorie, if you talk that way—I'll throw you off the train!"

She gasped. He explained: "I wasn't talking to you—I was trying to stop this photograph." Then he rose, and laid violent hands on the annoyed, shoved him to the corridor, seized his bundle of papers from his arm, and hurried them at his head. They fell in a shower about the train-butcher, who could only feel a certain respect for the one man who had ever treated him as he knew he deserved. He bent to pick up the scattered merchandise, and when he had gathered his stock together, put his head in, and sang out a sincere:

"Excuse me!"

But Mallory did not hear him, he was excitedly trying to calm the excited girl, who, having eloped with him, was preparing now to elope back without him.

"Darling, you can't desert me now," he pleaded, "and leave me to go on alone."

"Well, why don't you do something?" she retorted, in equal desperation. "If I were a man, and I had the girl I loved on a train, I'd get her married if I had to wreck the—" she caught her breath, paused a second in intense thought, and then, with sudden radiance, cried: "Harry, dear!"

"Yes, love!"

"I have an idea—an inspiration!"

"Yes, pet," rather dubiously from him, but with absolute exultation from her: "Let's wreck the train!"

"Don't you see?" she began excitedly. "When there are train wrecks a lot of people get killed, and things. A minister always turns up to administer the last something or other—"

"Well?"

"Well, stupid, don't you see? We wreck a train, a minister comes, we nab him, he marries us, and—there we are! Everything's lovely!"

He gave her one of those looks with which a man usually greets what a woman calls an inspiration. He did not honor her invention with an analysis. He simply put forward an objection to it, and, man-like, chose the most hateful of all objections:

"It's a lovely idea, but the wreck would delay us for hours and hours, and I'd miss my transport—"

"Harry Mallory, if you mention that odious transport to me again, I know I'll have hydrophobia. I'm going home."

"But, darling," he pleaded, "you can't desert me now, and leave me to go on alone?" She had her answer gib:

"If you really loved me, you'd—"

"Oh, I know," he cut in. "You've said that before. But I'd be court-martialed. I'd lose my career."

"What's a career to a man who truly loves?"

"It's just as much as it is to anybody else—and more."

She could hardly controvert this gracefully, so she sank back with grim resignation. "Well, I've proposed my plan, and you don't like it. Now, suppose you propose something."

The silence was oppressive. They sat like stouthearted hotties. There the conductor found them some time later. He gave them a careless look, selected a chair at the end of the car, and began to sort his tickets, spreading them out on another chair, making notes with the pencil he took from atop his car, and shoved back from time to time.

Ages seemed to pass, and Mallory had not even a suggestion. By this time Marjorie's temper had evaporated, and when he said: "If we could only stop at some town for half an hour," she said: "Maybe the conductor would hold the train for us."

"I hardly think he would."

"He looks like an awfully nice man. You ask him."

"Oh, what's the use?"

Marjorie was getting tired of depending on this charming young man with the very bad luck. She decided to assume command herself. She took recourse naturally to the original feminine method: "I'll take care of him," she said, with resolution. "A woman can get a man to do almost anything if she hits a little with him."

"Marjorie!"

"Now, don't you mind anything I do. Remember, it's all for love of you—even if I have to kiss him."

"Marjorie, I won't permit—"

"You have no right to boss me yet. You subsided." She gave him the merest touch, but he fell backward into a chair, utterly aghast at the shameless siren into which desperation had altered the timid little thing he thought he had chosen to love. He was being rapidly initiated into the complex and versatile and fearfully wonderful thing a woman really is, and he was saying to himself, "What have I married?" forgetting, for the moment, that he had not married her yet, and that therein lay the whole trouble.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Dehlah and the Conductor.

Like the best of women and the worst of men, Marjorie was perfectly willing to do evil, that good might come of it. She advanced on the innocent conductor, as the lady from Sorek must have sidled up to Samson, coquetting with one arch hand and snipping the shears with the other. The stupefied Mallory saw Marjorie in a startling imitation of herself at her sweetest; only now it was brazen mimicry, yet how like! She went forward as the shyest young thing in the world, pursed her lips into an ecstatic simper, and began on the unsuspecting official:

"Isn't the country perfectly—"

"Yes, but I'm getting used to it," the conductor growled, without looking up.

His curt indifference tossed Marjorie a trifle, but she rallied her forces, and came back with: "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

"Five minutes," very bluntly.

Marjorie poured maple syrup on her tons, as she purred: "This train of yours is an awfully fast train, isn't it?"

"Sort of," said the conductor, with just a trace of thaw. "What followed made him hold his breath, for the outrageous little hussy was actually saying: "The company must have a great deal of confidence in you to entrust the lives and welfare of so many people to your presence of mind and courage."

"Well, of course, I can't say as to that—"

Even Mallory could see that the man's reserve was melting fast as Marjorie went on with relentless treacle:

"Talk about soldiers and firemen and life-savers! I think it takes a braver man than any of those to be a conductor—really!"

"Well, it is a kind of a responsible job." The conductor swelled his chest a little at that, and Marjorie felt that he was already hers. She hammered the weak spot in his armor:

"Responsible! I should say it is. Mr. Mallory is a soldier, but soldiers are such ferocious, destructive people, while conductors save lives, and—if I were only a man I think it would be my greatest ambition to be a conductor—especially on an overland express."

The conductor told the truth when he confessed: "Well, I never heard it put just that way." Then he spoke with a little more pride, hoping to increase the impression he felt he was making: "The main thing, of course, is to get my train through on time!"

This was a fact. He was going to get his train through. On Time just to oblige Marjorie. She stammered: "I don't suppose the train, by any accident, would be delayed in leaving Ogden?"

"Not if I can help it," the hero averred, to reassure her.

"I wish it would," Marjorie murmured.

The conductor looked at her in surprise: "Why, what's it to you?" She turned her eyes on him at full-candle power, and smiled:

"Oh, I just wanted to do a little shopping there."

"Shopping! While the train waits! Excuse me!"

"You see," Marjorie fluttered, "by a sad mistake, my baggage isn't on the train. And I haven't any—any—I really need to buy some—some things very badly. It's awfully embarrassing to be without them."

"I can imagine," the conductor mumbled. "Why don't you and your husband drop off and take the next train?"

"My husband—Mr. Mallory has to be in San Francisco by tomorrow night. He just has to!"

"So have I!"

"But to oblige me? To save me from distress—don't you think you could?" Like a sweet little child she twisted one of the brass buttons on his coat sleeve, and wheedled: "Don't you think you might hold the train just a little try half hour?"

He was sorry, but he didn't see how he could. Then she took his breath away again, by asking, out of a clear sky: "Are you married?"

He was as awkward as if she had proposed to him, she answered for him: "Oh, but of course you are. The women wouldn't let a big, handsome, noble brave giant like you escape long." He mopped his brow in agony as she went on: "I'm sure you're a very chivalrous man. I'm sure you would give your life to rescue a maiden in distress. Well, here's your chance. Won't you please hold the train?"

She actually had her cheek almost against his shoulder, though she had to poise a tip-toe to reach him. Mallory's dismay was changing to a boiling rage, and the conductor was a pitiable combination of Saint Anthony and Tantalus. "I—I'd love to oblige you," he mumbled, "but it would be as much as my job's worth."

"How much is that?" Marjorie asked, and added reassuringly, "If you lost your job I'm sure my father would get you a better one."

"Maybe," said the conductor, "but I got this one."

Then his rolling eyes caught sight of the supposed husband gesticulating wildly and evidently clearing for action. He warned Marjorie: "Say, your husband is motioning at you."

"Don't mind him," Marjorie urged, "just listen to me. I implore you—"

Seeing that he was still resisting, she played her last card, and, crying, "Oh, you can't resist my prayers so cruelly!" she threw her arms around his neck, sobbing, "Do you want to break my heart?"

Mallory rushed into the scene and the conductor, tearing Marjorie's arms loose, retreated, gasping, "No! and I don't want your husband to break my head."

Mallory dragged Marjorie away, but she shook her little fist at the conductor, crying: "Do you refuse? Do you dare refuse?"

"I've got to," the conductor abjectly insisted.

Marjorie blazed with fury and the siren became a Scylla. "Then I'll see that my father gets you discharged. If you dare to speak to me again, I'll order my husband to throw you off this train. To think of being refused a simple little favor by a mere conductor of a stupid old emigrant train!! of all things!!!"

Then she hurled herself into a chair and pounded her heels on the floor in a tantrum that paralyzed Mallory. Even the conductor tapped him on the shoulder and said: "You have my sympathy."

Jewels Damaged in the Post.

An English insurance company, which issues policies in regard to the loss or damage of jewels in transit, had recently to settle a heavy claim arising out of jewels which were damaged in the post. A packet of valuable emeralds was sent to a firm in England from abroad. During the journey a postal servant applied the official date stamp with such vigor that some of the emeralds were chipped. In another recent instance a parcel of stones was so broken in the post that some of the jewels were missing when the parcel arrived.

PARASITIC FUNGI CAUSE OF MUCH HARM IN WET SEASONS

Leaf-Spot Symptoms are Everywhere Abundant and Are Really of Very Diverse Origin—Bordeaux Mixture is Effective Remedy for Disease

(By A. D. SELEX.)

The term "disease" as applied to plants means any change in that plant toward reduced vigor from the ordinary or average behavior. When a plant shows any deviation from the regular behavior of that plant in respect to appearance, growth, color of bark, foliage, fruitfulness, time of dropping leaves or length of life, in short, when the plant fails to conform to those averages which have been established by extended observation for the species and variety in question, the plant is said to be "diseased."

The more usual symptoms of disease are marked by evident differences in the plant. The leaves become spotted, curled or discolored, or may even drop unevenly or be marked by decayed spots, or the branches may blight, wilt or die. In all such cases we have a manifest loss of vigor and profit.

While most of these troubles or diseases are caused by parasitic insects or parasitic fungi, some are caused by a variety of other agencies.

The manner of disease attack is extremely varied and the conditions set up as a result of disease are accordingly of many different kinds. We learn to recognize disease by the symptoms shown in the plant; these symptoms will at times be readily interpreted and on other occasions they will prove misleading. Nothing is plainer than the necessity for continuous observation of growing plants if one is to be in a position to interpret the symptoms of disease.

When the leaves of a plant are attacked these show the direct effects, the symptoms of parasitic leaf diseases are usually localized injury resulting in spotting and often in browning of the leaf parts.

Leaf-spot symptoms are everywhere abundant and are really of very diverse origin. In any example in which the leaf tissues are locally invaded by a parasitic fungus we may expect evident effects. In the downy mildew troubles there may be wet rot symptoms when the weather is moist, as in the case of late blight attacking potato or tomato leaves; after the leaves have become badly diseased they may appear to die very suddenly because or sucking insects also open the way for the entrance of parasitic diseases. Leaf-spot of tomatoes is an outdoor trouble. It may be successfully prevented by about three thorough sprayings with Bordeaux mixture.

Current leaf-spot causes immature dropping of the foliage; in some cases the leaves drop even before the fruit has ripened.

Bordeaux mixture is effective against this disease, though late applications may render it necessary to wash the fruit. For this reason spraying should be done very early.

The progress made in plant disease prevention throughout the world during the period of about 26 years which has elapsed since the discovery of Bordeaux mixture in France shows how well adapted that discovery was to the needs of the times.

The progress made in recent years in the study and control of plant diseases has been made possible by the agencies recently developed in the United States in the agricultural colleges, the agricultural experiment stations and the United States Department of Agriculture. It is not expected that this advance in our knowledge of the diseases of plants or of the methods of disease control will soon wane.

Export of Eggs.

Last year this country exported 13,250,000 dozen eggs, valued at $2,700,000. Most of these went to Cuba, Canada, Panama and Mexico. It is evident that eggs are becoming a high-priced article of food the world over, for notwithstanding their high cost in this country, their export is steadily increasing. Not many years ago the United States was a heavy importer of eggs and from the countries to which it now exports them.

Multiplication of Weeds.

In estimating the multiplication of weeds, it is stated that a single pepper plant will produce 18,000 seeds; dandelions, 12,000; plantain, 47,000; and burdock, 43,000.

PRACTICAL STORAGE HOUSE FOR POTATOES

(By A. W. GILMAN.)

In sections of the country where potato growing is carried on extensively, most of the farmers have potato houses or cellars constructed for storing their stock and holding the unsold portion of the crop through even the coldest weather until they can market it.

In some localities the crop is stored in pits in the field until it can be marketed, but has to be shipped or taken to some permanent storage before winter sets in. These pits are made by merely digging off the surface soil to the depth of a foot or a little more, then piling in the potatoes to perhaps three feet above the surface of the ground. After that they are covered with a layer of straw, and then with the loose soil that was dug off at first.

The common type of store house on the farm is a cellar walled up with concrete or stonework, about eight or nine feet deep, with a low wooden roof above it—giving considerable space for the storage of tools, barrels, etc., on the floor above the cellar portion. These cellars are usually built on the side of a hill, so that the potatoes are unloaded down through the floor in the fall and taken out at a lower doorway during the winter.

the gradual invasion of the area has been overlooked. In many other leaf diseases no such rapid multiplication or reproduction of the parasite is possible and limited dead patches or spots are the result. The leaf-spot disease of alfalfa, the various leaf-spots of apple and the conspicuous leaf-spot of the strawberry, the beet, the pea, etc., will be recalled. In these, while the leaves are impaired as to usefulness, they do not perish immediately and one may readily fail to estimate the injury at its seriousness. In a few leaf troubles we have the spotting of the leaf followed by the formation of a separation layer in the leaf tissues between the parasitized and healthy

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to house-keeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health. "If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, headache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now. Eczema from boyhood Resinol cured him TOLEDO, O., May 10, 1912.—"I have completely cured my eczema. I suffered with it ever since I was a boy, and I am now 47 years old. My arms and face would break out, and I was tormented with itching, especially in the spring, fall and winter. My skin would turn red, itch and crack, and more so on my wrists. They would split open and bleed. "I was in a hospital one day to see a friend who had skin disease, and I found they had cured him with Resinol Ointment, and Dr. recommended it for my eczema. I used it with Resinol Soap, and to my surprise they have completely cured me. My skin is now clear." (Signed) FRANK J. STANLEY, 710 National Union Building.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment all nature is mastered by the scientific method and the human mind is being enlarged and its powers increased. Science has indeed made great strides in the past century, and among the by no means least important discoveries is that of the new method of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weakness, ailing skin eruptions, etc. There is no doubt, in fact, as is evident from the big size created amongst specialists, that THE RAPID is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell whether all we should like to tell in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—no, might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FIFTEEN BOOKS TO Dr. Lo Clark, Med. Co., Livermore Road, Haverhill, London, Eng., and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THE RAPID" is No. 1, No. 2, or No. 3, in what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unimpaired. Second Annual Land Show

The second annual Michigan Land and Apple show, which will be held in Grand Rapids, November 12-16, inclusive, is not only intended to be a display of the finest fruit grown in the best fruit state of the union, but will also show what a state can do in the way of growing potatoes, grain, hay, etc. An exhibit of these products of the farm is being prepared which will show that Michigan is still the premier state for potatoes, for beans, for hay and that it will soon be the first in the Union as regards the value and volume of dairy products.

But it is an apple and fruit show that the greatest efforts will be made. The finest apples grown in the state will be brought here for display. Growers from all sections of the state are sending in requests for premium lists and instructions as to how to prepare an exhibit, which indicates that there will be keen competition for the cash prizes which are being offered by the management of the show. The cash prizes aggregate over $1,200, and in one class alone, the five-box pack, it will be possible for a single exhibitor to take down a total of $175 in cash prizes.

Greater interest is added by the promise of some of the western apple growers to enter Grand Rapids with an exhibit of western apples at the time of this show. They asked for a space in the Michigan show, but if the Michigan growers do what they can easily do, there will not be space in the Coliseum for all the Michigan exhibits, let alone any from the west. Full information as to how to proceed to prepare an exhibit for the show can be obtained by addressing the Secretary, Martin Charles Huggett, Grand Rapids, Mich.

That the apple growers of Charlevoix County could receive a much better price for their fruit if it were properly graded and packed was again manifested this week. A gentleman in Chicago, at the solicitation of one of our apple growers, interviewed over twenty commission merchants in that city on the question of why our apples did not bring a better price. In every case he was informed that our apples were not properly graded and packed and that this was the main reason the merchants of Chicago were reticent about handling Michigan apples. Charlevoix County has approximately 40,000 acres of apple orchards and the time has come when the growers must organize and perfect plans for grading if they expect to get a reasonably high price for their fruit.

Sheriff Justice of Gaylord was somewhat surprised Sunday morning to awaken and find that the four prisoners, who were incarcerated in the jail, had in some manner effected an exit and had taken "French leave". The sheriff retired Saturday night about 11 o'clock, and all the prisoners were safely locked up, he supposed; at least they were there earlier in the evening. It is thought that someone had passed them a hack saw some time during the day and that they had sawed the bars of the jail, thus making their escape. During the night the dogs about the jail made considerable disturbance, but failed to awaken the sheriff, and it is supposed that they made their escape at that time. A number of deputies were immediately summoned and a search made through the surrounding country. Up to last night no trace of the fugitives had been found. The jail is located in the basement of the court house and is rather a flimsy affair, a number of prisoners in the past having made their escape.

HASTENED TO MAKE HIS WILL

Dyspeptic Convinced That Mistake Could Mean Nothing Less Than Imminent Dissolution.

The dyspeptic who gives prayerful thought to every bite he eats glanced dubiously over the French dinner card on which a dozen items were marked with a cross in red ink. "To my untutored mind," said he, "those things look all right. Some other fellow with a stomach has been here ahead of me and has marked off a few things that a Christian can eat without inviting sudden death."

In his delight at finding the dinner problem solved the dyspeptic ordered six of the red-cross dishes. They were unpronounceable and unrecognizable, but they tasted good and he liked them. When the crumb of the last course had disappeared the dyspeptic said genially to the waiter: "Rum old chap that must have been who ate at this table ahead of me."

"Yes, sir," assented the waiter. "He was one of them diet cranks that drive restaurant people crazy by marking up the bill of fare with red danger signals before the dishes that nobody that ain't got a sound digestion can afford to tiddle with."

"Good Lord!" moaned the dyspeptic.

Pleasant Quarters for French Prisoner

A retreat rather than a prison is the new institution which has been raised at Evreux, on the road from Paris to Trouville, says a correspondent of the London Globe. It is oval in form, much in appearance to that of a large castle, and is surrounded by a wall over 30 feet in height. It is situated on high ground overlooking the town, and to say the least prisoners should have a very comfortable time. Each has his own cell with hammock bed washing utensils and a table for books. The cells are lighted by electricity and heated by radiators. The authorities have not forgotten the spiritual needs of their inmates. The consideration of the ministry of justice for the welfare of the prisoners is seen by an electric bell at the head of each hammock, so that the detained, if he be taken suddenly ill, can communicate with the guard.

BURNED AND ITCHED BADLY

539 Lincoln Park Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
 "A year ago I received a very severe burn on my left arm. I caught cold in it and it was all sore and ulcerated. The sore was as large as a silver dollar. It was all red and inflamed and had pus running out of it. I suffered terribly from burning pain; could not sleep for two weeks it burned and itched so badly. I applied — Salve, — Salve and a salve my druggist recommended as his own, but got no relief. I then commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed the burned parts with Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment on a linen bandage. I got relief from the first, and my arm healed nicely. I was soon able to be at work again. Had I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment at first I would have avoided lots of suffering." (Signed) Harry Junke, Mar. 9, 1912.

MINN'S THANKSGIVING

She Had Something Important on Her Mind.

By DONALD ALLEN.

"If I was a girl I wouldn't go walking too far," said old Uncle Robert as a girl of 20 passed him on her way down to the gate of the farmhouse.

"And why not?" she asked as she almost came to a pause.

"Well, according to my ideas, it's going to rain and snow and blow and hail, and when the storm does break she's going to be a buster. You live in the city and don't know anything about the storms we have out here. I've seen it when we didn't have a train along for four straight days."

"I wanted to go to the postoffice to mail a letter."

"It's three miles there and back, and if I was you I'd put it off. Maybe somebody'll be passing that you can send by. To-morrow's Thanksgiving you know, and we are going to have the awfulest, biggest, nicest dinner anybody ever set down to. It's in your honor, you know. There'll be a turkey, a duck and a chicken; there'll be cranberry sass, pumpkin pies, currant jell, sweet cider and apple dumplings; there'll be—"

"I think I'll just walk a little ways, anyhow," said the girl as she opened the gate and passed down the highway towards the village and the railroad depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

Half an hour later, a middle-aged woman, with a motherly face and voice came out on the steps and asked:

"Pa, do you reckon it's going to storm?"

"Sure as ducks."

"Where's Minnie?"

"Oh, she's gone for a starter. I give her warning. What's she wantin' to mail a letter for? I hain't mailed a letter nor got one in 20 years."

"I think I'll just walk a little ways," years, and I guess I'm about as well off as most folks. I was going to ask her but forgot it."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, but it ain't none of your business. I reckon she'll tell me when she gets ready. Leastwise, I hain't goin' to do any numping."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that why she come visitin' us all of a sudden?"

"None of your business! I guess my own sister's daughter can come and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writin' ahead. What's on her mind, as high as I can make out, is about a young man. If I don't tell you you'll worry the shirt off your back. Pa, you've got to be as poky as an old maid. You can't see a pillar-case flopping on the clothes line but what you want to know all about it. Yes, it's about a young man. They are engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorter run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has writtin' him a letter to tell where she is?" queried the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and there hain't but one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see her."

"Can't see hide nor hair of any girl," reported Uncle Robert after going out to the highway and taking a look.

An hour later, with both uncle and aunt fidgeting about their girl visitor, the black clouds that had been banking up for hours began to advance before a breeze that soon strengthened into a gale. In five minutes the gray afternoon had become twilight. In 15 there was cold rain and lively hail, and Uncle Robert was blown into the kitchen to exclaim:

"I told her it was going to be a buster, and that she mustn't blame me. I started down the road to meet her, but—Lordy! what a storm! I couldn't get 10 rods if I was to die for it!"

Miss Minnie had reached town and mailed her letter and started back again when the storm broke. Before it came she thought she could make out a human figure on the road ahead of her, but wasn't sure. The very first gust picked her up and turned her around and deposited her under a roadside tree. She remained there until the gale began to whip the branches off, and then she held and ran for it. There were limbs falling all about her, and the hailstones peppered her until she ran almost blindly. She hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when, as she crouched and covered her face, she was struck by a flying limb and knew no more.

It was the dim sight of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He bent over the unconscious form and poked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a light and found the gate of a farmhouse. His lusty calls for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her in the road," explained her rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the man and woman together, "but you mustn't look for much. We are mighty poor folks. We hain't got no camphor nor whisky, and as for getting a doctor out from town—it can't be done to-night."

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed and she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger:

"I don't think she's bad hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

THE NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW.

As shows and exhibitions are supposed to emphasize progress, to bring out by comparison new and better methods of operation, and as this is an era of close margin in business, the best minds of the country are constantly engaged in evolving low cost of production, and marketing methods. It is reasonable to expect that an industry involving a billion of dollars annually, as does the dairy industry in America, must have the best brains of the day working out improvement in the vast problems that are attached to its many branches. That this stupendous industry might receive its proper recognition among the world's activities, a few patriotic men organized this association for the purpose of holding an annual dairy show that would be a short course in dairy husbandry unequaled anywhere else, mapping out a line of work to produce an educational event that would supplement the work of our agricultural colleges, which was much to be desired in the dairy world, and each recurring show taking advantage of experience gained in the previous shows has improved until it is today somewhere near what its founders intend it shall be.

Twelve hundred to fourteen hundred head of the best breeds of dairy cattle are promised for exhibition this year, being judged by competent trained experts on type and performance, with all records of performance and cost of production available, with what is best in the arts of breeding and feeding developed by masters in the industry placed at the disposal of the visitor, and with the highest achievement of the genius of man on lines of caring for and marketing dairy products before you, the '12 show promises to surpass all its predecessors, and it would indeed be a laggard who would not justify time and expense of attendance upon this great show. Within its portals the old-time can gain most useful knowledge for his daily farm activities, and a beginner can equip himself with the groundwork for embarking upon a successful dairy enterprise. The handful of men who commenced this show have been supplemented by several hundred others from all over the country who from contact were convinced of the integrity of purpose of its founders and desired to become identified with the work undertaken. As success each year crowns the efforts of the management, the feeling takes root with the dairy people that this show should be the mecca to which all men interested in dairy progress should make an annual pilgrimage and bring their fellows with them in goodly numbers.

This show is the mart for exchange of experiences and ideas that have made or broke those following the lines disclosed. It is the mart where all that is best in dairying, be it breeding, feeding, fitting for show yard, or developing to the highest standard of production for market purposes is discussed; where all that is modern in farm and dairy machinery is displayed in practical manner. Here the east meets the west; the younger rubs elbows with the veteran. In fact, no fair or exposition can hope to attain the value and importance that this exposition has attained. It stands today honestly administered for the dairy industry as a whole; it knows no breed or interest above another and is the highest exponent of all that is best in dairying. The seventh annual show, better equipped, with all features of merit amplified, new and instructive features added in the government educational exhibit, no matter what character of stock raising he is engaged in a day or two spent at the show must be helpful to the man who wants to advance in his methods and make more money from his farm. It is a farmer's show, the less pretentious scale you farm on the more need you have of its teachings. The railroads are doing a great work along their respective lines and they, together with the agricultural and dairy press, are rendering valuable support to this show. TAMING the HEAD HUNTERS of LUZON

A YEAR AGO and

THE head hunters of the Philippines are being taught to go shopping. It is an important means of civilization in the mountain province of Luzon—region of lofty peaks, deep gorges and primeval forests, inhabited by a quarter of a million people who eat their meat raw, drink warm blood, and indulge (or have done so until recently) an appetite for wholesale homicide.

As a means of civilization (under the direction of our war department), trade is being developed among these wild folk. In the past it has been necessary for them to make long journeys to the coast towns, to buy salt, cloth, and other necessaries. But within the ed up. A through route for horseback travel has been nearly completed all the way from Southern Benguet to the extreme northern end of Luzon. Telegraph and telephone lines are being extended over hundreds of miles of territory, and the watch towers on lofty peaks, hitherto occupied by native sentinels on the alert for raiding bands of head-hunting foes, are deserted.

At Bontoc (capital of the sub-province of the same name), wonderful improvements are being made. Here, where half a dozen years ago no white man could have ventured without an armed escort, the men and boys are being taught brick-making and lime burning. A deposit of magnificent clay for the purpose was found near the river, with unlimited quantities of sharp sand suitable for building nearby; also limestone. Today the people of the entire village of Minac, in that neighborhood, are burning lime and furnishing it to the government of Bontoc Province. They are becoming independently rich at the business.

These facilities, with unlimited labor obtainable for nothing under the system of the ten-day tax, make building work exceedingly cheap. A large brick school house and a brick club house, as well as a building for the offices of the provincial government, of stone and brick, have been put up at Bontoc; also a prison for wild folk who misbehave themselves, and a small, but thoroughly up-to-date, hospital. A canal has been constructed incidentally to furnish the town of Bontoc with an abundant supply of pure mountain water.

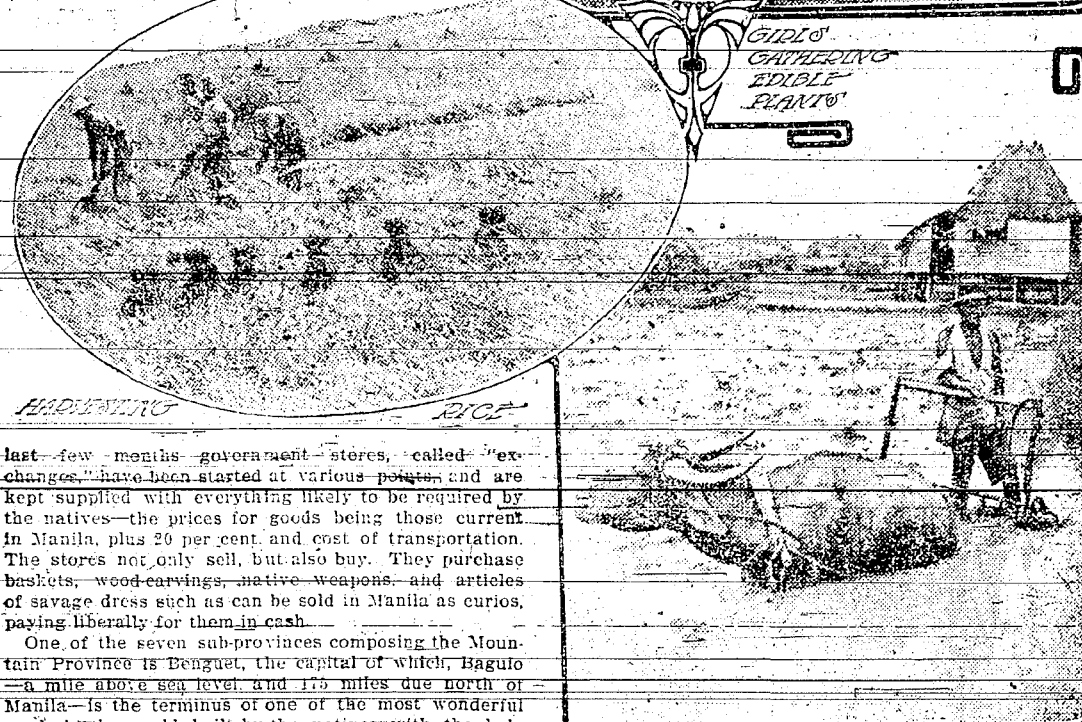

It is expected that the hospital will be of incalculable usefulness. Most of the wild people seem heartily willing to give up their ancient custom of curing physical ailments by human and animal sacrifices, and come to the doctor showing a touching confidence in the ability of the white man to give them help. Packages of simple remedies, with small pamphlet of directions in English and the more important native dialects, are distributed among the villages; likewise large quantities of quinine and other safe and useful drugs.

A recently discovered drug has been found to be a specific for the very unpleasant tropical disease called "yaws." It happened that a Bontoc Igorot, afflicted with it, was unwilling to go to the hospital, but was compelled to do so, receiving the one injection requisite. Then he began to complain bitterly that no medicine was being put on his sores. But the effect of the drug soon manifested itself, and he went about town excitedly demonstrating his improved condition to all who would look. Some days later he disappeared, and the doctor was much disappointed, because he wanted him for an object lesson to convince others of the efficiency of the treatment. To the great surprise of the hospital staff, he turned up again soon afterward with thirteen other sufferers from "yaws," whom he had brought a distance of fifty miles from his native village, in order that they also might be cured.

In Benguet the wild people are building school houses and sending their children to them. The boys are taught to construct looms, and the girls to use them for making cloth. Each girl, on completing her course of education, takes her loom and returns to her own village, thus extending her newly-acquired knowledge of weaving to her family and friends. At Bua is an Igorot girls' school in which the pupils not only make cloth, but manufacture articles of clothing for sale. Baguio, the capital of Benguet, is growing by rapid strides, and new and substantial buildings are springing up on every side.

Useful plants and particularly vegetables, including the Irish potato, are being placed in the hands of the wild people. Their agricultural methods at present entail great labor with limited results. They patiently clear a forest tract with bolos, turn over the soil with primitive implements, and sow seed. Then, after a short time, the growth of weeds drives them to fresh areas, where the performance has to be repeated. What the Americans propose to do is to provide them with modern tools of husbandry, and with carabao when ever possible.

A point by no means to be lost sight of is the fact that these wild people of Luzon are not savages of an ordinary type. Not only is their physical development superb, probably surpassing that of any other race of human beings in the world, but they are highly intelligent and even clever. Given the advantage of two or three generations of such educational opportunities as are now being afforded them by the Americans, and they will far exceed in intellectual qualifications the Filipinos of Manila and other coast towns. Indeed, it does not seem at all unlikely that in the future they, rather than the Filipinos, will become the dominant race in Luzon, controlling the affairs of the island and even those of the whole archipelago, in case we should voluntarily surrender sovereignty. In the meantime, while trying to uplift them in the scale of civilization, the government of the United States is making every effort to protect them against civilization's evil influences—especially the drink and diseases which have undermined the moral and physique of so many primitive peoples on coming into contact with the corrupting Caucasian.

last few months government stores, called "exchanges," have been started at various points, and are kept supplied with everything likely to be required by the natives—the prices for goods being those current in Manila, plus 20 per cent and cost of transportation. The stores not only sell, but also buy. They purchase baskets, wood-carvings, native weapons, and articles of savage dress such as can be sold in Manila as curios, paying liberally for them in cash.

One of the seven sub-provinces composing the Mountain Province is Benguet, the capital of which, Baguio—a mile above sea level, and 175 miles due north of Manila—is the terminus of one of the most wonderful roads in the world, built by the natives with the help of American engineering skill. Extending all the way from Baguio to the sea, it is carved to a large extent out of solid rock, skirting the sides of steep mountains and crossing deep canyons in many places by suspension bridges. For most of its length it is wide enough for narrow-tread carts, and at intervals of eighteen miles comfortable five-room rest houses have been erected for the benefit of travelers. Running at an elevation of 5,000 to 7,000 feet, it passes through tropical scenery of unsurpassed beauty, commands magnificent views, and should in the near future become a route much patronized by tourists.

The last of the Benguet Igorots to come under the jurisdiction and control of the United States government were the people of Atoc, who occupied a remarkable natural stronghold—a bald peak 6,500 feet high, which juts out from the surrounding mountains, its precipitous sides defying attack. In this rocky fortress dwelt the tribe, small in numbers, but warlike, working the rice paddies in the valleys below by day and seeking refuge in their eyrie at night. They preferred independence to submission. Nevertheless, being eventually overcome by force of arms, they are now entirely docile. Generally speaking, the Igorots are peaceably inclined. They are notably contented and cheerful, and the women have a voice in their councils, often exercising a controlling influence.

Strongest in numbers of all the savage peoples and among the most inveterate head hunters were the Ifugaos. There are about 125,000 of them. Bitterly hostile to begin with, they have become warm friends and admirers of the Americans, and their services, voluntarily given, have been utilized on an extensive scale in the building of roads and trails. By their own suggestion, they submit to a labor tax which demands ten days' work per annum from each able-bodied man. Several companies of Ifugaos constabulary have been organized, and do admirable service, keeping order among the tribesmen.

Equality of force—and as yet untamed to any great extent—are the Kalingas. They were inveterate head hunters until recently, but have almost given up the practice. Some of them are beginning to cut their hair and dress like Christians, and quite a number of the children are learning to read and write. One small group of their settlements adopted an attitude of defiance toward the Americans, and two years ago Walter F. Hale, lieutenant-governor of that province, paid the rebels a visit. When they threw spears at him he picked them up and handed them back with an intimation that such actions were discourteous. He told them that he wanted to be friends with them. But they replied that they did not desire to be friends, and that they intended to take his head at the first convenient opportunity.

Such was the situation of affairs up to a short time ago, when four settlements "broke the peace" and went on the warpath. Lieutenant-Gov. Hale, with a strong detachment of Ifugaos constabulary and assisted by a force of friendly Kalingas, thereupon organized a punitive expedition, attacked the rebel villages, and wiped them out, burning the houses and killing the pigs.

The situation in Apayao is especially difficult because head-hunting among the tribesmen of that sub-province is intimately connected with their religious faith. Nevertheless, the practice is being gradually stamped out and, with the help of the Igorot and Ifugaos constabulary, a number of murderers have been arrested and punished. There is still a considerable area over which government control has not yet been established, and which has not even been opened up by trails to any great extent, owing to the inaccessible character of the region. One should realize, of course, that head-hunting among these people is not regarded as murder in the ordinary sense of the word. It is a field sport and a manly occupation, established by the custom of centuries as befitting of warrior.

Most troublesome and untrustworthy of all the tribes of northern Luzon are the Hongots, of the sub-province of Nueva Viscaya. There are not more than 5,000 or 6,000 of them, but they inhabit a vast region, most of it very mountainous and almost wholly covered by virgin forest. Often their settlements are merely temporary, and they are hard to get at. Enormous distances separate their villages, which in the more remote regions continue to fight among themselves. These were the people who not long ago murdered Dr. William Jones while he was engaged in making ethnological notes among them. Nevertheless, trails are being pushed into the heart of their country; two or three government "exchanges" have been established; industrial schools are being started for their benefit, and efforts are being made to induce them to extend their agricultural operations—partly for the sake of rendering their communities more stationary.

One should realize that the continual warfare that has been going on for centuries among the tribes in the wild man's territory of Northern Luzon has been due mainly to lack of acquaintance among the people. Every stranger being regarded as an enemy, it was a matter of course that each village should be at war with the neighboring villages, and head-hunting was an important part of the regular business of every able-bodied male citizen. The tilling of the rice paddies and sweet potato fields could be carried on with safety only under armed guard—heads of women and children being not less desirable as trophies than those of men. For doing away with this situation of affairs, the most effective means has been the building of roads and trails by which the tribes have been brought into communication with each other, thus having an opportunity to become friends. Ifugaos, Kalingas, and Bontoc Igorots now work side by side with pick and shovel, instead of hunting each other with head-axes.

It is, in fact, a veritable social revolution that is being accomplished. All of the Mountain Province is being literally gridironed with trails and roads, the most inaccessible districts being open-

Whole Family Benefited

By Wonderful Remedy

There are many little things to annoy us, under present conditions of life. The hurry, hard work, noise and strain all tell on us and tend to provoke nervousness and irritability. We are frequently so worn out we can neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort. We are out of line with ourselves and others as well.

A good thing to do under such circumstances is to take something like to relieve the strain on the nerves. Mrs. J. B. Harrisford, 33 Corbett St., Atlanta Ga., writes:

"I have on several occasions been vastly relieved by the use of your medicine, especially the Anti-Pain Pills, which I keep constantly on hand for the use of myself, husband and two sons. Nothing in the world equals them as a headache remedy. Often I am enabled by the use of one or two of the Pills to continue my household work when otherwise I would be in bed. My husband joins me in my praise for the Anti-Pain Pills and Nervine."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

are relied upon to relieve pain, nervousness and irritability in thousands of households. Of proven merit after twenty years' use, you can have no reason for being longer without them.

Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin) in cases of pulmonary troubles. Physicians and I was a consumptive and my family physician told me that he thought I could not survive. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. CUCUMBER WAYS, OLD AND NEW.

CUCUMBER CATSUP.

Peel and remove the seeds from medium sized, green cucumbers, grate drain and sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste. Use wide-mouthed bottles, put a small white onion in each, fill with cucumber pulp and pour over enough hot-cider vinegar to cover. Cork and seal, if air tight they will come out like fresh when opened.

COLD CUCUMBER CATSUP.

Peel, remove seeds, and chop fine 12 large, ripe cucumbers, mix with 1 cup salt, and then turn into a bag and allow to drain overnight. To the drained cucumber pulp add 12 large peeled onions and six green peppers, chopped fine, 1/2 pound white mustard seed, 1/2 cup celery seed and 1 cup sugar. Cover with cold water and seal in cans. This makes six quarts.

CUCUMBER PICKLES.

Peel ripe yellow cucumbers, cut in halves, remove the seeds, and soak in a weak brine two days; then drain, pour boiling water over them and let stand overnight. The next morning drain off the water; and they will then be ready for the pickle, made as follows: For each quart, 1 good, sharp cider vinegar allow 1 pint hot water, 2 cups sugar and 1 tablespoon each cinnamon, cloves, allspice, pepper and mace, of nutmeg, also a hand full of raisins. Scald all together in a granite or porcelain lined kettle, then drop in the cucumbers and boil them until they are easily pierced with a fork. Can while hot in glass jars and seal air tight.

LATE PICKLING HINTS

Neyer use tin, copper or brass vessels for pickling, as the vinegar or acids cut into the metal and produce an unwholesome result. The pickles can be colored nice and green by adding freshly gathered nasturtium leaves, horseradish leaves, grape or cherry leaves. But do not boil these with the pickle—just put a few of them in the jar.

To make a strong brine for pickles, put in as much salt as the water will dissolve—better use too much salt than too little. A strong brine should float an egg. When salting cucumbers, some add water and some do not, claiming that the cucumbers and salt will make their own brine. I always add a little water, which seems to prevent the cucumbers from shriveling up.

County Normal Notes

The Misses Alice and Fannie Fell of Normal, Illinois, visited Miss Himes at the normal room Wednesday morning. Miss Fannie Fell gave the class an interesting talk on the founding of the first State Normal in the state by her father.

The new committees were appointed last Wednesday to take charge this week. They are as follows: Blanche Rogers and Hazel Gilman as house-keepers; Mabel Cliffe and George Hamlin were appointed as ventilators; Mabel Dunlop and Merle Brecheisen as the editorial committee.

Miss Mabel Dunlop and Miss Mabel Cliffe spent Sunday at their homes near East Jordan.

Miss Blanche Rogers spent Sunday at her home in Central Lake.

Misses Gilman and Brecheisen spent Sunday at their homes at Bay Shore.

Miss Sara Nicholson of Lansing, Mich., who is the county normal supervisor, was here the entire week working with the grades introducing the new oral system recommended by Superintendent Wright. The class was very much interested in her demonstrations. The progress of the children was wonderful for the short time she had to work with them.

Commissioner J. H. Milford was a visitor at the normal room last Monday morning and gave the class a very interesting talk.

The class made another visit to the garden last week and gathered the seeds, pop-corn and sunflowers. The sunflowers will be hung out doors after it snows so as to attract the birds.

The class enjoyed a letter this week from Mrs. Harry Clark, formerly Olive Sherman of the class of '07 also one from Marguerite Mungler class of '12, now teaching near Alanson.

The class gave a reception to the teachers, patron and board last Thursday afternoon, cocoa, nabiscoes and waters were served. There were between thirty-five and forty present.

TOM SAWYER DID NOT KNOW

No one could tell Tom Sawyer how to get white washing applied to the fence, but the art of mixing white wash has advanced a long way since his time. Whitewash is the cheapest of all paints, and for certain purposes the best. Lime, which is the basis of whitewash, makes a very sanitary coating, and is probably to be preferred for cellars and interiors of stables and other outbuildings.

For ordinary whitewash place 10 pounds quicklime in a pail and cover over it two gallons of water. Cover the pail with a piece of cloth and allow it to stand for an hour. Then dilute with sufficient water so it will work easily. This wash may be strained to remove sand and lumps and then applied with a pump. A "bourdeaux" nozzle is commonly used for this purpose.

For interior use where a whitewash is needed that will not rub off, use one bushel quicklime and 15 gallons water. Put the lime in a barrel, pour in the water and keep the barrel covered while the lime is slacking. Stir it occasionally to prevent scorching. Beat up 24 pounds rye flour in a half gallon water and then add two gallons boiling water. Dissolve 24 pounds common rock salt in 24 gallons hot water and mix with the rye flour, then pour this into the whitewash and stir it well. This whitewash is used in large factories and is recommended by insurance companies.

For outside use on buildings, fences etc., slack one bushel lime in a barrel with 12 gallons hot water. Dissolve two pounds salt and one pound sulphate of zinc in two gallons boiling water and add to the whitewash. Also add two gallons skim milk and mix thoroughly.

A formula used by night-houses is made by slacking a bushel of lime with 12 gallons water, then adding to it 12 pounds rock salt dissolved in six gallons boiling water and finally mixing in six pounds portland cement.

If an ounce of alum is added to the gallon whitewash it will prevent rubbing off. Flour paste answers the same purpose, but needs sulphate of zinc as a preservative. A pound of cheap bar soap dissolved in a gallon of water and added to five gallons thick whitewash will give it a gloss like oil paint.

It's easy to believe as you hope.

OBJECT LESSON WAS ENOUGH

After the Illustration Mrs. Jones Was Able to Understand Just How It Happened.

Mr. Jones believed that no one need ever fall down. It was pure carelessness, he said. Anyone who walked straight, and did not dawdle round, was in no danger of losing his balance. He said so to Mrs. Jones many times, but she only smiled in a provoking way.

One bitter cold January morning he changed his mind. Everything outdoors had a coating of ice. The path leading from the barn to the house was smooth as glass and slanted treacherously on either hand. On one side of it was an old cellar, where the house had once stood. Jones was coming from the barn, after doing the morning chores, with a pail of milk in each hand. He was just opposite the cellar when—zzzt!—out flew his feet and down he went on his back. The next instant he had slid in a shower of milk over the edge of the cellar hole, and landed on the bottom with a thump that fairly took away his breath.

He looked round in a dazed way for a moment, and then crawled to his feet. After making reasonably sure that none of his bones were broken, he climbed out and went limping into the house to tell his wife.

"Matilda! Matilda!" he called. "Come out here!"

Obviously she came. "Why, Hiram, what has happened? Are you hurt?" she exclaimed, startled.

"Yes," answered Jones. "I fell down that old cellarway. Come here and I'll show you."

Mrs. Jones followed her husband gingerly.

"See, Matilda," he said, as he reached the spot and turned, "I stood right here like this when—"

Once more Jones's feet flew up, and in precisely the same manner as before he landed in the bottom of the cellar. Silence reigned while Mrs. Jones gazed at the spot where her husband had stood. Then she saw his head appearing over the top of the bank.

"Hiram," she said, "you needn't explain any further. I understand exactly how it was done."

But Hiram's answer was a thoroughly ill-tempered grunt.—Youth's Companion.

Suitor's Question.

The damage suit was on, and Bill's dad's chauffeur was testifying for the plaintiff.

"Now, you say," said the pompous lawyer for the defendant, "that at this point the two cars, traveling at the rate of 30 miles an hour, came together head on. Then what did you do?"

The witness gazed wearily at his questioner.

"Why," he said, "I turned to my wife, who was brushing the baby's hair in the tonneau, and I said that I thought the dumplings must be done by this time."

"Bang!" interrupted the judge's gavel. "Stenographer," said his honor, "strike that fool answer from the record."

"And doesn't the question go with it, judge?" asked the witness meekly.

"Sure!" said his honor, forgetting the dignity of his calling for the moment.—Harper's Weekly.

Trusts.

While the great moneyed and industrial combinations of the present day, known as "trusts" are quite modern affairs, it is true that the trust idea is almost as old as history. Under the Roman Empire, and even away back among the peoples of Egypt and the other eastern nations, we find the germs, at least, of the modern trust. The fundamental idea at the bottom of the doctrine of the present day trust is that of the exploitation of the many by the few, and it was against such an idea that the Gracchi died in Rome. In fact, all ancient history is little more than the story of the few combining for power and wealth against the many, and that is all that the trust of today means.

"You bet it is," said Dubbleigh. "I came over here from Watkins Corners this mornin' in just fifty-five minutes. Going some, eh?"

"Ya-as," said the old gentleman, stroking his whisker thoughtfully. "Kin ye prove it?"

"I have witnesses in my guests," said Dubbleigh.

"Wal-ah! I'll take yer word for it," said the stranger. "Jest fork over twenty-five, and we'll call it square. I'm Justice of the Peace round here, and it'll save time to settle this here violation right now."—Harper's Weekly.

Another of the Species.

"Is this a little boy or a little girl?" a teacher asked when the new scholar, a boy with curls, came in.

"He ain't none of 'em. He's a slay," one of the class volunteered.—St. Louis Republic.
