Summer Camp At Pinehurst

County Y. M. C. A. Plan to Open Camp June 22.

On Tuesday of this week the County Y. M. C. A. Advisory Committee met in Charlevoix to consider arrangements for a summer camp for boys of the county. It was voted by the men present to recommend to the County Y. M. C. A. committee that the 1915 camp be held at Pinehurst Point near Horton Bay and unless this recommendation does not meet with the approval of the county committee. Camp will open there on Tuesday June 22nd, lasting ten days and open to any boy of the county who is over twelve years of age and not over fifteen. The usual fee of $5.00, one dollar of which is to be paid at the time of enrollment, will be charged all campers.

To parents of boys who are considering having their boys attend the Y. M. C. A. Camp it should be known that camps conducted under the supervision of the Young Men's Christian Association are not "hit or miss" affairs. Purposeful camping is the only sort in which the Association is interested therefore provision is made so that the camp will have a constructive, moral, mental and physical effect on every camper. Many boys are better off and all are as well off in a Y. M. C. A. camp as they are at home for they are under the constant direction of adults and all activities are supervised. No firearms are allowed in the camp and swimming and boating are allowed only under the supervision of adults. If there are any parents who wish for personal statements from parents who have had boys in the two camps already conducted in the county by the Y. M. C. A. the secretary of the organization will be glad to furnish them with references.

There are doubtless many fathers living in the county who have often wished that they might find it possible to spend a week or more on a camping trip with their sons so that they would be sure that the lads were properly cared for. Very few if any find it possible to get away for an outing of this kind so the Association officers to assist the fathers in giving their boys what every boy likes—an opportunity to live in the open, to swim, to fish, to hike through the woods, to sit about a campfire and to sleep in a tent. In Association camps a boy gets all of the "back to nature" that he craves under the most careful supervision.

All campers are expected to furnish their own bedding and table ware otherwise everything is provided. Definite information as to the things that a camper should bring will be mailed to each boy enrolling at least a week previous to the opening of camp.

That Newspaper Kiss

Yet Jack perhaps had little glee,
Though on the mouth he kissed her
We have as yet no proof, you see,
That Rose was not his sister.

—Leavenworth Times.

Even if she was as has been guessed,
Jack's sweet mouthed little sister,
The things that wories us the most
Is that the Globe man missed her.

But if it was a Kansas girl
She'd use cold cream, the dear;
And when Jack went to kiss her lips
He'd kid and kiss her ear.

"ONLY A DAD"

Only a dad, with a tired face,
Coming home from the daily race,
Bringing little of gold or fame
To show how well he has played the game.

But glad in his heart that his own rejoice

To see him come and to hear his voice.
Only a dad of a brood of four,
One of ten million men or more,
Plodding along in the daily strife
Bearing the whips and scorns of life
With never a whimper of pain or hate
For the sake of those who at home await.

Only a dad, neither rich nor proud,
Merely one of the surging crowd;
Toiling, striving from day to day,
Facing whatever may come his way
Silent whenever the harsh condemn,
And bearing it all for love of them.
Only a dad, but he gives his all
To smooth his way for his children small.

Doing with courage set and grim,
The deeds that his father did for him.
This is a line that for him I pen,
Only a dad, but the best of men.

What Vinegar Will Do.

Vinegar works like magic in cleaning dirt and smoke from walls and woodwork. Put some in a basin, wet a flannel cloth in it and wipe the article that needs cleaning. When the cloth becomes soiled, wash it out in clear water before putting it in the vinegar again. It will remove fly specks from woodwork, picture frames, windows and so forth. It will soften an old paintbrush on which paint has been allowed to dry. Heat some vinegar to the boiling point and allow the brush to simmer in it for a few minutes. Remove and wash well in strong soap-suds and the brush will be like new. If the hands become chapped or roughened after having them in water for a long time; rinse them well and apply a little vinegar, letting it dry on.

But a married man always gets everything that is coming to him—and then some.

And many a girl who thought she was marrying for a home has discovered later that she is tied to a man who can't even pay the rent.

FABLE OF THE STENOGRAPHER AND PLEBIAN

One upon a time in a city that was populous enough to support a big-league ball team there lived a young man who earned almost a living by copying his employer's conversation in a note-book and transcribing it onto the firm's stationery by means of a typewriter. This young man always was draped in the latest creations of the tailors' art. His collar was invariably the latest thing in neck decoration, and his cravat followed suit. His haircut bore resemblance to those one would expect to see at a barbers' convention, and his handsome face always was adorned by a cigarette. Every morning, much to his annoyance, this Beau Brummell was forced to ride down town on the seven-fifteen car with another young man who never wore a collar and who generally wore a four-bit calico shirt. This Plebian often stood on the rear platform with our hero, too, and the cob-pipe he smoked bespoke many months of service. Not only these things proved annoying to the young stenographer, but his repulsive fellow-commuter often needed a shave.

Now the fashion-plate was often heard to make slighting remarks about the Plebian, such as "low-brow," "rough-neck," "bruiser," and the like. But the Plebian never happened to hear them, so the stenographer kept on living.

One Saturday evening, it came to pass, that both of these young men stopped at Jerry's place to partake of refreshments and to cash their weekly pay checks. They stood side by side and surveyed each other with much wonderment in the back bar, while Jerry himself served them. The rough-neck exchanged his check for a schooner and twenty-six, ninety-five, while the pretty stenographer received a highball and eleven, eighty.

MORAL—White collars add more to appearances than to pay checks.

ELBERT BEDE SAYS:

Quite often a widow's weeds bear seeds.

"Some folks call it hard luck when they get what they have coming. When a man says he is self-made he probably considers himself and wife as one."

The man with plenty of watered stock can hardly be blamed for feeling in the swim.

As long as a man tells a woman how pretty she is he is making a beautiful hit with her.

Laws of fashion are the only ones with no penalty attached that are pretty generally observed.

After a man makes one break about wanting a girl to marry him he seldom gets a chance to make another.

There may be one advantage in not knowing much. You may know so little that you don't even know it.

When you feed a man's vanity he doesn't ask questions about how it is cooked or find fault with the way it is served.

If your pocketbook is in a healthy condition you can find some doctor who is ready to find something about your anatomy that isn't.

We'll wager a reasonable sum that you have been given the devil a number of times and yet can't tell from your own memory what he looks like.

The man who courts a girl who has a small brother has no one but himself to blame if he marries without knowing all of his sweetheart's faults and follies.

You never heard a person say: "If I do say it myself," without following it up by saying something nice about himself that no one else would have thought of in a thousand years.

When a bridegroom turns to whisper to his wife's ear that she's all his now, she is just as likely as not looking up at him in a way that seems to say: "You will have to dance to my music now, old man."

An Oregon judge has decided that Oregon brides need not adopt their husbands' names unless they wish to. Now if the same judge will decide that the old man doesn't have to give up his salary unless he wishes to, both sides will be happy.

Nothing interests women more than a man who refuses to explain things. But the poet doesn't necessarily dwell in an attic for the sake of the view.

JUNE

June this year comes in on the first and ends on the thirtieth. It will have ten and twenty days with a night tucked onto each one of them. June's days too, have a habit of absorbing most of the allotted twenty-four hours, and the habit is not at all approved by those who retire and arise by the sun.

Though sowing time for many, it is Cupid's harvest time, and wedding bells resound with joy in every known clime. A bunch of flimsy, fluffy "see she" takes to be his bride; to shelter and provide for her, no matter what betide. But presently, we should surmise, by Fashion's onward trend, it will be "she" who promises to keep him to the end.

On June 19th, Jupiter, who has long been working mornings, will give up that position and take a job as evening star. His place in the wee sma' hours will be vacant for about a week when Saturn will go on duty. Summer is almanacally said to begin on June 22nd, but most of us will be willing to believe that it has been hanging around uncomfortably close long before that time.

And then comes the dreamy maids, creamy and creamy maids, filling and thrilling our souls with delight, and though with discretion, a slight premonition says money is saved if we stay in o' nights. Summer time's money time—picnics and parties both call us and ball us until we attend, and once we are started quite soon we are parted with all winter's savings, yes, every stipend.

Former East Jordan Boy Wins Spelling Contest

The friends here of Charles G. Fallis son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Fallis, of Ontario, California, will read with interest the following clipping from the Los Angeles "Times."

Ontario, May 15.—Upland grammar school won the sixth annual Y. M. C. A. track field meet held here today at Chaffey High School. Central school of Ontario was second. The meet was a great success, over 2000 witnessing the different events. The most exciting incident came in the last lap of the relay when Robert Guthrie of Upland, cut down a twenty-five-yard lead given his opponent from the George Junior Republic and won for his school.

The High School meet, which was an individual meet, was won by Theodore Myers of Chaffey with Robert Arnett, also of Chaffey, second.

In connection with the field meet there were spelling matches and Maypole windings, today's meet having been postponed from May 1, and the original schedule was carried out. Charles Fallis of the Central school, this city, was adjudged the best grammar school speller of the county after a desperate struggle.

Along Came Ruth

"What's the matter Aunt? you look so worn out," said Ruth as she breezed herself through the screen door of the breakfast room.

"I'm simply tired out because I didn't sleep well last night," replied her aunt.

"You must have overworked yourself cleaning house," Ruth suggested; "sleeplessness is a form of nervousness." But it is so easy to prevent it. I used to suffer the same way, but 've overcome it entirely. If you will go out into the yard and walk for ten minutes, exercise with light dumb-bells just before retiring, and then eat a lettuce sandwich, a half-dozen crackers or even an apple, you will go to sleep at once. Then besides, you should try to get to bed at the same hour every night for several nights. In this way you will cultivate the habit of going to sleep at once. Just try these rules, they're simple."

And away went Ruth.

Don'ts For The Sick Room

Don't ever let the invalid see you crying.

Don't wear out an invalid by continually asking her how she feels.

Don't ever speak of the expense of the patient's sickness.

Don't worry her by walking on tip toe, if it is not necessary.

Don't forget to bring her the bright, cherry news of the outside world every day.

Don't let the patient feel that she is a trouble.

Don't fail to keep the patient's mind free of worry.

The candidate who gets the vote of the fair sex ought to receive a handsome majority.

SEALED ORDERS

Seven Reel Feature at Temple Theatre Next Wednesday.

A motion picture, which it is predicted on all sides will usher in a new era in that form of entertainment, is underlined as the next attraction at the Temple Theatre—"Sealed Orders", Wednesday, June 2nd.

This European masterpiece is probably the first really big dramatic work designed primarily for cinematograph production. In the past, numerous big plays that have achieved stage success have been reproduced in motion picture form, subsequent to their stage popularity. In this instance, the story, dialogue and situations were all designed for the most effective results possible on the screen, in consequence of which the production enjoys an advantage that none of its predecessors have had.

"Sealed Orders" is particularly timely as it is a naval play. The fact that the locale is Europe means nothing, for the story is one quite as comprehensible to the average American as to the Continental. A fleet of dreadnaughts, and two armies were employed in the making of the picture, in addition to a remarkable cast of principals.

The story deals with two nations on the verge of war. A titled traitor is watching the movements of the home government for the enemy, and reporting to his masters through the medium of carrier pigeons. The head of the home navy is Admiral Van Hoven, whose son is Lieutenant in the same service. The wife of young Van Hoven had had a perfectly harmless flirtation with the spy, Count Spinelli. The latter persists in his attentions to an embarrassing degree, and when war actually breaks out and the young Lieutenant has been entrusted with the first attack, governed by sealed orders, the wife, believing herself absolutely safe, forces a visit on the Lieutenant's wife at her home.

A second later the husband himself appears to bid his family farewell. The wife does not dare to tell him of the presence of the spy in the room, and goes with her husband to the nursery, where he takes leave of his children, while the Count remains in hiding in the reception room. In turning from his children, the Lieutenant picks up a paper elephant that the nurse has made for one of the babies, and laughing at its grotesque outline, he is horrified to find it fashioned from a letter addressed by Count Spinelli, to his wife. It had been a most cunningly insinuating missive, and the part cut away by the nurse left it a most damaging document. During the intense scene that follows, the spy takes advantage of their absence to seize the bag with the sealed orders, opens it, copy the latter, and return it to the portfolio.

On returning to the reception room, the young officer looks for his bag, and discovers the spy hiding behind the mantel. His determination to wreak vengeance is interrupted by the appearance of another officer from his ship, who comes to urge him to hurry away. He suppresses his fury and turns away with his brother officers rather than expose what he regards the betrayal of his home.

The spy, too, leaves, and having copied the order "Attack at Sunrise" sets about to transmit it to his masters. For this purpose he repairs to an old windmill on the crown of a hill on his estate, where his pigeons and paraphernalia are concealed. After hiding the message under a bird's wing, and turning it loose on its fateful mission, the spy repairs to a pit under the ancient structure to hide away his equipment. A burst of wind sways the door which closes the trap over the pit, and wedges it beyond all power of the prisoner to dislodge. Nemesis, too, over takes the mute, feathered messenger. The bird is shot by a man in Van Hoven's division before it reaches the lines of the enemy. The fact that the sealed orders have become known, causes an investigation, resulting in the arrest of Van Hoven, his trial and condemnation to death.

Count Spinelli, realizing that his end is near, writes out a confession in his death pit, where he and it are found, almost on the hour of the innocent Lieutenant's execution. A rage for life saves the latter, and the tangled web of circumstances straightens out with the result that the distressed family is reunited and everything made perfectly clear.

Throughout this action the parts played by the children stand out as one of the most appealing and beautiful things ever introduced into cinematograph production.

"Sealed Orders" is the work of a Danish Director and company, and has been welcomed by the moving picture trade as a flawless masterpiece.

GOOD ROADS DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY

Michigan State Good Roads Association

P. T. Colgrove, President.

Hastings, Michigan.

The Michigan State Good Roads Association has assumed the responsibility of editing this department with some reluctance because of the ever widening field of activity that calls for time and effort.

The readers of this department should become familiar with the organization, its objects, purposes and work accomplished. It is our purpose to give the readers up to date news of road construction in Michigan, but desire first, that you should know who we are and what we are doing.

The officers at the present time are composed of Philip T. Colgrove, President, Hastings, Mich., lawyer; N. E. Hull, Vice President, Dimondale, Mich., ex-master Michigan State Grange; A. A. Anderson, Secretary, Hastings, Mich., Cashier of Hastings City Bank; J. Edward Rœ, Treasurer, Lansing, Mich., Vice President and Cashier of Lansing State Savings Bank.

The Board of Trustees is composed of Roy D. Chapin, Detroit, Mich., President Hudson Motor Car Co.; Alvah Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich., Chairman Kent County Good Roads Commissioners; W. K. Prudden, Lansing, Mich., manufacturer; John Lentz, Maybee, Mich., Chairman Monroe County Good Roads Commissioners; Dr. George F. Young, South Haven, Mich.; A. H. Duffey, Jonesville, Mich.; Frank Hamilton, Traverse City, Mich., Chairman Grand Traverse County Good Roads Commissioners; W. M. Bryant, Kalamazoo, Mich., Chairman Kalamazoo County Good Roads Commissioners; Charles Farin, Mt. Clemens, Mich., County Commissioner Macomb County; C. E. Palmerlee, Lapeer, Mich., County Commissioner Lapeer County.

These are the men responsible for the conduct of the association and represent in the mind of the writer the most active and earnest workers for the cause in the state.

At the Seventh Annual Convention of the Michigan State Good Roads Association held at Grand Rapids, March 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th, by unanimous consent our constitution was amended, providing for life membership as well as supporting membership. The article covering membership reads as follows:

ARTICLE II. Membership.

"Sec. 1. The Association shall consist of residents of the state interested in the building and maintenance of Good Roads. Our membership shall be divided into four classes known as Life Membership, Active Membership, Supporting Membership and Honorary Membership.

"Sec. 2. Life Membership shall be composed of those who are interested in the association and its work and contribute to the support of the association the sum of $25.00. Upon the payment of said sum the secretary of the association shall furnish such member a certificate signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary and under seal of the association. Life members shall not be subject to dues or assessments.

"Sec. 3. Active Membership shall consist of persons actively engaged in and interested in highway work and Good Roads. Active members shall pay as dues, the sum of $1.00 per year for the support of the association, there being no further demands by way of dues or assessments.

"Sec. 4. Sustaining members shall be those persons who for the support of the association pay a sum of not less than $5.00 per annum. This class of membership shall be known as Supporting Members and no dues or assessments shall be levied against such person or persons known as "sustaining members" aside from their own voluntary contribution.

"Sec. 5. Honorary Members shall be those persons who have furthered the interest of this association, and who shall be deemed worthy of honorary recognition by the association."

In every great constructive work there must of necessity be thoughtful preparation and complete knowledge not only of things to be done, but the right way to do them to bring to a successful issue the purpose we have in hand. To bring Michigan up to the standard of our sister states in road construction and maintenance means more than educating our people in the best way to build and maintain our highways; it means the conversion of thousands of our citizens as to the necessity of good roads. It means knowledge to every community of the terrible loss we are yearly suffering by reason of the condition our roads are in. It means more. It means a conversion and confirmation, together with a new baptism, of the good roads spirit and enthusiasm.

The campaign for the abolition of the mud road is of necessity more or less one of education. An association such as ours has a better advantage than the individual and is in a position to disseminate information regarding the value of improved roads, and to co-operate with other organizations in creating a demand for their improvement. Results have been accomplished by various civic organizations in beautifying our cities and villages and transforming waste places into attractive parks bearing evidence of what can be done by the constant and tireless efforts of individuals; and when such organizations as ours, undismayed by indifference and undaunted by lack of means, direct their energy and attention toward the betterment of our public roads it will be but a question of time alone until what we now call our mud roads and sand roads will be a thing of the past.

The readers of these pages from week to week must know that the officers of the Michigan State Good Roads Association receive no compensation whatever for their work and labor. The writer is serving his sixth year as president of the association without compensation and much of the time has paid his own personal expenses in going about the state from place to place aiding and assisting the Good Roads cause. We want the readers to know and understand these things because they can better enter into the spirit of the work and understand more fully the real purpose of the association.

We have conducted campaigns in more than thirty counties where the county system was in issue, we have sent our speakers, literature and bulletins and conducted campaigns of education whenever requested. We are still at work along these lines and as rapidly as our financial ability will permit we shall extend our field of endeavor until Michigan has been thoroughly redeemed.

We want every man in Michigan interested in the building up of our highways to become a member of this association. Section three of our by-laws makes it very easy to become a member, as our active membership pays but $1.00 per year for the support of the association.

Having introduced ourselves to the readers of this department we shall endeavor to give you from week to week entertaining news of the work as it is progressing in Michigan.

In closing this first article let me remind our farmer friends that this is the vital time of the year for the earth road. Work on our earth roads at this season of the year is of the greatest importance, one load of gravel put on the road in May is worth more than two loads on a hot and dry July day. Get busy, now is the time to do successful road building.

bers for miles around by his wonderful ability to forecast the weather from 24 to 36 hours in advance and to tell the time it would rain. He proved to be very correct in his forecasts and the farmers placed much dependence upon what he said. His "system" was founded upon his two pigs. By close observation he discovered that in dry weather the tails of the pigs had but one curl; in wet weather two curls and just before a rain the tails hung limp.

June 8th to 10th.

Eastern sections of the United States will be feeling the effects of the cool weather brought down from the north by the storm that passed to the Atlantic coast at the end of last week. In the middle west the temperatures will be rising and in the Rocky mountain region they will be high in connection with the low barometer that is expected to appear at the first of the week. This cold area may hinder the progress of the storm upon the Pacific coast until about Tuesday or Wednesday, the 8th or 9th.

About these dates storms of wind, rain and hail will appear in the west and spread eastward during the next three or four days. Tornadoes are probable in Kansas, Iowa, Missouri and parts of the Lake region and Ohio valley. Cooler weather will follow this disturbance reaching the Lake region about Friday the 11th, the barometer coming back to more normal readings.

As the week closes cold rains will be making themselves felt upon the western coast of the United States.

THE GRANGE AT WORK

BY JOHN C. KETCHAM, MASTER, HASTINGS, MICH.

Deputy C. F. Kiefer of Morley reports the organization of a new Grange at Deerfield, Mecosta county, with a charter list of 56. He reports a lively interest in the new organization and predicts a fine future for it. Mr. Lewis Ostrander, as master, heads the list of very capable list of officers.

Burnside Grange No. 1, near Bowne City, in Lapeer county, is on the up grade again after some reverses. They are to have a big rally and home-coming the latter part of May. Members of the Grange from all parts of the state will be glad to hear this good news as there is great interest in this Grange, both from the standpoint of sentiment and historical value.

Deputy C. H. Anderson of L'Anse reports the reorganization of Covington Grange in Baraga county, with a charter list of 18. Nels Peterson is the newly elected master and R. J. Howes, secretary. Located in the midst of a rapidly developing agricultural section, there is a bright prospect ahead for this Grange.

North Leoni Grange, 1453, of Jackson county, recently dedicated its fine new Grange hall. This Grange was organized five years ago and has had a very successful career. Its present membership is 160 and 200 is the aim before the close of the year. One feature of this new Grange hall is a room especially fitted up for the accommodation of a flourishing juvenile Grange. A very interesting and well written history of the Grange was read by Lewis E. St. John, a former secretary. Visitors were present at the dedication from Hanover, South Henrietta, Minard and Springport Granges. S. E. St. John is directing the work of this Grange as master very efficiently.

Urgel F. Asselin, master of Norway Grange, in Dickinson county, assisted by John F. Wilde, a former Grange organizer of Michigan, has organized two new Granges in Dickinson county, Iron Mountain Grange and Twin Falls Grange. One has a charter list of 38 and the other 39. J. J. Eskil is the newly installed master of Iron Mountain and Ray Petterson of Twin Falls. These two new Granges make a total of six for Dickinson county.

Ottawa Grange, No. 30, is to observe the 40th anniversary of its organization with an all-day session Saturday, June 5th. This Grange is located at Herrington, Ottawa county and is finely equipped with a commodious and home-like hall. It has had a very successful history and its anniversary meeting will be largely attended and full of interest.

Hanover Grange, No. 698, of Hanover, Jackson county, is enjoying a fine growth under the direction of its master, J. W. Hutchins, former secretary of the State Grange. During the winter their hall was destroyed by fire and great discouragement prevailed for a time. An opportunity came to purchase the old school building of Hanover and the Grange grasped it. The exterior of the building is to remain as nearly unchanged in form as needed repairs will allow in order to retain the historical value. This action on the part of the Grange has aroused a new interest in the organization on the part of the citizens. It is certainly a worthy community enterprise on the part of the Grange and likewise a very practical move as it secures for them that most valuable possession, a Grange home.

From several Granges there come reports of fine community interest in the way of assisting in the observance of Memorial Day. Nothing can be finer in the way of community effort than such co-operation as this. The veterans to whom we have looked for leadership in arranging and carrying out these programs are finding it increasingly difficult on account of rapidly decreasing numbers and advancing years to assume this responsibility. Our regard and affection for these veterans, our local pride in memorial Day observance and the opportunity to unite in community effort are all very good reasons why the Grange should get in behind this worthy movement wherever possible.

Cooper Grange, No. 1505, of Kalamazoo county, is to dedicate its newly purchased Grange hall on Wednesday, May 12. E. F. Stoddard, the lecturer of Cooper Grange, writes that his Grange has had a fine winter and that the Grange interest was never better than at present. In addition to attractive programs good progress has been made in adding members. Mr. Stoddard as lecturer and Carl DeLano as master are planning a great future for this strong organization.

Mrs. W. J. Hoffmaster, lecturer of Allegan Pomona Grange, has been arranging debates upon popular questions of the day as a feature of her programs. Three debaters are chosen upon each side, each speaker is limited to five minutes and the leaders are given five minutes each for rebuttal, taking forty minutes in all for the debate. "Woman Suffrage" was the question at the last meeting. The affirmative was led by Mrs. Jane Estabrook of Allegan and the negative by Ed. Lyman of East Caseo. The debate was instructive, in good spirit and was greatly enjoyed by the large crowd present.

On account of the refusal of the last congress to make appropriations for increased number of government workers, about 20,000 government employees will be given eight days vacation without pay between now and July 1, by order of the treasury department.

Notwithstanding the great amount of timber on the Pacific coast, there is a meagre supply of hard wood, and much of the oak made use of in the western part of this country is imported from the eastern countries of Asia.

President Wilson has signed an order creating Naval Petroleum reserve No. 3, containing 9,481 acres of land in Wyoming. The action is part of a plan for supplying the navy with its own oil fuel. The government plans that eventually the navy will produce, refine and transport all its own oil.

Start the Boys in Poultry Raising.

What occupation could you induce your son or a young man to engage in during his school years, that would bring him so much for so little invested as would poultry raising?

The average boy is ambitious enough if given one-half a chance along poultry raising lines, to get together sufficient dry-goods boxes and odd pieces of lumber and construct his poultry house at a small cost for nails, hinges, glass and some roofing material. The construction of the house is good practice and educational and a valuable experience to any boy, enough so, that he should receive encouragement from older people to undertake the work.

Once the house is completed, which should be constructed along proper lines, the yards would come next and if you have sufficient room it is well to construct two yards as it only requires but just a little more fencing and if it is necessary to keep the fowls in confinement you can keep them in one yard while you are growing green feed in the other. Oats are good and as soon as they are four to five inches high turn the fowls into this yard and seed the other yard. This can be kept up the entire season, at a profit to the young poultryman.

The starting may be done by the purchasing of stock, mated and ready for the season's work. The price you will pay will determine how good a start you will make. Day old chicks may be purchased and brooded and grown to maturity, then the breeding pen selected from them. The latter is cheapest but you will not realize the first season, except for the sale of a few cockerels which should pay for the feed.

Having decided how you will start and the breed, it is well to keep in mind the cost of every transaction of the business by keeping exact account of every transaction.

The business when once established will give the young poultryman pleasure, profit and education. It will fit him for responsibility for his first position in life. Let the boys have a pen of fowls of their own and help get them.

You need not be afraid, but just let the chicks and fowls of all ages and sizes have all the wheat bran they will eat. Keep it before them all the time; it is one of the best feeds. Let them get it when they wish. It is one of the most profitable feeds to feed and is more profitable to feed it in this way.

TWILIGHT STORIES FOR LITTLE FOLKS

By Paul Eeack

Ben and the Birds.

As Ben passed through the orchard into the wood lot there was a great twittering in the branches of the trees. At first he could not understand why the birds were making so much noise. He noticed it seemed to follow him out into the pasture and to the wood lot. Ben was fond of the birds and they had come to know he would not hurt them. They became very friendly and would flutter around him as he drew from his pocket some pieces of bread which he broke into crumbs and fed to them.

Finally a robin flew down from a tree and perched itself on his knee. Cocking its head on one side it looked into Ben's face with its bright eyes and its twittering took the form of words.

"You must have a good mother, to be such a kind hearted boy. Now we birds can talk to you where grown-ups would not listen to us. Speaking for the robins I will say it is true we occasionally like a nice ripe cherry, but we feel that it is due us from the farmers for we use as our food bugs and worms that destroy a hundred times as much as we do. If the farmers really knew what we song birds did for them, they would plant trees and keep them for us alone. Come with me and I will show you.

Ben followed his hopping guide into the orchard, birds were darting here and there a robin flew down from a fruit tree with a great catpillar, a sort of worm in its mouth, twittered to Ben then flew off to a nest near by where he fed it to the little robins which opened their beaks for the bird dainty. They went to another tree the leaves of which were curling.

Underneath the leaves were worms upon worms.

"We let that tree alone so you could see it," said the robin, "but will now clean it up. There are other birds besides robins which help us clean up destroying bugs and worms and we work all summer just as hard as we can. You see the worms and bugs are our food. With a loud whistle the robin flew into the tree upon which there were so many worms. In a minute a flock of birds were busy getting their dinners and the dinners for the little ones in the nests.

As he turned to go home he was stopped by a quail which said "Bob White," meaning how do you do. "Come with me said the quail and I will show how busy we are. They went into a corn field and there was a great scurrying around of light little feet as the busy birds picked up the birds and the worms which let alone, would increase so fast in number that there would be no crops. "Now," said the quail as they reached the pasture bars, "you have seen some of the good we do to the men who in return hunt us with their guns. When you grow up you can say a good word for the birds. You know you and other children growing up will be the men of the future. The kindly spirit that will look after the birds will help to preserve the peace of the nation; help to make the world better in all ways.

"Mama," said Ben when he reached home. "When I grow up I will never hunt birds with a gun." He then told her what the robin and the quail had said to him.

"They were right, little man," replied his mother and I am glad you learned the lesson."

Great Fruit Prospects For Northwestern Michigan

Traverse City—The weather conditions, so far, have been favorable for a big fruit crop for Northwestern Michigan for the coming season. Not in years have we had a winter that was as mild as the one that has just closed. Not even the tenderest fruit buds were injured even in the most exposed places. Winter shaded into spring so slowly that it is difficult to tell when one season ended and the other began. As spring advanced the weather became warmer until the last week in April the temperature was almost of summer standard. Under the warm wave many of the fruit trees burst into blossom, fully two weeks ahead of the usual time. Once by this blossoming period, however, all will be well. It looks now that while we are going to get some cool weather there will be no killing frost. This means that the biggest fruit crop in the history of the region will have to be marketed. The cherry trees are full of blossoms, as are also the peach, pear, plum and apple. The marketing resources of the entire region are going to be taxed to dispose of the fruit in a profitable manner. This must be done, otherwise those who have been induced by the railroads and large land owners to make heavy investments in lands, to clear the same, set orchards and plant crops, will become discouraged and neglect their orchard propositions to the detriment of the region. The promised big fruit crop must be better marketed than has any previous crop, otherwise the "jig will be up." It will not be surprising if this season's crop is double that of any previous years for this is the season for the trees set the spring following the big harvest in 1909 to come into bearing. Every bit of marketing machinery in the region is going to be taxed and all the help that the recently organized co-operative associations can give will be needed to get the crop sold at a profit, and what is the use of growing a fruit crop if it cannot be made to yield a profit?

NO REASON FOR IT

You Are Shown a Way Out.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the word of one who has found Doan's Kidney Pills and has found relief. The following is convincing proof:

Henry Kimble, retired farmer, Leelanau St., Frankfort, Mich., says: "Kidney trouble in my case was brought on by over work. At times I could hardly endure the pain in my back and hips. It was all I could do to walk. If I sat down for a few minutes, I could hardly get up without help. I had to get up several times at night on account of kidney weakness. I felt tired and worn out. If I tried to stoop over or pick up anything, a sharp twinge in my back nearly took my breath away. I tried several remedies, but I didn't get relief. After I had taken Doan's Kidney Pills a short time, I was relieved of the weakness. Since then whenever I have needed a kidney tonic, a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have benefited me."

An oddity in a hen's egg was handed The Herald this week by Mrs. George Ward of Deward. It is a large sized hens egg—the largest the writer has ever seen—and in the center of this is another perfectly formed egg. Between the two shells was what is termed the white of the egg. Mrs. Ward found it in their poultry yard and started to use it. She cracked the outer shell and started to run out the contents when she discovered the extra egg inside. The oddity is now on display at The Herald office.

On Monday the offenders were taken before Justice Davoll of Boyne City where they plead guilty, one being fined $50 and costs and the other $20 and costs. "The Miracle of Roses" presented by the students of St. Joseph's School on last Friday evening, showed remarkably good talent in the interpretation of character in the title role of Elizabeth, the persecuted and magnanimous Countess, Miss Vera Supernaw held the sympathy and admiration of the audience. Miss Katherine Lalonde displayed remarkable talent, portraying the character of Sophia, the scheming mother-in-law, with both force and fidelity. The character of the ambitious and villainous Castellan was interpreted, with no less fidelity, by Harold Nachazel. His interpretation of the character coincided well, both with the character of the scheming Sophia and the witty and faithful servant Wiborad, which was ably taken by Miss Elizabeth Lalonde. Miss Winifred Raine, as Countess Rosamund, played well her part of a good counselor to the wicked Sophia and a true friend to the unjustly oppressed Elizabeth. The part of a gracious and magnanimous monarch was portrayed with dignity by Miss Agatha Kenny as the Empress. Lawrence Lalonde in the character of the Hermit and Miss Magdalene Josiek as the poor tenant displayed their perfect understanding of the characters assumed. A much admired scene was the one in which Miss Eva King appeared as an angel and comforted the broken-hearted Elizabeth, changing the basket of bread into full blown roses. The beautiful costumes, engaged especially for the occasion, from Grand Rapids were greatly admired by all, and everyone voted the play to have been the best yet given by the students. Many compliments and words of praise were bestowed upon the young actors and their instructors.

Harcourt's pulse leaped. "What have you done?" he asked.

"Found five of the crew who will help us," Benson said in a low tone. "With you and me that is seven. If everything goes well we should be able to overpower the others, even though they are three to our one. They will be surprised and I think it can be done. The five who are with us will be on watch with me at 11 tonight. The others will be asleep below. We will simply fasten down the hatches and handle the yacht ourselves. The captain will be in his cabin, and Pierce, the third officer, on the bridge. Two of us can easily handle them, while you must see that Mr. Cornish does not leave his cabin. Have you arms?"

"No."

"Take this then," Benson slipped a big revolver into his hand and Harcourt slipped it into his pocket quickly. "I hope this won't be necessary," he said.

"So do I," Benson agreed. "But Whitford wouldn't hesitate to shoot and we can't afford to take chances. The moral effect of a gun is good, you know."

"How soon can we land?" Harcourt asked.

"In a few hours we can make the coast of Scotland," Benson replied. "My plan is to run in as close as is necessary for the seven of us to go ashore in the launch, leaving the others on board. I don't want to run the yacht into port under the circumstances, but I figure that in view of the whole situation, Cornish won't dare to make any trouble after we have gone."

"Once on shore the police will be with you, naturally," Harcourt assured him.

"That is what I told the boys," said Benson. "Now, until you hear the signal, don't come near me. Remain in your cabin until 11 o'clock, then go right to Cornish's door and see that he doesn't get on deck. When we have done our part I will come to you."

To Harcourt, hoping earnestly for success, the day seemed endless. He spent the afternoon in his cabin, feigning a headache because he wished to be alone with his thoughts—to plan his course once he was free to return to MacBee.

In the evening, after dinner, he joined Adele on deck and for the first time, she told him of the part she had played in his abduction. Harcourt looked in admiration at the girl by his side, doubting, in spite of her words, that she could have played the role of which she told him.

"You don't know what an actress I am," she said laughing. "I've always wanted to go on the stage, but, of course, dad wouldn't hear of it. Oh, it was glorious, and my only difficulty was not to laugh in the man's face—he was so completely deceived. It was a change of fortune that he had never seen you."

"But I can't imagine you masquerading as myself!" Harcourt protested.

"Oh, I say, can't you really?" she drew in perfect imitation of his voice.

He stared at her for a moment, and then he laughed outright.

"Now are you satisfied that I did it?" she demanded.

"You're wonderful!" he exclaimed with enthusiasm. "Really, Miss Cornish, you and your father have done too much for me. I wish I could appreciate it as I should, but I'm afraid I can't."

"You don't imagine we're doing all this for your sake do you?" she retorted.

"Not doing it for my sake?" he asked in a puzzled tone. "Then why on earth are you doing it?"

"For Grace," Adele said simply. "Lord Harcourt, father and I have become very, very fond of Grace. If anything should happen to you, it would kill her. Don't you think you owe it to her if not to yourself, to avoid the danger of this situation if you can?"

Harcourt stood silently, avoiding her searching gaze. He wondered what the girl would say if she knew the grave suspicion in his own mind—if she realized that his greatest desire to return was prompted by the thought that his absence might mean greater danger to the girl for whom the American felt so deeply.

"Miss Cornish," he said, after a moment. "There are several phases of this affair that you do not understand clearly. I cannot discuss them with you any more than I could with Grace."

"What is the trouble between you two?" she asked abruptly. "Oh, I knew there was something the moment I found Grace unconscious by your side the night of our reception."

"Please don't question me," he begged. "I cannot say more now. Some day, perhaps you will understand—although I hope you never will!"

"Poor boy!" Adele said feelingly, "for, do you know, Lord Harcourt, you are just a great overgrown boy. We all admire your courage, your high sense of honor, and your absolute indifference to your own fate—yet we cannot but feel that the strange situation in which you have found yourself has carried away your good judgment. Try to content yourself here. I am sure no innocent person will suffer through the fact that you are safe, and by accepting your present position philosophically, you will surely preserve your own future happiness and that of the woman you love."

She spoke very seriously, and put her small hand upon his arm as she leaned close to him. "Can't you see that we are right?" she urged.

"I wish I could feel that you are," Harcourt replied. "With all my heart I do—but I am afraid I cannot."

He saw the disappointment in her face as she withdrew her touch. "Please try," she begged. "I know that time will straighten out all of this horrible tangle."

And she turned to leave him alone. Harcourt watched her cross the deck and enter her cabin, and with a little sigh began to pace up and down nervously. Perhaps he was making a mistake in trying to outwit these good friends who were determined to save him in spite of himself, and he wondered if he was justified in attempting to carry out the plans for the mutiny. In any event he resolved that no harm must come to Cornish and Adele—that if necessary he would tell MacBee that he had deliberately run away and lie as to his whereabouts during his absence. A change of heart—repentance at having broken his word—would be sufficient explanation of his return.

So, struggling with himself, he passed the remaining hours until midnight. To avoid all chance of suspicion, he forced himself to dine with his hosts, and was more or less successful in making Adele feel that he had at last become resigned to his enforced presence aboard the yacht.

Slowly the early evening passed. Adele amused herself by playing quietly at the piano in the corner of the salon, while Cornish and Harcourt smoked in silence, each occupied with his own thoughts. Now and then Harcourt stole a glance at the great figure of the American and marveled at his great strength. Determination of purpose was plain in every line of his splendid physique, and in the strong lines of his face, Harcourt observed a strange mixture of kindness and brutality. Unquestionably Cornish was a man of tremendous force, a man not to be trifled with, and as he watched him, Harcourt knew that unless he succeeded in gaining control of the yacht that night, Cornish would certainly carry out his threat to put him in irons.

At last Adele bade them good night, and Cornish, with a yawn, announced his intention of turning in. Harcourt, too, retired to his cabin, but he did not undress. He switched on the small reading light by the little corner table, and opened the drawer where he had hidden Benson's revolver. With an exclamation of surprise he turned out the contents of the compartment, but the revolver was not there.

A dull sense of disappointment came over him and his heart sank. The plot had been discovered and the attempt would fail. After a moment's thought, however, he laughed at his fears. Naturally his every movement was watched, and the revolver, having been found in his cabin, had been confiscated. There was nothing in that by itself to prove that the projected mutiny was suspected.

Turning out the light he crossed to the porthole and looked out. He could hear the splashing of the sea against the yacht's sides, but there was no other sound. He struck a match and looked at his watch. It was 10 minutes to 11. The time was close at hand now and he waited breathlessly in the darkness as the match burned close to his fingers and went out. Without moving he stood against the cabin wall, listening for the first indication of activity outside. Then, after an interminable time, he struck another match. It was just five minutes since he had looked before, and the hands of the watch seemed stationary as he gazed at the gold dial. He held the watch to his ear. It ticked regularly and he smiled at his impatience.

Finally he tiptoed across the cabin and went out into the passageway. All was still and he made his way quietly along to Cornish's door, and waited there. The remembrance that he was unarmed came to him abruptly, and he realized his utter helplessness against this man of gigantic strength, yet he knew too, that he could not have used the revolver if he had it, and his mere possession of it would never have intimidated a man like Cornish.

Surely it must be 11 now, yet he had not heard the clang of the ship's bell, he was momentarily expecting. He strained his ears to catch the slightest sound and pressed his body close to the door of Cornish's stateroom, but it was quiet within and he could not even hear the American's breathing.

He could see nothing in the darkness but now, somehow, he seemed to feel the presence of some one near him. He felt the desire to call and demand to know who was there, but he thought better of it and remained still, scarcely daring to breathe lest he should be discovered there. Perhaps it was Benson, he thought, but if so why did he not speak?

Suddenly the passageway was flooded with light, and he found himself looking into the mischievous eyes of Adele, who stood not three feet away, covering him with a big blue steel revolver that he recognized at a glance as the one Benson had given him.

He returned her gaze sheepishly, and in spite of his chagrin, smiled back at her. Despite the opinion many who knew him only casually, Harcourt had a keenly developed sense of humor, and it was only this which saved him from utter despair at that moment.

Raising her finger to her lips, Adele cautioned him to be silent, and in a whisper told him to follow her. Harcourt hesitated a moment and she beckoned again. Then he followed her meekly as she led the way down the passage and paused before his own cabin.

"Please go in," she said. "I am coming too. Is it terribly improper?"

He crossed the threshold and paused as she closed the door behind her. Questioningly he looked at her, and saw that she was laughing silently at him. For a moment she stood with her back against the door, her body shaking with mirth. Then she put down the revolver and sank down upon the bed, while he, awkward and embarrassed stood waiting for her to speak.

"I say," he began stupidly at last, "what's the joke?"

"It's on you, I'm afraid," she said, looking up at him. "I've spoiled your little mutiny."

"You?" he asked in astonishment. Her eyes twinkled merrily. "Lovers make poor plotters, Lord Harcourt."

"Lovers?"

She nodded. "Benson has fallen in love with me," she announced.

"In love with you?"

"Is that so very wonderful?"

"No, but—"

"You see, Benson is quite young and romantic," she explained. "He has long been my most ardent admirer. Tonight he confided his plan to take me with you in the launch, but the launch will not go, and I am afraid I shall never be Mrs. Benson."

"You mean the scoundrel meant to force you to go with him!" Harcourt cried angrily.

"Oh, no indeed. Benson is much too mild a villain for that. He told her he knew Dad would never consent to my marrying him, and that before he had always been too poor to ask me, but he explained that on the money he would receive from you, we could live quite comfortably. Delightful little plan, wasn't it?"

"The idiot!" Harcourt exclaimed. "Why did he—"

"Surely you did not hope to succeed?" Adele said. "Capt. Whitford has observed your intimacy with Benson and he has been watched carefully. Fortunately for him, however, no intimation of your plans reached Whitford or Dad, or I am afraid it would have gone hard with the poor fellow."

"But why on earth didn't he tell me—"

"Because I forbade his communicating with you. I wished to catch you myself and to obtain your promise not to attempt anything of the sort again."

"I make no such promise."

"Not even for Grace's sake?" Adele asked.

"No," said Harcourt. "If I can escape and return to London I shall do so the moment opportunity offers."

"Then it is to be war between us?" she asked.

"I'm afraid it is," he smiled.

"Then beware!" she cautioned mockingly. "Good night, my friend, the enemy!"

CHAPTER XV. Kandwhar Escapes.

Harcourt's disappearance had stirred the whole of England. Cables flashed the news of his kidnapping across the world, while the murder was eagerly being discussed in every civilized country. Thousands of men and women were eagerly awaiting further statements from MacBee, who had promised definite information speedily, but after two weeks none of the cutters on the coast had caught so much as a glimpse of Cornish's yacht, and the inspector seemed no nearer to a solution of the great mystery.

A score of men scoured the country for some trace of the missing nobleman or of his captors, for MacBee still held firmly to the belief that Harcourt had not willingly run away. The newspapers speculated upon the finding of the suitcase with the supposed clothing of the missing man, forming various conclusions, all of which caused MacBee quiet amusement. And through it all the inspector smoked incessantly and thought a great deal. Occasionally he talked when it suited his purpose, and again he would refuse to comment upon the case at all.

Ten days after Harcourt's disappearance the examination of Kandwhar was ordered. MacBee knew that he could not hold the man longer without further evidence, yet he knew that, with Kandwhar and Harcourt both gone, he might never get to the bottom of the matter. Owing to the widespread interest in the case, and the fear of a disorderly crush of persons, the hearing had been fixed for the evening. It was after nightfall, therefore, when Kandwhar was taken from his cell and placed in a closed carriage, manacled to the hand of a detective beside him. A second officer mounted the box beside the driver, and only at the last moment had the newspapers been advised that the hearing was to take place.

In the corridor adjoining the court room MacBee paced nervously up and down, smoking his pipe and waiting for the arrival of the prisoner. He was struggling to arrive at some conclusion—whether to demand the remanding of Kandwhar or to permit his release because of lack of evidence against him. There was only one tiny thing that would have given the inspector the hold he required, but that thing had been so unobtrusive that it had never attracted his attention.

He had not seen the monogrammed cigarette Harcourt had found beside the body of Townshend, and as Kandwhar had thoughtfully rid himself of his last one before arriving at Scotland Yard, MacBee had no release to give more than passing consideration to the peculiar symbol he had noticed on the dagger of which Kandwhar admitted ownership.

As he walked slowly to and fro, pondering over the problem, a man hatless and excited, rushed in from the street.

"We've been attacked!" he shouted, "Kandwhar has escaped!"

With an oath, MacBee started from his reverie. "Attacked! Escaped?" he exclaimed. "In the streets of London at 8 o'clock in the evening! Impossible!"

"It's true," the man insisted, panting for breath. "Not three minutes ago and within a block of here!"

In an instant all was confusion. An excited throng of court attendants and newspaper men surrounded the bearer of the seemingly impossible news, but he was too confused to give them much satisfaction. Without waiting to hear more, however, MacBee dashed from the building and ran rapidly down the street. A crowd was already gathering about a carriage that stood close to the sidewalk, its horse lying in the street before it, apparently dead. Upon the box the driver still sat, but he breathed no more, for a great cobblestone had crushed his skull. The carriage door had been almost wrenched from its hinges, and within, upon the cushions, lay the detective to whom Kandwhar had been manacled. His clothing was soaked with blood and from his wrist dangled the steel chain of the bracelet that remained fastened tightly about his wrist. MacBee examined it and found that the chain had not been broken, but the other bracelet which had been fastened about Kandwhar's wrist, had been opened as neatly and easily as though with a key.

Seeing MacBee, the detective tried to speak, but the effort was too much for him. A man forced his way through the crowd and announced that he was a physician. In a moment, they lifted out the detective and stretched him upon the sidewalk, cutting away his clothing to reveal a narrow slit in his left side.

"Stiletto wound," the doctor said promptly, and began to staunch the flow of blood.

"What has happened, man, tell me!" MacBee urged, bending over the prostrate form.

"He can't," the doctor said after a minute, "He is dead."

The Children's Story Telling Club

Essilyn Dale Nichols, Editor

1527—35 St., Rock Island, Ill.

Send Manuscript and Letters for this Department Direct to the Editor of this Dept.

Dear little folks:—As we have many important letters to print this week we will begin them right away.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the letters in the Children's Story Telling Club and take much pleasure in reading them. I am twelve years old and in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Mr. Frank Somers. I have got two sisters; their names are Hazel and Alice. Hazel is nine years old. Alice is six. I would like to join the contest. Will you please send me a membership card? Your friend, Theora Benner, Lake City, Michigan. Missing words: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Stick—4 Floor—5 Legs—6 Protect—7 Said—8 See—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Frightened—12 Pull.

Theora—I was glad to print your letter. I hope you liked the prize I sent you and I hope you received your membership card. Write again.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the Children's Story Telling Club. I am a little girl ten years old and in the fifth grade. I have three sisters named Lenore, Alice and Wilma. One brother named Billie. I have two kittens named Joe and Tiger; one duck and a few chickens. Here are the answers to the Missing Word Contest: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Rough—4 Ratters—5 Legs—6 Hatch—7 Said—8 See—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Troubled—12 Pull. Yours truly, Nannette Gleason, Baldwin, Michigan.

Nannette—I sent you a prize—also a membership card; I hope you received them both. I would like to receive many letters from you.

Dear Editor:—I am sending you the Missing Words for our big contest. I will try to have more confidence in myself and try to be a good member. Here are the Missing Words for the verses: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Look—4 Floor—5 Legs—6 Hide—7 Said—8 See—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Frightened—12 Pull. I hope these will be correct, and thank you ever so much for printing my story. I am glad you like it. The story I liked best was, "The Return of Greyball." But I liked all the stories fine. Your little friend, Pauline Bessette, Barryton, Kansas.

Pauline Dear—You wrote a dandy letter and I hope you will write many others like it. It is a great thing to have confidence in one's self, Pauline; without self-confidence success is seldom attained. I am glad you told me which story you liked the best—I wish all our little members would tell me that. Write another story, Dear; we will be glad to print it.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading stories in the Children's Story Telling Club so will write my first letter. I am a little boy; ten years old. I like to go to school and Sunday school. I have three brothers and one sister. My oldest brother and sister are away to school. It will soon be vacation, then they will come home. I have not seen my sister since Christmas. My baby brother will be two years old in April. I have lots of fun with him. We have a large rubber ball that we play with. I must not make this too long for I want to write again sometime. 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Small—4 Ruin—5 Nest—6 Hatch—7 Said—8 See—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Scornful—12 Pull. Yours truly, Raymond Almy, Lakeview, Michigan.

Raymond—You are certainly a smart little boy, and a good little boy too; for lots of little boys don't care to play with baby brother. I hope you will write lots of letters for our club.

Dear Editor:—I thought I would like to join this club. I have been reading the stories in the paper; I like them very much. I am eight years old and in the fourth grade. I go to school at Waterbury. I have to walk a mile every day that I go to school. I have got a new teacher. My other teacher's name was Ollie May. I liked her very much. She went to Louisiana. I have two brothers and no sisters. One of my brothers is eleven years old and the other is five years old. I have two pets; they are cats; their names are Peter and Patsy. I like Peter the best. They are playing most of the time. I like to watch them. There are eight grades besides the high school. There is a river that runs through Waterbury and the name of it is Winoski, meaning "Wild Onions." It was named so by the Indians. Yours truly, Dorothy Johnson, Waterbury, Vt.

Dorothy—Thank you for a very interesting letter. I hope you will write often. Tell us why you like Peter better than you do Patsy. Your editor lives near the banks of the Great Mississippi river (Mississippi is also an Indian name you know). One summer we had a tent right on the banks of the river. It was lots of fun living in a tent; only sometimes we had bad storms and that was not so much fun.

Dear Editor:—I am a little girl eight years old. My name is Agnes Mae Williams. I go to school every day. My teacher's name is Miss Greer. I am in the fourth grade and I like my teacher. I got a name I think would be pretty for the Children's Story Telling Club, that is: "Sweet Briar." My teacher read us a story of Ruth Fielding at Briarwood Hall. I took the word "Sweet Briar" from it. I do not think that I will win the prize. My lessons are very hard but I get along very well. I have no brothers or sisters. I live in Mesick, Michigan. I cannot think of much more to write so I will close. From your friend, Agnes Mae Williams, Mesick, Michigan.

Did you send a list of Missing Words, Agnes? They were not in your letter. The name you suggested for the Children's Story Telling Club was very pretty indeed. Do you like stories, I do. I hope you will write another letter for our club soon.

Here is a list of Missing Words from a little member who says: I am eight years old and if I win a prize address La Moine McCaffrey, Marshall, Mich. 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Rough—4 Door—5 Legs—6 Show—7 Said—8 See—9 Cry—10 Head—11 Troubled—12 Pull.

Dear Editor:—I thought I would send in the Missing Words in the poem: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Curled—4 Edge—5 Legs—6 Lay—7 Said—8 Have—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Wrathful—12 Comb. If I have guessed nearest to the right words I would like to have a game. I will write a story also; it is a true one.

A TRUE BEAR STORY.

By Gladys Batterbee.

Once my grandfather was out picking berries. He came to quite a large berry bush. He began picking berries there. After a while he came to the other side of the bush and there stood a large bear. He didn't have anything to kill it with so he just walked away and left the bear eating berries and didn't do anything. And Grandpa had some experience with the bear.

I received my pretty membership card and was pleased with it. I must close for this time. Your friend, Gladys Batterbee, Lake Bluff, Illinois.

P. S.—You asked Alice P. to tell us what the fairies live on—I think they live on pancakes made of sea-foam.

Thank you very much, Gladys, for your interesting letter and your "True Bear Story," which was very cute. I hope you liked the prize I sent you. Write again.

Dear Editor:—I made up this story myself a long time ago. Do you think it's a good one? My words to the Missing Word Contest: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Gold—4 Edge—5 Legs—6 Lay—7 Said—8 Have—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Disappointed—12 Comb. I thank you for my membership card, I think it is very pretty. Jessie Batterbee, Lake Bluff, Ill.

HOW TWO NAUGHTY CHILDREN BECAME GOOD.

By Jessie Batterbee.

Once upon a time there was two little children—a boy and a girl who lived with their mama. They were always quarreling over their playthings, and one day their mama bought some wall paper to paper their rooms and each thought the other's was the prettiest, and they said very unkind words to each other.

Now their mama thought it was time she punished them severely so she put them each in their own rooms to stay twenty-four hours all alone. Now this made them very lonely for they really loved each other very dearly. And they began to feel sorry that they had been so naughty. So when their mother let them come out the next morning they were so glad to see her and each other that they cried with joy, and promised they would never quarrel again and they never did.

Of course, I like your story Jessie; and I am going to ask you to write us another one. I sent you a prize, which I hope you received all right. I am glad you liked your membership card. Please write many nice letters for our club.

Dear Editor:—I thought that I would like to join the Children's Story Telling Club. I am in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Stanton. I like to go to school real well. I thought I would like to join the Missing Word Contest. I like to read the children's stories. I think I will say good bye, from Velma Donovan, Caledonia, Michigan. Here are my Missing Words: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Hand—4 Beam—5 Feet—6 Show—7 Said—8 See—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Injured—12 Pull.

Velma—You wrote a nice little letter and I was glad to print it. I hope you received your membership card and the Missing Word Contest prize. Write again.

Dear Editor:—I am a little girl nine years old. I live three miles from school so I do not get to school very much in the winter. I play with my sled, help mama with the housework and piece quilts. I like to read the children's letters very much. I am in the fourth grade at school. I like to play the organ and am trying to learn to play church hymns. I have two sisters that are married and one brother who lives at home. I have a little nephew three years old and a little niece three months old. Their names are Harold and Zelma Sharpe. I love them very much. I am three feet eleven inches tall with blue eyes and light hair and light complexion. I have a dog and a chicken for my pets. We have some very cold winters here in northern Michigan, and quite warm summers. Just now it is quite rainy. Our snow is going fast. We live two miles from the Muskegon river, where we go to fish every summer. I would like to enter the missing word contest so will send my answers which I hope will be correct and I would like very much to receive the doll as I have no dolls. My answers are: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Rough—4 Roof—5 Legs—6 Eggs—7 Said—8 Bed—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Wrathful—12 Pull. I would like very much to receive a membership card. I am very anxious to hear if my answers are correct. From your little friend, Beulah Everest, Marion, Michigan.

P. S.—I would be very glad to see my letter in print if it is not too long. And I will write a story in my letter to the Story Telling Club. Bye Bye, with love—Beulah.

Beulah—I was certainly glad to print such an interesting letter as yours. I was real sorry that you did not win the first prize, dear; but of course, everyone could not win first prize, could they? And we are going to have many other contests and I feel sure that you can win a nice prize in one of them if you try. We will be very glad to have you send the story you mentioned. I sent you a membership card; also a prize. I hope you received them.

Dear Editor:—Seeing your Missing Word Contest in the paper I thought I would fill out the blanks. 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Curly—4 Steps—5 Legs—6 Show—7 Said—8 See—9 Cluck—10 Head—11 Haughty—12 Eat. From Gertrude Chingman, Dutton, Michigan.

I sent you a prize, Gertrude, which I hope you received. This is your second letter, isn't it? Write again.

Dear Editor:—I have been reading the letters in the paper. I am eight years old; my birthday is the fourteenth of April. I live with my grandma. I would like to be a member of the club and have a membership card. Yours, Nellie Clark, Sterling, Mich.

I have got five cats and one dog. I stay with my uncle and aunt. My uncle has three horses and nine cows. We had a calf that never had a tail. Here are my answers to the Missing Word Contest: 1 Years—2 Biddy—3 Snarled—4 Floor—5 Legs—6 Show—7 Said—8 See—9 Squawk—10 Head—11 Troubled—12 Comb. From Lucille Reed, Moorestown, Mich.

Lucille—Yours was a very nice letter and I was glad to print it. Did you receive your membership card and the prize I sent you? I hope you will write many letters for our club. That was certainly a queer calf that never had a tail, wasn't it?

Dear Editor:—I am going to write you another story. I was glad to see the Prize Contest in the paper. We have lots of fun at recess and noon; we play different games. Our teacher plays games with us. There are ten children in our school. We ride to school and we have lots of fun when we ride to school. We take limbs of trees and put them in the chain that is behind. My teacher's name is Miss Kincaid. I like my teacher very much. I haven't seen my story in the paper yet. There are many names you can get for the Contest. I will close for this time. Good bye, from Hazel Rice, Lewiston, Michigan.

Current Bread.

Scald a pint of milk and beat into it a teaspoonful each of melted butter and salt. When the mixture is lukewarm add a half yeast cake, dissolved in warm water, and enough flour to make a good batter. Set in a warm place to rise for eight hours, then beat hard, adding a cup of flour. Work in a cup of stemmed currants well dredged with flour, make into a loaf, set to rise until light and bake.

Date Muffins.

Stir together three coffee cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of yeast, powder and a half a teaspoonful of salt, sift into a bowl, with one and one-half coffee cupfuls of milk; beat in the yolks of two well-beaten eggs; beat this gradually as you sift in the flour; add one tablespoonful of melted butter; when smooth beat into it three-fourths of a coffee cupful of chopped floured dates, and lastly force in the stiffened whites; put in warmed greased gem pans; and bake twenty-five minutes.

Cabbage Salad.

Cut a hard head of cabbage into halves, and then, with a very sharp knife, shred fine the desired quantity. As fast as it is shredded drop it into

Whole Wheat Bread.

Into a cupful of lukewarm milk, break up one yeast cake, add one teaspoonful of sugar and set in a warm place until the yeast floats on top. Put one quart of whole wheat flour in a bowl, add one teaspoonful of salt and three tablespoonfuls of sugar (if too sweet, use less). Make a hollow in the center of the flour, put in the yeast and one cupful of lukewarm milk; stir all to a thick batter with a spoon. Pour over one gill of warm milk, cover and let stand until very light, then add enough wheat flour to work it into a smooth, firm dough; now put it on a floured board and work until it does not stick to the hands. Put into the pans, filling only about one-half full, cover and then stand until the dough has risen to the top of the pans. Put in medium hot oven and bake from one to one and one-quarter hours.

BEER A POISON.

(By T. D. CROTHERS, M. D.) The boasted claims that beer is a food and gives vigor and strength are contradicted by statistics. In Munich, Germany, where the largest quantity of beer is consumed, per capita, of any city, the mortality rate from heart and kidney diseases is double that of any other city. Everywhere this is confirmed. The beer drinker dies early from diseases of the heart and kidneys.

If beer had any food elements and were a tonic, exact measurements and studies of statistics would confirm it, but the evidence from these sources is entirely the opposite. The congested face, bloated body and dullness of body and mind are the best evidences of the poisoning and degenerative processes going on. There can be no conflict of opinions on this, because it can be measured and stated in mathematical terms, regardless of the theories.

Alcohol absorbs the water from the cells and tissues, breaks up and diminishes their nutritive power, while beer creates new fermentive and chemical changes in the stomach. These processes are cumulative, not only destroying the balance between waste and repair, but adding immensely to the waste, which permanently disturbs and destroys the vigor and health of the body.

Beer is a most insidious poison because it produces other poisons, and starts new processes of degeneration that are unknown until the final collapse reveals them.

PROBABLE ACTION OF SWEDEN.

In Sweden to be the second nation of the world to outlaw the liquor traffic—the first to follow the example of Russia? From the statements of Mr. Frederick Peterson in a recent magazine article it seems probable. He says: "The present crown prince, who will be the next king if he survives his father, is a total abstainer and forbids the use of liquor in his household. Both houses of the parliament are increasing their temperance membership. Edward J. Wavrin, the head of the Good Templars of the World, is the temperance leader, as well as leader of the Social Democrats in the upper house." Mr. Peterson states that "133 of the 220 members of the house are total abstainers, and the majority of these are Social Democrats. This party has 87 members in the lower house and 14 in the upper, it being in the majority. In 1836 there was one member representing the Socialists in the lower house and exceedingly few total abstainers. Now the Socialists are the leaders on this question. The working classes, the small wage earners, constitute this party. Who better than they know the evil of intemperance? Woman municipal suffrage has placed many able women in city governments. They are leaders in the temperance army, and it is sublime to see them and hear them speak for home against the rum-seller whether it be in the public forum or in the city councils."

LAST WORD IN BREWERY BUILDING.

An immense placard on the top of a big brewery recently erected in Philadelphia was a cause for comment by citizens who saw in it an unintentional prophecy. It read, "The Last Word in Brewery Building." Harry H. Paisley of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Reading railway and allied corporations, in a speech made at the annual banquet of the Pottsville Y. M. C. A., called attention to the appropriateness of the placard in view of the fact that the liquor traffic is doomed. He declared that the one service for the uplift of society today is the bringing about of the death of the liquor traffic. He said the handwriting is on the wall and all liquor dealers and brewers would do well to get out of the business at once.

SLUMP IN BREWERY VALUES.

The growing temperance sentiment is responsible for the fact that the Pittsburgh Brewing company paid no dividends this year. As a result of the company's action, the common stock was forced down several points, and Pittsburgh Brewing company bonds dropped to a low-record price. Independent Brewing common also declined three-fourths to two and three-fourths.

RESTRICT BEER OUTPUT.

According to the Lokal Anzeiger, restrictions have been imposed on beer production in Germany. First, the brewers were required to cut down the amount of malt 50 per cent. Then a decrease of 40 per cent was ordered—the authorities, later, to fix definitely the amount of malt each brewery may consume.

UNMITIGATED NUISANCE.

The saloon is a nuisance. The evil can no more be confined to the building in which it exists than the odor of a slaughter house to the block in which it is located.—William Jennings Bryan.

WORKINGMAN'S FRIEND.

Every friend of the workingman will vote against the saloon every time he gets a chance, and to close it up, not only on Sunday, but upon every day of the week.—P. M. Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

ON THE FIRING LINE

"If it had not been for the war, foreign cheap-made goods under a Democratic free trade tariff would have absolutely overwhelmed the country, and poverty and idleness and want would have been far greater than they are today. While our imports have increased, our revenues have decreased. The falling off of the revenue is not due to lack of imports, but to lack of tariff. The advantage of the tariff is now going to the foreigner, and the American people are paying a direct tax to make up this sum that a Democratic administration has given to our foreign rivals."—Congressman W. E. Humphrey.

If the Wilson administration would put forth half as much effort to make government business efficient as it has to destroy private business, the country would be duly grateful.

In view of some of the appointments made at the cost of efficiency, the Democratic dispensers of pie are evidently determined to give each of the "deserving" a piece at any price.

Undoubtedly there is something in names. For instance:

- Democracy Republican
Delusion Revival
Decadence Recovery
Deficiency Redemption
Depression Restoration
Despair Resumption
Destruction Resurrection

Whatever else he may do as a result of the Lusitania matter, Wilson will not summon Congress in an extra session. He knows that a Democratic body is not to be trusted to act with wisdom on any such question as this.

And, as we recall it, Huerta was "too proud" to salute.

Marse Henry Watterson is clearly out of patience with some of the so-called leaders of his party—as is shown by his comments on the Lusitania incident. "Mr. Stone of Missouri, for example," he writes. "He who rattles around as chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Senate, is as flabby as his own gumshoes." And of Bryan in this emergency Watterson says the administration "is most vulnerable in the Department of State."

For the first two years of Mr. Wilson's administration there were thirty-five thousand commercial failures. This number is some ten thousand in excess of similar failures during the first two years of the Taft administration. The total liabilities involved in the commercial failures during the first two years of the Wilson administration amounted to seven hundred and sixty millions of dollars. The total liabilities of the commercial failures in the United States during the four years of the Taft administration amounted to six hundred and forty millions, one hundred and twenty millions less than for the two years of Wilson rule.

Billy Sunday is going to Chicago to conduct a revival. He will find a whole lot of the preliminary work already done for him by the new Republican administration in the Windy City.
