High School Meet

First Annual County Event at Boyne City, May 24th.

Through the co-operation of the County Y. M. C. A. and the school authorities of the three high schools of the county it has been arranged to hold annual high school track meets in the county. The work is handled by a committee composed of the high school athletic director and two student representatives from each school and the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. This committee voted to hold the first meet at Boyne City on the 24th and that after this year it shall be held at East Jordan and Charlevoix before coming back to Boyne City. The high school students of Boyne City are making plans to have everything in shape that their visitors will have a most enjoyable time and feel that Boyne City can treat them in a thoroughly sportsman like manner. The following list of events make up the forenoon program and will begin at 10:00 A. M. Standing broad jump, running broad jump, running high jump, baseball throw, shot put and one hundred yard dash. Every boy entering the meet will compete in each one of the events of the morning's program. The events for the afternoon will begin at 1:30. Each boy will be allowed to choose one event from the following list besides the relay, 220, 440, 880 yard dashes, one mile race, two relay races, pole vault and discus throw. Those wishing to attend this meet should make arrangements with the high school principal for the high school is making arrangements to charter the boat.

RURAL SCHOOL ATHLETICS

The rural school athletic contest held at Marion Center last Friday for the schools of Marion and Norwood townships adds another link to the chain of evidence which goes to prove that the boys and girls of the rural schools enjoy and profit by organized athletic life. The day for the meet was an exceptionally cold one and as the secretary of the county Y. M. C. A. drove from Boyne City to Marion Center he doubted if any of the boys and girls would be ready to participate. Arriving at his destination his wonderings were put at rest for the youngsters were coming from all four directions eager to take up the conflict which provided an outlet for their stored-up energy. At ten o'clock the Y. M. C. A. secretary, assisted by five young men from Charlevoix, began the meet. Athletic contests for the boys were first in order, the lads being divided into classes according to weight and all striving for the honor of their school. The events included those of the ordinary field meet and concluded with a relay race which was won by Miss Lula Mason's school, Marion District 3. This school also won first place in the meet, and Miss Mary Gunsolus' school won second place. George Nager of Norwood No. 1 made the highest number of points and was awarded the bronze medal. At noon everyone was ready to rest for a time and also enjoy the splendid dinner provided by the interested ladies of the community who laid aside their other work that they might contribute something to the success of the day. After dinner the contests were resumed and outdoor games for the girls started and it was a happy busy time, and some who came to watch for a short time stayed all the day. No one who likes children could fail to enjoy seeing the children enjoy themselves so heartily. The comments of the fathers, mothers, teachers and the county school commissioner indicated that in their opinion the day had been the best ever provided for the rural school children.

MADE A RECORD

Three Bells School Has En- vialbe Attendance.

The Three Bells School, District No. 2, Eveline township has made an envialbe attendance record through the efforts of their instructor, Ernest Peaslee. With some thirty-five pupils enrolled there is not a tardy mark registered against any of the scholars for the entire school year. Eight pupils were neither absent nor tardy for the full year, and nineteen others have not been absent for three months or more. The pupils have a record of one hundred eighty perfect months. Mr. Peaslee is to be congratulated on the record shown by his school.

"Swat the Fly."

Follow Below Suggestions and Eliminate Pest.

Don't allow flies in your house. Don't permit them near your food especially milk. Don't buy foodstuffs where flies are tolerated. Don't eat where flies have access to the food. Flies are the most dangerous insects known to man. Flies are the filthiest of all vermin. They are born on filth, live on filth, and carry filth around with them. They are maggots before they are flies. Flies are known to be carriers of millions of death-dealing disease germs. They leave some of these germs wherever they alight. How You Can Get Rid of Flies. Screen your windows, porches and doors. If you have screens with holes in the wire cloth, repair same with new cloth. Screen the baby's bed. Screen all food, especially milk. Do not eat food that has been in contact with flies. Catch the flies as fast as they appear. Use fly swatters, liquid poisons or fly traps. Sticky fly papers are very effective, sanitary and non-poisonous. A good fly poison can be made by using one pint of milk, one pint of water, one tablespoon formaldehyde and one tablespoon of sugar. Place in shallow vessels small square pieces of bread thoroughly saturated with this mixture. Be careful to keep it out of the reach of the children and animals. Put a vessel or two of this mixture on the back porch, to destroy the flies before they get into the house. No other food should be near, then the flies will take the poison, killing them quickly and by the thousands. Eliminate Breeding Places of Flies. Flies breed in filth. Allow no filth or decaying matter of any kind to accumulate on or near your premises. Sprinkle kerosene over contents of privy vaults. Keep garbage receptacles tightly covered; clean the cans every day, and the boxes once a week. Always keep the ground clean around garbage boxes. Keep manure in screened pit or tightly covered vault. Manure should be removed every week, at least. Burn all refuse—such as old bedding paper, straw, etc. Remember! No dirt—no flies. Notify health officer of nuisances in the neighborhood.

NEW AUTO TAX LAW EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1

To clear up some apparent misunderstanding about the new motor vehicle law which was passed the closing week of the legislative session, and to make plain the reasons why it was enacted, despite vigorous protests from Michigan cities, the following statement is commended to the attention of all owners, manufacturers and retailers of automobiles, motor trucks and motorcycles.

In the first place, the new law does not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1914. This means that all owners of motor vehicles will this year pay taxes the same as before.

Next New Year's Day all motor vehicles will be stricken from the tax rolls. From that day on nobody will have to pay any local, county or state taxes on his machine. But when owners apply to the secretary of state for their annual license plate they will have to pay a fee of 50 cents per horse power on their machines. The annual license fee since the first law was enacted on the subject, in 1909, has been $3 on every motor vehicle, irrespective of size or horse power. Motorcycles have been paying the same as motor cars.

It is further ordered that such assessment when so made shall be divided into five equal parts, one part to be collected this year and one part each and every year thereafter, until the whole amount is paid and collected. ## MAKING THE HOME GROUNDS BEAUTIFUL

Path Made Beautiful With Currant Bushes.

(By HESSIE L. PUTNAM)
Peony clumps should not be allowed to grow too large or remain too long undisturbed, else they will produce fewer flowers which will be small and poorly colored. Therefore if not attended to before this choose some warm, bright day towards the end of this month and divide the clumps. Of course this means when the frost is out of the soil and it is in good working order. This condition obtains in many sections of the country at this time.

What has been written above in regard to the peony applies to most of our herbaceous and perennial plants—that is, they do not like to be disturbed after they have made much growth, but as they are about to start growing in the spring is the time to divide them.

Get your beds and borders in shape so that when you receive dormant plants from the seedsman or nurseryman you can put them in their permanent home, and not have to heel them in to wait until you get their beds ready for them.

Guard against roses, shrubs and the like that have been placed in cold storage to retard growth. They are not in strong growing condition when you receive them late in spring, and will not withstand the usual heat of May and June. They must make their early growth under natural conditions and not a month after their usual time.

Above all, don't crowd. This applies to the window garden where the amateur wishes to grow a great number of plants, forgetting that a few well-grown specimens would give more pleasure than a lot of shabby failures. It also refers to the lawn that is often cut up into flower beds of divers shapes and sizes that spoil all the beauty of the home place, and this holds true also where flowers are crowded in bed and border.

At this season of the year, when the days lengthen and the sun grows warmer, plants in the window begin to grow and blossom. Now is the time to make cuttings of plants wanted for summer decoration. Procure a wooden flat or an old iron pan, or dish that will hold water and fill it with sand. Insert cuttings, or rather "strike" them fairly and squarely into the sand. Do not move the cuttings sideways, or in any way have air spaces about them. Do not place in direct sunlight; a thinly curtained south window is the best. Keep them moist.

Include in your list of new plants a climbing rose or two. They are lovely while they bloom just after the June rose has faded. Prepare the soil well, digging it deeply and enriching it generously. Of course the soil must be well drained.

Much of the success of seedlings depends upon the soil they are started in. We should endeavor to grow seeds in light, rich soil so that the tiny seedling may acquire a stock of vitality which will give it a fair start and fighting chance in life to enable it to withstand the trials of its later existence.

ESSENTIALS IN ROSE PLANTING

First Point of Importance Is Soil Preparation—Manure Should Be Added.

(By W. R. GILBERT)
The planting of roses can hardly be undertaken at a better period of the year than now.

The first question is the soil, and here the rose is really very accommodating. There are few soils in which roses will not grow. The ideal rose soil is a yellow clayey loam of a silky texture. Heavy clay soils are improved by the addition of road grit, leaf mold, old potting soil, burnt earth, and horse manure. Light soils should have pig or cow manure added, also clay or heavy loam. The latter should not be added in large lumps, but in a broken-down state.

In preparing the soil dig or trench two spits (or spades) deep, incorporating manure with the lower spit. None should be mixed with the upper soil, as the roots do not want to be in contact with the manure when planted. A mulch can be added on top when planting is finished. When single trees are being planted, as, say, standards in round beds on the lawn edge, a site four feet across should be prepared as above. Where quite unsuitable soil exists, excavate it and replace with heavy loamy material.

The actual operation of planting consists of making a hole in the prepared ground 18 inches square, and about 6 inches deep. Carefully spread out the rose roots, covering them quickly with a little fine soil, and spread the upper ones thereon. Do not crowd the roots together for want of space. Make the hole of ample size to take the roots laid out flat. Give the stem a gentle shake to settle the soil between the roots, then cover with more soil, and gently tread, adding more soil, to make all level and treading down again. Stakes for standards should be inserted before planting the rose; this avoids possible damage to roots by inserting after planting. With dwarf roses it is best to plant deep enough to bury the part where budding or grafting was done—the union, as it is called—for roots will then be produced later, and the plant becomes "own rooted." Where the stock stem is very long plant it on the slope; this is better than too deep planting. Dwarf roses should be planted about 18 inches apart, standards three feet, and climbers four feet or more.

If a rose tree is dry when received from the nursery give it two or three hours' soaking in a pail of tepid water. If planting cannot be done immediately, then open a trench, lay the roots therein, with the stems lying on the ground, and cover with soil; leave this till a convenient time arrives. Do not plant in frosty weather. Avoid exposure to drying winds while planting.

Hay Should Not Sunburn.
The feeding value, as well as the market value, and palatability of hay, is lowered by being sunburned. The feeding value is probably hurt most by the loss of leaves. Sunburned clover and alfalfa lose a large part of the leaves in handling, and this is the best part of the crop.

When the sun is shining very brightly the alfalfa or grass should not be left in the swath long. A large part of the curing should be done in the windrow and the cock. Most of the hay is then shaded and so the damaging effect of intense sunshine is reduced to the exposed portion. And a stock cover will still further lessen the injury from the sun as well as from rain.

Mixed Stock Farming.
As a rule, on the average farm at least, it will be better to have a few cattle, some horses, a score of swine and small flock of sheep, than to have the same amount of money invested in either cattle or hogs alone. There is greater safety in such distribution of capital, inasmuch as the different kinds of stock subsist somewhat on different kinds of food, and if on account of drought or for some other reason one kind of food fails, other may be made available to carry through in good condition at least one or more of the classes of animals kept.

Roller Is Great Aid.
The use of the roller is of very great aid in securing a catch of clover by increasing the rate at which moisture is brought to the seed from the subsoil.

SHOW FRUITS OF SOIL

WESTERN MICHIGAN BANKS BOOST DEVELOPMENT WORK.

Exhibits of Farm Products an Annual Event in Most of the Financial Institutions—Educational Work Being Pushed.

Fifteen banks in Western Michigan have been doing development work on their own hook. Nine of the fifteen have been holding annual farm products exhibits in their lobbies, four have been distributing literature calculated to stimulate interest in the agricultural pursuits, and two have been offering prizes for best showings of corn and other products grown by the boys and girls' clubs.

One of the more elaborate of the exhibits was that made by the Traverse City state bank, last October. The large lobby with the big display windows on the street side was turned into an exhibit hall. A row of tables was placed down the center and each of these was covered with fine specimens of fruits, grains, and vegetables. The ledge of the banking counter was decorated with enlarged photographs of orchards and plates of apples. The window ledge was filled with jars containing fruits in preserving solutions. There was such an abundance of farm produce that the president's office had to be given over to the display as well as the lobby. A Saturday evening was set aside for an opening reception and fully a thousand persons visited the exhibit during the two hours that the doors were open.

The First National Bank of Boyne City has been conducting displays each fall for a number of years past. The fruits and vegetables brought in by the depositors, and been arranged to show to the best advantage. This bank is now planning on offering a prize of $100 for the best field of alfalfa for the coming season. Furthermore, it is loaning to farmers at a low rate so as to encourage them to make improvements.

Exhibit of Farm Products, Alba Bank, Antrim County.

Annual Displays Conducted.
For four years the Old State Bank of Fremont has been promoting annual displays. These have continued over a period of about two months each season and have included specimens of the finest of the farm and orchard products of the Newaygo section.

In addition to the above the bank recently bought 600 subscriptions to a fruit publication and distributed these among its customers. A large number of photographic postcards advertising the section were also distributed.

The First National Bank of Traverse City starts a farm products exposition each summer with the appearance of the first strawberry and keeps the same going at high speed until early winter, showing in attractive and manner, the finest of the things grown by its patrons. This bank has also given a number of prizes for essays upon topics bearing upon fruit raising and agricultural education. Last fall 1,200 subscriptions to a fruit magazine were secured for distribution among the fruit growers of the region.

The Citizens' State Bank of Big Rapids began in 1911 to hold an annual fruit, vegetable and grain exhibit. D. E. Morrill, when interviewed by the writer, said, "Our farmers, fruit growers, and gardeners took a great interest in the exhibit bringing us a great many specimens. We also found it of interest to our city residents, who came often and brought their friends. Many from other cities and states who happened to be here and had heard of the exhibit came in." In 1912 this bank offered cash premiums. Twice each month $1 was paid for the best display made during the previous half-month in each class, but no premium was awarded unless there were at least three exhibits in the class. At the end of the season a grand prize of a $28 kitchen cabinet was awarded to the person who had taken the largest number of prizes during the season.

Rewards for Testimonials.
The Alba bank, Antrim county, has been conducting annual exhibits since 1906. The officers of the institution have also been displaying photographic views of good roads and extra fine farm crops. During the marketing season prizes have been offered for the best testimonials of the producing power of the Alba soil. A vast amount of printed matter regarding the region has been distributed.

The Falmouth bank, Missaukee county, held its first exhibit last fall. This was a big success, and the bank's officials are proud of the showing made.

The banks at both Thompsonville and Honor, Benzie county, have been using their lobbies for agricultural purposes. The bank at Honor has been making a display of fruits in solutions in glass jars during the winter months. The bank at Empire is now making plans for a big exhibit during the spring.

The Fremont state bank has been pursuing a policy directed toward the urging of the farmers to keep more and better cows and to feed their farm products to their stock rather than to market the same, knowing that a steady income from cows is thus insured.

A gum-shoe campaign of education has been followed by the People's Savings Bank of Traverse City. This bank has put out literature advocating the up-building of the soil and urging the growing of alfalfa and other desirable crops.

Bank Distributes Pamphlets.
The Security bank at Walkerville Oceana county, has been busy distributing pamphlets telling the possibilities of the Oceana county section.

The Big Rapids bank has been following a plan which has put them in close touch with the farmers of Mecosta county, that all necessary credit needed to carry the farmers from spring to fall could be furnished.

The private banks at Buckley, Wexford county and Kaleva, Manistee county, have been lending their aid to the clubs formed in their sections for Three-year-old George and his sister, slightly older, were having a tete-a-tete luncheon. "Why," she demanded, "do you take the last ginger-snap, when you've had two and I haven't had any?" The young philosopher pondered for a moment, then condescended to elucidate. "Because," he said, kindly, "I'm a boy and you're a girl."

Bisulphide for Ants.

Where ants infest lawns or other equally available areas, punch holes about a foot deep with a stick at three or four points near the center of the nest; pour into each about an ounce of the bisulphide of carbon and close the openings with the foot. The vapor will get into and follow the galleries and kill the ants. A second treatment will rarely be necessary.

LOST STAGE COACH

Had Been Buried in the Sand Forty Years With Its $30,000 Treasure.

By SELINA LILLIAN HIGGINS.

"You must not be discouraged, Abner," spoke Mrs. Waldron in her patient, sympathizing way.

"I'm not, mother," was the prompt but infinitely weary response. "It is not the loss of business, home and friends. What worries me is the fact that after all my sacrifices, I shall not be able to pay my creditors in full. It is a pretty heavy load for an old man like me to carry."

"Remember the promise: 'On whom God's hand resteth, hath God at his right hand.'"

Abner Waldron tried to smile bravely, kissed the dear old patient face of his helpmeet, and left the house for his accustomed stroll. It had ceased to seem like home for a week past, for it was scheduled to follow the rest of his possessions and go towards paying his debts.

He had done very well in a business way, until a smooth, smart city promoter had come to Albion. His father, James Waldron, the banker, had come to the little Michigan town 50 years since. He had left the son some money, and Abner had built up a profitable manufacturing business. Then the promoter had filled his mind with expansive ideas. He had branched out, the sleek schemer had reaped a rich harvest, and then—failure.

Abner had turned over every penny he had in the world. It paid up everything except a few thousand dollars. Mrs. Waldron had in her own right a small farm in an adjoining county. They had decided to go there, and were now on the eve of departure.

"It's the older children, Richard and Maud, that I care about," the thoughtful bankrupt had told his close friends. "The boy can earn his own living, the girl has a fine education, and can do the same. But you see, both are engaged. I expected to give them a good start in life. Now, the weddings must be postponed. It seems as though my foolish ideas of becoming a mil-

It Was a Great, Lumbering, Old-Fashioned Vehicle.

Honaire have driven happiness away from everybody who had anything to do with me."

Abner evaded meeting his neighbors, and took a lonely route out of town. He was soon among the sand hills. He wanted to think, plan out resignation for the present, contentment for the future. It was a great sand district about Albion. Lying along the lake shore, air currents had piled up great yellow mountains of the shifting particles. One wind storm would build up a great hill in a night. A second from a contrary direction would obliterate this nature-building within an hour. Abner got in among the dunes, and sat down amid as lonely and desolate a scene as could well be imagined.

The bleak environment chilled him, but at the same time quieted. Alone and undisturbed, he reviewed all the past. He bravely faced the future. After all, it would be rest and peace after turmoil and strife. The smaller children would be happy and comfortable, and the little farm might bring in enough to help him to pay eventually the debts that harassed his sensitive nature like a millstone about his neck.

A cheerful reaction took place in Abner's mind, as he reflected that after all his was not the worst condition in the world. He had a loyal, helpful wife and loving, obedient children. From a more comfortable attitude of mind his thoughts idly drifted, and he fell to dreaming over events in his past life. Then in a whimsical way a story of the long ago came to his memory.

His father had been well nigh ruined right among these treacherous sand hills nearly 40 years since. The event was the sensation of the hour through the whole district. James Waldron had removed his little country bank to Albion from Sankatuck in the next county. Over $30,000 in gold had been carried in locked iron boxes in an old stage coach. Its driver had lost his way among the sand hills, a great storm had come up, and he was blown from his seat against a rock and rendered insensible.

When he came back to consciousness the stage coach, the horses, the treasure, had disappeared. There was a search all over the country. It brought no results. With difficulty the banker met the great loss. It was generally decided that robbers had driven the treasure away, stage and all, and no trace of the outfit was ever found.

"The sky had darkened while Abner sat dreaming. A cyclonic gust nearly swept him off his feet as he got up to make a start for home. A blinding rain of sand cut his face. Abner walked briskly forward, but several times in his up and down hill progress he went headlong as the sand slides took him off his footing.

"This is getting serious!" he exclaimed, as he slid nearly the length of a hill, to land in a gully between two towering mountains of sand. He tried to reascend. It was like breasting an avalanche. The cut was filling up fast. At one time the sand was up to his knees.

"Why! I shall be engulfed! It is like quicksand!" he reflected in vivid alarm.

His situation was truly critical. He knew that unless he got out of what was a natural funnel for the tornado air currents, he was lost. He struggled on, came to a turn in the gully, and dimly made out a slanting mass of gnarled tree roots. Abner ran to it, slipped, a cavity was revealed, and he dropped into darkness fully 20 feet.

The breath was nearly knocked out of his body, and it was some time before he could arise to his feet. He stood on a sandy foundation, apparently of some large sheltered void. It was so dark he could not make out its extent. Groping along, he landed against a post. Then it occurred to him that he had come upon one of the many sand submerged houses swallowed up in some tornado years before. Once he had stepped into a chimney, all that was left visible of one of these engulfed structures.

Abner was a smoker. He therefore carried matches, and feeling in his pocket for one, drew it forth and flared it. Then, transfixed, he strained his gaze, wondering if some Aladdin touch had suddenly created a fairy scene for deluded senses.

Before him was an open shed supported by posts. Back of it was a great, lumbering, old fashioned vehicle. Attached were the skeletons of a team of horses. Thrilled, amazed, in almost a shout the electrified observer gasped out:

"The lost stage coach!"

Yes, it could be no other—it was no other. Like lightning through his bewildered brain ran a theory elucidating all the mystery of 40 years and more.

To this shelter on the night the bank was moved the horses had strayed, to be enveloped, swallowed up in the great winding wreaths of sand, past rescue and sight until now.

More matches, a closer inspection, and there, intact, just as they had been originally stowed, were the iron boxes. Abner found the bank treasure—his by right of discovery, his by right of legal inheritance.

So all the dark clouds passed away. Drooping roof ends enabled the adventurer to regain the open air when the sand storm was over, and the family roof was saved, and soon there were two joyful weddings.

BUYING BOOKS BY THE TITLE

Two Historic Examples to Show That This is by All Means a Dangerous Practice.

In the titles of books lie at times pitfalls for the unwary. An almost classic example was afforded by John Ruskin, when, in 1851, he wrote a short pamphlet on the text, "There shall be one fold and one shepherd." This, which treated of the reunion of the Protestant churches, was published as "Notes on the Construction of Sheepfolds"—a title which, appealing rather to the agricultural than to the clerical mind, insured a brisk circulation among farmers—those of the border especially—many of whom ordered a copy in the hope that they might glean therefrom some original hints and ideas that would be of use to them in their calling.

The bucolic mind, indeed, would seem singularly predisposed to jump to hasty conclusions, for English farmers followed but in the wake of their Irish brethren—or rather of their Irish brother, who, an enthusiast on the subject of cattle breeding, greeted with delight the appearance of a little volume by Maria Edgeworth, bearing the title, "Essay on Irish Bulls." Although the name of the authoress was to him unknown, the contents would doubtless be considered, be well worth the few shillings he so willingly disbursed; but, alas! although the spirited engraving of rampant Taurus that prefaced the essay gave delightful promise, he had to read a few lines to find that he had become possessed of a treatise, not on bovine ruminants, but on that particular "blunder which is commonly supposed to be characteristic of the Irish nation."

Would Not Be an Actress.

Little Mary, aged sweet fifteen and stage struck, laid down her knitting with a sigh one night and said: "Ah, mother, how I'd like to be one of those great actresses or singers on the stage!"

"Would you?" said the mother uneasily. "I don't know. It's an unhealthy business, isn't it?"

"Why is it?" asked the daughter. "It must be," said the mother. "Don't you always see their names in the paper, telling how they've been taking tonics and patent medicines and so on?"

"THE CLIMATE OF WESTERN CANADA."

AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN CANADA'S IMMIGRATION.

A letter dated February 2, 1913, published in a "People's Voice" column in a Swedish paper, while dealing with other conditions in Canada, such as grain yield, social conditions, etc., says: "We have had fine weather until New Year's, when some snow fell and it was cold for a few days; but during the past few days we have lovely weather again."

The writer, who lives near Davidson, Sask., says they got from 30 to 35 bushels of wheat per acre, 60 bushels of oats and about 20 bushels of flax. All homesteads are taken in the vicinity, but wild land can be bought at reasonable figures. Word from Alberta gives the information that up to the 22nd of February there were eighty-four and a quarter hours of bright sunshine, but that did not come up to the corresponding month of 1912, when the meteorological department registered 120 hours for the 29 days.

February was exceptionally fine all through, but 1912 went one better, and was a glorious month. However, taking the weather generally throughout the northern hemisphere, February has been marked by serious and severe disturbances resulting in heavy storms, bad weather and low temperatures in many other parts.

The coldest temperature this week occurred on Tuesday morning, when the thermometer registered 23.5 below, and the coldest Wednesday was 21 below. During the last fortnight of February 9 and 8.7 hours of bright sunshine spread its glorious rays over Edmonton, and this out of a possible total of about ten hours is something to talk about.—Advertisement.

Scissors for Memorial Wreaths. The police of Berlin applied the censorship of the scissors to a recent demonstration at the cemetery where are buried the socialists and anarchists who fell in the revolution in Berlin March 18, 1848. Hundreds of visitors brought wreaths, the socialists red and the anarchists black, to lay on the graves. The police, with scissors, stood at the entrance to the cemetery. Every wreath was submitted to them, and the sentiments on the ribbons had to undergo the censorship of the scissors.

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

Abbotsford, Wis.—"My son had eczema on his hands for about one year. The eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not close them, and when he wet his hands they hurt him so he could hardly wash. His hands itched and burned just terrible and if he would scratch them, they would break out into sores. He could not get any rest or sleep, and his hands looked quite bad.

"We had medicine and salve and it kept getting worse all the time. I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after washing his hands with the Cuticura Soap and putting some of the Cuticura Ointment on two times a day and tying cloths on them for about six months they got well and have not broken out since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him entirely." (Signed) Mrs. Lawrence Kiehl, Feb. 13, 1912.

from the west line of Main-st to the East Jordan & Southern R. R. tracks, which this Commission has determined shall be paid by special assessment to be levied upon the lots, lands and premises fronting and abutting upon such improvement, according to frontage. Said roll shall levy the sum of nine hundred eighty-two dollars and seventy-seven cents, ($982.77) the same being seventy-five per cent of the cost of said improvement after deducting therefrom the amount apportioned to be paid by the City of East Jordan as its just proportion of the cost of paving the street and alley intersections and benefits to public parks and public places. Said special assessment roll shall be made by said Assessor in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the City of East Jordan, and the Statutes of the State of Michigan.

Said assessment roll shall assess all lots, lands and premises in said Paving District No. 3, according to frontage, and said Assessor shall assess to each lot or parcel of land such relative portion of the whole amount as the length of front of such premises abutting upon the improvement bears to the whole frontage of all the lots to be assessed, unless on account of the shape of any lot an assessment of a different number of feet would be more equitable, in which case such assessment will be for an equitable number of feet for such lot.

It is further ordered that such assessment when so made shall be divided into five equal parts, one part to be collected this year and one part each and every year thereafter until the whole amount is paid and collected. The time and manner of the collection shall be determined by this Commission in a resolution hereafter to be adopted.

The cost of said improvement at the intersection of streets and alleys and the benefits derived by public parks and public places, heretofore determined by this Commission, at the sum of three hundred dollars, ($300.00) shall be assessed against the City of East Jordan.

The twenty-five per cent of the cost of said improvement after the deduction of the amount apportioned to the City as the cost of street and alley intersections and benefits to public parks and public places, shall be assessed to the City of East Jordan, which amount has been determined by this Commission at the sum of three hundred twenty-seven dollars and fifty-nine cents, ($327.59).

It is further ordered that the entire assessment against any lot or parcel of land shall not exceed twenty-five per cent of the assessed valuation of said lot or parcel of land according to the last preceding assessment roll thereof, nor shall said special assessment exceed five per cent of said valuation in any one year; and in case any such assessment against any lot or parcel shall show any such excess then the amount of such excess shall be paid by the City of East Jordan out of the general fund of said city, and such assessment shall be valid and a lien upon such lot or parcel of land for the whole amount legally assessed thereon.

It is further ordered that said Assessor or report said roll to this Commission and file the same with the clerk of the City on or before the 1st day of July, A. D. 1913.

Adopted by the City Commission of the City of East Jordan on the thirteenth day of May, A. D. 1913, by an aye and nay vote as follows:
 Ayes, Cross, Kenny and Hudson.
 Naves, none.

When some people know their duty they manage to stave it off by asking advice.
 It is better to pay doctor's bills than to have the undertaker collect out of your estate.

A man living at Auburn, New York, had a severe attack of kidney and bladder trouble. Being a working man, not wanting to lose time, he cured himself completely by taking Foley Kidney Pills. East Jordan is among the towns which has kept at it until a goodly percentage of its citizens appreciate the higher class of entertainment and educational features made possible for the smaller cities and towns to enjoy through the medium of the Lyceum Bureau. The past year a very satisfactory course paid out on expenses. For next season a somewhat higher priced course has been selected including two musical attractions, two lectures and one entertainer, each in itself being classed as a star number. The opening number will make it seem like a new pace had been set. The names and descriptions of the several attractions, have been promised for publication in the near future. The talent will be furnished by the Cort Lyceum Bureau of Cleveland.

THIN PASTE ON THE STAMPS

Postoffice Clerk Says They Are Prepared Thus for Summer, but Thicker for Winter.

To stamp out an alleged evil, that of a shortage of mucilage on postage stamps, numerous complaints have been made to the postoffice department.

At a substation in West Thirty-first street a clerk at the "inquiry window," who admitted he has held that position for more than 15 years and knew more about stamps and their peculiarities than the designer of them, threw some light on the subject.

"In the first place," he said, "there are two kinds of stamps prepared with two different kinds of mucilage coating."

One is a winter stamp, which naturally has a heavy coating. The summer stamp is as thin with mucilage covering as an Atlantic City bathing suit. As a rule the public is not aware of this distinction.

"Now, what is the result? Persons using stamps in the summer time are as industrious in the licking process as they are in the winter, when the stamps are hibernating under a heavy coating of mucilage. Naturally all the patent glue is taken off, and the stamp, if it remains on the letter, does so through faith."

"The many complaints this winter have been caused by the mild weather. The department at Washington has been sending out summer stamps, but the patrons have been using a winter tongue on them. There is the whole subject summed up in a coconut shell."—New York Herald.

Love's Analysis.

"Do you love me?" he asked. In reply the modern young girl looked at him with eyes pervaded with emotion.

"Do I love you?" she repeated. "I do. I love you psychologically, scientifically, economically. From the psychological standpoint I feel that our different organisms are so nicely differentiated as to form a properly articulated area of combined consciousness. Sociologically, our individual environment has been enough in contrast to form a proper basis for a right union. Economically I feel sure that when we come to combine we shall be able to introduce into the management of our affairs the right financial balance to produce the scientific result which every well-ordered and conducted business produces. And now, how do you love me?"

The young man reached forward. He clasped her swiftly but surely in his arms. He hugged her and kissed her alabaster cheek and her ruby lips. "How do I love you?" he replied. "My dear girl, I love you just as much as if you really knew what you were talking about."

The Colonel Recovered.

The colonel had lost his wife, and felt so bad about it that Liza, the negro cook, was very much distressed. She was telling one of the colonel's relatives how the colonel carried on.

"Yes y' know, hit's jes' terrible, Miss Jessie, jes' terrible. Ole Marse Colonel, he sho do carry on sumpin' dreadful. Why, he 'pears like nobody kain't comfo't him, Miss Jessie. He sho do carry on so."

"Why, Miss Jessie, it's jes' dat bald de colonel don't eat nothin'. He ain't et for days, main. No, main, he dun los' his apperite ovah' grievein'."

Then Miss Jessie went away for two weeks. When she returned her first question was: "Well, Liza, how is uncle?"

"Oh, he all' right now, Miss Jessie. He done et."

Essay on Hens.

A boy who was required to write an essay on hens produced the following: "Hens is curious animals; they don't have no nose nor no teeth nor no ears. They swallow their whistles whole and chew it up in their crops inside of 'em. The outside of hens is generally put into pillers and into feather dusters. The inside of a hen is sometimes filled with marbles and shirt buttons and sich. A hen is very much smaller than a good many other animals, but they'll dig up more tomato plants than anything that ain't a hen. Hens is very useful to lay eggs for plum puddings. Hens have got wings and can fly when they get frightened. I cut off a hen's head with a hatchet and it frightened her to death."

Classified.

Uncle Ezra (on first trip to city, in front of door)—It's all marble in there, Eben, but I don't know what kind of a place it is.

Uncle Eben (ditto)—Don't show your ignorance, Eben. If the people are wrapped up, it's a Turkish bath; if they ain't got much on it's a fashionable restaurant.—Puck.

Fascinating to Spectator.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the moving-picture doorkeeper. "This is about the twentieth time you've looked this film over."

"Yes, I can't keep away."

"And it isn't such a great film as that."

"You don't understand. My wife was the leading woman in that photoplay. You don't know what it means to a man to be able to sit down and see his wife busily occupied day after day and at the same time not hear her saying a word."

Urge Minimum Wage Scale for Women

By T. ELLING, Chicago

women and girls is what causes immorality among them it is my opinion that the majority of employers would soon raise wages and favor a minimum wage law.

Girls who go wrong usually get the start downward through the negligence or inability of ignorant or careless parents who are unqualified for the proper training of children.

It is here a minimum wage law for men and women, assisted by a minimum education law, would have a more desirable effect.

Suggestive songs, cheap dive dance halls, saloons, poolrooms, obscene theaters, disreputable resorts and cafes, these with their evil influences and finished product cause more girls (also boys) to go wrong than low wages ever did.

The advertising given the immoral life through suggestive songs and other agencies has lifted its social stigma and made its entrance less reproachful.

A number of candidates are only awaiting the provocation, which sometimes is low wages.

While the fallen woman question is being discussed we would bring into the same question the male of the species (who, by the way, is much greater in number), and we may arrive at a more sensible plan of action.

We shall have outgrown the causes of low wages, fallen people and their attendant evils when we have learned to exercise our intellects on problems concerning our social and economic conditions instead of the pink sheet.

Oratory Being Replaced by Printed Word

By JOSEPH LEVIN, Boston, Mass.

Is the orator's occupation gone, and is the spell-binder's day drawing to a close? Has the newspaper put them out of business? Samuel J. Elder, himself a speaker of more than common attainments, notes the fact, which he seems to deplore, that oratory as a means of spreading thought and knowledge, is being superseded by the printed word.

True, there are no great successors of Daniel Webster, Wendell Phillips or Herry Ward Beecher, and the old lyceum is no more. But nearly every city has its public forum or forums, where every week topics of current interest are discussed by thoughtful men and women. And in Boston, at least, there is a superabundance of lecturers.

In general, the public seems to be getting out of the habit of listening to lectures, orations and speeches and swallowing them whole, without question. This is the age of questions. Every thoughtful man or woman has more than anybody can answer. Newspapers, magazines and books have made this generation far more sophisticated, if not wiser or more profound, than its predecessor. That sophistication is fatal to the spell-binder's art. In order to be successful, the orator must appeal to the emotions of his hearers, and the more the public reads, the harder it is to play on its feelings.

But who doesn't enjoy genuine oratory? Who doesn't like to have his feelings roused and his heart set afire by the burning words of an eloquent speaker? Feeling is the best known substitute for thinking, which at best is difficult. So, if Webster or Phillips or Beecher could speak to us on the questions of 1913 we would all flock to hear him.

Right Treatment of Children by Parents

By W. A. PETERS, Baltimore, Md.

of the Massachusetts probation commission, by a story he told the other day to those interested in probation. It was given out of his long experience as a probation official and concerned a wealthy contractor in Boston.

This man had a son and a daughter, both fine children. But their mother died. Their father remarried and the stepmother, not unlike others, showed more affection for her own children than for her foster children. The son, still a minor, got to drinking. He was arrested. His father refused to aid him and he was sent to the workhouse.

Meanwhile, the daughter, lacking the sympathy of a mother, became wayward. Against her, also, the father's heart was closed. She went to work in a department store and was caught stealing articles from the store. Other things equally reprehensible this young girl was guilty of until she became amenable to probation and its reformatory influences.

But what of parental responsibility? The boy and the girl might have been saved from ill courses had they known the sustaining sympathy of a parent at the most critical point in their lives.

What of the severe attitude of a father which compels the state to step in and take the place, as best it may, of a parent by practicing probation? Probation is preventive in its nature, but right treatment by parents is the best of all preventives.

Ordinary Politeness is Most Pleasing

By Rev. Frank Crane, Chicago

Just plain, ordinary, everyday politeness is about the most pleasing thing a human being can have to offer.

It sweetens the air. It cheers the heart. It feels good. It tastes good. It is good. It doesn't cost a cent and it will accomplish more in a minute than money and curses can get done in a month.

The average American employe who deals with the public is distinctly disagreeable. Street car conductors are insolently deaf. Bank clerks are contemptuously brusque. Telephone girls are snappy. And dry goods "salesladies" are snippy. Waiters take your order when they please, bring your food when they get ready, and they go away and if you need another fork you may get up and get it yourself.

A waiter in a New York restaurant took a meek-looking old gentleman's order for a beefsteak and then departed and remained somewhere in the dim distance for a long time. By and by he came to the old gentleman, who had been sitting patiently with his hands folded.

"How would you like your steak, sir?" asked the waiter.

The old gentleman looked up, collected his thoughts and responded enthusiastically, "Oh, very much, very much, indeed."

Some day the common herd who are jammed like cattle into elevated trains and punched in the back by guards and told to "step lively," who are hung on street-car straps, who are browbeaten, despised, snubbed and walked upon by public servants—some day this proletariat will rise and drive a few clerks about three feet into the ground.

A minimum wage law for women would be welcome and would mark a stride for progress. If it can be demonstrated (I do not think it can be) that the lowness of wages paid

ICY BOND SAVES 2 FROZEN TOGETHER

Hands Clasped, Men Drift Senseless to Beach

SEEMED TO BE DEAD

C. L. Specklin and Joseph Frana, After Being Capized Mile From Shore in Lake Pistakee, Are Pulled From Water.

Gray's Lake, Ill.—The lives of two men were saved at Lake Pistakee during the last cold spell of the past winter, because their bodies froze together. A mile or more from the shore of the lake, where they were duck hunting, the open boat capized. Stretching out their arms to each other across the boat bottom the men clasped hands.

Then, while they lost consciousness in the bitter cold, ice formed over their hands and arms so that they could not drop from the boat. Thus they drifted.

One of them was Charles Lawrence Boecklin of the firm of Boecklin Brothers, commercial artists, 417 North Dearborn street, Chicago. The other was Joseph Frana, whose home is on the shore of the lake.

Herman Matheson, proprietor of a hotel bearing his name at the lake shore, was walking along the shore with Jacob Larsen, a boat builder. Larsen saw the upturned row boat.

"That's queer," he said. "There's something fastened to the boat."

In a few minutes the boat came nearer, drifting fast.

"It's a man," exclaimed Larsen.

"It's two men," said Matheson.

They ran to a near-by boathouse and set forth in another row boat.

It was with difficulty, after the capized boat had been towed ashore, that the frozen bodies were released from the boat bottom.

"It seemed certain that both men were dead," said Matheson afterward.

"The parts of their body that had not been submerged were covered with ice. Their heads were great cakes of ice that formed from the roots of their hair. The splashing water had frozen—almost as it fell on them."

The victims were taken to the Matheson hotel, where physicians worked on them four hours before consciousness was restored. There were no symptoms of drowning. But the men were almost frozen to death.

Boecklin and Frana set forth after luncheon to hunt ducks. A sudden squall arose on the lake and the little craft became unmanageable and capized.

GIRL TIED TO HORNS OF COW

Manitoba Farmer Arrested on Cruelty Charge—Victim's Clothing Torn From Body.

Winnipeg, Man.—Manitoba police recently went to Newdale, Man., a farming district seventy miles northwest of here, and arrested Peter G. Hanson of Erickson, eighteen miles out of town, for a case of cruelty almost unheard of. Failing to secure return of his attentions from Maggie Wareski, he caught the girl while she was driving the cows home and tied her to a cow's horns. The animal was stampeded at the same time by Hanson, and it dragged the young woman through the woods until it finally shook its burden off. The girl's clothing was torn from her body and she was dangerously injured.

Marred Czar's Countenance.

St. Petersburg.—The new issue of the Russian postage stamps has been withdrawn because the czar's portrait was so arranged that they could not be cancelled without marring the imperial countenance.

Truth of Old Adage.

Sistersville, W. Va.—The truth of the adage about "bread cast upon the waters" was demonstrated when Jessie Watkins received $500 from a tramp whom she had befriended years before.

Alarmed for His Mother. Little Harry, hanging about the kitchen, saw a stuffed fowl sewed up before roasting. He was much impressed by the sight. A few nights later his mother, hastily dressing to go out, found that a new frock had been sent home without the proper allowance of hooks and eyes. Summoning aid, her sister patted the frock together up the back.

"Grandma," said Harry, seeking the source of perennial sympathy and comprehension, "come and see what auntie's doing to mamma. I think she's going to roast her, for she's sewing her all up."

Valued Patron.

"Confound it," said the uptown druggist, "that woman took all the change I had in the drawer."

"Why didn't you tell her you couldn't break her $10 bill?"

"No, no; she's one of our most regular patrons. Why, I've known that woman to buy as high as 11 one-cent postage stamps in a week."

Uncle Josh's Joke.

"Gee!" said old Uncle Josh, as the wail from the parlor waxed louder and more piercing. "I wish that there female summer boarder'd stop that infernal practicin' on her singin' fer a leetle. She hez a voice like a fish."

"Like a fish?" demanded Mrs. Josh, scornfully.

"Ya-as," said Uncle Josh. "Mostly scales an' flatter'n' hokey."—Harper's Weekly.

Keeper of Secrets of Kings.

Lord Knollys, who is retiring, after having been private secretary to King George and the late King Edward, has received many tempting offers to write his autobiography, but, needless to say, has steadfastly resisted them all. An enterprising publisher, from the United States, once ran him down during his vacation, and placed a blank check before him, inviting him to fill it in for any sum he liked to name in return for a book of no fewer than 50,000 words.

"My terms would be five million dollars," Lord Knollys remarked, quietly. The publisher gasped. "Good gracious, sir, are you serious?" he asked.

"Quite," Lord Knollys rejoined, and then, with one of his merry twinkles of his eyes, he said:

"Would it not be worth a good deal more to you if I had to say frankly all I know?"

The publisher realized the force of the argument, and was bound to admit that it would be a hopeless task to induce an indiscretion on the part of the veteran courtier.

Charity covers a multitude of sins that ought to be exposed.

SYNOPSIS.

Agatha Redmond, opera singer, starting for an auto drive in New York, finds a stranger sent as her chauffeur. Later she is accosted by a stranger who climbs into the auto and chloroforms her. James Hambleton, of Lynn, witnesses the abduction of Agatha Redmond. Hambleton sees Agatha forcibly taken aboard a yacht. He secures a tug and when near the yacht drops overboard. Aleck Van Camp, friend of Hambleton, had an appointment with him. Not meeting Hambleton, he makes a call upon friends, Madame and Miss Melaine-Reynier. He proposes to the latter and is refused. The three arrange a coast trip on the Sea Gull yacht. Hambleton wakes up on board the Jeanne D'Arc, the yacht on which is Agatha Redmond. He meets a man who introduces himself as Monsieur Chatelard, who is Agatha's abductor. They fight, but are interrupted by the sinking of the vessel. Jimmy and Agatha are abandoned by the crew, who take to the boats. Jimmy and Agatha swim for hours and finally reach shore in a thoroughly exhausted condition. Hand, the chauffeur who assisted in Agatha's abduction, is seen by Jimmy. He agrees to help them. Jim delivers Agatha to the care of Dr. Hand, who goes for help. He returns with Dr. Thayer, who revives Jim, and the party is conveyed to Charlestown, where Agatha's property is located. Van Camp and his party, in the Sea Gull, reach Charlestown and get tidings of the wreck of the Jeanne D'Arc. Aleck finds Jim on the verge of death and Agatha in despair. Dr. Thayer declares his sister, Mrs. Stoddard, is the only one who can save Jim. She is a woman of strong religious convictions, and dislikes Agatha on account of her profession. She refuses to nurse Jim. Agatha pleads with her and she consents to attend to him. Van Camp hears Agatha's story and gets on the track of Chatelard. Hambleton is finally out of danger. Chamberlain, friend of Van Camp, goes after Chatelard. Agatha meets Melaine Reynier and both are surprised at their remarkable resemblance. Chatelard goes to Agatha's house. Melaine recognizes Chatelard as the spy of her persecutor, on whose account she fled from her home. It was Melaine Chatelard he thought he was abducting. Before he can be arrested Chatelard escapes in an auto. Jim, completely recovered, tells why he followed Agatha.

CHAPTER XXII.—Continued.

"Why?" Hand stopped a moment, as if baffled at the difficulty of putting such obvious philosophy into words. "Why? Because that's the way people are—never satisfied till they uncover and root up every blamed thing in a man's life. Yes, Mademoiselle, you know it's true. They'll always be uneasy with me around."

Agatha was aware that when a man utters what he considers to be a general truth, it is useless to enter the field of argument.

"Suppose you do have an hour's start, as you express it. Where would you go?"

"Oh, I'll look about for a while. After that I'm going to Mr. Hambleton in Lynn. He's going to have a new car."

"Ah!" Agatha suddenly saw light. "Then there's only one thing. Mr. Hambleton must know the truth. It can concern no one else. Will you tell him?"

Mr. Hand produced his dry smile. "Nobody has to tell Mr. Hambleton anything. He looked straight into my face that day on the hill, as we were leaving the park."

"And he remembers?"

Something strange in Hand's expression arrested Agatha's attention, long before he found tongue to answer. It was a look of happiness and pride, as if he owned a treasure. "He remembers very well, Mademoiselle."

"And what?"

"You can't help but be square with him, Mademoiselle. But as for these gentlemen of style—"

Hand paused in his oratory, his slow anger again burning on his surface. Before Agatha knew what he was about, he had picked up the handkerchief from her lap between thumb and forefinger, and was holding it at arm's length.

"You can't squeeze a man's history out of him, as you squeeze water out of a handkerchief, Mademoiselle," he flared out. "And you can't drop him and pick him up again, nor throw him down. You can't do that with a man, Mademoiselle!"

He tossed the filmy linen back into her lap. "And I don't want any dealings with your Strakers—nor gentlemen of that stamp."

"Nor Chatelards?"

"He's slick—slick as they make 'em. But he isn't an inquisitive meddler." Agatha laughed outright; and somehow, by the blessed alchemy of amusement, the air was cleared and Mr. Hand's trouble faded out of importance. But Agatha could not let him go without one further word. She met his gaze with a straightforward look, as she asked: "Tell me, have I failed to treat you as a friend, Mr. Hand?"

"Ah, Mademoiselle!" he cried; and there was a touch of shame and compunction in his voice. As he stood before Agatha, she was reminded of his shamed and cowed appearance in the cove, on the day of their rescue, when he had waited for her anger to fall on him. She saw that he had gained something, some intangible bit of manliness and dignity, won during those weeks of service in her house. And she guessed rightly that it was due to the man whom he had so ungrudgingly nursed.

"I'm glad you are going to Lynn, to be with Mr. Hambleton," she said at last. "As long as he is your friend, I shall be your friend, too, and never uneasy. You may count on that. And now will you do me another kindness?"

"I'll put that old racing-car in order, if that's what you mean. Of course."

"As soon as possible. But it would seem that from now on you are accountable to no one but Mr. Hambleton."

"I'm his man," said Mr. Hand simply. "I'd do anything for him." He turned away with his old-time puzzling manner, half deferential, half indifferent.

And so Mr. Straker was ready to depart for New York at last, leaving Agatha, much against his will, to "complete her recovery" at Ilion. At least, that was the way he felt in duty bound to put it.

"You have found a substitute now," Agatha urged. "It is only fair to let her have a chance. A week, more or less, can't make any difference, now that I've broken so many engagements already. I'll come back later and make a fresh start."

"You stay up here and New York'll forget you're living!" growled Mr. Straker.

"Not if you continue to be my manager," said Agatha.

"If I'm to be your manager, I ought never to let you out of my sight for a minute. It's too dangerous."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Jimmy Muffs the Ball.

It will sometimes happen that young gentlemen, skipping confident, even under their lucky star, will get a fall. Fortune had been too constant to Jimmy not to be ready to turn her fickle face away the moment he wasn't looking. But such is the rashness born of success and a bounding heart, that young blood leaps to its doom, smiling, as it were, on the faithless lady's back.

Jimmy had no forebodings, but rioted gorgeously in returning health, in a whole pack of new emotions, and in what he supposed to be his lady's favor. Aleck, more philosophical, took his happiness with a more quiet gusto, not provoking the frown of the gods. But for Jim the day of reckoning was coming.

One day Aleck joined him, walking up and down the porch. Jim was in one of his boyish, cocksure moods. "I know what you're going to say," he began, before Aleck could spring his news: "You're going to marry the princess."

"Just so," said Aleck. "How'd you know? Clairvoyance?"

"None."

"Well, you needn't look so high and mighty about it, old man. Why don't you do the same thing yourself? Then we'll have a double wedding."

"I've thought of that," said Jim.

As the two men talked, Agatha and Melaine, both dressed in white, strolled side by side down the garden path toward the wall. They were deep in conversation, their backs turned toward the veranda.

"I don't see that they look so much alike," announced Jim, who had but recently learned all the causes and effects of the Chatelard business. Aleck's eyes gleamed.

"Which one, as they stand there now, do you take to be Miss Redmond?" he asked.

"One on the left," answered Jimmy promptly.

Aleck gave a signaling whistle which caused both the women quickly to turn. Agatha was on the right. Aleck grinned broadly. "So that Yahoo of a Frenchman wasn't so stupid after all."

"I'd like to get my hands on him!" muttered Jim.

"Frenchman or not, there's going to be a wedding right here in the old red house on Wednesday," said Aleck. "Hoopla! I knew that was it!"

"And then Melaine and I are going to cruise back to New York. Awfully sorry—but you're not invited."

"You couldn't get me aboard any gilt-edged yacht that floats!"

At Jimmy's words—wholly untrue, by the way—Aleck's happy mood suddenly dimmed, as he thought of the gangsters and anxieties of the past month. He turned and laid an arm, boy-fashion, over Jim's shoulder, pulling his hair as his hand went by.

"You're a fool of a kid!" he said, chucking.

When Jim looked into his cousin's face, he knew. "Oh, I say, old man, it wasn't so bad as all that."

Aleck stiffened up. "Who said anything about its being bad? You'd better get some togs to wear at the wedding. I'm going to need these clothes myself."

It turned out, actually enough, that the wedding was to come off on a certain Wednesday in September.

"Would you like New York and a bishop and a big church better than the old red house and the Charlestown minister?" Aleck anxiously asked of Melaine.

"Oh, no," she protested; and Aleck knew she was sincere. So they prepared to terminate their holidays by celebrating the wedding in the pine grove. Melaine spent the intervening days happily with Agatha, or walking with Aleck, or with the delightful group that foregathered in Parson Thayer's library. Jimmy made extravagant and highly colored verses to the bride-to-be, to Sallie Kingsbury, and even to himself. His feet were often lame, but he solemnly assured the company that it was entirely due to circumstances over which he had no control. A wedding was a wedding, said he, and should have its bard; also its dancers and its minstrels.

"We'll have all our friends in Ilion, anyway," said Aleck. They counted up the list. Besides the occupants of the house and those from the Hillside, there would be Doctor Thayer, Susan Stoddard and Angie, Big and Little Simon, and the lawyer.

"And they're all going to dance with the bride," announced Jim. "After me. I'm first choice."

"A dance led, so to speak, by the elusive Monsieur Chatelard?"

The name alone made Jimmy wroth. "It's a dance for which he will pay the fiddler yet!" he prophesied.

"Oh, he's gone this time. Scared out of the country for keeps!" was Aleck's expressed opinion. But that it might or might not be so, was what they all secretly thought.

The day before the wedding was a jewel of a day, such as New England at her best can fling into the lap of early autumn. A wind from the sea, flocks of white clouds scudding across the sapphire sky, and a sun all kindness—such was the day. It was never a "weather breeder" either; but steady, promising good for the morrow.

Many times during the week James and Chamberlain and Agatha had their heads together, planning surprises for the bridal pair. The result was that on Tuesday Jim and Chamberlain borrowed the white motor-car, loaded it down with a large variety of junk, such as food from Sallie's kitchen, flowers and so on, and started for Charlestown. They ran down to the wharf, transferred their loot to the rowboat, and pulled out to the Sea Gull, swinging at her mooring in deep water.

A half-hour of work, and the yacht was dressed for festival. There were strings of flags to stretch from bow to masthead and to stern; pennants for topmasts; the Stars and Stripes in beautiful silk for a standard, and a gorgeous banner with an embroidered A and M intertwined, for special occasions. Flowers were placed in the cabins, and food in the lockers. The seamen had been aboard, made the yacht clean and shipshape as a war vessel on parade, and had got permission to leave for their last night ashore. Everything was in readiness, even to the laying of the fire in the engine hold.

The bride and groom were to come aboard the next day about noon and cruise down the coast leisurely, as weather-permitted. Hand, in charge of the white motor-car, with Madame Reynier, Chamberlain, Agatha and Jimmy, were to start for New York, touring as long as their inclination lasted. The sophisticated Lizzie was to travel to what was, for her, the center of the universe, by the fastest Pullman.

Jimmy and Chamberlain, on the way home from their visit to the Sea Gull, came very near being confidential.

"I want to say, Mr. Hambleton, that I shall never forgive myself for bungling that Chatelard business."

"As I understand the matter, it wasn't your bungling, but the sheriff's."

"It's all the same," conceded Mr. Chamberlain mournfully. "And in my opinion, the Frenchman's not done with his tricks yet. He's a dangerous character, Mr. Hambleton."

Jim laughed, remembering certain incidents on the Jeanne D'Arc.

"Do you know," Chamberlain continued, "I'm convinced the bloomin' beggar is hiding about here somewhere. I'm glad Aleck is getting away."

"I thought the evidence favored the theory that Chatelard had made straight for New York."

"Not a bit of it. Aleck and I let you all believe that, for the sake of the ladies. But the evidence is all the other way. We would surely have caught him if he had been on any of the New York trains. I believe he's about here and means mischief yet."

"If he's about here, there's no doubt about the mischief."

"I'm going down tonight to bunk on the Sea Gull. Aleck let the men off, to go to a sailor's dance over on one of the islands. They'll probably be at it all night, so I'm going back."

"Why not let me go? I'm fine as a fiddle. You've had your full share of nasty detective work."

"Not at all. I'm booked to see this thing through."

"All right!" laughed Jimmy. "But if you change your mind, let me know."

Arriving at the house, the men found it deserted. Windows were open and doors unfastened, but no one, not even Danny, responded to Jim's call. Chamberlain started for the Hillside in the car, and Jim wandered about lonesomely, wondering where everybody was. With Jim, as in most cases, everybody meant one person; and presently Sallie, appearing slowly from the upper regions, gave him his clue. He started nimbly for the pine wood.

The wagon road stretched alluringly into the sun-flecked shade of the grove. A hush like that of primeval day threw its uncanny influence over the world. Jim felt something tugging at his spirit that was unfamiliar, disquieting. He began to whistle just for company, and in a moment, as if at a signal call, Danny came along the path, sedately trotting to meet him.

"Hallo, old partner! So this is where you are."

Danny said yes, and led Jim into the clearing and up to a pine stump, where everybody sat, quite alone, chin propped on hand. No singing, no book, and—Dr. did Jimmy imagine it?—a spirit decidedly quenched. Her eyelids were red and her face was pale.

"So, dear lady, I have found you. But I was listening for the song."

"There is no song today," Agatha's manner resembled an Arctic breeze.

"May one ask why?"

"One can not always be singing."

"No? Why not? I could—if I could."

Agatha was obliged to relax a trifle at Jimmy's foolishness, but only to reveal, more and more distinctly, a wretchedness of spirit that was quite baffling. It was not feminine wretchedness waiting for a masculine comforter, either, as James observed with regret; it was a stoical spirit, braced to meet a blow—or to deal one.

Jimmy was not used to being snubbed, and instinctively prepared for vigorous protest. He began with a little preliminary diplomacy.

"You haven't inquired what I'm going to do with the remainder of my holiday," he remarked.

"I supposed you would return soon to Lynn. Shall we walk back to the house?"

The unkind words were spoken in a rare-sweet voice, courteously enough. Jim looked at the speaker a moment, then emphatically said "No!"

"It is quite time I was returning."

"Have you anything there to do that is more important than listening to me for fifteen minutes?"

Agatha did not pretend not to understand him. She turned toward him with unflinching eyes.

"Truth to say, yes, Mr. Hambleton, I have. I don't wish to listen to anything."

"Oh—if you feel like that! Your 'Mr. Hambleton' is enough to strike me dumb."

"Believe me, it is the best way."

"Again, may one ask why?"

"You are going back to your own people, to your own work. And I to mine."

"But that's the very point. My idea was to combine them."

"I guessed it."

Jimmy smiled his ingenuous smile as he suavely asked: "And don't you—er—like the idea?"

Agatha turned her wretched white face toward him. Into it there had come a grim determination that left Jimmy quite out in the cold.

"I have no choice in liking or disliking it," she said quite evenly. "But there are plenty of reasons why I can't think of it. And you shouldn't think of it any more. I assure you, you are making a mistake."

"She got up as if ready to walk away, her face averted.

"Agatha!"

At the name she turned to Jim, as much as to say she would be quite reasonable if he would be. But her face suddenly flushed gloriously.

"Agatha, dear, hear me. I did not intend to tell you all my secret to-day; not until I should be on neutral ground, so to speak. But I can't let you leave me this way."

"You will have to. I am going back to the house."

Up to this point, James had merely been playing tag, as it were. The game wasn't really on. A little skirmishing on either side was in order. But Agatha's last words were the call to action. They roused the ghost of some old Hambleton ancestor who meant not to be beaten. Jim squared himself in the middle of the path, touched Agatha's shoulder with the lightest, most respectful finger, and requested: "But I would ask you, as a special favor, to stay a few minutes longer."

Jim's tone left Agatha no choice. She sat down again on the pine stump, but she could not meet Jimmy's eyes. He stood a few feet away from her. When he spoke, his voice was firm and steady, ringing with earnestness. There was no doubt now but that he was in the game for all he was worth.

"Agatha, you shall not turn me down like this. Wait until I have done better, and then—"

You've had no time to think this matter over, and it involves a good deal, I admit. But we have lived through a good deal together in these few weeks. I'm here; I'm here to stay. You can't say now, dear, that you care nothing for me—can you?"

"What is the use of all this, I ask! You will always be my friend, my rescuer, to whom I am eternally grateful."

Jimmy emitted a sound halfway between "Shucks" and "Damn" and swung impatiently clean round on his heels.

"Grateful be hanged! I don't want anybody to be grateful. I want you to love me—to marry me. Why, Agatha," he argued boyishly, his hopes rising as he saw her face soften a little. "You're mine, for I plucked you out of the sea. I had to have you. I guess I knew it that Sunday, only it was 'way off, somewhere in the back of my brain. You're a dream I've always loved, just as this old house is. You're the woman I could have prayed for. I'll do, I'll be, anything for you. I'll change myself over, but oh, don't say you won't have me. Agatha, Agatha, you don't know how much you mean to me!"

Before his speech was finished, James, according to the good old fashion, was down on his knees before his lady, and had imprisoned one of her hands. Stole she was, not to yield! Her eyes had a suspicious moistness, as she shook her head.

"You will always be the most gallant, unselfish friend I have ever known. But—"

"But what?"

"Marry you I can not."

"Why not?"

"I can not marry anybody."

"Then Jimmy said a disgraceful thing. 'You kissed me once. Will you do it again?'"

At this impudence, she neither got angry nor changed her mind—a bad sign for Jimmy. She put his hand away, saying: "You must forgive me the kiss."

Jimmy jumped to his feet with another inarticulate sound, every whit as bad as an oath, and stood before her.

"Agatha Redmond, will you marry me?"

"No."

Jim turned in his tracks and left the wood.

Two hours later, at supper, Jim was inquired for.

"Our last supper together, and Mr. Hambleton not here!" mourned Chamberlain.

Agatha felt guilty, but could scarcely confess it. "You are all invited for next year, you know," she said.

"And we're all coming," announced Melaine. "But poor Mr. Hambleton will miss his supper tonight."

"The 'poor Mr. Hambleton' struck Agatha. 'I think Mr. Hambleton is doing very well indeed. I saw him start off for a walk this afternoon.'

"Jim's a chump. Give him a cold potato!" jeered Aleck.

But after supper was over, and the twilight deepened into darkness, Agatha sought Aleck where she could speak with him alone.

"I think Mr. Hambleton was troubled when he left here this afternoon," she said. "Can you think where he would be likely to go? He is not strong enough to bear much hard exercise yet."

Aleck looked at her keenly. "If he went anywhere, I think he'd go straight to the yacht."

"I feel a little anxious, somehow," confessed Agatha.

Chamberlain's voice broke in upon them. "Anybody ready to take me down to the Sea Gull in the car?"

As Aleck started for the machine, the anxiety in Agatha's face perceptibly lightened. "And may I go with you?" she asked eagerly.

Alaska of Some Account

Its Cost Paid Back Many Times Over and Now It Demands Self-Government.

The territory of Alaska has yielded to its owner, the United States, $200,000,000 in mineral wealth; in fish and furs this bleak possession has yielded $222,710,026, and it has paid directly into the United States treasury $14,792,461 in cash. Adding the tribute of fisheries, furs, minerals and cash, the people of the United States have within forty-two years taken $444,102,500 out of Alaska.

This territory was bought from Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000. The figures of wealth yielded in return for this investment, according to the testimony of Delegate James Wickersham before the committee on territories on March 29 last, were supplied to him by the treasury department. Costing but $7,200,000, and an average of $200,000 annually for the maintenance of its government, the territory has returned to the United States $10,000,000 a year. Its people now petition the government to enable them to conserve for their own use its vast and yet undeveloped resources. They want to govern themselves, and ultimately to achieve statehood. The nation has always taken tribute from Alaska, while retaining its own wealth for itself and its individual states. Why not now give Alaska a chance? —New York Times.

Possibly Two Conflagrations. "Papa, what is a conflagration?" "It is a big fire, my son." "And what do they call a little fire?"

"There is no special name for a little fire. Oh, they sometimes call it an incipient fire and—let's see—well, it is sometimes called an inconsiderable fire. Why?"

"Well, I see your coat-tail is on fire, and I was wondering whether it was a conflagration or an incipient fire." In a few minutes the young man had reason to think it was a conflagration.

The Cause. "George is raising mutton-chop whiskers." "That accounts for his sheepish expression."

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kozak, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration. I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Neryine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep, if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

Dr. Miles' Neryine

MICHIGAN CROP REPORT.

WHEAT. The condition of wheat is 83 in the state, 84 in the southern counties, 81 in the central counties, 85 in the northern counties and 87 in the Upper Peninsula. The condition on April 1st was 82 in the state, 83 in the southern counties, 79 in the central counties, 80 in the northern counties and 84 in the Upper Peninsula. The per cent. of wheat that will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise destroyed is 4 in the state, southern and northern counties, 7 in the central counties and 1 in the Upper Peninsula. The damage by Hessian fly, in per cent. is 5 in the State, 9 in the southern counties and 1 in the central and northern counties.

Owing to the light yield and inferior quality of Michigan wheat for the year 1912, the grain suitable for milling and shipping is practically all marketed; consequently I think it unnecessary to ask the millers and grain dealers of the State for any more reports relative to wheat marketed by farmers until the month of August next, when the 1913 crop will be on sale.

RYE. The average condition of rye in the State is 87, in the southern counties 89, in the central and northern counties 88 and in the Upper Peninsula 94. The condition one year ago was 81 in the State, 77 in the southern counties, 80 in the central counties, 88 in the northern counties and 98 in the Upper Peninsula.

MEADOWS AND CLOVER. The condition of meadows and pasture in the State and southern counties is 89, in the central counties 85, in the northern counties 88 and in the Upper Peninsula 95.

The acreage of clover sown as compared with last year is 94 per cent. in the State, 96 in the southern counties, 92 in the central counties, 95 in the northern counties and 93 in the Upper Peninsula. The acreage of clover that will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise destroyed is 10 per cent. in the State, 9 in the southern counties, 13 in the central counties, 8 in the northern counties and 3 in the Upper Peninsula.

OATS. The acreage sown, or that will be sown, as compared with last year is 99 in the State, 98 in the southern and northern counties, 100 in the central counties and 105 in the Upper Peninsula.

SPRING PIGS AND LAMBS. The per cent. of spring pigs saved as compared with 1912, is 89 in the State, 88 in the southern and central counties 91 in the northern counties and 94 in the Upper Peninsula. The per cent. of lambs saved as compared with 1912, is 93 in the State, southern and central counties, 91 in the northern counties and 98 in the Upper Peninsula.

FARM WAGES. The average monthly wages with board, is $27.77 in the State, $28.44 in the southern counties, $26.55 in the central counties and $30.68 in the Upper Peninsula.

The average wages by the day with out board is $1.68 in the State, $1.75 in the southern counties, $1.58 in the central counties, $1.57 in the northern counties and $1.85 in the Upper Peninsula.

The average wages in the State last year, by the month with board was $26.48 and the average wages by the day without board was $1.59.

In 1904, ten years ago the average wages in the State by the month was $22.20 and the average wages by the day without board was $1.34.

FRUIT. Reports from all sections of the State indicate a decided increase in the prospect of the various kinds of fruit over the 1912 report.

The average prospect for peaches in the Michigan Fruit Belt is 86 per cent.

DON'T KNOW THEY HAVE APPENDICITIS.

Many East Jordan people who have chronic appendicitis which is not very painful have doctored for years for gas on the stomach, sour stomach or constipation. J. Gidley states if these people will try simple tuckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as compounded in Adler-ika, the German appendicitis remedy, they will be surprised, at the QUICK benefit. A SINGLE DOSE relieves these troubles INSTANTLY.

Money is a mask that makes some vices look like virtues.

This Interests Every Woman. A family doctor said recently that women come to him thinking that they have female trouble, but when he treats them for their kidneys and bladder, they soon recover. This is worth knowing, and also that Foley's Kidney Pills are the best and safest medicine at such times. They are tonic in action, quick in results. They will help you. Hites Drug Store.

INDIGESTION FIVE YEARS

Relieved by Vinol.

Strength and even life itself depends upon the nourishment and proper assimilation of food, and unless digestion is good, the whole body suffers.

Mrs. L. D. Cook, Vineland, N. J., says: "I was sick five years with indigestion. My stomach seemed to have a heavy load in it, and at other times it seemed to be tied in knots. Nobody knows how I suffered."

"I tried a great many doctors and a great many kinds of medicine, but nothing did any good until I took Vinol. It has helped me wonderfully. I am improving fast, feel better and am getting my flesh back again. Vinol has done me a world of good."

We know the great power of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, in curing chronic stomach trouble and building up all weakened, run-down persons and that is why we guarantee to return your money if it does not help you. P. S. Eczema Sufferers! We guarantee our new skin remedy, Saxo. W. C. SPRING DRUG CO.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Agnes Worth, Miss Hazel Gilman and Miss Merje Brechelsen spent Sunday at their homes in Bay Shore.

The new practice teachers are Misses Sophia Berg and Blanche Rogers. The former has charge of the sense-training and nature study and the latter of reading and language.

We have resumed our work in the school garden since the plowing has been done.

The Misses Bessie Allen and Ruth Mitchell called at the normal room last Thursday afternoon.

Miss Mabyon Chiffie spent Sunday at her home near East Jordan.

The class observed a language lesson in the chart class from Miss Jarvis' room which was taught by Miss Barkley. It was a very interesting lesson in dramatization of the story "The Fox and the Grapes" and the little people did very well.

Foley Kidney Pills repay your confidence in their healing and curative qualities. Any kidney or bladder disease not beyond the reach of medicine will yield to their use. Mrs. Cordelia Copeland, Ardeola, Mo., says "I had kidney and bladder trouble for over a year and 5 bottles of Foley Kidney Pills cured me." It is the same story from every one who uses them. All say, "they cured me." Hites Drug Store.

An All-Around Newspaper.

It is generally conceded that The Chicago Record-Herald is pre-eminently the great family newspaper of the Central West. What has given it this favored position in the home? The explanation will be found, not in any single feature, but in the all-around excellence of all its departments, so that it appeals alike to men and women, young and old, gay and serious—the whole family.

The superior news gathering facilities and high-class literary features of The Record-Herald have been the main factor of its wonderful success. Besides the full service of the Associated Press, it receives the foreign cable service of the New York World and Herald. It has its own leased wires to New York and Washington also special correspondents in all the large cities of the East.

The Chicago Record-Herald has its own special correspondents in every town of the Central West, who report all important news by telegraph. Complete and reliable market reports and financial news can always be found in its columns, with all other news of the business world. Its sporting department also is of the best.

But man and woman cannot live by news alone. The true distinction of The Chicago Record-Herald comes with what it gives over and above the news—in such features as S. E. Kiser's daily column of humor, George Fitch's witty essays, Arthur M. Evans' travel articles, Ralph Wilder's cartoons, besides serial stories by noted authors, etc.—its criticisms of the drama, music and books are unsurpassed by any in the country. Choicest of all these extra features is the Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald, a real magazine, full of good stories and pictures by the best living authors and artists—a feast of entertainment for the whole family. The Chicago Record-Herald has earned its pre-eminence by solid all-around excellence.

A many times repeated declaration in the interest of the brewers and distillers of this country has been that there would be no active opposition to the saloons and their business if drinking in the United States was indulged in as moderately and as reasonably as it is in the "old countries." Whatever argument might be attached to this claim, however, is disposed of through recent public statistics which show while the average American workman spends less than four per cent of his earnings on drink the German workman spends more than 14 per cent of his earnings in the same direction, the Russian workman more than 26 per cent, the French workman almost 20 per cent, while in some of the European countries and provinces as much as 47 per cent of the workman's earnings are spent on intoxicants. The so called moderate drinking of the European countries is therefore found to be from 5 to 10 times in excess of the drinking here. Indeed a very generous measure of the poverty and misery among the working classes of the countries referred to is due to their drinking habits. It is hardly probable that the liquor business of the United States will secure any encouragement or assistance through pointing to the better position its victims would occupy if they would only follow the example of the drinking classes in the "old countries."

The spring months often find a woman tired out, with pain in back hips and head, nervous and sleepless. Foley Kidney Pills will quickly prove their worth and value as a healer of all kidney and bladder ailments and irregularities. They are a splendid remedy for rheumatism, clearing the uric acid from the joints and system. Try them. Hites Drug Store.

The great calamity in Omaha was quickly over shadowed by the terrible disastrous floods in Ohio. Great suffering and sickness from colds and exposure resulted. L. Poole, 2217 California St., Omaha, writes: "My daughter had a very severe cough and cold but Foley's Honey and Tar Compound knocked it out in no time. Refuse substitutes. Hites Drug Store."
