War-Workers' Rally Day

Will Be Big Feature of Our County Fair Sept. 18th.

To touch the pulse of our patriotic citizenry and to make our Fair the biggest fair in Northern Michigan, the Charlevoix Agriculture Society has decided to have a War-Workers' Rally Day, Wednesday, September 18th. At the noon hour of this day sharply at twelve the band will lead with the Star-Spangled Banner, and awakened by the modern Orpheus all the war-workers of the county clothed in patriotic garb will hasten to follow them. First and foremost will come Uncle Sam the Goddess of Liberty, and Columbia, correctly attired according to the best authority we can get from a costume house (from whom we rent the costumes), and arranged for the Daughters of the Revolution, under the personal management of one of the Daughters—Mrs. J. M. Harris—of Boyne City.

The Grand Army of the Republic of the entire county will follow Uncle Sam. Mr. Harrington Commander of East Jordan Post will organize the veterans for this division of the parade and with him will ride the speakers of the day. The Women's Relief Corps of the entire county will accompany them, transportation being provided and places assigned them by Mrs. Barrie and Mrs. Tindale, East Jordan. A historic float, entitled "Union of the Blue and the Gray the Khaki," will constitute the fourth division of the parade, and Mrs. Wm. Boylan of the Historical Section of the Monday Study Club of Boyne City will be asked to see that this is cared for.

Having thus arranged for our modern day thru our Revolutionary and Civil War eras, we are ready for our Democra of today, and will witness the most touching part of our daily travel. The Service Division will constitute numbers of cars filled with the mothers of boys in service, each carrying her Service Flag, her car entering free at the gates, and her presence signifying her backing to the Fourth Liberty Loan. This should include every mother in the county who has a soldier boy in the service anywhere in the world, and the responsibility for this float will be placed with the Council of National Defense, under the guidance of its chairman, Miss May-Stewart of East Jordan.

The introduction having framed the history of our country, our next chapter concerns our part in the world war, and our allies. Mrs. Cora Burney, Pres. of East Jordan Study Club, will be asked to assemble the first float, "Spirit of '76" (costumes for complete set having been made available from Lansing), Michigan and Father Charlevoix will next be portrayed by the Charlevoix Historical Association, under guidance of its president, M. Saltonstall. England, Scotland, and Ireland, will be portrayed by some sort of home scene and costumes appropriate for each have been secured. Mr. Crane, Chairman of Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce will be asked to organize this for the Charlevoix business men. France will be pictured by a fireside yet and Mr. Ackerman of the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce will be asked to represent his constituency Cuba and Hawaii, with gowns furnished by the above mentioned costumery will be represented by the business men and Red Cross society of Walloon Lake and Mr. W. H. Ransom will be appointed manager of the float. The Boyne City Tannery will be asked to portray Russia, Poor Benighted Russia. Sunny Italy will follow pictured in her sunshine and her sorrow by Roscoe Mackey, Pres. of East Jordan Board of Trade. The Big Men of the East, China and Japan, with duitable costumes available for each, will be staged by the resort association of Charlevoix.

The "Human Bridge," our Sailor Boys of the transports, will be left to Beaver Island for interpretation, under the guidance of the chairman of their war-board, Fr. Jewell. A single float, "Bleeding Belgium and Suffering Serbia" will be placed in charge of the business men and Red Cross Society of Boyne Falls. Direct responsibility will be placed in the hands of Mrs. Oleon and Mr. Meyers of that village. Having thus become acquainted with our friends and allies we shall turn our attention to the great organized forces at home that are "Backing our Boys." Following is the list of floats of this division directly followed by the person who will be asked to take charge of the work:

Fourth Liberty Loan—Ira Adams, Chairman of County War Board.
Thrift and W. S. S.—Ira Adams, or some one appointed by him.
Red Cross Floats—Military Relief, by John Porter, East Jordan. Civilian Relief, Mr. Oldham of Charlevoix. Junior Red Cross, Miss Freiberg, East Jordan. Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.—Howard Porter of East Jordan, Co. Chairman.
Knights of Columbus—Fr. McNeil of East Jordan.
Fuel Conservation—R. C. Hammett of Charlevoix.
Food Conservation—F. Thompson of Boyne City, Co. Food Administrator.
Munitions—East Jordan Chemical Co.
Canning Clubs—Mrs. C. F. Smith of Boyne City, Co. Club Leader.
War Gardens—Ralph Sill, Ass. Co. Club Leader, East Jordan.
Working Boy's Reserve—Supt. Stead of Boyne City, Co. Recruiting Officer.
Smileage—Supt. Craig, Co. Chairman Charlevoix.

Home Guard (Our Public Schools)—Supt. of East Jordan Schools.
Four Minute Men—W. E. Hampton, Co. Chairman, Charlevoix.
Junior Four Minute Men—Miss Annette Lardie, Teacher Oratory, B. City.
Granaries of the West—Co-operative Marketing Association, one float for Association, C. F. Smith of Charlevoix County Farm Bureau.
War Suffrage—Mrs. J. Baker and Mrs. Armstrong, Chairmen for County.
Camp Fire Girls—Mrs. Walter Fowler Guardian, East Jordan.
Boy Scouts—Rev. Myron Hoyt, Master, East Jordan.

At this point in our parade all the business men and farmers of the county are invited to represent their own original themes and enter the parade, merely getting in touch with the march of the day so as to be sure that the order of the study is correct. Individuals thus entering the gates will pay admittance as on all other occasions but will be eligible for competition in prize winning on equal footing the same as the war-organizations above mentioned. Since this is a war-workers' parade, individuals thus competing are urged to make every float bear a patriotic message.

At the conclusion of this parade, verily at the tail-end of all festivities—cometh the Kaiser, properly chained and carefully guarded. The Vigilance Committee of Charlevoix, under leadership of its chairman, S. M. Rose, will be asked to see that he is manipulated, forced to witness all the gorgeous preparations above described, and after being dragged twice around the race track following in the rear, that he be then properly executed in front of the grand stand.

Henry Cook of East Jordan will be asked to be Chief Marshall of the day and will be requested to appoint four assistants in his work. The parade will form at 12 o'clock sharp, at the Carnegie Library Building, and work northward to the cemetery, until complete, when it will proceed to the grounds and march, walk, motor, go about, the race track two times while the judges with all thought and due solemnity shall review the situation preparatory to awarding of prizes.

This brings us to the subject of prizes. Yes, prizes will be offered but that is not an important thing at all. Most of the above organizations will care nothing at all for this idea. First prize—5 W. S. S. Second prize—4 W. S. S. Third prize—3 W. S. S. Fourth prize—2 W. S. S. Fifth prize—1 W. S. S. The key note to the entire parade is war-work and results for the year before us, and the prizes are incidental merely to little friendly competition. In fact a few of the floats above mentioned will not compete at all in the prize winning contest. For instance we could not judge Uncle Sam and his attendants with any of our own frail ideas, and the appeal of the service division is such that others could not compete. The entire float of the Spirit of '76 is provided in costume by the costume house, so that we are sure that the Study Club will gladly furnish this with its reputation of stirring popularity. Neither would the veterans of the Civil War, nor their worthy wives, care sought for competition in their appearance amid our war-work. The mothers of our boys, old soldiers and W. R. C. will all enter free at gate. We are proud to make them our guests. Others are urged to be association members but we are sure at any rate that the war-workers will abundantly earn their admittance. Of all down to the Boy Scouts no question will be asked at the gate. They are all urged to keep the float on the grounds throughout the afternoon.

My dear Joy-Riders, have you noticed that reference is made repeatedly to correct costumes? Yes, we mean it. The County Agricultural Society has rented from a large Costume House, the Boyler Costume Store, of Lansing, 19 costumes of America and her allies. Under the management of Mrs. Henry Roy of East Jordan, these costumes will be loaned to the war-workers to be distributed thruout the parade. Also have they procured a complete set for the Spirit of '76, and we know that what we shall see is good. Our war-workers always respond. This county has a state wide record for responses. We know what our parade will be and we have described that you may know. All that is needed in addition to this is the crowd to make complete our war-worker spirit of today. Civilian soldiers, this task is yours and you are hereby detailed to bring your friends from miles around to the biggest fair in Northern Michigan.

Western Michigan visitors to Grand Rapids need not be amazed if, in visiting the Furniture City, they see a group of men of high buildings waving flags as though bidding the visitors welcome to the city. These flag-wavers will only be members of the Signal Corps School of Telegraphy of the War Industrial Training Institute. This new branch has just been added to the Institute work, and is destined to play an important part in the future of many of the men who have been called to the service.

The War Industrial Training Institute was organized to train draft men along industrial lines; embracing automobile, airplane engine repairing, concrete construction, accounting, acetylene welding, practical electricity, machine shop practice, and signal corps school of telegraphy. All the branches have been filled and the graduates are given preferred positions in the army.

Now comes along the wigwagging service. The graduates of the school of telegraphy, when they attain a speed of ten words, international code, are sent to Ft. Leavenworth. Wigwagging men will receive like consideration. The course is to start immediately and will be directed by Vivian Gould who has just completed a course of training at the officers training camp, Fort Sheridan. Signal Corps charts have been received by Director R. M. DeWitt from Major John C. Moore, Washington, D. C., with the complimentary mention of the institute work.

"Training in semiphore work will be of great value to the men who desire service in the Signal Corps and your efforts in this direction are highly appreciated."

A special effort is to be made to instruct the draft men who registered June 5th. They will be called to the service sometime this month—about the 22nd so the time to prepare themselves is short. Manager DeWitt, however, has arranged for day and night sessions, so that men qualify by that time, and thus receive the advantage of going direct to Fort Leavenworth.

The War Industrial Training Institute is operated with the War Department, the Federal Board for Vocational Education, and the local Draft Boards, and has offices in the New Y. M. C. A. Building. Mr. DeWitt is anxious to help every draft man in Western Michigan and asks each one to write him or call personally—for further information.

SEEK VOLUNTEERS FOR BIG CANNING EFFORT

Up to Michigan Boys and Girls to help "Put Up" 400,000 More Quarts

East Lansing, Mich., July 30.—An appeal to help out in the food saving by canning more fruits and vegetables is being made to the boys and girls of Michigan by the boys and girls club department of M. A. C. It is up to Michigan's youngsters, the department has been informed by the federal authorities, to can at least 400,000 quarts of food if the home demand for canned foods is to be satisfied.

We need the help of 20,000 boys and girls and of 1,000 adult club leaders, declares E. C. Lindemann, state leader of boys and girls clubs. "The United States government must have canned goods for the army and navy. The demand, naturally, is diverting from us a large part of the supply that hitherto has been produced to meet our domestic wants. To make up this shortage, we are advised that more must be done in the homes. "The United States department of agriculture has assigned to Michigan boys and girls a quota of 400,000 quarts. For this work we need more canning clubs, more canning club leaders and more canning club centers. Our services are at the disposal of the public for organization purposes. Communications should be addressed to the Boys and Girls club department of the Michigan Agricultural college, East Lansing. Recipes and literature can also be obtained by writing to the same address."

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS IN SUGAR CONSERVATION

1. Do not leave sugar in the bottom of tea, coffee or cocoa cup.
2. Sweeter breakfast cereals with honey, syrup, maple sugar, raisins, or dates.
3. Substitute molasses, maple syrup or syrups made from sorghum and corn for part of sugar used in cooking.
4. Make your cakes without frosting. If you do use frosting, use the one that contains little or no sugar.
5. Use fresh, dried, or preserved fruit for dessert in the place of "made dishes" that require sugar.
6. Cut down the use of candies and sweet drinks. They are luxuries, not necessities. Use fruits, nuts or popcorn if you must eat between meals. If you must have candies, choose only those made from no sugar.
7. Preserve as much of your fruit as you can by drying it in large quantities.
8. Can fruits and fruit juices without sugar. This may be successfully done by the cold pack method. (See Farmers' Bulletin, No. 839, which you may read in your Public Library, or obtain by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, at Washington D. C.) They may be made into jellies or syrups as needed.
9. Limit the amount of jelly or preserves used. These should be limited to the needs of invalids and children. They may be made as needed from unsweetened canned fruits and juices. Use the least possible amount of sugar or syrup in making them.
10. Use no more than one and a half to two ounces of sugar per person per day (3 to 4 tablespoons). This includes all sugar used in cooking as well as that used at the table.

1 tablespoon of sugar weighs one-half ounce.
1 cube of sugar weighs one-fourth ounce.
One and one-half level teaspoons of sugar weighs one-fourth ounce (equal to one cube).
If you think this allotment of sugar small, compare it with the allotment of other countries.
We have two pounds of sugar per person per month. (August regulation.)
The English have two pounds of sugar per person per month.
The French have one pound of sugar per person per month.
The Italians have one pound of sugar per person per month.
(When they can get it.)

When women kiss each other it means as much as a woman who makes a mighty poor wife makes him a rich husband.

FINDS FERTILIZER LAW IS EFFECTIVE

East Lansing, Mich., July 30.—A Lapeer county man has discovered that Michigan's fertilizer law possesses teeth. Coincidentally he has learned that the balmy days, during which fleecing of the farmer was a highly popular outdoor sport with a certain class of citizens, are on the wane.

The discoverer of these facts—though he continues to be quite modest about the matter—was a Richard Stafford of Lapeer county, who unloaded considerable quantities of lime-stone upon Lapeer county farmers as lime-stone phosphate. Analysis by chemists of the experiment station of M. A. C. failed to disclose presence of phosphates in the mixture, whereupon Stafford was placed under arrest, brought to trial and upon pleading guilty was fined $200 and costs.

The case was the first brought by the college under the fertilizer law, for heretofore most manufacturers and agents have been satisfied to accept warnings at their face value and make their products conform to the requirements of the statute.

The experience of the first man to run crosswise to the measure is expected to have a salutary effect on other manufacturers and salesmen who might be tempted during the present era of high prices to market spurious products.

The parade will form at 12 o'clock sharp, at the Carnegie Library Building, and work northward to the cemetery, until complete, when it will proceed to the grounds and march, walk, motor, go about, the race track two times while the judges with all thought and due solemnity shall review the situation preparatory to awarding of prizes.

This brings us to the subject of prizes. Yes, prizes will be offered but that is not an important thing at all. Most of the above organizations will care nothing at all for this idea. First prize—5 W. S. S. Second prize—4 W. S. S. Third prize—3 W. S. S. Fourth prize—2 W. S. S. Fifth prize—1 W. S. S. The key note to the entire parade is war-work and results for the year before us, and the prizes are incidental merely to little friendly competition. In fact a few of the floats above mentioned will not compete at all in the prize winning contest. For instance we could not judge Uncle Sam and his attendants with any of our own frail ideas, and the appeal of the service division is such that others could not compete. The entire float of the Spirit of '76 is provided in costume by the costume house, so that we are sure that the Study Club will gladly furnish this with its reputation of stirring popularity. Neither would the veterans of the Civil War, nor their worthy wives, care sought for competition in their appearance amid our war-work. The mothers of our boys, old soldiers and W. R. C. will all enter free at gate. We are proud to make them our guests. Others are urged to be association members but we are sure at any rate that the war-workers will abundantly earn their admittance. Of all down to the Boy Scouts no question will be asked at the gate. They are all urged to keep the float on the grounds throughout the afternoon.

My dear Joy-Riders, have you noticed that reference is made repeatedly to

FARMER FIRES NAILS THROUGH SKUNK'S TAIL

Heavy Charge Disables Old Muzzle-Loader, but Modern Weapon Ends Animal's Activity.

Wellington, N. Y.—For a week a skunk has been prowling around the Arba Pary farm near here, making it unpleasant for the Pary family.

Recently Mr. Pary saw the animal in a field fifty rods from his house. Pary has a muzzle-loading shotgun. He got out the firearm, powder and caps, but found he had no shot. However, he knew what to do.

He placed a quantity of powder in the gun, followed by a wad, some shingle nails and a number of brass tacks. The gun being loaded, he started for the field.

The skunk appeared tame and as Pary approached it moved a few feet and stopped at a fence post. He got within shooting distance, stopped, aimed and fired. The skunk jumped, made things lively for a few minutes, but did not appear to be mortally wounded. Anyway, it did not leave the post.

Pary returned to the house, started to reload the gun and then discovered that the charge had blown the lock away.

During the afternoon Pary came to the village and purchased a 30-30 caliber rifle and a box of cartridges. He returned home, loaded the rifle, went to the field. The skunk was by the post, and as frisky as ever. Pary shot the skunk through the head. When he was sure the little animal was dead he went to it and was surprised to find its tail nailed to the fence post.

Pary says that when he shot at the skunk in the forenoon a nail from his muzzle-loading shotgun pierced the skunk's tail, entered the fence post and held the animal fast. Pary avers that he found four nails and seven tacks imbedded in the post.

1,500 DIAMONDS FOUND IN ARKANSAS FIELDS.

Gems Picked Out of Crude Machine By Watchman—One Weighs Thirty Carats.

Buffalo, Ark.—From 1,000 to 1,500 diamonds have been found by one company operating in the Elk county diamond field during the last year. The caretaker of one of the properties that is idle found 200 during that period, having recovered them by a crude hand-washing method from the peridotite, the formation in which they are found.

The largest diamond found is reported to have weighed thirty carats.

As to the actual production of the field no one knows because operations are guarded very closely.

One company, however, has been in steady operation for several years. The ground belonging to this company and others is inclosed by high barbed wire fences and no one is admitted without proper credentials. The company has a big diamond washing plant near Murfreesboro, Ark., the dirt being hauled by a motor railroad about two miles.

The main peridotite bed occupies about eighty acres. Two other smaller areas showing peridotite have been discovered two miles from there. One shows from ten to fifteen acres of this diamond-bearing ground, and the other about five.

SAN ANTONIO "MACK" IS SMARTEST BULLDOG.

14 Years Old, But His Doings Are Spectacular.

San Antonio, Tex.—Mack, the 14-year old registered English bulldog owned by H. C. Flint, of this city, first acquired local fame several months ago when he prevented a burglar from robbing his master's house. He has long been a neighborhood celebrity, however, his many less spectacular performances gaining him friends among people of all ranks of life except burglars.

Aside from being an efficient watchdog, as was demonstrated when he seized the burglar, who was escaping through the window with a bag full of silverware and cut glass, he has many other accomplishments. He herds chickens as a collie does sheep, he brings in wood in the evening, and brings in the newspaper and the mail.

When all the members of the family are too far away to hear the telephone he calls them to it as soon as it rings, and on one occasion he saved the house from burning when he called his mistress into the room where the rug had caught fire from the grate. Moreover, in spite of his age, Mack is an expert mouser.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER WRITES

When the kidneys are not working properly, back ache, stiff joints, rheumatic pains and suffering result. George McLain Turtle Lake, N. D. writes: "I am a locomotive engineer. I had a bad pain in my back and my bladder action was very irregular. I took Foley Kidney Pills and was relieved in a couple of days." Hite's Drug Store.

CHAPTER I

A Fly in a Web

I wonder, did you ever, out of the collected experiences of life, notice how some incident, seemingly trivial in itself, may take position as the basal note of a series of subsequent happenings? And from that initial circumstance other things follow in a gradually ascending scale like notes on a musical scale until the grand, crashing climax is reached and leaves us thrilling with the vibration of its meaning.

In my work as a newspaperman and later as a detective, I have, yet who could have suspected that a fly caught in the meshes of a spider's web, was the initial occurrence of a drama of human life—would strike the keynote of the things which followed in unbroken sequence for days to come?

The train had stopped at Salida, where the road over Marshall Pass and the line to Leadville separate to meet again at Grand Junction. The mighty grandeur of the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas had been left behind us, though its influence still lingered as a lesson of man's smallness when opposed to the forces of nature.

At Salida they hook on a helper engine, and there is usually some delay before the train again takes up its western climb. Connie and Semi Dual and I had descended from the observation platform from which we had viewed the wondrous canon the river has cut through the mountain barrier, and were spending the time of the wait in walking up and down the platform, beside the strip of Pullmans.

That was how Connie came to notice the spider's web in the first place. The depot building and platform are of wooden construction, and the sun was hot on the June day which found us there.

Dual had gone on up the train toward the front, and Connie drew into the shade cast by the overhanging of the depot's eaves. I followed, and we paused close beside a window, where, in the upper corner of the frame, a spider had spun its web.

"Look," said my wife, pointing. "Every time I see anything like that I want a broom."

I nodded. "The housewifely instinct," I responded. "The spider, however, is merely trying to make a living in the only way he knows. He—"

"Oh," cried Connie, "he's caught a fly!"

He had. While we were talking one of several of the insects which had been buzzing about the platform had circled and darted squarely into the outer segment of the web, where it now buzzed and whirled with a great flutter of wings and ineffectual efforts at escape. Under its struggles the web vibrated violently, and presently a small dark body appeared from the funnel-like opening close up by the frame of the casing.

"Spider knows he's got a bite," I remarked.

The fly ceased to struggle and lay still. It might have been dead already save for a faint quiver of the wings. One could imagine that it lay in its bonds and panted with its efforts and a sort of fright.

Connie touched my arm. "The poor little thing, Gordon, set it loose," she urged.

Dual spoke. While we had been absorbed in the minor tragedy being played out before us he had approached from his stroll up the platform and now stood directly at our backs.

"The unwitting fly, Mrs. Glace," said he, having manifestly heard her outcry. He smiled. "On the face of the thing it is but a matter of food-catching by the spider. Looking below the surface it is an illustration of the working out of the laws of the universe, which says that ignorance is no defense or excuse from the paying of the penalty of our acts.

"The act must bring its effect with immutable surety, be it greater or less. The fly which unwittingly flings itself into the meshes of the web is as certainly lost as though it had deliberately cast itself therein. In either instance the penalty is death for the fly—food for the spider. The advice, 'Christian, walk carefully,' is exceedingly worthy of consideration by all of us. Its application would save much pain."

And it a moment, and tossed it lightly into the air.

"The quality which we call mercy is but the transference of the lower to the higher," said he.

"I'm so glad to hear you say that, Mr. Dual. Not, of course, that I doubted your mercy, but when you begin to speak of the law in that manner, I always feel as if I didn't understand."

"So few of us do understand," said Semi. "And because of that, so many of us suffer. As for mercy—yes, I believe in it. But Mrs. Glace, one must be careful in his exercise lest he allow mere sympathy to pervert his understanding, and so cause him to transgress his true position. He who seeks to become an instrument of destiny may often precipitate more harm than good. It is a choice to be made with care."

"Apropos of that," I joined in, "in view of the present spat-the-fly, crusade, isn't your recent act in freeing the fly open to question on the grounds of the greatest good to the greatest number?"

Dual's eyes twinkled.

"Well, speed, my verbal archer," he made answer.

"Besides," I went on, "you robbed the spider of his dinner. How justify that?"

"By the conjunction of time and place," said Dual. "You who know my belief that nothing happens from chance in this world of ours scarcely need ask, friend Glace. Still—"

He paused and grew utterly serious in his manner. "Had the destiny of that little insect which I freed just now demanded its ultimate dissolution, I personally hold that neither you nor your wife nor myself would have been at this place at this time. And because we were here at this time, I hold that the fly was to be saved, and that in liberating it from its peril, I acted as an instrument of fate, regardless of any consideration of sociological hygiene."

Again he paused and appeared almost to listen, stood so for a moment, and shook his head. "It may be," he resumed, "that there is a hidden meaning in all this, wholly apart from the seemingly trivial incident under discussion. It has come to me in the last moment that there are etheric vibrations about us which I may read if I retired to your stateroom—until you wish to use it?"

"Of course," Connie assented. "Oh, dear, this interests me immensely. What is it, do you think, Mr. Dual?"

Semi shook his head.

"Not now later," he made answer and walked across to our car, mounted the steps, and disappeared within.

Connie turned her eyes from watching his retreating figure, and rushed a question at me.

"What did he mean? What's he going to do? Isn't he the queerest and finest man that—"

A rattling bump ran along the line of Pullmans. I glanced forward and saw that the two engines were coupled up. I shook my head.

"All aboard now, Hon," I suggested. "We'd better get on now ourselves. Where do you want to go—inside or back on the platform?"

"Back," decided Connie. "I want you to tell me a lot more about Mr. Dual. I want to ask you some questions."

We went back and because it was a hot day there between the hills in the little valley, and because people are like sheep in a way and followed each other in or down from the platform when the train stopped, we found it deserted, and settled ourselves in a couple of chairs well back under the overhang.

"And now," said I when we were seated and the depot buildings were beginning to slip past us, "what do you want to know about Dual?"

"Everything," my wife made most comprehensive reply.

I smiled. "I've told you pretty much all of that for the last few years, if I remember," I remarked.

"But I didn't know him then," Connie countered. "Now that I do, I want to hear it again—how you met him, and about his theories of life, and all of it. Go on." She turned half toward me and prepared to listen.

And so as the panorama of the mountains unrolled on either side and the train crawled up toward the west, I told her, again of how I had first gone to see the strange person whom we now called friend; how I had gone to interview him for the Record long before Bryce and I organized our detective bureau, and found him dwelling in the magnificent quarters which he had made for himself twenty stories up in the six on top of the Urania building, where his garden of flowers and vines and shrubs bloomed the year around under its sheltering roof of green-yellow glass, and where Semi Dual pursued his strange studies in the application of universal laws. At the end Connie's eyes were glowing.

"He's a sort of modern magician, isn't he, boy?" she remarked in an awed little voice. "And yet there must be something in these studies of his. Look how he found the rubies."

I nodded. I knew to what she referred. It was too recent to have faded in the least in my mind. In fact, it was an episode of my present trip. This, in reality, was our honeymoon, upon which we had come as the guests of Semi Dual. He had suggested it quite as a surprise to us at our wedding, and taken us first down the coast to New Orleans, then up the Mississippi by steamer, and now on west toward the ultimate destination of Goldfield, where dwelt his friend and partner, Jake Curran, master of their jointly owned mines.

On the steamer a theft of some beautiful gems had occurred, and Dual had recovered them in his own peculiar way. This was in the week before.

"I prefer to call him a modern metaphysician, however, Connie," I said. "Magician is hardly the word, because, after all, Semi uses only natural forces in gaining his results. In fact, he says there is no such thing as a supernatural force, but that what we so regard are but higher manifestations of natural law. I honestly believe that Dual knows more about the subliminal self, subconscious analysis, chiropathy, astrology, telepathy, suggestion, and pure psychism than any other living man."

Connie moved slightly.

"What a fearful power a man like that could wield if he wished," she murmured.

"Either for good or evil," I followed the suggested thought. "But Dual only uses it for good. Connie, I tell you, he is the most wonderful person I ever knew. With the ability to do anything he wishes, he uses his mighty power only to help others. There are times when I have actually felt a sense of veneration for him. I have sat in his presence when I seemed to sense something beyond the mere man-life, as though he were almost godlike in his calm defense of right and justice."

My wife's hand fell on my own.

"Don't," she whispered. "You make me feel strange. Little as I know him, I have felt that same thing in his presence. He has done some wonderful things of which you have told me. He sent you to Goldfield once to find a man nobody knew was alive, do you remember?"

I smiled. "Rather. It was there I met a girl Dual and I afterwards went half around the world to save from danger."

"Alice Parton," said Connie. "Nee Sheldon," I amended. "She was single at that time, the daughter of old Colonel McDonahue Sheldon, who had succeeded in getting his brother mixed up in a bad mess through trying to put over a stock deal. I want you to meet them when we get to Goldfield. The colonel is a character, believe me."

"What you'd call 'crooked,' isn't he?" said Connie.

I chuckled. "I don't know," I told her. "The fact of the matter is, I like him. He's a very nervy old goat, and when Dual pinned him down he stood the gaff like a soldier—never whimpered, and offered to 'pay' or stand the shot in any way. Said he had enough of the devious path, and was going to stick to the straight and narrow. I don't know if you can call a man like that crooked or not. I know he's the straightest ever since, and he certainly loves his girl and her baby."

"Has Alice a baby?" Connie sat up and took immediate interest.

"Girl," I responded. "Dual is her godfather as it happens. Connie smiled softly.

"I shall like to meet them," she decided. "It won't seem like meeting strangers, but more like old friends, because I know their stories and they know you and Mr. Dual. I think it will be awfully jolly."

She glanced into the car behind her and back to me.

"What do you suppose he is doing?" What was it that happened back there on the platform?" she asked.

Dual sensed something subconsciously, I ventured. "I have known him to do it again and again. The first time I ever met him, you know, he sensed a murder and Smithson's desire for my presence. At another time he sent me on another similar case. He can sense etheric waves, which are imperceptible to us of lesser evolution, though at times we unconsciously do the same thing. The difference is that Dual does it consciously and at will."

"Just as at times when you were thinking of me or coming to me I have felt it," said Connie.

"Exactly, Hon. You and I felt it in a vague way. Dual feels it in a perfectly conscious manner, just as he senses the meaning of any occurrence. That is telepathy, so called. It is nothing but the ability to allow the subtle vibrations of thought-waves to influence our subconscious minds and then translate their meaning into the objective plane of thought."

"That, then, is what he meant by saying he could read them if he elected?" said Connie. "And then he said he wanted to occupy our stateroom instead of his section. Gordon—what do you suppose he is finding? It makes me shivery clear down to my toes. You remember he said he read that man's thoughts on the boat. What do you suppose this will be?"

"Heaven knows," I answered. "If Dual wishes he will tell us. Probably he will because he told you later, and Semi never says a thing unless he means it. He says a person has to account for every thought and word as well as every action."

"Goodness!" said Connie. "Do you suppose that's so?"

"I hope not," I told her. "I'd hate to answer for some of the things I've thought every once in a while. If they were known they might hang me."

"Bryce!" laughed Connie. "Of course every one knows you're a desperate man."

I joined in her laughter. "Before I got into the business with Bryce and made good I used to think about robbing a bank or two and then I declared. At that reminded me. I wonder if Bryce is getting along? This is by the way, he hasn't a word out of him in days. "Now, no business," called Connie. "You're a very lucky boy. You got this without robbing the bank, and you've got a partner who used to be a police detective and knows how to run the business while you're gone, and you've got a friend unlike any friend of whom I have ever heard. Take a real rest and don't worry about the affairs of Glace & Bryce, Confidential Agents. I myself told Mr. Bryce not to bother you unless he had to."

"The deuce you did?" I exclaimed. "What did Bryce say?"

Connie giggled. "He said he didn't think you'd be of much use for at least six weeks, anyway, and that he'd try to struggle along."

"Under which circumstances I suppose I may as well enjoy the beauties of nature," I remarked, and stared full into Connie's face.

Connie flushed and promptly pointed out some cattle grazing in a mountain meadow, knee-deep in lush grass.

The afternoon wore on in a peaceful drowsiness, while the train climbed up and on around the shoulders of hills, across gullies, past hills clad in the dark greenery of the pines, across upland valleys where little cabins sat amid the trees.

Others came out and occupied chairs on the platform. Connie and I ceased to talk, save for perhaps an occasional word. Rather we sat and watched the receding landscape and thought our own thoughts while the wheels pounded out the lengthening miles.

Part of the time I watched the mountains, and part the girl beside me. Even yet at times it seemed hard to realize that the hope of years, when I struggled to save enough from the salary of a reporter to make our life together a thing of reality instead of dreams, had at length been realized, and that as man and wife we now faced the future together.

And yet, thanks to the work of those other years, and to the help of my friend Semi Dual, when Inspector Bryce and I had formed our private bureau of detection, we drew a steadily increasing patronage through our doors—for the credit of clearing up more than one puzzling tangle was mine.

Dual would never appear as the real solver of the mysteries which had more than once baffled the police, though I must confess that it was his work which brought them to an end. And it was on his advice that I opened my offices in the first place. Always Dual led and I followed, and I would have followed no matter where he led. Some men make others feel like that—Dual more than any other, I believe.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, full and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness?

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out; else it ferments and forms poisonous poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate, to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

Were it not for the weather lots of people wouldn't have anything to kick about.

Charity is a cloak that covers a multitude of amateur theatrical performances.

A self-closing door spring adds to the anger of the man who wants to slam the door.

Cowards sing at night because they are afraid. Women laugh at love for the same reason.

NOT TO BE IGNORED
The kidneys are as important to good health as the heart, lungs, stomach or any organ in the body. Lame back, swollen joints, sore muscles, rheumatic aches and pains, are most often signals of kidney trouble. Foley Kidney Pills give relief to kidney trouble-sufferers. They banish bladder irregularity. Hite's Drug Store.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get soared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with bicarbonate, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inimitable; cannot be faked; makes a delightful, refreshing little water drink which everyone should take, and then to keep their kidneys active. It is a salt, and keeps you from drinking and so keeps you from wanting what doctors of your time would and had.

Before confiding your secret to a friend it is well to remember that your friend has a friend and your friend's friend has a friend.

NURSES ENLIST!

To care for our rapidly increasing army, an increasing army of nurses must be preparing for service. Our trained nurses have volunteered until recruiting is necessary. Our country now calls for 25,000 student nurses between the ages of 21 and 35 to await their calls for service and to be placed in civilian or army training schools until actually needed in the base hospitals. They are to enlist in the nearest recruiting station, which in this county is at the Red Cross rooms in Charlevoix. Mrs. R. B. Armstrong of Charlevoix is County Recruiting Officer and will be glad to get in touch with all women desiring to enlist.

The heroic work of nurses in war-times need not be here described. Suffice it to say that next to giving life for the cause of liberty is that of saving life that liberty may be secured. Charlevoix County men have freely given and we wish in this Recruiting campaign to find that Charlevoix County women will heroically respond. Campaign opens August the twelfth. Enlist in Charlevoix at Red Cross Rooms. Recruiting office is open one week only. All girls who registered to nurse or for training in nursing should now appear for application.

ELEPHANT STEALS FOOD DURING NIGHT

SMALLEST OF HERD FEEDS BIG ONE AFTER HIS THEFTS.

Cunning of Animal Discovered by Trainer as He Watches Sammy Carefully Free Himself.

Baraboo, Wis.—The mystery of vanishing elephant food has been solved. And now Sammy, smallest of the elephant herd, is "in bad." Babylon, the largest of the tribe, also is receiving few kind words during these days for it is the big fellow who is credited with putting thieving ideas into the little elephant's trunk.

The elephants, which belong to a circus, are housed in a large brick barn.

"Elephants have enormous appetites," exclaimed George Denman, keeper, who discovered Sammy during his nightly raids on the feed. Of course, there is always a great deal of feed around—tons upon tons of hay in the loft overhead and stacks of sacked oats and piles of baled straw in the corners of the barn.

"Sammy, though a tiny chap, would, I am sure, eat his weight in oats every day, were he allowed to have his way. But, though the elephants are well fed, they are not allowed to have all the food that they might like. And now we come to our story.

"The lights had been put out for the night and I supposed that every one of my charges was sound asleep. So I was about to leave the barn when I heard a low, rasping sound coming from the opposite side of the big room. Instead of walking straight across the ring, I softly slipped around back of the elephants. Peering from behind a pile of baled straw, I saw Sammy was carefully lifting his chain stake out of the ground with his trunk.

"The stake came out so easily that I knew the little rascal must have had it out before. As I watched, he slipped his foot-chain down over the tapering end of the stake and was free. I was not afraid that he would do any real mischief, for I realized that he must have been loose many times before.

"Across the barn, some twenty feet from where Sammy had been chained, were a number of sacks filled with oats. Picking up his foot-chain very carefully, with his trunk, so it would not rattle or jangle on the floor, he moved slowly and cautiously until he was within reaching distance of the grain. Then he laid down the chain and picked up a sack of oats in his trunk. His journey back to the herd was made even more cautiously, because this time he was obliged to drag the chain and yet have to make no noise.

"At last he reached the elephant line and went up to the giant Babylon, who stood like a great, bronze statue. There Sammy stopped and Babylon, whom I had supposed fast asleep, took the oats. They got into the bag in a twinkling and then the feast began. Sammy filled his mouth and munched away, for he knew that his big companion would get most of the oats if he lost any time.

"As it was, Babylon took almost half the oats at the very start, and poor little Sammy, his mouth so full that he couldn't speak.

"I decided it was time to make a noise, just to see what would happen. So I banged on the floor and then walked to the back of the barn, wondering what I should do to punish the pair. A few days before I had had to use a sharp instrument on one of Babylon's teeth, and he hadn't liked that one bit. This gave me an idea.

"I went to my own room, got out the instrument and went back. There was Sammy in his usual place at the stake, pretended to be fast asleep. I didn't do anything to Sammy, but went over to Babylon.

"He was playing possum too. I had a good deal of trouble in wakening him. To punish Babylon, I ordered him to sit down and open his mouth as wide as possible. Then I made a motion as if to pass the instrument inside. At sight of it the big fellow shut his mouth and began to cry and snuff like a great baby. He became so frightened that he never repeated his trick with the oats again.

"What about Sammy, you ask? Why, that sly little rascal is more trouble than all the rest of the circus elephants put together. He gets loose just whenever he wants to. But then, you see, he's the baby of the family and that, of course, makes a difference."

USES WELL AS INCUBATOR.

Hot Water Causes Eggs Buried in Sand to Hatch.

Beaumont, Cal.—An artesian well of hot-water that serves the double purpose of irrigating his land and hatching hen's eggs is owned by E. L. Edmunds, living near Oasis in the Coachella Valley. The water has a temperature of 101 degrees at the well. It irrigated six acres of asparagus, from which Mr. Edmunds made almost daily shipments during December, January and February.

Heat to operate an incubator is secured by placing five gallon cans with perforated sides in an irrigation ditch. The cans are partially filled with sand in order to sink them. The eggs are then put in the sand and turned daily until hatched. As the water is at an even temperature at all times a satisfactory hatch record has resulted.

ELEPHANT SUFFERING FROM LOCKJAW SLAIN.

Big Beast Is Strangled to Death By Engine and Tackle.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Judy, a 9,600 pound elephant attached to a large circus for many years, was executed in the railroad yards here in order to relieve its sufferings from lockjaw.

The elephant was put in a refrigerator car, which had been blocked with ties, and stakes, and a rope was fastened around its head, passed through a small window in the forward end of the car and attached to the tender of a locomotive. When all was ready the engine, pulled, and the rope broke.

A chain was then procured and arranged as was the rope. Again the engine moved slowly ahead until the chain was pulled taut, and in thirty minutes the elephant was pronounced dead by strangulation. Judy was 50 years old.

COMB SAGE-TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mossy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

"IT HAS COME TO PASS."

Eloquent Utterance of Foremost Jewish Orator in America Over the Great Prospect for Establishment of Jewish State in Palestine Made Possible by British Declaration and Endorsement of Allies.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi of the Free Synagogue, New York City, one of the great orators of America, a familiar figure on the Chautauque and lyceum platform, champion of every progressive movement, enthusiastic supporter of President Wilson, is Chairman of the Provisional Zionist Committee.

It has come to pass—the day long wished for in all its momentous and farthest-reaching consequences to Israel and the world. The British government, true to a policy of two hundred years of sympathy with and friendship for the Jew, leads the way in indicating to its allies and to the world that the day has come for the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and that it will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object.

However important may be Mr. Balfour's declaration on behalf of Great Britain, nothing more than the first step has been taken. We have done no more than pass out of the realm of hope into the field of possibility. This is the hour that will test the soul of the Jew.

They who have shared the dream of their people must now serve as they have never served before, and they who, up to this time, have held aloof will find fullest opportunity for high and devoted service. This is the prime duty of the hour. May not we who have borne the burden of the day in expressing our joy and gratitude call to mind the wisdom and statesmanship of our leaders, who, alike in England and America have made possible the coming of the great day—Justice Brandeis, loved and honored leader of Zionists in our own land, and Dr. Chaim Weitzman of England, who has carried the infinitely difficult and delicate negotiations with the British government to the point of glorious triumph? The privilege it has been of my associates and myself of the Provisional Committee and allied Zionist organizations to hold up the hands of our leaders. The greatest and heaviest of tasks yet lies before us. We summon every Jew in America to the post of service and of honor under the Zionist flag.

THE FIGHTING JEW

In Days of Old, Jews were warriors second only to the Romans in valor, and the Fall of Jerusalem was accomplished after the Holy City had resisted a siege lasting nine years.

The Old Testament is filled with tales of the prowess of the fighting Jew, before whose sword many nations went down to defeat.

The sons of Maccabee, the High Priest, led the successful revolt against the Syrian invader. With the battle-cry "Who is for God, Follow Me," they rallied the shepherds from the hills of Judaea, and drove the oppressor and defiler of the Temple from the land.

After the Fall of Jerusalem, Bar Kochba, "Son of a Star," led a revolt against the Romans, and he and his men went to their deaths against an overwhelming horde. To this day his memory is exalted wherever Jews foregather on the anniversary of his heroic death. Gedalia, the son of Abihman, is the name of another valiant hero who wrote his name into Jewish annals with letters of blood shed in vain.

Two thousand years later the fighting Jew is again to the fore. Under the flag of every country, and more especially in the ranks of the Allies, hundreds of thousands of them are fighting valiantly.

The story of "The Zion Mule Corps," that band of refugees from Palestine, who volunteered to fight under the English flag at Gallipoli, has been told around the world by that chivalrous Irishman, Col. Patterson, who was their commander.

And now there is another story to tell—the story of the Jewish Legion, the thousands of Jewish young men in the United States, and Canada, who are offering their lives for the privilege of fighting under the British and Jewish flags, in defense of Palestine, and carrying forward the Maccabean tradition.

VICTORY OF ALLIES SUPREME NEED OF PALESTINE

DR. CHAIM WEIZMANN, head of the Jewish Administrative Commission has made the following statement to a correspondent:

"Tell the Jewish world that of all needs, Palestine's supreme need is victory and complete, definite liberation of the country. All other wants must bow before this imperative necessity. Our program has the approval of the supreme authorities of the country, but for some time even reconstruction is only desirable so far as it does not interfere with the military tasks of the moment. This especially applies to politics. Those who expect immediate proclamation of spectacular political formulas must realize that nothing is less compatible with military efficiency than political excitement. The Commission will not allow any question to arise, on its side, which would be likely to distract public or official attention from the very thing that matters—military effort. Within these limits the field lies open before us.

"If the Jewish people will do their duty and assist our efforts with all their resources, we may be sure that at the dawn of peace a Palestine will be unveiled possessing a well-organized and healthy framework for colonization, and crowned by the nucleus of the Hebrew University with friendly neighbors within, and powerful supporters without."

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I had seen advertised in the newspapers, and in two weeks noticed a marked improvement. I continued its use and am now free from pain and able to do all my household work."—Mrs. B. B. ZIRLINSKA, 202 Weiss Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my household work, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My Aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound the credit."—Mrs. JOSEPHINE KIMBLE, 935 West Race Street, Portland, Ind.

In the meantime, not knowing that a worker was in the engine and believing the repairs had been made and not reported, the foreman ordered the engine fired up.
A pile of wood was ignited and the flames were just beginning to pour through the firebox when Wagner woke up. He plunged through the firebox door headforemost and sustained severe bruises, in addition to his burns.

Webster Springs, W. Va.—Joe Donahue, 16, who lives near this city, has never had a haircut. His locks reach almost to the ground, and he is proud of them.
When a child he had a long illness and his hair grew to great length. When he recovered he became so proud of his locks that he has never had them cut. He fears that if his hair is cut he will lose his strength like Samson did.
