WAREHOUSE BURNED

Thought Probably To Have Been Incendiarism

The warehouse building at the foot of Williams street was practically destroyed by fire which started about 3:30 a. m. Tuesday morning.

The building and grounds were owned by H. I. McMillan who had purchased same for a warehouse and had a sidetrack built for cars. The building had been thoroughly cleaned of all rubbish and how the fire originated is a mystery. It was first seen by the engineer at the Electric Light Plant who immediately turned in an alarm. At that time the building was a mass of flame, and that our firemen responded quickly to the call and gave efficient service is evidenced from the fact that the framework was left standing.

Mr. McMillan's loss was about $300, with no insurance. Contractor A. G. Rogers had a quantity of cement stored in the building, a part of which was saved, but his loss is considerable over $200. Robert Cook was using the second floor as a carpenter shop, several valuable tools going through the fire, but until they are cleaned and tested he will not know just what his loss is.

A carload of coal on the sidetrack was ignited from the burning building and partially burned. A gang of men were put to work as soon as the fire was extinguished, clearing up the debris and saving as much stock as possible.

JUST PURE CUSSINESS

Boyne City Biped Hurls Plank Into Widow's House.

Some fellow, fit candidate for asylum or penitentiary, hurled a plank, three feet long and a foot wide through a window at the home of Mrs. Florence Prieb, 635 Collins street, at 2:30 Sunday morning. Mrs. Prieb is a widow, residing there with her three small children.

Naturally, she was terribly shocked from fright. She arose in time to catch sight of the fleeing figure of a man. Sunday night she was again awakened and saw a man prowling in the vicinity of her home.

The window was carried away by the missile. Glass in a thousand pieces was scattered over the room.

Mrs. Prieb has armed herself with a .38 calibre revolver and says she will fire on the slightest provocation should she be threatened with another attack. She is a hard-working industrious woman who has made a home for her fatherless children. The wretch who attacks her home deserves to stop one of the bullets from the new gun.—Boyne City Journal.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

The following wholesome advice was recently given by a celebrated divine to the young of his flock:

The buxom, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked, full breasted, bouncing lass who can darn a sock, command a regiment of pots and kettles, feed the pigs, whistle with the boys, handle an oar, do a bit of fishing, and be a lady with all in company is just the girl for me and for any other man to marry; but you, ye pining, moping, lolling, screwed-up, wasp-wasted, pale faced, consumptive, music-murdering, novel-devouring daughters of fashion and idleness, you are no more fit for matrimony than a pullet is to look after a family of fourteen chickens.

The truth is, my dear girls, you want more liberty and less fashionable restraint; more kitchen and less parlor, more leg exercise and less sofa, more puddings and less piano, more frankness and less mock modesty, more breakfast and less bustle. Loose yourself a little, breathe the pure atmosphere of freedom, and become something as beautiful as the God of Nature designed.—Bangor (Wis.) Independent.

TO MANUFACTURE CIGARS

New Shop To Be Opened In Our City.

M. S. Berger of Lansing has leased the basement of the Postoffice building and will open with a cigar manufactory this coming week.

Mr. Berger conducted a like enterprise in the Capitol city and has a life long experience in that trade. He plans to manufacture two branches of nickle cigars and one ten-cent brand. One of the former being the "Michigan" and the 10c brand being "Joah Giddings."

Outside of his cigar business, Mr. Berger is a violinist of ability and will have charge of the Metropole Orchestra.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

"Brewster's Millions", a dramatization of Geo. Barr McCutcheon's entertaining story, will be the attraction at the Temple Theatre October 23rd.

Louis Nilson will be seen in the title character of "Monty" Brewster, which he has played for upwards of one hundred weeks, and the excellent cast supporting him, including Katherine Francis as (Peggy Gray), Earle Christie, James Morey, Will Lyons, Frank Backus, Jack Murray, Tom Springer, Wilfred O. Nixon, Beulah Leighton, Emily Burke, Maisie Ivie, and a score of others.

There is nothing new to say about the play. The triumph of stagecraft is attained in the wonderful scene on shipboard, the yacht rocking in the gale when "Monty" sounds the signal of distress thus disposing in less than a second of the $500,000, which had been worrying him for weeks.

Of course, it is all widely improbable so was the book, but there is fun enough in this whimsical story of frenzied finance to make even the blasé playgoer laugh.

"THE LIGHT ETHERAL"

The St. Louis World says of "The Light Eternal" which is coming to the Temple Theatre October 27th:

"A theme of beauty is portrayed with realism in 'The Light Eternal', a drama modeled upon the masterpiece of Cardinal Wiseman's Fabiola.

"The Light Eternal" is especially beautiful from the standpoint of those delighting in artistic scenery. The piece ably portrays the life of the Christian in the later days of the Roman Empire when the followers of the Nazarene were persecuted as dogs and when there would be no more contempt than that applied to the word 'Christian.'

The story of Christian martyrdom in which the principal characters are a converted Roman, and a pagan princess, is woven about the plot. The play is notably worth while.

COMMISSIONER HELME AGAINST IMITATIONS

Says Enough Fruit is Raised in Michigan to Supply Demand

In his latest bulletin from the state dairy and food department, Commissioner James Helme declares that Michigan raises enough fruits so that there should be no call for glucose jellies or malted ciders in the state. The commissioners characteristic opinion on the matter as printed in bulletin No. 27, is as follows:

"Away back in the last century when the writer was a boy, his favorite food was jelly cake. Any boy who was a boy in last century can remember the jelly cake that mother used to make. There were generally eight or nine layers of cake not very thick and the same number of layers of jelly which were nearly as thick as the cake and this jelly was real jelly made in the household from fruit like the currant, the grape, the apple or the crab apple, and it had no color in it except that given to it by nature in her great laboratory. Naturally jelly cake made from this kind of jelly became a favorite human food and from the home it naturally gravitated to the bakery. Here, of course, commercial processes began to cheapen its cost and in order to cheapen its cost material was likewise cheapened. It was found that the use of pure fruit jelly in commercial baked goods was expensive and in order to cut down the expenses and thus increase the profit, substitutes were looked for and is generally the case the substitutes were found. There were placed on the market imitation jellies which had never seen any fruit. These jellies were made largely from glucose and dextrine. Glucose and dextrine are made solely from cornstarch treated with muriatic acid, and never from any fruit. There was one defect, however, in the imitation jellies. In their natural condition as they came from the manufacturer, they were colorless and so they were not attractive but the thrifty business man soon-obviated this. Coal tar dyes furnish a large number of colors and soon they had the glucose jelly colored with a red coal tar dye, and a liberal mixture of Timothy seed added, put on the market as strawberry jelly. Other fruit colors were likewise imitated and the cheapness of these jellies drove the legitimate fruit jelly out of the market as far as the baked goods were concerned.

Michigan is the second largest fruit growing state in the union and the legislature several years ago, in order to protect its fruit growers, enacted stringent laws which prohibit the coloring of any glucose jelly in imitation of fruit jelly. The law has not been as vigorously enforced in the past as it should have been but it is the intention of his department to enforce the law in the future against the coloring of any jelly that is not a fruit jelly. When the consumer goes into a bake shop and sees a jelly roll of nice red jelly, he naturally concludes that it is a fruit jelly when there is not a bit of fruit used in its manufacture. In this way the coloring of glucose jellies becomes a fraud upon the consumer. There is nothing unwholesome in glucose jellies but when colored to imitate fruit jellies they deceive the consumer and cause him to pay a higher price for them than he otherwise would and this is the reason that the coloring of imitation jellies is wrong morally as well as legally. Bakers who use colored imitation jellies are just as subject to the penalties of the law as the manufacturers who color them.

Last year thousands of bushels of apples rotted on the ground for want of market. In many sections the cider mills refused to buy cider apples because there was no profitable market for the cider and yet these mills are most of them equipped for making a superior quality of apple jelly from every bit of cider that can be manufactured. The reason they do not make it is because glucose jellies colored to imitate fruit jellies can be sold cheaper than apple jellies and for this reason are largely used by the baking trade. All inferior apples in Michigan can readily find market at cider mills were it not for the unfair competition of colored glucose jellies and malt vinegar. In order that the Michigan fruit grower may have a legitimate market for his inferior apples and the Michigan consumer can receive pure fruit jellies and pure cider vinegar, this department will make a special effort in the future to enforce the laws governing the sale of jellies and vinegars that are not made from actual fruit.

Dissemination of Disease by Pets
By E. Starz, Montana Department of Health record. Yet many lovers of pet dogs, cats, birds, etc., are not aware of the dangers which such animals present to them when afflicted with some disease.

It is a well-known fact that the cat is susceptible to diphtheria, and the records are full of cases of transmission of that dreadful disease to children playing with such afflicted pets. Likewise are birds carriers of diphtheria.

Dogs are infested with many kinds of tapeworms (tenia), among them tenia echinococcus, the eggs of which cause hydatid cysts. It is, therefore, not strange to find persons who are constantly surrounded with dogs suffering frequently from hydatid cysts and tapeworms.

Barber's itch (tinea tonsurans), a contagious and persistent skin affection, is frequently transmitted from cats and dogs to man. The same is true of favus or tinea favosa, which is caused by a parasitic mold called achlorion schoenleinii, producing yellow scaly crusts on the skin.

Another disease of the dog which is transmissible to man is the sarcoptic itch, caused by a microscopic mite called sarcoptes scabiei. Hydrophobia is still another disease of the dog and cat which is transmitted to man by being bitten by these animals and many persons die from it yearly.

The disease called glanders or farcy is caused by bacillus mallei, and numerous cases of infection from afflicted animals to man are known. The greatest number of cases of natural glanders infection occur among hostlers, drivers, farmers, horse butchers and other habitual handlers of horses. The bacilli generally gain entrance through abrasions or wounds of the skin. Laboratory workers occasionally become infected through the respiratory organs (nose and lungs) by spilling accidentally culture material. Glanders infection is highly fatal.

Anthrax, charbon, splenic fever, or wool sorters' disease is a disease of animals, and easily transmitted to man. The name "wool sorters' disease" is derived from the fact that handlers of hides from cows or wool from sheep which have died from anthrax occasionally contract the disease. Actinomyces, or "lumpy jaw," is a disease caused by a ray fungus generally found in cattle or swine; rarely in horses or sheep; occasionally cases having been observed in deer, elephants, dogs and cats. Infection in man generally occurs by inoculation with lumpy jaw material carrying the ray fungus, actinomyces bovis.

Human tuberculosis is certainly transmitted to dogs, cats and birds. Many investigators and observers cite cases where dogs, cats and parrots, presenting all the lesions of tuberculosis, were shown to have contracted it from contact with human beings.

These examples should suffice to call the attention of the public to the danger which is connected in keeping pet animals in our apartments. Any pet animal showing signs of disease should be removed from the living room and isolated. We owe that precaution to ourselves and others.

What's the Harm of Little Kiss?
By Jefferson Emerson, Baltimore, Md.

Some features of the "purity wave" now on in this city reach the ludicrous, as witness the arrest of an eighteen-year-old girl and a sixteen-year-old boy in Gwynns Falls park for spooning. Witness, also, the good sense of a Baltimore magistrate in dismissing the youthful couple with the pronouncement that spooning is not indecent. The serious feature, however, in this incident is the arrest, the ride in a patrol wagon and the hearing in a police court of this youthful couple for what? For that which is ages old and which will continue for ages—simply spooning, which is the slang name for courting.

Courting—that which the gods smile upon, which is as natural to a boy and a girl as is the budding of the trees, which is as natural as the cooing of the birds, and which is predestined by nature to be preliminary to the popping of the eternal question which makes happiness hold sway over this broad land. This age is prosaic and commercialized enough without missions of the law stepping in and laying hands on those who recall to us all our youthful lovers' spoon. As the magistrate has wisely decided, there is nothing indecent in holding hands and even in a stolen kiss.

Fly Swatting Scheme Futile and Absurd
By Dr. Charles E. Page, Boston, Mass.

Fly early in the season you kill a swarm of busy little scavengers that would have been helping to prevent disease by helping us to "clean up." Whenever we make everything and every corner and place clean we have said goodbye to flies; on longer needed and with nothing to subsist on, they are doomed.

The cleanup at Panama, in New Orleans and Cuba brought about as a matter of course improvement in health of the residents at those points; not from absence of fly bites or mosquito bites, but solely from the banishment of filth and filthy surroundings.

The effort to banish flies by swatting here and there one is about like attempting to drain the ocean by dipping it up with a teaspoon.

Not one fly in ten millions alights on a human being; and when one does the contact is harmless. At any rate, the swatting scheme is as futile as absurd.

Chain Gangs of Convicts Breed Much Disease
By Prof. Chas. Wardell Stiles, Birmingham, Ala.

Chain gangs of prisoners in many communities are compelled to live under conditions of filth that are ideal for the spread of soil pollution diseases. During the past twenty years I have had a number of opportunities to observe prisoners in penitentiaries, prison farms, jails and chain gangs, and have been seriously impressed with the average lack of cleanliness among the criminals and their guards, although the opportunities for rigid discipline rendered it possible to make these penal institutions admirable schools in which the state might easily give to its charges some good lessons in cleanliness, hygiene and sanitation.

With few exceptions, the authorities not only failed to see and to utilize the opportunity offered, but they actually permitted things to occur which were dangerous to the communities.

That our house pets and domesticated animals may be the cause of disseminating certain diseases among the human family is an established fact, and many cases of that kind are on record.

TIME AND PATIENCE IN TRAINING DOG

"Steady Boy, Steady."

(By FRANK H. SWEET.)
Most of you boys who live in the country have dogs. Have you ever tried to train them, beyond the throwing of sticks for them to bring back, and a few such tricks as standing on their hind legs, or barking for something to eat?

As a boy, back in the country, I was the owner of a number of dogs at various times, and until I was pretty well grown, this was usually the extent of my training. And my friends who had dogs trained them in about the same way. Possibly some of you have bright dogs that are capable of knowing much more than they do. If so, the following general directions, learned by experience, may be of use.

First of all, teach your dog that you mean exactly what you say, and that he must obey you.

Never under any circumstances allow him to shirk, and even a naturally stupid pup will learn to look upon your word as law and not think of disobeying. Strict obedience to your word, whistle, or slightest gesture once obtained, is an easy matter to finish the dog's education. Bear in mind that there is about as great a difference in the character and natural intelligence of dogs as there is in boys. Not only does this exist between the distinct varieties of dogs, but also between the different individuals of the same variety. All Newfoundland dogs possess similar characteristics; but each individual varies considerably in intelligence, amiability, and all those little traits that go to make up a dog's character.

It is well for you to understand this fact, that you may not be disappointed or make your pet dog suffer because it cannot learn as fast as some one you may know of. And let it be impressed upon your mind that to make your dog obey or to teach it the most difficult trick or feat it is rarely necessary to use the whip. If the dog, as he will sometimes do, knowingly and willfully disobeys, the whip may be used sparingly.

One sharp blow is generally sufficient, and it should be accompanied with a reprimand in words. Never lose your patience and beat the animal in anger. To successfully train a dog, it is necessary to place the greatest restraint upon your own feelings; for if you once give way to anger the dog will know it, and once his influence is lost. To be sure, the special line of education depends upon the kind of dog you have and what you want him to do.

You may commence to teach the pointer or setter to "stand" at a very early age, using first a piece of meat, praising and petting him when he does well and reprimanding him when required. Do not tire your pup out; but if he does well once, let him play and sleep before trying again.

As he grows older, replace the meat with a dead bird. The best sportsmen of today do not allow their dogs to retrieve, saying that the "mouthing" of the dead and bloody birds affects the fitness of their noses.

To teach a dog to retrieve, commence with the young pup. Almost any dog will chase a ball, and very soon learn to bring it to his master. When you have taught dog to "fetch" he may be tried with game. It is very probable that the first birds he brings will be badly "mouthed"—that is, bitten and mangled. To break him of this, prepare a ball of yarn so wound over pins that the slightest pressure will cause the points to protrude and prick any object pressed against the ball.

After the dog has pricked his mouth once or twice with this ball, he will learn to pick it up and carry it in the most delicate manner. He may then be tried again with a bird. This time he will probably bring it to you without so much as rumping a feather; but if, notwithstanding his experiences with the ball of pins, your dog still "mouthes" the game, you must skin a bird and arrange the ball and pins inside the skin so as to prick sharply upon a light pressure.

Make a dog "fetch" the bird skin until he is completely broken of his bad habit of biting or "mouthing" game. With pointers and setters, at first you will have to give your commands by word of mouth; but if you accompany each command by an appropriate gesture, the pup will soon learn to understand and obey the slightest motion of the hand or head.

After teaching a dog to "heel," "down charge," and to "lie on" at command, you may show him game and teach him to "quarter" his ground by moving yourself in the direction you wish the dog to go. The dog will not be long in understanding and obeying.

When your pointer comes to a point, teach him to be steady by repeating softly, "Steady boy, steady," at the same time holding up your hand. In course of time the words will be omitted; the hand raised as a caution will keep the dog steady; but should he break point and flush the game, as a young dog is more than liable to, you may give him the whip and at the same time use some appropriate words that the dog will remember. After your dog has been taught to obey, it is well to put him in the field with an old, well-trained dog.

As every sportsman has a peculiar system of his own for breaking a dog, it is scarcely necessary to give more than these few hints; only let me caution you once more against using the whip too often. Spare the lash and keep a good stock of patience on hand. Otherwise, in breaking the dog you will also break his spirit, and have a mean, treacherous animal that will sink and cringe at your slightest look, but seldom obey you when he thinks he is out of reach of the dreaded whip.

MODERN THEORY OF THUNDER

Intense Heat of Electrical Discharge, Turns Vapor into Steam and Causes Loud Explosion.

There have been a great many different theories about the cause of the noise we call thunder. Some savage nations think it is caused by the clouds knocking together in a storm and making a spark, like two pieces of flint, with a crackling sound at the same time. Not long ago, when electricity first began to be understood, many persons believed that the lightning made a hole in the air as it passed along and that the rush of air to fill up this vacuum caused the noise, just as it is caused by the air rushing back into the vacuum in a big cannon.

The more modern theory, based on some remarkable experiments with very fluffy cotton that was made damp is that the intense heat of the electrical discharge instantly turns the surrounding vapor of the clouds into steam and causes an explosion as sudden and fierce as gunpowder. It is the number and diversity of these explosions that makes the crackling sound we hear when the thunder is close to us, which would not be the case if the cause were the air rushing into a single vacuum, as that would make only one big bang, just like a cannon.

NOT WORKING FOR ART'S SAKE
Violinist Certainly Had No Mistaken Idea as to His Ear for the Melody.
The Blue Forest orchestra had just finished an ear-piercing melody on the front lawn of "Berry Inn."
One of the guests approached the violinist and somberly inquired: "Did you play by note?"
"Never a note, do I play, sir," replied Mr. Hennessey, mopping his fevered brow with a handkerchief of sanguinary hue.
"Ah, by ear, then?" said the summer-boarder, with a smile of gracious interest.
"Niver an ear helps me," responded the other, returning his handkerchief to his capacious pocket.
"Indeed! May I ask how you—what you do play by, then?" persisted the inquirer.
"By main strin'th, be gorry!" said Mr. Hennessey, with a weary air, as he plunged his ancient instrument into its green bag; "an' it's mighty dry wurk an' that's no mistake."

Rational Love.
The rational rather than the romantic view of marriage is the one most in favor with the young people of the twentieth century," said Dr. H. Lucas Wentworth, the well known eugenics expert, in an address in Cleveland.
"The rational view will make for happier marriages. And this rational view is beautifully illustrated in two questions—a little dialogue—running thus:
"Will you always love me?"
"Will you always be lovable?"

Very Warm.
A party of commercial travelers were drawing the long-bow and spinning yarns of wonderful adventures on sea and land. A silent listener sat in the corner. Presently one of the company addressed him.
"Have you traveled much, sir?"
"A little. I've been round the world seven times."
"Then you must have had some striking experiences. Perhaps you would like to tell us one or two."
"Well," said the stranger, "perhaps the most remarkable was on my last voyage. At one time we found the heat so terrific that we used to take it in turns to go down into the stokehold to get a cooler."
No more yarns were related that evening.

Perfectly Safe.

A Suggestion for Digestion

Many persons suffer more or less from headache, dizziness, biliousness, and symptoms common to indigestion. There are various causes, such as over-starchy or greasy foods, improper mastication, or bad cooking.

Grape-Nuts
Solves the digestion problem.

This food, made from prime whole wheat and barley, is perfectly baked until the starch cells are either converted into easily digested grape sugar, or thoroughly broken down for quick digestion—generally in about one hour.

There is no animal fat in Grape-Nuts.

The crisp granules of Grape-Nuts come to your table ready-to-eat direct from package, invite thorough mastication and have a peculiarly sweet, nut-like flavor.

Grape-Nuts, containing all the rich elements of wheat and barley, including the vital mineral salts, is a perfectly balanced food for building muscle, bone, brain and nerve.

Grape-Nuts is probably the longest baked, the best balanced, and the most easily digested of all cereal foods. Wonderfully appetizing with cream and sugar.

SYNOPSIS

Fran arrives at Hamilton Gregory's home in Littleburg, but finds him absent conducting the choir at a camp meeting. She repairs thither in search of him, laughs during the service and is asked to lead by Abbott Ashton, superintendent of the choir. Ashton becomes greatly interested in Fran and while taking leave of her, holds her hand and is seen by Sapphira Clinton, sister of Robert Clinton, chairman of the school board. Fran tells Gregory she wants a home with him. Grace Noir, Gregory's private secretary, takes a violent dislike to Fran and advises her to go away at once. Fran hints at a twenty-year-old secret, and Gregory in agitation asks Grace to leave the room. Fran relates the story of how Gregory married a young girl at Springfield while attending college and then deserted her. Fran is the child of that marriage. Gregory had married his present wife three years before the death of Fran's mother. Fran takes a liking to Mrs. Gregory. Gregory explains that Fran is the daughter of a very dear friend who is dead. Fran agrees to the story. Mrs. Gregory insists on her making her home with them and takes her to her arms. Fran declares the secretary must go. Grace begins nagging tactics in an effort to drive Fran from the Gregory home. Abbott while taking a walk alone at midnight, finds Fran on a bridge telling her story by cards. She tells Abbott that she is the famous Non-tamer, Fran Nonpareil. She tired of circus life and sought a home. Grace tells of seeing Fran come home after midnight with a man. She guesses part of the story and surprises the rest from Abbott. She decides to come home with Fran and Springfield to investigate Fran's story. Fran enlists Abbott in her battle against Grace. Fran offers her services to Gregory as secretary during the temporary absence of Grace. The latter, hearing of Fran's purpose, returns and interrupts a touching scene between Fran and her daughter. Grace tells Gregory she intends to marry Clinton and quit his service. He declares that he cannot continue his work without her. Carried away by passion, he takes her in his arms. Fran walks in on them, and declares that Grace must leave the house at once. To Gregory's consternation he learns of Clinton's mission to Springfield. Clinton returns from Springfield and, at Fran's request, Ashton goes to disclose what he has learned. On Abbott's assurance that Grace will leave Gregory at once, Clinton agrees to keep silent. Driven into a corner by the threat of exposure, Gregory is forced to dismiss Grace. Grace is offered the job of bookkeeper in Clinton's grocery store. Gregory declares he will kill himself if she marries Clinton. Gregory's infatuation leads him to seek Grace at the grocery. He finds her alone and tells her the story of his passion. She points out that as he married the present Mrs. Gregory before the death of Fran's mother, he is not legally married. They decide to flee at once.

"We'd better separate," Gregory hoarsely whispered. "We'll meet at the station."

"No. If he sees us, what would be the use? Anyway, he'll have to know tomorrow. No," said Grace, overcoming a slight indecision, "the important thing is not to be stopped, whoever sees. Come this way."

"But there's no chance out that way," Gregory returned, with the obstinacy of the weak. "And if he does see us, it won't do to seem to go to hide."

"But we are hiding," Grace said defiantly. "Possibly we can keep moving about, and he will go away."

"Why should we hide, anyhow?" demanded Gregory, with sudden show of spirit.

To that, she made no reply. If he didn't know, what was the use to tell him?

Gregory moved on, but glanced back over his shoulder. "Now, he's getting down," he said in agitation. "He's making his way right toward us. . . . All right, let him come!"

"In here—quick!" cried Grace, dragging him to one side. "Quick!"

A voice stopped them with, "Your tickets, please."

"Oh, no," wailed Gregory, "not into a show, Grace. We can't go into a show. It's—it's impossible."

She spoke rapidly: "We must. We'll be safe in there, because no one would ever suppose we'd go into such a place."

"But Grace," said Gregory firmly, "I cannot—I will not go into a show."

The voice, addressed him again: "It's first-class in every particular, lady. There is nothing here to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of the most fastidious. See those fierce man-eating lions that have been captured in the remotest jungles of Africa—"

Gregory looked back.

Robert Clinton was drawing nearer. As yet he had not discovered them, but his eyes, grown fiercer and more impatient, were never at rest.

With a groan, Gregory thrust some money into the showman's hand, and he and Grace mingled with the noisy sight-seers flocking under the black tent.

CHAPTER XXII.

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

Window, where sometimes I imagine I hear a faint, far-away sound. I judge it's from some carnival band. Take this chair and listen attentively; your ears are younger—now!"

Abbott did not get all of this because of the gargantuan roar that swept through the window, but he gravely tilted his head, then took the proffered ear-trumpet: "You are right," he said, "I hear something."

"It's the street fair," she announced triumphantly. "But sometimes it's louder. How fine you look, Abbott—just as if your conscience doesn't hurt you for disappearing without leaving a clue to the mystery. You needn't be looking around, sir—Fran isn't here."

"I wonder where she is?" Abbott smiled. "I'm dreadfully impatient to tell her the good news. Mrs. Jefferson, I'm to teach in a college—it's a much bigger thing than the position I work out some ideas that I know Fran will like. I used to think that everything ought to be left precisely as it is, because it's been that way so long—I mean the church; and schools; and—and society. But I've made up my mind that nothing is right, unless it works right."

Mrs. Jefferson listened in desperate eagerness. "A watch?" she hazarded.

"Exactly," he responded hastily. "If a watch doesn't run, what's the use of its being pretty? And if churches develop a gift of tongue instead of character, what's the value of their prayers and songs? And I've concluded that if schools don't teach us how to live, they have the wrong kind of springs and wheels. Where is Fran, Mrs. Jefferson?"

"Still," she temporized, "we can't get along without watches, Abbott."

"No, nor schools, nor churches. But they must have good works. Is Fran down at the fair, do you think?"

The other bent toward him stealthily. "Ask where Mrs. Gregory is," she said, wonderfully significant.

"Well?"

"Abbott, listen: She's gone a-visitin'!"

"Visitin'!" Abbott was surprised.

"Yes, visitin', she that hasn't been off this place to visit a soul for ages. I tell you, boy, times have changed, here. Maybe you think nobody'd be left at home to visit; but Fran has found that there is a woman in town that she used to know, and the woman has a mighty sick child, and Lucy has gone to sit by it, so the mother can't rest. Think of that, Abbott, think of Lucy going anywhere. My! Have you heard that we've lost a secretary at this place? I mean the future Mrs. Bob. Yes, she's gone. I'd as soon have thought of the courthouse being picked up and set in the parlor."

Mrs. Jefferson drew back and said succinctly: "Fran did it!"

Her cap quivered as she leaned forward again. "Get her to tell you all about it. We darsen't speak about it much because of the neighbors. We conspired, Fran and I. Yes, she's down at the carnival, you boy!"

Abbott hastily departed. Later he found himself in a cloud-burst of confetti, on the "city square" and when he had cleared his eyes of the red and white snow, he saw Fran disappearing like a bit of crimson glass at the bottom of a human kaleidoscope. Fran had thrown the confetti, then fled—how much brighter she was than all the other shifting units of humanity.

He fought his way toward her determinedly, finding she was about to be submerged. Was she actually trying to elude him?

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

Fran gave up flight, and stopped to look at him. A smile slipped from the corner of one eye, to get caught at the corner of her demure mouth. "When you disappeared, you left me yourself. A friend always does. I've had you all the time."

Abbott glowed. "Still, it isn't exactly the same as if I had been able to touch your hand. Suppose we shake hands, little friend; what do you say?"

"I don't say anything," Fran retorted; "I just shake."

Her handclasp was so hearty that he was slightly disconcerted. Was her friendship so great that it left no room in her heart for something greater?

"I want to talk to you, Fran, talk and talk, oh, just about all the long night! through! Come, let me take you back home."

"Home? Me? Ridiculous! But I'll tell you the best place that ever was, for the kind of talking you and I want to do to each other. Abbott, it won't matter to you—will it?—at what place I say to meet me, at about half-past nine?"

"Why, Fran! It's not eight o'clock."

Abbott remonstrated, glancing toward the courthouse clock to find it stopped, and then consulting his watch. "Do you think I am going to wait till—"

"Till half-past nine," said Fran, nonchalantly. "Very well, then."

"But what will we do in the meantime, if we're not to talk till—"

"We?" she mocked him. "Listen, Abbott, don't look so cross. I've a friend in town with a sick daughter, and she's a real friend so I must go to help her, a while."

He was both mystified and disappointed. "I didn't know you had any such friends in Littleburg," he remonstrated, remembering how unkind tongues had set the village against her.

Fran threw back her head, and her gesture was full of pride and confidence. "Oh!" she cried, "the town is full of my friends."

He could only stare at her in dumb amazement.

"All right, then," she said with the greatest cheerfulness, "at half-past nine. You understand the date—nine-thirty. Of course you wouldn't have me desert a friend in trouble. Where shall we meet, Abbott—at nine-thirty? Shall we say, at the Snake-Eater's?"

"Go, Fran," he exclaimed. "I'll wait for you as long as I must, even if it's the eternity of nine-thirty; and I'd go anywhere in the world to meet you, even to the den of the Snake-Eater."

"That's the way for a friend to talk!" she declared, suddenly radiant—a full Fran, now, instead of the slender penitentiary Fran-beam.

Seeing a leg-lined lane opening before her, she darted forward.

Abbott called—"But I can't promise to talk to you as a friend, when we meet—I mean, just as a friend."

Fran looked back at him, still dazling. "I only ask you to treat me as well," she said with assumed humility, "as we are told we ought to treat our enemies."

Her Handclasp Was So Hearty That He Was Slightly Disconcerted.

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

After the extinguishment of the Fran-beam, Abbott wanted to be alone, to meditate on stellar and solar brightness, but in this vociferous wilderness, reflection was impossible. One could not even escape recognition, one could not even detach oneself from a Simon Jefferson.

"Got back to town again, hey?" said Simon. That was enough about Abbott; Simon passed at once to a more interesting theme: "Taken in the Lion Show, yet?"

"I'm just waiting for nine-thirty. I have an engagement." Futile words, indeed, since it was now only eight o'clock.

"You come with me, then. I know all the ropes. Hey? Oh, yes, I know mother thinks me in bed—for goodness' sake don't tell on me, she'd be scared to death. But actually, old man, this carnival is good for my heart. 'Tisn't like going to church, one bit. Preaching makes me feel oppressed, and that's what scares me—feeling oppressed." He rubbed his grizzled hair nervously. "Just for fear somebody'd go tell, I've had to sneak into all these shows like I'd been a thief in the night."

Simon urged Abbott along in the direction taken, but a few minutes before, by Hamilton Gregory and Grace Noir. "You see," Simon panted, "when the girl fell off the trapeze heard about that, hey? Mother was overjoyed, thinking I'd missed the sickening sight. But bless your soul!—I was right at the front, hanging on to the railing, and I saw it all. Why, she pretty near fell on me. Her foot slipped just so—" Simon extended his leg with some agility.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Conqueror.

Her foot slipped just so—" Simon extended his leg with some agility.

"Was she killed?" Abbott asked, concealing his astonishment over Simon's evident acquaintance with the black tent before which they had paused.

"Well," Simon reluctantly conceded, "n-no, she wasn't to say killed—but dreadfully bruised up, Abbott, very painful. I saw it all; this carnival has put new life into me—here! Get your ticket in a jiffy, or all the seats'll be taken. You can't stand there like that—give me your quarter, I know how to jump in and get first place. That ticket agent knows me; I've been in five times."

From a high platform before the black tent, a voice came through a megaphone: "The Big Show. The Big Show. See those enormous lions riding in baby carriages while La Gonzizetti makes other lions dance the fandango to her violin. See those—"

"Here, Abbott, follow!" called the breathless Simon Jefferson. "Of course we'll see what's there—no use listening to him, like an introduction in a novel of Scott's telling it all first. You follow me."

Abbott laughed aloud at Simon's ability as they pushed their way under the tent.

"Uh-huh, now see that!" groaned Simon reproachfully, as he looked about. "Every seat taken. I tell you, you've got to lift your feet to get into this show. Well, hang on to the rope—don't let anybody gouge you out of standing room."

At least two-thirds of the space under the tent was taken up by tiers of seats formed of thin, and apparently fragile, blue planks, springy to the foot and deafening to the ear. From hardened ground to fringed tent-ceiling, these overlapping rows of narrow boards were brimming with men, women and children who, tenacious of their holdings, seemed each to contain in his pockets the feet of him who sat immediately behind.

The seats faced an immense cage which rose almost to the roof. As yet, it was empty, but smaller adjoining cages promised an animated arena when the signal should be given.

Gregory and Grace Noir had sought refuge on the highest seat, where they might overlook the crowd; here, with heads bent forward as if to avoid the canvas, they hoped to escape observation. Thanks to the influx of country folk, Littleburg citizens were rarely to be seen at such shows until a later and more fashionable hour. Gregory was relieved to find his topmost plank filled with strangers.

"All goes well," he said, pressing Grace's hand. "Nobody will find out that we have been in here."

"Watch for Mr. Clinton," Grace counseled cautiously. "If he comes in, stoop lower."

"They're all strangers, Grace. Providence is with us—there's Simon Jefferson!" He was too amazed to think of concealment.

"Hush! Yes—and Abbott Ashton." Gregory pulled his hat over his eyes.

Into the tent streamed a fresh body of sight-seers. Simon, swinging to the

No Joy Visit.

A Glasgow journalist who was careless of his personal appearance was assigned to write something about a show at a leading Glasgow theater. He presented his card at a box-office.

The manager came out and looked at the disheveled visitor dubiously.

"Did you come here to write something about the play—to work?" he asked.

"Do you think I'd come to your theater for amusement?" asked the journalist as he stalked out.—Saturday Evening Post.

TRULY A VALUABLE HOUND

Visitor From Costa Rica Tells Story Which Some People Might Find It Hard to Believe.

At last the existence of the banana hound has been shown to be a fact! A man, who just arrived in this country from Port Limon, Costa Rica, not only knows all about the banana hound, but has a drove of them himself. The gentleman is Hezekiah Spottiswood, and for many years the owner of a banana plantation in Costa Rica.

"Is the banana hound a new discovery up here?" he asked in surprise. "My word, how singular! Why, we always have them. They are a very essential adjunct to a banana plantation; indispensable almost, I should say. What is the breed? They are a cross between a pointer and a South American tapir."

"It's a very necessary thing to know when to pick the bananas from the trees, you know. When they have attained a certain shade of green, then is the time. Now it's very difficult to have a man so thoroughly up in color that he can determine this matter. That is where the banana hound comes in. He trots the groves with a man behind him, and scents the bunches which should be picked. If

The band entered and squatted upon blue boxes in one corner. Showy red coats were removed in deference to sweltering heat, and melody presided in undress. Three bears, two clowns and a bicycle sharpened interest in what was to come, whetting the mind upon jokes blunter than the intelligence of the audience. Even the band ceased playing though that had not seemed possible; its depressing andantino had not only subdued the bears, rendering them as harmless as kittens, but had mournfully depressed the audience.

Into this atmosphere of tamed inertness, suddenly flashed a little figure whose quivering vitality communicated electric thrills. Even the clowns moved less like treadmill horses, as they took their stations at the smaller cages, waiting to lift the gates that would admit the restless lions into the central cage.

The form that had appeared—one knew not whence—was that of a slight woman, dressed in a short skirt of blue, and bodice of white satin. The trimmings which ran in all directions, were rich in pendants of gold and rubies. Above all, there was the alluring mystery of a crimson mask which effectually hid the woman's face.

Simon whispered into Abbott's always unready ear: "That isn't La Gonzizetti. Wonder what this means? La Gonzizetti is much more of a woman than this one, and she doesn't wear a mask, or much of anything else. La Gonzizetti doesn't care who sees her. Why, this is nothing but a mere—tell you now, it's not on to her job, I mean to have my money back." Simon glowered.

Abbott stared in great perplexity. "Then who is she?" he exclaimed. "Simon—doesn't she remind you of—of some one we know?"

"Naw. She's got on La Gonzizetti's dress, and her voice has the show-girl's—clangy-tin-panny-whangdoodle, but that's all I recognize."

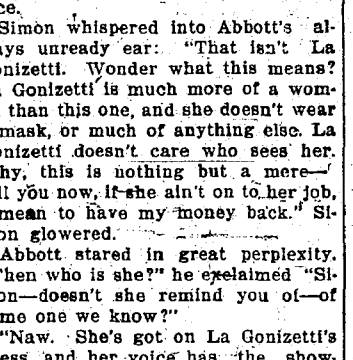

Abbott wondered that Simon failed to notice the similarity between the show-girl's movements and those of Fran. This woman had Fran's form. To be sure the voice was entirely different, but the rapidity and decisiveness of action, and the air of authority, were Fran's very own. However, the show-girl's hands were as dark as an Italian's, while Fran's were—well, not so dark, at any rate.

Abbott's brow did not relax. He stood motionless, staring at everything before him with painful intentness.

Up near the roof, Gregory and Grace scarcely observed the entrance of the Non-tamer. Secured from espial, absorbed in each other, they were able, thanks to the surrounding clamor of voices, to discuss their future plans with some degree of confidence.

Simon told Abbott—"Anyway, no amateur would rub up against those beasts, so I guess it's all right. They ain't but two lions; bill says ten; man that wrote the bill was the other eight, I reckon."

FEED CHICKENS IN SUMMER

There Are Few Farm Flocks That Will Not Improve in Egg-Laying If Given Some Grain.

The very common opinion that farm flocks need no grain feed in summer is seldom warranted. The farm range is valuable, and there is no place where eggs can be produced as economically, but there are few flocks that will not improve in egg yield if given at least one feed daily. It ought not to be difficult to determine whether more feed is needed. Something depends on the size of the flock and the range, but the egg yield will tell. There is only one probable explanation for a farm hen's failure to lay eggs in summer, and that is lack of feed. Occasionally it is due to a lack of the right kind of feed, but generally if the hens have one feed daily of any grain they will give good results.

Wheat, barley and oats are the practical summer grains, but if a little care is used and some meat, corn is very good. Whatever grain is used it is genuine economy to give the hens access to dry bran. An open shallow box will do if you haven't time to make a regular feed hopper. No poultryman or farmer is feeding to the best advantage who does not feed bran.

George Pattullo Tells of His Experiences Among Cowboys on the Mexican Border.

George Pattullo, the author of "The Sheriff of Badger," is a cowboy part of the year and works among the men of a Texas ranch. He tells a story of a time when he did not wear his literary laurels too conspicuously. "A rather amusing thing happened at Naco, which is a town straddling the Mexican border," he said. "I had been working on the Turkey Track range as the guest of the owner while they were branding 5,000 head of cows and steers that had been sold. Some of us went to Naco at the end of the work for a little fun, and Lee Hardie, the boss, introduced me to the proprietor of the Fashion. An inebriated gentleman standing near seemed to ponder the name, as though trying to recall something. At last he came over to me.

"Are you," he said, "the guy that writes stories?" I admitted it, upon which his manner became very grave.

"Well," he continued, "you done put my brother in one of them pieces and I want to see you about it."

"I hastily assured him that his brother was wholly unknown to me. He looked doubtful and appeared to nurse a grievance, but allowed the matter to drop.

"Fred Hall, one of the cowboys who had worked with me on the squeeze, which holds each animal that is to be branded—it takes two lusty men to handle a squeeze when the steers are wild—led Lee Hardie aside, and I could hear them in hot debate.

"Aw, Lee," said Fred in much disgust, "what's the use of trying to tell me that? I tell you Pat ain't got enough sense to write stories."

Western Michigan

A Region that is Rapidly Developing as a Fruit Growing and General Farming Section

HAY HARVEST IN EMMET COUNTY.

Although Michigan is not the most important hay-producing state in the Union, it grows a fine article. In 1910 it ranked thirteenth among the states in the number of tons produced. That year the Western Michigan crop amounted to nearly 600,000 tons. Dairying is being introduced into the region and this industry gets a hold an increased acreage will be given over to forage crops. The above view is of Grant Keiser of Bliss township, Emmet county, in his hay harvest. Owing to a fertile soil and a favorable season he harvested an exceptionally good crop of timothy this year.

TRIES OUT NEW IDEA

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION IN MUSKEGON COUNTY.

Encouraging Results Obtained From Planting Vetch Seed Under Supervision of the County Authorities—Plan Proves Success.

A new idea in agricultural extension is being tried out in Muskegon county. Two years ago one of the members of the county board of supervisors was bold enough to suggest an entirely new idea along development lines, namely, that the county use county money and buy vetch seed, which should be loaned to the farmers who would agree to cultivate it under supervision, the farmers to return to the county at the end of the season seed equal to the amount originally received. This summer the first harvest was made and the results were sufficiently encouraging to warrant the supervisors in continuing the plan. Now committees are at work getting the seed to be distributed this fall ready for the growers. A total of 6,000 pounds has been secured by the county and this is being inoculated under the direct supervision of the state and federal governments by the agricultural experts of both.

A few weeks since a canvass was made to see what farmers wished to help with the plan and the acreage that each could devote to vetch growing. As a result of this canvass supervisor C. J. Guiles of Muskegon township is enthusiastically in favor of the plan. He was a member of the committee that made the canvass and in summing up the situation spoke as follows:

"Some of the things we found astonished us. In places we discovered lands so sour that they would scarcely grow anything, while only a short distance away were beds of marl that tested almost pure lime. If the farmer hauled a few loads of this marl and spread it over his land it would increase the fertility wonderfully.

"Farmers wouldn't believe their land was sour. They swore it was sweet, but only 'poor soil.' We touched a piece of litmus paper to the ground, and the red shot up in it almost as quickly as if you had placed in in pure acid. Then we placed the litmus in the marl and it turned blue again. We put the litmus in hydrochloric acid, to demonstrate to the farmer that it was acid that turned it red. Then we neutralized the soil with marl and turned the litmus blue.

"In this way, and by considerable argument, we finally convinced the farmer that his soil was acid. In one place he triumphantly showed us splendid corn on land we thought sour. We found that the corn was growing where he scattered his winter ashes, the lime in the ashes neutralizing the acid in the soil only a few feet away, however, the corn was scrawny and sickly, due to acid in the soil.

"We found scores of outside people, particularly from Chicago, who have come here and are trying to make a start farming. These people are intelligent and are eagerly absorbing every bit of information they can get. An agricultural expert who could go to these people and show them on their own land what methods to employ, who could test their soil and tell them what amount of lime to use, would be a god-send to them.

"In the Carleton creek basin we found a bed of marl that is almost pure lime. It is almost white in color. Some of the farmers have discovered this bed and are hauling from it, while others don't realize its value. In co-operating upon the value of a federal county agent to give expert advice, Mr. Guiles said: "Farmers who attend an institute hear a lot of things that would benefit them, but when they get home they get back to the old routine and frequently forget the things they have heard. It takes a man on the ground who can make the actual experiments and demonstrations on the farmer's own land to stir things up and introduce better methods. An agricultural expert would enhance the agricultural wealth of this county tremendously and keep on increasing it year after year."

PICKLE INDUSTRY THRIVES

Season Has Been Favorable to Cucumbers and Big Crop is Harvested.

The cucumber pickle industry is now at its height in western Michigan. The season has been favorable for cucumbers and a big crop is being harvested. There are close to fifty salting stations in the territory and at the most of these the men are working late into the evening every night in the week but Sunday. The cucumbers are received from the farmers in baskets. The men at the stations sort the cucumbers according to size and quality, after which each lot is weighed and every grower is given credit for exactly what he has delivered. After weighing the green cucumbers go into tanks that have a capacity of better than 2,000 bushels. There is enough salt brine in the tanks to keep them covered. When a tank is full it is headed down so that all the cucumbers will be covered with the brine. By adding salt, or water, as circumstances may require, the brine is maintained at a fixed standard. The cucumbers are kept in the tanks until they are wanted for pickles. They may be there for a year or for two years, but when they are wanted the cucumbers which have been tamed by the brine are moved in barrels or in tank cars to the pickle factories in Detroit or Pittsburgh, where they are washed, put in vinegar and otherwise made ready for the table.

The cucumber pickle industry as a whole gives employment to a large number of people. A small patch of ground into cucumber vines will keep a large family of children very busy during the summer season. In fact, it is practically necessary to use children as pickers to make the growing end of the industry a profitable one. At the salting stations from one to ten men are needed to receive the cucumbers, sort them, and get them into their proper tanks.

One hundred acres set to cucumber plants will furnish enough cucumbers to warrant the establishment of a salting station. The larger stations have acreages that range from one to 300 acres. Generally the work of transferring the cucumbers from the station tanks to the barrels or tanks which are used in transporting the cucumbers to the factory where they are finished and prepared for table use is carried on at a different season of the year than that in which the new stock is received.

Good Apple Season.
The present season promises to be a good one for the western Michigan apple grower. There is a fair crop on many of the trees and the quality is likely to be better than what has prevailed in the past. The chances are also excellent for a good price. The Canadian crop this year is short according to official reports. Consul Andrew J. McConico at St. John, Quebec, reports that in certain sections there will be no fruit, as orchards have been completely devastated by the tent caterpillar. He estimates that the total loss to the fruit growers of his section will amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

The consul further reports that the whole of eastern Canada has been visited by the caterpillar plague, and not only have orchards and gardens been seriously damaged, but whole wooded areas of the countryside have been devastated.

COON HUNT IS ON IN AN OFFICE BUILDING

Predaceous Nocturnal Animal That Destroys Rubber Matting and Upsets Ink.

Denver, Colo.—Employees and members of the firm of Hughes & Dorsey, attorneys, with offices in the International Trust company's building, have learned that rubber floor matting and black ink are relished as a diet by a sleek, sharp-nosed raccoon which is a nightly prowler about the block in which the bank building is located.

Coon hunting has become a daily diversion in the vicinity of Seventeenth and California streets. The little animal began his visits to the International Trust building about two months ago, and since then has cleverly evaded traps, weapons and the missiles of a score of persons who want a coonskin to hang over the fireplace.

The little visitor was supposed to be a fugitive from one of the parks in the city, but lately it has been rumored that he is the pet of a resident in a nearby hotel.

One morning recently Attorney Clayton C. Dorsey was astonished to find a large bottle of ink overturned on his desk, with tracks of Mr. Coon running hither and thither all about the office.

Again the rubber floor matting was found to have a fringed edge after one of his visits.

He is a remarkable coon in several ways. He is frequently seen on the roofs of buildings in the block and apparently he must climb the fire escapes to get there. Only a few days ago, in the evening, he was seen peering over the edge of the cornice of the International Trust building by the janitor. He is seen only at night.

SEA LION ENTERS CAMBRIDGE

It Came Out of Charles River and Flopped into a China Store.

Cambridge, Mass.—Cambridge had a real sea lion hunt the other night. The animal came out of the Charles river basin and invaded East Cambridge street, where it flopped about, barking loudly, and frightened a crowd which retreated before it.

Attracted by the light of a store, it leaped four feet through the window, smashing the heavy plate glass. The proprietor of the store, Isaac Friedman, who was counting his cash, left in a hurry, while the animal raised havoc in the place.

A small squad of police reserves tried to confine it in a packing box and in a big sheet of canvas, but it smashed one and ate its way through the other. Finally men from the Boston aquarium lassoed it and sent it to that institution.

There it was said to be a good specimen of a California sea lion, about three years old and weighing more than 200 pounds.

"A rare visitor in New England waters," one of the officials said.

RUN OVER BY CAR; CHEWS CUD

After Being Rescued, Cow Was Tied to a Post and the Car Proceeded.

Chicago.—A Jersey cow walked into the path of an east-bound Chicago avenue car at North Forty-sixth avenue and was run over. The car was stopped as the front truck rested on the bowtie, shaking the passengers, who were startled at the apparent hill-climbing proclivities of the car.

The cow viewed the situation calmly, chewing its cud while awaiting the woeeking wagon to lift its burden. After being released the cow was tied to a post and the car proceeded. The animal suffered only a slight cut.

A short time later Policeman Thomas Thompson discovered the cow tied to the post and led it to the West Lake street station. Sergeant O'Neil discovered that it had not been milked all day and performed the task, sharing the lactic fluid with his fellow-officers.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR ITCHING SCALPS, DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura Ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

PECULIAR LIVE STOCK FARM

Canadian Has Pleasant Possibilities in His Proposed Raising of Black Foxes.

Probably few, if any, men in this province have started a black fox farm at less cost than Robert Rowley, proprietor of the Laurentide preserves at Lake Edward, says a Quebec correspondent of the Montreal Gazette. While up at Roberval Mr. Rowley heard that a man there had four young pups, part red and part black. It is said that nobody wanted to buy the animals, though the price was about $10 or so a head. Mr. Rowley gave the man his price. The next morning Mr. Pridman, manager of the black fox ranch of Lieutenant Governor Wood of New Brunswick, who had been scouring the country for young stock, saw the foxes and immediately went into the hotel and in front of every one present offered Mr. Rowley several thousand dollars, but was refused. When the villagers realized the offer some of them almost collapsed on the spot and the place has been fox crazy ever since. Mr. Rowley is also purchasing a pure black dog fox at a very small sum and will cross it with the litter which he got so cheaply. He expects to have a litter of pure black foxes next spring.

Quaint Critic.
George B. Luks, the painter, said to a critic in his New York studio: "Your criticism is at any rate original and amusing, my boy. It reminds me of the colored laundress in the Uffizi Gallery. "When this colored laundress visited the Uffizi, her mistress led her up to Correggio's masterpiece. "There, Hannah, what do you think of that?" she said. Hannah, shaking her head lugubriously, stared a long while at the pictured angels whose white robes were all yellowed by time, and then, with a sigh and a disapproving shake of the head, she said: 'De saints is de last folks to put up wiv bad laundry work.'"

Lightly Clad.
"Don't you think she dresses in good taste?"
"Perhaps so, but not in good measure."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless; Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food; Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."
Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."
Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."
Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."
Dr. Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."
Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."
Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from some form of feminine disorder is told that an operation is necessary, it of course frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital operating table and the surgeon's knife strikes terror to her heart, and no wonder. It is quite true that some of these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but thousands of women have avoided the necessity of an operation by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This fact is attested by the grateful letters they write to us after their health has been restored.

These Two Women Prove Our Claim.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Me.

Charlotte, N. C.—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. If I even lifted a chair it would cause a hemorrhage. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health and am the mother of a nice baby girl. You can use this letter to help other suffering women."—Mrs. ROSA SIMS, 16 Wyona St., Charlotte, N. C.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman submit to a surgical operation without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NEW YORK'S BRITISH SECTION

There is a Quiet Corner of Manhattan Where the Cockney Dialect Reigns Supreme.

New York.—The British, like the French and the Germans, love their own quarter of the city. Here, south of Fourteenth street, is almost the only part of New York where you may hear the Cockney dialect. A few millions of New Yorkers do not suspect that any such quarter exists, but it must have been familiar to many a prosperous British resident in the days when he was a homesick newcomer glad to find the "mutual comfort of the mother tongue" among his fellow Britons in the characteristic resorts of the region.

For a generation or more a saloon of the quarter, not many years ago owned and conducted by a man with a characteristic lowland Scotch name and a taste for the ruder sports that Britons love, has been the resort of

Like a Bit of Old England.

Englishmen, Scotchmen, Welshmen, rarely of Irishmen, and never, except by accident, of anyone speaking a foreign tongue. Here unmistakable Britons of many types gathered to eat "unclean of cold roast beef off the joint; drink the imported English malt liquors, talk horse and scan the ticket for news of the races while yet racing flourished as a tolerated form of commercialized sport in New York.

The talk is of sport rather than politics, of Great Britain rather than America. The place has long been a sort of second home to the homeless newcomer, though it begins to show signs of coming change. The British quarter would be an admirable place for an English speaking man to live if he wished to disappear from the ken of the great world uptown.

All over the less active streets of the quarter are sunny, respectable looking houses of no great size, where lodgings may be had within a stone's throw of one or another quiet, shady little park. Indeed, it is almost the only quiet part of lower Manhattan. Bleecker street would be the anchorite's shopping district, and he would find here and there endurable restaurants. Indeed, a man with a taste for study and the quiet life might do far worse than to bury himself in the British quarter under a vow never to venture outside the limits of its soothing domain.

BECOMES AUNT TO HERSELF

How Young Bride Has Learned That Her Marriage Was Unlawful in New York.

New York.—Because American law does not permit a lady to become her own aunt, little Mrs. Annie Ergas of 4 West One Hundred and Fourteenth street will lose her husband.

Eight months ago, as Miss Annie Ergas, fifteen, she traveled to the United States from a little village close to the Dardanelles to join her family. It was a case of love at first sight when her uncle, her father's youngest brother, saw her descend the gang-plank.

The parents smiled and agreed when he asked her in marriage. The Ottoman law does not prohibit such an arrangement, and there is a Biblical sanction for it.

Four months ago the couple were married by an alderman. Ignorant that they had disobeyed the law here, they lived happily together until two weeks ago. At that time the Federation of Oriental Jews heard of their case and explained the situation to them.

Then they were eager to right the wrong. At the request of the federation Monroe M. Goldstein, an attorney of 140 Nassau street, brought for them a suit for annulment of the marriage. This is now pending in the supreme court.

MAKES RAID IN DRESS SUIT

New York Police Inspector Poses as a "Man About Town" and Raids Gaming House.

New York.—Inspector James H. Gillen of the Third police inspection district posed as a man about town in order to gain entrance to an alleged gambling house on East Thirty-eighth street, near Fifth avenue.

In immaculate evening dress, he presented himself at the door of the place and was admitted. Having satisfied himself of the character of the place, he called in three of his detectives, who had been waiting outside and carted away a costly roulette layout. No arrests were made. The names of five patrons of the place were taken.

MADE RULES FOR COMPOSERS

Frederick the Great, Talented Musician Himself, Laid Down Imperative Orders.

Frederick the Great was the most distinguished musical amateur of his age, and his position gave him the power to regulate the style of composition employed by the musicians of his period. For instance, he made the following rules to be followed by operatic composers: "All the principal singers must have big arias and different in character, as an adagio aria, which must be very cantabile to show off to good advantage the voice, and delivery of the singer; in de capo the artist can then display her art in embellishing variations; then there must be an allegro aria with brilliant passages, a gallant aria, a duet for the first male singer and the prima donna. In these pieces the big forms of measure must be used so as to give pathos to the tragedy; the smaller forms of time, such as two-four and three-eight, are for the secondary roles, and for these a tempo minueto can be written. There must be the necessary changes of time, but minor keys must be avoided in the theater, because they are too mournful."

Efficiency.

The modern method of accomplishing two things at once in the performance of a man's household duties, was recently illustrated by a North Cambridge young man. This young man was industriously mowing the large lawn in front of his house by pushing a mower in front of him with the same industry he was giving his baby a ride by dragging the baby carriage behind him with the other hand.—Boston Journal.

"So you don't approve of those London suffragettes?"
"I don't know much about them," replied Miss Cayenne, "but I can't help feeling that a woman who can't subdue a few men without the use of dynamite is something of a failure."

Well, Why Not?
Mrs. Exe—I understand your daughter, Jessie, has changed her name to "Jessica."
Mrs. Wye—Yes.
Mrs. Exe—Well, I wish she hadn't. She's put the crazy notion into my girl Bessie's head to call herself "Bessica."—Boston Transcript.

THE FINEST IN THE STATE

Is the big modern plant recently purchased from the Booth Fisheries Co. by A. T. Washburne and located at foot of "Midway" on the bay shore, as a permanent home for the constantly increasing business in the manufacture of "Sanitary Rugs from old Carpets" (trade mark established 1869) in which life a trade has been successfully established all over the United States on the excellence of products. This also gives much needed room to the Carpet Cleaning and retinting department, which includes a large sterilizing abator for purifying rugs and carpets. The cleaning department is fully equipped with all modern and time saving machinery devices run by electricity. Two of the largest rotary renovating machines for general cleaning and a powerful Vacuum machine 100 per cent more powerful and efficient than the portable ones this latter is for fine rugs and orientals. This plant is also equipped with three machines for the sewing of carpets of all kinds in the most approved manner with flat elastic seams. APPLE RECIPES

DELICIOUS HEALTH-GIVING APPLE RECIPES EACH TESTED BY AN EXPERT IN DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

PART 4.

APPLE JAM.

Pare and cut apples into quarters, core and cut into rather thick slices; to every pound of apples add one pound of brown sugar, and to every five pounds of apples allow the thinly cut rinds and juice of four lemons and one-half pound of ginger root and one ounce of cloves. Let stand in a bowl until the following day; boil until the apples are a rich amber color and perfectly clear.

APPLE JONATHAN.

Peel and slice very thin four large or five small Greening apples; place in deep pudding dish or baking dish with two tablespoons cold water. Make batter of one-third cupful of butter, one large cupful of granulated sugar, two eggs beaten thoroughly, two large cupfuls flour, with four teaspoonfuls good baking powder and one teaspoonful salt sifted together, stirring well; then add flour. Blend the whole for five minutes, then pour over the apples; let stand five minutes before placing in oven; bake thirty minutes.

SAUCE FOR APPLE JONATHAN.

One and one-half cupfuls sweet milk, one tablespoonful butter, one-half cupful sugar, two tablespoonfuls corn starch, three heaping tablespoonfuls raspberry jam. Place milk in porcelain dish over fire, let boil slowly; mix butter, sugar and cornstarch together; add one-third cupful cold milk; mix until smooth, then stir slowly into the boiling milk; let boil five minutes, then remove from fire and add raspberry jam. To be served hot.—J. W. W., New York City.

JELLIED APPLES.

Peel, core and quarter two quarts of tart apples. Make a syrup of one and one-half pints of water and two cups of sugar; boil rapidly for ten minutes. Cook the apples gently, a few at a time, until they are tender and clear. Remove them with a skimmer and spread on a platter. When the last of the fruit has been cooked, add one-half package of gelatin which has been soaked in one-half cup of cold water for two hours, the juice of one lemon and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Set the sauce pan in cold water and stir until the mixture begins to thicken; drop the apples in and mix gently, turn into a mould and let harden. Serve with whipped cream.

JELLIED APPLES WITH ALMONDS.

Pare, core and quarter Golden Pippins, stew until soft and beat smooth. Make syrup by boiling a pound and a half of sugar and a pint of water for every two pounds of apples. Put the apple pulp and the juice of three lemons into the sprud and boil gently until stiff enough to drop heavily from the spoon. Pour into a wet mold and when cold turn into a serving dish. Stick blanched almonds into the jelly and surround with whipped cream.

APPLES, LEXINGTON STYLE.

Core and pare eight apple, rub with lemon and cut in halves and cook in a syrup until tender. Let them cool, then roll in sponge cake crumbs and cook in deep fat. Fill the centers with grated pineapple and currant jelly. Surround the apples with the syrup and serve.

APPLE LOAF.

Reserve epogeh bread dough to make a small loaf. Work thoroughly into it one tablespoon of butter, one-third cup of sugar, one-quarter of a teaspoon of cinnamon and two well-beaten eggs. Add flour to make a soft dough, knead lightly and let rise. Divide into three equal parts and roll each part to fit the pan. Lay one piece in a buttered pan, spread over it an inch layer of sour apples chopped fine. Pour over the apples a tablespoon of melted butter; cover with the second piece of dough and continue as before; brush the top with milk and let rise until very light. Steam for one hour, then place in a hot oven to brown lightly. Serve in slices with sugar and cream.

APPLES IN MAPLE SYRUP.

Cut eight apples in halves and remove the cores with a teaspoon, put into a baking pan with one cup of maple syrup and one and one-half cups water and two tablespoons of butter. Bake until the syrup is thick and serve with whipped cream.

APPLE MACEDOINE.

Cut a thick slice off the stem end of red apples, core and remove the pulp with a potato ball cutter. Cook one-half cup of sugar with one cup of water. Add clean rose geranium leaves and apple balls; cook until the balls are tender. When the syrup is cold, add the juice of one lemon and a couple of peaches sliced into small pieces. Fill the apple shells with the mixture and serve very cold as a first course at a luncheon.

APPLE MARMALADE.

Pare, core and cut into small pieces coarse-grained apples, allow a pound of sugar to each pound of apples. Add enough water to dissolve the sugar and boil until thick; add the apples and boil until tender; pass through colander; add the juice and grate rind of a lemon to every four pounds of fruit. Boil again until thick and put up in jars or glasses. Cover with paraffin. Crab apple marmalade may be made in the same way with the lemon omitted. When cold it should cut like cream cheese.

APPLE MERINGUE.

Two cups of steamed apple pulp, one-half cup of sugar, one teaspoon of butter, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon or nutmeg. Add the yolks of two eggs, slightly beaten, and one tablespoon of thick cream. Fill a deep pie tin lined with crust and bake without an upper crust. Make a meringue of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoons of sugar; brown in a very moderate oven.

APPLES WITH NUT STUFFING AND WHIPPED CREAM.

Scoop out apples and fill the shell with English walnuts and apple pulp mixed with mayonnaise; place in a circle on a large serving dish and heap whipped cream in the center.

APPLE OMELET—I.

To eight large apples stewed very soft and mashed fine add one cup of sugar and flavor with nutmeg or cinnamon. When cold stir in three well-beaten eggs and one-half tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in two tablespoons of milk. Stir well and bake slowly twenty minutes. Serve hot.

APPLE OMELET—II.

Separate four eggs; beat whites to a very stiff froth; then add the yolks and beat again, adding gradually two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Have ready an omelet pan, in which one tablespoon of butter has been melted; pour the egg mixture into the pan, and when it begins to thicken spread over it a layer of apple sauce. Fold, turn onto a hot platter and serve at once with powdered sugar.

OXFORD APPLES.

"It's The Best Polish I Ever Used"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

Don't imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of re-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use. Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself. It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It adheres to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine. Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years. Here is what some of the ladies write us.

"I sent you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly every one in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Tests you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid form—no dust. Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill. Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for ranges, heaters, radiators, stove pipes, etc. Frictionless rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Frictionless rusting. Glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.
