Bull Moosers Dying Out

Polled Small Vote Throughout The State, Tuesday

Osborne Scratched Off Ticket Electing Ferris

Several important points developed in the election of last Tuesday. One of them was the remarkable falling off of the "Progressive" vote throughout the State. Another was the fact that twenty-five per cent of the republicans voting scratched Osborne off their ticket and voted for Ferris. Perhaps the biggest surprise in the County was the large majority Representative H. I. McMillan pulled out with. The "big noise" petered out to a wee sma' voice, and it showed conclusively that the voters of Charlevoix County have utmost confidence in Mac.

In our neighboring County of Antrim the entire Republican ticket was elected by big majorities. A vigorous campaign was waged by the "Progressives" of that county against the Republican candidates and the big majorities the Republicans pulled is a surprise.

Elsewhere we will publish a partial return of the election in our county.

INSPECT YOUR HEATING PLANT

Defective furnaces, boilers, stoves and fireplaces; stoves, stove pipes and hot air pipes too near woodwork; defective chimneys sparks from chimneys and chimneys burning out, and placing ashes in wooden receptacles on wood floors or against wooden walls in the last fiscal year were responsible for 1449 fires in Michigan. These fires were responsible for the snuffing out of human lives.

Ordinary care and timely repairs would have prevented most of the fire waste and loss of human life.

The danger season for this class of fires is now at hand, so do not delay having your heating plant inspected by a competent man, and make the needed repairs at once.

Consider carefully the following:

- QUESTIONS:
- Have you a metal stove board under the heating stove?
 - Is all woodwork within two feet of the stove protected?
 - Is the stove free from cracks and leaks?
 - Is the stovepipe clean, sound and perfectly jointed and rigid?
 - Have you protected all woodwork within eighteen inches of the stovepipe?
 - Is there a double, ventilated thimble around the pipe where it passes through a partition?
 - Is the chimney clean, is it free from cracks, and is the mortar between the bricks still sound?
 - Does any woodwork come in contact with the chimney?
 - Are any fire holes papered over, covered with wood or stuffed up with rags?
 - Does the wall paper come up against the stovepipe?
 - Have you protected the ceiling over the boiler or furnace and the walls near either?
 - Have you protected the woodwork above and near the smokestack?
 - Are you overheating the stove or furnace, or leaving drafts wide open?
 - Have you metal receptacles for ashes?
 - Do you dump ashes on wooden floors or against wooden walls, partitions and fences? Do you deposit rags, waste paper and other rubbish with ashes?
 - Do you keep the boiler room free from combustible rubbish? Safety along these lines means protection of your property and the lives of those dear to you; so inspect all these things and exercise due care.

ATTENTION, COMPANY "X"

Obituary—O. E. Sundstedt.

Oscar Edward Sundstedt was born in Southern Sweden March 18, 1867 and departed this life after a few days of illness at East Jordan, Mich. Oct. 28 1914 being 47 years of age. When a young man he left his native land of Sweden and came to Manistee, Mich. After remaining there a few years he went to Lake Ann and then returned to Manistee and remained there until six years ago when he came to East Jordan where he had accepted the position of Road Master of E. J. S. R. R.

July 1st, 1896 he was united in marriage to Miss Annie Holmes of Lake Ann. To this happy union one child was born—Ellwyn, who with a brother C. W. Sundstedt of Sweden and a sister Mrs. Hilda Petterson of Sweden with a large circle of friends to mourn his loss.

As Road Master and as a citizen he was loved and respected by all with whom he met. He was a true husband a loving father and a faithful friend. He will be missed for his integrity and devotion to the best.

When a young man he was confirmed in the Swedish Lutheran Church. Dec. 31st 1911 he united with the First M. E. Church of this city and has proven a faithful member of the same. He was a member of the Board of Trustees also a member of the building committee that recently repaired the parsonage, and was Treasurer of the Methodist Brotherhood. He was also a member of the Masonic Fraternity and of the Maccabees.

The funeral which was very large took place on Sunday afternoon and was conducted at the M. E. Church by Rev. T. Porter Bennett, assisted by Rev. A. D. Grigsby of the Presbyterian Church. The funeral was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic Fraternity. Interment at E. J. Cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation for the sympathy and kindly assistance rendered by the many friends during the brief illness and death of our beloved husband and father; also for the many beautiful floral offerings.

Mrs. O. E. Sundstedt

The progress of his reel.
"You did it like a pair of clams!"
The chief yells from the shore.
"Some action to it now, you hams!
Go over it once more!"

SCHOOL MONEY

How Districts Forfeit Primary Money.

"District boards and boards of education shall hire and contract with such duly qualified teachers as may be required." "No person shall be considered a qualified teacher within the meaning of this act, nor shall any school officer employ or contract with any person to teach in public schools of the state who has not a certificate in force, granted by the board of school examiners or other lawful authority." "Any district that employs a teacher that does not hold a legal certificate shall forfeit their primary money for the following year or such part thereof as the number of unqualified teachers employed bears to the whole number of teachers employed." The teachers must hold a certificate at the time of making the contract. Obtaining one later does not make the contract valid. College diplomas and certificates granted in other states do not qualify. They must have certificates operating in Michigan. School boards must know the authority under which they act, hence the school board should see the certificate at the time of making the contract. Caution on the part of boards in this matter will save much annoyance and financial loss to the districts.

Don't blame your wife's relations. You selected them yourself.

OUR DRUGS PURE AND RELIABLE

A good many folks think drugs are drugs. They're mistaken. There is a vast difference in the grade of many drugs. Some are adulterated. Only a chemist can tell it. You are therefore at the mercy of the druggist, whose trade is more or less of a mystery anyway to most people. Don't you think, all things being equal, that it would be wiser for you to buy your drugs from a pharmacist you can rely upon? We are reliable.

They all laughed. It was almost midnight. The women continued to dance. Smith staggered to his feet and gave a toast to them. Then he drained his glass, fell back on his cushions, and closed his eyes. A sign from Jacques, Paul did the same. A few minutes later, from all appearances, the three men were in a stupor. The women still continued to dance mechanically. Soon the music ceased, and Girodet came softly into the room. He sent the dancers away. They trooped down the garden, clanging their tambourines as they went.

"You can go," he said to the three women who reclined on the cushions; "there is no need for you to stay longer."

He looked down at Smith and gave him a slight kick. "Dead drunk!" he muttered. "His love of drink spoils everything. But I'll soon pull him together."

As soon as he had left the room and they were alone, Jacques started up, all alert.

"Stay where you are, Paul," he whispered, "and pretend to be asleep. If he sees you have moved from the door he won't enter the room. But be ready to help me."

Jacques quickly undid the thick silk cords that were looped about the portieres, and stationed himself behind the door. Paul remained stretched out, so that Girodet would see him upon entering the room. He came into the room and walked over to Smith, but before he could utter a cry or defend himself he was thrown to the floor, gagged, and firmly bound hand and foot. Jacques picked up the bottle that had fallen from his hands. He opened it and smelled it.

"Ammonia," he said; "that's for Smith. He won't get it."

There was not a sound to be heard in the house. They saw that there was no danger of Smith waking up for some hours, but to make sure of him they bound him as they had the other man.

"He wanted to get us drunk and then get the receipt," said Jacques; "my head is whirling, and you look like a man who has dined not wisely but too well. We'll have some of this."

They helped themselves to some ammonia and soon their heads were clear and they felt only an intense fatigue.

Girodet was struggling on the floor. They took him by the feet and shoulders and carried him into the next room and locked the door upon him. Then they crept softly along the passage—careful not to arouse the sleeping household. When they entered the dressing room they found their garments spread out on a chair—they were still damp, but they quickly got into them.

As they were so eager to search our pockets I think we are justified in doing the same," said Jacques.

They went into Smith's bedroom and found the suit he had worn.

They turned on the light, and searched his pockets. After some trouble they found an inside pocket carefully buttoned and lined with leather. In this they found his note book. They opened it and turned over the papers one by one.

"Ah, here is something interesting!" exclaimed Paul.

He held up a stammered postoffice receipt which was worded: "Received from John J. Smith, one bottle containing liquor, to be despatched to Andre Callesse, Paris."

"Bingo! That is his poison. That is what he was buying from that Hindu. He mailed it today. See the date!"

"Here's a letter from Callesse!"

"Sapristi! He hasn't signed it; but I recognize his handwriting. I could swear to it. Read it quick!"

"Mon cher," it ran, "the old chap won't trouble us any longer. One dark night he had the misfortune to fall into a well. Unfortunately we can't find the receipt that we were forced to give him for those shares."

Another letter dated later read: "There are two fools on our track. They have just left Paris, and we have reason to believe that they are on their way to Calcutta. Percherot discovered them in the office one night reading the letters. If they get to Calcutta so that they never return. If by any chance they do get back here, Percherot and I will arrange matters. Fadejah is madly in love with one of them. In a moment of folly we might all be lost through her. Send some more of the green liquor. She is strong and resisted the last."

"Oh, poor Fadejah—and I suspected her. We must get back to France as quickly as possible."

"To save her?"

"Yes, and also for the cause. Fadejah is the only one who can explain what this letter leaves in the dark."

"They are deep-dyed villains," continued Jacques, "but they are not so very smart or they would never write letters that would compromise them in this manner."

"They never dreamed that we should get hold of them. There is nothing else in this pocket but a bunch of keys. They are no use to us."

"Hand them over to me," said Jacques. "Do you think I am going to let this chance slip to get back our ten thousand francs. We'll be off now. No one will wake here until tomorrow. I know Hindu servants."

They slipped out of the low windows and ran down the gardens to the river, and were soon rowing up the Ganges. Day was breaking. Little white-flecked clouds floated in the sky. Calcutta was sleeping in a white mist, and no sounds could be heard but the far away calls coming from boat to boat, and the shrill cries of the birds. They reached the city.

"Why, that is Mr. Smith's boat," said a dock-hand who was standing on the quays.

"Yes, he loaned it to us to come back this morning," replied Jacques. "We spent the night with him. Will you return it to him?"

"It can be tied up here—he'll find it."

The two friends walked quickly toward the business section of the city. None of the offices was yet open. They went quietly into the building without being seen. They opened Smith's safe with one of the keys and took out their ten thousand francs.

"We can take this without any scruples," said Paul.

"Yes; but we'll leave him his receipt," replied Jacques with a smile. He laid the receipt on Smith's blotter and put a paper weight upon it.

"Let us see if we can find something else interesting."

They took out a bundle of papers and spread them out on the table.

"We are lucky!" cried Jacques. "This will prove absolutely that Louis and Arthur Farades are innocent." He held out to Paul a paper which read:

"Received of Jean Farades the sum of three hundred and fifty thousand francs, in gold, in exchange for the following shares:"

After these few lines came the list of shares—the same as those which had been mentioned in the receipt which they had found in the well. And underneath the list the words:

"Between John J. Smith—Jean Farades—Calcutta."

"All is clear now," said Jacques. "Jean Farades confided his money to Smith, who forwarded it to Callesse & Co., in France. The poor fellow must have given them several hundred thousand francs, and only got a paper receipt and the interest on it. So long as he remained in India it did not matter, but the day when he started for Europe the rope was to break. He had, according to Harcourt, at least a million, and all that we can find trace of is this three hundred and fifty-seven thousand."

"But the crime! How do you think that happened?"

"Old Jean was very secretive, and he would not say where he was going. He went to call on Callesse after he left me. He gave him all he had for the receipt that we found. Poor old chap, he was so distrustful with some people, and yet in others he placed absolute confidence. Smith sent that letter to Callesse, in which he said he was paying back the loan, so that Callesse could account for the possession of the shares that he was going to rob from his client."

"Yes, it is quite clear now," Paul observed.

"He must have made old Jean dine with him at his place at Passy. He evidently met him after Jean had passed through the gates of Boulogne, and then drove him to his place in his carriage. After he had drugged him, he and Percherot could have dragged him through the woods to the well in Farades garden."

"Yes, we can return to France now, and to Valentine and Jeanne." They took all the papers that would throw a light on the mystery and hurried to their hotel. In less than ten minutes they were on their way to the quays, followed by two hotel porters carrying their suitcases.

"If we can get some sort of boat that will take us as far as Ceylon, there we can take passage on a French steamer and in that manner get back to Marseilles."

A skipper from a sailing boat was sauntering up the quays, his hands in his pockets, and his pipe in his mouth. He was looking seaward. Some sailors on a sloop glanced at him from time to time.

"Is it for today, captain?" called out one of them.

"Yes—the wind is changing. We'll get to the end of the gulf in a jiffy. Everything on board?"

"Everything on board but you captain."

"Come nearer and throw down the plank then." The sloop swerved slightly, and the gangplank was lowered. At the moment the skipper was boarding his vessel some one called out breathlessly:

"Hi, there! Can you take two passengers?"

"That depends," replied the skipper, eyeing the two friends as they ran up, followed by the porters with their baggage.

"Are you going south?"

"Perhaps."

"I don't want perhaps. I'll pay you well. Is it yes or no?"

"Well, yes; if you make it worth while."

"I'll pay you double what the passage is worth."

"All right. Step up."

Five minutes later the sails filled, and Jacques and Paul were gliding down the bay of Calcutta.

"See there! We are just in time," said Jacques excitedly, pointing landward.

Smith's boat, in which they had had the accident the night before, was coming into the docks. The commission agent was standing up in it, holding his field-glasses in his hand, and scanning the docks intently.

CHAPTER VIII.
The Fugitives Seek Refuge.

Smith had awakened from his heavy slumber at about 7 o'clock.

He uttered a terrible oath when he found himself bound and stretched out in the disordered dining-room. He called loudly. Two Hindus rushed in.

"Undo this quick," he cried. "Where is Girodet?"

Girodet was found locked in the next room. They quickly freed him from his cords.

"It is your cursed fondness for the bottle that has done this," said Girodet angrily.

When the commission agent learned that they had robbed him of his note book and his keys he was almost stricken with apoplexy.

"They've done me as they did Callesse," he gasped; "but I'll get the yet. There is enough in that fool Callesse's letter to send us all to the guillotine."

They started at once for the city. It took them some time to have their office-locks forced, for Jacques had taken the keys with him and thrown them into the river. It was not until midday that the commission-agent learned the full extent of his loss. Callesse's incriminating letters, Jean Farades' receipt, post-office receipt, and the ten thousand francs were gone.

They drove at once to the European hotel. His dissipated face turned livid with fear when he learned from the two porters that they had taken passage to Ceylon.

"We must stop them or we are lost," cried Smith. "We must stop them before they get to the Mediterranean. They are in a sailing-boat. We'll catch them in a launch. Get one at once!"

Fortunately there was a strong north wind, and the sloop had a quick crossing. But as soon as the launch entered the harbor Girodet pointed out two men to Smith.

"There they are on the quays," he cried.

"This time we'll catch them. Don't move from the quays, Girodet—you keep your eye on them while I call up the police."

"I wouldn't bring the police into this affair if I were you," said Girodet significantly.

"You must remember that I am English. I am an Englishman, doing business in Calcutta, and the English always have the right of way in everything here."

Smith went to a telephone booth. Girodet stationed himself at a window in a tavern where he could watch Jacques and Paul, who were sitting on a seat on the quays. A steamer was coming in that morning—it was on its way to France from China. They were waiting for it. But unfortunately for them they had left their suitcases in the tavern opposite, where Girodet had taken up his watch.

A minute passed, and Girodet saw them walking toward the tavern. He drew back and passed behind the bar and gained the rear room after slipping a coin into the hand of the girl who served the beer. But he had not been quiet enough. Jacques had caught sight of him. Without hesitating, he snatched up his suitcase, and motioned to Paul to take his.

"Smith's valet is here," he murmured, "and his master can't be far off. Skip!" They tipped the girl and hurried back to the quays. There they found themselves face to face with Smith, who had just returned from telephoning to the police.

With him was a portly constable whom he had met on the way. They were hemmed in. Girodet was at the back. In the distance they could see the French steamer coming into port. They were only a few yards from their enemies.

"We have nothing of importance in our suitcases," said Jacques hurriedly; "throw yours full at Smith and I'll shyn mine at the constable."

They flung the valises in the faces of the two men and then dashed headlong down the street. Soon a yelling crowd took up the cry and shouted—"Thieves! Thieves!"

The two friends ran on, never stopping for a moment to look back. They had had a good start and soon the hooting crowd seemed to be decreasing—then gradually their yells ceased. But the two fugitives continued on their mad course. Between them and the sea there was a house standing alone in a field. It was surrounded by a garden enclosed by a brick wall. They dashed up to the door, but there stood short, as they read the terrifying words on the sign—Cholera—Lazar House.

They hesitated for a moment, then Jacques, with wild determination, cried:

"Come on in! They'll be afraid to chase us in here."

Confident in his friend, Paul followed him. They banged on the door. It was opened immediately. They passed in without renouncing to the questions which the doorkeeper put to them. Jacques shut the door quickly and locked it.

He looked out of a little window on the side of the door. The crowd had hung back, but Smith, Girodet, and the constable were still running. They were still two hundred yards from the rear house. Jacques turned to the porter and asked quickly:

"What usually happens in this place?"

"Why, one dies usually," answered the man.

"Are there many here stricken with the cholera?"

"About a dozen."

"Seriously ill?"

"Yes—two will die tonight."

"Good. Take me to the superintendent—the man in charge of this place."

He slipped some gold into the man's hand. The caretaker looked in astonishment at these two strange visitors. But the gold made him deferential.

"This way, gentlemen," he said. The superintendent was asleep. Jacques shook him roughly.

"Another dead?" he asked, waking suddenly.

"No; wake up and listen to me," replied Jacques.

The porter had gone back to his duties.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" asked the superintendent in amazement.

Jacques thought that he would borrow an idea from Alexandre Dumas.

"How much do you gain a year leading this dog's life?" he asked.

"You are right," answered the man, "it certainly is a dog's life, and sooner or later I shall catch the disease."

Jacques put his hand in his pocket and pulled out a thousand-franc note which he laid on the rickety table. The man frowned.

"What's the matter?" asked Jacques.

"A paltry note for a thousand francs! Many have offered me more than that to get out of here, but if you want to come in—"

"If I give you ten times that?"

Jacques held out the ten thousand francs. The man's eyes glittered.

"How do I know that they are not counterfeit?" he asked warily.

"Examine them, but be quick."

The superintendent took them up and looked at them carefully.

"They are genuine," he admitted. "But what is there that I can do for you? I don't understand."

"We want you to keep us here."

"To catch the cholera?"

"Exactly."

"Exactly."

"You want to commit suicide, then?"

"We want to be corpses. Only notice the shading, my friend. We don't want to die."

Their talk was interrupted by some heavy blows struck on the front door of the house.

"It is the police after the two men who came in here!" cried out the porter.

"You scoundrels!" cried the superintendent. "You ran in here to escape from the police!"

He had scarcely uttered these words that the muzzle of a revolver was pressed on his temple, and Jacques said resolutely:

"If you don't give the order to keep that door closed, I'll fire."

Without hesitation the superintendent cried:

"Don't open the door! Don't open it!"

"Now, let's go on with the bargain," said Jacques coolly.

"I understand. You want me to hide you here and give you your liberty later."

"We want you to obey us, and here are ten thousand francs if you do so. I'll make it twelve thousand. What do you say?"

"It is difficult to refuse to help you."

"If you refuse you are a dead man; if you agree to do this little favor you gain twelve thousand francs."

"Well, what do you want me to do?"

"When a fellow dies here—what becomes of his body?"

"The corpses are thrown into quicklime. The names of the victims are inscribed on the front door of this place and the hour when they died; all their clothes and everything that belongs to them are burned."

"Fine! But we want two corpses."

"There are two unknown sailors here; they have no long to live."

"That is all right; they will do. Now you go to the door and tell the police who are knocking that the two men who rushed in here ten minutes ago have been stricken with cholera and that they will die."

"Very well."

Jacques and Paul followed him, holding their revolvers close to his head to let him know that it would not do for him to betray them. They reached the door; the superintendent only opened the little window.

Several police officers had now arrived.

"Give up those men who came in here just now," called out one in authority.

"It is not worth while," answered the man in charge of the lazaret-house. "They caught the cholera at once, and the disease is rapidly gaining. They won't live through the night."

Girodet and Smith drew back from the open window. Their faces were gray with fear. The police also drew hastily away.

"We're saved," murmured Paul.

"They will never leave here alive," said an official to Smith, "so there is nothing we can do. They have the cholera, so that is the end of them."

(To be continued)

Good That He Returned.

"Boy, watch my horse till I come back!" called a man to a boy lounging around the station, as he hastened to bid farewell to a departing friend.

"Sure!" said the boy, taking the reins.

Just then the locomotive whistled and the horse, rearing suddenly, started at full speed up the road.

The boy started after the fleeing animal, and, as the owner appeared, exclaimed with relief:

"It's a good thing you came now, sir, for I couldn't have watched him much longer."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

This Explains It.

The attendant led the visitor into the violent ward.

"For heaven's sake!" exclaimed the stranger, "what are those lunatics doing with that straw, leaves, flowers, feathers and ribbon?"

"Our military department," explained the attendant. "This is where the hat styles originate."

Guard Against A Red Nose

A red nose is an affliction which proceeds from such a variety of causes that it is quite difficult to suggest a universal cure, and as a red nose is an undesirable condition, no woman should hesitate about treating this feature as soon as the skin begins to show discoloration. When the flesh on the nose becomes red, it indicates some physical trouble that needs correction.

This external sign of internal derangement may be the result of an excess of eating, drinking, restricted circulation of the blood or an inflamed condition of the nose. Whatever the cause, its source should be discovered and remedies applied without delay. On one occasion a woman wished to cure a red nose, and I suggested one cure after another. She followed all directions, but got no relief. Finally I urged her to see a doctor, because I suspected inflammation, which eventually was found to be the cause of the red nose.

If you are positive as to your diet being the right sort and your circulation is good, then in almost every instance it is advisable to have the membranes of the nose linings examined for possible inflammation, because if they are swollen an external redness is sure to follow. If the nasal structure is in a healthy condition, however, then one can be reasonably sure that by simple diet and outward applications the flesh can be restored to its normal whiteness.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY TELLING CLUB

Essilyn Dale Nichols, Editor

1527-35 St., Rock Island, Ill.

Send Manuscript and Letters for this Department Direct to the Editor of this Department.

Well, Dearies, I expect you've been putting on your thinking caps real often this past week, and I expect you'll have ever so many nice names for our story by the time it is finished; and I expect, too, that I'll find it pretty hard to choose just which one is the best. But never mind, some little boy or girl is going to get a nice present for the best name, and so you just send in the name you think is the nicest and may be YOU will be the lucky one.

We have two nice letters this week. One is from Maxie Hill, Mancelona, Mich. And the other is from Iva Crocker, Bangor, Mich. We also have a request for Club membership from Alice Porter, East Jordan, Mich., to whom a membership card was sent.

We will have our letters first and then we will have our story.

Dear Editor:—I thought I would write and tell you what I do out on the farm. This is what I do every day in the fall: I get up at six o'clock and get dressed and then I go out of doors and take a lot of exercise. Then I go into the house and eat breakfast, and put on my coat and take my school books and get into the buggy and Papa takes I and my little sister to school. About four o'clock Papa comes after us and we go back out to the farm. We live two miles from Mancelona. When we get out to the farm my little sister and I take off our dresses and put on our aprons and caps. Then my little brother, sister and I go out doors to play in the strawstack. We make houses in the straw and slide down the sides of it. Just a few minutes before it is supper time us three children go into the house and I comb out my little brother's hair and brush him all off good; then I wash him and get him ready for supper. Then I have to get my sister brushed off and see that she washes herself clean. Then I brush myself off and get washed. By the time we have that done supper is ready. After we have our supper we get ready for bed, and then we say our prayers and get into bed. My sister's name is Lillie. She will be nine years old the 11th day of March. My brother's name is Adelbert. He will be three the 8th of July. My birthday is the 25th of December; I will be twelve in 76 days. I will try and be a faithful member of the story telling club. Yours truly forever,

Maxie Hill.

P. S.—Perhaps I will have another story written to send soon.

Dear Editor:—I am a little girl ten years old. My mama died when I was eight years old. I have one sister, age twelve years. Her name is Eva. My sister and I kept house for my papa for two years, and then he went to Washington and my sister stayed with my aunt in my old home in Fenton, Illinois, and I came to live with my grandparents in Michigan. I have thirteen ducks, one dog and one bird. The bird's name is Daisy and my dog's name is Prince. My dog and I run races. I go to the Sheldon school house. I have about a quarter of a mile to walk. I am in the fifth grade. I take Geography, Arithmetic, Language, Reading, Physiology and Spelling. There are sixteen children in our school; eight boys and eight girls. This is my teacher's first term of school. I like her very well. Her name is Miss Nellie Tolles. I am embroidering a pair of pillow cases for my Grandma Crocker for Christmas. She lives in Morrison, Illinois, near my old home. My grandpa raises fruit. I picked strawberries for him and earned eight dollars and seventy-four cents. It was the first money I ever worked and earned. This is all I have to say this week. I will write my address here: Miss Iva Crocker, Bangor, Mich., Route 2.

Iva, I hope you will write real often because your letter proves you to be a very smart little girl. I am sure your Grandma Crocker will be very much pleased with those pillow cases. I am going to tell you something, Iva: I used to go to school in the country when I was a little girl. I went to the Johns school and it was close to a big lake. I have a sister named Nellie so you may be sure I like that name, and I have a cousin named Daisy, and my uncle used to have a horse named Prince.

And now for our story. I do hope our publisher won't say, "Here! Here! This is too long!" and take his great big shears and slip off a part of it and chuck it into the waste basket. You see, I just couldn't bear to leave out two such nice letters as the ones we've just printed; and, of course, we want our story! Well, we'll just have to hope that the publisher will be especially good natured this time. So here's our story which is:

The Story That You Can Name.

"Bow wow!" barked Ponto as he stopped on the last step and tried to bow to Mrs. Tabby Cat in his best manner. "May one of your kittens play ball with me?"

Mrs. Tabby Cat blinked her eyes and scratched her ear with one paw. "Well, well," she purred. "I really don't know. Perhaps one of them will play."

"Will you play, Silver?" asked Ponto quickly, bobbing his curly head and looking admiringly at Silver's pretty white fur. "We will have lots of fun."

"Oh dear!" sighed Silver. "I am dreadful tired and had been planning to take a nap. But Goldie is just as wide awake as she can be and I expect she'd love to play."

Ponto looked at Goldie but Goldie shook her head.

"I am afraid of getting hit," she confessed, "and besides I can't play at all well. Fluffy there, is an expert—why don't you ask her?"

Ponto hung his head when Goldie mentioned Fluffy because, you see, he remembered how he had ran off with her ball that very afternoon, and he supposed of course that she wouldn't want to play with him.

But Fluffy clapped her paws and sprang to her feet in a hurry. "Why, of course, I'll play," she cried. "Come on, I'm going to beat you!"

And away Ponto and Fluffy scampered, across the big yard, and right by the house of Mrs. Cross-Hen, and out under the big apple trees where the grass was very thick and soft and how they did play ball!

Ponto bounced and barked and batted the ball with his little paws, and Fluffy whisked and whirled and caught it with her little claws and they were just having a splendid time when—Something Happened!

I'll tell you what happened next week, Dearies; and then you must send in your names.

Dutch Apple Cake.

One-half cup sugar, one egg, one cup milk, salt, one tablespoon butter, two teaspoons baking powder and two cups flour (level). Bake in sheet pan with sliced apple laid in batter on top and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

Cocoanut Cake.

One and one-half cups sugar, one of milk, two of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, piece of butter size of an egg, two eggs, one-half of a grated cocoanut or the prepared cocoanut.

Apple Sauce Cake.

Cream together one cup of sugar and one-half cup shortening, add one saltspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon cinnamon, a little nutmeg and a cup of raisins. Dissolve a teaspoon of soda in a little warm water, and stir it into a cup of sour apple sauce, letting it foam over the ingredients in the bowl. Beat all together, add one and three-fourths cups of flour and bake in a loaf tin forty-five minutes.

Twin Mountain Muffins.

One-quarter cup of butter, three-fourths cup milk, one-fourth cup sugar, two cups flour, one egg, three teaspoons baking powder. Cream the butter; add sugar and eggs, well beaten; sift baking powder with flour and add to the first mixture, alternating with milk. Bake in buttered tin gem pans 25 minutes.

Angel Cake.

Whites of nine large eggs, one and one-fourth cups granulated sugar, one cup flour, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar and a pinch of salt added to the eggs before whipping. Flavor to taste. Sift, measure and set aside sugar and flour.

Whip eggs about half, add cream of tartar and whip until very stiff. Add sugar and beat in, then flour, then fold in flour lightly. Put in a moderate oven at once. Will bake in 20 to 40 minutes.

Marshmallow Cake.

Use any good layer cake recipe. When cake is cold, have marshmallows heated in oven, so they are soft but will not run. Place between layers with boiled frosting over and around them. Frost on top with frosting made as follows: Put one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water on stove. Let boil until it hairs when dripping from spoon. Have ready two whites of eggs beaten perfectly stiff and in quite a large dish, then turn in your sirup slowly, just a tiny stream steadily, beating it every minute from first starting to pour, and beat until cold.

Delicious Salad.

Six medium sized cold boiled potatoes, three boiled beets, one small onion, one small cucumber, and any other cooked vegetables left from dinner, diced together.

Mix with following dressing; one teaspoon mustard, two teaspoons sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon flour, blended into one-tablespoon soft butter, one well beaten egg, two-thirds cup milk, one-fourth cup vinegar. Cook in double boiler until thick. Have all ingredients ice cold and mixed sometime before serving, so as to be well blended. Serve on lettuce leaves, garnished with hard boiled eggs. This makes a hearty supper for five persons.

Michigan Chocolate Cocoanut Cake.

One-half cup of butter, one and three-fourths cups of sugar, one cup of sweet milk, whites of four eggs, three even cups of flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder. Cream butter and sugar together, add milk and then the flour with baking powder in it, and lastly whites of eggs beaten stiff. Bake in layers.

Filling—Melt two squares of chocolate, add one cup sugar, one table-spoon flour, one cup sweet milk, yolks of two eggs, and cook in double dish until it thickens. Stir in one-half cup cocoanut. Spread on top and between layers; also sprinkle cocoanut on top of cake.

KEEP TRYING.

By Cleatus L. Mason, Chicago, Ill.

When you think that you are beaten,
All your battles vainly fought,
Nothing left your life to sweeten;
All your efforts come to naught,

That's the time to keep on trying,
For the prize that you have sought;
That's the time to keep on trying,
Things worth while are dearly bought.

Say you will and know you're right,
Say you will that's half the fight;
Think you can and do not fear it,
Harder the battle more the merit.

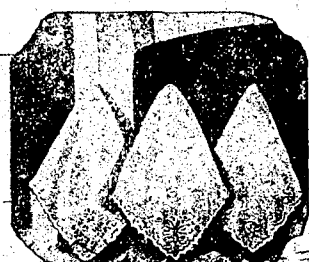

Strive to make each link grow stronger,
Stronger as you weld the chain;
Do it well though it take longer,
Things half done are done in vain.

Keep on pushing do not falter,
Though at times it may be hard,
All obstacles you may alter,
Make them help and not retard.

Keep on pushing, trying, striving,
Put your heart into it whole,
Forward pushing, trying, thriving,
Till at last you reach the goal.

1086. Ladies' Skirt With or Without Yoke Tunic.

The varied tunic forms are most pleasing and with yoke portions are becoming to most figures. The model here shown has a pretty underskirt, with plaited fullness at the panel seams in front, and a neat lap tuck at the back. The tunic outlines the panel, and has a shaped yoke at its upper part. The pattern is good for gabardine, cashmere, cheviot, chiffon cloth, velvet, velveteen and corduroy. It is cut in six sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a 24-inch size. The skirt measures two yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Ladies' Waist With Body Lining.

This attractive style features a new girde waist, in which the girde is cut in one with the back and front. Full sections are added, which form part of the sleeve, which is finished with two fitted sections. The effect is unique and becoming. The low neck is edged with a deep collar. This model is good for cashmere, silk, velveteen, taffeta, crepe or cloth. The pattern is cut in six sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 2 1/2 yards of 40-inch material for a 36-inch size.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A Seasonable and Becoming Model Girl's Coat.

This attractive style has a waist front, lengthened by a skirt portion, that is joined to the waist under a broad belt. The fronts are open at the throat and rolled in revers style, meeting a coat collar. The design is good for broad cloth, serge, novelty cloakings, velvet and corduroy. The pattern is cut in four sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. It requires four yards of 40-inch material for a 12-year size.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

1110.

A Pretty Frock for Mother's Girl.

Plaid woolen in soft brown tones combined with tan cashmere is here portrayed. The design would develop well in other combinations. Blue serge with white ratine or linene for the gumpie; or velvet, silk, cloth, galatea, gingham or percale. All these make serviceable and neat dresses. The pattern is cut in four sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 2 1/2 yards of 40-inch material with 1/2 yard for the gumpie for an 8-year size.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Basque Dress for Misses and Small Women (With or Without Tunic.)

This attractive design is cut on prevailing lines, and is both graceful and comfortable. The basque fronts are cut to form a girde that is draped over the sides and back, forming a sash bow over the center. The sleeve is in wrist length. A graceful flare collar finishes the neck edge. This suit in green taffeta with pipings of black satin and fancy jet buttons is most unique. It is good also in serge, velvet, velveteen, cashmere or cloth. The pattern is cut in four sizes: 14, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a 16-year size; without tunic, 1 1/2 yard less. The skirt measures about 1 1/2 yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

1051-1094.

Ladies' Costume

Comprising ladies' shirt blouse pattern 1051 and ladies' skirt pattern 1094.

As here shown blue serge and blue plaid suiting are combined. For separate wear the designs are also very good. The waist will develop attractively in brown crepe with trimming of Roman stripe silk. It is made with a yoke portion over the back, and the sleeve in either wrist or short length is good. The skirt has the new plaited tunic form, with a shaped girde that may be omitted. Serge, velvet, silk or combinations of such material are lovely for these tunic models. The skirt is cut in six sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure. The waist in six sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 7 1/2 yards of material 27 inches wide for waist and skirt and four yards for the tunic for a 36-inch size.

This illustration calls for two separate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A Practical Model Ladies' Apron.

This style of apron is becoming and pleasing because of its semi-fitted shape. It affords ample protection for the dress beneath, and is cut so as to avoid the surplus of material so much objected to in many models. The back is formed by the straps which hold the front and the skirt in position. The design is good for percale, lawn, drill, gingham, chambray and alpaca. The pattern is cut in three sizes: small, medium and large. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for a medium size.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

FASHION POINTERS.

Cubist designs are seen even in some of the new corset materials.

Coat chains are being made of beads; steel intermingled with cut crystal or coral are favorites.

Plaids in silk and wool both promise to be much with us once the fall season opens. And with the plaids comes a revival of Roman stripes.

HARVARD'S HISTORIC CHAIR.

College Ceremonies Would Be Incomplete Without the Unique Seat. The antique chair shown in the cut has been used so long for commencement and inauguration ceremonies that no such occasion at Harvard would be complete without it. President Lowell sat in it during his inaugural ceremony just as his predecessors in office have done for the last two centuries.

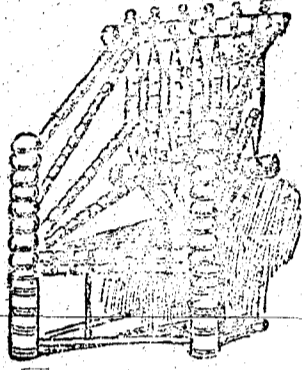

Tradition says that it came into the possession of the university during the administration of President Holyoke, but it is not known exactly when or how. Tradition again says that it was given to President Holyoke by the Rev. Ebenezer Turell of Medford, a relative of the Mathers, who were among New England's earliest settlers.

President Holyoke always believed that the chair was brought from England by some member of the Mather family.

Benjamin Pierce, one of Harvard's historians, connects the chair with a certain variety of furniture found in the Cheeshire district of England in the last of the Seventeenth and the beginning of the Eighteenth centuries.

Horace Walpole, England's great statesman, wrote to a friend, asking him to get one of these curious chairs from the Cheeshire district. He describes them as being of "wood" the seat triangular, the back, arms and legs loaded with carving, and carved and turned in the most uncouth and whimsical forms.

The whole question is now dismissed by the statement that it was probably brought from that English district, but "a times unknown."

The Historical Chair.

President Holyoke himself turned the knobs and put them on the main posts with his own hands. The quaint and elaborate seat is now stored in one of the closets of Harvard hall and is brought out only for specified ceremonies.

Hunter Chased by Giant Rabbit

Monster of Springs and Fur Glares With Awful Eyes at Heels of Rollo Rollins.

The fame of Rollo Rollins, of New Jersey, as a rabbit hunter, has lost much of its high effulgence, and the temporary truce between Rollo and Si Perkins is at an end. From Greenwood Lake Rollins has hurled down the hills a challenge to Perkins; a challenge to mortal or immortal combat, weapons to be ploughshares or anvils, to be hurled at three paces.

Perkins, however, is not manifesting any qualms over the challenge. Indeed, Si had been laughing steadily for sixteen hours when, at dawn next day, his cachinatory ululations could be heard in the four corners of the Gooseberry Confederacy.

It all came about in this manner: Rollo Rollins, knowing that Si Perkins couldn't hit a rabbit if it was tied to the muzzle of his gun, made friendly overtures to him, proposing a rabbit hunt in the Singac Hill district, above North Caldwell. It was the cunning aim of Rollo to take Si coming home with empty gamebag, while Rollo would fairly drip rabbits from every pocket.

While Rollo was cleaning his guns and tuning his dogs to the rabbit scent, Perkins was not idle. At Gus Mier's store he bought an extraordinary large rabbit. Not a live rabbit, but a rabbitis defunctus—in other words, a very dead rabbit. He carried the furry envelope of the animal to Dr. Faustus Lang, the Great Notch taxidermist. Dr. Lang stuffed said rabbitis defunctus until it bore the most lifelike semblance imaginable. Then, as a final touch, the taxidermist inserted two large green eyes—eyes above human size even, eyes that gleamed an shimmered and seemed to carry luminous beams of evil in their depths.

When the job was done Si Perkins carried the masterpiece to a jeweller and had watch-springs inserted in all four legs, also in the ears. The result of this was that the slightest jar caused startling animation.

With this ingenious implement, which he named Gustavus Adolphus, Si Perkins grove to Singac Hill. Perching Gustavus Adolphus in the most lifelike attitude on a little knoll, Perkins attached to its middle a coil of fine wire. He led this wire some distance away, making a slip noose at the end and laying it at just the point where he figured a hunter would take aim at the rabbit.

The next morning Si appeared at the Rollins gate, bright and early, his rusty old gun over his shoulder and his deaf and color-blind hunting dog at his heels.

The two hunters spent a full day in the fields and woods bordering Singac Hill. Rollins shot twenty-two rabbits and Perkins shot one. Dusk was beginning to creep upon the hills when Perkins cunningly led the way to the cache of Gustavus Adolphus.

Rollo's dogs saw it first and sprang toward it with glad yelps. Rollo followed his dogs eagerly, Si trailing warily behind. The dogs got within about six feet of the big-eyed Gustavus Adolphus and then stopped. Their tails fell and Rollo was amazed to see them turn about and dash madly off in the opposite direction from the rabbit.

"What ails them dern dogs?" whispered Rollo, as he skulked through the brush. Then suddenly, the huge rabbit burst upon his view, its eyes boring him fiercely and its ears quivering in the wind. Rollo's gun sprang to his shoulder and he let go both barrels.

When the smoke cleared away, he was startled to see Gustavus Adolphus still erect and undaunted, with eyes shining defiantly, notwithstanding the absence of one ear. With trembling fingers Rollo reloaded his trusty weapon and fired two more charges at the rabbit. Again, when the smoke cleared Gustavus Adolphus was erect and defiant, his great eyes still glaring evilly.

Fear gripped his heart as he fired the third double charge, and then, when the smoke cleared and the monster rabbit was still undisturbed and seemingly animated, Rollo dropped his gun and fled from the scene with a yell. Night was falling apace and Rollo tripped several times before he gained Pompton-Turnpike. He had an uncanny feeling that something was behind him, and, sure enough, as he raced down the hill and happened to glance over his shoulder he saw that huge rabbit bounding after him with mighty leaps.

Never before in his life did Rollo Rollins hit up such a terrific pace. Those gleaming eyes of the pursuing rabbit seemed to burn into his very soul. As he raced through the quiet lanes of Little Falls Rollins shed his coat and waistcoat, looking back once more and again hitting a higher clip when he saw the bounding rabbit still on his trail.

Reports from Wayne indicate that Rollins passed through that village at inhuman speed, now and then spitting the welkin with a yell of agony. Sparks flew from his shoes as he passed through Pompton, Pompton Plains and Midvale. As he approached Greenwood Lake he was little more than a shadow of his former self. Flesh had melted from him by the pound.

Approaching the Whitehorn Inn, Rollins was all in. With one wild yell for help he dropped on the roadside. He was carried into the inn by tender hands, but when he came to, there was that haunting rabbit sitting on a chair, glaring venomously. Again Rollo swooned but when he revived under a liberal application of applejack the truth was revealed to him.

The wire noose was still fast upon the ankle, the other end of the wire encircling the middle of Gustavus Adolphus. Is it any wonder that the breast of Rollo Rollins has become a furnace of awful hate?

Collection of Orr Kids.

One of the stories John Burroughs, the aged naturalist, loves to tell has to do with a friend of his named Orr. On one of his trips Mr. Burroughs happened to be in the town where Mr. Orr lives. Meeting him in the street Mr. Burroughs insisted that his friend should accompany him to the hotel for luncheon. As they were eating Mr. Burroughs inquired if his friend was not interested in any speciality.

"I think," said the naturalist, "every man ought to have a collection of some kind. It adds zest to life."
"Oh, yes," said his friend. "I have quite a collection. I am interested in flowers. Come home with me and I'll show them to you."

As they approached the Orr home six fine, healthy children, playing on the lawn, ran to meet their father.

"These," said Mr. Orr, with a twinkle in his eye, "form my collection of orchids. Ain't they grand specimens?"—New York Press.

All Right But the Name.

It is an army tradition that the soldier shall grumble at the commissariat, but this particular complainant seems to have had a fair case.

"Any complaints, corporal?" said the Colonel, making one morning a personal inspection.

"Yes, sir. Taste that, sir," said the corporal, promptly.

The Colonel put the liquid to his lips.

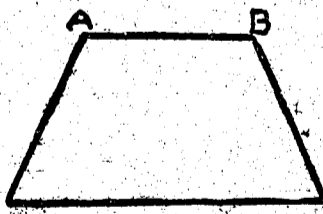

"Why," he said, "that's the best soup I ever tasted."

"Yes, sir," said the corporal, "but the cook calls it coffee."

Surely in a Bad Way.

There was a congressman who failed to show up for a vote on the tariff bill. He was not paired and his absence was unaccountable. He leisurely strolled into the house the next week and was at once hauled over the coals for his dereliction. "Why, I couldn't come," said he; "my health was givin' way. I had three doctors tumpin' me chest at wanst, and they united in sayin' that me whole system with rekin' with insomnia."

An Optical Illusion.
Here is a method by which an optical illusion of length is plainly shown: Judged by appearances the line A B in the larger figure is considerably longer than the line A B below it, but tested by measurement they are exactly equal.

A Dull Winter.

A New Yorker at one of the Jersey winter resorts had occasion to complain of the service in the dining-room.

"Walter!" he called out sternly one evening, "how much longer have I got to sit here without my dinner? I've been here a full hour."

"You've got nothin' on me, sir!" responded the waiter. "I've been here since seven this morning. Kinder tiresome, ain't it?"—Puck.

THRIFT TEACHING

Training In The Ways Of Thrift Should Be Given In The Public Schools.

The American Society for Thrift, organized in October, 1913, has for its purpose the promotion of thrift by inquiry, education and discussion. The advisory council is made up of some of the executives and many leading educators of the various states. One phase of the work is its introduction into public schools. The time is auspicious for such teaching. State Superintendent Fred L. Keeler considers this work most important and is urging that it be made general throughout the schools. Individual thrift is the basis of good citizenship and community prosperity. This work will co-ordinate with such problems as the high cost of living. The training is not given by talks alone, but by interesting pupils in school and home gardens, school savings accounts and any local industry or interest of the home that may be used to advantage. Vocational training and domestic science are aids. The idea includes more than the earning of money—the saving of money, of material and of time. Many Michigan high schools have already done much along the line of simplicity of school commensations. The Thrift Movement is general and schools must fall in line in teaching the practice of thrift. Both parents and teachers will be interested in the circulars and material sent out by the American Society of Thrift, 1032 Straus Building, Chicago.

One of the Sciences.
Chandler W. Riker had a witness under examination in the circuit court, before Judge Adams. The witness had shown how much he did not know on a certain scientific subject:
"Are you a scientific man?" demanded Mr. Riker suddenly.
"No, sir, a plumber," was the bold reply.
"O, well," commented Mr. Riker, with a smile, "perhaps you are a scientific man, after all, because plumbing, as we all know, belongs to the science of abstraction."

SCHOOL NOTES

The fourth grade room of the Central School, Hazel Cummins, teacher, has the honor of having the highest average attendance for the month of October. The per cent was 97.85.

The fourth and fifth grades of the West Side school have completed some excellent work in patching and embroidery.

Supplies have been received for the new system of penmanship and the work will be taken up at once. This system is the Palmer Method of Business writing and will be taught in all grades from the Kindergarten to the high school.

Plans are being made for exhibit of the work of the local schools to be placed in the windows of the three drug stores of the city for one week. This exhibit will begin about Nov. 23rd. Watch for it.

The sixth grade of the West Side has finished the study of South America by making portfolios containing maps and descriptions.

All of the grade rooms enjoyed Halloween parties last Friday. The decorations were witches, Jack-o'-lanterns and black cats and refreshments consisting of apples, candy and pumpkin pie were served.

Last Thursday morning two literary societies were organized in the high school. These societies will meet every two weeks on Friday afternoon and the programs will consist of debates, essays, speeches, declamations, orations, musical numbers and parliamentary drill. As the two societies will meet at the same time there will be occasional inter-society debates. Visitors will be welcome at all meetings, which begin at 2:45 on alternate Fridays, starting Nov. 13. A Thanksgiving program will be given on Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Supt. Holliday is making arrangements with the M. A. C. for an extension school for farmers to be held at the high school building for a week during the coming winter. Instructors will be sent from the college and topics will be taken up according to the request of those in attendance. Further particulars of this school will be given in the papers later.

Of Interest to Women

Cut flowers will last well if a pieder of saltpeter be added to the water in which they stand.

To improve the lustre of furs heat corn meal in an iron skillet to a rich brown, but without burning. While still-hot sprinkle it over the furs and rub with a flannel cloth. Afterward remove by shaking and brushing.

Brass may be cleaned with the following mixture: Firewood ashes with lemon juice mixed to a thin paste. Use a soft flannel cloth and rub the stained brass until it shines clean and untarnished. Finish with a chamois.

Chamois leather is rather expensive, so that it is just as well to know how to clean it. Put into a weak soda into which you have thrown some grated soap. Leave it for two hours and then rub it until clean. Finally rinse the leather in warm soapy water. Wring the leather in a linen cloth and dry quickly. It can also be rubbed dry and brushed until soft.

The pastor and Mr. Joynt attended the County Sunday School convention at Charlevoix on the 3rd and 4th.

The various sessions were held at the Congregational church and the afternoon and evening meetings on the 3rd were largely attended and all the sessions were inspiring and instructive.

Mr. Ekstrom of Boyne Falls was elected president for the ensuing year and the next meeting is to be held there.

Mrs. Howard Porter was elected treasurer. Judge of Probate Correll was elected delegate to the State Association meeting at Adrian.

He also, and Circuit Judge Mayne read very admirable and suggestive papers. The proceedings finished on Wednesday afternoon ending the best Sunday School convention ever held in this county.

The Lincoln.

The Lincoln is shorter and more compactly built than the Cotswold. The face and legs are white with occasionally a bluish tinge. The back is very strong, heavily and firmly fleshed. The wool is of great length, though much coarser than that of the shorter woolled breeds. Instead of hanging in the ringlets of the Cotswold it is in larger, broader locks, with a characteristic curl at the outer end.

The breeders' association for this breed is National Lincoln Sheep Breeders' Association, Bert Smith, secretary, Charlotte, Mich.

Keeping The Boy On The Farm

Pages and pages have been written on this subject. Whole books have even been devoted to it. Educators have discussed it, orators have devoted whole chautauqua speeches to it, and statesmen have wrestled with it.

The preacher who runs short of material for his sermons can always fall back on the parable of the prodigal son, and so it is with the public speaker, the educator or the writer—he or she can always find a ready subject when seeking to interest farm people. They can always offer advice as to the best way of keeping the boys on the farm.

No doubt some boys are still on the farm that would not have stayed there had not their fathers and mothers followed some of these many suggestions, but after all is said and done it is largely a problem that must be worked out between parents and son. What will interest young John Smith and will make him content to stay by the old farm may not appeal to Will Jones a little bit.

Some people make the mistake of thinking that a boy can be trained just as you would train a colt and lay down certain rules which are guaranteed to produce desired results if closely followed.

A colt may be "broken" according to hard and fast rules, but a boy is a different animal. His likes and dislikes must all be taken into consideration and there are about as many different dispositions among boys as there are boys.

The roads are too good and the means of traveling too easy to permit "breaking" a boy as one does a colt. That is, if the boy has spunk enough to make him worth anything either on or off the farm.

Education is a great help in solving the problem for many farm parents. The boy learns a true comparison between the farm and the city. Education dispels the false impression of the city that the farm boy is apt to have.

By education we mean more than the book knowledge he gets at school. The farm boy of today gets a wider education than the farm boy of thirty or forty years ago. He is not isolated. Through the different agencies which have brought the farm and the city closer together he has learned to make comparisons for himself.

Give a boy good home treatment, and most farm boys get that kind, and the decision is going to rest largely with him after all. And in a majority of cases he will decide wisely.

It has always been our observation that the majority of farm boys who have left the farm have done so with the best wishes of their parents and they were not much worried over the problem of how to change the boy's mind.

Of course many fathers have seen their boys go into other lines of business when it was their wish to have them follow farming, but after all we believe this great problem of how to keep the boy of the farm has worried a whole lot of people more than it has worried the fathers and mothers on the farm.

Some boys ought not to be farmers, others ought to stay there. It depends upon what they are "cut out for."

After all, why should all other boys be encouraged to find out what occupation they are best suited for, and the boys on the farm forced to stay there? Why not give them the same chance to let Nature have something to say about it? The most of them that will make successful farmers will decide to stay on the farm, and the others will not stay anyway.

In order that the boy's decision may be right he must, however, have the help of thoughtful, loving parents who will give him all the opportunity possible to see the advantage and disadvantage of farm life compared with town or city life.

Small Fireproof Garages

To keep the automobile safely and in the most efficient order and to preserve its appearance, there should be provided a permanent, fireproof garage. Concrete is the most suitable material for this purpose. A concrete building is warm in winter and cool in summer—very important considerations for the motorist who likes to "tinker" on his machine—and its fireproof qualities are self-evident and of the utmost importance where gasoline is so freely used.

In the sides of the doorway imbed bolts with heads in the concrete. These bolts will be used later for fastening the wooden door jamb which carries the hinges for the doors. Provide a good sized window in each of the three walls so that there will be plenty of light on the car when it is to be repaired or washed. The concrete floor will be 5 inches thick, made of 1 to 2½ to 3-concrete, and rests directly on the ground. The ground should be scraped and well ground gasoline storage tank with a pump extending up through the concrete floor.

The roof can be made either peaked or flat. The flat form is much easier for the average person to build. Such a roof should be constructed with a slope of about 4 inches toward the back of the building to drain off water. Make the roof 6 inches thick, of 1:2:4 concrete, and reinforced with ½-inch round steel rods spaced 5 inches apart for the short lengths and 9 inches for the long lengths. These rods are located 1 inch from the bottom of the roof. Where the rods cross, wire them together to prevent shifting when the concrete is placed. Over the doorway, where there is no wall to support the roof, the weight is carried by a concrete beam 6 inches wide by 14 inches deep, including the thickness of the roof. Both beam and roof are built at the same time. Two inches from the bottom of the beam place two ½-inch square twisted steel rods. The form for the roof consists of a flat platform of 1-inch boards on joists supported by upright studding. Be sure that the forms are strongly made and well supported so as to safely hold the weight of the wet concrete. This form should remain in place for a week or two after placing the concrete.

Make provision through the roof for a concrete chimney or sheet iron smoke pipe for a small coal or gas stove. The garage should be heated in winter to prevent freezing of the water in the cylinders and radiator of the car.

Materials Needed.

For a garage of the size given there will be required: 38½ barrels of Portland cement, 12 cubic yards sand and 24 cubic yards stone or gravel.

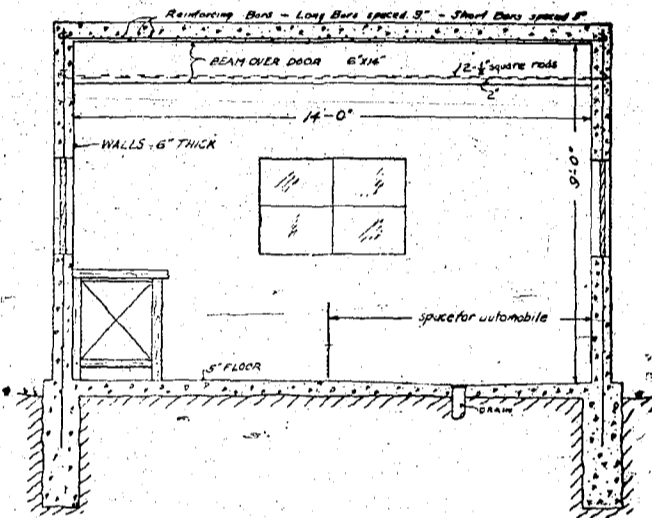

The garage should not be planned of too small dimensions. It is desirable to provide space for a work bench fitted with a good machinist's vise and rack for tools, and allowance made for room to store oil, gasoline, extra tires and other supplies. For a single car a size of 18 feet long by 14 feet wide by 9 feet high (inside measurements) will be ample.

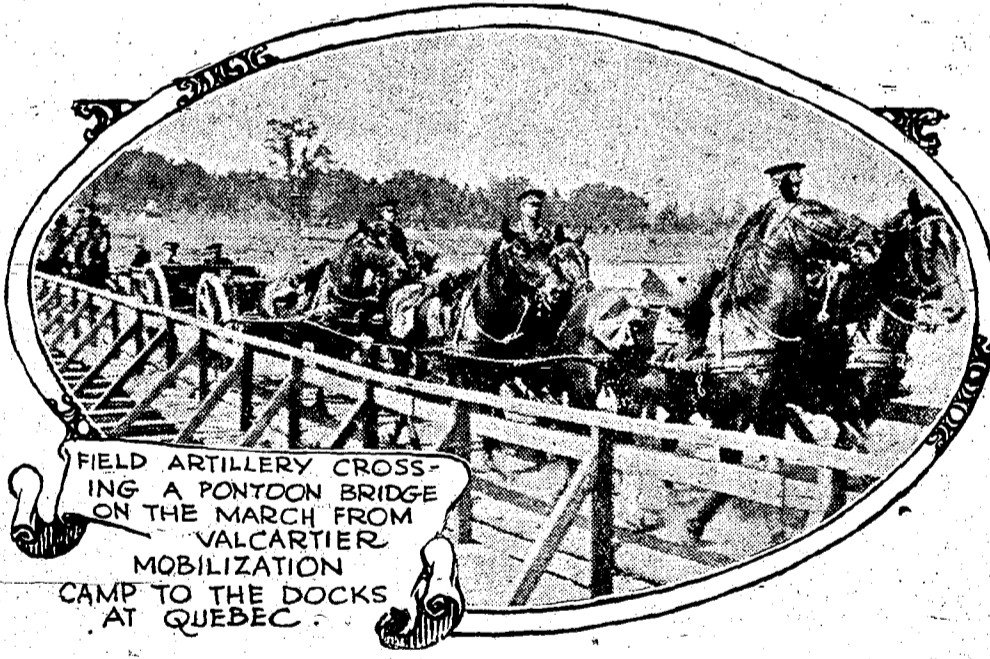

Method of Construction.

The foundations should be 12 inches wide by 3 feet deep and should extend 5 inches above ground level to provide for a concrete floor of this thickness. The concrete for the foundation should be made in the proportion of 1 part Portland cement to 2½ parts sand to 5 parts screened gravel or crushed rock. Upon the foundations the 6-inch wall will be placed. Make the walls of 1 to 2 to 4 concrete. The walls are reinforced with ½-inch round steel rods, spaced 14 inches apart, and running both horizontally and vertically. The forms for the walls can be built the full height, or movable forms of a height of about 3 feet can be used. Forms are made of 1-inch siding, well supported by 2x4 lumber to prevent bulging when concrete is placed. The movable forms are filled and raised each day until the entire 9 feet is completed. In order that the car can be easily run in and out if the garage, it is well to leave the entire entrance side open and fitted with large swinging doors.

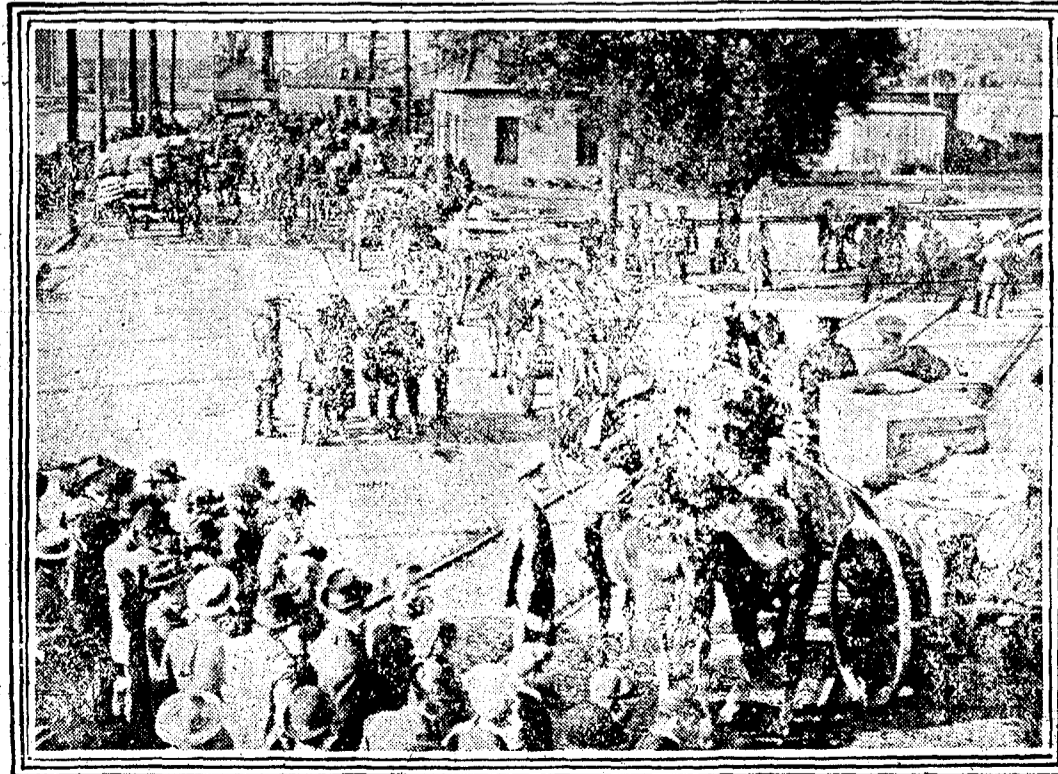

rolled or tamped to secure a good foundation for the floor, which is laid after the walls are finished. Where the car will stand the floor should be sloped to a drain at the center to carry off the water used in washing. If running water is obtainable, the pipes should be laid before the foundation and floor are started. It is a good plan to provide for an under-

FARMERS SHOULD RAISE WELL-BRED HORSES FOR INCREASED EUROPEAN DEMAND

Good Mares Used Ordinarily in the Farm Work Should be Bred to Good Stallions. Mares Kept for Breeding Purposes Only Not Generally Profitable. Countries at War Possess Nearly Forty Million Horses.

During the next decade there will probably be an increased demand for American horses in the countries now engaged in the European war. The demand may even continue much longer, according to investigators of the United States Department of Agriculture, as not only will horses be needed for armies, but when peace is restored, more will be needed for agriculture. Already European agents are said to be endeavoring to purchase horses in this country and Canada, and there is an increased interest in many sections in horse breeding.

To meet this increased European demand American farmers may endeavor to raise well-bred horses, although the Department of Agriculture does not advise them to purchase a surplus of horses merely for breeding purposes. It merely advises that ordinary farm work should be done whenever possible by good mares which should be bred to good stallions. It also desires to emphasize the fact that only horses of high quality may be profitably raised today. Inferior horses are a drag on the market, and their production is to be discouraged as much as the production of good horses should be encouraged.

The United States has previously been drawn on to supply European countries at war. In the Boer War over 100,000 horses were brought here by the British government. It may be doubted whether a foreign government could now obtain a similar supply in this country, except at excessive cost. However, if farmers take pains to utilize their good mares during this winter to breed them to good stallions, in the course of several years (time enough for the foals to develop), America will be better able to meet the European demand.

It is natural that European countries should look to the United States for horses, as next to Russia it has more of these animals than any other country in the world. The United States and Russia possess 58% of the world's supply. Strange to say, however, there were no horses originally on our continent and the present supply comes from stock brought over from Europe. Canada's supply is small compared to our own.

War as a Consumer of Horses. The German army requires for a complete mobilization 770,000 horses and the French army is said to require 250,000, which figure, however, probably includes only those for the cavalry. It is conservatively estimated on good authority that 1,000,000 horses are now engaged in the European war. As the great majority of these horses are not included in the permanent military organization but are used for farm work and are requisitioned by governments only when needed for military purposes, the countries of continental Europe will certainly face an acute shortage of farm horses before the next planting season which will seriously affect the price of horses the world over, as soon as peace is declared.

According to the best information horses in the countries of Europe now at war number as follows:

Great Britain 2,231,000

France 3,222,000

Belgium 263,000

Germany 4,523,000

Austria-Hungary 4,374,000

Russia 24,652,000

Total 39,265,000

In addition England has a supply of about six millions to draw on in her various dependencies. Russia has about ten millions in Asia and France probably 500,000 to one million in her colonies.

The rapacious consumption of horses in war is illustrated by figures from our own Civil conflict. During his Shenandoah Valley campaign, Sheridan was supplied with fresh horses at the rate of 150 per day. In his report for the year 1865, the Quartermaster General of the United States Army stated: "The service of a cavalry horse under an enterprising commander has averaged only four months." During 1864 there were 500 horses consumed per day in the northern army, without considering those captured and not reported. During eight months of that year, the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac was remounted twice, nearly 40,000 horses in all being required.

Our Own Army a Desirable Market. Our own Army furnishes a desirable market for well-bred horses, there being under the remount system, at least 5,000 horses required annually to supply both the Army and the National Guard. There are now about 20,000 horses in our regular Army on a peace basis. In war, many more would be required before the first engagement. There is, therefore, a steady market for good horses independent of the European demand. Even the invasion of motor power which has reduced the number of horses on our streets has not influenced this demand. In fact, the price of horses has advanced along with other commodities during recent years.

The Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., stands ready to aid any farmer desiring to breed high-class horses. As the day of the large horse ranch is practically gone, any increased demand will have to be met by the farmer. There are certain localities more suited to horse breeding than others and places where certain breeds do better. Such details may be obtained for the asking. Even in the south, where mules are bred in preference to horses, an increased production of first-class animals should find a ready market abroad, although the mule is not used on the Continent to the extent that it is used here.

Keep the male birds separated from the females during the winter months, unless eggs are wanted for incubation. Where the hens are not bothered with the males they will be more contented and productive and the eggs will keep longer. Then, too, he will be in better condition when the breeding season arrives.

You should be more careful what goes into your mash, food or table scraps. Birds will not thrive on decayed vegetables, old rags and strings, burnt matches, broken glass, and in other words, slop. They always say, you know, such stuff goes to the dogs. Poor dogs, it ain't fit for them.

Michigan Produced More Potatoes in 1913 Than Any State in the Union

Food Commissioner Helme in Bulletin Advises Citizens of State to Eat More Potatoes Become Healthy—And Reduce Cost of Living.

"Eat more potatoes," is the advice of James W. Helme, state dairy and food commissioner, who issued a bulletin setting forth the high nutritive value of the tuber. The bulletin follows:

"According to the federal census the state of Michigan last year produced more potatoes than any other state in the Union and the three states of Michigan, New York and Wisconsin produced over 60 per cent of all the potatoes used in the United States. The potato crop of Michigan is this year exceptionally good and it is the one food stuff now in common use which is now selling at a very low price. Potatoes in the potato districts of Michigan are at present wholesaling from 35 to 40 cents a bushel and they are by far the cheapest form of starchy foods which starchy foods are necessary in the human system to produce heat and energy. The following statements relative to the food and medical value of the potato are taken from an article by Dr. J. H. Kellogg of Battle Creek.

"He says that the potato is more easily digested and appropriated by the body than the starches of wheat, corn and other cereals. In laboratory tests it was found that potato starch digested in less than one-sixth of the time of cereal starch. One-fourth of the weight of the potato is food substance, nine-eighths, of which consists of starch. Of the remainder, three-fifths is protein and two-fifths alkaline salts in combination with citric and malic acids, the acids of the lemon and the apple. The potato is deficient in protein and fats which can be easily supplied by other foods.

"Nearly 5 per cent of the dry substance of the potato consist of salts, chiefly of potash. These salts tend to purify the blood from the acids caused by the use of meats, which are the chief causes of hardening of the arteries, gout, rheumatism, Bright's disease and apoplexy. These salts of the potato are located just under the skin and for that reason potatoes should not be pared before being cooked.

"The potato has a high nutritive value. One pound of baked potato has the same food values as 5 7-8 ounces of beef, one pound of chicken, 10 pints of beef tea or 7 ounces of bread. The potato is not rich in protein and this should be supplied to the ration by the addition of milk or eggs. Half a pint of rich milk will thus balance a pound of baked potato. The potato is the most valuable of all known foods in furnishing alkaline salts to purify the blood and the free use of the potato combats rheumatism and gravel which are the results of chronic intestinal poisoning.

"The full text of this remarkable article by Dr. Kellogg on the food and medicinal value of the potato can be found in our pamphlet entitled 'Foods and Food Values,' which will be mailed to any resident of the state upon application to the department at Lansing. In view of the fact that potatoes today constitute the cheapest food stuff on the market and the further fact that the prosperity of Michigan is dependent largely upon the potato farmer of the state, who raises one of its chief products, we deem it timely to advise the people of the state to eat more potatoes and thus contribute to the physical and financial gain of the state and the individual."

ORGANIZATION OF A SPEAKERS' BUREAU

Grand Rapids Association of Commerce Will Furnish Speakers for Booster Meetings, Farmers' Institutes, Etc., Free.

Mr. Lee H. Bierce, assistant secretary of the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce, writes us as follows:

"Permit me to call your attention to the fact that the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce has just organized a Speakers' Bureau. The object of this Bureau is to furnish public speakers for the smaller towns in Western Michigan. These towns are constantly putting on booster meetings, farmers' institutes, etc., and are often greatly handicapped by the lack of desirable speakers. Through this Speakers' Bureau we feel as though we were coming to the aid of these organizations. Speakers will be furnished upon request of this office, and the only expense to the organization securing the speaker will be transportation.

"In this connection I might advise you that the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce is just as anxious to see Western Michigan grow and develop as it is to see Grand Rapids grow and develop. The smaller towns of Western Michigan are absolutely dependent upon this city as a market, and the wholesalers of this city are absolutely dependent upon the smaller towns of Western Michigan as a market. As this dependence is mutual, we are in favor of doing whatever we can to strengthen it.

"This invitation is broad and the offer will be accepted and certainly we can appreciate the liberality of business men willing to sacrifice their time and extend to our town and citizens a co-operative spirit as this large organization has manifested in the above paragraphs.

"Such a spirit as this makes us feel life is worth living, and that a greater Western Michigan is a reality.

GOOD FARM BUILDINGS ARE BECOMING THE RULE

The day was when the farm houses of Western Michigan consisted of log cabins located in the middle of small clearings in what seemed a limitless forest. That day has passed and the log structures have been replaced by substantial buildings constructed in accordance with plans prepared by architects. The above is a view of the buildings of the Harvey Steffens farm in Colfax township, Wexford county. These buildings are but a fair illustration of the buildings on many of the farms today in Western Michigan.

Social And Religious Agencies At University of Michigan

Ann Arbor—The social-religious agencies at the University of Michigan are unequalled by any of the large university cities of the United States. As a result of the "guild movement" which spread over the country some years ago, there are in Ann Arbor three student guilds, which maintain buildings for the purpose of fostering the social and religious needs of Michigan students.

Harris hall, the guild hall of the Episcopal church, built and endowed through the efforts of the late Bishop Harris, has a large reading room with a library of several thousand volumes, an assembly hall, several lounging rooms, a gymnasium, and a complete culinary department.

The guild house of the Presbyterian church, McMillen hall, is well equipped. Besides containing several large assembly rooms and a gymnasium, it has an annex known as Sackett hall, in which are housed a number of Presbyterian students.

Next door, Westminster house provides a home for a number of university women.

The Baptist guild house includes dormitories, lounging rooms and shower baths, and is the student headquarters for all the social functions of the Baptist students.

While the other churches in the town do not possess the guild buildings, they have large parlors in which the students of the various denominations hold social events during the year.

In addition to these buildings there is Newberry hall, which, while being primarily the home of the University Y. W. C. A. is also used for large social gatherings by the Student Y. M. C. A. This building also possesses a library, a tea room, a large auditorium and several lounging parlors. The Y. M. C. A. will soon erect a commodious building as the home of its activities.

Lansing—The Ann Arbor railroad has paid into the state treasury $17,000, which clears up its state taxes for 1912. It still owes its state tax for 1913, but has announced that it will pay it in monthly installments, clearing it up by May 1 next year, when the penalty of 1 per cent per month on the 1914 tax begins.

Cadillac—As the result of some experiments in the growing of potatoes, it has been decided that the Rural Russet is a very profitable potato to grow in this section. A carload of Russet seed potatoes was disposed of last spring, and now the returns are being received. One farmer reports an average yield of 200 bushels per acre. Another reports a yield of 75 bushels from two bushels of seed. These 75 bushels were marketable potatoes and were in addition to the bushels used for home consumption. A third farmer planted a half bushel of rurals and harvested 187 bushels. The returns are so encouraging that the producing power of the rural potato will be emphasized in the future.

Lansing—The Zach Chandler club of Ingham county will hold a banquet October 30, which President Hayes of the club says will be the largest affair of the kind ever staged in the county.

Lansing—Edward Kosten of Grand Rapids, the candidate for lieutenant governor on the Socialist ticket, will not have his name printed on the ballot. Kosten was nominated by the Socialists and the Socialist-Labor party at the primary as a candidate for lieutenant governor. When a man is nominated by two parties he must notify the secretary of state within five days after the primary which ticket will carry his name. Kosten failed to make a choice, and consequently his name will not appear on any ballot.

Lansing—That there will be a move made at the next session of the legislature to take away from the secretary of state's department the work of collecting and filing vital statistics reports is certain.

Adrian—Because he stole a bag of millet seed, Herman Weldon of Seneca, this county, was sentenced to spend from one to five years in the state reformatory at Ionia.

TREND OF PRICES OF FARM PRODUCTS

Grand Rapids—According to bureau of crop estimates just issued the level of prices paid producers of the United States for the principal crops decreased about 2.5 per cent during September; in the past six years the price level has decreased during September 2.8 per cent.

On October 1 the index figure of crop prices was about 1.9 per cent lower than a year ago, 6.1 per cent higher than two years ago, and 3.2 per cent higher than the average of the past six years on October 1.

The level of prices paid to producers of the United States for meat animals decreased 0.7 per cent during the month from August 15 to September 15. This compares with an average advance from August 15 to September 15 in the past four years of 1.4 per cent.

On September 15 the average (weighted) price of meat animals—hogs, cattle, sheep, and chickens—was $7.58 per 100 pounds, which compares with $7.15 a year ago, $5.74 two years ago, $5.87 three years ago, and $6.92 four years ago on September 15.

SHORT STATE STORIES

Cadillac—The campaign to turn Wexford county into one vast apple orchard, is being hurried along. The recently employed county agent has issued a circular giving instructions regarding the selecting of sites for orchards and suggestions regarding planting, and the selection of varieties. He is also taking orders for trees, these being furnished to the fruit growers at cost. Last spring a load of apple trees was sold, and next spring at least three carloads will be delivered. The following year it is expected a larger planting will be made, and so on, until all the lands not needed for general farming or stock raising will be into orchards.

Lansing—The Manistee and Leith Railroad company, operating in Manistee county and used for many years as a logging road, being 33 miles in length, has notified the railroad commission that it desires to discontinue the service and tear up tracks because the road is no longer useful as a lumbering proposition, the timber having all been cut off. The commission will hold a meeting and then decide whether it will give such permission.

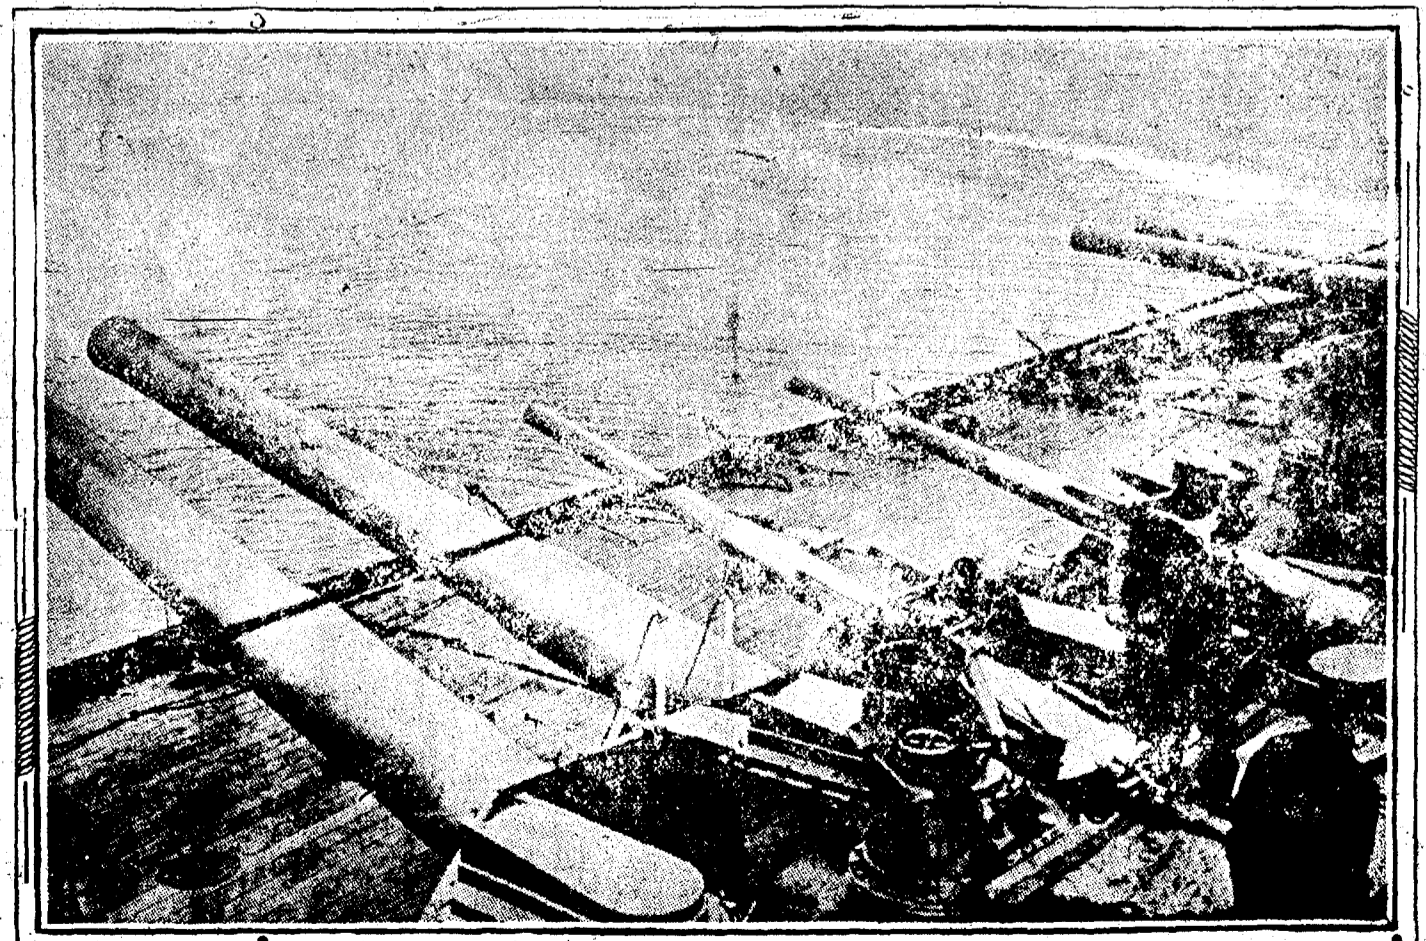

Owosso—Twelve contracting firms from about the state put in bids for the construction of the Owosso armory, but when bids were opened here by the state military board all were found to be too high. Architect E. A. Bowd of Lansing was instructed to make certain alterations in the plans and solicit new tenders from the original bidders.

Grand Rapids—Charles F. Kennedy secretary of the Greater Michigan Fair, has handed in his resignation and November 1 will return to Indianapolis, where he will resume work. Mr. Kennedy and the officers of the fair association are on the best of terms, and the resignation was in accordance with an understanding with Mr. Kennedy in the interests of cutting down expenses. The vacancy will not be filled for several months.

Flint—Resolutions approving the submission of the local option question at the spring election next year were adopted by the board of supervisors. Genesee county has been dry since May 1912.

Standish—A Kimball and Alderson, the latter about 12 years old, were accidentally shot by a hunter at Deep River, two and a half miles north. Mr. Kimball received several bird shot in his arm and side and his boy is more seriously hurt. Clark Pomeroy was accidentally shot by the premature discharge of his shotgun. His hand was badly injured. All will recover.

BIG GUNS OF BRITISH WAR SHIP READY FOR ENEMY TO APPROACH

BRITISH WARSHIPS IN NORTH SEA CLEARED FOR ACTION

Above is shown the big guns on one of Britain's dreadnoughts now lying in the North Sea ready for an attack by the German fleet. Travellers arriving in London from Kiel state the canal is crowded with German war ships, including the largest battle ships, and that the arsenal is busy day and night. Trains are continuously carrying large guns to the canal for the big German cruisers and dreadnoughts to complete the armament of these great sea fighters, which, England believes will soon engage the British fleet in a big open battle.

COULD NOT SLEEP, COULD NOT EAT

Woman So Weak and Nervous
Could Not Stand Her Children Near Her—Vino! Changed Everything for Her

Plant City, Fla.—"I wish I could tell everybody about VINO! For nine years I was in bad health. I got so I could not sleep, and I could not stand it to have my children come near me. I could not even sew or do any heavy housework. I was simply tired all the time. I tried so many medicines I could not recall them all, but nothing did me any good. One day a friend asked me to try VINO! and said it was the best tonic she ever saw. I did so, and soon got the first good night's sleep I had had for a long time. Now I sleep well, my appetite is good, my nervousness is all gone and I am so strong and well I do all my housework and work in my flower garden without feeling tired or nervous. VINO! has made me a well and happy woman."

—Mrs. C. H. MILLER, Plant City, Fla.
VINO! contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod livers (without oil) and tonic iron.
We ask every weak, run-down, nervous person in this vicinity to try VINO!, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

TOPICS OF 1914

Musical Farce—Comedy Next
Wednesday, At Temple Theatre.

Manager Adams has secured the laughable musical farce comedy, entitled "Topics of 1914" for one night only Wednesday Nov. 11th and assures the patrons there will be no increase in prices. Their aim being to give their patrons an evening of refined and artistic comedy at popular prices, where they will get their full money's worth, and this attraction comes endorsed by press and local managers where they have played, and Mr. Ben. Craner the popular theatrical manager who controls the destinies of "Topics of 1914" guarantees to give all lovers of farce comedy universal satisfaction. They do not claim to have the biggest in number of people, on the road, but do claim they have a company selected for their entire fitness of the characters, and are fully equipped with special scenery to present the production in its entirety, and those looking for an evening's amusement of wholesome fun, refined humor, latest songs, tunes, music, and graceful dancing, can make no mistake if they will make note of the date Nov. 11th and secure their seats at the reserved seat sale on the opening of the sale for "Topics of 1914."

County Normal Notes.

Miss Himes and Miss Whiting attended the State Teachers' Association at Kalamazoo, Thursday and Friday of last week.

Ruby Hoogter and Hazle Pearl are editors for this week.

Ward Genett and Cora Driggett had charge of the training room during the absence of Miss Himes and Miss Whiting on Wednesday. The members of the normal class acted as the teachers of their different subjects.

Lillian Akins and Bessie Allen are housekeepers for the week.

Hazel Richardson and Lela Genett called at the normal room last Wednesday afternoon.

Bessie Allen taught commercial arithmetic during the absence of Miss Lombard last Wednesday.

Lillian Akins, Cora Driggett and Bessie Allen had the experience of visiting schools last Thursday and Friday, Miss Akins visiting the Bellaire high school and Miss Driggett and Miss Allen visiting the Bay Shore school.

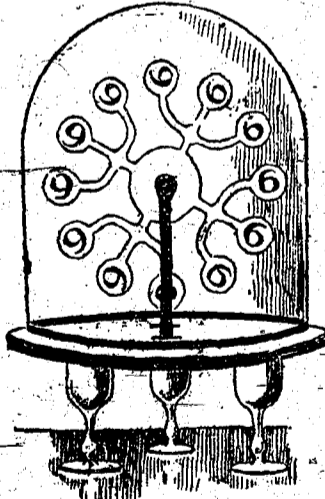

Fred Gregory attended W. C. T. U. convention at Betoskey last Thursday night.

It may be more blessed to give than to receive, but most of us are willing to let the other fellow have the blessing.

PERPETUAL MOTION.

Has Chicago Man Solved the Great Mystery.

The discovery of perpetual motion, of a sort, is the claim of a Chicago man, W. L. Saunders; and a picture of his invention is reproduced herewith. As will be seen, the device consists of a wheel made entirely of glass with 112 hollow glass balls, on each of which is painted the figure "6," or the figure "9," according to its position on the wheel.

Perpetual Motion Machine.

"Right there is the principle of the discovery," says the inventor. "It is simplicity itself, so simple that it is a wonder nobody has discovered it until now."

"The figures are sixes going up and nines coming down. A nine is more than a six. The nines going down on the left overbalance the sixes that are going up on the right and in this manner the wheel is started and kept turning without any other power. In short, a nine is more than a six."

"So delicate is the adjustment of the wheel's balance that the painted numbers are enough to start it going. It is the first device of the kind that the government has seen fit to grant a patent on."

One of the machines is said to have run 13 weeks without stopping. The one on exhibition in Chicago has been running continuously for two months. The device is used as a window attraction, no claim being made that the principle is available for furnishing power, etc.

THE VALUE OF CREAM.

It is a Greater Tissue Builder Than the Distasteful Cod Liver Oil.

Although the value of cream as a builder of the body has long been recognized, it was looked upon as more of a luxury than a government remedy. Medical practice is taking it into account more than formerly, because doctors are coming to realize more and more that cream, a delicacy beloved of children, is a greater tissue builder than nauseous cod liver oil. Thousands who are living today have to bless the dairy cow for being their foster mother when they were helpless babes, and for again coming to their aid in their maturer years and giving them her delicious cream with which to keep up in the race with wasting disease.

The writer, a correspondent of the Agricultural Gazette, has seen people waste with disease until they were mere shadows of their former selves, only to be brought back to health again when they returned to the farm for a while and drank plenty of cream. Of course, other things will do it, but none surpasses cream. If people in the cities would use more cream for sick, delicate children they would get results cheaper than by using milk and cod liver oil.

Butterfat is not so awfully bad after all. Reindeer's milk is 17 per cent butterfat, and her baby grows bigger than any except the whale, but then the whale gives milk containing 40 per cent fat. If butterfat causes infantile disturbances generally, why do children in the big cities suffer worse? Why does the southern part of the United States, as a whole, suffer more than other sections? Why is the infantile death rate higher from the Rhine to St. Petersburg in Russia than in any other part of the world? Why are these diseases much more prevalent in summer than in winter? The reason is obvious. They are caused by bacteria. These bacteria multiply in the intestinal tract after indigestion. The proteids are broken down into forms which cannot be assimilated. Some of the products of proteid decomposition are deadly poison.

In this decomposition the bacteria have practically no action on fats and alkalies, but as the whole digestive system is paralyzed by the poisons being generated within it, absorption is impossible, and so fats are excreted with the alkalies in the form of soaps. It can be readily seen that if that awful condition continues long the subject will die from exhaustion, from lack of nourishment and acute auto-intoxication, which means poisoning by toxins generated in the system.

JARRED BY A GOOSE.

The Favorable Result Was His Recovery from Partial Paralysis.

Arthur J. Reddington, a Lamanda Park, Cal., rancher, suffered partial paralysis of the arms and legs for several years, and was considered incurable. As Reddington was hobbling along the boulevard near his ranch the electric horn of an automobile frightened a flock of geese. One flew across the road and struck Reddington full tilt on the back of the neck. Reddington instinctively threw up his hands to the back of his neck. When he recovered his composure he found that he had also recovered the use of his limbs.

FACE OF THE HORSE.

Courage, Character and Intelligence Indicated in Lines of Features.

A Roman nose in a horse, like the corresponding aquiline shape in a man, generally indicates strong individuality, often accompanied with great intelligence.

A straight facial line is quite as often found with a high degree of intelligence, but a dish-faced horse is rarely anything but a nonentity in character or a fool. I have seen a few exceptions to this rule, but they only prove it.

A fine muzzle usually denotes a high nervous organization, while a coarse and large muzzle, with small and non-expansive nostrils and pendulous lower lip, means stupidity.

A sensitive and trumpet-shaped nostril means courage and intelligence, even when as it does sometimes, also means heaves.

A broad and full forehead and length from eye to ear are good general indications of intelligence, but the eye and ear are the speaking features of a horse's face.

The ear is more intelligible even than the eye; and a person accustomed to the horse, can tell, all that he thinks or means. When a horse lays his ears flat back on his neck, he most assuredly is meditating mischief, and the bystander should beware of his heels or teeth. In play the ears will be laid back, but not so decidedly nor so long. A quick change in their position, and more particularly the expression of the eye at the time, will distinguish between playfulness and vice. All experts agree that the ear of the horse is one of the most beautiful parts about him, and by this is the tempo more surely indicated than by its motion.

A Good Hog House.

The cuts on this page show a good and well built hog house, illustrating outside as well as inside pens. The walls are sheathed, papered and sided, and the roof is shingled. There are outside floors on the east, west and south, which are six feet wide. The house is 22 by 36 feet and contains ten pens. It was built at a cost complete, including labor, $275, which is $27.50 per pen, including the outside floor and pens.

The most striking feature of this house is the ingenious way in which outside pens have been provided without having them on the north side. There is an outside pen for every inside pen except one, the sows on the north side going out as indicated by the arrows in figure 10. This could not be accomplished with any more pens.

The ventilators are 6 by 6 inches inside. The lower ends are 2 feet above the floor and the upper ends just above the comb of the roof. The south rafters are extended to meet the north rafters, so that no studding are needed under the south edge of the north roof (see fig. 9). Whether this gives any advantage is doubtful. The sunshine will strike the floor in all pens several hours a day on March 1.

Skim Milk and Good Bacon.

Separated milk, fed alone even, will not only keep the pigs in good condition, but if given in sufficient quantities, will cause considerable increase in the fat and lean meats of the pigs.

Some station work shows that feeding pigs on skimmed milk alone, from which all the fat has been abstracted, make a decided increase in weight and the increase includes a fair proportion of fat.

Fat and lean meat are directly influenced by the composition of the food given pigs, and when a nitrogenous food is fed, flesh of a lean quality is formed, and by the feeding of fats, starches or other of the carbohydrate groups, the proportion of fat in the pig is increased.

Large quantities of separated milk are used for pig feeding in Denmark. In fact, the making of skim-milk cheese which was at one time an important industry in that country, has decreased largely on account of the profits to be derived from the system of using separated milk for pig feeding.

Why the Youth's Companion Should be in Every Family.

"If I could take only one paper," said the late Mr. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, "it would be The Youth's Companion—a little of everything in a nutshell, and unbiased." The Companion is a family paper in the complete sense. It provides reading that, without failing to interest the young, still interests the mature. It unites young and old through their common enjoyment of delightful fiction agreeable miscellany, and the clear exposition of public questions.

So carefully is it edited, so varied are its contents, that it would easily supply a family with entertaining fiction, up-to-date information and wholesome fun if no other periodical entered the house. If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1915.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for the fifty-two issues of 1915 will receive free all the remaining issues of 1914, besides a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1915.
