EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1913.

No. 16

More Paving.

Commission Plan to Extend Pavement This Summer.

Special meeting of the City Commission held at the City Hall, Wednesday evening, April 16th, 1913. Meeting was called to order by Mayor Cross; present, Cross, Kenny, and Hudson. Absent, none.

Commissioner Hudson introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Com. Kenny.

Whereas, this Commission deems the paving of Esterly street from a line commencing ten feet west of the west line of Main street, thence west to the East Jordan & Southern Railroad tracks, said paving to be of cement, thirty feet in width and to conform in all general respects with the pavement now on said street, is a necessary public improvement.

Resolved, That the intention to make such proposed improvement and expenditure, and to levy a special assessment to pay the cost thereof, be set forth in the appropriation bill now being made for the year A. D. 1913.

Further resolved, That it be referred to Henry Winters, as City Engineer, to make the necessary plans, plats, diagrams and specifications and an estimate of cost of said proposed improvement with all the necessary and proper attachments and accessories in connection therewith, the same to be filed with the City Clerk on or before April 24th, 1913.

Adopted by the City Commission of the City of East Jordan on the sixteenth day of April, A. D. 1913, by aye and nay vote as follows:

Ayes, A. E. Cross, Mayor; Charles Hudson, John F. Kenny. Nays, none.

Com. Hudson introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Com. Kenny.

Whereas, petition has been made and filed with this Commission, praying for the construction of a cement pavement from the north line of Garfield street to the north line of Division street in the city of East Jordan, Michigan, and

Whereas, said petition is signed by the owners of a majority of the land liable to be assessed for the proposed improvement, and

Whereas, the paving of said street is deemed by this Commission to be a necessary public improvement,

Resolved, That Henry Winters, as City Engineer, be and he hereby is instructed and directed to make and prepare the necessary and proper plans, plats, diagrams, and specifications, and an estimate of cost of the proposed improvement, together with all the necessary attachments and accessories in connection therewith, the same to be filed with the City Clerk on or before April 21st, 1913.

A Novel Entertainment.

A Public Court Trial In Which Prominent People Will Participate.

Among the most successful and popular entertainments of the times are the Mock Court Trials given under the direction of an expert—Col. A. V. Newton, the well-known lawyer-lecturer of Worcester, Mass.

Many cities in various parts of the country, have been greatly excited by them, as attested by the lengthy and favorable reports in the leading newspapers, and best of all by the great audiences that have packed the largest halls and opera houses to the doors; in many cases the interest being so great that every seat has been sold in advance and hundreds turned away unable even to obtain standing room.

One of these popular entertainments will be given under the auspices of East Jordan High School, in Temple Theatre, on Wednesday evening, April 23d.

It will be assured that one of our most respected and prominent citizens has been trifling with the affections of a young and beautiful widow of this town and will have to answer to the Breach of Promise suit brought against him, and there will be fun without limit.

Indeed, it is safe to predict that it will be many moons before the walls of Temple Theatre will again re-echo with so much laughter as will be heard on that occasion. Additional interest will be created in the trial from the fact that a large number of our prominent people will be participants. All the rules of a regular court of justice will be observed.

RHEUMATISM "CURE"

Given Airing by State Food and Dairy Department.

The recent rainy weather has made our drug analyst feel rheumatic and in looking for relief he bumped against a rheumatic cure whose headquarters are at Jackson, Michigan. Magic foot drafts are made by the Magic Foot Draft Company. Our employee got a pair for one dollar. The company recommends that five dollars be sent for six pairs in order to insure a cure. Each pair is to be worn a week. A big sheet of testimonials of cures accompanied the drafts. Most of them were of the vintage of 1907, which must have been a rheumatic year. The drafts consist of a piece of thin oil cloth 3x4 inches, with some adhesive around the edges like pitch to make them stick. In the center is daubed a mixture of pine tar and poke root.

You first wash your feet, (a most commendable proceeding which this department strongly endorses) then you slap a foot draft on the sole of each foot and wear your stockings over the draft for a week. The literature explains that the blood takes the tar up through the soles of your feet and sends it through the body to chase out the rheumatism. You wear this combination for a week. Then wash your feet and repeat.

The head of this department is not a doctor and he doesn't know whether tar and poke root applied to the soles of the feet will poke the rheumatism out of the system or not. The writer doctors his own cows and he knows pine tar is good for sores on the cow and poke root is a standard remedy for caked udder, but as for rheumatism he says: "If any citizen wants to try the tar foot draft he can do it much cheaper than a dollar a draft. Get ten cents worth of poke root and ten cents worth of pine tar and mix thoroughly. Then get five cents worth of sticky fly paper and cut into pieces 3-1-2 by 4-1-3 inches. Daub some of the mixture in the center of each piece of paper and slap on each foot. Wear your stockings to bed so as to keep the tar off your better half. For twenty-five cents you can make about sixteen dollars worth of Magic Foot Drafts."

N. B.—Don't forget to wash your feet. A wise man puts his ears on the job and gives his tongue a rest. When a married man has a good disposition it's possibly because his wife won't stand for any other kind.

New Superintendent

Mr. Ganiard of Reed City to Have Charge of Our Schools.

Supt. Northon to Take Charge of the Reed City Schools.

East Jordan and Reed City will swap Public School Superintendents at the close of the school year, Supt. J. T. Northon going to Reed City and Supt. George E. Ganiard of that city coming to East Jordan.

Mr. Northon has been in charge of our schools the past four years and his work here has been commendable. Through his efforts the grades have been brought up to a high efficiency, and it is claimed by those who are in a position to know that East Jordan has the strongest graded schools in Charlevoix County. During the years spent in our city Mr. and Mrs. Northon and their estimable family, have made many warm friends who will be sorry to have them leave.

Mr. Ganiard comes to us highly recommended. The below article, taken from the Osceola County Herald of recent date, is of interest to our citizens:

"Those interested in the educational welfare of Reed City were given a complete surprise when it was learned that at the meeting of the board of education Friday evening Supt. George E. Ganiard tendered his resignation to take effect at the end of the present school year."

Supt. Ganiard was last week elected superintendent of the public schools at East Jordan with a salary of $1500. Ira D. Bartlett of East Jordan was here a portion of the week, bringing a contract for Supt. Ganiard with him. There were about fifty candidates for the position which speaks well for the high esteem which Mr. Ganiard is held in the educational circles of the state.

East Jordan is a thriving city of 3,000 and has an up-to-date school equipment. There are four school buildings with a teaching force of twenty.

Supt. Ganiard's leaving will be a big loss to the educational welfare of Reed City as he has always been known as a man with a powerful intellect and one who has taken a deep interest in educational affairs.

Both Supt. and Mrs. G. E. Ganiard's hosts of friends will be loath to have them leave but will wish them much success in their new field.

While it is well to make things go as far as possible, we cannot advise stretching the truth.

Though a man with money be a bad egg, people seldom take offense until he is broke.

Presbyterian Church Notes

Rev. A. D. Grigaby, Pastor.

Usual services in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning at 10:30 and evening at 7:30 and the pastor will preach. He is very anxious that the results of the Revival services may not only be continued but intensified and increased as time goes. It depends upon the cooperation of his friends and one way of doing so is to be present at both services and on time. Also to bring your friends and neighbors.

Sunday School meets at 11:45. The superintendent urges all teachers and scholars to be in their places at commencement so that no time be lost.

The Young People's meeting is held now at 6:45 and all members are expected to be present.

The church and society will hold their annual reunion next Monday evening the 21st, in the Lecture Room at 7:30, for getting better acquainted and interested in church affairs.

Refreshments will be served free, a pleasant time spent visiting and any business usual at such a time will be transacted. We want your company and cooperation that we may get closer together and help things along.

ARE MEN LESS CHARMING?

Shabby Clothes Cause of Many Divorce Suits

By MARIE C. TEMPLETON

While the American courts are piling up an amazing volume of divorce statistics, how interesting it would be if there were some records to show the pressure which broke the first strand of the marriage tie in each instance.

What side of the woman does the husband see that is hidden from the world? I can tell you. He sees the side that does not care about appearances.

No matter how sweet her character and disposition, what woman can command her husband's respect when she appears before him in "lazy" attire.

So the first assault upon love by the woman is, many times, just this: She dresses for outsiders and counts her husband an insider.

No matter what her character may be, she has earned loss of respect, and the seriousness of that loss only depends upon her husband's sensitiveness.

Women who think that home appearances do not count are walking in the direction of the divorce court, and it is not for me to say that the man is always to blame.

Etiquette of Street Cars in Big City

By C. W. NORTON, New York

This thing of men's getting up in a street car to give a woman a seat, taking their hats off to them and talking to them bare-headed and according to their own courtesies and little honors

This writer works hard all day and very often half the night for his living. Some nights it would take a pretty sorry looking specimen to get my seat if I am fortunate enough to get one myself.

If all were on an equal footing it would be fine indeed never to see a woman stand in a street car or train, and no doubt that would be made a rigid rule as a mark of respect to the mothers of the race.

To illustrate: I am not a man supporting a wife and ten children, barely able to provide for them all by working all my waking hours.

Game of Checkers Not Child's Play

By P. J. EVERINGHAM

I wonder how our checker enthusiasts—those who know a little about the scientific side of the game and who realize its sterling qualities—feel when they see their favorite game placed next to some building blocks or a toy doll in a shop window.

In other ways checkers has become confounded with children's amusements and has caused so many people to think that it is a child's game and to treat it with contempt.

Of all things, checkers is not a child's game. Many contend that no one should attempt to learn the game until he is over fourteen, as it requires great skill and is not won by luck, as most card games are.

Checkers is believed to be the predecessor of chess, and so is the intellectual equal if not the superior of chess.

There are dozens of books on checkers, besides several magazines devoted exclusively to it. Every newspaper has a column for checkers.

Blame for the Unclean Song and Story

By Katherine A. Driscoll, Chicago

Who is to blame for the erotic novel and the suggestive song? No one in the world is so much to blame as the reading public.

The publisher who brings forth a book that can find no resting place in any public library or within the confines of any decent home is innocent at heart. He cares nothing at all for the great harm he does.

We need moral uplift in our reading matter. We need men and women of clean thought and clean expression to write our songs and stories.

BLOUSE CUT IN ONE PIECE BLACK SATIN HAT RETAINED

One of Tulle Valenciennes is Made With Neither Trimming Nor Fullness.

The newest cream white blouses are more plain than ever. The prettiest are tulle valenciennes, or a kind of soft point d'esprit with figures like those in the valenciennes design.

A noticeable feature of this blouse, which was designed in a house in the Place Vendome and intended for the Riviera, is the sleeves made all in one piece, with no extensions whatever.

STYLISH SPRING DRESS.

Spring dress of Royal blue broadcloth with draped skirt and yoke of accordion pleated silk.

Though White Seems to Be Coming Favorite Color, Yet This Style Is Always Smart.

While colors are to be rampant this year and spread themselves over the world like a gorgeous sunset or a rainbow, yet the tiny black satin hat is to be very smart indeed.

Such hats are not what they used to be. They are distinctly of this season. The shape is rather stiff, with a low crown and a two-inch brim which rolls slightly back at the edges.

The best-known choice is a feather called numide and which is more or less expensive and very fashionable. The peacock feathers are on this order and that is one of the reasons why they have returned to favor.

Beaded Bags.

Beaded bags refuse to be ousted. The smartest are of jet oblongs, pierced and applied to the net alternately with beads of silver or gold, or set solidly together and bordered with silver, gold or white disks.

To Wash Cretonne Draperies. Boil one pound of rice in one gallon of water until rice is soft, then strain off one quart of the milky water and add a piece of gum arabic the size of an egg.

Take the remainder of the water and rice, add enough warm water to wash the curtains. Rub on a handful of the boiled rice and soap up and down many times, then rinse in clear water.

Starch in the water as prepared above. Iron with a medium hot iron when partly dry. The cretonne will look like new.

Add Ammonia. White frocks and blouses or underclothing that have a bad color should be first soaked in cold water to which a little ammonia has been added and then given a lemon bleach; that is, a large lemon should be cut into slices, and rind and all boiled up in the boiling pan or small copper.

Garments in Turn. A useful thing to remember in putting clean clothes away is to place the freshly laundered pieces at the bottom of their respective piles.

STORY OF MRS. JONES

By JOSEPHINE BRANDON.

Mrs. Jones was on her way to the broker's, in the lower part of the city. Her bag contained some bonds, that had to be sold—the last bit of stock she possessed.

Her thoughts harked back to bygone days; to the time when her remaining parent had died and left her, with a few thousand dollars, in the first bright glow of womanhood.

So, as his calls grew more and more frequent, she came to rejoice in the belief that the other girls were secretly envying her. He bought violets for her and brought her candy; he was a very nice young man indeed.

But that was a good many years ago. Since then several little Joneses had come into the world to laugh and cry, and get married. They must be clothed and fed; when old enough to go to school they asked often for pocket-money, the girls especially.

On making closer acquaintance with Jones, she had discovered that the position he held was rather more respectable than remunerative. In fact, she didn't see how he could have hoped to support a wife and family on his salary.

But with the help of her little income they managed to get along pretty well, at least until the panic of '35. Then many employes were turned out of a job; and Jones was one of the number.

Meantime they lived on her money. She shivered at recollection of the checks she had written to be cashed by him in the city. It was less painful to "lend" that way; because he was enabled to keep tacitly to himself the money he needed for personal expenses.

Bit by bit her small fortune dwindled until these few bonds alone remained. Opportunities for work had arisen in plenty, but always to be passed over as too insignificant. The places would lower his standing, he said, hurt his chances for bigger things.

But since time flew by and these expectations were left behind unfulfilled, it appeared that he set greater store by himself than did others. She thought of how he would look when she returned home. There he'd be sitting, with the eternal paper in his hand, smoking one cigar after another.

She was tired of his family. These bonds were the last she had. When the money for them was gone, what should she do? Go to the poorhouse? He wouldn't let her work as long as she stayed with him, because she was his wife; and yet he didn't do anything himself.

Was it for this she had promised to love, honor and obey him? How absurd those words sounded in such a connection! Was she to love a man she rather despised; to honor one whom she could not admire; to obey her husband when she did not love him? She had been forced by society to promise what she either could not have helped doing, or could not possibly have done.

Suddenly the breath was driven out of her by a blow between the shoulders, and her bag jerked from her hand by a man, whom she then saw disappearing down a side street.

His Unexpected Holiday. Owing to an accident to the elevator in his office, the busy Mr. Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, was once imprisoned in the lift for an hour. Alarmed for the consequences of this loss of managerial time the staff eyed Mr. Frohman anxiously as he stepped out.

They were wrong. With a big cigar in his mouth and a bigger smile in his face Mr. Frohman observed, "Well, boys, that's the first holiday 've had for six years."

The STOLEN SINGER

By MARTHA BELLINGER

COPYRIGHT, 1911 THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Agatha Redmond, opera singer, starting for an auto drive in New York, finds a stranger seated in her chauffeur. Later she is accosted by a stranger who climbs into the auto and chloroforms her. James Hamilton of Lynn, Mass., witnesses the abduction of Agatha Redmond. Hamilton sees Agatha forcibly taken aboard a yacht. He secures a tug and when near the yacht drops overboard. Aleck Van Camp, friend of Hamilton, had an appointment with him. Not meeting Hamilton, he makes a call upon friends, Madame and Miss Melanie Reynier. He proposes to the latter and is refused. The three arrange a coast trip on Van Camp's yacht, the Sea Gull. Hamilton wakes up on board the Jeanne D'Arc, the yacht on which is Agatha Redmond. He meets a man who introduces himself as Monsieur Chatelet, who is Agatha's abductor. They fight, but are interrupted by the sinking of the vessel. Jimmy and Agatha are abandoned by the crew. They take to the boats. Jimmy and Agatha swim for hours and finally reach shore in a thoroughly exhausted condition. Jimmy covers Agatha with a blanket and the chauffeur who assisted in Agatha's abduction. He agrees to help them. Jim is delirious on the verge of death. Hamilton goes for help. He returns with Dr. Thayer, who revives Jim, and the party is conveyed to Charlesport, where Agatha's property is located. Van Camp and his party, in the Sea Gull, reach Charlesport and get tidings of the wreck of the Jeanne D'Arc. Aleck finds Jim on the verge of death and Agatha in despair. Dr. Thayer declares his sister, Mrs. Stoddard, is the only one who can save Jim. She is a woman of strong religious convictions and dislikes Agatha on account of her profession. She refuses to nurse Jim. Agatha pleads with her and she consents to take care of him. Hamilton explains how he escaped from the wreck, though he will say nothing concerning the abduction. Lizzie, Agatha's maid, arrives from New York. The fight between Hamilton and Van Camp bears Agatha's story and gets on the track of Chatelet who escaped from the wreck. Hamilton is finally of a damper. Chamberlain, friend of Van Camp, goes after Chatelet.

"Mr. Van Camp and his friend came in just after I'd put you to bed, Miss Redmond, and ate a bite of breakfast right off that table; and 'twas a mercy I'd cleared all the kitch out of the attic, as I did last week, for Mr. Van Camp he wanted a place to sleep, and he's up there now. Used to be a whole lot of the parson's books up there; but I put them on a shelf in the spare room. The other man went off toward the village."

Agatha, looking about the pleasant kitchen, was tempted to linger. Sallie's conversation yielded, to the discerning, something of the rich essence of the past; and Agatha began to yearn for a better knowledge of the recluse who had been her friend, unknown, through all the years. But she remembered her industrious plans for the day and postponed her talk with Sallie.

"I remember there used to be a grove, a stretch of wood, somewhere beyond the church, Sallie. Which way is it—along the path that goes through the churchyard?"

"No, this way; right back er the yard. Parson Thayer he used to walk that way quite often." Sallie went with Agatha to another stile beyond the churchyard, and pointed over the pasture to a fringe of dark trees along the farther border. "Right there by that apple tree, the path is. But don't go far, Miss Redmond; the woods ain't healthy."

"All right, Sallie; thank you. I'll not stay long." She called Danny and started out through the pasture, with the bound, sober and dignified and happy, at her heels.

The wood was cool and dim, with an uneven wagon road winding in and out between the stumps. Enormous sugar-maples reared their forms here and there; occasionally a lithe birch lifted a tossing head; and, farther within, pines shot their straight trunks, arrow-like, up to the canopy above.

Farther along, the road widened into a little clearing, beyond which the birch and maple trees gave place entirely to pines and hemlocks. The underbrush disappeared, and a brown carpet of needles and cones spread far under the shade. The leafy rustle of the deciduous trees ceased, and a majestic stillness, deeper than thought, pervaded the place. At the clearing just within this deeper wood Agatha paused, sat down on a stone and took Danny's head in her lap. The dog looked up into her face with the wistful, melancholy gaze of his kind, inarticulate yet eloquent.

The sun was nearly at zenith, and bright flecks of light lay here and there over the brown earth. As Agatha grew accustomed to the shade, it seemed pleasant and not at all uncheerful—the gale of sunlight subdued only to a softer tone. The resolution which had brought her thither returned. She stood up under the dome of pines and began softly to sing, trying her voice first in single tones, then a scale of two, a trill. At first her voice was not clear, but as she continued it emerged from its sheath of huskiness clear and flute-like, and liquid as the notes of the thrushes that inhabited the wood. The pleasure of the exercise grew, and presently, warbling her songs there in the otherwise pleasant forest, Agatha became conscious of a strange accompaniment. Pausing a moment, she perceived that the grove was vocal with tone long after her voice had ceased. It was not an echo, but a slowly receding resonance, faint duplications and multiplications of her voice, gently floating into the thickness of the forest.

Charmed, like a child who discovers some curious phenomenon of nature, Agatha tried her voice, again and again, listening, between whistles, to the ghostly tones reverberating among the pines. She sang the slow majestic "Lascia ch'io pianga," which has tested every singer's voice since Handel wrote it; and then, curious, she tried the effect of the aerial sounding-board with quick, brilliant runs up and down the full range of the voice. But the effect was more beautiful with something melodious and somewhat slow; and there came to her mind an old-fashioned song which, as a girl, she had often sung with her mother.

"Oh! that we two were maying
Down the stream of the soft spring breeze."

She sang the stanza through, softly, walking up and down among the pines. Danny, at first, walked up and down beside her gravely, and then lay down in the middle of the path, keeping an eye on Agatha's movements. Her voice, pitched at its softest, now seemed to be infinitely enlarged without being made louder. It carried far in among the trees, clear and soft as a wave-ripple. Entranced, Agatha began the second part of the song, just for the joy of singing:

"Oh! that we two sat dreaming
On the sward of some sheep-trimmed down" when suddenly, from the distance, another voice took up the strain. Danny was instantly up and off to investigate, but presently came back wagging and begging his mistress to follow him.

In spite of her surprise in hearing another voice complete the duet, Agatha went on with the song, half singing, half humming. It was a woman's voice that joined her's, singing the part quite according to the book:

"With our limbs at rest on the quiet earth's breast
And our souls at home with God!"

The pine canopy spread the voices, first one and then the other, until the wood was like a vast cathedral filled with the softest music of the organ pipes.

There was nobody in sight at first, but as Agatha followed the path, she presently saw a white arm and skirt projecting from behind the trunk of a tree. Danny, wagging slowly, appeared to wish to make friends, and before Agatha had time to wonder, the stranger emerged and came toward her with outstretched hand.

"Ah, forgive me! I hid and then startled you; but I was tempted by the song. And this forest temple—isn't it wonderful?"

Agatha looked at the stranger, suddenly wondering if she were not some familiar but half-forgotten acquaintance of years ago. She was a beautiful dark woman, probably two or three years older than herself, mature and self-poised as only a woman of the cosmopolitan world can be. It might be that compared to her Agatha was a bit crude and unfinished, with the bloom of her full blossoming yet to come. She had no words at the moment, and the older woman, still holding Agatha's hand, explained:

"I did not mean to steal in upon you; but as I came into the grove I heard you singing Handel, and I couldn't resist listening. Your voice is wonderful! Especially here!" As she looked into Agatha's face, her sincere eyes and voice gave the praise that no one can resist, the tribute of one artist to another.

"This is, indeed, a beautiful hall. I found it out just now by accident, when I came up here to practice and see if I had any voice left," said Agatha. She paused, as it suddenly occurred to her that the visitor might be James Hamilton's sister and that she was being delinquent as a hostess. "But come back to the house," she said. "This is not a hospitable place, exactly, to receive a guest."

blushed crimson at this point—"that is, we, my aunt and I, were Mr. Van Camp's guests on board the Sea Gull. When he heard of the wreck of the Jeanne D'Arc we put in to Charlesport; though he has probably explained all this to you. It was such a relief and pleasure to Mr. Van Camp to find his cousin, ill as he was; for he had feared the worst."

Agatha had not heard Miss Reynier's name before, but she knew vaguely that Mr. Van Camp had been with a yachting party when he arrived at Charlesport. Now that she was face to face with Miss Reynier, a keen liking and interest, a quick confidence, rose in her heart for her.

"Then perhaps you know Mr. Hamilton," said Agatha impulsively. "The fever turned last night. Were you told that he is better?"

"No, I don't know him," said Melanie, shaking her head. "Nevertheless, I am heartily glad to hear that he is better. Much better, they said at the house."

They had been standing at the place where Agatha had first discovered her visitor, but now they turned back into the clearing.

"Come and try the organ pipes again," she begged. They walked about the wood, singing first one strain and then another, testing the curiously beautiful properties of the footing of friendliness. It was evident that each was capable of laying aside formality, when she wished to do so, pine dome. They were quickly on a mid-catch was, at heart, frank and sincere. Melanie's talent for song was not small, yet she recognized in Agatha a superior gift; while, to Agatha, Melanie Reynier seemed increasingly mature, polished, full of charm.

They left the wood and wandered back toward the pasture and over the stile, each learning many things in regard to the other. They spoke of the place and its beauty, and Agatha told Melanie of the childhood memories which, for the first time, she had revived in their living background.

"How our thoughts change!" she said at last. "As a child, I never felt this farm to be lonely; it was the most populous and entertaining place in all the world. I much preferred the wood to anything in the city. I love it now, too; but it seems the essence of solitude to me."

"That is because you have been where the passions and restlessness of men have centered. One is never the same after that."

"Strangely enough, the place now belongs to me," went on Agatha. "Parson Thayer, the former owner and resident, was my mother's guardian and friend, and left the place to me for her sake."

"Ah, that is well!" cried Melanie. "It will be your castle of retreat, your Sans-Souci, for all your life. I envy you! It is charming. Parson Thayer, do you say?—Parson Thayer was a man of judgment."

"Yes, and a man of strange and dominating personality, in his way. Everything about the house speaks of him and his tastes. Even Danny here follows me; I really believe, because I am beginning to appreciate his former master."

Agatha stooped and patted the dog's head. Youth and health, helped by the sympathy of a friend, were working wonders in Agatha. She beamed with happiness.

"Come into the house," she begged Melanie, "and look at some of his books with me. But first we'll find Sallie and get luncheon, and perhaps Mr. Van Camp will appear by that time. Poor man, he was quite worn out. Then you shall see Parson Thayer's books and flowers, if you will."

They strolled over the velvet lawn toward the front of the house, where the door and the long windows stood open. Down by the road, and close to the lilac bushes that flanked the gateway, stood a large silver-white automobile—evidently Miss Reynier's conveyance. The driver of the machine had disappeared.

"I mustn't trespass on your kindness for luncheon today, thank you," Melanie was saying; "but I'll come again soon, if I may." Meantime she was moving slowly down the walk. But Agatha would not have it so. She clung to this woman friend with an unwonted eagerness, begging her to stay.

"We are quite alone, and we have been so miserable over Mr. Hamilton's illness," she pleaded quite illogically. "Do stay and cheer us up!" And so Melanie was persuaded; easily, too, except for her compunctions about abusing the hospitality of a household whose first care must necessarily be for the sick.

"I want to stay," she said frankly. "The house breathes the very air of restfulness itself; and I haven't seen the garden at all!" She walked back over the lawn, looked admiringly out toward the garden, with its purple and yellow flowers, then gazed into the lofty thicket above her head, where the high elm spread its century-old branches. Agatha, standing a little apart and looking at Melanie, was again struck by some haunting familiarity about her face and figure. She wondered where she could have seen Miss Reynier before.

Aleck Van Camp, appearing round the corner of the house, made elaborate bows to the two ladies.

"Good morning, Miss Redmond!" He greeted her cordially, plainly glad to see her. "I slept the sleep of the blest up there in your fragrant loft. Good morning, Miss Reynier!" He walked over and formally took Melanie's hand for an instant. "I know it was decreed that you two should be friends," he went on, in his deliberate way. "In fact, I've been waiting for the moment when I could have the pleasure of introducing you myself, and here you have managed to dispense with my services altogether. But let me escort you into the house. Sallie says her raised biscuits are all ready for luncheon."

Agatha, looking at her new friend's vivid face, saw that Mr. Van Camp was not an unwelcome addition to their number. She had a quick superstitious feeling of happiness at the thought that the old red house, gathering elements of joy about its roof, was her possession and her home. "I've promised to show Miss Reynier some queer old books after luncheon," she said.

Aleck wrinkled his brow. "I'll try not to be jealous of them."

CHAPTER XIX.

Mr. Chamberlain, Sleuth. Unbeknown to himself, Mr. Chamberlain possessed the soul of a conspirator. Leaving Aleck Van Camp at the crisp edge of the day, he fell into deep thought as he walked toward the village. As he reviewed the information he had received, he came more and more to adopt Agatha's cause as his own, and his spirit was fanned into the glow incident to the chase.

He walked briskly over the country road, descended the steep hill, turning over the facts, as he knew them, in his mind. By the time he reached Charlesport, he regarded his honor as a gentleman involved in the capture of the Frenchman. His knowledge of the methods of legal prosecutions, even in his own country, was extremely hazy. He had never been in a situation, in his hitherto peaceful career, in which it had been necessary to appeal to the law, either on his own behalf or on that of his friends.

Legal processes in America were even less known to him, but he was not daunted on that account. He remembered Sherlock Holmes and Raffles; he recalled Bill Sykes and Dubs, dodging the operations of justice; and in that romantic chamber that lurks somewhere in every man's make-up, he felt that classic tradition had armed him with all the preparation necessary for heroic achievement. He, Chamberlain, was unexpectedly called upon to act as an agent of justice against chicanery and violence, and it was not in him to shirk the task. His labors, which, for the greater part of his life, had been expended in tracing the evolution of blind fish in inland caves, had not especially fitted him for dealing with the details of such a case as Agatha's; but they had left him eminently well equipped for discerning right principles and embracing them.

Chamberlain's first move was to visit Big Simon, who directed him to the house of the justice of the peace, Israel Cady. Squire Cady, in his shirt-sleeves and wearing an old faded silk hat, was in his side yard endeavoring to coax the fruit down gently from a flourishing pear tree.

"You wait just a minute, if you please, until I get these two plump pears down, and I'll be right there," he called courteously, without looking away from his long-handled wire scoop.

Mr. Chamberlain strolled into the yard, and after watching Squire Cady's exertions for a minute or two, offered to wield the pole himself.

"Takes a pratty steady hand to get those big ones off without bruising them," cautioned the squire.

But Chamberlain's hand was steadier itself, and his eyesight much keener than the old man's. The result was highly satisfactory. No less than a dozen ripe pears were twitched off, just in the nick of time, so far as the eater was concerned.

"Well, thank you, sir; thank you," said Squire Cady. "That just goes to show what the younger generation can do. Now then, let's see—Got any pockets?"

He plucked out six of the best pears and piled them in Chamberlain's hands, then took off his rusty, old-fashioned hat and filled it with the rest of the fruit. Chamberlain carefully stowed his treasures into the wide pockets of his tweed suit.

"Now, sir," Squire Cady said heartily, "we'll go into my office and attend to business. I'm not equal to Cincinnati, whom they found plowing his field, but I can take care of my garden. Come in, sir, come in."

Chamberlain followed the tall spare old figure into the house. The squire disappeared with his pears, leaving his visitor in the narrow hall; but he returned in a moment and led the way into his office. It was a large, rag-carpeted room, filled with all those worsted knickknacks which women make, and littered comfortably with books and papers.

Squire Cady put on a flowered dressing-gown, drew a pair of spectacles out of a pocket, a bandana handkerchief from another, and requested Chamberlain to sit down and make himself at home. The two men sat facing each other near a tall secretary whose pigeonholes were stuffed with papers in all stages of the yellowing process. Squire Cady's face was yellowing, like his papers, and his eyes were bright and humorous, and his voice pleasant. Chamberlain thought he liked him.

"Come to get a marriage license?" the squire inquired. Chamberlain immediately decided that he didn't like him, but he foolishly blushed.

"No, it's another sort of matter," he said stiffly.

"Not a marriage license! All right, my boy," agreed Squire Cady. "Tisn't the fashion to marry young nowadays, I know, though 'twas the fashion in my day. Not a wedding! What then?"

Then Chamberlain set to work to tell his story. Placed, as it were, face to face with the law, he realized that he was but poorly equipped for carrying on actual proceedings, even though they might be against a friend himself; but he made a good front and persuaded Squire Cady that there was something to be done. The squire was visibly affected at the mention of the old red house, and fell into a reverie; looking off toward the fields and tapping his spectacles on the desk.

"Hercules Thayer and I read Latin together when we were boys," he said, turning to Chamberlain with a reminiscent smile on his old face. "And he licked me for liking Hannibal better than Scipio." He laughed heartily.

The faces of the old sometimes become like pictured parchments, and seem to be lighted from within by a faint, steady gleam, almost more beautiful than the fire of youth. As Chamberlain looked, he decided once more, and finally, that he liked Squire Cady.

"But I got even with Hercules on Horace," the squire went on, chuckling at his memories. "However," he sighed, as he turned toward his desk again, "this isn't getting out that warrant for you. We don't want any malefactors loose about Charlesport; but you'll have to be sure you know what you're doing. Do you know the man—can you identify him?"

"I think I should know him; but in any case Miss Redmond at the old red house can identify him."

"We don't want to arrest anybody till we're sure we know what we're about—that's poor law," said Squire Cady, in a pedagogical and squire-like tone, as if Chamberlain were a mere boy. "But the Englishman didn't mind that."

"I think I can satisfy you that we've got the right man," he answered. "If I find him and bring him to the old red house this afternoon, so that Miss Redmond can identify him, will you have a sheriff ready to serve the warrant?"

"Yes, I can do that."

"Very well, then, and thank you, sir," said Chamberlain, moving toward the door. "And I'm keen on hearing how you got even with Mr. Thayer on the Horace."

The light behind the squire's parchment face gleamed a moment.

"Come back, my boy, when you've done your duty by the law. Every citizen should be a protector as well as a keeper of the law. So come again; the latch-string is always out."

It was mid-morning before the details connected with the sheriff were completed. By this time Chamberlain's heavy but sound temperament had lifted itself to its task, gaining momentum as the hours went by. His next step was to search out the Frenchman. The meager information obtained the day before was to the effect that the marooned yachtowner had taken refuge in one of the shacks near the granite docks in the upper part of the village. He had persuaded the caretaker of the sailors' reading room to lend him money with which to telegraph to New York, as the telegraph operator had refused to trust him.

His Love Beyond a Doubt

Surely Impossible to Ask Further Proof After This Really Sublime Declaration.

"Do you love me?" he asked. In reply the modern young girl looked at the modern young man with eyes pervaded with emotion.

"Do I love you?" she repeated. "I do. I love you psychologically, sociologically, economically. From the psychological standpoint, I feel that our different organisms are so nicely differentiated as to form a properly articulated area of combined consciousness. Sociologically, our individual environment has been enough in contrast to form a proper basis for a right union. Economically, I feel sure that when we come to combine we shall be able to introduce into the management of our affairs the right financial balance to produce the scientific result which every well-ordered and conducted business produces. And now, how do you love me?"

The young man reached forward. He clasped her swiftly but surely in his arms. He hugged her and kissed her alabaster cheeks and her ruby lips.

"How do I love you?" he replied. "My dear girl, I love you just as much as if you really knew what you were talking about."

Unkind Suggestion. "I always say what I think." "Perhaps that is why you are a man of so few words."

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods; they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

THE KNOW HOW
To Feed Children and Get Good Results.

There are more nervous persons made so by undigested food lying in the stomach than the average individual would suppose.

If food remains undigested in the stomach, it begins to ferment, set up gas and a large portion is thus converted into poison.

That's why imperfectly digested food may, and often does, cause irritation of the nerves and stupor of the mind—brain and nerves are really poisoned.

"My daughter had complained for some time of a distressed feeling in the stomach, after eating, which set me thinking that her diet was not right," writes an anxious and intelligent mother.

"She had been fond of cereals, but had never tried Grape-Nuts. From reading the account of this predigested food, it seemed reasonable to try Grape-Nuts for her case."

The results were really wonderful. The little brain that seemed at times unable to do its work, took on new life and vigor. Every morning, now, before going to school, she eats the crisp little morsels and is now completely and entirely well, she seems to have a new lease on life—no more distress in the stomach, no headache, but sound and well every way. UNITED DOCTORS SPECIALISTS will again be at

Russell House

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30TH

ONE DAY ONLY.

Hours 11:00 A. M. to 8:00 P. M.

Remarkable Success of These Talented Physicians in the Treatment of Chronic Diseases.

Offer Their Services Free of Charge for the Last Time.

The United Doctors, licensed by the State of Michigan, for the treatment of deformities and all nervous diseases of men, women and children, offer to all who call on this trip, consultation, examination, advice free making no charge whatever, except the actual cost of medicine. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the result obtained to their friends and thus prove to the sick and afflicted in every city and locality, that at last treatments have been discovered that are reasonably sure and certain in their effect.

These doctors are considered by many former patients among America's leading stomach and nerve specialists and are experts in the treatment of chronic diseases and so great and wonderful have been their results that in many cases it is hard indeed to find the dividing line between skill and miracle.

Diseases of the stomach, intestines, liver, blood, skin, nerves, heart, spleen, kidneys, or bladder, rheumatism, sciatica, diabetes, bed-wetting, leg ulcers, weak lungs and those afflicted with long-standing, deep-seated, chronic diseases, that have baffled the skill of the family physicians, should not fail to call.

According to their system no more operations for appendicitis, gall stones, tumors, goiter, piles, ect. By their method these diseases are treated without operation or hypodermic treatment.

WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS.

CAN A SHIP BE MADE UNSINKABLE?

Is it possible to make a ship unsinkable? At least, can't a craft be made far less likely to founder than under present systems of construction and yet be fit for the service for which she is designed? The sinking of the Titanic brought these questions before the public some months ago. Since then the skill of one man has developed a method which bids fair to add greatly to the margin of safety to any steel ship which may suffer serious damage below the waterline. The invention is a new application of principles which have been employed for other purposes for many years.

In 1918 the cruiser Yankee hit the Hen and Chickens reef, just outside of Newport. Various well-known salvage companies tackled the wreck, but abandoned the work, declaring that it was quite impossible to refloat the cruiser. Then two young engineers, W. W. Wotherspoon and R. O. King, attacked the task along new lines, obtaining the financial assistance of the late John Arbuckle. These enthusiasts—for such was the spirit in which they approached what others had pronounced hopeless—broke away from traditional practice and resorted to the use of compressed air as a medium for salvaging the Yankee.

The ship had loaded high on the reef, and the jagged rocks had torn her bottom plating in many places, making it impossible to pump her out in the usual way. These inventors sealed up the hatchways leading to the various holds. Then they pumped compressed air into the compartments, and the sea was driven out main through the rents by which it had entered. The ship was thus made buoyant enough to be dragged from the rocks. Unfortunately she was run into and sunk while being towed to harbor.

An entirely new problem then presented itself. Instead of making use of cumbersome pontoons and other external buoyant auxiliaries, Messrs. Wotherspoon and King settled upon the plan of turning the Yankee into her own salvage apparatus. In other words, it was decided to utilize the ship's own compartments as buoyancy chambers by draining them of the very water which had carried the craft to the bottom.

You will probably declare offhand that there is nothing original in this; anybody knows that a foundered vessel would rise if you could get the water out of her. But don't be too hasty in your conclusions. The difficulty lies in the danger that when the air has forced the water out, the pressure of the overlying water will crush the hull. How, then, did these young engineers guard against this danger?

They did not try to pump out the cruiser in the literal sense of the word; they drove the water out under the impulse of compressed air and they balanced the contending forces so nicely that the ship's structure was substantially a neutral division between them, the air pressure being just a trifle in excess of the pressure of the water which it forced outward from the buoyancy compartments. Do you realize the engineering cunning involved here? The compressed air actually constituted a stronger support for the burdened deck than the water which had previously filled the underlying space! As the cruiser rose to the surface the pressure was progressively reduced so that it just maintained an excess of force against the exterior water.

This method of floating the Yankee suggested to Mr. Wotherspoon a medium by which the structure of a vessel not yet sunk could be utilized to keep her afloat when otherwise rushing water would certainly carry her to the bottom. Mr. Wotherspoon's first adaptation of this system was for naval purposes, to provide means by which an injured ship of war could survive the under water attack of either torpedoes or submarine mines, and probably be kept on an even keel so that she could still fire her guns effectively against an enemy.

From the keel of a fighting ship up to a height of several feet above the water line it is the practice to subdivide her as far as possible into a large number of separate watertight compartments, the idea, of course, being to confine the area of injury. By making use of these compartments Mr. Wotherspoon's invention has robbed the under water weapons of much of their terror; it has reduced the dangers incident to hitting an uncharted rock; and it furnishes the commanding officer of a battle craft with a means by which he can assure himself at any time that his ship is structurally sound.

The naval constructor is a miser when it comes to apportioning pounds of a ship's displacement for auxiliary features. This attitude is really excusable, because stray pounds here and stray pounds there very soon reach the aggregate dignity of tons. When Mr. Wotherspoon submitted his proposition to the navy department the officials there grudgingly allowed him a very small total weight within which he was to make his system applicable to two-thirds of the 1,200 watertight compartments of one of our armored cruisers.

On the face of it the prospect did not look encouraging, but it was right here that Mr. Wotherspoon's ingenuity met the difficulty. He chose to make use of existing facilities already provided for other purposes. This resourcefulness on his part enabled him, when his work of installation was finished, to surrender to the navy department a large percentage of the weight allowance originally granted him. Take an empty tumbler, turn it bottom upward and press it down into a basin of water. The farther you submerge it the smaller grows the air space, the air becoming more and more compressed. If you could slightly increase the pressure of the confined air the encroaching water would be driven outward. If the bottom of the tumbler were pierced on the other hand, the air would escape and the water would rise and fill the space. Substitute a pipe instead of a free opening in the bottom of the glass and lead this pipe to a reservoir of compressed air. When this compressed air is poured into the tumbler the water will be driven out or the glass will rise and free itself of water. In either case then the space will be filled with air.

This is substantially what Mr. Wotherspoon has planned shall happen when a ship's compartment or compartments are flooded through under water damage of any sort. Air will displace the water due to leakage and make the craft float well-nigh as if she had not been injured. Of course this is upon the assumption that the wound has occurred at the bottom and not the top of a watertight subdivision; otherwise the chamber will remain flooded.

But it takes a good deal of air to fill most of the big divisions of a fighting ship, and there must be piping to carry the air to these hundreds of separate chambers. How did Mr. Wotherspoon provide for all these and yet not exceed the weight allowed him by the naval officials? He did it by making use of facilities actually already provided for other services.

Foul air, gases and heat beyond a fixed degree must be guarded against in a man-of-war within the various under water compartments. To accomplish this end two pipes lead to each of these chambers, one to carry fresh air and the other to drain off the foul. Also every fighting ship is furnished with air compressors and there are a number of tanks in which this air is stored at a very high pressure. Normally this air is for the charging of the torpedoes, for some kind of mechanical work and for blowing the residual gases and bits of smoldering remnants of the powder bags out of the big guns before the breeches are opened for reloading. The very fundamentals of Mr. Wotherspoon's system were thus already installed and a few inexpensive connections alone were needful to complete his requirements. All that was necessary was to tap the air supply system by flexible hose and join the connection to the supply duct leading to any desired compartment, at the same time closing the exhaust vent. Thus compressed air under perfect control could be led into the flooded chamber and the water quickly expelled.

That is not all; the system makes it possible to enter the injured subdivision through a neighborly

NORTH CAROLINA WILSON WAS USED FOR EXPERIMENTS

DIAGRAM OF THE ANTI-FOUNDING SYSTEM

boring intact compartment for the purpose of effecting repairs. The workmen go into the connecting chamber, close it, and air is then admitted until the pressure equals that of the flanking damaged one. This done, the dividing door is opened and the workmen can proceed with their task.

Theoretically all the compartments of a fighting ship are supposed to be water-tight; practically some are not so. Here is where the safety system which Mr. Wotherspoon provides has another field of usefulness. Compressed air is very searching, much more so than water, and it has the added advantage of sounding an alarm wherever it manages to work its way through, even in a small measure. Dry air, unlike water, is not destructive, and a compartment full of stores, electrical apparatus or any other things sensitive to water could be flooded with compressed air for test without doing the least harm to the contents.

The value of this has already been proved in a number of instances recently and upon one occasion the draining of a leaking compartment and the charging with air of the surrounding compartments filled with stores resulted in the saving of probably $12,000 or $14,000 worth of property. In a few moments after the automatic alarm gave warning of the flooding the compressed air was in service and the water driven overboard again.

Perhaps the most striking example of the effectiveness of this system for keeping an injured ship afloat and making it possible for her to proceed to port was that of the U. S. S. Collier Nero. The vessel struck Brenton's Reef, Rhode Island, in July of 1909. Ordinary salvage operations failed to dislodge her from the rocks, and it was not until certain of her decks were sealed hermetically and a number of the intervening spaces turned into closed compartments and compressed air pumped into her that she was released and floated. She reached the Brooklyn navy yard.

Under Coat of London Soot

America was discovered all over again in London recently, says the Washington Star's correspondent. At least a long-hidden statue of America was. It is really no use putting up a statue or any other kind of memorial in London, for in a year or two unless seen to right along, it will be practically enveloped in a pitch black cloak of London soot, some 8,000 tons of which, according to an engineer's recent estimate, is always hanging in the atmosphere of this metropolis.

The statue of "America" which has just been discovered adorns the front of the Cannon street hotel, which adjoins one of the biggest of London's railway stations and is a favorite place for big political and other gatherings. It was put up in 1866, since when its walls have not been cleaned, hence for forty years or more all of the rather elaborate decorations which cover them have been hidden from sight as completely as if they never had existed. The pall of mingled soot and grime which covers them several inches deep in places, but it falls off almost at a touch, and after what is known as "wire brushing" the surface becomes fairly clean.

Four statues, it appears, representing the four continents, besides some balustrading and arching with decorative panels, compose the long-shrouded facade of the Cannon Street hotel. Of these statues, two, Europe and Asia, have now been brought completely to light, America has just been located and partly unveiled, and Africa, appropriately enough, is still the "dark" continent. Hearing of the discovery of America in Cannon street, the writer hastened to the spot, and after mounting to dizzy heights, by means of a ladder, and crawling along a stone ledge some eighty feet above the level of the ground, was rewarded with a sight of the partly exhumed statue, which stands some fifteen or sixteen feet high.

Remembering that this effigy of "America" was designated in the mid-Victorian period, it was no surprise to find it lacking in any special beauty. It is the figure of a woman—possibly a militant suffragette—holding in one hand a gun and in the other some ears of corn. On the ground is something which may represent either a tomahawk or the ax of the pioneer, and underneath, in letters that once were gilt, appears the word "America."

STARVING COYOTES ATTACK A VILLAGE

Unable to Obtain Food in Mountains They Prey Upon Citizens and Animals.

Reno, Nev.—Driven to the point of starvation by terrific snowstorms which have made it impossible for them to get food, immense coyotes are now turning to the small villages, attacking their inhabitants and killing horses and smaller animals for food. Several persons have been severely torn and injured by the hunger mad animals, and so bold have become their attacks that it has been necessary to form vigilance committees to maintain guard during the night, when the attacks become the fiercest.

An immense animal so lean its body was hardly bigger than its tail, sneaked into the town of Elko early the other morning, prowling for chickens or any other animals. Chris Eschelman, one of the leading merchants of the town, was on his way to his barn, accompanied by his dog, when the coyote confronted him. The wild animal sprang upon the dog and maimed it severely before Eschelman could grab a club and beat the animal off. The coyote drew away into the snow or fifty feet, skulked after the merchant, and in a few minutes came at him with renewed energy. It made a leap at Eschelman and the two rolled on the ground. Eschelman struck the animal on the leg, breaking it and disabling the coyote so that he was able to kill it with his club.

Almost at the same time other coyotes appeared in other sections of the town and were driven away by shots. The citizens have appointed armed committees to keep watch as numerous encounters have occurred with coyotes and other roving animals that come down from the mountains, unable in the heavy snowfalls to get food. Many valuable dogs have been killed in these invasions.

FAMOUS CALF CASE IS ENDED

Animal Dies After $2,500 Is Spent in Litigation by Kansas Men.

Jetmore, Kan.—The famous "calf case" is ended. Four years ago Probate Judge Barlow bought a calf. E. Nettigate claimed ownership and brought a replevin suit. Both were prominent men, and Hodgeman county, a cattle region where men would fight willingly for the "principle" involved, divided. Four years of litigation followed.

The state's best legal talent was employed. Ranchers waxed hot, and while $2,500 was being spent for its possession the little $12 calf died.

But this did not stay the conflict. By general agreement the calf was skinned, and the fight continued over the possession of the hide. Expert veterinarians and cattle dealers were called to testify regarding markings on the hide. One side contended they were brands; the other barbed-wire cuts.

The climax came when the hide was introduced in evidence in the last trial and the hide showed no markings whatever. The skin of the disputed calf had been stolen. In disgust a jury returned a verdict for the defendant, Barstow.

BREXER RABBIT WITH HORNS

Sure! It Must Be So, Because a Regular Newspaper Reporter Saw It.

San Benito, Tex.—What is said to be the first specimen of an antlered rabbit ever killed was recently shot by a Mexican near San Benito. It was of the Jackrabbit type in all respects, except that protruding from its head and fastened to its ears was a set of horns much resembling the antlered adornment of a young buck deer. The longest of these prongs measures nearly seven inches. The other prongs measure from one to six inches. The head was severed from the body and mounted. It has been stewed by many people.

Gallant Burglar

Portland, Ore.—A bold but gallant burglar entered the home of Mrs. V. Brehan, and after admonishing her not to scream, or move, purloined a kiss. Nothing else was stolen.

URGING GREAT SALE OF CANNED FOODS

Dealers, grocers, jobbers and manufacturers will over the country are joining hands during the week of March 24 to April 4th in an effort to acquaint housewives with the economy and quality of canned foods.

It is now a well known fact that heat is the only preservative used in preparing these economical foods. The cans are heated and sterilized at a temperature of 250 degrees, which prevents any contamination and keeps the contents fresh and wholesome as the day the tins were filled in the canneries.

National Canned Foods Week during which dealers and grocers will make canned foods their sales-features, is for the purpose of demonstrating to housewives that the cost of living can be cut with such foods, and that they may be served in hundreds of delightful ways, and thus served daily without monotony.

The farmer's wife especially finds it advantageous to relieve herself of all the cooking possible and Canned Foods enable her to do this and at the same time insure the quality of her meals.

Women in every community should observe National Canned Foods Week by going to the dealers and putting in a supply. The saving and general satisfaction in the use of Canned Foods is entirely worth while.—Adv.

"Improved" Bull Fight. A bull fight in Tokio is quite as much excuse for a gala day as a bull fight in Madrid. Business men leave their offices, and women and children their homes, to hurry to the arena. Stripped of all the less exciting, or less horrible, preliminaries which characterize the Spanish bull fight, the animals are brought in and sent at each other at once. So the battle is over in two or three more lights than the English procession during the course of an afternoon's fight.

BUILD BOUNDARY LINES HEDGELIKE AND ALTOGETHER ORNAMENTAL AT SMALL COST.

Substitute for Hedge Can Be Made With Little Trouble by Setting Stout Posts in Ground and Stretching Woven Wire Along With Vines Trained Over—Native Plants Best.

Let us suppose that there is a lot fence to be built between your lot and your neighbor's, or along the front yard, or that a fence already exists that is anything but attractive. What can be done to make the boundary line pleasant to look at?

Several things. If you don't care to plant shrubs and hardy perennials there, why not make a substitute for a hedge by the use of a vine like our native Ampelopsis, known to you, perhaps, as American ivy, or Virginia creeper? This can be done with very little trouble or expense by setting stout posts solidly in the ground and stretching woven wire netting along them, and training this vine over it.

It is of very rapid growth, and the plants, if set about twenty feet apart, ought to develop enough in one season to furnish quite a covering for the netting. As this plant grows in almost all localities—at the north, you need not send to the plant dealer's for it. The children will be delighted to provide all the plants you want from the woodlot or the river bank, where they will find it growing profusely.

When the plants have made growth enough to meet on the support furnished them, nip off their ends. This will cause them to send out side branches. Train these out and in through the meshes of the netting, as they develop. By the end of the second season the netting ought to be so thickly covered that nothing of the support will be seen, and the general effect will be quite hedgelike, and altogether ornamental. Especially will this be the case in fall, when the foliage of the vine takes on its rich coloring of scarlet and crimson. When toward the street or road make use of shrubs comparatively low and spreading habit, like the Spiraea, the Deutzias, and the Weigellas. In between them plant such tall perennials as the Hollyhocks, the Delphiniums and Rudbeckias. In front of them Pyrethrum, Peony, Phlox, Dicentra and Iris, with other low-growing plants of similar habit. If you take pains to read up in the catalogues before ordering your plants, you can make yourself so familiar with their size, height, general habit and season of flowering, that you need locate none of them in the wrong place. The strip of ground in which they are to be planted should be at least eight feet wide—ten would be better—and it should be kept free from grass and weeds. Here is the place for your shrubs if your yard is a small one. Never spoil the effect of your lawn by scattering them over it. Hardy bulbs can be planted along the edge of the border, where they will most effectively display their beauty early in the season before the other plants are ready for business.

The woman who loves flowers, and the boys and girls who should be educated into liking them, will find it nothing but pleasure to take care of such a collection. There will be no weed-pulling by hand to be done—the hoe will make that unnecessary. Some of the shrubs may need pruning occasionally, when they get to be too thick, but as a general thing the less pruning you give a shrub the more effective it will be.

Before setting out any plants, spade the soil well to the depth of a foot and a half. A liberal amount of good manure should be used. In setting shrubs, always plan for the future. Make yourself certain about the size the little specimens you plant will grow to and set them far enough apart to allow of full development without crowding. If hardy perennials are used to fill in between them while they are developing, there will be no unsightly gaps at any time.

Such a plantation along the side of a lot can be made a thousand fold more ornamental than the most expensive fence, and one of the strongest arguments in its favor is the pleasure that can be got out of the making of it. There is nothing quite so enjoyable to the person who likes to be among the "green things growing" as work in the garden. There is a new surprise in store for every day. And the exercise is of that kind that keeps both mind and muscle in play in a manner that makes one forget to get tired. "The happy combination of mental and physical exercise makes work in the garden ideal recreation for woman and child. The only objection to be urged against it," writes a correspondent, "is that after a little one wants to be out of doors all the time." Which is the best possible argument in its favor!

One of the conditions necessary that the fowls may lay large numbers of eggs in the fall and winter is that a plentiful supply of succulent food be provided and this is also necessary for the best growth of young chicks. Among the most common and best forms of green food are: Mangels, turnips, cabbage, pumpkins, onions, lettuce, rape, silage, clover hay and alfalfa meal.

Young Apple Orchard. An orchard of young apple trees is good deal like an endowment life insurance policy. For a term of years it seems to be nothing but paying out, but the rewards are almost sure to come.

This picture shows the possibilities of vines as hedges, as the vines here are woven in and out of a wire fence. Kept trimmed to a height of about four feet, vines as hedges are beautiful and useful. The vine over the house should be trimmed one-half. It shuts out sunlight and makes for dampness.

It sheds its leaves it will take on another ornamental phase, for then its purple tints will be seen clustered thickly along the branches. The vine must be clipped occasionally during the summer to prevent it from spreading in all directions and giving a ragged look to your fence. It is quite important that stout posts should be used, as the netting must be stretched tightly, to prevent it from sagging. The end posts should be well braced to stand the strain made on them. I would advise the use of netting at least four feet wide, and that it be of heavy wire, for you want something that will last for years, as it will be impossible to make satisfactory repairs in a fence of this kind. If your neighbor co-operates with you, as he doubtless will if you ask him to, I would advise the use of wide sawed posts with a row of netting on each side. A width of this dimension will give more dignity and substance to your hedge than one row of netting possibly can. If saved posts are used, they should be well painted before the netting is put on for two reasons—improved appearance, and preservation of the wood. Painted a dark, dull-green they will not be too much in evidence during the period when your vines are getting a start. Such a fence can be made really more ornamental than the ordinary hedge, and this in a short time, and very little attention will be required to keep it in good condition.

A better method, however, of marking the boundary line, allowing me to be the judge, is that of planting shrubs and hardy perennials there. Set them so close together that when they have fully developed they, in combination, will make a solid bank of foliage. Do not use kinds that grow to such a size that they will obstruct the view across the lot or yard, except there is a place at the rear where such an obstruction would be desirable. Here the lilacs, the Tartarian honeysuckles, and the Viburnums, will work in effectively. As you go

Thousands of Women

Have Been Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

There is no doubt about this fact. Why! during the last 30 years we have published in the newspapers of this country volumes of letters from women who have been relieved of all their suffering by the timely aid of this grand old medicine. Letters like the following, true, genuine and honest expressions of gratitude coming from grateful hearts. Surely you can believe these women.

Mrs. L. S. BRENNER, Hudson, Mich., says:—"Sometime ago I was taken with a terrible pain in my right side, such sharp pains just like a knife sticking me. I tried hot applications but that did no good. I went to our family doctor (we were living in Bayette, Ohio, at that time) and he said it was organic inflammation. I doctored with him a while but kept getting worse. The pain was so terrible I could hardly stand on my feet. I would have that sharp pain in my right side, and a dull heavy pain the whole length of my limb. I realized that something had to be done quickly, so I looked up all of your advertisements I could find, and saw several that described my case. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first dose, and when I had taken two bottles my trouble was gone. Your medicine has done so much for me that I am willing you should publish this letter for the sake of other suffering women."—Mrs. L. S. BRENNER, Hudson, Michigan.

Mrs. L. E. BOWERS, Girard, Pa., says:—"I take pleasure in informing you of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had a sick spell last February, and for some months after that I was not regular and had many bad feelings. I was tired all the time, had dull headaches, not much appetite, and also what the doctor called organic inflammation. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I feel that too much cannot be said in its praise as I am now able to do my own work. You are perfectly welcome to use my testimonial for the benefit of others."—Mrs. L. E. BOWERS, R.F.D. No. 1, Girard, Pa.

Mrs. ELIZABETH GENTILIGNI, Buffalo, N.Y., says:—"I feel that I must write to you about your wonderful remedies. About ten years ago I was afflicted with female weakness and was all run down. I was tired all the time and could hardly walk without feeling dizzy. I had a sick spell last February, and for some months after that I was not regular and had many bad feelings. I was tired all the time, had dull headaches, not much appetite, and also what the doctor called organic inflammation. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I feel that too much cannot be said in its praise as I am now able to do my own work. You are perfectly welcome to use my testimonial for the benefit of others."—Mrs. ELIZABETH GENTILIGNI, 20 Glen Street, Buffalo, New York.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health. Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NEW RIFLE SIGHT INVENTED

Marksmen Must Aim for Spot Below Target to Make Sure of a Hit.

Military authorities and big game hunters are much interested in a new rifle sighting system that is designed to eliminate the necessity for estimating distances and adjusting sights in long range shooting.

Of the negative angle system, as the invention is called, Sir George Greenhill, a noted English ballistical expert, said in a recent lecture: "The new system proves that since the origin of firearms our method of sighting in active service rifle firing has been wrong. The invention is likely to bring about a revolution in the art of shooting."

In brief, the system utilizes the well known fact that the apparent size of an object decreases as the distance increases. The user of the negative angle sight is instructed to sight at a point the height of the object under it. If the arm were the army rifle and the target a man, the point of aiming would be about five feet six inches below the man's feet. With the regulation ammunition as furnished for the army rifle, the negative angle system will insure hits on the man target at all ranges from 100 to 825 yards, which is an increase of about 300 yards over the range of the present battle sight.

At first it would appear that some trouble might be met in sighting. However, no difficulty whatever is found in aiming at a point five feet six inches below a man's feet, particularly as the man is conveniently on the spot to afford a gauge, very much like a foot rule photographed with another object to indicate comparative heights.

The new system is the invention of H. Ormudsen, an Englishman, who won the king's prize at a recent English national shoot and who has been high up in the same contest on several other occasions.

WHAT GOTHAM GETS IN TIPS

Petty Graft of New Yorkers, It is Calculated, Amounts to Over $100,000,000 Yearly.

There are on an average 300,000 visitors the day in New York. Often there are many more, seldom any less. Most of the visitors are there on pleasure bent, or are passing through on pleasure bent in other places. Even those who go to Manhattan on business decide in favor of the "combination cocktail," meaning a mixture of business and fun. Every visitor gives tips, whether he stays at a hotel or not. If he visits friends he tips their servants. The tips given by the average person of means amounts to much more than $2 the day. Few tip less than 50 cents the day. It is a low estimate to put a dollar as the average amount given away every day in tips by every visitor to the great city. That means $300,000 the day in tips alone, not including tips given by New Yorkers themselves. That is about $9,000,000 the month, or $109,500,000 for the full year of 365 days. Through this petty tipping graft alone more than $100,000,000 the year are paid by the rest of the country for the upkeep of the metropolis. We are not complaining, comments a Charleston newspaper. We are not suggesting a remedy. We merely call attention to the matter that some may grieve over it and others may laugh, though those who laugh are not by any means the ones who have recently made their contributions.

BIRDS QUIT ENGLAND EARLY

Abnormal Weather is Believed the Cause of Hurred Departure for Southern Climes.

A wonderful concourse of swiftness was seen a few days ago over a Hertfordshire common. Some of the birds were at a great height and were playing at the almost ecstatic game of flight in company, which is the prelude to migration.

The birds are leaving England before their time. Many of the doves are already gone. The question arises why these birds and the restless swallows and martins are thus putting forward their date of departure.

The flight from England is doubtless being hurried by the abnormal weather. The dove, which is one of the first to leave, would have nowhere to set its feet in East Anglia, and the corncrakes are flooded out. In such conditions the dove's premature attention to the call of the Caucasus and the desire of the swallow tribe for the further shore of the Mediterranean are due to the inhospitality of England—its cold and the disappearance of insect food.—London Mail.

WOMAN IN POLICE SERVICE

Country is Slowly Realizing How Valuable She is in That Kind of Work.

One of the surprises of evolution has been the discovery that women have an appointed work waiting for them in the police service. The smashing decision that used to find a special point of application in the idea of "the woman policeman" is yielding, gingerly but rarely, to the realization that the country needs women as police rather more than the women need to be police officials. The realization seems to be a part of the general realization of the human interest mixed up in the criminal case, the realization that you don't finish with that case by merely apprehending the criminal and affixing the thumb screws, and the further realization that the case may be one of many sides and one of two sexes. A desire to reach the case having followed upon the realization, it was perhaps inevitable that women should be available instruments of salvation. In Los Angeles, the "woman policeman" has been installed in response to a distinct need in the handling of woman and girl criminals. In Maryland, she has been applied to for official help to enforce the curfew law in an effective manner. In Chicago as matrons women have long been assisting in the problem of handling the criminal. Very recently these matrons have been placed in the rank of patrolmen, and their salaries have been increased from $1,000 to $1,400 a year.

SET UP BOTTLES AS GODS

Burmese Natives, Relieved by "Pain Killer," Accepted What They Thought Was Deity.

There are many people in this country who are given to a worship of patent medicines; but it remained for the East to furnish an instance of actual idolatry of empty medicine bottles.

An American missionary came upon a village in Burma where an epidemic was raging. Having with him a quantity of New England "pain killer" and thinking he might at least allay the suffering somewhat, he went from house to house administering the remedy, and left a number of bottles to be used after he had gone. When he returned to the village some months later he was met by the head man of the community, who cheered and delighted him by this intelligence; "Teacher, we have come over to your side; the medicine did us so much good that we have accepted your god." Overjoyed at this news, the missionary was conducted to the house of the head man, who opened the door of a room and showed him the pain killer bottles solemnly arranged in a row upon the shelf; and before them the whole company immediately prostrated themselves in worship.

Dog Worth Owning.

J. L. Sappington of Centralia will be protected from the cold this winter by a coonskin overcoat made from hides of coons which he caught with his famous coon dog Buck.

The coat, which Sappington was wearing, was made from the skins of 30 of the 132 of the ringtailed species which he and his canine have captured in the last three years. Sappington sent the skins to a furrier with instructions to use only the best part of the hides. The consequence is his coat is the best and finest that can be made and differs from the coonskin garments of this kind usually seen.

Three years ago Sappington bagged 52 coons. Two years ago he captured 48, last year but 16 and so far this year he has captured 16. Fulton correspondence St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Crack Filler.

Cracks in a floor, caused by the spreading apart of the boards, are objectionable because they catch dust and dirt. A simple and effective crack filler is made from newspapers. Tear the paper into small bits, soak in hot water, and mix with warm flour paste. Fill the cracks with this mixture, which should be thick, spreading the paste with a knife. Another good filler consists of a mixture of glue and sawdust. Heat the glue until melted and for one pound of glue, before melting, allow one gallon of water. When melted, stir into it fine sawdust until a thick paste results. Fill the cracks with this, packing it down solidly and smoothing it over with a knife blade. When the filler is thoroughly dried the floor may be stained.

Even the girl who has a steak-and-onyons appetite can have over the way the stage hero kisses the heroine's hand.

Nature plans well for the needs of humanity. What could be more convenient than ears to hook spectacles over?

Make Us Prove It

We dare not exaggerate to you. We are dependent upon your patronage. To get it we must have your trust and confidence. We make the following statements with a full understanding of what they mean to us. You are safe when you believe in these statements.

For the Bowels

If you only knew as much as we and those who have used them know about Regall Orderlies, you would be as enthusiastic about recommending them as we are. They taste just like candy. They act so easily and so pleasantly that the taking of them is a pleasure.

Even children like Regall Orderlies, and you know that if a medicine appeals to a child, it will appeal to grown-ups.

Regall Orderlies

help chase gloom, dispel blues and make you feel happy by their splendid tonic, cleansing and strengthening effect upon the bowels. They act to free the system—and keep it free—from the distress and ill feeling that naturally results from irregular and inactive bowels.

Regall Orderlies do this quietly, without griping or causing nausea, purging or excessive looseness. They act to overcome and remove the cause.

CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Regall Orderlies are not sold by all druggists. You can buy Regall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores. You can buy Regall Orderlies in this community only at our store.
