TO SUPPLY WEEKLY WEATHER FORECAST FOR FARMERS

Washington, D. C. April 22.—A new weekly weather forecast designed especially to aid farmers in planning their farm operations and shippers of perishable products to handle their goods with reference to expected weather conditions, will be inaugurated by the United States Weather Bureau on April 20 and continued during the crop season. In order to have these weekly forecasts reach the farmers and shippers in small towns with the least possible delay, the bureau also has arranged a system whereby the forecast will be taken Tuesday and reach the weekly newspapers, especially in the corn, wheat and cotton districts, by mail on Wednesday morning—which will be in time for the greatest number of them to use the information in their editions. In this way it is believed that the forecast for the week commencing Wednesday morning will be in the hands of most of the farmers and shippers in the small towns, through the medium of the weekly newspapers, Wednesday night, Thursday, or Friday thus giving them the benefit of from 6 to 4 days of advance forecast.

The forecasts will be prepared at Washington on Tuesday morning and will cover the week commencing Wednesday. They will be telegraphed to the State distributing centers of the Weather Bureau where they will be immediately printed and put in the mails to reach the weekly newspapers in the territory of each station early Wednesday, or in time for insertion by the vast majority of them. It is expected that these forecasts will be ready for mailing from the distributing centers by 3:00 p. m. or 4:00 p. m. each Tuesday.

The daily papers which take press-association services will secure the forecast by wire through the several press associations, which have volunteered to co-operate in its distribution.

WHEN AND HOW WE SHOULD SPRAY

Everyone who has given the matter any attention, realizes that it is not possible to grow first-class fruit without spraying the trees. If one has not demonstrated to his own satisfaction that it will be a profitable investment, it is only necessary to experiment with a few trees or, better yet, interview any up-to-date grower, since all of them are convinced from experience that spraying pays, as an investment and practically insures a crop of fruit if other conditions are favorable.

In order to secure satisfactory results the proper materials must be used and the work should be done in a thorough manner and at the right intervals. After the new growth has started it is important that the leaves and fruit be covered continuously with substances which will prevent the attack of insects and diseases. For the most part, the dangerous insects are those which eat either the leaves or the fruit and, for all such pests, arsenate of lead should be used at the rate of 2 to 3 pounds of paste, or one-half that amount of the powder in 50 gallons of water.

For the fungous diseases of fruit trees, such as the scab upon apples and pears, the rot and leaf-blight of plums and cherries, and the leaf-curl of the peach, commercial lime-sulphur solution is the remedy preferred. It can be used for apples and pears after the growth has started at the rate of 1 gallon to 35 gallons of water, but 1 gallon to 50 gallons will be sufficient for cherries and plums. Since the spraying for the leaf-curl of the peach must be done before the buds have swollen, the strength may be increased to 1 in 9. When used upon the foliage of peaches and Japanese plums for the prevention of brown-rot and leaf-blight, not more than 1 quart of lime-sulphur should be used for 50 gallons of water, but 2 pounds of flour of sulphur and the same amount of hydrated lime, made into a paste, should be added just before it is used. The labor of spraying is greatly reduced since it is possible to combine the arsenate of lead with the lime-sulphur solution.

The first application should be made as soon as the growth has started and is anything to spray, which will be about the time the blossom buds have developed so that the individual flowers may be seen. This will be when the flower buds are in the pink.

The second application should be given within a week after the petals have fallen and the fruit has set; and a third spraying can generally be given to advantage two to three weeks later. Just how many other applications may be made with profit will depend upon the season, the prevalence of the insects and fungi, as well as upon the varieties of the fruit, some of which require more attention than others. In some cases, a fourth application will be needed three weeks after the third, and, for winter varieties of apples, and for varieties of plums and peaches that are subject to the attack of the brown-rot, one or more applications in the early part of August should be made.

Fall In Line For Cleanup Day

THEY'RE ON THE JOB—ARE YOU?

Clean-Up Day Proclamation

The recurrence of another period of the breaking up of winter brings with it the duty of again admonishing the people of Michigan of the necessity of observing another Clean-Up Day, not only in the interest of public health, but in the interest of fire prevention. This ought not to be observed in a merely perfunctory way, but the work of cleaning up should be undertaken in a vigorous and systematic manner. The average American citizen is too much engrossed in his business affairs to heed the alarm that is sounded in the interest of his health and the health of the community; but if he will stop to consider that the cleaning up of streets and alleys, of doorways and factory premises, of cellars and garrets, is not only a work that will safeguard health, but go a long way toward fire prevention and ultimately have its bearing on lower insurance premiums, he will realize the practical advantage of responding to the appeal for a general observance in Michigan of

Monday, May 3rd

As Clean-Up Day And Fire Prevention Day

Let it be more than a Clean-Up Day—let us make it a "clean-out" day—a day when we not only clean up our streets and alleys and premises; but clean out our garrets and cellars, where combustible matter has been allowed to accumulate. We spend thousands of dollars to maintain fire departments to extinguish fires, and millions of dollars for insurance; why not spend a little time and money to prevent fires? Oily rags, always the accompaniment of the painting season, produce fires. Attics, mostly unventilated, become in the summer months intensely hot, and if dust and cobwebs, together with rubbish, are allowed to remain, they furnish a fruitful source of spontaneous combustion. In carrying out these clean-up ideas do not leave the burning of rubbish to children.

If the taxpayers and residents of the state could be familiar with records of the State Fire Marshal Bureau, and note that numerous lives are lost and hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property are annually destroyed by fires started from rubbish heaps and unsanitary conditions, they would welcome the designation of Clean-Up Day, even if they had no thought of the boon to humanity through the amelioration of conditions that sap the health of the manhood, womanhood and the childhood of the state, not to speak of the foundations of our future citizenship.

I urge, therefore, the mayors of cities, the presidents of villages, as well as township officers, throughout Michigan to bring to the attention of the people of their respective communities, by proclamation and through the public press, the importance of the observance of MONDAY, MAY 3rd, in line with the thoughts suggested in this appeal. Action by the thousands of women's clubs in Michigan, looking to an endorsement of this idea, will be a helpful influence to make this appeal and the efforts of local and municipal authorities effective.

Commissioner of Insurance,
Ex-Officio State Fire Marshal.

"CABIRIA" THE MASTERPIECE.

"Cabiria," the Itala Film Company's stupendous production of Gabriele d'Annunzio's scenario, which, after its premiere, was declared by critics and public to be "the photo masterpiece" of all time, will be shown at the Temple Theatre next Monday evening, April 26. This truly remarkable picture, with its wonderful cast portraying characters, historical and mythical, with the wars between Carthage and Rome, as its basis, daily holds the audiences spellbound, as, before them, on the screen, is projected in rapid succession, scenes that never have before been equalled, in either motion pictures or on the legitimate stage.

The strength of the giant Numidian slave, Macciste, the agility of the Roman, Fulvius, and his daring plunge of several hundred feet from a cliff into the sea, the eruption of Mount Aetna, with the burning lava streaming down on the housetops at the base of the volcano, the destruction of the Roman fleet at the siege of Syracuse, by Archimedes, a Greek geometer, who, with the aid of powerful mirrors, concentrates the rays of the sun, and turning them upon the ships, set them ablaze, the beautiful sunset scene of the caravan upon the African desert, the battle at the walls of Cirta, where the Romans, on scaling ladders, reaching the top of the wall, draw their short, sharp pointed swords, in an effort to drive the defenders back, but are thrust off the walls, by the Carthaginians with the points of their long spears, the costuming, which is correct to the minutest detail, the gorgeous tapestries in the palace of Hasdrubal, the remarkable beauty of Itala Manzini, who portrays the part of Sophonisba and the soulful acting of the entire cast of Italians, are revelations to the audience.

"A PAIR OF SIXES."

One of the reasons for the extraordinary success of "A Pair of Sixes," which H. H. Frazee sends to the Temple Theatre for performance Wednesday May 12th, is the fact that the plot furnishes one unending surprise and as Mark Twain once defined laughter as a spasm induced by a sudden shock of surprise, the inference is plausible that there is considerable laughter at the unusual situations in "A Pair of Sixes." When the comedy was first suggested, there was dissent from the wise ones and some concern as to whether the title would draw full houses. The wisdom of the author has been demonstrated, for never has any comedy been so long successful on Broadway. The never-ending complications resulting from the use of the little pair of sixes causes laughter and merriment unrestrained and surprises and shocks are so frequent that the average audience finds it difficult to retain its equilibrium. The play is coming to East Jordan with most of the cast which appeared at the successful year's run in New York City and there is small doubt but that their appearance will be greeted by the full houses they deserve.

Along Came Ruth

"Hustle, Elsie," Ruth sang out as she rushed in the door of her cousin's home. "I've got tickets to the matinee, and we haven't a minute to spare."

"O, Ruth, I could never get ready. I've just done my hair and those horrid skirts always ruin it every time I slip them over my head."

"I'll fix that, alright," answered Ruth, and, dashing into her uncle's room she procured one of his large silk handkerchiefs.

"Here," she told her cousin, "place this over your head. Your skirt will slip over easily and not a hair will be dragged out of place."

And Ruth and her cousin saw the curtain rise on the matinee.

Of Interest To Women

A simple method to soften hard water is to boil it for a quarter of an hour, pour it into an earthen jug, add a quarter of an ounce of common soda in each two gallons, stir, and when cold carefully pour off the clear water from the sediment.

A TIME SAVER

A shadow fell across the printer's desk, and he looked up to find a sleep-eyed stranger standing over him, holding a sheet of paper in his hand.

"Yes, sir," said the printer. "Can I do anything for you?"

"You can," answered the other, yawning. "I want the answers I have written on this paper to be printed on a very thick, strong piece of gilt-edged cardboard."

"Answers, sir?"

"Yes, answers." Then, after another yawn, the tired one became confidential. "I want them printed so that I can hand them to my wife every night when I go to bed. That's why the card must be strong."

"May I read the paper, sir?"

"I'll read it to you myself," replied the weary one. "Yes; I have locked the front door, and the back one." "No; I have not left any lights burning." "The dog is not in the house." "I have not left any cigarettes burning holes in the carpet." "That is not a burglar; it is the wind in the chimney." "Yes; I will be sure to light the kitchen fire in the morning." "No; I will go down to see if the coal cellar is locked." "I am tired." "I want to go to sleep." "Good night!"

EAST JORDAN PEOPLE PRAISE SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many in East Jordan praise the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-Ka. This remedy is the most THOROUGH bowel cleanser ever sold being even used successfully in appendicitis. ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour or gassy stomach. ONE MINUTE after you take it the gasses rumble and pass out. Adler-Ka cannot gripe and the INSTANT action is surprising.—James Gidley, Druggist.

Durable And Sanitary Feeding Troughs Of Concrete

A simple, sanitary and economical use of concrete is shown in the accompanying picture of a feeding trough for hogs. Nothing could be easier than to make troughs of this character for swine or poultry. Old lumber free from splits and knot-holes may be used. To procure an everlasting receptacle of this character simply means the nailing together of removal of the forms easy. A mixture of 1 part Portland cement, 2 parts sand and 4 parts crushed stone or gravel will make a concrete suitable for this purpose.

To prevent hogs from crowding or getting into the trough, cross pieces should be used as shown. To provide for bolting the cross pieces, holes should be bored in the platform at retwo boards in the shape of an inverted V. These are placed on a board platform or other even surface and surrounded with a board frame or form, which is then filled with concrete. The concrete is struck off while fresh to insure an even bottom. No special finish is required and very rude work will answer the purpose. The dimensions of the trough will, of course, depend upon the length and size of the quired intervals and the bolts set in with the thread end down. The bolts should go into the platform to a depth that will insure sufficient projection for the strap iron cross pieces and the nut. The concrete should be a "sloppy wet" mix and thoroughly puddled in the form. It should be kept in the form several days and protected from hot sun and wind. When sufficiently hard on the exposed surface to board forms. Small troughs for chickens or large troughs for hogs may be made with equal facility.

Another simple method of making a small trough is to substitute for boards half of a drain tile or terra cotta pipe for the inside form. Where the boards are used it would be well to oil the surface coming in contact with the concrete. This makes the re-resist indentation with the thumb nail, the forms may be removed. The concrete should then be sprinkled twice a day for the period of a week.

The strength of a trough of this character will increase with age. It may be easily cleaned and will resist the hardest usage. The longer it is exposed to the weather the more durable it will become.

OUR POULTRY DEPARTMENT

ERNEST B. BLETT

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

SOME LOSSES IN POULTRY RAISING.

In taking up this subject we do not mean the losses that occur on every poultry farm and in every poultry yard, yearly, throughout this great country, by disease, lice, filth and neglect of poultry, by not giving them proper care; but, the loss from not knowing how to get the most from your poultry, by care and feeding. I shall take up a very badly neglected loss that occurs on many of our farms and poultry plants all over this great nation, that is, "Caponizing and Growing Capons."

Take, for instance, the average farmer, for an example. If he raises poultry at all, chances are, on the average, one-half of the poultry grown will be cockerels, and he will keep them as long as possible, or until they are a nuisance, then sell them, which generally happens in the month of September, or October, and of the breeds generally grown on the farm, the average weight will not be more than three pounds, and the price paid may average ten cents per pound, or thirty cents each. This, I think, is a good price, and will be considered so. Now, if he only had twenty birds to sell, he would realize $6.00. On the other hand, if the cockerels had been caponized, the same amount of feed would have grown more pounds in the same time, but capons being not profitable to sell until nine months to a year old, he will continue to feed the capons until this age is reached. A capon will weigh at one year old from ten to fourteen pounds, or, I might say, on an average of ten pounds per fowl, and the prices paid go up as high as fifty cents per pound.

We might figure the average price of thirty cents per pound, which would mean $9.00 for each fowl, or $60.00 for twenty, $54.00 more than the farmer sold the cockerels for, or a nice profit for the little extra work, care and feed and knowing how.

The birds, after the operation is performed, at once become docile and very quiet, putting on flesh very fast, and will cause no trouble by fighting and the many other ways that cockerels are a nuisance to have around, making it easy to have them about and grow them. The operation is easily performed, and not only is the operation successful, but the loss is so small that it could hardly be noticed. If you are going to raise capons, begin to make a study and secure your instruments at once to do the work.

Chicks should be caponized as soon as you can distinguish the sex. The work of caponizing is easy to learn and a full description of the operation, illustrated, is told in a book entitled "What's a Capon and Why." This is the best work on the subject I have ever seen.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Separate the males from the females in the early broods.

Gapes come largely by exposure to cold and damp weather and allowing the chicks to be out in such weather.

Where you find filth you find vermin. These two things cause a host of diseases and right here is where the losses begin.

Success will not come the first year. In fact, it takes two or more years to get started in the poultry business, and then you must keep everlastingly at it to make a success.

"Net profit" in the poultry business is what is left after all expenses, including labor and interest on the whole capital invested are paid. What is your "net profit?"

General Monthly Forecast.

May is a very trying month for the farmer because so much has to be done in such a short time. This is one of the busy seasons for the agriculturist and he not only has to make the most of the best times but plant seed that will agree with the current season. It is difficult to give a general forecast that will strike the happy medium since so many extremes can take place during the period indicated. However, it is expected the month of May will be a good growing month with plenty of sunshine and not an over abundance of rainfall.

May 2nd to 9th.

Storms of rain, hail, wind and electrical manifestations are expected to be over the lake region, Ohio valley, Mississippi valley and eastern states as this week comes in. The crest of the cool wave following this area of low barometer should be over western regions Saturday of last week or Sunday of this. In this case cool weather will reach the lake region and Ohio valley about Monday. Killing frosts are probable as far south as the Ohio river east of the Mississippi.

Early in the week temperatures will rise on the Pacific coast in advance of a low pressure area supposed to be over the Pacific ocean. This area will reach the west coast states about Tuesday, May 4th; plain states the 5th; Mississippi valley, 6th and 7th and eastern states toward the close of the week.

Heavy local rains and high winds are expected to be more severe over the Missouri valley than elsewhere during this storm period. Tornadoes in Illinois and in states west of the Mississippi river and electrical storms in central to southern states are probable.

It is believed this storm area will bring in a general influx of cooler air from the north, but should the temperatures rise suddenly in advance of the area, expect as rapid a fall when the winds shift westerly with frosts as far south as the central sections of the continent.

Generally fair weather will come out of the southwest about Thursday, the 6th of May, and move eastward. However, western states will witness a generally stormy and windy period for the rest of the week.

The Control of the San Jose Scale

Weapons the Orchardist May Use Against This Destructive Pest

Detailed instructions for the use of various sprays in controlling the San Jose scale are given in a new publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin No. 650, "The San Jose Scale and its Control." In the absence of proper treatment, this widespread pest will bring about the death of most fruit trees and of many ornamental and shade trees. Its discovery, therefore, should be followed by prompt measures of control, whether it be found in commercial orchards or in private grounds. Private individuals, however, will scarcely feel disposed to equip with such expensive apparatus as orchardists may find profitable. The bulletin, therefore, describes washes and spraying apparatus suitable for varying conditions.

Where only a few plants are infested, it is probably better for the owner to use some of the prepared washes. In fact many commercial orchardists prefer to use these in preference to making them at home. These consist of compounds of sulphur in a highly concentrated condition, or powders, to which it is only necessary to add a sufficient quantity of water. The powders which have but recently appeared on the market are much more convenient to handle and store than the commercial lime-sulphur concentrates. The latter, however, are still largely used by orchardists who do not care to incur the expense of constructing the cooking plant to make their own lime-sulphur washes.

Prepared in one way or another, some form of lime-sulphur wash is the most common agent for controlling this scale. A formula much in use some years ago was:

Stone lime.....20 pounds
Sulphur (flour or flowers).....15 pounds
Water to make.....50 gallons

In preparing this wash, about 1-3 of the total quantity of water required is heated in a cooking barrel or vessel; the lime then added, and the sulphur immediately afterwards. The sulphur should previously, however, have been made into a thick paste with water. After the lime has slaked, about another third of the water should be added and the cooking continued for an hour, when the rest of the water is put in. During the time of cooking, stirring is necessary if the wash is cooked in kettles. It must also be strained as it is run into the spray tank.

Comparatively few fruit growers now employ this method, because this wash must be applied immediately after it is cooked—otherwise there is crystallization of the sulphur and hardening of the sediment upon cooling. The cooking is also inconvenient. It is for these reasons that manufacturers put on the market concentrated solutions of lime-sulphur already mentioned, and which when used at proper strength are quite as satisfactory as the old-time formula. When lime-sulphur concentrates are made at home, the so-called 50-100-50 formula is frequently used. This is composed of 50 pounds of lime, 100 pounds of sulphur, and water to make 50 gallons—the respective ingredients being boiled together for from 50 minutes to an hour, while the mixture is vigorously stirred either by hand or by a mechanical agitator. As soon as the cooking is over, the solution should be drawn off and run through a 30-mesh strainer into barrels, the agitation being continued all this time in order to effect an equal distribution of the sludge. When properly stirred this solution can be kept for a year or more before being used. Such concentrates vary considerably in strength, and it is important that they be tested with a hydrometer. The new bulletin contains a table giving the quantities of lime-sulphur concentrates of various strengths necessary to make 50 gallons of the spray solution. The number ranges from 1 1/2 gallons for a summer application with a strong concentrate, to 11 1/2 gallons for a winter application with a weaker one.

In controlling the scale, it is always advisable to spray the trees while in a dormant condition, for at this time the wash may be used much stronger than would be safe to use on foliage. Spraying may be done in the fall, in mild climates during the winter, or preferably in early spring before the buds push out. For small plants, low trees, ornamental hedges, etc., a bucket pump or a knapsack pump will provide all the apparatus necessary. For orchards of some size, as 5 and 10 acres, a barrel or hand-power pump will prove more satisfactory, and for large commercial orchards gasoline outfits are usually employed. Where only one or two trees are to be treated, it is quite practicable to apply the wash on the limbs and branches with a brush.

In addition to the lime-sulphur washes, kerosene and crude petroleum either pure or in emulsions, are used. The Department does not recommend, however, the use of these oils in a pure condition, and while there is no question as to their efficacy in destroying the insects, their employment is likely to cause serious injury to the trees. Kerosene and crude petroleum may be readily emulsified in soap and the oil thus used at any desired strength. The so-called "Miscible oils," however, which are commercial preparations, are now largely used by those requiring oil sprays in preference to the home-made emulsions. Treatment with these oils is probably desirable only when the infestation is very severe and experience has shown that the scale will not be controlled by lime-sulphur sprays. Soap washes made from fish-oil soap are also used to some extent at the rate of two pounds to the gallon of water, and sprays on trees in a dormant condition.

TWILIGHT STORIES FOR LITTLE FOLKS

By Paul Leake

Ben's Golden Glow.

The snow was falling softly, covering the muddy street with a blanket of spotless white, giving to the dull gray of the fading day a soft brightness which seemed to rob the approaching night of its blackness and terror.

Yet it was a lonely scene, and Ben leaned with his face against the railings of the fence, sobbing as if his little six-year-old heart would break. Mama had been taken away by some men in a big box. The fire in the rickety kitchen stove in the shack called home had gone out. Papa was somewhere out in the great big world, but Ben did not know where and was too little to find out, so he stood shivering in deepening gloom, deserted and alone.

Before Mama had been taken from him, he remembered she had told him that God would take care of him. He wondered in his dim, childish way, if this was true, stopped crying, lifted his face and said: "Mama, you know God better than I do, please ask him to get me some supper and find Papa."

From out of the east, along the quiet, white, deserted street, came a golden glow in the center of which walked his mother. Ben felt the warmth of her approach, and yet the snow did not melt, and she left no foot prints upon the white blanket that now covered the ground. Her face was sweet to look upon as she gathered the tired little body in her arms and soothed him with her kisses. She did not take him to the desolate home. Instead of that they seemed to rise in the air. Over the housetops of the city they were carried, and across country till they got over a great lake which shone like silver in the moonlight that followed the snow storm.

Ben was filled with wonder but had no fear. Going over this lake they reached a great city. The clanging of street car gongs, the rumble of heavy trucks and the roar of the elevated rang in his ears and he was afraid. His mother looked down upon him and smiled. Fear left him.

Through the city to the outskirts she piloted him, finally coming to a section that seemed to be the homes of working men. From one of these homes, a boarding house, came a man, Ben's father. The man stopped, put his hand to his face, then bowed his head and walked on as if in deep thought. He came straight toward Ben and his mother. When he saw them he dropped his dinner bucket opened his arms and embraced them both saying in a broken voice, "I am coming home, dear ones and will never leave you again."

The golden glow which surrounded Ben's mother disappeared, and she faded into space. He cried out for her.

"Ben, Ben! wake up dear. It is time to get up." Opening his eyes and looking into his mother's happy face, Ben knew he had been dreaming.

Education For The Home

Study of home relationships, as an essential part of education, is the only cure for the divorce evil, according to Dr. B. R. Andrews, in a bulletin on "Education for the Home" just issued by the United States Bureau of Education.

In the making and the conduct of a home man's responsibility is equal to woman's, according to Dr. Andrews. "As we have lately been emphasizing woman's responsibility for municipal and civic matters," he says, "so we may urge that men be come more conscious of the home and their relation to it. It takes two to start a home and the child has a father as well as a mother." "The basis of appreciation of the home is laid in the kindergarten. Household arts will henceforth be taught in the elementary schools, in a general way, while practical training in domestic science will be given to girls whose education is to end with the elementary school."

Practically all the state normal schools have organized household arts departments, according to Dr. Andrews. Of the colleges and universities, over 250 have definite courses of instruction in home economics.

A number of government agencies, including the home education division of the Bureau of Education, the Children's Bureau, the Public Health service and the Department of Agriculture, are all, according to this bulletin, engaged in reinforcing the home and the school in social betterment.

"The child is school minded," says Dr. Andrews. "For this reason the child can be reached through the school. The school can help the home by reinforcing the natural interest of the child in the home, by imparting knowledge necessary for sharing in home activities, and by affording some practice in them."

Among the plans for connecting the home and the school, that of giving "credit" at school for housework done at home is becoming widespread. The application of this idea is seen in what is known as the "Crate plan." It has been in successful operation for 10 years in Crete, Nebr., and has been adopted in 50 or more high schools in that state and in neighboring ones. This plan secures the co-operation of women able and willing to teach cooking of some given article. As many as 20 articles included in the course. Girls thereby see the interior of many good homes and gain impressions of good housekeeping. Girls become interested in cooking with the result that they are often found in the kitchen when their mothers entertain in the parlor. The plan has been said to be "the most democratic form of co-operation, and the best method of philanthropy yet discovered."

A Mile Of Fruit Trees

There are many large orchard propositions in the Western Michigan region. Among these are the tracts being developed by the Grand Traverse Fruit Company with headquarters at Empira. This company now has 552 acres devoted to orchard with a total setting of sixty-five thousand trees. Above is a view in the No. 1 orchard. These trees which stretch away in rows over a mile long, are one and two years old. The trees are peach, cherry and apple. The orchard covers 254 acres and overlooks Lake Michigan. There is a boat dock within a mile and a railroad skirts one side.

Tuberculosis "Remedies" That Are Worthless

No Real Cure Possible From Any of the Patent Preparations Investigated by Government Scientist.

Washington, D. C.—After investigating under the Food and Drugs act, a large number of prescriptions advertised as consumption cures, the Department of Agriculture has not been able to discover any that can in any sense be regarded as "cures" for tuberculosis. Some certain drugs that may at times afford some temporary relief from the distressing symptoms of the disease, but this is all.

Since the passage of federal legislation prohibiting the shipment in interstate commerce of medicinal preparations, for which false and fraudulent claims are made, there has been a marked tendency to label these preparations "remedies" instead of "cures" or "infallible cures" as they used to be called. In many cases, however, they can not even be regarded as remedies.

FERTILIZER

quently shown. One of the main objects is to persuade the patient that he is receiving, at a comparatively low price, the individual attention of a trained specialist. For this purpose, symptom blanks are employed. These contain a number of questions about the patient's symptoms, the number varying from a dozen or so to as many as 70 or 80. The patient is led to believe that the information which he furnishes in reply to these questions, will be carefully considered before any medicine is prescribed for him, though every physician knows that an accurate diagnosis cannot possibly be made in this way. As a matter of fact none is attempted and the degree of attention which these individual reports receive can be measured by the fact that cases have come under the observation of the department in which mail order concerns doing a business of this kind have received as many as 4,000 letters a day.

After the patient has submitted his "diagnosis report" he is urged to purchase a supply of the medicine. If he does so, he is then urged to purchase more. If he states that he has experienced no beneficial effects he is told that he has not taken enough and this process is likely to continue until the limits of his credulity have been reached. If, on the other hand, he decides at the beginning not to purchase the medicine it is likely to be offered to him at successively lower prices until he is at last induced to believe that he cannot afford to ignore such a bargain. This is carried to such an extent that a "treatment," the original price of which is $25, may be offered at the end of six months for $2.50.

As a matter of fact the successful treatment of tuberculosis requires much more than the mere giving of medicine and, moreover, what will help one case will not necessarily help another. Claims that are absolutely unwarranted are no longer permitted on the labels of medicines shipped in interstate commerce, but the wording may be such as to convey a misleading impression without the use of absolute statements. Thus these preparations continue to find a sale despite the fact that a little trouble on the part of the prospective purchaser will reveal their worthlessness.

OUR BOYS and GIRLS

A NEW STUDY.

When the twins came home at noon they ran straight to mother, to tell her about something that had occurred in school. They were not sure what to call it, but they were very much excited.

"Just think, mama," cried Theodore, "right in the middle of the geography lesson Miss Chester asked me how many white horses I saw on my way to school!"

"And in spelling," blurted up Theodore, "when I was expecting her to ask me to spell and define 'frigate,' 'cause that came next,—she said, 'Can you tell me, Theodore, how many pots of flowers there are in the hall window?'"

"Well, could you?" asked mother. "Why, no, mama! I never thought about it. Mary Jepson offered to go and see; but Miss Chester said no,

A sweet little girl went shopping, and never in her life felt worse than when after choosing her dolly she found she'd forgotten her purse.

and went right on with the lesson. Wasn't it funny?"

"And she asked Helen Powers, just after she had recited a rule in numbers, if she met any dogs when she was coming to school. You know Helen is dreadfully afraid of dogs, and she said she met two. What do you suppose, mama, made her ask such queer questions right in lesson-time?"

"I think," mama said, smiling, "that she wants you to learn to use your eyes, so as to know what you see."

"Do you think she'll mark us in it if we don't answer right?" questioned Theodore, anxiously.

"I don't know, dear; but if I were you I would try to notice things on the way to school—and elsewhere. Then if she asks you, you will be ready."

The next day, as the twins raced in, mama smiled. "How does the new study come on?"

"Oh, it's funnier and funnier!" Theodore giggled. "Why, mama, Miss Chester asked Jessica Brown what colored dress Frances Pease was wearing to-day—you know she is monitor in the upper hall. Wasn't that queer? And nobody could tell! Betty White guessed it was blue; but it wasn't. It was brown, trimmed with red!"

"But that wasn't so funny as the other question!" burst out Theodore. "Just before dismissal she asked Thomas Harvey if Miss Beach—she is teacher in Number 4, right across the hall from us—knew her hair in a braid down her back or pinned up on her head. First he didn't know what to say, and he thought a minute, and then he said, she wore it pinned up. And the funny part is that she wears it short and curled all over her head! Two or three of us raised our hands."

"I did!" put in Theodore. "Yes, we both did. But Miss Chester let Julia Coe tell. And Tom said he never noticed anybody's hair. I wonder what she'll ask to-morrow!"

"Observe everything as closely as possible," mother advised them, "so as to be ready when your turns come."

As the questioning went on, at least two of Miss Chester's pupils made marked improvement in the new study. When she called upon the twins they were able to give fairly correct answers. On the last day of the month they came home from school very happy. Each had been presented with a pretty pencil and note-book.

"Miss Chester wants us to put down in them the things that we see," explained Theodore.

"She says," went on Theodore, "that it is a great thing to learn to use one's eyes."—Emma, G. Dowd.

Preparing Soil For An Apple Orchard

Sufficient Proportion of Vegetable Matter is of Prime Importance

Rocky and rough land is frequently desirable for orcharding as smooth, easily tillable land, which helps to cut down the overhead cost. Some growers even claim that rock land is more desirable for fruit than that which is free from rocks, although we think this point would be difficult to prove.

Preparation of the soil:

That soil is in best condition which contains the greatest amount of vegetable matter. The American farmer has been extremely prodigal in his management of soils. Newly cleared lands in a timber country are generally very rich in vegetable matter, and are in consequence in good condition for any orchard crop. Old lands, or lands newly broken in the arid districts, are nearly always deficient in vegetable matter. Old lands that have been in alfalfa, clover or any of the leguminous crops may be prepared for any orchard planting by simply deep plowing and harrowing.

Lands that are worn by continuous cropping with hood or grain crops had best be planted to a leguminous crop before being utilized for an orchard. As it is essential to induce the roots of apple trees to penetrate deeply into the soil, deep plowing should be resorted to previous to planting the orchard.

In districts deficient in moisture, it is well to plow the ground in the fall previous to setting trees. Where the slopes of the land are steep, or where the rainfall is considerable during the winter months, it is best not to plow until nearly time for setting the trees, as extensive washing of the soil will follow fall plowing.

Thorough preparation of land before setting orchard is just as essential as for any other crop. Where very steep lands are to be planted to orchard and they are in clover or sod, it is sometimes desirable to plow strips 12 or 16 feet wide in order to prevent washing of the soil between the rows.

Pruning of Fruit Trees

Recognizing that the setting out of a fruit tree is for the purpose of getting fruit, all pruning is to be done with this in mind. Occasionally a fruit tree is set as much for ornament or for shade as for the fruit, calling, perhaps, for slightly different pruning than when grown for fruit alone; still, the treatment would not differ greatly, for no matter what the object of the planting, a tree of pleasing outline is called for.

All fruit trees demand a growth of young shoots annually if fruit is to be rendered by them, and such shoots follow good pruning and good soil. While dormant the cutting back entirely of old shoots, the cutting back of others, both with the aim to have new shoots follow them, is to be considered. And often as not there are too many shoots being carried for the best results, and a thinning out of such branches should be undertaken. When fruit trees have been neglected for years there are sure to be branches too close together, and which the tree would benefit by their removal; and now, before the leaves expand, is the time to do it. Those who have had their trees injured by scale to an extent that greatly retarded their vitality, and then by spraying them quite rejuvenated them, will have noticed that with restored health the shoots spring out from all over the tree, both where wanted and where not required. There will be many of these to be cut out, leaving them only where they are demanded. In the writer's experience it is well worth considering when pruning the leaves of the branches here and there to permit of easy climbing the trees. It can often be done, a branch left here and there and one cut away sometimes, that easy movements about the tree be provided.

Care of Peach Trees

The varieties of peach trees selected must be largely determined by the locality in which they are to be grown, as some varieties thrive better in some localities than others. If convenient to market in many cases, the earlier varieties are the most profitable, provided, of course, they are of good quality; but with peaches, as with almost every variety of fruit, if an extra fine quality is grown, there is no difficulty in selling at a good price.

When grown more especially for home consumption select varieties that will give a supply through the longest season. Peaches are particularly a fresh fruit, and are best in season, and little or no effort is usually made to keep them any longer.

Peaches need a reasonably loose soil and will not thrive if grown in soil for any considerable length of time. The soil should be prepared in good tith by plowing and harrowing.

Peaches are so often injured by severe cold freezing weather, that in a majority of cases spring planting is preferable to fall, but it is an item to make all the preparation possible in advance so that at the first favorable opportunity in the spring planting can be done.

CLEAN UP AND KILL THE MOSQUITOES.

"Cleanup time is here, and so is mosquito time. Gird on your swatting armor and go forth. One moment, however, before you go—the female is more deadly than the male."

"Among mosquitoes the members of the 'fair sex' are fierce bloodsuckers that inject an irritating poison into our skins, and they may accompany the dose of toxin with a few fever germs. The males lead a comparatively tame existence, subsisting on the juices of plants and fruits." So says a member of the University of Wisconsin biology department.

"The speckle winged anopheles, the malarial mosquito," he continues, "hibernates during the winter in our attics, cellars and closets. The presence of many lakes, swamps and ponds often makes mosquitoes an intolerable pest."

"The female mosquito gorges herself with blood in order that the eggs may have abundant nourishment. She deposits her little egg raft on the surface of quiet water during the night, and it floats there until the larvae hatch. The larvae are the 'wigglers' or 'wiggletails' which are seen in ponds and rainwater barrels the world over. Though mosquito larvae always develop in water, they must breathe air and frequently come to the surface. After a few days the larva sheds its skin and becomes a big headed pupa, which rests at the surface until it splits up the back to allow the adult mosquito to emerge."

"The best way to get rid of mosquitoes is to destroy their breeding places. This not only means draining swamps and filling in ponds, but gathering up tomato cans, putting netting over horse troughs, and rain, water barrels and watching the eave troughs. If it is impossible to get rid of standing water near your premises, oil placed on ponds will kill the larvae. Kerosene or any light fuel oil will serve for this purpose. About one ounce of oil will cover fifteen square feet."

Whereas, the Governor of the State of Michigan has designated May 3rd, 1915, as "clean up" day, and

Whereas, we desire to co-operate with, and assist in, this laudable undertaking, therefore:

Resolved: That the Fire Chief, Health Officer, and Chief of Police notify each and every person owning and occupying premises, upon which rubbish and other material deemed detrimental to the public health, or dangerous on account of fire, or public nuisance, or obstructing the streets or alleys, to remove the same on or before May 3rd, 1915. Further Resolved, that the City Attorney prosecute any and all persons failing to comply with such orders.

Adopted by the City Commission of the City of East Jordan on the 19th day of April, A. D. 1915.

At a recent meeting of the road commissioners of the county it was advised by local commissioner, Ed. Lorch that a petition be presented to the state to make the Boyne Falls-Boyne City road a branch trunk line. Mr. Lorch has written to the district superintendent and has received much encouragement. It is expected that work will be commenced upon the road early in May. The road will be fifteen feet wide and the state award will go a considerable distance towards meeting the expense. Such a highway would mean much to this city and Mr. Lorch is to be commended for his efforts in securing it—Boyne Citizen.

We would rather be held up by a stranger than thrown down by a friend.

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY PROCLAMATION

By the Governor.

The half has not been told concerning the destruction of insects by birds. The farmer in particular is indebted to the birds. True there are birds whose reputations are not above reproach. Some of them eat a few cherries and berries. This is only a small compensation for the service they render man.

Throughout the civilized world, birds are objects of admiration. Their beautiful plumage, their sweet and cheering songs, awaken the noblest emotions. The man, woman or child who has the heart to needlessly harm a bird will do injury to the human family. Thousands of our most beautiful feathered songsters are killed annually by the domestic cat. We need fewer cats and more birds.

By training boys and girls to feed the birds in winter and house them against storms, we stimulate the nobler emotions. The killing of birds for sport brutalizes the hunter. Michigan should conserve bird life. This is distinctively human.

Many of the birds are like men dependent upon the existence of trees. A park without trees is a desert, unfit for birds or human beings. Farms without trees, school yards without trees, homes without here and there a tree, roadsides without trees, are desolate and unfriendly. Plant a tree.

Let me ask the boys and girls to conserve the life of our wild flowers. Pick only a few here and there. Leave enough for seed.

Let the country, as well as city, engage in systematic tree planting, in tree culture for the delight and benefit of all useful forms of life.

Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate Friday, May 7th, 1915, as Arbor and Bird Day, and do request that this day be observed by all schools, public and private, and other educational institutions by the planting of trees for beautifying school grounds and parks, and by conducting suitable exercise for promoting the spirit of protection to trees and birds. Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this twenty-first day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, and of the Commonwealth the seventy-ninth.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS, Governor.

VALUABLE HINTS ON DISPOSING OF REFUSE.

How Pits With Covers Aid the Cleaners of Streets and Walks.

When streets and sidewalks are cleaned by hand sweeping there should be provided receptacles of appropriate design and suitable capacity for the reception of the street sweepings awaiting removal.

A useful form of such receptacle would be one which could be removed without being emptied, another being left in its place for the next day's sweepings. The same method is equally applicable for small garbage and household refuse.

There are other receptacles for street refuse that may be sunk in pits. They are made of steel with a dumping bottom, and the removal cart is provided with means of lifting them out of the pit to the top of the cart, which is covered with a top having special openings so that the contents of the cans may be dumped into the cart without being scattered by the wind.

After being so dumped the cans are lowered again into place in their pits.

In order to avoid handling such cans pits are located in the sidewalk near the curb, and the street refuse is swept directly into them, small hinged flaps bridging the gutter. The pit is, of course, provided with a cover.

The removal of all town street sweepings and garbage refuse should be done in wagons invariably having covers in order to protect the passing public and the workmen from escaping particles. It is better, however, to have it removed in the original cans, leaving empty cans in place, as this is an absolute protection to all concerned and gets the wagons off the streets sooner.

GOOD IDEAS FOR CLEANUP CAMPAIGN.

Various localities where clean-up and paintup crusades are waged appoint special committees of women and girls to aid in the work.

Also many schools organize their pupils into bands of dirt annihilators. The young folks are found to be especially effective in this sort of activity. Most of them like to feel that they have become old enough and big enough to assist the grown-ups in doing the grown-ups' work.

CLEANUP POSTCARDS.

An Effective Novelty First Used in a St. Paul Crusade.

Cleanup postcards are a novelty introduced in St. Paul.

No less than 40,000 were mailed to persons a year ago, and this year probably double that number will be utilized. The cards, with appropriate illustrations and text or with text alone, prove very effective in getting volunteer cleaners into action.

The cost of printing them is very low. They can be either mailed or distributed by individual workers.

SPOILING THE WILDWOOD.

The wind blows free, and the hovering mist

Gives way to the sun's bright glow.

The sighing oak by the zephyr kissed

Has a song that is sweet and low.

Atar in the valley the stream extends

Like a ribbon of silver bright,

And the birds that build where the willow bends

Are happy from morn till night.

Along come people who bring their lunch.

And they scarcely regard the scene.

The chipmunk sits and observes them munch

A pickle or a sardine.

Oh, Nature, with all her splendid plans,

Anger must surely feel

As we strew the landscape with old tin cans!

And paper and orange peel!

DON'T DO IT ANY MORE!

Chaff From Hay Wagons, Dirt Dropping From Contractors' Loads, Etc., a Distinct Menace to Any Community. Prompt Reports to Authorities Necessary.

"In the many small streets in the poorer parts of towns and cities," writes a prominent doctor, "where nuisances occur, a considerable time often elapses before they are reported to the proper authorities. The nuisances continue unabated during this time and may result in infection of some kind. That is not willful negligence. It is simply because it seems to be nobody's business to report those nuisances, which continue until the tenant complains to the real estate agent or it reaches a local department in some other roundabout way.

"Why could not a department of public safety use inspectors and police officers and have them report every occasion if they found that garbage was scattered over the street or was not properly covered, that a main was broken, a drainpipe stopped or that any such nuisance had occurred?"

"When excavations are made throughout a city a great deal of the dirt blows about and fills the air with dust. The children of the neighborhood, too, play in the dirt and scatter it about. Why should not the excavated material be covered with a tarpaulin so that the dust would be minimized? Another preventable cause of the dust and dirt comes from the hay-wagons which trail their loads through the streets, dropping dust and chaff along the way. Finally, there are the drop bottom carts of the contractors, which carry dirt and refuse from one place to another. Often one sees a trail of earth sifting from the improperly closed trap bottom of these wagons to be scattered and blown about the streets.

"All these and many more things go to make up the dust which especially in the summer makes a haze which the eye can discern. Smoke often causes part of this haze, particularly in damp weather, when it descends in clouds, but dust is largely responsible for it.

"The effect of these dust particles laden with all sorts of disease bearers depends simply on the resistance of the individual who breathes them in with the polluted air. They are responsible for many cases of conjunctivitis and, I think, are an important cause of catarrhal and other head, throat and pulmonary troubles."

EXPERT TALKS ON CLEANUP WORK

Says German Cities Provide Model For Americans.

STREET CLEANING SCIENCE.

No Refuse Should Be Placed on Sidewalk—The Sweeping Process Should Be Started When No Traffic is on Street—Early Morning Best Time.

By FRANK KOESTER.

The lack of system and want of technical training on the part of many American officials in charge make street cleaning unnecessarily expensive. Leave the streets in a bad condition and cause the cleaning to be carried out in a disagreeable, insanitary way.

In foreign cities engineers specialize on this subject. Street cleaning has been reduced to a science, and economy, efficiency and the comfort and convenience of the public are considered.

The purpose of street cleaning is to remove as quickly and as cheaply as possible all foreign matter in the streets and thus to conduce to the health of the public by minimizing the circulation of germ laden dust.

The cleaning of streets should be carried out in a systematic and thorough manner. The cleaners should proceed in crews with the necessary apparatus both to clean the streets and the sidewalks as well, if necessary, and the layout of the work should be such that no member of the crew needs to wait on the progress of the other, but all proceed simultaneously, and when they have passed through the street the work will be done. The method of piecemeal street cleaning, with the householder sweeping dirt into the street, the street cleaner sweeping it into piles and the piles being removed by wagons, with the occasional passing first on one side of the street and then on the other of some piece of street cleaning apparatus, results in a continual stirring up of dust to the great discomfort and inconvenience of all concerned, while the street never really gets cleaned.

The number of men in the cleaning crew depends on the kind of machinery used. As no machine is capable of reaching all parts of the street, a certain amount of manual sweeping is necessary, especially when the sidewalks are cleaned in conjunction with the machine sweeping, so that, as indicated, the whole width of the street will be cleaned at once.

Must Be Clear of Traffic.

In order that such cleaning may proceed with efficiency and dispatch, and consequently with economy, the streets must be practically clear of traffic, as the presence of vehicles, especially those standing at the curb, greatly delays the work of the crew.

As the operation of such a crew also handicaps traffic and as the public prefers to see the streets clean, rather than to see them being cleaned, it is essential to select a suitable hour for cleaning. German cities have conducted numerous tests for finding out the most favorable hour. The city of Dresden adopted the practice of cleaning the main streets in the early morning hours, beginning about 4 o'clock and finishing the business sections by 6 o'clock, some 20 to 30 per cent of the entire street area. The cleaning of the remainder of the streets proceeds immediately after the main streets are finished, and the whole city is cleaned by 9 a. m.

The Early Morning Plan.

The advantages of the system are that the cleaning can be carried out by daylight and is consequently better performed than when carried out under artificial light, that the workmen are more efficient as day workers than as night workers, and that during the early morning hours the traffic is at the minimum.

No refuse may be placed on the sidewalk, but must be kept on the householder's premises in such places as will not cause annoyance to the neighbors. As the street cleaning crews may be expected at a fixed time, daily the householders are able to make their arrangements accordingly, and thus the whole proceeding is carried out in the most expeditious and convenient manner.

Most Urgent Duty.

Perhaps the most urgent of the duties of the street cleaners is the removal from the streets of the carcasses of dead animals, not only on account of the unsightliness of such objects, but also because, especially in summer, they are a menace to health. Singularly enough, in many American cities, including those constantly exploiting their civic improvement plans, there is a lack of co-operation between the police, to whose notice such matters naturally first fall, and the street-cleaning departments, so that the carcasses remain often for days before being removed.

It would certainly seem a necessary preliminary to street planning to have the streets free of such impediments.

Street cleaning machinery consists principally of three classes—sprinkling, sweeping and removing apparatus.

Sooner or later the high flyer must pay up or come down.

five manner as the family table at home is administered, and every one is sure of getting just as much of everything as he wants.

The daily bill of fare is by no means stereotyped, for it varies every day and is never the same this week as it was the week before.

In contrast with the present day general mess aboard ship it is interesting to look back and see how a hundred years ago our sailors lived in this respect. In those days the men did not have tables upon which to eat, but spread a "mess cloth" upon the deck in their respective gun rooms and squatted on the floor around the festive cloth. The ration then, as now, was governed by law, which specified exactly what articles and how much of each would be issued to the men daily and the following extract from the law approved March 27, 1794, is here quoted to show how frugal was the sailor's menu in those days:

Sunday.—One pound of bread, one and one-half pounds of beef, half pint of rice.
 Monday.—One pound of bread, one pound of pork, half pint of peas or beans, four ounces of cheese.
 Tuesday.—One and one-half pounds of beef, one pound of potatoes or turnips and pudding.

ships after she had been out to sea for a few days, whereas now every battleship is sufficient unto itself in that respect and turns out each day tons of ice for refrigeration and drinking purposes.

In the navy of today fresh meats and vegetables are issued every day, and no matter where the ships are patrolling the coast of Mexico, at their home ports or cruising in the Mediterranean, a full ration of these articles is always served. That when the stock of service conditions are the men are always sure of getting as good fare as if they were at their own home tables. There is no occasion to have recourse to dehydrated products or food substitutes of any kind in lieu of the real thing. The navy department's attitude on the question of subsistence for the enlisted personnel with regard to the acceptance of food substitutes, such as dehydrated potatoes, oleomargarine, etc., is best made clear by quoting an excerpt from an intrabureau order in lieu thereof one quart of beer per day to each ration.

The last item is interesting in the light of present day regulations, which strictly prohibit liquor in the navy for drinking purposes. There were no facilities for refrigeration aboard ships in those days, and consequently fresh provisions were a luxury. Ice-making machines were then unheard of, and it would have taxed Aladdin's magic lamp to the utmost to produce a drink of ice water on one of those fresh provisions on board individual ships of the fleet gives out there is a supply ship standing by with a ready cargo of all kinds of fresh products—fresh eggs, meats, vegetables, etc.—to replenish every ship that needs them. So well developed is the navy's system of fleet supply that on the memorable trip of the Atlantic fleet of six-teen battleships around the world in 1908 ample supplies of fresh provisions for all hands were always provided. From this it will be seen that whatever promulgated by the Paymaster General of the navy, in which he directed that "no provision requisition will hereafter call for any food substitute. . . . Adequate and satisfactory subsistence is the very foundation not only of real efficiency, but of discipline itself. There is no class of purchases for the naval service that needs to be more constantly watched than provisions, our men being no "poison squad," but American citizens, for whom we stand in the relation of trustee in so far as relates to the question of food."

THE NAVY MENU: HOW PURCHASED, PREPARED AND FINALLY SERVED

By W. R. RYAN.

IF "the Little Corporal" had been an admiral instead of the world's most famous general he would have probably applied the following fundamental truth to the soldiers of the sea when he said that "an army travels on its belly," for, whether on land or sea, bodily fuel is indispensable.

If you have ever had the good fortune to witness a company of Uncle Sam's sailors on parade you have undoubtedly felt a wave of admiration and pride surge over you at the sight of so magnificent a body of men, exhibiting health and strength in every line. And you have perhaps pondered the causes that combine to produce such stalwart specimens of manhood, for in no nation in the world is there a finer, stronger, healthier body of men than those who man the fighting ships of the United States navy.

One of the most important factors contributing to achieve this physical perfection in the naval personnel is the food—the "ration," as the three meals a day are termed. It is upon the foundation of food hygiene that the other health giving factors in our man-o-war's men's daily routine find a perfect base on which to build.

The ration components are fixed by law, which specifically states what articles of food and how much of each shall be served to the enlisted personnel daily. Thus the task is set to procure the different items of food and see that they are prepared in a manner calculated to make them most attractive and nutritious.

Marketing for the navy has been evolved into a most elaborate and scientific system, and when it is considered that the navy market basket must provide for over 50,000 men every day it is apparent that the task is no small one. Like the wise, discriminating housewife, the government demands and gets always the best in quality and purity in every article of food that is purchased for the men. Take, for example, from among the innumerable items comprising the ration, the principal item, meat. This one item is purchased in great quantities, from 500,000 to 1,000,000 pounds being not infrequently purchased at one time. This meat, including several kinds, such as beef, pork, veal, fowl, etc., is purchased after advertising for bids which must be based on carefully prepared specifications that will admit of only the best products the markets of the world afford being accepted. When the contract has been consummated and deliveries commence, expert inspectors are detailed to see that the smallest detail of the specifications as to quality, purity, etc., is rigidly complished with, and not one pound is accepted until these government experts have assured themselves of entire compliance in every respect with the letter of the specifications and contract.

The same elaborate system of specifications and inspections which governs the purchase and delivery of this one item of the navy menu is just as assiduously and scientifically applied to every other individual component of the ration, including butter, eggs and spuds (Irish potatoes) down to canned tomatoes. The religious degree of adherence to the prescribed specifications for each and every item purchased can perhaps best be illustrated by reciting that in one delivery of about 8,000 dozen eggs, ordered under navy contract, 33 per cent of them were rejected as not conforming strictly to the required standard for fresh eggs. The specifications for the different items of fresh and dry provisions are interpreted very literally, and cold storage eggs, like oleomargarine, never find their way to the enlisted man's table.

Nor does food inspection cease at this point, for the naval instructions require that upon delivery aboard ship "a medical officer shall inspect as to quality all fresh food purchased for the general mess," and thus the wisdom of the following excerpt from the naval instructions is apparent:

"Orders for the fresh provisions to be taken on board preparatory to leaving port shall always call for delivery sufficiently in advance of the time set for sailing to make it entirely practicable to secure satisfactory provisions in replacement in the event that the delivery made by any contractor should prove on inspection to be not entirely up to specifications in every respect."

And so it is that when the navy's market basket is filled its contents are such as would make the eye of a pure food expert sparkle with pleasure.

The same degree of care and system which is bestowed in filling the larder applies, equally in the preparation of the food for the sailors' table. This work is delegated to a corps of skilled, efficient cooks and bakers, whose culinary ability and versatility, make mealtime aboard ship such a welcome occasion. And these men know their art well, for they are given a very comprehensive course of study and practical work in these branches of domestic science at the training station at Newport or San Francisco before they qualify for the rating of their vocation on board ship, where, under the direction of a commissioned officer of the Pay Corps, they bake bread and pies and concoct all manner of tempting dishes, which any good housewife would be proud to acknowledge as her own product, with the result that the bluejacket misses "home cooking" not at all.

Let us visit one of the big gray Dreadnaughts and see how the men fare at mealtime, starting with the morning meal at "seven bells." Promptly on the minute all hands are piped below, and in orderly procession they eagerly take their allotted places in the different gun rooms, which at mealtime are converted into dining rooms. As we take our places with the men this is what is set before us:

Breakfast.—Fried bacon, scrambled eggs, oatmeal and milk, bread, butter and coffee.

Dinner.—Roast chicken with bread dressing, mashed potatoes, stewed peas, cranberry sauce, mince pie, bread, butter and coffee.

Supper.—Salmon with onions, potato salad with mayonnaise dressing, corn fritters, bread, butter, coffee and cake.

The meals above described were actually served on board the United States battleship Wyoming and represent in quality and variety the average daily ration aboard ship. One could scarcely wish to partake of more tempting or wholesome repasts.

The food is not served to the men in individual portions, but each table, accommodating from ten to fifteen men, has its own supply in several big dishes, which the men pass around and help themselves from, in the same rela-

"Cabria," the colossal photo spectacle which will be given at the Temple Theatre, next Monday evening, April 26, shows what is probably the best chosen and most rehearsed company of actors and actresses ever presented in a film. The character of Hannibal is impersonated by a great Italian star who has been with the company in Turin for several years. Sophonisba, the Carthaginian princess, gives the performer Itala Manzini, an opportunity of reaching the highest level of histrionic tragedy ever manifested in a film. Maciste, the slave, is a natural actor magnificently trained and his physical prowess is the theme of admiration of all those who have seen the picture. There is not a part in this picture, even down to that of the humblest soldier, that is not filled by thoroughly drilled and trained artists. As a manifestation of motion picture acting the film alone deserves study by all interested in stage work, be it of the talking kind or the movie kind. The company rehearsed the picture off and on for a period of a year.

Apple Epigrams

A little land and a living is the slogan of the hour.

The apple is the aristocrat of foods and the best medicine.

The climate and conditions that are best for apples are best for man.

Anarchy never gathered fruit from its own apple tree.

Apple orchards are better nurseries of citizenship than the deck of battle ships or military camps.

The man in the orchard is always a good citizen.

Horticulture is a science, not a guess.

The twentieth century is to be the age of the apple, and Colorado is to be the center of its empire.

The apple barrel is nature's medicine chest.

I would rather trust a judge that loves apples than one that hankers after bear meat.

Apples are an antidote for drink and tobacco.

Apples carry the pure food stamps of the great physician.

The road that leads to the orchard is the pathway to a simple, happy, prosperous life.

A Few "Hoe Donts"

Don't double up like a half-opened jackknife while hoeing. Better bend a hoe shank and stand up to it.

Don't chop the earth and let the weeds lie in the row. Draw them out into the cultivator space.

Don't go out with a hoe without a file in your pocket. Filing a hoe is easier work than cutting weeds with a dull one.

Don't fall to have one "abbreviated" hoe made from an old one. There are many places it will fit.

Don't fool away much money on "patent" hand hoes. Better stick to the old style.

Don't select a hoe with a heavy blade and a crooked handle. It makes you tired.

Don't take the new hoe yourself and give the old one to the boy because it is light. It makes him tired.

Don't forget that it takes 75 dollars worth of time to wear out a seventy-five cent hoe. It is worth a cent of money on the dollar of time to have a good one to start with, and then keep it good.

Don't do all the cultivating yourself and make the boy do all the hoeing. Change with him once in a while. You have no idea how much it will rest you to hoe for an hour or two.

Don't forget that a new hoe is about the right shape to do the work required of it. You can not improve the pattern with round corners.

Don't forget that hoeing is "easy" or "hard" work, as you make it; a tool out of order is hard on man or beast.

Don't imagine that because you hoe like father did that you are doing a good job. Maybe he didn't know how.

Don't think that just because you went ahead with a hoe on your shoulder and came home at night "dead tired" that you had been "hoeing". Maybe you don't know how.

THE TOWN BEAUTIFUL

Movement to Distribute Flower Seeds Should Spread.

In Nebraska several public spirited communities have adopted the practice of distributing flower seeds to children in connection with the clean-up and patinup propaganda.

The children are instructed in the planting and care of flowers and also in the simple methods of digging gardens.

The practice is known as "the town beautiful movement". Many a yard after being cleaned up becomes a spot of real beauty when a flower garden decorates it. Even a back yard can be made a pleasure to the eye in this way.

"Thank you, sir," said the detective. "I hope we won't have to detain you long, sir."

"I hope not, I am sure," Kandwahr agreed. "And may I ask why I am being taken there at all?"

"You may, sir, but I won't promise to answer. I happened to see you leaving Lord Harcourt's house, sir, and curiosity to know what you were going to do overcame me. When I saw you about to throw this beautiful little toy into the Thames, I just couldn't resist the temptation to ask you to come along with me and explain it all to MacBee. I knew he'd be interested in knowing why you didn't want it any more." Barney smiled knowingly, and hailed a passing cabman who whipped up sharply when he heard the directions and caught sight of the detective's familiar countenance.

During the ride Kandwahr discreetly remained silent, and the detective was not disposed to be communicative. Half way to their destination Kandwahr produced his cigarette case, apologized for having but one cigarette, and lit it after several attempts in the stiff breeze that was now blowing. He only took a few puffs of it, however, and then threw it out of the cab with a sign of relief. He had remembered just in time that the monogram of his cigarettes, and that on the bill of the dagger in Barney's pocket were the same.

MacBee was in his office when they arrived. Fully dressed he sat by a small table with a reading lamp, smoking his pipe with evident enjoyment, as he sat staring silently at the ceiling.

He looked toward the door as the two men entered and smiled when he saw Kandwahr. Then he turned an inquiring glance at Barney.

"He has the dagger, sir," said Barney, saluting his superior. "I found him about to throw it into the river."

MacBee took the knife from the detective and examined it carefully. From his pocket he took the sheath that had been found in Dodson's grasp and fitted the long blade into it. With a smile of satisfaction he compared the workmanship on the hill and blade with that of the leather case, and then, with a low whistle, looked straight at Kandwahr. "That is your knife," he said accusingly.

"It is," was the frank and rather surprising reply.

"I thought so from the first," MacBee said. "The initials seemed familiar."

"They are mine," Kandwahr said without hesitation. "I gave the knife to Capt. Townshend before Lord Harcourt's dinner last evening."

"Indeed," said MacBee. "Did anyone see you give it to him?"

"No—we were alone."

MacBee looked at him closely for a moment, but the Indian never moved a muscle under the scrutiny. Then MacBee turned to Barney. "I thought you were watching Lord Harcourt's house?" he said.

"I was, Prince Kandwahr left there shortly after 2 o'clock, and walked straight to the embankment."

With a look of surprise MacBee swung abruptly around and faced Kandwahr. "What were you doing in Grosvenor Square?" he asked sharply.

"Talking with Lord Hazcourt," Kandwahr answered simply.

"I beg pardon, sir," Barney interrupted, "but I watched the house since midnight, and I did not see the prince go in. Lord Harcourt returned in his car about half past one o'clock."

"What time did you arrive there?" MacBee asked Kandwahr.

"Some time before, I waited for Lord Harcourt to return."

"But you were at Mr. Cornish's reception—did you not see Lord Harcourt there?"

"No, I left before he arrived."

"I am quite aware of that—or of the fact that you left shortly after he arrived," said MacBee slowly. "At 1 o'clock I received a telephone call from one of my men saying that you had just entered Lord Harcourt's house by the window of his study overlooking the park. He is still waiting for you to come out. It might have been interesting if he had gone in after you, but I thought it best not to have him do so."

With a smile, the inspector paused to relight his pipe, looking curiously across the bowl at Kandwahr, while the match flickered over the fragrant tobacco.

"I trust your man will not weary from waiting," Kandwahr said with a grin. "Your theatricals are quite interesting, Mr. MacBee. It quite reminds me of a crime play. As it happens, however, you overstepped the mark this time. Lord Harcourt himself showed me out by the front door at about the hour this gentleman mentioned."

"Indeed," said MacBee. "But, may I ask why you use this peculiar mode of entrance to his lordship's residence?"

"Perhaps he would care to explain to you himself," MacBee suggested.

MacBee did not answer. For a few moments he puffed great clouds of smoke into the air and then put down his pipe. "You may go, Barney," he said and the detective left the room.

"Now, Prince Kandwahr," MacBee resumed. "I am going to be frank with you. This is, beyond question, the knife that caused the death of Capt. Townshend. You have admitted that it is yours—or that it was yours, shall we say? You must realize the position in which this places you. I am ready to listen to anything you may have to say, but I warn you that any statements you make will be used against you."

Kandwahr took the chair the inspector indicated, and calmly returned MacBee's steady gaze.

"As I told you I gave this dagger to the Grill club," Kandwahr repeated coolly. "When its sheath was found today I was naturally somewhat upset, least its discovery bring me unpleasantly into the affair. I had reason to believe that Lord Harcourt had the knife, and I went to his house this evening to satisfy myself of that fact."

"What reason had you for thinking that Lord Harcourt might have it?"

"It was not found with it's sheath, and Harcourt was the last man seen with the murdered man."

"And when Lord Harcourt returned this evening you asked him for it?"

"I did not."

"And yet you have it?"

"It was locked in the drawer of his filing cabinet, which I forced."

"Quite remarkable," said MacBee.

"Apparently, in your opinion, Lord Harcourt is the murderer, and in your anxiety least the discovery of your knife in his possession should point the finger of suspicion at you, you went to his house to recover it?"

"Exactly."

"Would not the finding of the knife in Lord Harcourt's house require some explanation on his part?"

"Doubtless. If it were discovered, but I preferred that the weapon be placed beyond all possibility of discovery."

"Surely your highness does not consider me a child?" said MacBee.

"Kandwahr, you went to Lord Harcourt's house, to leave that dagger there, in order that its ultimate discovery by my men might be used as evidence against him."

"Your powers of reasoning overpower me, Mr. Inspector," Kandwahr said in mock admiration.

"Do they?" said MacBee. "Look here, Kandwahr, I am perfectly aware of the fact that there is a great deal more to this business than we have as yet discussed. I know that you left the Grill club last evening before the murder was committed, but unfortunately I do not know where you went when you did leave there, nor do I know that you did not return."

"But for this fortunate accident, the doorman might have been able to enlighten you," Kandwahr said smiling. "As it is, the other servants should have known it if I had returned to the club."

"Unless you returned by means of the window," MacBee observed. "The murderer, whoever he was, undoubtedly entered and left by that way. Within a few hours I shall have some interesting intelligence from Madras. Meanwhile, permit me to say that I have been in India myself and I have never had the pleasure of hearing of Prince Kandwahr before this affair came to my attention."

The Indian shrugged his shoulders, dismissing the statement as one of little interest or importance.

"Furthermore," MacBee went on, "I shall be obliged to detain you here for an indefinite period—in spite of the annoyance the fact may cause you."

"You mean that I am charged with this murder?"

"I mean that you will be detained here."

"And you do not intend to arrest, or at least examine, Harcourt to learn whether or not what I have told you is true?"

"If you will pardon me, I have not said what I mean to do or not to do. If you have nothing more to say concerning yourself, I shall bid you good night." And he touched the bell at his elbow.

A man in uniform entered. "Show Prince Kandwahr to his quarters," MacBee directed and without further words, began refilling his pipe.

CHAPTER IX.

The Confession.

It was nearly dusk the next afternoon when Harcourt's car brought Sir Harry Rarndale and Carrington over from the station to Harcourt Manor. The other guests had arrived beforehand, and Grace and Adele Cornish were preparing tea when the late comers walked in.

"What news, Dicky," Harcourt asked, as Carrington joined him by the fireplace. "I can see that you are fairly bursting with excitement."

"Kandwahr has been arrested!" Carrington blurted out.

"Kandwahr arrested!" the others repeated in astonishment, for the news had been kept secret, and even the early evening papers in London had made no mention of the fact. MacBee was evidently bent upon concealing his moves, and Carrington had only learned of it immediately before leaving the city.

"No one seems to know much about it, but the moment the rumor reached me I telephoned to MacBee, and he confirmed the story. He declined to discuss the matter, but the folks in town are saying that the police expect another and more important arrest within a few hours. In fact, it is openly prophesied—and without contradiction—that before morning the murderer will be in the hands of the police."

"If he is not already there," said Cornish.

"Do they give any hint as to who he may be?" Harcourt asked.

"No, not the slightest," Carrington replied. "One thing of interest to us all, however, is the fact that MacBee expressed implicit confidence in Jack's innocence, and said he hoped shortly to justify his belief."

"How perfect!" Grace exclaimed lightly.

"I'm sure I wish him luck," drawled Harcourt.

"MacBee told you something else about the knife—Garndale prompted.

"Oh, yes," Carrington went on. "I almost forgot that. You remember what I told you, Jack? I knew it belonged to Kandwahr, and when he was taken into custody last night it was found upon his person!"

"You are sure," Grace asked excitedly.

"Positively," said Carrington. "Kandwahr admitted his ownership, and could not deny that it was the murder dagger. But its beyond me how the deuce—"

"Is it, Dicky?" Harcourt broke in warningly.

"Yes, did you know of it?" Carrington demanded.

"I suspected as much," Harcourt answered. "You'll find Scotch on the table."

Rarndale and Carrington helped themselves, and Harcourt took a stiff drink with them; then led the way to their rooms as Adele and Grace went up to dress for dinner.

Alone with Marston, Cornish lit a cigar, and began to walk slowly up and down the room. "Look here, Sir Thomas," he said at last. "This Townshend business is taking an aspect I don't like. I think Harcourt knows more about it than he is willing to tell."

"Bless me sir!" Marston exclaimed in amazement. "Surely you don't mean you believe he could have—"

"Committed the crime? No. In fact, I am perfectly satisfied that he did not. On the other hand, I do think he is connected with it in some way that we know nothing of, and that he feels it his duty to shield some one."

"That would make him an accomplice!"

"Not necessarily. Like all Englishmen of his class, he has fool notions. I beg pardon, sir—no offense meant. I assure you—but he has absurd ideas of honor."

"Surely he would not permit himself to be accused of a crime of which he is innocent—just because of a desire to shield the guilty person?"

"That depends upon the person he is trying to protect," said Cornish.

"Impossible!" Sir Thomas objected. "There is no one for whom Jack would go so far—no one who could possibly be mixed up in this. I am sure you are mistaken. If Lord Harcourt knew anything of this affair, I am sure he would tell it to the police immediately."

"Well, I'm not so sure of it," Cornish persisted. "Now, what I want to make clear to you is this: I like Harcourt tremendously. He's a bit of a fool, but there's a lot of real man in him—deep down under his polished surface. I'm afraid he's going to get tangled up unpleasantly and quite unnecessarily, however. And I don't intend to stand by and see him make any false steps. We may have to use force to prevent his getting himself into trouble, and I want to know if I can count upon your help in case we are obliged to resort to such methods."

"I don't quite understand you," said Marston. "Of course, as my prospective son-in-law, Lord Harcourt is most dear to me, and I have known him to like him, since he was a child. If there is anything I can do to aid him, I shall of course stand ready to do it, but—"

Cornish extended his powerful hand. "It is agreed then!" he said heartily. "I have a pet little scheme up my sleeve, and when the time comes I'll tell you about it."

"May I ask you to be a little more explicit now?"

"Certainly, if you like. It is simply this. I have my steam yacht, the Murita, moored off Southampton. If it is necessary, we can get Harcourt aboard her within six hours."

"But my dear sir, Jack would never consent to run away—whatever happens."

"Exactly," Cornish explained. "Of course he won't consent—but you don't want him to run his neck into the noose if he's innocent, do you?"

(To be continued.)

Throughout the national forests the rangers are posting the roads with permanent guide signs which tell distances and directions, especially at forks and cross-roads. The signs are usually put up in the winter when other work tends to be light. On some forests the rangers go on snowshoes, dragging loaded sleds and haul the signboards to the roadside trees.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY TELLING CLUB

Essilyn Dale Nichols, Editor

1627-35 St., Rock Island, Ill.

Send Manuscripts and Letters for this Department Direct to the Editor of this Department.

Hello Everybody! Boys and girls—big members and little members! This is spring. Soon be garden planting time, won't it? How many of our club members are going to have gardens this year? It's lots of fun to have a really-truly garden of one's very own. And, by the way, your editor is planning on having a really-truly garden this summer—away out in the country, ever so many miles from these big cities. But—she'll have to hurry some, won't she? For she can't possibly reach her new home before April. Well, she will tell you all about it some of these days. Now for our letters. But—Dear me!—I almost forgot that I promised to print the Missing Word poem with the correct words filled in—this week! So here it is:

THE MISSING WORD POEM

Little Mistress Ruby Lee, just passing four YEARS old, Rambled forth one sunny day her BIDDY to behold. And kneeling down she quickly poked a SMALL and tangled head—Underneath the CORNER of a tumble-down old shed. Then Mrs. Biddy bridled and stood upon her LEGS; "Dear me," quoth Ruby smilingly, "she wants to SHOW her eggs." So Ruby ventured nearer; then pleadingly she SAID: "Mrs. Hen please let me SEE your pretty nest and bed." But Mrs. Biddy quickly gave a wrathful-CLUCK instead, And pecked her little visitor upon her tangled HEAD. Then Mistress Ruby backed away with quite a HASTY air, "Dear me," quoth Ruby ruefully, she tried to COMB my hair.

Now little folks, if any of you find a mistake in this contest that will effect the awarding of the prizes, just write and tell me about it. REMEMBER that editors are quite liable to make mistakes—especially when MEASLES interfere with such a big undertaking as the Missing Word Contest. But your editor will be very glad to correct all mistakes for she wants every contest in the Children's Story Telling Club to be conducted FAIR. NOW—we will have our letters. Our first one is a list of Missing Words sent in by Zelma Porter of Cedar Springs, Michigan. Here they are:

Dear Editor:—1. years; 2. biddy; 3. hand; 4. corner; 5. legs; 6. count; 7. said; 8. see; 9. peck; 10. head; 11. frightened; 12. pull.

Zelma—You will receive your prize in April. I hope you will write a nice letter to the club some of these days. Our second letter follows:

Dear Editor:—I am sending my list of words for the Missing Word Contest. I read the stories and letters every week. I saw Maxie Hull's letter today. I am eight years old and in the second grade. Here is my list: 1. years; 2. Biddy; 3. bright; 4. floor; 5. legs; 6. show; 7. said; 8. see; 9. cluck; 10. head; 11. thoughtful or frightened; 12. pull. There are my guesses and I hope I will win the first prize. Yours truly, Dorothy Dolezel, Mancelona, Michigan.

Dorothy Dear—I notice that you are one of the SECOND PRIZE winners. You will receive your prize in April. Our third letter is from Anna Mahoney, McBain, Michigan.

Dear Editor:—I thought I would try this contest and win a prize. I have been reading the stories and letters and would like to join the "Story Telling Club." Please send me a membership card. Here are the Missing Words: 1. years; 2. Biddy; 3. yellow; 4. boards; 5. feet; 6. show; 7. said; 8. see; 9. quack; 10. he; 11. frightened; 12. pull. I don't know whether these are right or not. I hope so. I will write again soon.

I am glad that you decided to win a prize in this contest, Anna. The prizes will all be sent out the first of April; and so, of course you will have received yours before you read this. Now comes our fourth letter:

Dear Editor:—I read your letters and stories and enjoy them very much. I would like very much to join the club. I have three sisters and two brothers. Their names are: Ethel, Mamie, Marvis, Morris and Eldop. Ethel, Mamie and I go to school. Ethel is lame and cannot go very much in the winter. She had infantile paralysis when she was two years old. Now she is nine. I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Munn. The stories I like best are "Greyball" and "How Mabel and Monty played Indian." My birthday is the last of July. I like Maxie's stories very much. I will close now. I will send my letter with Etta's. Your friend, Marie Taylor, Mesick, Michigan.

Marie—I am very, very sorry that I overlooked your letter. You see, Dearie, I was awfully sick with the measles when your letter came and I was not able to read it. Of course, it was taken care of, but when I got well enough to read all my letters there was so many that MISTAKES were made sometimes. This is one of the mistakes. I am sending you a membership card and when you read THIS you will know why you did not receive one before. I hope you will write again and often.

Dear Editor:—I was very surprised to see my letter in the paper. I did not get my card at all. I am going to write a story this time. My story's name will be:

THE GOLD AND SILVER AXE

By Etta Jensen.

Once there was a man and he was very poor. He was by the river chopping down a tree and his axe fell in the river. He felt very sorry that he lost his axe and he started home and he met a man who said: "I thought you was over by the river cutting trees" and the man said: "My axe fell in the river." Then the other man said: "Come show me where you lost it." And the poor man went back and showed where he lost it. All at once that other man was gone. All at once when he was looking down in the water he saw a hand come up out of the water and a voice said: "Is this your axe?" And he said: "No, that is not my axe." And a hand came up and he heard a voice and it said: "Is this your axe?" And the man said: "No, it is not my axe." And the hand came up again and the voice said: "Is this your axe?" And he said: "Yes." And the voice said: "You may have all three because you told the truth." He went home happy and he saw a man and he said: "Where did you get your nice axe?" and he told him. And he went home and got his axe and threw it in the water. And he made an awful fuss. He met a man and the man asked: "What is the matter with you?" And he said that he lost his axe in the river."

And the man said: "Come and show me where." And they both went back and the man showed him where he had lost it. And that man disappeared, and the man who had lost his axe heard a voice and it said: "Is this your axe?" And he said: "Yes." And the axe was dropped down under the water again. Again he heard a voice and it said: "Is this your axe?" And he said: "Yes, it is my axe." And it was dropped down in the water. At last his axe came up and the voice said: "Is this your axe?" And he said: "No, this is not my axe." And he did not get even his own axe back.

I will have to close my story because it is so long. Here is a list of the words that were missed: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Little—4 Floor—5 Legs—6 Hid—7 Said—8 Have—9 Fly—10 Head—11 Quick—12 Pull. From Etta Jensen, Mesick, Michigan.

Thank you, Etta, for a very nice story. I hope you received the membership card that I sent you as soon as I received your letter (the letter I have just printed, I mean). I am sorry you did not receive a card when you first joined our club. Your failure to receive one was due to a mistake, of course; and I want every little boy and girl who writes to our club to let me know PROMPTLY in case a membership card is not received.

Dear Editor:—My name is Arline Ferney. I am eleven years old. I read the letters and stories in the Children's Story Telling Club every week and I should like to join it. I have read the Missing Word Contest and this is what I think the words are: 3 Rough—4 Roof—5 Feet—6 Lay—7 Said—8 See—9 Look—10 Head—11 Wrathful—12 Pull. That is all for this time. Yours truly, Arline Ferney, Walla Walla, Washington.

Arline we are glad to welcome a little Washington girl to our club. I hope you received your membership card all right. Write again.

Dear Editor:—The Missing Words in the verses are as follows: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Small—4 Shelter—5 Legs—6 Lay—7 Said—8 See—9 Jump—10 Head—11 Haughty—12 Pull. If I win the prize will please send me a book. I have not been late or missed a day from school since I started to school. My teacher's name is Miss McRae. I am in the fifth grade. My studies are: Arithmetic, geography, spelling, language, physiology, penmanship, reading, music and drawing. I am eleven years old. I have four sisters—They are: Ruth, Lucile, Bess and Marie. I have four brothers, too. They are Jack, Lloyd, Ted and Harry. Please send a membership card to Dorothea Briggs, Elk Rapids, Michigan.

You are a good writer, Dorothea, and wrote a very interesting letter. I sent you a membership card which I hope you received. We shall be glad to have you write again.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the Children's Story Telling Club. I think it is very nice and I would like to join it. I am a little girl nine years old. I have two little brothers; one's name is Ilin and the other Lynn. I go to school every day. I have four little pets—two kittens and one dog. Their names are Nigger and Tiger and Daisy, and I have a pet hen. I hope my letter will be printed in the paper. Yours truly, D. Thelma Graves, Conklin, Mich.

Thelma Dear, I think I received a second letter from you not long ago. You were wondering, were you not, why your letter had not been printed? I will tell you why, girlie, because each letter must wait its turn, and we have so many to print that sometimes a letter must wait many weeks before it's turn comes. But every letter will be printed—DON'T FORGET THAT.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the Children's Story Telling Club. I like it very well, and I would like to join your club. I am a little girl eight years old. I have one sister and two brothers. My sister's name is Aileen, and brothers names are Earl and Charles. For pets I have a cat named Susan and a dog named Watch, and a white rabbit named Bunny. The story that I like best is "The Return of Greyball." If I see this in print I will write again some time. Pearl Bleross, Baldwin, Mich.

Thank you, Pearl, for a very nice little letter. And you like "The Return of Greyball" the best! I am glad you told me. I hope you received your membership card, and of course hope you will write again.

Dear Editor:—I have read your stories in your papers. I am in the fifth grade at school and eleven years old. Here are the Missing Words of the poem as nearly as I could guess them: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Snarled—4 Bottom—5 Legs—6 Hide—7 Said—8 See—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Doleful—12 Pull. Hoping to see this in print, I am your friend, Helen Loomis, Ionia, Michigan.

I am glad to print your letter, Helen and hope you will write again. Did you receive your membership card?

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the Children's Story Telling Club and would say I would like to join it. I am a little girl eleven years old and am in the seventh grade. My teacher's name is Miss Gane. I go to the Buckley Grammar Room. I have a tiger kitten named "Ball of Grey." She is very playful. Hoping to see my letter in print, I remain, Yours truly, Vera Edgett, Buckley, Michigan.

Your kitten's name is quite unusual, Vera, and therefore interesting. Your editor is guessing that you like to go to school. Is she right?

Dear Editor:—1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Small—4 Floor—5 Legs—6 Hide—7 Said—8 See—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Frightened—12 Pull. Evelyn Watbrink, Ganges, Michigan.

Glad to have you in our contest, Evelyn; won't you write a letter for the club some of these days?

Dear Editor:—I would like to enter into the contest. 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Stick—4 Roof—5 Feet—6 Lay—7 Said—8 See—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Solemn—12 Comb. Hope this will meet with your approval. Yours sincerely, Erma Plummer, Douglas, Michigan.

E. S.—Will you please send me a membership card? I am pretty good at writing stories.

I was certainly pleased to send you a membership card, Erma Dear. I hope you received it. You will receive a prize in April so you can guess that your list of words met with my approval.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading your paper a long time. Marie Crow was over this morning to see me. I will send in for the doll. I will just cut out and fill out the Missing Word verse and send it to you. Well, will close for this time. From your friend, Mary Chapman, Dequeen, Ark.

Our little friend, Ruby Edith Converse, won the doll Mary Dear; but you will receive a prize for the words you sent in sometime in April. It will be the fore part of April.

Dear Editor:—I have figured out all the Missing Words and hope they are all right. They are as follows: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Rough—4 Roof—5 Feet—6 Show—7 Asked—8 See—9 Chuck—10 Head—11 Sullen—12 Eat. Hope I will see my first letter in the paper next week. Would be glad if you got room for this one. Your little friend, Irene Coon, Ludlow, Ill.

Your first letter was published some time ago, I think. Irene, and I expect you have been looking for this one too. But as each letter must wait its turn sometimes the waiting seems quite a while. This is all the room we have this week. GOOD BYE.

Cut out the outline drawing and place on a regular drawing table, fastening the paper by inserting thumb tacks at each corner. If you have not a drawing table the design may be fastened to a large pasteboard, or soft, smooth board. Water colors, or crayons may be used for the work. Each section you will note is marked with a letter from the alphabet. Now begin with letter A. All sections marked A, color red; B, blue; C, brown; D, yellow; E, green; F, black.

The drawings, when completed, may be pasted on pasteboard, or in a scrap book for keeping. Parents should encourage and help their children to start. The little one will find pleasure and enjoyment in coloring the drawings. It is a good pastime, and educates the child. The Editor of the department invites correspondence and will gladly answer questions on drawing, review work and offer suggestions when stamp is enclosed for a reply.

MORE STRENGTH FOR OLD PEOPLE

Mrs. Hutchison—Eighty-One Years Old—Uses No Other Tonic but Vinol and Recommends It to Friends.

Greenville, S. C.—“It is with pleasure I tell others of the great benefit I have derived from Vinol, for the past several years. I am 81 years old and I find Vinol gives me strength, a healthy appetite and overcomes nervous disorders. Vinol is the only tonic reconstructer I have used for several years. I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and it has always proved satisfactory.”—Mrs. M. A. HUTCHISON, Greenville, S. C.

Such cases as the above are constantly coming to our attention. If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

It is the tissue building, curative elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, that makes it so successful in building up strength for old people, delicate children and for all run-down conditions. Vinol is also a most successful remedy for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis. If it fails to benefit any one who tries it we return your money.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union)

“THE LAST LAUGH.”

An article under the above caption has been going the rounds of the press. It assails William Allen White's story, “What's the Matter With Kansas?” published some time since in the Saturday Evening Post. “Mr. White,” it said, “boasted about the big crops of Kansas, the per capita wealth of Kansas, the number of automobiles in Kansas, and almost succeeded in making everyone believe that Kansas was wholly rich as well as richly holy. But he overdid it. And his home town, Emporia, is the goat. For years the College of Emporia has been largely supported by means of donations from wealthy Easterners, who imagined they were assisting a poor little college on the wind-swept prairies.” When these rich patrons read Mr. White's clever but misleading article they withdrew their subscriptions. This year the college must look to home for the annual donation of $200,000, which used to come out of the East.”

The National W. C. T. U. Bureau of Publicity forwarded the article to Mr. White and in reply he says:

“I have received, I should say, a dozen or fifteen clippings from all over the United States exactly like the one you sent. The clippings were sent out by the liquor interests through the National Clipping bureau, and there is no truth whatever in the statement. It is pure fiction.”

Mr. White sends also the following statement written for the public by the president of the college:

“TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
“I have learned that certain selfish interests are circulating a story that the College of Emporia has lost donations and subscriptions in the East, due to an article in The Saturday Evening Post on the prohibition situation in Kansas, written by William Allen White. I wish to say there is absolutely no foundation for this story.”

Very truly yours,
HENRY COE CULBERTSON,
President College of Emporia.

In a personal letter to Mr. White, a copy of which is also in the hands of the W. C. T. U. Publicity bureau, Mr. Culbertson deals with the college financial affairs in detail. We quote:

“The article to which you call my attention is utterly absurd. Neither the College of Emporia nor Washburn college ever received an annual donation of $200,000 from the East. So far as I can ascertain during the entire thirty-two years' existence of the College of Emporia, this institution has not received as much as $65,000 in all, for all purposes, buildings, endowment and current expenses, from persons living outside the state. This is an average of about two thousand dollars per year. Almost all of our endowment, and the money to erect our buildings, as well as the money to meet our current expense budget of $40,000 per year, has come from the gifts of the people in this prohibition state of Kansas.

Even if it cost us $200,000 or any other amount in possible gifts, our faculty, officers and trustees would still endorse most emphatically the prohibition policy, which we believe involves the moral and social welfare of our state and nation.”

TEMPERANCE INSURANCE.

“It may interest abstainers to know,” says the Temperance Leader, “that in 1840 an application was received by an English insurance company for a policy on the life of an abstainer, and the directors of the company decided to charge ten per cent. more than the ordinary premium, because they looked upon the applicant as thin and watery, and as mentally cranked in that he repudiated the good creatures of God as found in alcoholic drinks. As the result of this action, he, with his friends, founded the first temperance insurance company in Britain, and himself lived to the age of eighty-two.”

LIQUOR REVENUE NOT NEEDED.

“Only last year there was expended in Raleigh for the construction of residences, business institutions and public buildings the stupendous sum of $1,459,221,” declared Hon. M. L. Shipman, commissioner of labor for North Carolina, in a recent address. “And the beauty of it all is that not a dollar of this money was realized from either the sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors. I am informed that the loss of revenue formerly received from the dispensary once in operation here has long since been counteracted by a legitimate increase of taxable values.”

SALOONS ARE MISSING.

“If we could construct our own railroad, we could today enjoy a journey from old Virginia on the Atlantic to sunny California on the far Pacific without passing through an inch of territory where the saloon is legalized.—Anna A. Gordon, President National W. C. T. U.
