Third Number

Of Lyceum Course Next Thursday Night, March 6th.

WILLIAM RAINEY BENNETT.

William Rainey Bennett, who is to lecture here, is known in the Lyceum world as "The Man Who Can." He has a lecture on this subject, the theme of which is that "he can who thinks he can;" that in every brain there is a sleeping genius and that it can be awakened. The lecture which he gives will do it. It helps a young man or woman to find himself. It gives him health, poise and power. It is absolutely different from the ordinary lecture of this type. Every laugh comes in naturally. Nothing is forced. Other lectures which he gives are entitled "The Master Thought" and "Machines and Millonaires."

Mr. Bennett precedes his lecture when it is so desired with a musical prelude, for he has a splendid tenor voice.

William Rainey Bennett was raised on a farm and, like so many successful men of the present day, has many a time warmed his bare feet on frosty mornings where the cows have lain. He worked his way through college, starting in with $10, he graduated with money in his pocket, having paid his way by singing. Since then he has done postgraduate work in two universities. His sermon lectures have been published in full as features of some of the metropolitan newspapers.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

Charlevoix Pomona Grange met with Maple Grove Grange on February 20th with an attendance of about fifty.

The lecturer being absent, a committee was appointed to secure a program, and to say that they prepared a good one would be putting it mildly for it was fine especially the singing of Emory Pierce and Ney Smith. Among the topics discussed were farmer's institute work, fruit growing, hog raising and milk testing.

After a bounteous supper Claud Bowen, Clinton Bowen, Emil Nasson, Emory Pierce, and Miss Pearl Chandler were initiated into the mysteries of the fifth degree, following which all of the members received the new pass word.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday April 17, 1913 with Peninsula Grange.

"THE COUNTY SHERIFF"

Fine Attraction at the Temple Theatre Next Wednesday.

One of the strongest plays that will be presented here this season is "The County Sheriff." The plot is novel, the central idea is clear, and the incidents are worked up with a degree of good skill and taste, that are eminently satisfactory. Its humor is one of its best qualities. Throughout the four acts, one breathes everywhere the fresh, crisp air of the western plains. It will be produced with a capable cast and beautiful scenic equipment at the Temple Theatre, Wednesday, March 5th.

Another Old Settler Gone.

George Whitfield one of the old residents of this part of the county passed away at the home of his daughter on February 21 after an illness for some time.

He was born in Oxford, England, January 12th 1822, being past 90 years of age when he died. At the age of seven he came to Beterboro, Ont.,

Can. It was here he met his wife, Miss Jessie Robb. She died in 1904. In 1867 they moved to Charlevoix County where he has since resided. He was the father of six children, two of whom are left to mourn his loss. Mrs. Elizabeth Metz, and Mr. Joseph Whitfield both of this county. He also has six grand children and one great grand child. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. T. Porter Bennett at the Rock Elm Grange Hall.

The Detroit Evening News-Tribune in the course of a recent editorial with reference to the plea of the saloons that the people of that city should "be fair" to them declares: Men who have disregarded every element of fairness in dealing with the community are now banging about the people's skirts and whining, be fair; When a saloonkeeper deliberately violates the law, and does it again and again, and the law relating to his license is invoked, shall we be less ready to act because forsooth it is a saloon? Because a saloon has gone on year after year violating the law bidding defiance to public sentiment, vitiating the atmosphere of its neighborhood, it does not thereby establish a "right" to continue such conduct. There are no "quatter rights" in the realm of bad morals or law breaking. They should go! If there is talk or thought of fairness in connection with the saloon subject, why not also be fair with one's oath of office, with one's city, with one's own decent principles?"

According to figures made public within the last few days, 40 million parcel post packages were handled during January, the first month of business, which grew in volume week by week. Chicago led in number of parcels handled 4,163,000 New York second, Boston third and Philadelphia fourth. From remote sections of the country, postmasters say that merchants are preparing to extend their fields of activity to the rural districts through the new system and that farmers are preparing to send produce to cities and towns in greatly enlarged quantities as soon as the spring season is fully opened.

To the Electors of East Jordan,

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination of Mayor of East Jordan, subject to the approval of the voters at the City primary, to be held March 24, 1913, and if nominated and elected will give my best endeavors to perform the duties with care, and in a manner satisfactory to the people.

A. E. CROSS.

Dated, Jan. 28, 1913.

To East Jordan Electors:—

I wish to announce my candidacy for nomination to office of Mayor of the City of East Jordan, subject to the approval of the voters at the city Primary to be held March 24th. If nominated and elected I will use my utmost efforts to give the city a careful and satisfactory administration.

LOUIS A. HOYT.

Political Announcement.

To the voters of Charlevoix County: In putting my candidacy before you for County Road Commissioner, for the two year term, I wish to impress you first with the fact that I am running independent of any clique, who wish to usurp the rights of the people, but solely as a Republican, who has the best interests of the people at heart.

The people of the state of Michigan by vote, through their representatives, have given us a primary law, which I believe in intent is a good law, and should be lived up to by all parties and men who are in politics in our county. I believe that a majority of the people are in favor of this law, and its just application. The point I wish to present to you is this: That a "bunch," not the whole nor even the best part of our county politicians, recently "got together," and my opponent for the two years term of commissioner was one of them, and planned a slate of county road commissioners, which it was understood was to be put through regardless of the wishes of the people. It was very cleverly done and a very creditable slate from their point of view, and came nearly working out exactly as planned.

In presenting my name for your consideration, I do not wish to say anything against the ability of any of the parties concerned, but I want to know if the people of this county like the idea of having this prepared slate passed up to them, regardless of the primary law.

I wish to be judged as a free American citizen, who believes thoroughly in a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

As to my qualifications for the office of County Road Commissioner, I feel that I am as competent as any of the candidates, and assure you that I shall endeavor to justify any confidence the people may see fit to place in me. I feel confident of the result if you will take the trouble to ascertain the truth of the statements I have made, and I earnestly desire your support. Respectfully yours,
(Adv.) HUGH C. MCCARTNEY.

"For Women Who Care"

OF ALL THE WEARINGS which a woman must choose, the Corset is most important. Upon it depends the fit and hang of her costumes—her poise and carriage.

In this adv. we will tell you about the kind of Corsets which insure grace and distinction to every figure.

Corsets are based upon correct fashion principles. They are designed to mould the figure into graceful, harmonious outline demanded by present modes.

They are not expensive garments, retailing at $1.00 upward—yet they offer the discriminating woman the best in modern cosetery.

To induce symmetry without causing rigidity, is the effect now most sought by down-to-date corset makers, and, in achieving this result, J. C. C. Corsets are most successful.

They are comfortable and healthful, gently persuading the figure into graceful lines without hampering the wearers freedom of movement.

Every woman can be perfectly corseted in a J. C. C. model. With intelligence and discretion, just the right style can be chosen for every figure.

In the Corset department of this store will be found experts who are especially engaged to guide you aright in the matter of selection.

J. C. C. Corsets are made of good materials and tastefully trimmed. They are boned with duplex boning which is doubly durable, rust-proof and resilient. May we show you the newest numbers?

Benefits of Women's Tight Fitting Skirts

By Alex Gustafson, Schenectady, N. Y.

As one who supremely respects womanhood and who looks forward to a new and blessed era for humanity through woman's emancipation, I would like to say a word in defense of the so-called "suggestive" garments. To me it seems almost incredible that ordinarily decent, respectable, God-fearing men should have the hardihood to denounce all women who wear such skirts as wantons, when surely everybody knows that multitudes of as good and modest women as can be found anywhere use these tight-fitting garments.

Women's overgrown baby skirts were far more suggestive to weak, prurient minded men than the modern tight-fitting skirt. But they were not denounced in any brutal or ferocious manner. Why?

Not because they were considered more free from suggestion than the modern skirt, but because they gave no indication that woman intended to free herself from male tutelage.

That is the suggestion in the tight-fitting skirt which so terribly scandalizes woman in the eye of her master. The clumsy, cumbersome, ungainly skirts worn by woman in the past gave man a tremendous physical and psychological advantage over her.

So long as she wore such garments he need not fear losing his mastery over her, and he might humor her by granting her education, access to industries and professions and even limited powers of voting. But when woman sets to work to revolutionize her dress, as she now is doing, then he knows that she is, indeed, earnest to break all her immemorial bonds of servitude. No wonder he cries, in the name of outraged morality: "Beware!"

Well, whatever is to come, of one thing we may be sure—the modern American woman has outgrown her swaddling clothes and will never put them on again. And that means that bodily she intends to become as free as man.

In due time after she has taught man a much-needed lesson in the rudiments of self-control, respect for woman and in true morality, she will devise a garment gracefully suitable to her form, which will leave all her bodily organs and movements free and unimpeded, as the Creator intended they should be.

Talking is Selfish Pastime With Some

By A. C. PHELPS, Minneapolis, Minn.

If you would talk well don't tell stories, long-drawn-out ones especially, unless you have this gift (as few have).

Nothing makes people so restless as an attempt to monopolize the conversation, and then the point is so often forgotten, which makes for a painful atmosphere hard to change. Rarely if ever, talk about yourself and your own affairs. To be sure, this command would render a great many women dumb, but the world would lose little!

The most personal experiences are often discussed with all-but-strangers; one woman was ashamed to acknowledge that she had her appendix, after every other one in a group had graphically described her experience with this member and its removal.

Talking for one's own pleasure is a selfish pastime with some people, and talking to break silences, which are painful to little minds, sometimes drives the spirit away just as it is hovering. We do not think enough and we do not meditate at all.

The old saints had this art, and their fruitful lives, purposeful, practical and loving, have been for ages examples of little talking and much good thinking, with character and poise as the result of both.

Many Roomers Dread Happy Holiday Season

By A. J. KING, New York

Why don't people who have homes invite those who have none to spend one of the holidays with them? There are thousands of men and women in any big city who dread the holiday season because of the homesickness it brings to them—men and women whose only home now is one room and who have to depend upon the boarding-house or restaurant for their meals, and, in many cases, the table talk of these boarding houses is all the social pleasure they have.

I have known of both men and women who have had to spend these days in awful loneliness and whose hearts ached as only those who have experienced such utter loneliness can appreciate.

The majority of those who have homes have "company" on the holidays, it is true, but in most cases their "company" consists of those who have homes of their own and who they know will be able to reciprocate in the same manner. But I believe that there are those who, if they realized how much it would mean and how much pleasure it would give, would invite some man or woman, without home and without friends to spend at least one of the holidays with them in their homes. If they know of none such themselves I am sure that if they made inquiry among their friends they could find some one who would value it.

Combine to Fight Evils of Divorce

By A. J. Greenfield, Indianapolis, Ind.

It was announced recently that churches of all denominations were combining to fight the divorce evil. If it is positively useless for them to think of bettering conditions to any great extent unless they start at the root of the evil—drunk. Intoxication is the cause of nine-tenths of the divorces, and if the churches would combine to fight down the liquor traffic they would be doing a world-wide good, instead of attempting to force one who is unfortunate enough to marry a drunkard to spend the remainder of her life in poverty and abuse. Such a course as they propose would not tend toward the betterment of society but instead would force people to worse lives and to suicide.

Let the churches start this work with their eyes wide open, so that they may make every stroke count.

Hundreds of young men and young women, too, could be saved from utter ruin—caused directly through spirituous liquors—if the churches would only combine and start at the bottom instead of trying just to skim off a little bit at the top.

When a girl has to tell how many men she might have married it's a pretty good sign that she sees single blessedness for her lot and has to brag to keep her courage up.

A man of ninety-two has just married a woman of fifty-two. There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream.

Unless more cattle are raised shoes will cost more. It seems impossible to grow a race with fewer feet.

Aeroplane Hat Is Latest Fad of Parisian Milliner

Aeroplane chapeaux are the "dernier cri" in Paris at this moment, and scores of these dashing hats are making their way to the Riviera, where they promise to be the rage. The aeroplane suggestion, according to the fertile imagination of Parisian milliners, is in the sharp feather at the back, which is supposed to resemble the propeller of an aeroplane. This hat is of very dark gray straw with a flatly applied trimming of pheasant feathers in shades of green, bronze, cream and scarlet.

FOR CALENDAR TEA PARTY SPRING STYLES ARE DECIDED

Entertainment That is Always Enjoyable and Really Requires Little Preparation to Be Successful.

This idea is not new, but it is a delightful one to carry out in this season. Invite just 12 guests and first let them write a set of good resolutions beginning with the initial letter of their names. Allow 15 minutes for this and then collect them to be read aloud at the "tea," which may be announced at 5, 6 or 7, according to the hour the hostess wishes. At the table outline the names of the months at each place and if the guests' birthdays are known seat them at the months allotted to their natal day. Of course, there may be several with birthdays in the same month and those may be seated as close to their month as possible. Seating them makes lots of fun. The names of the months may be in gold letters on strips of white paper. From the overhead center light suspend gilt stars by fine threads, one for each guest; at the end of the feast the hostess will say that they may pull a star and learn their fate for the coming year, that a noted astrologer had cast their horoscope and written the result on the stars. To make the table very attractive have individual unshaded white candles, wipe first with a damp cloth and roll in diamond dust. They will be very pretty, and the marshmallows may be toasted over them. The one who made the best set of resolutions may receive a reward.

Neck Velvets. The old-fashioned black velvet neck bands and wrist bands are in vogue again this season. The "neck velvet" is worn an inch wide, with one, two or three slides. These ornaments are in gold, plain or set with stones. This pretty fashion offers a suggestion for home work, the slides to be made from tiny pearl, steel or gilt beads. Growing out of the neck velvet idea is the use of black velvet as an armband or bracelet. These, too, have slides or ornamental sections, and can be used as an encircling band to hold the bracelet watching.

Ribbon Trimming. Evening coats have gauged ribbon borders, plain tailor-made costumes of cloth and velvet are bound with ribbon, while ribbon silk floral sprays and ribbon bows for neckwear have never been in greater vogue. Every day we are hearing of some new kind of ribbon and some new use to which ribbon may be put, says the Philadelphia Times. Ribbon is extensively introduced in the evening stole and muff with excellent effect, and lingerie is never complete unless it is ribbon-trim and adorned with ribbon bows.

The New Sleeves. The new sleeves are long—not the most comfortable mode for summer—but fortunately they are loose, on the order of a straight Chinese sleeve. Some are very noticeable on account of their bagginess, while others are those fitting. When they are not put into the regulation size armhole they are attached to an enlarged armhole, which adds to the general baggy, loose appearance of the garment. The extended shoulder is likewise shown on some of the new coats.

Straight Edge. In order to get the edge of table linen straight before hemming, says a contributor to Needlecraft, I find the place where the deepest cut must be made, and from that point pull one or two threads across the goods. It is very easy to follow the line thus made with your scissors, and the edge is made perfectly true.

Season's Models Are Unusually Early This Year Because of the Advent of Easter.

For spring, which, from the early date of Easter, will be pushed forward a little this year, the styles have been generally decided by the leading designers. Suits and separate coats will be the first to which attention will be directed, and they will fully reward the eager searcher after new things.

The length of the spring-suit jacket will be influenced by the general design. Cutaway models will be longer, and the simple tailored suit will be "wrist length"—which is about twenty-seven inches on the average-sized woman.

The skirts will show no material increase in width; but it will be there for the convenience of walkers. Slight drapings and pleated panels will be used, with fullness at the top of the skirt. This latter feature gives an easy line at the back, preventing the unsightly spanning which was so evident in the light skirts last year.

Eton and bolero effects will be very strong, and promise new becomingness to slender women. The short, dumpy one who doesn't tell her weight any more should shun these short coats.

The noticeable feature is the leniency of the coming styles. All types of figures should be given a mo-istic chance to appear at their best.

STREET SUITS

Bridal Petticoat. The bride or the girl who wishes something pretty and inexpensive may make for herself a dainty petticoat. Choosing white satin as the foundation, she has simply to sew upon it from the height of the knee a founce of lace slightly frilled on, but only slightly, so that the pattern may be seen. The petticoat looks exquisite when there is chosen for the frill a net applique with a scalloped design that recalls broderie anglaise in net.

Evening Coats. It is a few years since the mandarin coat from Japan was introduced into this country as a handsome outer wrap. Now they are being imported in large numbers, the result being an opportunity for a wide choice in patterns, colorings and lengths. There is also a wide range in price. Of course, the coat is largely dependent on the amount of handwork.

The Young Bride's First Discovery.

Their wedding tour had ended, and they entered their new home to settle down to what they hoped to be one long uninterrupted blissful honeymoon. But alas! the young bride's troubles soon began, when she tried to reduce the cost of living with cheap big can baking powder. She soon discovered that all she got was a lot for her money, and it was not all baking powder, for the bulk of it was cheap materials which had no leavening power. Such powders will not make light, wholesome food. And because of the absence of leavening gas, it requires from two to three times as much to raise cakes or biscuits as it does of Calumet Baking Powder. Thus, eventually, the actual cost to you of cheap baking powders is more than Calumet would be. Cheap baking powders often leave the bread bleached and acid, sometimes yellow and alkaline, and often unpalatable. They are not always of uniform strength and quality. Now the bride buys Calumet—the perfectly wholesome baking powder, moderate in price, and always uniform and reliable. Calumet keeps indefinitely, makes good cooking easy, and is certainly the most economical after all. Received Highest Awards: World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.; Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.—Adv.

BOY OBEYED ORDERS GIVEN

Meant Well, but Information Was Not Welcomed by Hotel Manager Just at That Time.

A certain New York hotel manager is one of those nervous men who constantly warn their employes against keeping them in ignorance of any happening around the place. He hired a new bell boy recently, and gave him the usual warning:

"Remember," he warned, "if anything happens around here I'm to be the first person to know about it."

Soon after that he was showing three haughty Daughters of the Confederacy one of the best rooms in the place, when the new bell boy rushed in with his hair on end.

"Something's happened!" he yelled.

The three Daughters of the Confederacy turned coldly, and the manager, anxious to get rid of the boy, demanded to know the trouble.

"That old cat down stairs," said the boy, "has just had kittens! What shall we do?"

The manager's suggestion was rough.

Not a Complaint.

"Miss Brown," said the art inspector, pausing before a student's easel, "you might with all propriety worship that drawing of yours."

The poorest pupil in the class looked up, surprised and pleased.

"I'm so glad you like it, sir. But why—why—"

His Status.

"Is that druggist well thought of in the community?"

"Sure! Isn't he a pillar of the church?"

Anyway, the leap year girl who proposed to a man was merely trying to make a name for herself.

COFFEE THRESHED HER.

15 Long Years.

"For over fifteen years," writes a patient, hopeful little Illinois woman, "while a coffee drinker, I suffered from Spinal Irritation and Nervous trouble. I was treated by good physicians, but did not get much relief."

"I never suspected that coffee might be aggravating by condition. (Coffee is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) I was down-hearted and discouraged, but prayed daily that I might find something to help me."

"Several years ago, while at a friend's house I drank a cup of Postum and though I had never tasted anything more delicious."

"From that time on I used Postum instead of coffee and soon began to improve in health, so that now I can walk half a dozen blocks or more with ease, and do many other things that I never thought I would be able to do again in this world."

"My appetite is good, I sleep well and find life is worth living. A lady of my acquaintance said she did not like Postum, it was so weak and tasteless."

"I explained to her the difference when it is made right—boiled according to directions. She was glad to know this because coffee did not agree with her. Now her folks say they expect to use Postum the rest of their lives." Name given upon request. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown."

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers—45 to 50-cup tin 30 cts., 90 to 100-cup tin 60 cts.

A 5-cup trial tin mailed for grocer's name and 2-cent stamp for postage. Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.—Adv.

The STOLEN SINGER

by MARTHA BELLINGER
COPYRIGHT 1911 THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Agatha Redmond, opera singer, starting for an auto drive in New York, finds a stranger sent as her chauffeur. Leaving the car, she goes into the park to read the will of an old friend of her mother, who has left her property. There she is accosted by a stranger, who follows her to the auto, climbs in and chloroforms her. James Hambleton of Lynn, Mass., witnesses the abduction of Agatha Redmond. Hambleton sees Agatha forcibly taken aboard a yacht. He secures a tug and when near the yacht drops overboard. Aleck Van Camp, friend of Hambleton, had an appointment with him. Not meeting Hambleton, he makes a call upon friends—Madame and Miss Melanie Keyser. He proposes to the latter and is refused. Melanie explains that she is of such birth in a German principality, from which she had fled to escape an unwelcome marriage. The three arrange a coast trip on Van Camp's yacht, the Sea Gull. Hambleton wakes up on board the Jeanne D'Arc, the yacht on which Agatha Redmond had an appointment with him. He has been taken from him. He meets a man who introduces himself as Monsieur Chatelet, who is Agatha's abductor. They fight, but are interrupted by the threatened sinking of the vessel. The boat sinks, Jimmy and Agatha are both abandoned by the crew, who take to the boats. Jimmy dives into the sea and reaches Agatha. They swim for hours and finally reach shore in a thoroughly exhausted condition. Recovering slightly, the pair find Hand, the chauffeur who assisted in Agatha's abduction. He agrees to help them.

Hand already, earlier in the day, had made a path for himself up the steep bank through the underbrush, and now Agatha went with him to the edge of the thicket. She watched and listened until the faint rustling of his footsteps ceased, then turned back to the camp on the beach. She went to the fire and stirred up its coals once more before returning to James. He was sleeping, but his flushed face and unnatural breathing were signs of ill. Now and then he moved restlessly, or seemed to try to speak, but no coherent words came. She sat down to watch by him.

After Agatha and James had been brought ashore by the capable Mr. Hand, it had needed only time to bring Agatha back to consciousness. Both she and James had practically fainted from exhaustion, and James had been nearly drowned, at the last minute. Agatha had been left on the rocks to come to herself as she would, while Hand had rubbed—and pummeled James until the blood flowed again. It had flowed too freely indeed, at some time during his ordeal, and tiny trickles of blood showed on his lips. Agatha, dazed and aching, was trying to crawl up to the sand when Hand came back to her, running lightly over the slippery rocks. They had come in on the flowing tide, which had aided them greatly; and now Hand helped her the short distance to the cave and mercifully let her lie, while he went back to his work for James.

Later he had got a little bucket, used for balling out the rowboat, and dashed hurriedly into the thicket above after some tinkling cowbells. Though she was too tired to question him, Agatha supposed he had tied one of the cows to a tree, since he returned three or four times to fill the pail. What a wonderful life-giver milk was! She had drunk her fill and had tried to feed it to James, who at first tasted eagerly, but had, on the whole, taken very little. He was only partly awake, but he shivered and weakly murmured that he was cold. Agatha quickly grew stronger; and she and Hand set to work to prepare the fire and the bed. Almost while they were at this labor, the sun had gone down.

Sitting by Jim's couch, Agatha grew sleepy and cold, but there were no more coverings. Hand's coat was over Jim, and as Agatha herself felt the cold more keenly she tucked it closer about him. Alone as she was now, in solitude with this man who had saved her from the waters, with darkness and the night again coming on, her spirit shrank; not so much from fear, as from that premonition of the future which now and then assails the human heart.

As she knelt by Jim's side, covering his feet with the coat and heaping the fir boughs over him, she paused to look at his unconscious face. She knew now that he did not belong to the crew of the Jeanne D'Arc; but of his outward circumstances she knew nothing more. Thirty she guessed him to be, thereby coming within four years of the truth. His short mustache concealed his mouth, and his eyes were closed. It was almost like looking at the mask of a face. The rough beard of a week's growth made a deep shadow over the lower part of his face; and yet, behind the mask, she thought she could see some token of a real man, not without his attributes of divinity. In the ordeal of the night before he had shown the highest order of patience, endurance and courage, together with a sweetness of temper that was itself loveable. But beyond this, what sort of man was he? Agatha could not tell. She had seen many men of many types, and perhaps she recognized James as belonging to a type; but if so, it was the type that stands for the best of New England stock. In the centuries back it may have brought forth fanatics and extremists; at times it may have built up its narrow walls of prejudice and pride; but at the core it was sound and manly, and responsive to the call of the spirit.

Something of all this passed through Agatha's mind, as she tried to read Jim's face; then, as he stirred uneasily and tried to throw off the light boughs that she had spread over him, she got up and went to the edge of the water to moisten afresh the bandage for his forehead. Involuntarily she shuddered at sight of the dark water, though the lapping waves, rushing up farther and farther with the incoming tide, were gentle enough to soothe a child. She hurried back to Jim's couch and laid the cooling compress across his forehead. The balsam boughs about them breathed their fragrance on the night air, and the pleasant gloom rested their tired eyes. Gradually he quieted down again; his restlessness ceased. The long twilight deepened into darkness, or rather into that thin luminous blue shade which is the darkness of starlit summer nights. The sea washed the beach with its murmuring caress; somewhere in the thicket above a night-bird called.

In a cranny of the rocks Agatha hollowed out the sand, still warm beneath the surface here where the sun had lain on it through long summer days, and made for herself a bed and coverlet and pillow all at once. With the sand piled around and over her, she could not really suffer; and she was mortally tired.

She looked up toward the clear stars, Vega and the jeweled cross almost in the zenith, and ruddy Antares in the body of the shining Scorpion. They were watching her, she thought, tonight in her peace as they had watched her last night in her struggle, and as they would watch after all her days and nights were done. And then she thought no more. Sleep, blessed gift, descended upon her.

CHAPTER X.

The Heart of Youth.
"Agatha Redmond, can you hear me?"

She caught the voice faintly, as if it were a child's cry. "I'm right here, yes; only wait just a second." She could not instantly free herself from her sandy coverings, but she was wide awake almost at the first words James had spoken. Faint as the voice had been, she recognized the natural tones, the strongest he had uttered since coming out of the water.

The night had grown cold and dark, and at first she was a trifle bewildered. She was also stiff and sore, almost beyond bearing. She had to creep along the sand to where Jim lay. The fire had burned wholly out, and the sand felt damp as she crawled over it. When she came near, she reached out her hand and laid it on Jim's forehead. He was shivering with cold.

"You poor man! And I sleeping while I ought to be taking care of you! I'll make the fire and get some milk; there is still a little left." As she tried to make her aching bones lift her to her feet, she became aware that the man was fumbling at his coverings and trying to say something. She bent down to hear his words, which were incredibly faint.

"I don't want any fire or any milk. I only wanted to know if you were there," he said diffidently, as if ashamed of his childishness. She leaned over him, speaking gently and touching his head softly with her firm, cold hands.

"You're a little better now, aren't you, after your sleep? Don't you feel a little stronger?"

"Yes, I'm better, lots better," he whispered. "I must have been sleeping for ages. When I woke up I thought I had a beastly chill or something; but I'm all right now; only suddenly I felt as if I must know if you were there, and if it was you."

He smiled at his own words, and Agatha was reassured. "I think you'll be still better for a little while," she said, and crept away to get the pail, which had been hidden on a shelf of rock. When she came back with it, James tried manfully to sit up; but Agatha slipped an arm under his neck, in skilful nurse fashion, and held the bucket while he drank, almost greedily. As he sank back on his bed he whispered: "You are very good to take care of me."

"Oh, no; I'm only too glad! And now I'm going to build up the fire again; your hands are quite cold." "No, don't go," he pleaded. "Please stay here; I'm not cold any more. And you must go to sleep again. I ought not to have wakened you; and, really, I didn't mean to."

"Yes, you ought. I've had lots of sleep; I don't want any more." "It's dark, but it's better than it was that other night, isn't it?" said James.

"Much better," answered Agatha. James visibly gathered strength from the milk, and presently he took some more. Agatha watched, and when he had finished, patted him approvingly on the hand. "Good boy! You've done very well," she cried.

"I was so thirsty, I thought the whole earth had run dry. Will you think me very ungrateful if I say now I wish it had been water?"

"Oh, no; I wish so, too. But Mr. Hand could only get us a little bit from a spring, for there isn't any other pail."

It was some time before Jim made out to inquire, "Who's Mr. Hand?"

"He's the man that helped us out of the water—when we became exhausted."

Agatha hesitated to speak of the night's experience, uncertain how far Jim's memory carried him, and not knowing how a sick man, in his weakness, might be affected. Still, now that he seemed almost himself again, save for the chill, she ventured to refer to the event, speaking in a matter-of-fact way, as if such endurance tests were the most natural events in the world. James' speech was quite coherent and distinct, but very slow, as if the efforts to speak came from the depths of a profound fatigue.

"Hand—that's a good name for him. I thought it was the hand of God, which plucked me, like David, or Jonah, or some such person, out of the seething billows. But I didn't think of there being a man behind."

Then, after a long silence, "Where is he?"

"He's gone off to find somebody to help us get away from here; a carriage or wagon of some sort, and some food and clothes."

Something caused Jim to ejaculate, though quite feebly, "You poor thing!" And then he asked, very slowly, "Where is there?"

"I don't know; and Mr. Hand doesn't know."

"And we've lost our tags," laughed Jim faintly.

Agatha couldn't resist the laugh, though the weakness in Jim's voice was almost enough to make her weep as well.

"Yes, we've lost our tags, more's the pity. Mr. Hand thinks we're either on the coast of Maine, or on an island somewhere near the coast. I myself think it must be at least Nova Scotia, or possibly Newfoundland. But Hand will find out and be back soon, and then we'll get away from here and go to some place where we'll all be comfortable."

Agatha stole away, and with much difficulty succeeded in kindling the fire again. She tended it until a good steady heat spread over the rocks, and then returned to James. She curled up, half sitting, half lying, against the rocks.

Clouds had risen during the recent hours, and it was much darker than the night before had been. The ocean, washing its million pebbles up on the little beach, moaned and complained incessantly. In the long interval between their talk, Agatha's head would fall, her eyes would close, and she would almost sleep; but an undercurrent of anxiety concerning her companion kept her always at the edge of consciousness. James himself appeared to have no desire to sleep. He was trying to piece together, in his mind, his conscious and unconscious memories. At last he said:

"I guess I haven't been much good—for a while—have I?" Agatha considered before replying. "You were quite exhausted, I think; and we feared you might be ill."

"Early in the morning, I hope," said Agatha, swallowing her misgivings. "That's good," said James. "I think I'll be about and good for something myself by that time."

There was another long pause, so long that Agatha thought James must have gone to sleep again. He thought likewise of her, it appeared; for when he next spoke it was in a careful whisper: "Are you still awake, Agatha Redmond?"

"Yes, indeed; quite. Do you want anything?"

"Yes, a number of things. First, are you quite recovered from the trouble—that night's awful trouble?" He seemed to be wholly lost as to time. "Did you come off without any serious injury? Do you look like yourself, strong and rosy-cheeked again?"

Agatha replied heartily to this, and her answer appeared to satisfy James for the moment. "Though," she added, "here in the dark, who can tell whether I have rosy cheeks or not?"

"True!" sighed James, but his sigh was not an unhappy one. Presently he began once more: "I want to know, too, if you weren't surprised that I knew your name?"

"Well, yes a little, when I had time to think about it. How did you know it?"

James laughed. I meant to keep it a secret, always; but I guess I'll tell, after all—just you. I got it from the program, that Sunday, you know."

"Ah, yes, I understand." She didn't quite understand, at first; for there had been other Sundays and other songs. But she could not weary him now with questions.

As they lay there the slow, monotonous susurrus of the sea made a deep accompaniment to their words. It was near, and yet immeasurably far, filling the universe with its soft but insistent sound and echoes of sound. At the back of her mind, Agatha heard it always, low, threatening, and strong; but on the surface of her thoughts, she was trying to decide what she ought to do. She was thinking whether she might question her companion a little concerning himself, when he answered her, in part, of his own accord.

"You couldn't know who I am, of course; James Hambleton, of Lynn, Jim, Jimmy, Jimsy, Bud—I'm called most anything. But I wanted to tell you—in fact, that's what I waked up expressly for—I wanted to tell you."

He paused so long, that Agatha leaned over, trying to see his face. The violence of the chill had passed. His eyes were wide open, his face alarmingly pale. She felt a sudden quail of pain, lest illness and exhaustion had wrought havoc in his frame deeper than she knew. But as she bent over him, his features lighted up with his rare smile—an expression full of happiness and peace. He lifted a hand, feebly, and she took it in both her own. She felt that thus, hand in hand, they were nearer; that thus she could better be of help to him.

"I wanted to tell you," he began again, "that whatever happens, I'm glad I did it."

"Did what, dear friend?" questioned Agatha, thinking in her heart that the fever had set his wits to wandering.

"Glad I followed the Face and the Voice," he answered feebly. Agatha watched him closely, torn with anxiety. She couldn't bear to see him suffer—this man who had so suddenly become a friend, who had been so brave and unselfish for her sake, who had been so cheerful throughout their night of trouble.

"I told old Aleck," James went on, "that I'd have to jump the fence; but that was ages ago. I've been barned down so long that I thought I'd gone to sleep, sure enough." Agatha thought certainly that now he was delirious, but she had no heart to stop his gentle earnestness. He went on: "But you woke me up. And I wouldn't have missed this last run, not for anything. 'Twas a great night, that night on the water, with you; and whatever happens, I shall always think that worth living for; yes, well worth living for."

James' voice died away into incoherence and at last into silence. Agatha, holding his hands in hers, watched him as he sank away from her into some realm whither she could not follow. Either his hour of sanity and calmness had passed, and fever had taken hold upon his system; or fatigue, mental and physical, had overpowered him once more. Presently she dropped his hand gently, looked to the coverings of his couch, and settled herself down again to rest.

But no more sleep came to her eyes that night. She thought over all that James had said, remembering his words vividly. Then her thoughts went back over the years, recalling she knew not what irrelevant matters from the past. Perhaps by some underlying law of association, there came to her mind, also, the words of the song she had sung on the Sunday which James had referred to—

"Free of my pain, free of my burden of sorrow.
At last I shall see thee—"

CHAPTER XI.

The Home Port.
The darkness of the night slowly lifted, revealing only a gray, leaden sky. There was no dawn such as had gladdened their hearts the morning before, no fresh awakening of the day. Instead, the coldness and gloom of the night seemed but to creep a little farther away, leaving its shadow over the world. A drizzling rain began to fall, and the wanderers on the beach were destined to a new draft of misery. Only Agatha watched, however; James gave no sign of caring, or even of knowing, whether the sun shone or hid its face.

He had slept fitfully since their hour of wakefulness together in the night, and several times he had shown signs of extreme restlessness. At these periods he would talk incoherently, Agatha being able to catch only a word now and then. Once he endeavored to get up, bent, apparently, upon performing some fancied duty far away. Agatha soothed him, talked to him as a mother talks to a sick child, calmed and commanded him; and though he was restless and voluble, yet he obeyed her readily enough.

As the rain began to descend, Agatha bethought herself earnestly as to what could be done. She first persuaded James to drink a little more of the milk, and afterward took what was left herself—less than half a cupful. Then she set the bucket out to catch the rain. She felt keenly the need of food and water; and now that there was no one to heed her movements, she found it difficult to keep up the show of courage. She still trusted in Hand; but even at best he might yet be several hours in returning; and cold and hunger can reduce even the stoutest heart. If Hand did not return—but there was no answer to that. If she believed he would come.

The soft rain cast a pall over the ocean, so that only a small patch of sea was visible; and it flattened the waves until the blue-flashing, white-capped sea of yesterday was now a smooth, gray surface, touched here and there by a bit of frothy scum. Agatha looked out through the deep curtain of mist, remembering the night, the Jeanne D'Arc, and her recent peril. Most vividly of all she heard in her memory a voice shouting, "Keep up! I'm coming, I'm coming!" Ah, what a welcome coming that had been! Was he to die, now, here on her hands, after the worst of their struggle was over? She turned quickly back to James, vowing in her heart it should not be; she would save him if it lay in human power to save.

Her hardest task was to move their camp up into the edge of the brushwood, where they might have the shelter of the trees. There was a place, near the handle of the sickle, where the rock-wall, partly disappeared, and the undergrowth from the cliff reached almost to the beach. It was from here that Hand had begun his ascent; and here Agatha chose a place under a clump of bayberry, where she could make another bed for James. The ground there was still comparatively dry.

She coaxed James to his feet and helped him, with some difficulty, up to the more sheltered spot. He was stronger, physically, now in his delirium than he had been during his period of sanity in the night. She made him sit down while she ran back to gather an armful of the fir boughs to spread out for his bed; but she had scarcely started back for the old camp before James got to his feet and staggered after her. She met him just as she was returning, and had to drop her load, take her patient by the arm, and guide him back to the new shelter. He went peacefully enough, but leaned on her more and more heavily, until at last his knees weakened under him and he fell. Agatha's heart smote her.

Tried Trick Once Too Often.
A man of seventy-five, who of recent years had extorted money from charitable persons, in Paris, by pretending to commit suicide, has fallen a victim to his ingenuity. He used to fasten a rope, attached to the ceiling, about his neck with an easy running noose. Then, having knocked over the furniture, he would overturn the chair on which he was standing and remain hanging by the rope. Alarmed by the noise, the neighbors would rush in and cut him down. After being revived he would depict his state of distress in such moving language that money would be forthcoming for his relief. Later he would repeat the trick in another house, invariably with success. But a few days ago, when he was carrying out the trick, there was a hitch. No one went to his help and he remained hanging, being eventually cut down dead.

Women's Fineness of Touch.
Electrical engineers number young women among their workers, and Edison is said to prefer women machinists for their fineness of touch. Mrs. Ira Tott of Long Beach, Cal., founded and managed an entire electrical plant successfully. Being an expert engineer, she superintended the building of her plant and bought and installed the machinery.

REALLY NAMED FOR STATE

Mississippi River Steamers Original and Cognomen That Has Now Become Universal.

On the Mississippi river in olden days the passenger steamboats were very ornate affairs, vying with each other in garish glory. One owner hit on the idea of naming his steamboat's cabins instead of numbering them. So he named them in honor of the states of the union, each having above the door the gilt title of some state, the big central cabin being called the "Texas," after the largest state. Other boat owners took up the idea, and thus the word cabin was gradually alternated by "state" room. For years the best cabin was still known as the Texas. Then that sobriquet died with the ebbing glory of the old river steamers. But the word "stateroom" became incorporated into our language, and in time even broke into the dictionary, as does many another catch phrase. Not one person in a thousand who occupies a stateroom knows the term once meant "a room named for a state."

Brightening Flower Pots.
Flower pots frequently fade into a dingy color from their original bright and cheerful brick red. They may be easily brightened again by putting ordinary red ochre in water until it is about as thick as paint, then painting the flower-pot, which absorbs the color and holds it.

Briefs of the Week

Hovne City Basket Ball teams and the East Jordan teams will play at the w n hall this Saturday evening.

William Tate has contracted to set out some 2,000 cherry trees on the farm just east of the Fair grounds.

A sleigh load of Ellsworth young people were East Jordan visitors Wednesday evening, taking supper at the Temple Cafe.

A Grand Rapids company is trying to secure a gas franchise in Boyne City. We understand they plan a pipe line to East Jordan.

H. W. Blew of Grand Rapids was in our city this week looking up real estate with regard to investing. He expects to return to our city in a few days.

Deputy Sheriff Cook escorted H. Hayes to Charlevoix jail this week where the latter was committed by Justice McCalmon to serve twenty days on a d. and d. charge.

Contractors Cook and Allen are re-planking the bridge across the lake, which is a much needed improvement. Teams are crossing on the ice while the bridge is being repaired.

Miss Elizabeth Hagerman died at her home in this city, Thursday, February 27th, after a brief illness. Funeral services will be held from the home, Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Bennett.

The store building and grocery stock of F. M. Palmateer at Mancelona was destroyed by fire early Thursday morning. Frozen hydrants made the work of the fire department useless. Loss about $1,700. Partially insured.

Seven of the Western Michigan counties already have or are arranging for federal farm management agents. These counties are Antrim, Charlevoix, Kent, Mason, Mecosta, Newaygo and Oscoda. There has been a district supervisor at work in the territory for nearly a year.

Western Michigan is gaining in population because of the excesses of births over deaths at the rate of 4,591 a year. Marriages are taking place at the rate of 5,164 a year, and divorces number but 663 a year. The big excess of births over deaths is one of the testimonials to the healthfulness of the Western Michigan region.

Mrs. Cashin of Cadillac was an East Jordan visitor last week. While here she heard of C. F. Whittington, and upon calling at his store, they learned that they were first cousins. Her father is S. D. Dove, now residing at Lake Station, Clare County, and whom Mr. Whittington had lost track of and not heard from in some forty-five years, when, as a lad, he remembered his uncle.

The R. F. D. Carriers semi-annual convention was held at Hovne City, last Saturday and was well attended considering the storm which prevailed at that time. Messrs. R. A. Britton, Pat Foot, Ray Fox and Arthur Hill, of the East Jordan office drove over and encountered snow drifts higher than the horses' heads. The next meeting will probably be held with Ironton Grange on Labor Day.

"The County Sheriff," a popular and powerful play is touring the country with its usual success, and is to be presented at the Temple Theatre, March 5th. The play is from the pen of Lem B. Parker, and is said to be as bright, interesting, witty and dramatically delightful as anything he has heretofore written. The plot is original, holding one's interest to the very last. There are many amusing situations and interesting scenes. A very elaborate production is utilized and everything that is essential to make the production a complete one is carried.

A. Cameron was a Bay City visitor first of the week.

Mrs. B. F. Steffen and little daughter are convalescent.

Mrs. H. McDermott is reported as improving in health.

W. P. Squier was a Charlevoix business visitor, Friday.

Dr. C. A. Sweet is confined to his home with a bad cold.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vogel a daughter, Monday.

S. Kling was down from Frederic this week on business.

R. O. Bisbee was an Engadine business visitor this week.

Rev. Fr. Kroboth was a Traverse City visitor first of the week.

Miss Grace Keenholts was guest of Traverse City friends this week.

John Severance was over from Gaylord again this week on business.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Squier a daughter, Sunday, February 23rd.

Frank Durand, who has been quite ill the past fortnight, is improving.

V. G. Holbeck left first of the week for a business trip to Hamilton, Ont.

Contractor Henry Clark is a Lapeer and Detroit business visitor this week.

Mrs. A. J. Beers is spending the week with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Price.

Misses Winifred Mollard and Gladys Howard were Alba visitors Thursday.

Mrs. A. E. Cross returned home from a visit with Petoskey friends, Wednesday.

Mrs. Jenkins of Harbor Springs is guest of her daughter, Miss Neva, on the West Side.

Mrs. F. R. Ramsey returned home Thursday on a business trip to Detroit and Chicago.

County Road Com'r H. L. O'ney attended meeting of the board at Charlevoix Wednesday.

M. Frazer and family left Friday for Detroit where they will make their future home.

Miss Blanche Boosinger, who has been dangerously ill the past fortnight, is now convalescing.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Bush of Charlevoix were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Hudson first of the week.

A sleigh load of young people from Boyne City, attended the Danceing Club Party here Thursday evening.

Mrs. Joseph Junget, who has been guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hoyt, returned to Detroit, Tuesday.

Mrs. B. E. Waterman left Friday morning for Kalamazoo where she spends a fortnight guest of her parents and sister.

Mrs. George Atkinson is here from Jackson guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Ruhlberg, and other relatives and friends.

The Washington Birthday party given by Miss Flora Porter on Monday evening was enjoyed by the young people present.

A Mission Study class was organized Monday evening last at Mrs. Hubert Ploney's. Everyone welcome to join this very interesting study.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wiesman are still in Detroit, where Mrs. Wiesman was taken seriously ill, and unable to proceed on their proposed business trip.

Misses Opal and Pearl Chandler, who are teaching in this county, were called to their home in Grove City, Pa., first of the week, on account of the death of an aunt, Mrs. J. B. McCoy.

Daniel Isaman and wife, who have been guests of relatives and friends at Orleans, N. Y., the past few months, are on their way home, stopping at Lansing to visit their daughter, Mrs. Lettie Robinson.

The most interesting story of real western life thus far that has been put into play form, is "The County Sheriff," a play by Lem B. Parker. It will be presented at the Temple Theatre next Wednesday, March 5th. The play is said to be delightful in its humor and stirring in its adventure, while its romance cannot fail to draw sympathy from the coldest audience. The cast is an exceptionally clever one, including Miss Nora Young, Mabel Levenson, Kitty Melville, Joseph Lyonell, Loftus Husband, Jack Malloy, Bert James, M. C. Jenkins, Edward Keene and many others.

Mrs. George Miles is reported still quite ill.

Pros. Atty. Fitch was a Mancelona visitor Monday.

Atty. J. M. Harris was over from Boyne City, Tuesday.

Atty. E. N. Olink was a Bellaire business visitor Monday.

Joseph Powers was up from Charlevoix on business, Friday.

Bert Wilhelm is a Hammond, Ind. business visitor this week.

Supt. A. E. Cross is a Petoskey business visitor this week.

Frank Whittington is confined to his home this week by sickness.

Mrs. E. A. Ashley returned from a business trip to Detroit, Monday.

Mrs. C. A. Sweet is confined to her home with illness this week.

J. Rich of Vanderbilt, was an East Jordan business visitor this week.

The corner in the prescription market is reported to have collapsed about two weeks ago—coincident with an official visit of the prosecutor and sheriff. Up to that time the bull crowd were in control of the market, quotations were firm, the supply appeared unlimited and the demand strong and increasing, and the shorts were reported covering their transactions. The "cliche" running the corner were in absolute control so much so that one big bull operator recorded more transactions the last week in January than all the other operators in the Sahara of Antrim county (with one exception) did during the entire year 1912. The pool is busted, the bears are having their innings now; the market is depressed, and although bids are high, there are no takers.—Elk Rapids Progress.

Causes Much Disease

Advice about Stomach Troubles and how to relieve them.

Don't neglect indigestion, for it may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician says that ninety-five per cent of ills have their origin in a disordered stomach.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe that to be one of the most dependable remedies known for indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing to the inflamed membrane of the stomach. Rich in Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine, the tablets afford relief very promptly. Used persistently and regularly for a short time, they tend to relieve pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets help insure healthy appetite, aid digestion, and promote nutrition. As you try them in them, we ask evidence of our faith in them, we ask you to try them at our risk. Salves Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this: Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT. A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done. A 50-cent bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief. We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive pay guarantee. D.D.D. EASTER ISLAND, THE MYSTERY OF THE PACIFIC

by HARRY O. SANDBERG

STONE IMAGE IN THE NATIONAL MUSEUM

PRESENT DAY INHABITANTS OF EASTER ISLAND

SOME OF THE MOUNTAINS ON EASTER ISLAND

EASTER ISLAND

Once again the luminous rays of the explorer are centered in the direction of Easter Island, the unsolved mystery of the Pacific. For another time the attention of archaeologists and students of antiquity is focused on this little spot, the most easterly of the Polynesian group of islands. Here, in the vast south Pacific ocean, lies this island, volcanic in character, only 42 square miles in area, a mere speck of land, about one-fourth the size of Barbados, and yet surrounded by a charm of mystery possessed by few places in the world.

The island merged into the clear light of history early in the eighteenth century, when it was discovered by the Dutch captain, Jacob Roggeveen, in 1722. He gave to the island its present name in commemoration of the day on which land was sighted. Some 50 years later it was "rediscovered" by some Spanish sailors. From that time to the present day Easter Island has been visited, explored, and studied by noted travelers, scientists, and investigators from all lands, and it promises to afford these opportunities for expeditions for years to come.

Geographically considered, it lies 27 degrees 33 minutes south of the equator, so that it is not actually within the tropics. Its position is about 2,000 miles from the mainland of South America, and 1,400 miles distant from its nearest neighbor, the Pitcairn Islands. Within its limited area, triangular in shape, there are three craters of extinct volcanoes, one of them nearly 2,000 feet high. Some of the soil is fertile, and the island appears to have been wooded at one time, for decayed trunks of considerable size are still found; now, however, there thrive only a few bushes from 10 to 12 feet high. The natives grow many sorts of tropical fruits, including bananas, sugar cane, and sweet potatoes. Goats, fowl, sheep and a fair number of cattle are reared by the few hundred inhabitants, the sole dwellers of today in that mystic land. The climate is not unlike that of Madeira, with one wet and one dry season. The water supply consists of some brackish springs by the seashore and pools inside the craters of the volcanoes. All in all, however, the island is considered salubrious and healthful.

The chief interest of the island is to be found in the wonderful statues and other amazing archaeological remains. In its narrow and confined expanse it encompasses a mystery of vast proportions—an enigma that has taxed the ingenuity of scientists quite as much as did of the far-famed riddle of the Sphinx. In this tiny island is a remarkable display of hundreds of sculptured statues, colossal in size, and erected upon Cyclopean masonry; stone houses over 100 feet in length—with walls six feet in thickness built like forts; and tablets curiously inscribed with hieroglyphics in no way resembling anything else in the world, doubtless the written language of the ancient inhabitants, but one to which the key has been lost.

Remarkable as all of these ruins are, from the strangeness of their appearance, the greatest interest and the greatest problem which they present to us is the story that they might tell of the vanished civilization which erected them. That they are of prehistoric origin can not be questioned, but who were the builders of these wonderful specimens? What race of men or giants carved and placed in their present position the titanic stone heads that stand out in lonely majesty amid the barren wastes of this lonely little island? Whence came these ancient workers in stone, and whither have they gone? What tools did they use to execute these singular statues and buildings, and in what epoch did they perform these curiosities?

Such fascinating questions and many others equally pertinent present themselves to the student, but, alas, the answer is yet to be had. Archaeologists must continue for a while longer to delve among the enshrouded mysteries of these ruins before they can reveal the true story of this world's wonderland. At present the chapters which have been written on the subject are comparatively few in number, and not conspicuously definite in context. Conjectures are as many as there are explorers, and the number of opinions ventured varies in the same ratio. Progress, as in all matters of science, is necessarily slow. But let us stop for a moment to examine these statues, and platforms, and relics, which have excited the student world, and to see what they are made of and how they were wrought. By actual count there have been found no less than 550 of these images, most of which are cut out of gray trachytic lava. Of this number, 40 are standing inside the crater of one of the volcanoes, and as many more outside, at the foot of the slope, where they were placed ready for removal to the different platforms. These statues, moreover, represent various stages of formation—some of them finished, others nearly completed, and still others barely commenced. In size they range from 3 or 4 feet to nearly 80 feet in length. The largest image, found in an unfinished state, measures 70 feet in length; the smallest is little short of 2 feet in length. Although these figures range in size from the colossus of 70 feet down to the pigmy of 2 feet, they clearly are all of the same type and general characteristics. The head is long and the eyes close under the heavy brows; the nose large, low bridged, and very broad at the nostrils; the upper lip short, and the lips pouting. The head is nearly always tilted backward. The lower part of the face is broad and heavy, but imperfectly formed, the ears are long and pendant. The forms generally ended at the shoulders or at the waist, very little work being done below these points. One of the lesser statues has been brought to the National Museum at Washington, D. C., while another is on exhibition at the British Museum in London.

The striking feature about these figures is the strange facial expressions described as "profoundly solemn," "disdainful," and with "look of supercilious scorn."

The head was in all cases cut flat on top to accommodate an immense crown of red vesicular tuff, many of which were found at a crater eight miles distant from the cone, where the statues themselves were formed. Subsequent discoveries on the island have brought to light headresses of real feathers, made up as crowns, coronets, and other shapes. The finding of these feather decorations which were used for ceremonial purposes has given strength to the belief that the immense stone crowns which were superimposed on the heads of the statues were intended to represent these feathered ornaments.

How these immense statues were cut out of their position inside the crater of the volcano and transported several miles to their respective platforms is one of the mysteries left for us to puzzle over. As for tools, a rude form of stone chisel is the only kind of ancient implement thus far found.

It is also remarkable that of the many hundreds of images scattered throughout the island there is but one that stands in its original position upon a platform, while the others are heedlessly strewn about. To some this fact seems conclusive proof that work on these huge productions ceased suddenly. But what caused the work to be so suddenly arrested? Did some volcanic eruption overtake the island? Such a conjecture is, indeed, not unreasonable, for closer investigation shows that some of the largest statues are buried to the neck in ash and scoria. But who can say with certainty?

Viewing the relics on the island in their entirety, however, one is impressed with the fact that when they were carried out a large population of skilled men must have concentrated upon the task. But where did this large population come from? Were Easter Island a continental land with ease of access, such an ample labor supply might have been available. But its geographic position precludes this possibility. Therefore another explanation must be sought. Now, nearly all students agree upon one point, and that is that the present territorial limitations of the place could not have harbored a very large number of inhabitants. First, there is no adequate water supply; and, secondly, there is not the area from which to win a sufficient food supply. This, then, suggests the theory, and one that is open to reasonable refutation, that Easter Island is the sole remnant of a greater land which was overwhelmed by the sea after a serious seismic disturbance.

Another speculation offered by a noted traveler is of particular interest because of the connection which he endeavors to point out between these ruins and those found in the highlands of Peru and Bolivia. This archaeologist develops the theory that the ancient peoples of Easter Island were the same race that centuries afterwards laid the foundations of the empires of the Incas and the Aztecs. These people, he continues, reached Easter Island from the Asian coast by traveling from one island to another across the intervening ocean and finally found their way to the American continent over land that has since disappeared beneath the waters of the Pacific. This theory, important if true, is, however, subject to objections. In a careful study of the Malayo-Polynesian archaeology and languages, embracing a period of nearly 30 years, the noted botanist and ethnologist, Prof. W. E. Safford, of the United States department of agriculture, makes the unqualified assertion that in all his attempts to trace a connection between the ancient relics of the Incas and Aztecs with those of the Polynesians, he has failed to find sufficient points of similarity to justify even such a possible relation. So the mystery continues and the origin and workers of Easter Island are yet to be learned.

Wooden tablets have also been discovered incised with hieroglyphics. These are of especial interest because of the remarkable skill with which they were executed. The writings read from left to right; then it is necessary to turn the tablet upside down, and continue reading from left to right, repeating this process until the inscription is concluded. Figures of men, animals, geometric designs, constitute the alphabet. Though these incised tablets have not been deciphered, there is a general belief that they contain the ancient myths of the race which inhabited the land. Some assert that it is not so very long ago that there were those on the island who might have been able to read them. It should be recalled that up to 1864 there were several thousand inhabitants on Easter Island, but large numbers of them were taken from there and put to work in the guano diggings on the Chincha Islands. Among those it is thought there were many who knew the written language as appearing on the tablets. But the present inhabitants, less than 200 in number, know nothing of them except in a vague way.

One particular feature was emphasized by Professor Safford in an interview which the writer had with him on the subject of the language of the island. He declared that a careful study of the language of the modern natives shows it to be essentially Polynesian without any vestige of foreign domination, but the most remarkable thing is its very close similarity to that of the Hawaiians. Nearly all of the words, by certain fixed laws or changes, could be converted from the Easter Island language to that of Hawaii with similar meanings; even some of the ancient gods of Easter Island bear the same names as Hawaiian gods. And yet there has been no connection between these two islands, at least not in historic times, and what is stranger still, these two groups are separated from each other by an interval of 2,000 miles. This unusual constancy in the language of both is probably due to the fact that they had no near neighbors and no intrusions of people speaking a language different from their own. He also expressed the opinion that the carvers of the images were the ancestors of the modern inhabitants, and that all the elements of the archaeology of the islands except the wonderful hieroglyphics are characteristically Polynesian.

Acid Kills Waterfowl.
That sulphuric acid, discharged into the water of Great Salt Lake, Utah, is responsible for the death of two million water fowl last year has been ascertained by Dr. Buckley of the pathological division of the bureau of animal industry. The American Game Protective Association sent Dr. Buckley to Salt Lake City, thinking that some contagious disease caused the death of so many birds.

FACE A SIGHT WITH TETTER

Moherly, Mo.—"My troubles began with a small pimple on the left side of my face and it spread all over my face and to my neck. It would be scarlet red when I got warm. My face was a sight. It looked very unpleasant, and it felt uncomfortable. My face was something awful; it just kept me in agony all the time. Some said it was tetter, and some said it was that awful eczema, but I rather think it was tetter. I had been troubled with it for about two years and tried many remedies, but got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. "When I would wash my face with the Cuticura Soap and apply the Cuticura Ointment it would cool my skin and draw great big drops of matter out of the skin. You would think I was sweating; it would run down my face just as though I had washed it. It itched and smarted and I suffered in the day time most. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for a month and I was cured of it." (Signed) Mrs. J. Brooksher, April 15, 1912. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Friendly Blow.
Louis Brownlow, Washington newspaper man, paused in a drug store in Greensboro, N. C., not so long ago, to ask for a match. While he was there a young colored chap came running in with a big gash the whole length of his skull, and apparently a good deal put out about some accident that had befallen him.

"What's happened to you?" asked Brownlow, excitedly but sympathetically.

"A friend hit me with a hatchet," replied the bleeding stranger.

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

Hit the Danger Spot.

"Oh, cried the sufferer, "I put my nose through a hole in the boiler for a sniff of fresh air, and the man outside with the hammer mistook it for a red-hot rivet. And he only hit once—that's all."

TROUBLES OF HOSTESS

By ELIZABETH CUNNINGHAM.

"Oh, good morning!" said the distracted looking woman who was sitting before a mahogany writing desk heaped with torn note paper and other evidences of mental confusion. "No, I'm not busy—at least, it will do me good to get a brief rest. I say brief, because I've got to get back to my work and finish it today, so that I can send out the invitations. Why, I'm giving a dinner party! Those torn-up things are the party. I'm going to have a dozen people at a time and pay off my social debts, and I know it sounds perfectly simple until you begin to consider the complications. I have the most intense fellow sympathy now for the man who makes out the grand opera schedule—he must have a mighty brain to get his operas so jumbled that there aren't any duplicates, and everybody is satisfied. If he can do that with a lot of muscle and nervous tenors and sopranos it seems to me that I should be able to accomplish the same results with a batch of perfectly ordinary persons without artistic temperaments to hamper them.

"I got my first list of a dozen made out in short order and then I began to consider it. What do you suppose I had done? Why, I had asked the Benning and the Simpsons, when everybody knows that the women of those two families turn purple at sight of each other and refuse to speak. I've forgotten the original row, but I know Mrs. Benning would be quite capable of getting up from the table and walking away if she found Mrs. Simpson across from her and she would believe that I had done it on purpose and would hate me ever after—So I shifted the Simpsons to my second dozen.

"Then after staring some time at Mr. Darwin's name because it reminded me of something, I remembered what it was his name reminded me of, and cold chills shot over me. Mr. Darwin is the man who accused Mr. Benning of bribery six years ago and, though Mr. Benning proved his innocence, it still would be ruinous to his digestion if Mr. Darwin should sit at the same table. So I hastily put Mr. Darwin on the second list.

"That is to say, I got his name half written before I recalled that his deceased wife was a cousin of Mrs. Simpson's and had been willed all the family money that Mrs. Simpson had counted on getting, and now that Darwin has inherited his wife's fortune Mrs. Simpson would just as soon sit next a Gila monster as next to Mr. Darwin. He went on the third list.

"I was just congratulating myself that the pretty Lake girl would lead beauty to the affair when I remembered that she had been engaged to the son of the Philpotts and that Mrs. Philpotts' meddling had broken off the engagement, and I didn't want the Lake girl sniffling and Mrs. Philpotts glaring all evening, so I shifted the Lake girl to list No. 2. Then I recalled that she had seemed to enjoy talking to Mr. Darwin at a recent card party, so I moved her on list No. 3.

"By this time I had settled down to work in earnest. I crossed off the Joneses because Mr. Jones is a fright when he gets started talking politics, and I simply won't have a dinner spoiled by the men all sawing the air and not noticing what triumphs my cook has achieved. You could feed a man sawdust in tomato sauce when he is talking politics and he'd never know the difference. I substituted the Cranes and the Garlands, and every human being knows that Mr. Garland once knocked Mr. Crane down in a row over a golf game, and now if either of them walks down the street where the other lives the latter sends out a servant to sprinkle the walk with formaldehyde and chloride of lime. So I moved on the Garlands and wrote down the Browns.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the caller in horror. "Didn't you know?"

"Yes," wearily admitted the woman at the desk. "Of course, I did. But my mind was growing confused. I suppose no one past eighteen is likely to forget that Mrs. Crane said her cook, who had once worked for the Browns, said that the Browns were so stingy they never had anything to eat unless they had company and she left because she was slowly starving to death. I was there when Mrs. Brown told Mrs. Crane what she thought of her.

"The Baldens seemed harmless until I recollected that the Griswolds were on the list, too, and Mrs. Griswold had been so mad about Mrs. Bolden's attending the charity ball in a gown the exact duplicate of one Mrs. Griswold had brought from Europe that she hasn't spoken to her since. Besides Mr. Griswold was elected president of a club that Mr. Bolden wanted to be president of, and in consequence he considered Mr. Griswold a scoundrel of the deepest dye. That's as far as I had got in planning a pleasant little party when you came in. What would you suggest?"

"Who, me?" asked her caller. "Why, I'm naturally going to ask the whole bunch of scoundrels at once, and then 'sic' them on each other!"—Chicago Daily News.

Arabic Letters.

Every letter in Arabic has four vowels, and some letters have twenty-five separate forms. So it is possible for the printer to have to deal with a hundred different forms of a single letter. Knowing the printers' case is not so simple a matter for Arabian characters as for English.

CUT THIS OUT

Recipe that Breaks a Cold in a Day and Cures Any Curable Cough.

From your druggist get half ounce of Globe Pine Compound Concentrated and two ounces of glycerine. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey; shake well and use in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age. But be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it he will quickly get it. Many mixtures are of large quantity and cheaper, but it is risky to experiment. This formula comes from a reliable doctor and is certain. This was first published here six years ago and local druggists say it has been in constant demand ever since. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.

SUFFERED FOR 25 YEARS.

Mr. R. M. Fleenor, R. F. D. 39, Otterbein, Ind., writes: "I had been a sufferer from Kidney Trouble for about 25 years. I finally got so bad that I had to quit work, and doctors failed to do me any good. I kept getting worse all the time, and it at last turned to inflammation of the bladder, and I had given up all hope, when one day I received your little booklet advertising your pills, and resolved to try them. I did, and took only two boxes, and I am now sound and well. I regard my cure as remarkable. I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any one who is suffering from Kidney Trouble as I was." WHY THE MEAL WAS HALTED Nothing—Seriously Wrong, but Old Gentleman Had Some Trouble With the Elusive Onion.

An aged country couple, on the urgent invitation of a grandson who lived in the city, were on for a visit. The grandson's wife was very anxious that the first meal should be one which the aged couple would enjoy after their long ride in the train, and accordingly the table groaned under its burden of good things to eat.

In the course of the repast she noticed several times that the old man seemed to be making little progress with the meal.

"What is the matter, grandfather?" she asked, "don't you like my dinner?"

"No, no, grandfather," mumbled the old man. "It isn't that. Only I've a pickled onion in my mouth, and I ain't got but one tooth left, so it's harder'n Sam Hill to catch it, it's so lively. Just rest easy a spell til I get a bolt on it and I'll be all right!"

Good Cause.

"Will you donate something to a good cause?" said the caller, as he laid a paper on the business-man's desk.

"What is it?" asked the business-man.

"One of the tenants in this building killed a book agent this morning," replied the caller, "and we are taking up a subscription to reward him."

"Put me down for $10,000," replied the business man.

The Real Villain.

"Are you the villain of this troupe?" asked the baggageman who was handling theatrical trunks. "No," replied the youth with black curly hair. "I used to be, but the real villain is the treasurer of the company, and by this time he must be about five hundred miles on his way to somewhere west."—Washington Star

To Pop Corn.

Very often corn will not pop quickly, even over a very hot fire. If you will put the corn to be popped in a sieve and pour cold water over it, not allowing the water to stand on the corn, it will not only pop quickly, but the open kernels will be larger and lighter and more flaky than they otherwise would have been.

Has been recommended for over forty years as a remedy for ailments peculiar to women. Thousands of grateful women have testified to its effectiveness. You, too, will find it beneficial. As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health.

This tonic, in liquid form, was devised over 40 years ago for the womanly system, by R. V. Pierce, M. D., and has benefited many thousand women. Now it can also be obtained in tablet form—from dealers in medicine, or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box.

Every woman ought to possess Dr. Pierce's great book, the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a magnificent thousand-page illustrated volume. It teaches mothers how to care for their children and themselves. It is the best doctor to have in the house in case of emergency. Over half a million copies were sold at $1.50 each, but one free copy in cloth covers will be sent on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address

A Case In Kind

"I wrote to you about six months ago for your kind advice in regard to my case," writes Mrs. Lizzie White. "At times I was hardly able to get on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case of uterine disease. Ovaries were very much diseased. My back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact I suffered all over. I followed your directions as closely as I could, and was well pleased with the results. I have taken your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' for about three months and can now say that my health was never better. I can highly recommend Doctor Pierce's remedies to any woman suffering from female disease, and I do recommend them to every one I see. Have induced several to try your wonderful medicines." Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep; if you are in a general run-down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you. Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.
