May Stewart

At the Temple Theatre Next Monday Evening.

The theatre goes of East Jordan anticipate with genuine pleasure the coming engagement of the distinguished artist, May Stewart and her excellent company at the Temple Theatre, Monday night August 3rd, in W. J. Gilbert's famous comedy—"The Sculptor's Dream."

Miss Stewart has been the most successful Shakespearean star of the younger class for the past few seasons and is now regarded by the critics as the most promising of the American stage.

For anything so unusual here—which promises to surpass all else in the history of the town—crowded house is predicted.

Miss Stewart has promised Manager Adams—to give one or two principal scenes from some Shakespearean play, in addition to the regular performance either before or afterwards—and the Shakespearean people may look forward to something quite different from what we have had here.

PENCIL DAY A SUCCESS

Pencils were sold on Friday, July 24, by a large committee of young people for the benefit of the poor in the care of the Michigan Child Welfare League. The office of this work is located at 1207 Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Michigan. The aim of the organization is to teach the people in all communities the value of social work to the community, the state and the nation. The work is state wide.

The League is working in the rural districts, organizing all communities to care for the poor in a systematic way and working with organized charity everywhere.

A great deal of praise is due to the boys and girls who worked so faithfully soliciting funds for this very worthy cause. The proceeds of the day amounted to sixty dollars.

Following is the list of the names of the young people who sold pencils and the amounts turned in by each:

Wise and Otherwise.

The heart is most sensitive to neglect when it is very young or very old.

Unfortunately some mothers-in-law forget that they were daughters-in-law.

The real sensible people we know are those whose opinions agree with our own.

There seems to be nothing new in vacation advice this year, merely the same old admonitions to look out for the drinking water and not to spend more than you can afford, neither of which anybody has the slightest intention of heeding.

On the Beach.

A maid, and a man
With a little of sand,
For most any girlie
Is perfectly grand.
And, putting in terse,
She asks which is worse—
The sand without man, or
The man without sand.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

Ernest C. Foster, who has played the newspaper game in all its phases—from devil in a country shop to responsible positions on large city papers, and who now is editor for a newspaper syndicate to which The Charlevoix County Herald belongs, has given us a couple of special articles on country and metropolitan papers. Following is his article on the "Country Paper."

All that is required to run a country newspaper is some kind of a printing press, a little type, and a lot of credit. With this equipment, it is almost as easy to run a country paper as it is to carry away a song book that belongs to the church. When anyone thinks he has the ability to extract a living from one these obstinate promises all he needs to do is open an office and the citizens with whom he has cast his lot will gladly tell how best to conduct his business. If he listens, apparently interested, to all of them, heeds none, eats little and wears less, he may succeed.

A country newspaper develops a wonderfully discerning mind for its publisher. He soon learns to tell just what his callers want the minute they step into his office. A station agent may merely stick his head into a country newspaper office, say hello and the publisher knows he has a shipment of paper at the depot and a bill of lading at the bank. If a minister calls, the country publisher knows preaching services are to be held as usual next Sunday, and that it will be alright for him to mention them in his paper. A woman visitor to the country newspaper office means a social is to be given soon, and that the publisher is to have the honor of making the first donation in the form of an advertisement in the paper and two dollars worth of hand-bills. Bankers, too, take up a great deal of the country publisher's time in explaining sight drafts in which the publisher is not at all interested. Two things the country publisher has never been able to figure out is, just what other people do with all the money he pays them and if the devil is going to be capable of taking care of all the people headed his way.

The country paper is made the target for a great deal of railery from its readers, but the publisher always knows that the fellow who ridicules it most is the farthest in arrears with his subscription and who creates the greatest furore if he misses a copy. Some times a country publisher determines he will make his paper interesting, even though it may be ungenial. But such a change of policy nearly always deprives the town of a paper. The widow is forced to sell the office to pay her husband's funeral expenses and the new proprietor seeks a more civilized community.

LESSON IN THRIFT

Guiseppe worded on the section gang till he had saved a few dollars. Then, he bought a push cart, an oil lamp, a paper and a small stock of necessary materials, paying cash down.

He pushed the cart himself, popped the corn himself and personally delivered it to his customers, payment on delivery. The profit he put back into the business or into the savings account.

Humble, yes; but safe and honest. For every nickle he took in he gave an open equivalent—you bought or left alone, but you were never fooled.

In time Guiseppe had saved enough to rent a store. Then he continued as he had begun, working, earning, saving. By and by he had two stores, and later three. Today Guiseppe is rich. Perhaps at a pinch he could show down with $50,000.

But every penny of it came as a direct result of his own industry, thrift and square dealing. He never borrowed, he never inflated, he never schemed to get rich quick; he just worked and saved and grew.

If Guiseppe, a "foreigner" could do that, wouldn't it be worth the while of a lot of natives to learn the same wholesome lesson?

Despair means the turning of one's back on the future.

If you have neglected your kidneys, and suffer from backache, weak back, headache, rheumatism and distressing bladder weakness, you will find Foley Kidney Pills to be honestly made, healing and curative medicine you need to give you back your health and strength. They are tonic in action, quick to give good results. They will help you. Hites Drug Store.

AUGUST

August is a month when men sweat and women perspire. Women keep from really sweating by dobbing their pores full of cosmetics. The little that does ooze through is then called perspiration. If really is, of course, old-fashion odoriferous sweat that has lost its distinctive qualities by being strained through an inch of scented enamel.

August is a hard month on kids and dogs. The barefoot kid has a hard time finding a place on either the ground or sidewalk that will not blister his feet, and every dog must be careful to not let his tongue be seen, for a dog with a tongue in August is a sure enough "mad dog" reeking with hydrophobia germs, and a bullet is coming his way. Then there are the August chautauquas too. Every town has a chautauqua in August. The chautauqua has had a record much like that of the newspaper when the first one was started everybody said the United States would never support two. Well, they are not supported as they should be, but every hamlet now has a newspaper, and if it doesn't have an annual chautauqua the inhabitants are wondering how they can get one. If all of the oratory that breaks loose on chautauqua platforms this month could be bound into one book, it probably would represent a collection of the world's worst literature.

The heated rays of August's sun will keep the ice men on the run. It gives a blush to orchard peach, but more to those upon the beach—to those it gives a darker pink that keeps our eye-lids on the blink, and white we like the orchard brand, we love the ones out on the sand.

SEEN IN A CEMETERY

Take a walk through the cemetery alone and you will pass the resting place of a man who looked into the muzzle of a gun to see if it was loaded. A little farther down the slope is a crank who tried to show how close he stand to a moving train while it passed in strolling about you will see the monument of the hired girl who tried to light the fire with kerosene, and a grass-covered knoll that covers the boy who tickled the mule's tail. That tall shaft over a man who blew out the gas casts a shadow over the boy who tried to get on a moving train. Side by side the pretty creature who always had her corset laced on the last hole, and the intelligent idiot who rode a bicycle nine miles in ten minutes, sleep unmolested. At repose is a doctor who took a dose of his own medicine. There with the top of a shoe box driven over his head is a rich old man who married a young wife. Away over there reposes a boy who went fishing on Sunday, and the woman who kept strychnine powders in the cupboard. The man who stood in front of the moving machine to oil the sickle is quiet now and rests beside the careless brakeman who fed himself to the 70-ton engine, and nearby may be seen the grave of the man who tried to whip the editor.

Love may be blind, but the girl's small brother sees things.

TEACH THEM THRIFT

Supt. Magill's recommendation regarding a system of school savings banks in the schools of Illinois ought to be adopted in every state. It may strike some folks as a trivial matter, but it spells big possibilities for the children. Habits of thrift, almost unconsciously acquired in youth, have been the foundation on which most successful business men have built.

The novelty of saving first appeals to the child. Later he learns how accumulation transforms the mite into the million. Along with this, he comes to understand his duty to his own future. He realizes why men "put by something for a rainy day." And having acquired the saving habit, he is pretty likely intelligently to plan for the period when responsibility will be thrown on his shoulders.

Thrift isn't a habit that is readily acquired late in life. Men who have to save after having formed extravagant habits, do so grudgingly and find saving a source of unhappiness. If they do not fail altogether, their thrift usually takes the form of stinginess and mean self-denial. The miser is usually a person who has cultivated nothing but a money-hoarding passion after the passing of his best days. There is no connection between thrift and miserly practices. They are as far apart as thrift and profligacy.

Teaching a child to conserve his pennies will not make a miser of him. On the other hand, it will endow him with a sense of ownership and of responsibility. No better instruction than that attending the cultivation of thrifty habits can be devised.

In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

In about 1885, when we shall have made our stake and can print a paper just as we please, our items will be more interesting. For instance:

Our readers will be sorry to hear that Mrs. Gab is improving in health.

Dan Labernet will now probably become a county charge, his wife having died last week.

No, we haven't bought our auto, yet. When we own a car we want to be able to pass anyone we choose without him feeling that he has an interest in it.

Mrs. Thrift informs us that one of her chickens is disappearing every week, and that she cannot account for it. Al Idle told us yesterday that he had eaten fried chicken every Sunday for a month.

Patched pants and soles shoes continue to look better to Ike Lofar than a day's work. Ike says the world owes him a living, and he apparently thinks his wife has a great deal to do with the obligation.

Bill Kredit says he doesn't blame any one for not going to church and sitting for an hour and a half in a hard pew. Bill's sense of feeling in that part of his anatomy must be keen to distinguish the church seats from his favorite loafing spot uptown.

And some women wear shoes too small because the right size is too large

Government To Co-Operate With Michigan Against Forest Fires

Government Appropriates $5,000 or More to Be Used in Paying Lookout Watchman.

Washington—A co-operative fire agreement, which has been entered into between the United States Department of Agriculture and the State of Michigan provides for an expenditure by the government of not to exceed $5,000 a year toward meeting the expenses of forest fire protection in Michigan.

This form of co-operation between the government and state is made possible by a law which congress passed in 1911, and which has already been taken advantage of by the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

$200,000 Appropriation.

The law, besides providing for the purchase by the government of lands on the headquarters of navigable rivers for the purpose of creating national forests to protect these rivers, appropriated $200,000 which the secretary of agriculture might expend to protect similar lands in state or private ownership from fire, in co-operation with the states. It was provided in the law that the federal expenditures in any state should not exceed the amount spent by the state itself in the co-operative work. Provisions for continuance of the work in the fiscal year which began July 1 has been made by an appropriation of $100,000 for the year. The original appropriation of $200,000 was available until expended, and with a supplementary $75,000 has carried the work to the present time.

Must Submit Plan.

The secretary of agriculture requires as a preliminary to co-operating with any state, that the state authorities should submit a definite plan showing in detail exactly what it is proposed to do. With these plans are required maps showing areas to which protection should be given. These areas must be actually on the watersheds of navigable streams, and the plans of protection well conceived and thoroughly practical, with an organized system of administration by state officers.

The amount spent yearly in any one state by the government is limited to $10,000. It is used solely for paying lookout watchmen or patrolmen. The state officials select these men, subject to the approval of the Department of Agriculture. The maps submitted to the government show where each of the men will be located, the approximate route of patrol, and all features necessary to a clear understanding of the state's plan of fire control, including the location of lookout stations, telephone lines, headquarters of state fire wardens, and the like.

Responsibility on State.

Under the terms of the co-operative agreements, the secretary of agriculture may terminate the co-operation at any time that he finds it is not to be conducted in a satisfactory manner. In this way the responsibility for organizing and maintaining the work is placed upon the state which, however, must keep its system up to a good standard of efficiency in order to have the co-operation with the government continued. Forestry officials of the department of agriculture act as inspectors to keep the department informed as to how the states are handling the work. Under this plan a great advance has been made in the development of efficient state systems of fire protection.

CAMPAIGN TO IMPROVE POTATO CROP IN MICHIGAN

Three Specialists Will Come and Work With State Workers in August.

East Lansing—The recently inaugurated statewide campaign for the improvement of the Michigan potato crop will in August receive support from the federal department of agriculture, which has announced to M. A. C. authorities that three specialists will arrive here next month to join with Michigan workers in the grappling of the tuber problem. One of the specialists with the federal party will be Geheimrat D. Appel of Berlin, Europe's leading authority upon potato diseases. The other government experts will be W. A. Orton, pathologist in charge of cotton and truck diseases and sugar plant investigations and William Stuart, potato specialist for the department of agriculture at Washington. They will be joined by Prof. George W. Coons, Michigan's plant pathologist, and C. W. Waid, secretary of the Michigan Potato Growers' association.

All five men will tour this state. On August 15 they will make a general inspection of the potato growing districts of southwestern Michigan, on August 16 they will go north and on August 17 and 18 they will visit Houghton and other points in northern Michigan.

According to word received at M. A. C. from Washington, the purpose of the trip will be to promote the breeding of new productive and disease resistant varieties, the production of improved strains of standard varieties for seed purposes, the elimination of diseases that are carried by seed potatoes and the introduction of an official system of seed inspection and certification with adequate standards and safeguards.

The specialists will do their work in the fields. Visits will be made to the field stations of the department of agriculture, to the state experiment stations and to farmers and seed growers.

THOUSANDS OF POUNDS OF BEEF, BACON AND BREAD BOUGHT FOR MILITIAMEN.

The State Journal says: "Plans are practically completed for the annual encampment of the Michigan National guard which opens at the new Graying site August 3. This will be the first encampment of the state military in two years. Just as the boys were about to start for camp last year they were sent to the copper country to preserve order during the strike and the idea of a summer encampment was abandoned.

Instead of mobilizing the entire guard at Graying at one time, the men will assemble in three detachments. The second infantry, Company A of the signal corps and Company A of the engineers, will reach the state camp site August 3. The two batteries of artillery will not leave Lansing until August 21.

Quartermaster General Walter Rogers, whose duty it is to look after the transportation and to purchase the rations for the men and horses, announced that everything is in readiness. He has just returned from the Graying site where a force of men have been at work erecting stables, building roads and installing a water system. Major Rogers is enthusiastic over the site presented to the state by Rasmus Hansen and he pronounces it one of the best in the country.

Contracts have been made for the following rations for the men and horses to be delivered at Graying during the encampment: 24,000 pounds of fresh beef, 25,000 pounds of bacon, 14,000 pounds of bread, 500 pounds of flour, 2,500 pounds of beans, 24,000 pounds of potatoes, 1,000 pound of prunes, 450 pounds of sugar, 28 gallons of vinegar, 56 gallons of pickles, 850 pounds of salt, 50 pound of pepper, 900 000 pounds of oats. Rogers has also pounds of soap, 360 pounds of candles, 50 pounds of baking powder, 550 pounds of rice, 900 cases of milk, 600 pounds of lard, two cases of matches, 40 tons of straw, 40 tons of hay, 50,000 pounds of oat. Rogers has also contracted for three barrels of kerosene oil, 12 barrels of gasoline and 20 barrels of crude oil.

Over 200,000 Farms In State Of Michigan

KENT COUNTY LEADS WITH 6,270

Statistics Given Out at M. A. C. After Systematic Study of Last Census.

East Lansing—Michigan has 206,960 farms, according to figures upon Michigan as an agricultural state, which have been compiled at M. A. C. This fact, and others bearing upon farm conditions in the state, has been brought out as the result of a systematic study of the last census, made at the college during the past several months. Kent county, in the number of farms at least, is credited with being the leading agricultural district. Kent county has 6,276 farms, while Allegan, with 6,217 farms, ranks second. Sanilac, with 5,659 farms, places third and Saginaw stands fourth with a total of 5,370. This leadership, however, refers only to the number of farms and not to their value, figures upon the latter and other points are expected to be given out later.

STATE ASSESSMENT JUMPS TO $2,700,000 THIS YEAR

Lansing—Secretary Burtless of the state tax commission is authority for the statement that the approximate assessed valuation of the state this year, to be submitted to the state board of equalization by the tax commission, will be $2,700,000. This is $874,856,958 higher than in 1911, when the last state equalization was made. The state was assessed at $2,345,695,709 in 1912.

Chairman Barnes of the commission says the state will be assessed by the close of the year at nearly cash value or as near as the supervisors can make it under present conditions.

Detroit—Sudden recovery of speech by J. Kisselo, the "silent man" of St. Mary's hospital, was responsible for his commitment to the state hospital at Pontiac. According to St. Mary's hospital physicians, Kisselo was suffering loss of his vocal powers during the two weeks he was a patient. When he thought he was unobserved by nurses and attendants the "silent man" was caught talking with a fellow patient. Physicians who then conversed with him came to the conclusion that he was mentally unbalanced and application was made to the probate court for his commitment to the state institution, which was granted.

Perry—Mrs. William Place, who lives three miles west of Perry, while in a demented condition, set fire to her home, and the building and contents were destroyed. She said the house was full of snakes and she wanted to burn them. Mrs. Place was taken to Coruna to be examined before Judge Bush of the probate court as to her sanity.

East Lansing—"Russia is a land of opportunity for young men trained in the science of agriculture"—this is the message which a commission of five Russian agricultural experts brought to M. A. C. The representatives of the European empire are here for a tour of the state college and to study Michigan methods of scientific farming.

Dowagiac—Announcement was made Wednesday that Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Lee will erect and present to the city a hospital costing approximately $50,000. The institution is to be named in memory of Mary Beckwith Lee, daughter of Mr. Lee, who died several years ago. It is understood that the gift will carry with it provisions for a number of free beds.

Lansing—A value of $100.80 was placed on the fore part of a man's index finger by the state industrial accident board. The ruling was made when the board decided that Stephen Balzi, who injured an index finger while in the employ of the Thomas Forem Lumber company, Detroit was entitled to that amount. Since the accident, Balzi has not had control of the upper half of his finger, it was brought out.

State Official Efforts To Secure Farm Workers Appreciated By Farmers

Lansing—Secretary A. C. Carton of the public domain commission finds that the farmers of Michigan appreciate the efforts of the public domain commission in assisting them to secure desirable farm laborers and the new plan inaugurated by Secretary Carton and Chairman Frederick C. Martindale several months ago is working out in a most satisfactory manner.

Secretary Carton is sending to farmers in various parts of the state the following letter: "The public domain commission and immigration commission of Michigan is desirous of assisting the farmers as far as possible, in procuring farm laborers to work upon the farms of this state. With this object in view we have a special representative of the Michigan immigration department located at the port of entry, in the city of New York, for the purpose of directing desirable immigrants from the rural districts of Europe to the farms of Michigan.

"Our great industrial activities in the cities during the last two decades have made heavy drafts upon the rural districts and the drift of labor has been from the country towards the cities. To us, in addition to the fact that a great many of our young men and women have left the rural districts and gone to the manufacturing centers, has left the rural districts without the labor necessary to produce the agricultural products the land is capable of producing. This shifting of our population whereby the consumers have increased out of proportion to the producers, is the main reason for the high cost of living.

"With all the talk about the farmer's great prosperity, I am thoroughly convinced that the farmer, even with hand's wife are desired, giving the wages to be paid in all cases. The hours of labor and a declaration as to whether the position is of a permanent nature must be stated.

Replies are forwarded to the Michigan immigration at New York and he gets into direct communication with a farmer in need of help whenever desirable applicants are available. Many farmers have benefited by this plan which costs them nothing and it is expected to develop into one of the big features of the work of the public domain and immigration bureaus.

M. A. C. WILL NOT EXHIBIT AT THE FAIR

East Lansing—No aid will be given state or county fairs this fall by the Michigan Agricultural college, according to an announcement made today by Secretary A. M. Brown of the state board of agriculture and Robert J. Baldwin, superintendent of the farm extension department at M. A. C. The college's straitened financial condition, it was explained, has made necessary the cutting out of all expenditures except those required for the upkeep of the college and important work among the farmers.

The declaration means that M. A. C. will enter no exhibits this season in the big fairs at Detroit and Grand Rapids, or in the smaller district fairs such as those planned for Traverse city, Cadillac, Howell and other Michigan towns.

There have already been indications that the proposed action by the college will be met with resentment, but the cutting down of the institution's income by the supreme court has made entrenchment absolutely necessary, the college officials say.

Houghton—Edward Hollana of Chassel saved Miss Mabel Hutching and Miss Mabel Gross of that village from drowning in Portage lake. The girls were swimming and Miss Gross was seized with cramps. Her friend went to her aid, and the struggling girl pulled the other down with her. The cries of Miss Hutching brought Hollana.

Government To Co-Operate With Michigan Against Forest Fires

Government Appropriates $5,000,000 More to Be Used in Paying Lookout Watchmen.

Washington.—A co-operative agreement, which has been entered into between the United States Department of Agriculture and the State of Michigan provides for an expenditure by the government of not to exceed $5,000,000 a year toward meeting the expenses of forest fire protection in Michigan.

This form of co-operation between the government and state, as made possible by a law which congress passed in 1911, and which has already been taken advantage of by the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

$200,000 Appropriation.

The law, besides providing for the purchase by the government of lands on the headquarters of navigable rivers for the purpose of creating national forests to protect these rivers, appropriated $200,000 which is to be used to employ lookouts on private ownership from time to time in co-operation with the states. It was provided in the law that the federal expenditures in any state should not exceed the amount spent by the state itself in the co-operative work. Provisions for continuance of the work in the fiscal year when budget day has been made by an appropriation of $100,000 for the year. The original appropriation of $200,000 was available until expended, and $100,000 supplementary $100,000 has been carried over to the present year.

on the waterbeds of navigable streams, and the plans of protection well conceived and thoroughly practical, with an organized system of administration by state officers.

The amount spent yearly in any one state by the government is limited to $100,000. It is used solely for paying lookout watchmen or patrolmen. The state officials select these men, subject to the approval of the Department of Agriculture. The maps submitted to the government show where each of the men will be located, the approximate route of patrol, and all features necessary to a clear understanding of the state's plan of fire control, including the location of lookout stations, telephone lines, headquarters of state fire wardens, and the like.

Responsibility on State.

Under the terms of the co-operative agreement, the secretary of agriculture may terminate the co-operation at any time that he finds it not to be conducted in a satisfactory manner. In this way, the responsibility for organizing and maintaining the work is placed upon the state which, however, must keep its system up to a good standard of efficiency in order to have the co-operation with the government continued. Forestry officials of the department of agriculture act as inspectors to keep the department informed as to how the state is handling the work. Under this plan a great advance has been made in the development of efficient state systems of fire protection.

CAMPAIN TO IMPROVE POTATO CROP IN MICHIGAN

Three Specialists Will Come and Work With State Workers in August.

East Lansing.—The recently inaugurated campaign for the improvement of the Michigan potato crop will receive special support from the federal department of agriculture. Three specialists will be sent to Michigan in August to work with state workers in the potato fields.

THOUSANDS OF POUNDS OF BEEF, BACON AND BREAD BOUGHT FOR MILITAMEN.

The State Journal says: "Plans are practically completed for the annual encampment of the Michigan National guard which opens at the new Grayling site August 3. This will be the first encampment of the state military in two years. Just as the boys were about to start for camp last year they were sent to the copper country to preserve order during the strike and the idea of a summer encampment was abandoned.

Instead of mobilizing the entire guard at Grayling at one time, the men will assemble in three detachments. The second infantry, Company A of the signal corps and Company A of the engineers, will reach the state camp site August 3. The two batteries of artillery will not leave Lansing until August 21.

Quartermaster General Walter Rogers, whose duty it is to look after the transportation and to purchase the rations for the men and horses, announced that everything is in readiness. He has just returned from the Grayling site where a force of men have been at work erecting stables, building roads and installing a water system. Major Rogers is enthusiastic over the site presented to the state by Rasmus Hansen and he pronounces it one of the best in the country.

Contracts have been made for the following rations for the men and horses to be delivered at Grayling during the encampment: 24,000 pounds of fresh beef, 25,000 pounds of bacon, 41,000 pounds of bread, 300 pounds of flour, 2,500 pounds of beans, 24,000 pounds of potatoes, 1,500 pounds of grapes, 450 pounds of sugar, 28 gallons of vinegar, 50 gallons of apples, 850 pounds of salt, 50 pounds of pepper, 900 pounds of oats, Rogers has also pounds of soap, 150 pounds of candles, 70 pounds of heating powder, 550 pounds of rice, 900 cans of milk, 600 pounds of lard, two cases of matches, 4000 pounds of straw, 40,000 pounds of hay, 50,000 pounds of oats. Rogers has also contracted for four barrels of kerosene, 12 barrels of soda, 12 barrels of kerosene.

Statistics Given Out at M. A. C. After Systematic Study of Last Census.

East Lansing.—Michigan has 206,960 farms, according to figures upon Michigan as an agricultural state, which have been compiled at M. A. C. This fact, and others bearing upon farm conditions in the state, has been brought out as the result of a systematic study of the last census, made at the college during the past several months. ## STATE ASSESSMENT JUMP TO $2,700,000 THIS YEAR

Lansing.—Secretary Barnes of the state tax commission is authority for the statement that the approximate assessed valuation of the state this year, to be submitted to the state board of equalization by the tax commission, will be $2,700,000. This is $874,856,958 higher than in 1911, when the last state equalization was made. The state was assessed at $2,445,695,709 in 1912.

Chairman Barnes of the commission says the state will be assessed by the close of the year at nearly cash value, or as near as the supervisors can make it under present conditions.

State Official Efforts To Secure Farm Workers Appreciated By Farmers

Lansing.—Secretary A. C. Cartwright, in a public domain commission report, has commended the efforts of the public domain commission in assisting in securing desirable farm laborers and the work done by Secretary Cartwright and Chairman Frederick C. Marble several months ago in working out in a most satisfactory manner.

Secretary Cartwright is sending to farmers in various parts of the state the following letter: "The public domain commission and immigration commission of Michigan is desirous of assisting the farmers as far as possible in procuring farm laborers to work upon the farms of this state. With this object in view we have a special representative of the Michigan Immigration department located at the port of entry, in the city of New York, for the purpose of directing desirable immigrants from the rural districts of Europe to the farms of Michigan.

"Our great industrial activities in the cities during the last two decades have made heavy drafts upon the rural districts and the drift of labor has been from the country toward the cities. This, in addition to the fact that a great many of our young men and women have left the rural districts and gone to the manufacturing centers, has left the rural districts without the labor necessary to produce the agricultural products the land is capable of producing. This shifting of our population whereby the consumers have increased out of proportion to the producers, is the main reason for the high cost of living.

"With all the talk about the farmer's great prosperity, I am thoroughly convinced that the farmer, even with the present prices, is not making as much money, or as much as he should. I am also convinced that it costs the farmer 50 per cent more to produce an article today than it did 15 years ago. A way must be found to reduce the high cost of living and the high cost of living at the expense of the producer, will be a blow at the root of the whole industrial situation of this country.

The net annual income of the farmer, which represents his purchasing power, must be preserved, in order that the industrial activities of the city may continue. The greater the prosperity of the rural districts, the greater the prosperity of the urban. The country needs the city and the city needs the country.

"The efforts of the Michigan immigration department will be directed along the line of assisting the rural districts in obtaining a larger production by supplying farm labor to help do the producing. In this way it is hoped that the prosperity of the farmer will be increased and the prosperity of the country as a whole.

"There are about 196,000 farms in Michigan, half of which hire help. This would make 98,000 farms in the state upon which help is needed. The best statistics available show that there is only about one-half enough farm labor obtainable in this country, and if this is true we can use 49,000 good, honest, industrious farm laborers helping the farmer of this state which would have a great effect upon the prosperity of the rural districts."

Sam And The Smoothing Process

One evening Sam came in from No. 6 tired and dirty, but with a new light in his eye. He took the harness off from his faithful horse, and then took them one by one, under the shade of an apple tree, and washed out their mouths, bathed their faces, and washed off the sweat stains and dust which had gathered during the day's work. The horses seemed to notice that there was a change in Sam, for he no longer spoke crossly, or swore at them he did not jerk on the reins, nor strike them with the whip, and they often received little caresses, which they had never known before Sam came to the Sand Farm.

They responded to his loving treatment by better work, less false moves, and every now and then a look from their great eyes which made Sam feel that they were his friends.

It was Saturday night, and Sam was glad that he had gotten through plowing No. 6 a little early, and could clean up before supper. With the horses bathed and in their stalls with a good supper, his supper would taste better, but the real joy in his heart was that he could tell the Sand Farmer that he had stuck to his job until he had finished it, and although there might be regrets for the hours he had wasted on the cracker barrels at Mr. Brown's store, and his heart was sore as he sometimes thought of what he might have done for his mother, there was an exultation within him tonight, for he had been thinking of the Sand Farmer's words about the shelter of a mighty rock in a weary land, and how it was only those who work hard and get weary, that can enjoy that shelter.

Sam was beginning to realize that he was working with God while plowing No. 6. It was hard work, but didn't God work hard? He had always thought that God was so powerful that it was easy for Him to do great things, but the Sand Farmer had said that even God could not make a man love Him if he would not, although He tried mightily hard, and kept right on trying right up to the end. God was trying to make the world better, to feed the children, and God was working through him when he was plowing No. 6. It made the work different, for he was now in partnership with God, and they were working together for God's children. He had once been proud of his great muscles, and of the fact that he was the strongest man in the township, but now he was beginning to realize the words that the Sand Farmer had read at the family prayers: "And what is man that thou art mindful of him?" He had been reading about the stars, and all the great things that the writer had been talking about, and man seemed mighty small all alone by himself, but tonight there was a new company formed, and from this on the name of the company should be God & Sam, for they were to be partners.

After supper Sam sat on the porch with the Sand Farmer. The birds were singing their evening songs, and the peaceful glow of the evening sunset cast its magic spell over all who had eyes to see and ears to hear.

"I have something to tell you," said Sam, as he turned to the Sand Farmer. "I have finished No. 6 today, and started a new partnership."

"What's that?" said the Sand Farmer. "I have finished plowing No. 6," repeated Sam, "and I have gone into a new company, which is to be known from this on as God & Sam."

"Glad to hear it," replied the Sand Farmer, as he reached his hand to take the young giant's. "I suppose that means you are going to church with me tomorrow."

"That's just what it does," said Sam. "I may not know just what to do for us as perhaps you know, I have never held down very many seats in church, but I got to thinking that if God was working so mightily hard for us, and we are, as you say, his children, it is just about time that I get busy doing something for Him. I have not forgotten that story you told the boys up at the church about those cars of corn. I knew then that I was a white nubbins, and I have been trying to grow into something better, and I can't see how I can work with God successfully and do it all on the farm. If He has had anything to do with building the church, where the people who are now trying to serve Him meet and worship, I guess that this junior partner had better take a little interest in the firm's business, and it won't make any difference whether the boys over to the store laugh at me or not, I am going to get into the firing line on this warfare."

"It is easier, as you say, to rush into the battle and die, than it is to live and work as I have been doing out on No. 6, but this junior partner has gone into the concern to stay."

"I would like to know just a little about what you are going to do with No. 6 next Monday, so I can be thinking about it, and not have to waste any time Monday morning."

"The next thing to do," said the Sand Farmer, "is to take the cutaway discs and go after that rough plowing until it is cut up, as best you can. Follow the furrows around twice, then take it diagonally from corner to corner, and then straight across. Take it easy, for it will be hard on the horses, and hard on you, but not so hard as plowing."

"After it is disced put on the roller, and roll it hard. I want to press that sod down so the capillary waters will come through it, and feed the vetch and rye."

There were a few moments' silence, when both men were quietly thinking. Sam was wondering if the discs were sharp enough to cut the old, tough roots and how much the harrow and roller would jump around going over that rough land. The Sand Farmer was thinking how life's plow had gone over his life, and the roller of adversity and the harrow of ridicule had smoothed out the rebellion, and gotten him down to real life where he could sympathize with the poor and ignorant, and rejoice with the rich in their refinement or luxury.

"Sam," said the Sand Farmer, "I was very glad to hear you say you had chosen God for your partner in life, for you cannot live without Him. You may raise large crops, or become rich, but you would find that life is not made of worldly possessions, nor does all the good or bad which men say about you make life. The Master said: 'I came that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly.' Do you suppose He meant what we hear of sometimes as 'high life'?"

"Hardly that," said Sam. "Did He mean wealth and power, like the Czar of Russia, or William of Germany have?"

"If He did, He was not thinking much about some of us," said Sam. "Just what do you think He meant by 'life'?" asked the Sand Farmer.

"I don't know as I can tell exactly," replied Sam, thoughtfully, "but I have been thinking about the old life I lived before I heard you tell that story about the ears of corn. That Boston chap had a good education, a good home, and all the money he could spend, but sometimes I feel as though I would like to kick him for being so stingy and refusing to help that young man go to China as a medical missionary, to heal those poor, suffering women and children. I have sometimes wondered if in the next life, when he knows as he is known, he will recognize those poor little blind souls who might have seen if that young man could have gone to teach their mothers how to care for them, and if when they see him their little fingers will point him out to all the host of heaven, as they say: 'That is the man who made us blind, and kept us in darkness.' Will he not want to hide his face for shame, and will not those who in this life thought he had all that could be desired wish to get away from him as they would a leper? He could not take his money with him, and he must have entered into life empty handed. It makes me shudder to think about it, but all at once the question came to me, Sam, what have you to take over yonder? All I could think of was sending Mother away for a little rest, and plowing No. 6."

"I had been thinking how I would like to kick that Boston man, but now the thought was up to me, and I just stopped the team and knelt down in those furrows, and I said: 'Oh, God, I am just as mean as he is. I have not done as much, for all I have ever done that you could call decent was sending Ma away, and this here plowing, but I want to do something. I want to be a man and live so I can help some of those little children.' I do not care what you give me to do, but just let me work with you, to make this old world a little better place to live in, Amen."

"When I got up I felt differently. I wasn't learning to plow so I could make more money on my farm, but I was working with God, to make His world a better place for His children, and we were partners. That is as near life as I can make it out just now; at any rate, it suits me, and I am going to join your King's Union."

"Good," cried the Sand Farmer. "I had rather have you say that than have you give me a thousand dollars." "Glad I can do something for you," replied Sam, "for you have done a lot for me. I will just tell my partner that I have got three things now."

"I am glad that you can talk to your Heavenly Father," said the Sand Farmer, "for the time will come to you, as it does to all, when you will need His comfort and advice. Life's plowshare will some time turn your plans up-side down, and the dear ones you have loved so well, and for whom you want to do so much, will be taken from you, and your aching heart will either rebel against the Loving Father, who can see the end from the beginning, and knows what is best, or you will just want to put your hand in His and let Him lead. After you have plodded on for years, and gathered a few dollars which you think will care for you in your old age, some sudden disaster, or the treachery of someone you have trusted, may sweep it all away and you will feel discouraged, or vindictive, until you realize that the cattle on a thousand hills are His, who has called us all His children, and also notes the sparrow's fall as well as our needs."

"The discs which may cut open your life may be making your life fit for life's seed, and the roller which seemed to crush out your life you will find was in reality only pressing you nearer to the loving Father's heart. In our sorrow and affliction we learn to love as He loves, and in His joy we find life. Our Heavenly Father is happy tonight because one of His sons has repented, and come back to His today."

"Do you mean it?" cried Sam. "I never thought of it that way. I was just joining the firm, and I didn't think about the firm caring much about my joining."

"We do not know how near the Father's House, and our loved ones, may be," said the Sand Farmer, "and sometimes my dear ones there are as near to me as the dear boys upstairs in their beds. When I see a boy the age of my Ted, I think what he would have been had he lived, and when I help a boy get an education I am doing it because I think my boys would like to have me do it, and this brings us very near together, and teaches me the meaning of the Master's words: 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

The boys were in bed, and all was quiet except the music of an old hymn which Mother was playing on the piano because she knew the "Sand Farmer" loved the old melodies, to close the labor of the week, and then she began to sing:

Abide with me! Fast falls the evening;
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide.
When other helpers fail, and comforts
Forts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me.

"Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay in all around I see;
O Thou who changeest not, abide with me.

"I need Thy presence every passing hour;
What but Thy grace can foil the tempter's power?
Who, like thyself, my guide and stay can be?
Through cloud and sunshine, Lord, abide with me.

"I fear no foe, with Thee at hand to bless;
Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.
Where is Death's sting? Where is Grave, thy victory?
I triumph still, if Thou abide with me.

"Hold Thou Thy cross before my closing eyes;
Shine through the gloom, and point me to the skies;
Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;
In life, in death, O Lord, abide with me."

As the last note died away in the distant echo, the two men on the porch rose, and each extended his hand to the other, but the only word of parting was a fervent, "Amen."

Keep the feed troughs clean and sweet.

A fat hen is queen on the market—make her so.

Good care and right treatment will even make the common chick more productive.

When you whitewash put in a little carbolic acid, it purifies, and it is deadly to all vermin or insects.

If eggs are the object, choose your layers from the best laying strains—not highest scoring.

Utility does not mean mongrelism, but breeding with the object point, "better poultry for eggs and meat."

Gapes come largely from little chicks being exposed to cold and damp weather, allowing the chicks to have free range during such weather.

It may mean a lot of trouble, but it will pay you to drive the chicks under shelter when you see a storm approaching.

The moment a fowl or chick is discovered ill remove to separate and dry quarters, no matter how slight the ailment.

There is danger now of vermin getting in their work, no matter how careful you may be. Keep up a constant fight.

If you are through hatching, separate the sexes, the hens will do much better now without the attention of a male.

A turkey hen will lay from twenty to twenty-seven eggs at a clutch when she becomes broody. She may then be shut in a room, well-ventilated coop and fed well for three or four days, then liberated.

The largest tree in the United States is said to be the "Mother of the Forest," a giant redwood in the Calaveras big tree grove in California. It is supposed to contain 140,619 board feet of lumber. There are, however, many claimants for the honor of being the "largest tree" and the "oldest tree," and these claims, according to foresters, cannot always be verified.

Canning Corn On And Off The Cob

A Seasonable And Economical Recipe

Washington, D. C.—The following seasonable recipes for the canning of corn have proven both practical and economical for the housewife. The recipes have been worked out in the department's canning kitchen and the products tested for nearly two years. These recipes have been used in connection with the five different types of canning devices and the corn has been put up in all types of containers, such as glass top, screw top, suction top and tin cans. The method employed is the cold-pack method, the same as is now being used in the best commercial factories of the world, instead of requiring the laborious and tedious method of fractional sterilization of an hour each day for three consecutive days and the lifting of the products in and out of the canning device three times. The method now employed contemplates but one sterilization and turns out the product in better shape, with better color, texture and flavor than the fractional sterilization method. By following these recipes and method the family can have corn, either on or off the cob, throughout the year at a very reasonable expense of time, energy and money.

Corn Off The Cob.
Select sweet corn ears of uniform size and proper ripeness. If too ripe the corn will color while processing. (Processing is the canning term for sterilization or cooking.) If not ripe enough much of the food value is lost in cutting the corn from the cob. Use either glass jars or tin cans. For market purposes and greater safety in transportation, use tin cans.

Remove husk, silk, shank, tips and injured or defective places. Blanch corn in boiling water or steam chest for from five to ten minutes. The time depends upon the stage of ripeness, size of ears, and degree of freshness. Remove the ears and plunge quickly in cold water.

Cut the corn from the cob with a sharp, thin-bladed knife. Pack well in glass jar or tin can; add hot water and a level teaspoon of salt to the quart or No. 3 can. Place rubber and glass jar top in place, not tight. If using tin, solder cap in place and fill vent hole, or seal completely. Process the corn from 180 to 240 minutes in the home-made or hot-water commercial bath outfits; for 1 1/2 hours in the water-seal outfits; for 60 minutes when using from 5 to 10 pounds of steam pressure, with the steam-pressure canning devices, and 40 minutes when using the aluminum steam pressure-cooker outfit. After processing remove the jars, tighten covers, invert to test the joints and cool.

If using tin, inspect the soldered end caps for pin-hole leaks. Repair all leaks, allow to stand for 24 hours. If cans are still bulging at ends at the end of this time, one of two things is true—the pack is too full, or some live spores are still left in the can. If the latter, replace in sterilizer and process the second time from 30 minutes to one hour.

Canning Sweet Corn on the Cob.
Blanch in boiling water five to ten minutes, according to ripeness, size and freshness; plunge quickly in cold water. Pack, alternating butts and tips; add just a little boiling water and one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Place rubber and top and partially tighten. (Can and tip tins). Process 180 to 240 minutes in hot water bath, 1 1/2 hours, water seal outfit; 60 minutes under five or more pounds of steam; 40 minutes in aluminum pressure cooker. Remove jars, tighten covers, invert and cool. (Heat up for table use in steamer, not in water. If corn seems flat or water-logged, it has been over-cooked or allowed to stand in too much water.)

Use one or two quart glass jars if not needed for other products. Quart jars will hold two ears; two quart jars will hold from three to five ears, according to size of ear. Do not can large ears. Half-gallon or gallon tin cans with large openings should be used in the canning of ear corn when little glass jars are not available. Gallon tin cans will hold from six to twelve ears. They should be graded to uniform size.

In high altitudes, 4,000 feet and over, it will be necessary to increase the time requirements in the canning of sweet corn about 25%, if water boils at about 202 degrees Fahrenheit and even less.

In the average home a large number of glass jars are idle every year. The use of these idle jars is recommended, but if none are available, the most economical and practical containers are the half-gallon and the gallon tin can.

The gallon tin cans, including soldered-hemmed caps, will cost about six cents apiece, but they will hold six to twelve ears of corn, which is enough for a good-sized family. If the corn is removed from can and steamed for a few minutes, it cannot be distinguished from the sweet corn removed from the husk in midsummer. The corn can be heated in the container before opening to serve.

An ear of sweet corn on the average dining car and hotel a la carte service costs 25 cents. Considering this, canning corn on the cob for the market might prove a very profitable investment for a thrifty housekeeper and bring to her considerable pin-money.

One advantage of sweet corn canned on the cob over other canned corn, is that all the best food values are kept with the cob. In cutting corn off, the germ quality of the kernel, which keeps up its standard, is usually lost. This germ quality is the part of the corn that is sought by rats and mice when they look for food in the corn bin, and is the most vital part. Much of the corn is also rendered mushy when it is cut from the cob.

In regard to the container for corn on the cob, it might be mentioned that for advertising and exhibition purposes, glass is much more satisfactory than the tin can, but if corn on the cob were to be put up in large quantities as a business venture, the glass would not be practical, being too expensive, but the tin can would prove quite satisfactory.

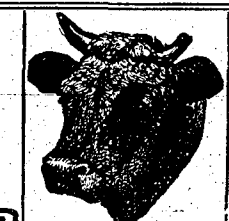

A WESTERN MICHIGAN ALFALFA FIELD ONE YEAR OLD.

During the past year alfalfa campaigns have been conducted in thirteen of the twenty Western Michigan counties. Campaigns will be held in some of the remaining counties before the close of the present season. In 1910 Michigan ranked 29th among the states of the Union in the matter of alfalfa raising. Its total area in alfalfa at that time was but a little over one thousand acres. Now it is safe to estimate the alfalfa acreage is twenty times the former figure.

Keeping Up Soil Fertility

People who are not familiar with the experience of New England farmers can not comprehend the true importance of the great question of soil fertility. Of course not all eastern farms are incapable of producing profitable crops but all farms which have not been properly cared for in that section of the country are. The only reason why the farms of this section of the country are not in a condition of unproductiveness is because they have not been abused long enough. Probably they never will be in that condition but if such proves to be the case it will not be because of their great fertility. It will be because the tillers of these farms will have retained the fertility of the soil instead of entirely decreasing it.

How To Enjoy The Confidence Of Our Neighbors

A man's influence in a community is just what he chooses to make it. He can gain the confidence of his neighbors or he can so conduct himself that he never gains that confidence. Confidence and influence are inseparable companions. Without the first the latter is impossible. It is the wish of every man, with red blood in his veins, to enjoy influence among his acquaintances. Lasting influence is only gained by confidence based on a creditable record as a citizen. Being a "good fellow" for instance, at the expense of character does not result in a lasting influence. Paying one's debts and dealing absolutely honestly with one's neighbors is a far better way to establish confidence. When we have established that confidence we can use our influence for the promotion of the best interests of the community and the industry in which we are engaged. As dairymen we can work and talk for more and better cows. We will succeed in accomplishing both to the degree we enjoy the confidence of our neighbors.

Unlooked for Humor.

"Where we went last night," said a frequenter of moving picture shows, "there was a scene in one of the films showing a man and a girl, young lovers, kissing. She was a pretty girl and he was a fine, manly young fellow, and of course everybody was deeply interested in the picture. But at the precise instant that the lovers' lips met some man in the audience exploded with a gigantic sneeze, whereat the whole house blew up with spontaneous hilarious laughter. "In this picture scene there was a third figure, that of a man who had seen the lovers meeting and who when he saw them kiss turned away from them to smile. He was, to be sure, smiling over the lovers; but as he looked out on the house at this moment with that smile on his face he seemed like a real man smiling in appreciative understanding of what had just happened in the audience. At the sight of his smiling face the audience again blew up. But, of course, the pictures kept on moving all the time, and in half a minute the audience had once more settled down to look on again at the pictures in the usual quiet."—New York Sun.

What It Would Say.

Lord Sudeley told us an amusing story the other day. He was impressing on us how useless it was to set ill trained teachers to educate children. A schoolmaster had taken his class into some public gardens, he said, and he brought them to a halt beneath a certain spreading tree. His botanical knowledge was small, but that did not stop him from improving the occasion by a botany lesson. "This is a beautiful old elm," he said, and he drew the children's attention to its peculiarities, ending up by speaking of the people who in ages past had rested in its shade. "I wonder," he added, "what this old elm would say if it could speak?" Unfortunately for the schoolmaster, a botanist who happened to be passing overheard his little lecture and promptly replied: "It would speak, your old elm would simply say, 'Sir, I am an oak!'"—Pearson's Weekly.

Detroit, Mich., July 26.—Alex. J. Groesbeck, the Detroit candidate for governor, today made public his personal platform. Mr. Groesbeck takes the view that the people who are asked to vote in the primary are enabled to know the attitude of candidates on public questions, and he therefore makes clear his views. The platform contains an advanced legislative program and one of the most striking planks is his vigorous declaration against the recall of judges and of judicial decisions.

The platform follows in full:
THE PLATFORM.
The executive, legislative and administrative branches of the State Government should all co-operate for the purpose of giving the best possible service to the people. Efficiency in conducting the State's business should be their first concern, and they should aim to bring about economy of administration, simplicity and directness in legislation and the prompt, effective and impartial execution of our laws.

Simplification of Laws.
The Constitution is the basic law of the State. It was made so by the people's vote. Since 1909 there have been adopted a number of amendments to the same, and the courts have been kept busy construing many of its provisions. These facts challenge the attention of the public and point to the necessity of freeing legislation from such technical formalities as experience has shown are needless, and which too frequently are urged for the purpose of defeating legislation demanded by the people.

Reform in Judicial Procedure.
Courts are created to decide and terminate controversies, and judicial procedure should be simplified with the end in view of securing speedy and final determination upon the merits of litigated cases.

Against Recall of Judges.
Much of the criticism of courts arises from the fact that they are called upon to construe loosely adopted legislation and equally doubtful constitutional provisions. They are sworn to maintain the fundamental law as it is written.

Better State Accounting.
The stability of courts is of paramount importance. They should enjoy the fullest confidence of the people.

They should be removed from all suspicion of influence from any source. The Republican party in this State has wisely refused to subscribe to the doctrine of recall of judicial decisions or the recall of judges.

Regents and Others Appointed.
Regents of the University, members of the State Board of Agriculture, and members of the State Board of Education should all be appointed. There is no more reason why they should be elected than should the members of the Boards of any other State institution.

To End Labor Troubles.
The powers and jurisdiction of our Labor Department should be extended. In many states conditions bordering on civil war have arisen as a result of disputes between employer and em-

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1914.

Miss Edith Helfrick of Findlay, Ohio, who is spending the summer at Petoskey, was struck by the Harbor Springs train near Kegonic last Thursday and seriously injured. Miss Helfrick, who is a trained nurse about 24 years of age had been bathing in little Traverse Bay in company with several friends and on her return home walked on the railroad track. Apparently she did not hear the approaching train and became confused and stood alongside the track. In passing, the train struck her on the head and threw her some distance. She was taken to Petoskey hospital, where it was found she had received three deep gashes in her head and her skull was crushed quite badly. She is now in a serious condition.

Andrew Schlient, ninety years of age residing at Walloon Lake, committed suicide last Wednesday by hanging himself to a tree. He had been slightly demented for the past few years and had often threatened to end his life in the manner he finally did. At noon Wednesday he appeared at the dinner table the same as usual and no thought was given to his threats. At supper he failed to put in an appearance and a search was made. He was found a short time later hanging by his neck to a tree about twenty rods from the house. The rope was fastened about twelve feet from the ground, a ladder was leaning against a tree and a few feet from him stood a kitchen chair. When found he was quite dead. No inquest was held, for it was apparent that he came to his death from his own act.

There are three parties interested in these troubles, the employer, the employee and the State. It is manifest that the State should exercise a more direct interest in these disputes than has been the custom heretofore. Conciliatory methods should be adopted and the Labor Department should be clothed with power to investigate the causes which brought about such conditions, publish the facts with reference thereto in such manner as the legislature may direct, and with the consent of the parties, appoint one or more mediators to bring about a speedy settlement between those interested in the controversy. Under proper regulation the department should be given authority to aid in preserving the peace. The importing of hired mercenaries by either side should be prohibited.

Control Private Banks.
All banking institutions not now supervised and regulated by competent authority should be speedily brought under the control and jurisdiction of the State Banking Department.

Proper Game Regulation.
The State Game Warden's department should be given broader powers to make such rules and regulations as are necessary for the preservation of game and fish in different sections of the State.

More Good Roads.
The building of good roads is generally recognized as of vital importance to the people of Michigan. This work should be given more generous aid by the State. Especially is this true in sparsely settled counties where their construction would entail too great a burden on the individual taxpayer.

Provide for State Budget.
A State Board of Estimates should be created consisting of three state officers to whom would be first submitted the requests for appropriations from the various State Institutions and departments. Their powers should be limited to preparing and recommending estimates to be contained in a single budget for the use of the legislature.

Extend the Honor System.
Steps should be taken to further the extension of the honor system in all State prisons so far as practicable and compatible with the interests of the people. Those unfortunates restrained by law should be occupied in the betterment and improvement of our State lands under such restrictions and regulations as the Legislature may prescribe. The purpose of restraining law violators, in most cases, is reformatory and corrective. Everything possible should be done to add those in durance in preparing for re-entry into the walks of men.

Better State Accounting.
The State should adopt a comprehensive accounting system; one which would keep the people fully informed of the true financial condition of all departments of the State Government.

Stenographic Legislative Record.
There should be a stenographic report of the proceedings of the State Legislature as a means of information to the people, and as a permanent index of the intent of the Legislature in adopting laws.

Law and Order.
The laws of our State on the whole are not bad. There is undoubtedly room for improvement in many instances. The best course to follow is to so write them that they will command the respect and confidence of the citizens and keep Michigan in the enviable position it has always occupied of standing for law and order under a system of wise and beneficial legislation properly, fairly and safely administered.

FREDERICK C. MARTINDALE

Candidate for Nomination for Governor On the Republican Ticket.

RECORD:—His official record is, one of service. As a member of the House and Senate he worked and voted for:

- 1—Equal Taxation measures.
- 2—Direct Primaries.
- 3—Prison Binder Twine plant.
- 4—Two-cent Fares.
- 5—Farmers Institutes.
- 6—Traveling Libraries.
- 7—Better Schools.
- 8—Better Factory Conditions.

In fact, every law before the Legislature for bettering the conditions of the common people and the improvement and the development of the State.

The equal taxation measure, putting railroads, telegraphs and express companies on the same basis as other property, has alone saved the owners of farms, homes and other property over $2,000,000 annually. The prison binder twine plant has reduced the cost of twine to Michigan farmers nearly one-half thereby saving them, yearly, hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Briefs of the Week

NORTH MARTIN, the ten-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Mather died on Tuesday morning after a very brief but painful illness. The remains were taken to Traverse City Wednesday afternoon and the funeral was held from St. Francis' Church on Thursday.

Miss Christina Wanek and Joseph Kabat, two popular young people from Jordan township, were united in marriage by Father Kroboth in St. Joseph's church on Monday morning, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The young couple were assisted by Martha and Vincent Wanek, sister and brother of the bride. After the ceremony the young couple left for Boyne City in an auto.

The Charlevoix Lumber Company completed its lumbering operations last week near Chestonia. The work was started early in the present year and was completed June 24. During this period of time 150,000 feet of logs were cut besides over 10,000 pieces of cedar. The timber was floated down the Jordan river to East Jordan, and from there towed to the mill at Charlevoix by the tug Sanford. The work was under charge of Joseph Shores and a large gang of woodsmen.

The production of "The Resurrection," by Tolstoy, in moving pictures at Opera House last night was all that was expected by the large crowd which attended. Blanche Walsh was immense in the lead and though the supporting cast was not equal to her it was sufficiently strong to make the production one of the best ever shown here. The "Resurrection" is one of the most talked of novels written and an opportunity to witness it portrayed is appreciated. —Boyer Journal. At Temple Theatre this Saturday evening, Aug. 1st.

James M. Felts, of Charlevoix, candidate for nomination for State Representative, was in the city this week looking the ground over. The chances are that he will find mighty slim picking in this city as it will be remembered that Mr. McMillan got nearly every vote that Boyne City had to give the last time, and the people of this community are talking especially kind of the East Jordan man. Mr. McMillan has a well earned reputation for being honest with his constituents and his community in general is entitled to the customary second term, which he will get, it is almost certain, without a struggle. —Boyer Journal.

Miss Zae Moore, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Moore was born at Alba, Mich., Sept. 24th, 1895, and died July 29th, 1914, after an illness of sometime of tuberculosis. She would have been nineteen years of age if she had lived until September. She leaves to mourn her loss, her parents, one sister, Miss Ida of Alba, and two brothers, Archie Moore of Flint, Mich., and Guy of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and a host of friends and relatives. She was a member of the Epworth League and Sunday School of the Methodist church at Alba. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon the sermon being preached by Rev. T. Porter Bennett of East Jordan. Interment took place at East Jordan.

The Value Of Mental Discipline

There probably never was a time when intellectual discipline was more greatly needed than it is today. Without it, honest, effective work—to say nothing of great achievement—is impossible. We read a slovenly, ill done book, and we know that it is the product of a slovenly, undisciplined mind; and it may be said, without offending against the great law of charity, that there are many books of this sort. There are many people who are utterly unable even to read good books, but who rest content with the cheapest magazine trash. During the whole course of their lives they are never brought into contact with any real intellectual force. The humblest tasks are poorly performed because neither the mind nor the heart is put into them. Much of the inefficiency that forces itself on us is to be thus explained. Bad housekeeping, poor shop work, indifferent farming, and wretched public service are all, as a rule, due to the unwillingness to take pains. We either do not care, or feel that we are above our tasks, or cheat ourselves into believing that we could succeed in work never attempted, though we may fail pitifully in the work given us to do—it does not matter. For in all these cases there is a lack of intellectual grasp, and a consequent failure to understand that the best possible preparation for new duties is a faithful performance of the old ones. So we pass from stage to stage, and are never quite fit for promotion when it comes. There are few college professors today who are not complaining—sometimes bitterly—of the lack of preparedness of the young men and women sent to them. And the colleges themselves are each year sending out many who are poorly fitted for the duties of life. Nothing seems to be quite mastered. We postpone hard work till after graduation, and then are surprised and distressed to find that many do not even know what hard work means. Sometimes they learn under necessity, but often they do not. These latter suffer terribly from the mistaken kindness, which is most cruel, of their elders.

Plucking Flowers

By Omar W. Russell, Casnovia, Mich.

A mother was lying upon her cozy bed, ill from a fever that had been holding her down for many days. The sunshine played in at the edges of the window shades, which were down, so as to make the light more smooth for her eyes.

Being poor and living where they had no yard, they had no flowers. They had no kind friends to bring in flowers to brighten those long dreary hours that were binding her to her bed.

If she had lain in death, flowers would have surrounded her pale form, but then they would have been useless, as her soul would have been fluttering amongst bounteous flowery pastures.

In life and sickness she longed for flowers to brighten her hours and to bring memories of God's greatness everywhere.

Her little girl, who had heard the mother's call for flowers so often, found one as she was coming from school and what joy one little flower will do to one who is struggling to rise back in the great scope of life.

It was only a little flower,
A growing in the vale;
But the good it could do,
Is a merry little tale.

It made the vale merrier
By its presence there
It glorified the wood,
By its beauty rare.

Then a little child plucked it,
And held it in its' grasp,
For a better ending;
No little flower could ask.

But the little child took it;
To its mother wan and pale,
To her it brought more comfort,
Then when blooming in the vale.

It brought her joy and happiness;
Washed away her pains;
Made her glad and merry
While getting well again.

It remained fresh for many days,
And looked on its career with pride.
Then at last with sweet accord,
The little flower withered and died.

In the same way the little girl plucked the little flower in the woodland vale, God plucks flowers in the great valley of life.

In a home where a mother had received the joy of a little one's comradeship, where a mother had cast her love from morn until night over a little one's cares; God in His loving kindness, came and plucked the little flower, but this little flower did not wither and die, but will bloom forever.

Mother sitting all alone;
All the live long day,
No little treasure to gladden her home;
No little one to around her play.

Mother used to be happy
When her little one would say,
I loves 'oo, dear mamma;
In its little childish way.

Now mother is sitting alone
In her home once glad,
The little treasure is gone;
And mother's heart is sad.

Cheer up, mother darling;
Fill your life with the master's love;
And in some brighter moment,
Join your little one above.

True and Tried Recipes

Fancy Work and Cooking for the Season

Fried Chicken, Milk Gravy.

Clean a tender young chicken and cut up for frying. Cook immediately or let stand for 24 hours, placing it on ice. Put a deep frying pan on the stove, put in it enough lard, or equal parts of lard and beef fat to cover the chicken. Sprinkle the chicken with salt and white pepper, then roll in flour. When the lard is very hot put in the chicken, a few pieces at a time, but not enough at once to cool the fat. Cook rapidly for the first few minutes to form a crust, so that the juice will not escape. Then lower the heat and fry to a golden brown, turning frequently. The chicken must not be rare, neither should it be very dry. Frying chicken properly is more difficult than it seems, and great care is needed. There are more hygienic ways of cooking chicken, but if it is fried do it well.

For the gravy—Remove the chicken from the pan as soon as cooked, drain all but four tablespoons of fat from the frying pan, add three tablespoons of flour, brown slightly, then pour in gradually two cups of thin cream or rich milk, stirring constantly, bring gradually to the boiling point, add salt to taste, and a quarter of a teaspoon of white pepper. Strain into a gravy dish and serve with the chicken. A more hygienic gravy may be made by heating the cream or milk in a double boiler, then adding the flour, moistened in a little cold milk, cook for five minutes, season and serve. Add one tablespoon of butter after removing the gravy from the fire.

Shredded Fresh Pineapple.

Select well ripened pineapples, pare and with a pointed knife remove the eyes, cut off the top and bottom, hold firmly and with a silver fork shred the pineapple, sticking the fork in it till it reaches the core, but taking only a small portion each time, when you have loosened all the pulp, cut it free from the core with a sharp knife. Sprinkle with sugar, mix well and place on ice for one or two hours. If placed directly on the ice pineapple may be prepared in this way the day before it is to be used; put it in a glass preserve jar and screw on the top.

Canned String Beans.

The beans should be fresh and tender, not full grown. Remove the strings and break into pieces, wash and put them in a kettle, cover with boiling water and boil for five minutes, drain, then cool and pack them in jars. Fill the jars firmly, but not quite to the top add one-half teaspoon of salt for each quart of beans, pour in enough clean cold water to fill the jars to the top. Put the rubbers and lids in place and proceed as for beets, boiling them for three consecutive days.

Canning Beets.

For canning select young, tender beets. Cut off the tops about three inches from the beet. Wash thoroughly, put them in a kettle and cover with boiling water; cook until tender. Peel, then cut them in quarters, slice or can whole. Pack tightly in perfectly clean jars, cover with cold water, equal quantities of water and vinegar, or water and vinegar and sugar to taste. Be sure that lids and rubbers fit tight. Put the covers on tightly, arrange the jars on a rack in a tightly covered kettle, pour in cold water enough to come half way up on the jars, place over the fire and bring to the boiling point. Boil for 10 minutes, fasten the covers on tightly and continue the boiling for 40 minutes. Set the jars aside until the next day, then put them in the boiler and boil for one hour, remove again, and cook in the same way on the third day.

Linen Tape Popular Trimming

Kindergarten cloth, 30 inches wide and 25 cents a yard is lighter than galatea and makes stunning middy suits for grown-ups as well as children. A nice serge 50 inches wide can be had for $1 a yard; galatea 29 inches for 17 cents; English drill, 36 inches, for 16 cents; and khaki, 29 inches, for 25 cents.

For trimmings mercerized ribbed braid at about 4 cents a yard is much used, but cheaper and even more popular is the linen tape bought by the bolt and costing from 5 to 10 cents, according to width, with about 5½ yards to the bolt. For the wool sailor or a silk braided is suitable, costing from 6 to 12 cents a yard, though the white linen tape is frequently used. The favorite widths are a quarter or three-eighths of an inch for cotton or linen braids; the silk is used up to three-quarters of an inch in width.

If you wish a real navy blouse you will choose dark navy blue flannel or bleached cotton drill, trimming the flannel blouses with white linen tape while the cotton blouses have sailor collar and cuffs of dark blue flannel trimmed with the linen tape. Few girls and fewer mothers stick to these ironclad rules, but freely adapt the lines and marking to all materials.

While the regulation sailor blouse with elastic run through the bottom hem to draw it into an overhanging blouse is always good, especially for little children, the middy blouse that hangs free and straight down is far more popular. In the same way the one time essential plaited skirt is not seen half so often as the plain gathered or gored skirt.

Any undraped gored model, such as is used for tennis skirts or linen suits, is suitable with the middy blouse. A style that buttons all the way up the front makes easy ironing for the heavy cotton suitings. Make an inch and a half facing, work buttonholes through it, and set the buttons two inches apart on the under side to correspond, the first just above the two-inch hem.

The regulation sailor blouse in woolen materials to blouse over a belt is a useful costume for the school girl; indeed, in many boarding schools it is compulsory, so if your daughter intends to go away to school this next fall, write for full particulars as to cut, material, and trimming—as many schools, especially the most fashionable ones, like all these suits of one color and cut; in fact, a uniform.

For quite little children sew the skirt—which is often plaited in side plaits from a front box plait, but is more quickly made when gathered to a sleeveless muslin body to which the shield is sewed. For the summer weight suits it is perhaps better to sew the skirt in a band, with buttonholes to fasten to the under waist and make the shield detachable.

PATTERN EASY TO FOLLOW.

Most patterns for the middy blouse give two length sleeves, and a shield with high or square neck, some have also an outside yoke facing which may or may not be used at pleasure. The regulation sailor skirt is likewise given to gather or plait. These patterns are simple to follow. Take care to mark all notches, to notice if seams and hem are allowed, to put the pattern to the goods with the grain of the material straight, and to baste carefully. When several tailor suits are to be made cut out and fit the first one, rip, mark alterations, and cut the rest from the changed pattern. This saves untold time in fitting.

All of these blouses are made to slip over the head, so do not buy too small a pattern, one a size larger than usually worn is safe.

The seams are finished with a flat fell stitched a quarter of an inch deep; the sleeves, without fullness at top, are set in same way and the bottom finished with an inch to an inch and a half hem. The side seams are slit five inches from the bottom and hemmed back with a narrow hem at each side of these slashes. Sometimes eyelets may be worked for lacers of white or colored cotton cord or linen tape, to match those on front of blouse if it is laced below point of collar.

The bottom of the middy sleeve is usually gathered into a two and a half inch band to match cuff and belt when one is worn: Set two buttons an inch in from the edge and fasten cord loops to the other edge, or the cuff may be fastened with buttons and buttonholes. This is set in before the cuff is stitched. Slash up the seam of the sleeve two inches and stitch the seam at the openings with the extensions beyond the edge of the seam. On the top edge turn in a narrow hem and let the under one extend an inch and finish across top and along side with a tiny hem. The cuff is stitched to the end of this extension. Thus a neat closing is made with little trouble.

Michigan State Sanatorium Howell, Michigan

GROUP OF PATIENTS DRESSED FOR A MASQUERADE.

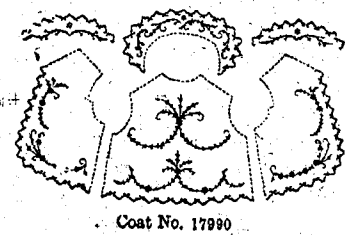

In our last issue we reminded our readers of how the women patients at the Howell Sanatorium sometimes amuse themselves by masquerading and having a great deal of amusement out of the grotesque costumes, etc., with which they were bedecked for such occasions. In this week's issue you will notice in the cut above that the men folks are having their "innings" for, as you will observe they too are wearing masks and are dressed in not quite as funny, a great deal more foolish, that is from the standpoint of the women folks. Some of our readers possibly see very little in any reason for men dressing themselves up in this way but after all it is an awful handy thing sometimes to wear a mask as it makes some of the older men look as if they might be considerable younger than what they are and it really make them considerably better looking.

The Charlevoix Lumber Company completed its lumbering operations last week near Chestonia. The work was started early in the present year and was completed June 24. The production of "The Resurrection," by Tolstoy, in moving pictures at Opera House last night was all that was expected by the large crowd which attended. Blanche Walsh was immense in the lead and though the supporting cast was not equal to her it was sufficiently strong to make the production one of the best ever shown here. The "Resurrection" is one of the most talked of novels written and an opportunity to witness it portrayed is appreciated. —Boyer Journal. At Temple Theatre this Saturday evening, Aug. 1st.

James M. Felts, of Charlevoix, candidate for nomination for State Representative, was in the city this week looking the ground over. The chances are that he will find mighty slim picking in this city as it will be remembered that Mr. McMillan got nearly every vote that Boyne City had to give the last time, and the people of this community are talking especially kind of the East Jordan man. Mr. McMillan has a well earned reputation for being honest with his constituents and his community in general is entitled to the customary second term, which he will get, it is almost certain, without a struggle. —Boyer Journal.
